OUR SMART SET.

To the Editor of the Monitor:—

On at least three occasions during the past three months parties have come to clergymen in this town to have the marriage ceremony performed, and have under cover of various low falsehoods, have failed to pay the small fee customary at such times. In each case the clergyman has been called away from some important engagement, to attend to their duties, and has spent some time in carefully writing full details in certificates and in conveying these returns to the proper office. His compensation for all this is—nothing—and he has spent some time in the public papers as fit subjects for the "Rogue's Gallery" they need not be at all surprised.

TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION

To the Editor of the Monitor:—

A petition is now being circulated throughout Nova Scotia seeking for improved legislation in relation to the sale of intoxicating drinks. Its purpose is to ask our legislature to adopt measures similar to those prevailing on Prince Edward Island, where the Scott Act has been superseded by a much more sensible and effective form of temperance enactment. Both political parties in our little sister province were united in carrying this measure into operation, and the Island papers are equally united in their approval of the manner in which the law is being enforced. It is claimed that a complete revolution has been brought about in the drinking habits of the people. There is not a licensed tavern or hotel in the province, and drunkenness, with all its concomitant evils, has almost entirely disappeared. The result is that happier homes are to be found and more rapid advancement is being made in shaking off the incubus of debt than has been the case heretofore on the Island.

Among the commendable features of the new form of legislation we may mention one or two. If a man is found in a state of intoxication he is compelled to tell where he recurred the liquor, or he sent to jail for contempt of court. This usually traces the sale to head-quarters and secures punishment for those who sell in defiance of law. We need this kind of summary enforcement in Nova Scotia where the real criminals, who sell liquor in spite of laws forbidding such sale, and who pocket the hard earnings of the poor drunkard, often escape the just consequences of their vile trade.

In addition to this the provincial government should behind their efforts and aids them in carrying the law into effect. And where the province decides to have provincial prohibition the cities, the capital not being excepted—are not permitted to violate this intention by being allowed to license the sale of liquor and to flood the entire country with rum.

We earnestly hope that this new form of legislation will be enacted speedily in Nova Scotia; and that our representatives in parliament will faithfully do their duty in giving effect to it. measure. It is stated that New Brunswick is moving in the same direction. May we not hope that this desirable reformation in temperance laws will in the early future spread its benign influence over our fair Dominion.

ANTAGONISM OR CO-OPERATION?

To the Editor of the Monitor:—

It is amusing to note the efforts on the part of the local merchants, aided by the local papers, to prevent the farmers and country people from trading where they please and where they can get the most for their dollars.

Some three weeks ago the local traders were hiking petitions all over the country to prevent the passage of a bill allowing parcels by post to be paid for on delivery, on the ground that it would give an added impetus to the mail order system. Now most of the petty slurs which appear in the local papers, who of course, must support their supporters, are laughed at by the more intelligent class of mail buyers, but when the movement becomes antagonistic to the best interests of the county as these petitions undoubtedly were, it is time for rightdous indignation. These petitions going into the hands of our noble representatives are simply asking that every effort be made to protect these local merchants in maintaining or increasing their high prices and making large profits out of the poor farmers and working classes. This policy on the part of our merchants, besides being man and "small," it is also very shortsighted, for it only antagonizes the farmers and sends them with still larger orders to Toronto and other outside places. If the merchants were only broad enough to co-operate with the people and help them market their produce, and at the same time be content with a decent profit, the mail order evil (?) would soon right itself. I am glad to say, however, that some of our merchants are sufficiently enterprising to do this, for speaking personally, out of the hundred odd dollars which I send yearly to Eaton's, not one dollar goes for groceries. Why? Simply because my local grocer markets whatever produce I want to bring to him.

How long will the local merchant hesitate if he can buy farm produce outside of the province cheaper than he can locally? Did the merchants hesitate about bringing beans from Ontario, where they are raised in large quantities, and can be delivered here for $1.76 per bushel, thus making it unprofitable to raise them in Nova Scotia?

There are two sides to this question, my merchant friends, and possibly it would be well to ascertain if some of the fault does not lie with you.

And now let me place on record a testimonial to the mail order system which I am glad to note is increasing every year.

1st—Our cash largely comes from England in return for fruit. We shall send that cash where we please.

2nd—That cash will get us more goods, better goods, give us a larger selection to choose from if sent to Eaton's or Simpson's than any store in the Maritime Provinces.

3rd—I consider that T. Eaton has done more for those farmers of Canada who have taken advantage of his system than any of the money grabbing political leaders who are supposed to represent us at Ottawa.

badly in the woods chopping Friday of last week. Dr. Smith was called and dressed the wound.

Mrs. Thomas Burke is very seriously ill, not much hopes of her recovery being entertained. Her husband, Thomas Burke, is convalescing.

Albert Hudson, Will Westover and Arch Kendall are among the lumbermen working with James Morrison near the bay, north of Thom's Cove. Mr. Morrison and others are putting in a large cut there.

Mrs. Ed. Slocumb remains about the same, though beginning a new treatment. We hope for her speedy recovery.

TELEPHONE ESPIONAGE.

The newspapers of Toronto are justly indignant over the discovery that the Bell Telephone Company has been carrying on a system of espionage upon its subscribers. One operator is constantly employed as a "listener" and at his or her desk are tapped the wires of individuals upon whose affairs the company wants to spy. The ostensible reason for this action is the detection of those who use house phones for business purposes, but the real principle and possibilities of such a system have aroused angry protest. The Toronto Globe says:

If the charge is proved it will have, if not precipitated, the end of private telephone companies. After such a disclosure as is foreshadowed the government would scarcely be justified in delaying such measures as might be found necessary toward a radical change. A private postal service that would have a system for opening letters and recording their contents would not be tolerated after its operations were disclosed, and espionage is as destructive of the utility of the telephone as of the postal service. The possibilities of systematic spying are alarming, apart entirely from the disgust that all such dishonorable work naturally arouses. The possibilities of blackmail, of the improper use of business information, of the betrayal of honest aims to dishonest enemies, are such that the public cannot afford to rest till the charge is cleared up.

