

SILOS AND ENSILAGE

How to Make and Fill the Silo - The Feeding of Ensilage.

(Maine Agricultural Bulletin for July.) The first consideration in the building of a silo is that it must be airtight. As long as this condition is secured it makes but little difference how it is built. The taste and convenience of the owner should regulate this. In general, for inside silos, the square form will be found preferable, as all the space of a silo is available for the silage. The silo should be placed, if inside a building, so that the inside surface will correspond with the inside of the timbers above them to which it is desired to nail the boards.

After the silo is well secured at the corners (which may be done by halving together and thoroughly spiking the trench may be filled outside of the silo with small rocks or tramped down, and the crevices filled with cement. This will prevent the silage from rotting. Next see to it that there is a sufficient number of firm bearings above these silos so that when the sides are fastened to them there can be no spreading. This is essentially necessary, as the lateral pressure, particularly of cut silage, is considerable. The boarding if it is to be double, need not be matched, but should be straight-edged and planed on one side to secure a uniform thickness, which need be more than 3/4-inch. The first thickness should be securely nailed with eight-penny nails, and then covered with a good quality of building paper, with edges carefully lapped and with marks upon it to show where the boards join underneath. After doing this the corner planks, with edges beveled so as to fit nicely, may be stood up, and these covered with paper, after which the inside boarding may be put on in much the same way as the first.

The same provisions for a door should be observed as would be in building an ice house, and it may be secured in much the same way. As a finishing touch, the bottom of the silo should be cemented so as to represent somewhat the bottom of a kettle, the cement coming up the sides nearly to top of silo. This will prevent any damage from slight settling.

OUTSIDE SILOS. In some instances it may be desirable to build silos outside of the barn, and when such is the case and they are built square, the same rules will be followed as previously outlined, with the addition of the outside covering of the studs, and the roof. My own silo is of this kind. It is built against the side of the barn, with square roof. It cost $125 and will hold about 75 tons of cured ensilage. It has been in use nine years and shows no sign of decaying.

ROUND SILOS. For outside building the stave silo is the most desirable. It can be built of inch-and-a-quarter lumber, single, without paper except around the doors, which should be put in sections. It will cost less in proportion to its capacity than any other silo, generally speaking, will keep silage with less waste.

SQUARE SILOS. There are ten single boarded silos in Maine, and reports from their owners indicate that they are giving good satisfaction. Still for the average farmer to build such silos, we would recommend the double boarding.

If the inside of the silo is covered with a coat of coal tar and gasoline, it will lessen its tendency to decay. The average cost of silos per ton capacity in Maine is 77 cents.

CUTTING THE CORN. We have built our silo and grown our corn, and the next step is to cut the corn from the field. While this is usually done by hand, the time will soon come when we will no more think of cutting corn by hand than of cutting grass by hand. The various machines made for this purpose, now upon the market, appear to be practical, and may be used by several in any neighborhood, or perhaps better still, owned by one man, who shall cut the corn for the neighbors at a stipulated price per acre, or per hour. It is claimed by some of the best farmers that under favorable circumstances an acre an hour has been cut with a machine, leaving the gavel bound and in excellent shape for handling. For drawing to the silo, a low down sack is very convenient. We have a set of Goshen solid wood wheels 23 and 32 inches high, costing but $3.75 at wholesale, which make a very nice wagon for this purpose. With a long platform set on a high rocker in front so as to allow the forward wheels to turn under, we are able to work to excellent advantage. The corn is easily loaded and the platform is about the right height to stand on to unload onto the cutter. We find that a plank hitched behind this platform, with the end dragging on the ground so that the loader can pick up an armful, and, walking up the plank, drop it on the platform without much trouble, is a great convenience.

Last season I employed a neighbor to cut our corn with a harvester. Most of it being sweet corn fodder, we dispensed with the low wheels and drew on a dump cart. The gavel could be pitched on to the cart with comparative ease, and when the load was drawn to the cutter it was at once dumped, and the team was ready to go for another load. We can say that the corn is handled much cheaper from the harvester than when cut by hand. We are glad to note the increased use of these machines.

WHOLE OR CUT ENSILAGE

For several years we put our ensilage in whole, with fairly good results; so much so that we continue to practice from year to year. While

WOODSTOCK.

Stranger Killed Near Benton May Have Been Blondin.