MONCTON HOTEL MAN GOES TO PENITENTIARY.

Moncton, Feb. 26.—With the local liquor dealer taken to Dorchester penitentiary to serve one month, and cases laid against three hotels, the Scott Act crusade seems to be well under way. The Daily Telegraph reports:

PASTOR AND PEOPLE PRAISE PSYCHINE

(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)
A Marvellous and Triumphant Record of Victory Over Disease.

No medicine has ever effected as large a number of wonderful and almost marvellous cures as Psychine. It has had one continuous record of victories over diseases of the throat, chest, lungs and stomach. Where doctors have pronounced cases incurable from consumption and other wasting diseases Psychine steps in and rescues numberless people even from the very verge of the grave. Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Chills, Night Sweats, La Grippe, Pneumonia, and other like troubles, all of which are forerunners of Consumption, yield quickly to the curative powers of Psychine.

Mrs. Campbell, one of the many cured, makes the following statement: "I cannot refrain from telling all who suffer of my remarkable recovery with Psychine. In April, 1902, I caught a heavy cold which settled on my lungs and gradually led to consumption. I could not sleep, was subject to night sweats, my lungs were so diseased, my doctor considered me incurable. Rev. Mr. Henry, First Street Presbyterian Church, recommended Dr. Bloom's Psychine to me, which I was using in 1904. After using Psychine for a short time I felt much better, the night sweats and cough ceased. Months ago I stopped taking Psychine, and I was perfectly restored to health and today I never felt better in my life. Psychine has been a god-send to me." — Cottonwood, N.W.T.

PSYCHINE never disappoints. PSYCHINE has no substitute. There is no other medicine "Just as good."

A PROBLEM.

The city of Fredericton is in trouble. The city has gone already to the expense of $100,000 in the matter of a sewerage system and now the government has decided that sewerage must not be discharged into the St. John River. The people down stream took the matter up through the Boards of Health and have won. The Colonial City for years fought against any sewerage system, and now, when willing to install such and pay enormous for it, it has been decided that the St. John river must be the outlet and there is no other. It would be just as well if people did not have to depend upon a river like the St. John for drinking water.

FOUL MOUTHED HUMANS.

The Hartford Times is engaged in a very creditable crusade against swearing. In regard to this very common habit, Mayor Hennessey says: "No reform will amount to anything which simply aims to prevent this indecency in public places without reference to the home and the school. The real way to reach the difficulty is to arouse the public conscience against this outrage." He advocates complaint to the prosecuting officials of "flagrant offenders." The present penalty is $1 fine.

NAPLES.

Members of Home Division, Sons of Temperance, are making preparations for holding a supper. After supper a program of music will be put on.

Tuesday, the 26th, inst., is the date fixed for the Methodist convention. A pleasant and profitable evening is anticipated.

The Lenten letter of His Grace, Archbishop McCarthy, published in the Halifax daily papers, has been read with interest by many Protestants, and their comment is that it lacks the depth, scholarship and finish of the pastorals issued by the late lamented Archbishop O'Brien.

The small pox scare has struck town. The Rev. Smith, who recently returned from the New Brunswick lumber camps, is quarantined in his home. James Winchester's residence, where Mr. Smith, since his return, has been taking meals, also lies the flag of danger. There is no indication of the disease manifesting itself in these cases, however, and there is not likely to be an outbreak at the present time, for the camp. Mr. Smith had been closed up and he did not come in contact with the malady during his absence. A lady living near Springhill told your correspondent that the type there had been very mild. The patients felt scarcely any discomfort, save a few swollen glands of larynx and throat to their throat, and regular dancing small pox that, rather inconvenient for those who are required to observe Lent. It is well to take every necessary precaution. The small pox is very infectious, but if it is very doubtful whether it is as fatal as typhoid fever, and diphtheria.

If filth and dirt is the cause of much sickness, unclean individuals are the worst of criminals, because infectious disease may annually, thousands of the nation's best citizens and add enormously to the expenditure of the municipalities. Therefore, filth people, who will raise all attempts at cleanliness, should be executed. That would seem like harsh treatment, but what about the army of innocent promising and industrious citizens ruthlessly smothered from their families and sacrificed on the infectious altars of human depravity? The nation is so much in need of good men and women to permit this sort of thing, and the sooner drastic measures are adopted the better.

Agricultural

milks commences 20 Cents a Quart Description of a Wonderful Dairy Plant—Product Details 30 Cents per quart—Points About Herd Management—Construction and Care of Stables—How the Milk is Handled—Feeding and Handling the Cows—New Ideas for Improvement.

Perfection in sanitary milk production is the aim of many up-to-date dairymen. At his Brookside farm in Newburgh, Orange county, N. Y., Samuel L. Stewart has accomplished some wonderful results. This famous farm was described by F. E. Dawley, at the December meeting of the Massachusetts state board of agriculture at Springfield. The account herewith printed was prepared by one of our editors to afford readers some interesting details of the farm producing milk which retails as high as 50 cents a quart.

Mr. Stewart started three years ago to mark an epoch in milk sanitation. Customers in his home market were slow to appreciate the cost of production and it was only after a hard struggle that he was able to find customers who would pay 9 cents per quart for bottled milk delivered. Mr. Stewart invited his local customers to a luncheon served in his stable. They saw and understood why Brookside milk was so pure and worth more than ordinary milk peddled about the streets at 6 cents per quart.

The balance sheet showed that 9 cents retail was not proportionate to the cost of producing such milk. Reward has finally come to him. A large firm made Mr. Stewart a proposition to sell his entire milk product in New York city, at 20 cents per quart. The New York house was to furnish bottles, carriers, caps, pay cost of transportation, in fact, pay for and run all the business connected with the city sale. The net returns to Mr. Stewart are profitable, but certainly not extravagant, when one fully appreciates the care taken in his dairy. Everyone should be interested to know in detail, as nearly as words will proclaim, just how Mr. Stewart succeeds in producing such pure milk.

The original herd consisted some five Holsteins and a few Jerseys and grades, producing 4 per cent. to 4 1/2 per cent milk. Since the New York contract was made two carloads of Jerseys have been added and every cow of doubtful fat production has been sold. While the question of high or low-fat content has not been settled, the fact remains that people who pay long prices demand all the solids they can get. The cow stable at Brookside farm is built of wood, a single story structure, without lofts for storage. Present floors cover the entire ground plan. The mangers are concrete. The stanchions are iron, supported by iron 1 1/2-inch pipe with a single pipe between each cow. The mangers are used for water troughs, being carefully cleaned each time before watering. The side walls are plastered upon wire laths; upon them is a coat of enamel, a preparation that stands scrubbing with hot water.

At present, the ceiling is covered with matched lumber, painted. In the near future, this will be replaced by wire laths and concrete plastering, covered with hard enamel. About four feet of the side wall is colored the balance being white. The ceiling, which is now about ten feet from the floor, will be covered about 1 1/2 feet, thereby reducing the volume of air to be warmed by the cows. The stable is equipped with the King system of ventilation and working admirably. There is, over 50 square feet of window space per cow.

At 4 o'clock each afternoon business begins. Each cow is curry-combed and brushed for about two minutes. The corners of dirt is washed off with warm water to which washing powder is added in the proportion of a handful to a pailful of water. Next the sides, back flanks and legs are washed, after which the tails are washed clean, and finally the udders. All the water is boiled and washing powder added. The men follow, with towels and wipe the udders quite dry, using a clean towel, 20 inches square, for each cow. The cows are kept standing by a rope tied across the stanchion under the neck. The iron stanchions are wiped with a damp towel. This is the only place upon which dust can settle. When this is completed the men all repair to the dairy building where they don the white sterilized union suits. They lay aside the stable suits, wash their hands and faces, clean the finger nails and comb their hair, taking great care to entirely enclose the hair within the white caps. The udders are carefully wiped again with a damp towel, made so with sterilized water, and milking into covered pails begins. Each cow's milk is carried at once by the milker to the milking room where a man, doing no other work, weighs and strains it into cans through two thicknesses of sterilized cheesecloth. A milk pail of cloth is used for each cow. The milker again washes his hands and goes to another cow. He must pass through two doors, one only being open at a time. He opens the doors with his elbow against glass plates and does not touch his hands to the door. Barely is any one permitted in the stable during milking.

The operation of cleansing and milking occupies three hours twice a day. Eight men are employed for 60 cows. After milking, silage and grain are fed, both coming from outside. Hay is fed at noon, and the cows are watered in the mangers morning and night. At midday the floor is scrubbed with hot water, using washing powder liberally.

The cows are turned out on pleasant days. At 3 p. m., cleansing and preparation begins again. This is a repetition of the morning scheme. Work is practically finished at 6 p. m., cows fed and doors closed. After supper two men water the cows and close up for the night. The mangers are scrubbed with cresoline and the floor and side walls with bicarbonate of mercury once a month. The cows are all tuberculin tested, while the attendants and their homes are under medical examination. The milk is elevated, at the receiving room, into a lower where, by gravity, it follows a single cable to the concrete dairy building 75 feet away.

This building is original with Mr. Stewart. It is all of concrete, except the windows and doors. The milk enters an elevated receiving room where, by gravity, it runs over a cooler into bottles at a temperature of 40 degrees, and at once is pushed into the refrigerator. Everything in it is sterilized by the introduction of live steam. Every loose or portable article is run into a big sterilizer and there given a temperature of 240 degrees, under about ten pounds steam pressure. The laundry is fully equipped and the steam chest and drying clothes perform their services. Milkers are required to take a daily bath in warm water and twice weekly in cold water. The milk bottles are each sealed with a special cap. Mr. Stewart has many new plans for betterment that are surprising when one studies his marvelous success. Among these are cutting and dumping the hay before bringing it into the stable, decreasing the amount of time, six hours daily, that cows must be kept standing; and a covering for the bottles that cannot be duplicated.

ANOTHER PEST. Another pest, to add to the ravages of the grey and brown tail moth, has been discovered out in Dorchester, Mass. Some time last spring a man found new and strange cocoons, shaped something like an acorn on a tree in his yard. Several of these he sent to the state experimental station at Amherst, where even the celebrated entomologist, Dr. H. T. Fernald, was unable to identify it, and the appearance of the moth, which occurred in June, was awaited. But the moth, like wise proved a stranger to say of the recorded specimens known to the scientists of this country.

Specimens were then sent to Sir George Hampson of the British Museum, who identified it as an insect indigenous to North China, Korea, and some parts of Japan, where it has done considerable damage. Residents of that section of Dorchester where the insect was first discovered, then remembered that at one time a Japanese nursery had been located in the vicinity and it was thought some of the pests might have been received along with some of the Japanese consignments.

The moth is a beautiful lemon yellow, shading into a purplish color close to the body. The spread of the wings measure about one inch and one half.

The caterpillar has already been found feeding on apple, pear, cherry and maple trees, and, starting as it does, free from its natural enemies at home, has a good chance of becoming an extremely dangerous pest.

ON THE FARM. A little patience in teaching horses to be gentle and obedient will often add dollars to their value. Load according to the strength of the horse teams, and use the whip as little as possible. Nothing will spoil PURE WOOL HEWSON AMHERST TWEEDS. Practically all makers of good clothes in Canada use Hewson Tweeds. Look for the tag that guarantees PURE WOOL.

a high spirited horse quicker than the whip and an ill-tempered driver. In England fowls are produced of much larger bone and frame than are those reared here. One reason assigned for this is that they feed, and have always so fed, a ration of oats, wheat and other grains, which are rich in bone-producing properties, and that corn enters but slightly into the food supply.