The Wife Murderer, Whom Boston Police Are Searching for - Great Resemblance to Photograph of Blondin.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., July 27.—The remains of the unknown man killed by a train passing over him near Benton last Wednesday night were buried this afternoon. Telegrams were exchanged with the Boston police after the belief became general that the deceased was Blondin, the alleged wife murderer. In reply to a telegram of inquiry, Chief Harvey sent word that the India ink mark on deceased's left forearm looked like an "L" and "V." After more delay word came back from the Boston chief of police: "Blondin had picture of a schooner on his left forearm. Have pictures of dead man taken in several positions, and forward to me at my expense; need not delay burial."

Photographer Neilson took a good photograph of the deceased and a copy will be forwarded to Boston. A large number of people viewed the remains at Vanwart's undertaking shop today, and almost everyone was impressed with the similarity between the photos of Blondin and the features of the dead man. In height, weight, complexion, the description tallies with the corpse. It is very plain that the dead man was a machinist, judging from the appearance of his hands. There is the same protruding chin. The mark on the left forearm does not appear like a schooner, but it may be that successful attempts have been made to partly obliterate the mark. At all events the identity of the dead man remains a complete secret, and there is strong evidence that he was a stranger in the province. The inquest will be continued next Wednesday evening, when some witnesses, who claim to have talked with deceased, will tell what they know. This much is plain, the corpse is not that of an ordinary looking man, and it would seem that somebody should be able to identify him from the photographs in Neilson's possession.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

THE SULTAN HAS AGREED.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Saturday, July 27.—Yesterday the sultan agreed to comply with the demand made by the Russian government that the sultan should order the arrest in Albania, together with the restoration of the man taken and for the result of the arrest.

CHILDREN ORY FOR CASTORIA.

NEW YORK, July 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade tomorrow will say of Canadian trade: Coal mines are active at Halifax, and business fair for the season. Crop prospects are bright, and prices of cereals are active at Hamilton, but dry goods are somewhat slow. Conditions are satisfactory at Montreal, say crop heavy, and payments good to fair. Quebec reports usual midsummer dullness, but prospects good for fall. Simple lines sell freely owing to more confidence in the currency. Settlement of fishermen's strike has improved conditions at Vancouver, and conditions are somewhat slow. Northern trade is quiet, markets being overstocked.

HOLY GHOST AND US.

A Branch of This Church Has Been Established at St. John.

A branch of the Holy Ghost and Us church has reached the city and headquarters for the province have been made here. Already there are about thirty or forty workers in New Brunswick, and of these twelve are in the city. They come from the training school at Shiloh, Maine. A Star reporter this morning had a talk with Elder G. W. Higgin, who is the head of the organization here. He said that the training school, from which the workers come, has now between three and four hundred students of both sexes; one half of them are in the field preparing to go to the members of the union, some in England and others in this province. The body is entirely undenominational and emphasizes no one particular doctrine over the other, but rather emphasizes the Bible as Christ and His disciples taught it. There is no organization among them resulting from the election of man. Spiritual leaders, however, are appointed by the individual and to others, characterizes their election of officers.

At the school there is no charge made for tuition, board or room, the student pays his cost in God. He provides food for the way to the members of Holy Ghost and Us live in the same happy, trusting state. The large building at Shiloh has been put up without soliciting money or any such thing. God provides it. These fortunate people now have properties that cost $125,000.

Following out this idea of faith and trust for supplying the things to satisfy natural wants, the workers receive no salary, and take up no collection at their services. With them the idea that a collection is a necessary religious ceremony was never held. They remark on this subject that they do not believe that Christ, after His sermon on the Mount said, "Peter and John will now pass the hat for a collection." So the ushers in the church of the Holy Ghost have lost their most important office and the man on the front seat does not have to give a large piece of silver. The money, however, comes in abundantly when ever needed, and contributions, thus forwarded range in size from one cent to substantial cheques.

"We are entirely opposed," said Mr. Higgins, "to spiritualism, Christian Science, Mormonism, and other practices of those of the New Testament. We believe that the sick can be healed by the prayer of faith, and I have often offered prayer and witnessed the effect. In fact it is common and practical for us to pray in faith, for the recovery of the sick, as for other people to use ginger tea, panacea and anodyne liniments. We are extremely simple in our tastes, and have come to cherish what the Bible teaches. We others might perhaps consider our ways as those of the luxuries. Our work is all done at the command of God. He tells us where to go and what to do. Obedience to God is the only way to the kingdom of heaven. He tells us where to go and what to do. Obedience to God is the only way to the kingdom of heaven. We believe that the sick can be healed by the prayer of faith, and I have often offered prayer and witnessed the effect. In fact it is common and practical for us to pray in faith, for the recovery of the sick, as for other people to use ginger tea, panacea and anodyne liniments. We are extremely simple in our tastes, and have come to cherish what the Bible teaches. We others might perhaps consider our ways as those of the luxuries. Our work is all done at the command of God. MR. McLELLAN'S BIG CONTRACT.