Vaccination of fruit trees is being practiced in Germany. It often happens that the roots become more exhausted than the parts above ground, and an injection of sulphate of iron, the same medicine used in the case of anemia of the grapevine, is made. Experiments conducted by a Russian scientist with colored solution show that the solution never enters the old wood, following only the young growth and penetrating the roots to a depth of 39 inches and to the top of the tree. Vaccination is employed only for the introduction of nourishment but for liquids for the killing of bacteria in certain diseases.

George Purdy, a successful alfalfa grower of Kansas, gives the following hints to prospective experimenters with this useful plant: Don't sow any "fresh crop." Don't sow on freshly ploughed land, no matter how nicely prepared. Don't let weeds or grass get over six inches high without clipping. Don't clip or mow when wet with rain or dew. Don't let it stand if turning yellow; cut it. Don't sow less than 25 pounds per acre, one-half each way. Don't sow on land that will not raise 250 bushels of potatoes per acre. Don't sow 25 acres, sow five. Don't pasture it. Don't put any of the rotten manure anywhere but on your alfalfa plot. Don't depend on "culture" cakes or soil from some distant field. Don't let water stand on it. Don't let it go if a thin stand, die in more seed. Don't be afraid you will kill it. Don't re-plough the land; disc it. Don't wait for it to "stool"; it never does. Don't try to cut hay until it takes the field.

FEEDING OF POULTRY. A writer in the Scottish Farmer, discussing the profitable feeding of poultry says: "There is no more valuable food for poultry than table scraps, and probably this is one of the reasons why the suburban poultry-keeper, who keeps only a dozen, hens and fowls lives largely on table scraps, gathers a great number of eggs throughout the winter than the farmer who keeps one hundred hens. Such kitchen waste as potato peels, vegetable parings, cabbage leaves, and odd bits of celery and lettuce, together with small bones pieces of meat, gravy, soup, bread, milk, etc., should be put aside in a large pail or tub provided for that purpose, and the accumulations of each day, when passed through a strainer, and mixed with meal, form a palatable and varied breakfast mash which cannot be excelled by any food."

"A somewhat similar food, and one equally valuable, is that which can be prepared from 'mashers' scraps and parings. Digestion is helped by a variety of food, and therefore, apart from the actual nutritive value of scraps, they are conducive to the health of growing chickens, laying hens, or moulting fowls. I may also point out that good digestion is induced by the use of palatable foods tastefully prepared."

AN EARTHQUAKE NEAR ST. JOHN. St. John, Feb. 20.—A severe earthquake occurred at St. George, forty miles down our coast, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. It lasted two minutes and buildings trembled perceptibly. It was feared they would be shaken down, but no serious damage was done. The residents of the town were greatly alarmed. A second but less severe trembling occurred twenty minutes later.

An exchange says: Announcement that John D. Rockefeller has given $32,000,000 to the general board of education, was immediately followed by notification of an increase in the price of oil. Of course, this was simply a coincidence, but so decided was the increase in the price of oil that the people are wondering whether John D. or they donate the $32,000,000.

Makes the Bread That Makes Us Strong There's nothing like good homemade bread for children. Made of the right kind of flour—baked right—a loaf of bread contains all the food qualities of wheat, in their most appetizing and digestible form. Spring wheat flour is rich in nutriment—makes wonderfully wholesome bread, but not inviting in appearance. Fall wheat flour lacks nutrition, but makes bread that is white, light and tasteful.

Beaver Flour is a blend of Manitoba Spring Wheat and Ontario Fall Wheat. It makes the whitest, lightest, most delicious bread, biscuits, cake and pastry—it makes the most nourishing and healthful bread—and it yields MORE bread to the barrel. Try it—test it—any way you like. Beaver Flour proves its quality, by never disappointing. At Grocers Everywhere. Made in a Model Mill for Model Canadian Housewives. SA VISION OF WORK

Harry Thaw's mother ruined her son when she changed the will of the boy's father. The latter left the spendthrift $2,500 a year. Mrs. Thaw changed it to $80,000 a year. It was a case of too much mothering. She put a handicap on the son's life, cheated him out of his chance. Young Thaw never had the satisfaction nor the experience of earning an honest dollar. He never knew the true joy of work. The exaltation of the youth who turns from a wood-box filled or a lawn mowed—a job well completed—never came to him. He was denied the opportunity of labor with his hands or the work of setting out of an idea with his head. The natural enthusiasm of application was a stranger to his life.

The curse of idleness was upon him. For idleness is a curse. The dictum that man must care his bread by the sweat of his brow is not a curse, but a blessing. Work is the universal law of nature. It is the normal, sane business of man. What could be expected of a young man who had more money than he knew how to spend and who made diversion his only purpose?

There's a limit to having a good time. When you get so far, natural pleasures pall, and if the human has no occupation the craving for new emotions begins to pall on the appetite. Self-restraint is over-borne. Life is wrapped. Tastes are vitiated. Existence is artificial and false.

No man can live a sane existence without some healthy occupation. We are built that way. The wisdom that is divine made us for task. To refuse the task is to go to war with that wisdom. Work and purity and sanity are a logical trinity.

KINGSTON FAST RECOVERING FROM THE EARTHQUAKE.

Boston, Feb. 19.—After a fast winter passage of four days and seven weeks, the United Fruit Company's steamship Admiral Sampson, Captain H. A. Henshaw, arrived at Long Wharf yesterday with eight saloon passengers and a large cargo of fruit. Captain Henshaw reported sailing from Port Morant at midnight last Tuesday. Fine weather prevailed throughout the trip.

Among the saloon passengers was Dr. Edward A. Dakin, of Beacon St., formerly of Nova Scotia, who has been travelling through Jamaica for several weeks. He said that he made an automobile tour over the entire island and found the conditions perfectly normal outside the City of Kingston. He said that Kingston itself was fast recovering from the calamity. The cars are running, and telegraphic communication has been restored. Temporary buildings have been erected and preparations are being made for building modern structures. Dr. Dakin said that English tourists are flocking to the island, and a very large crowd is expected there in March. There are now 124 guests at the hotel Titchfield at Fort Antonio, and other hostelries are well filled.

William H. Davies, the Boston manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, was a passenger on the frigate. He went to Kingston immediately upon the receipt of the news of the earthquake to look after the interests of his bank. He said the bank building was completely demolished. Business has been resumed in a temporary building and a site has been purchased upon which a modern steel building will be erected. He said that the city has been cleaned and the inhabitants are fast recovering from the effects of the disaster.

ALL COMMUNICATIONS in reference to any matter connected with this paper should be addressed to M. K. PIPER, Publisher and Proprietor. WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1907. KEEP OUR YOUNG PEOPLE HOME.

The time of the annual exodus is near. With the spring season comes the departure of the snow and bone of our country, its young men and maidens, to seek home and fortune in alien lands. Alluring pictures of the great North-West of our own land tempt an increasingly large number of our most confident and venturesome youth to fare forth and put the charms and qualities of this most lauded country to the personal test, while many others listen to the persuasions of friends and brothers who have yielded to the attractions of the country "just over the line," and depart to swell the population and fill the treasuries of Uncle Sam. That is a deplorable fact no one cares to deny, and yet little effort is made to stem the tide which is depleting our country of its best strength. Let the over-populated districts of Great Britain and the United States send all the young people they can spare to build up the great North-West, but let us make these provinces rich with their wealth of field, forest, mine and sea so attractive to our young people that they cannot be induced to surrender their goodly heritage. Our contemporary press is doing a good work in holding up before their readers the boundless possibilities and treasures we possess in this land of ours, but some more effective means of publicity should be devised to offset the extensive systematized advertising methods of the emigration bureaux of the West. Next to our provincial government, our local councils and boards of trade are perhaps best fitted to deal with the problem, and some of them are showing commendable interest in the subject. Every citizen, however, who helps to build up his own town by his individual efforts, and who upholds the enterprises therein established and offers encouragement to the younger generation and to strangers, is doing the best work possible for his country, for his town and for himself.

LOCAL VS. MAIL ORDER BUSINESS. Some weeks ago we referred editorially to the attempt to boom the mail-order business by an amendment to the postal law, by which mail order merchants could send their goods c. o. d., thereby increasing the utility and convenience of their system, and last week we noted that the Postmaster General had abandoned the idea of this amending the law for the present. Today we give place to correspondence on the subject from "A Farmer" and hope some of our local merchants will accept his challenge to convince him, and others, of his opinion, that they have rights which our law makes should recognize and foster in preference to the few wealthy mail-order merchants who are seeking increase of accommodation through the postal service. We quote herewith from a contemporary whose sentiments we endorse: "In our town, and indeed in most of the towns hereabouts, there is no occasion for this sort of business. The duty of the citizens of the town and surrounding country in the matter is plain, and when other things are equal support should be given local dealers. Our merchants have invested their capital, have erected buildings, and have established concerns which are almost metropolitan in character. They have helped in a large measure to build up our little town, and it is only fair that they receive the town's trade. To turn trade otherwise, even in the line of small purchases which are great in the aggregate, is to invite the decline of property values in the town." The same contemporary also takes occasion to remark, and we think most appropriately: "There are men who appear to believe that so long as they are not indebted to their neighbors for goods purchased, or the municipality for the tax levy, they have discharged their whole duty and nothing more can be asked of them. But in reality a man's duty to his neighbor is limited only by his power to do his neighbor good, and his duty to the community by his ability to be of service to it. The community in which the prevailing question is 'what do I get out of it?' is one which does not and cannot prosper."

The subject of incorporation has stirred up a strong partisan feeling in Middleton. Last week was the 25th anniversary of the incorporation of the town, and the Outlook, since Middleton declared for incorporation by a vote of 194 to 41. The bill was killed on the grounds that the limits of the town were improperly surveyed. The Outlook strenuously advocating incorporation made statements in regard to the disposal of the bill by the government to which certain prominent citizens took exception, and the two factions are at loggerheads in regard to it. A number of Editor God's patrons have taken advantage of his correspondence columns to attempt to force from him a retraction of his statements. Their attempt to "muzzle the press" is, to say the least, unusual.

OBITUARY

MRS. ANNE E. HATCH. On Ash Wednesday, 13th inst., there passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. W. Colbeth, Dover, New Hampshire, Mrs. Anne F. Hatch, after an illness of several months, terminating in acute bronchitis with heart failure.

Mrs. Hatch was a native of Manchester, England, and was the eldest daughter of the late W. H. Lockett, who was for many years engaged in a mercantile commission business in the Valley. Nine brothers and sisters survive her. She married at Eastport, Maine, William MacDougall Hatch, who a few years before volunteered in his country's service, in the Civil War and like many another brave young patriot, yielded his life, leaving his young wife and three small children, too young to realize their loss of a father's love and care. Assuming the burden with the courage and cheerfulness that never failed her, the mother so bravely and tenderly and so completely filled the needs of her children's lives, that they never realized their first great loss. Optimistic, both by nature and from true Christian principle, she had a peculiar faculty for bringing sunshine and cheer into the lives of others, and the flowers of self-sacrifice and self-denial blossomed in the pathway her footsteps trod. She had, without an intermission, in all its forms, and possessed a keen appreciation of its beauties. Affectionate and sensitive of every kindness shown her, she both attracted and reflected love and many are the hearts that are subdued by the passing of her beautiful personality from their vision, even though she had fulfilled her three score years and ten. Having made her home for a number of years with her daughter, Mrs. M. K. Piper, she is well known in Bridgetown, where she had numerous friends. The funeral services took place at the home in Dover, and she was laid to rest in Pine Hill Cemetery, Rev. Geo. F. Hall, officiating.