Three Hundred Cords of Hard Wood a Day to be Used for Carbonization Plant.

To Procure Charcoal for the Steel Works—A Great Future Predicted for the Clergue Enterprises at Sault Ste. Marie.

(Montreal Herald.) SAULTE STE. MARIE, Ont., July 26.—F. H. Clergue has signed a contract with H. R. McLellan of St. John, N. B., which is the largest of its kind ever entered into in America and means that Mr. McLellan has undertaken to cut and skid 300 cords of hard wood per day for two years. This wood is to be used for the purpose of making charcoal for the steel plant at the "Soo" and at the same time the by-products will be extracted and utilized for commercial purposes by the largest carbonization plant in the world.

Mr. McLellan arrived in Montreal this morning with his wife and family, and when asked by a Herald representative at the Windsor hotel today with regard to the foregoing despatch, he said that, so far as he knew, the contract was the largest of its kind ever entered into in the continent. "I have," said he, "contracted with Mr. Clergue to cut and deliver on the sidings alongside his railway, spurs and sidings, 300 cords per day of hard wood timber. The contract is for one year, but I have the right to renew it for a longer period."

USED FOR CHARCOAL. "It is to be utilized in Mr. Clergue's carbonization plant. It will be used for the manufacture of charcoal and the by-products, such as wood alcohol—in other words, methylated spirits and other articles of commerce will be saved for market purposes."

"This is by far the largest plant of its kind in the world, and 300 cords of wood per day is only one-half of the quantity that the Clergue works will really have the capacity to consume. His plant is to be constructed for the consumption of 600 cords per day. While I appreciate the fact that this is a very large contract, I was satisfied to enter into it after seeing the immense quantities of hard wood that are lying along the Algoma Central railway. I do not think that there is any doubt about Mr. Clergue's being able to supply his carbonization plant for a good many years to come. I only went out on the railway for a distance of thirty miles, and in that distance I saw sufficient hard wood to supply 600 cords per day for two years at least."

ON CLERQUE'S LAND. "Upon whose property is this wood?" "The wood is all to be got on Mr. Clergue's own land, and I shall bring my own men from Northern Maine and New Brunswick to cut and handle the timber, and I intend to be on the ground about the first of August. In addition to using horses for yarding and hauling I will use steam skidders and ladderwork cableways for the procuring of this wood. This carbonization plant is, I may explain, an auxiliary of Mr. Clergue's great steel works, but at the same time he saves the by-products."

THE "SOO" ENTERPRISES. "What is your opinion of Mr. Clergue's enterprises at the 'Soo'?" "They are simply colossal, and personally I can see no reason why each one of them should not be a magnificent success. I spent about 17 days in the 'Soo', and as I have said, I inspected a portion of the woods and looked over the steel plant and travelled on the Algoma Central railway. I have no hesitation in saying that as far as the roadbed and the rolling stock are concerned, it is one of the best equipped roads in America. It traverses a country of vast resources—resources of enormous value as regards both timber and minerals."

There were several severe encounters, and the vigilance committee of the irreconcilables subjected those who had taken the oath to indescribable indignities. The ringleaders have been imprisoned in the fortress. BADEN-POWELL IN ENGLAND. LONDON, July 26.—Instead of coming to London Gen. Baden-Powell is expected at Woking to visit Capt. SYMPATHY EXPRESSED

For Mrs. Ada and Miss Twining in their recent Heavy Bereavement. The following, from the London Post of July 13th, will be of interest to the many New Brunswick friends of Mrs. Ada and Miss Twining: "The funeral of Henry Phelps Dangar, late 18th Hussars, took place on Saturday afternoon from his residence, 177 Pall Mall, the service was held at St. Stephen's church, Balling, and afterwards the body, followed to the cemetery by his father, F. H. Dangar, his brother, Dudley Dangar, and a number of relatives who were interred in the family grave. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, among them a huge wreath sent, with deep sympathy, from Colonel Geraldine, late 1st Life Guards, 23th Hussars. A white wreath was placed on the casket by Miss Twining, Mr. Dangar's fiancée, just before it was lowered in the grave, and buried with it. Mr. Dangar was a distinguished soldier, and served in the present war as second in command of the New South Wales Bushmen. He contracted a severe type of malarial fever while with the Rhodesian field force under General Carrington, and the effects of the fever caused his death. He was engaged to be married to Miss Violet Twining, daughter of the late H. St. George Twining of Halifax, Canada. Much sympathy is felt by his many friends for his family and fiancée in their great loss."

to their destination. So closely did the people throng about the entrance to the Court House that all the efforts of Chief of Police Clark, assisted by Deputy Chief Jenkins, Sergeants Kilpatrick and Hastings and Officer Kilgus, were necessary to keep a passage of ingress open for those who were attending.