Headaches Mean Your Blood Is Poisoned

If your bowels, kidneys or skin are not ridding the system of waste-matter, the blood is laden with impurities, which inflame the nerves. It is these irritated nerves that make the head ache. Powders and pills won't cure. They merely drug the nerves into unconsciousness and relieve for a short time. "Fruit-a-lives" cure Headaches, Neuralgia and Nerve Pains because they purify the blood. They act directly on the three great eliminating organs—Bowels, Kidneys and Skin—and restore them to healthy action, thus ridding the system of all poisons. "Fruit-a-lives" are fruit juices—chemically changed, by the process of combining them into a far more effective medicinal compound than the natural juices. See a bottle sent for Free. Your Doctor

Can cure your Cough or Cold, no question about that, but—why go to all the trouble and inconvenience of looking him up, and then of having his prescription filled, when you can stop into any drug store in Canada and obtain a bottle of SHILOH'S CURE for a quarter. Why pay two to five dollars when a seven-cent bottle of SHILOH will cure you as quickly? Why not do as hundreds of thousands of Canadians have done for the past thirty-four years; let SHILOH be your doctor whenever a Cough or Cold appears. SHILOH will cure you, and all druggists back up this statement with a positive guarantee. The next time you have a Cough or Cold cure it with SHILOH.

A DEGRADING HABIT.

When parents use profane language they cannot expect anything else from their boys when they grow up. They should take into consideration, I do not think any parents of respectability who have a child that they admire, would like to see it grow up with such a degrading habit, no matter how profane they may be themselves. There is a law to prohibit profanity throughout the country, but like many other laws, it is not carried out. You will often see in the police court, that a drunken man is arrested for using profane language and fined. Now if the drunken man can be arrested for that offense, why not the sober man, who is doing the same thing in the cold-blooded way that prevails at the present time? If there were more examples made of the rough element and small boys who are continually swearing on the streets, it would soon be the means of checking the most useless and degrading habit that exists. It is not only what is today, but what it will be in the future, if allowed to continue among the growing youth—George Wright.

BETTER DAYS.

A man who was passing through a time when things did not look the brightest, wrote hopefully to a friend: "I am very far from taking up a permanent residence in the Slough of Despond. I prefer the uplands, and know that I belong there. Also I hope for 'better days' and for grace to lean this cross which I am carrying, through to the end." There was a declaration of independence, for no man is so free as he who trusts while he cannot see, and no slave is so wretched as he who cannot look beyond his present sight.

SLEIGHING ACCIDENT.

(Halifax Herald.) A serious driving accident occurred about a mile from Dartmouth on the Preston road on Saturday afternoon, by which several persons were seriously injured. A party of about fifteen, mostly Halifax people, ladies and gentlemen, who left in the afternoon on a sleigh drive to McDonald's, Lawrence town, were returning home about 10.30, when the accident took place. The sleigh was a very large one, and when coming down Bell's hill the back part of the team took a slew, and as it did the bolt which connects the body of the sleigh to the bobs broke and the upper part overturned. The whole party were precipitated violently to the icy ground. Some were not injured at all and they went to a neighboring house for assistance. Miss Thorne, daughter of E. L. Thorne, and a Halifax young lady, were the ones most seriously hurt. They were taken to John Bell's house and medical aid sent for. Dr. Smith arrived and it was necessary to have a number of stitches put in Miss Thorne's face, which received quite a gash. The Halifax young lady also required several stitches in her head and she was otherwise shaken up. Others in the party received slight bruises, including E. L. Thorne, who was knocked unconscious by the force of the impact, but he was not seriously injured, and was at his office yesterday morning. The driver of the team, Arthur Willard, received some injuries to his hip. He says the accident was not his fault. Being a dark road he did not see where he was going and when the sleigh slowed it went down into a deep gutter and then the upset could not be prevented.

The bribery and corruption evil in elections is receiving notable attention in this county this year. Writers implicating prominent members of both political parties have been issued, including several prominent citizens of Bridgetown and vicinity.

The Truro News reports thirteen quarantined cases of small pox in that city, and 1800 citizens having undergone vaccination. It also makes the suggestive statement that "not one patient now suffering from the disease has ever at any time been vaccinated."

The Baptist parsonage at Clementvale was totally destroyed by fire on last Friday morning. The fire started on the attic and is supposed to have originated from a defective flue. When discovered it had gained such headway that nothing could be done to save the building. The organ, the C. H. organ, and about all his household effects, which the organist had stored there, were no insurance. A hard fight for the parsonage barn and the adjoining building, Mr. B. Duke's residence, were saved.

Another cold snap setting in on Friday night brought the mercury down to eleven below, and has kept it hovering around the zero mark ever since.

An overheated stove placed too close to a lathed and plastered partition in the house of Gilbert Fader, caused a conflagration which might have proved serious but for the prompt action of Mrs. Fader, who, upon discovering the blaze in the partition, took an axe and made a hole above the blaze large enough to be reached with water which soon extinguished the flames.

CORELESS APPLES.
 George W. Stewart, of Newport, Me., has on his farm an apple tree which bears coreless apples. This year the tree bore two bushels of fruit, every apple of which was devoid of core. The tree so far as is known, has no name known to Maine fruit growers and is the only tree of its kind in the State. The matter is being studied by experts on fruit growing, who readily acknowledge that there are at least two explanations of the absence of seeds.

The Tin Pan Feud

About two months before the cherry tree broke down, Mrs. Watson teased over the Reads' fence with a naughty smile on her face.
"Have some passin's, Mis' Read? Those down at the grocery are just dield up sticks beside these. Jim complains a good deal that we have not got a plot to raise garden wass, but he declares that raise a few passin's he must and will. These have had frost enough to get the good taste into 'em."
Mrs. Read turned slowly from the shining window, which she had just finished washing, and came to the door.
"We've never been overly fond of passin's," she replied with an extra-saucy "r," "but perhaps that is because our come out of the grocery."
She took the rusty dirt crusted pan which Mrs. Watson held out with a jovial smile and the remark: "Don't bother to wash that old pan. It's been my garden pan for years."
As Mrs. Read disappeared into the house, Mrs. Watson stooped back to her parsnip bed, and looking down at the tiny feathery shoots, addressed to them her opinion of her neighbor:
"She's stiff an' nosive neighborly to my thinkin', but I mean to keep on. They've bought the house, and she's got a sickly husband and a cross baby, so I guess she needs some pleasant words, if she don't give 'em back again."
Now no one who saw Mrs. Read's kitchen would have judged that its mistress had the care of an invalid to divert her from household duties. The floor, in the old New England phrase, "was fit for the Queen to rest off of," while shining range, gleaming faucets and snowy sink all spoke of painstaking labor. Into this realm of soap was carried, rather unwillingly, it must be confessed, Mrs. Watson's dirty parsnip pan. There was abundant apron sheltering beneath it. Mrs. Read went to the sitting room for a newspaper, and returning, spread it over her snow white table, and then was at liberty to lay her burden down.
"Humph! Such dirty folks do beat all!" burst out anyone a pan like that I'd sit up nights to scrub it. There must be a quart of dirt up those parsnips, too." She rubbed and scrubbed them with a serious vigor that soon made a row of six shining white vegetables, fit for a county fair, on the table.
But there were other worlds to conquer. Did anything ever look so much out of place in a spotless kitchen as that soiled old pan? Mrs. Read stared at it, crossly, then set her lips and crossed the Rubicon. Lye, sand, soap, bristled brick, hard soap, soft soap, hot water in floods—how the elements raged in that little kitchen! At the end of an hour Mrs. Read drew a long breath.
"Now I call that a pan. It was brighter, maybe, when it was just out of the store, but it's a very respectable pan."
Toward evening she zipped at Mrs. Watson's back door, but getting no reply, came away, leaving the pan on the porch, thus giving her neighbor almost a battle challenge.
"What's that?" exclaimed Mrs. Watson, dramatically, the next morning, as she stepped out for her milk bottle.
"Is that my pan? And she couldn't even hand it to me like a Christian, but had to tip-toe over and sneak it onto my back porch!" Here she was wronging Mrs. Read, who had really tapped at the back door, but so knowledge of this came to calm the angry woman.
"No she thought it was her bounden duty to clean up after me, did she? And all those good passin's wasted on her fool! Hope they'll choke her! Now, maybe like as not she thought they were too dirty for her. If she's dard to dump 'em in her garbage box, I'll complain to the police, and I'm going straight to the alley this minute to see!"
Luckily that last straw was not added to Mrs. Watson's wrath, but all the forenoon her indignation was seething and bubbling, until the time Mrs. Read stepped from her back door with a pan of potato peelings. Once again a hand holding a pan was thrust over the fence at her, but this time no cheery smile nor friendly word accompanied it.
"I think you'd just better have pan as well as passin's, since you've been to such pains in cleanin' it. When folks as good as tell me I'm a heathen to my face, I'm don't with them, so there now!"
The pan fell on the Read side of the fence with a clang, but Mrs. Read had no reply to make for a moment. Her conscience did suggest an apology; but no, the simple of cleanliness came forward stiffly.
"I do not need your parsnips, and I do not care to hear such language." She marched straight to the pan, tossed it over the fence, then went directly to the house, apparently unmindful that before the door was hardly closed the pan again sailed into her yard.
Then a pan furore certainly began. There were no more words between those two, but if no words went back and forth, the unskilful pan took flights enough. Mrs. Read would go out with her ashes, and spying the pan, would send it on a hasty journey. Mrs. Watson would come out to weed the famous parsnip bed, and how the pan would spin back again!
Happily there were no children to take up the feud and throw the pan. The "cross baby" spent its time mostly in the house or on a sheltered porch away from the Watson side. The two husbands nodded good day to each other as usual, in fact, Mr. Watson, at least, found a joke in the travellin' pan.

Slowly a hot June sun climbed higher one morning. Both husbands were at work, the Read baby was asleep, and both yards were in a state of neutrality, although the pan was on the Watson side. One lone cherry tree grew in the Read yard, and to this Mrs. Read, with step ladder and pail, now made her way, visions of preserved fruiting in her head. Tip she climbed to the very top of the ladder, and picked till her head was dizzy in the hot spring sun. There were still finer cherries just above her, and with a good deal of hesitation she reached higher, found a limb for her feet to rest on, and left the friendly step ladder entirely behind.
Now Mrs. Read was stout, and cherry limbs are brittle. There was not a moment of warning, when creak came with one shrill scream, Mrs. Read was landed, cherries and all, upon the ground in a dismal heap.
Mrs. Watson, who was cleaning house, heard the scream through her opened windows, and rushed to the scene. Out of her gate and in at her neighbor's was the journey of a moment.

Then a capable hand was removing the overturned step ladder, brushing away the crushed cherries, and helping the dazed woman to her feet.
"Well, now, I do call you lucky! Not a bone broken, is there. But I guess you'd shock up some. Now let me help you in one of the things, and you just rest a spell. Awful awtertain work to climb into cherry trees."
"You're real good," murmured Mrs. Read, as Mrs. Watson studied her shaking form into the house.
The bias must have affected her head a little, for she sank into a comatose sleep, to be roused by the baby some hours later. When she went into the kitchen the first thing that met her eyes was the pan-battered from its many blows, but still able to be piled full of cherries.
Beside it was a paper, on which Mrs. Watson has scribbled:
"I've washed the pan and washed the cherries. 'Thope you can't be Jane."
Mrs. Read stood and looked at the pan and cherries and message for some minutes. Then in her slow way she repeated the words of the morning:
"She's a real good woman!"

The "tin pan feud" was ended. "Gone with the Wind" in the "World's Companion."

GENEROUS ACTION OF B. & S. SOUTH WESTERN.
Mr. J. D. Sullivan, Superintendent of the Halifax and Southwestern Railway and Mr. L. H. Wheaton, Superintendent of Construction and Ways, have been in the city for several days. It is understood their mission has been in connection with the recent disaster at Mahone Junction, in which three lives were lost. Mr. Wheaton was asked if it had been definitely established how the accident occurred, or what was the exact cause. He said so far the reason had not been satisfactorily established, indeed, it was still a mystery to all concerned.
When Mr. Sullivan was asked if any claims had been made for damage by the relatives of those killed, he said that no actions had been entered and as the company was not only willing, but anxious to protect its employees, the parties concerned. Mr. Sullivan said that the officials all felt deeply for the families of the three men and the company would see that they received what is right.

ONLY ONE MAN SAVED FROM WRECK OF BERLIN.
London, Feb. 21.—The worst disaster for many years in the history of the busy cross-channel traffic between England and the continent occurred during a violent gale shortly before six o'clock this morning when the British mail steamer Berlin, from Harborside to Hook of Holland having safely weathered the hurricane was suddenly wrecked as she was entering port. Altogether 143 persons are now dead, or clinging to wreckage, six of whom had not yet been rescued for the terrible accident and it probably never will be known how the steamer came to miss the channel, which, although 300 yards wide and well buoyed and lighted is always difficult of access in rough weather. Captain Parkinson of the Berlin had a good record of fourteen years service. The list of passengers on the ill-fated steamer was long and the names of those who were on board "Berlin" are not being named here. Not one American among the passengers. Only one was saved, Captain Parkinson, who tells a story of a most awful night.

ARMIES AND NAVIES AS POLICE FORCES.
Ottawa, Feb. 24.—President Elliott, of Harvard University, was the guest at a Canadian club luncheon yesterday. He spoke for fifteen or twenty minutes on the way of escape from the competitive armings of the nations. Like Secretary Root he began with a reference to the arrangements of 1814, by which Britain and the United States agreed to keep no feet on the great lakes. The same principle, he contended, should be applied to the Atlantic ocean and other seas. After commending the Canadian mounted police as a fine example of a military force maintained for purely police purposes, President Elliott anticipated a time when national forces would be employed for that end and no other. He referred to MacKenzie King, deputy minister of labor, as a worthy graduate of Harvard, whose present business was to get between the two parties to an industrial war and bring the strife to an end. The Hague tribunal was a shadow and prophesy of such an authority standing between disputing nations. The time would perhaps come when some such court as this might apply an international conciliation act, supplying the element of publicity and enquiry and bringing the disputants within the influence of international public opinion. Then the armies and navies of the world would be police forces only restraining and suppressing nations otherwise likely to break the peace. Such was the substance of President Elliott's brief, but impressive and suggestive address.

THE NORTH POLE MAY YET BE WORTH OWNING.
Ottawa, Feb. 20.—Senator Poirier asked the senate to declare that "the time had come for Canada to make formal declaration of possession of all lands and islands situated in the north of the Dominion and extending to the North Pole." He said it was gratifying to learn that American whalers or explorers had hoisted the American flag on Canadian islands. Senator Poirier reviewed the history of exploration in North America and said explorers had taken possession of the lands in the name of the British crown. He did not agree with the view of Hon. David Mills that continuous occupation was necessary to retain possession. France was the only country that had ever disputed the British title to the Northern part of North America. The Hudson Bay company charter made it clear that the British crown had no doubt of the validity of its title to the whole north of the continent. The time was coming when some of the northern lands would be found valuable. It might be that a thousand years hence the climate would have so changed that the possession of the north would be essential to Canada's welfare and the ownership of the North Pole necessary for Canada to navigate with her products to market.
Sir Richard Cartwright thought Canada had good reason to regard Hudson Bay as a closed sea and that Canada's title to it was clear. There might be some doubt as to the value of the ownership of the North Pole. However, Canada had taken steps to make secure her claims to northern possessions. An expedition was now in the north exploring and planting the Canadian flag, establishing posts and making good Canada's title to the ownership of lands which, while not regarded as valuable now, might become so at any time by such a discovery as was made a few years ago in the Yukon. Sir Richard said that until the present work in the north was completed it would be inexpedient for the senate to declare the exact limits of Canada's claims in the north.

THE JOY OF LIVING.
Every once in a while some cheerful individual remarks to us, "Well, now that the paper is out, I suppose you will take it easy for three or four days." Yes, how delightful it is that a country editor has practically nothing to do between press days. Business runs along automatically. When paper bills come the money drops off the tree, with which to pay them. Subscribers, too, with each other to see who can pay the farthest in advance. Advertisers beg for additional space. And the day the news hunts up the editor is also pleasant to contemplate. There is something so strange about the news news items act. When the paper is out the editor simply goes to his desk and leans back in his easy chair and looks wise and waits for next week's press day. The day before press day the people line up in front of the office door and then they file past his desk and tell him all the news of the week. We writes it up in fifteen or twenty minutes, takes it back and hangs it on the hook. The compositors take the copy, shake it over the type cases, say a few mystic words, the type flies into place, and after a few passes by the foreman the forms are ready for the press again. And the editor goes down and deposits some more money in the bank. It is the greatest snap in the catalogue. Now if the editor could only do away with press day, his joy would be complete.