Inside the Court House, the elaborate and tastefully artistic decorations of which have been previously and fully described in the Sun, every preparation had been made for the accommodation of the guests. The halls were kept clear by the police and officers, and the guests were seated in a commodious ante-room for use of the gentlemen. The Council Chamber itself during the function presented a scene of beauty like a hothouse for color.

The Chronicle had a call last night from P. D. Cummings of Chatham. Mr. Cummings is a native of the town of Guysboro, Nova Scotia, but for the past twenty-five years has been absent from the province. Like many other Nova Scotians he has made his mark and prospered. His first venture was in mining in the west. Next he established the Dunsuir News at Dunsuir, Cal., which paper he still owns. At the time of the discovery of gold in that country and purchased a name of gold, which turned out to be unsuccessful, and he is credited with making more money than any other man excepting Alex. McDonald, who is also a Nova Scotian. Mr. Cummings then returned to California, and went into the real estate business in San Francisco. He is now on his way to Guysboro to visit his brother Robert, who resides at Ragged Head, three miles from Chatham.

Mr. Cummings' grandfather, Alexander, fought in the Revolutionary war, and at its close came to Nova Scotia and took a grant of land on the site of the present town of Guysboro. Mr. Cummings will return to San Francisco in the autumn.

HAIL-STONES.

Four and Five Inches in Diameter.

Did Great Damage in Parts of Prince Edward Island.

(Charlottetown Guardian 18th.) Thomas Gurney, of Westford, who had brought to the Guardia office Saturday specimens of hail which fell on Union Road near the railway crossing between 11 and 12 o'clock. It was a shower storm, beginning with a partial fall and turning to hail. The storm says that the hail stones could have been gathered in cart-loads. It was after 2 o'clock when the specimens of hail were brought to this office, and they were fast melting in the heat of midday, yet still some of the number were three-quarters of an inch in diameter—course fragments of ice, others were perfectly round, like soft fashioned market balls, and quite as large. The amount of damage done could not be estimated as Mr. Gurney passed, but the potatoes and turnips for the potatoes are to be made on or before the 9th. The prize list will be practically the same as last year, and the conditions of the shooting will be changed, in but two particulars. The Bisley target will be used and the prone position permitted at 200 yards.

After the above was in type further particulars and a quantity of smaller hail stones were brought to this office by E. Hardy of Little York and others.

Speaking in a general way, Mr. Hardy says the track of the hail storm was about a quarter of a mile in width. Some four farms on Union Road suffered severely, namely, those of Joseph Bryerton, Walter Mallet and John Gill on the eastern side of the road, and that of Alfonso Merrill on the west side.

The crop, wheat and corn, about to illustrate the damage wrought by the hail. Among them was a cucumber in which hail stones the size of a musket ball had embedded themselves to the depth of half an inch. Large gooseberries were battered to pieces. A stalk of large rutabaga shown had been beaten to shreds of fibre. Heads of wheat showed that almost every grain had been crushed. Potato stalks were badly bruised, but the damage to this crop will probably not be great. Turnips, on the contrary, are simply ruined, and the farmers who raised them are looking for a way to sow their seeds again. Nearly all the apples were battered from the trees and lay on the ground among the hail, a bruised mass of pulp. The small ones were completely ruined. The men and animals who were out in the storm were severely pounded, until they found shelter. A gosling was killed by the hail, but the rest of the flock were unhurt. One half stone was picked up and measured before it had much melted, and was found to be four and a half inches in circumference. In the half stone was a hole the size of a pea, and in places on the road the accurate-laid hall was up to a horse's fetlocks. The water pouring down the road gullies swept the hail before it, and in places piled it up in conical mounds.

W. G. Fraser, who returned to Chatham on Saturday evening about 8 o'clock, was on Union Road during the storm, but took refuge at Fred. Rossby's. He says the hail fell for about half an hour and made a great noise. Mr. Fraser says some potato and turnip fields at Mr. Mallet's were stripped of their leaves, but little or no harm done to the crops. The hail was washed down, it was lying nine inches deep at 7 o'clock in the evening, eight hours after it fell.

The storm was limited in extent. Two or three farms away from where the greatest damage was done, the sun continued shining and haying went on. Shortly beyond Union Road there was a rainfall, but little or no hail. Some hail fell at Kingston, earlier in the day, and seems to have come from the same cloud that shed the hail on Union Road farms.

He has always been prominent in the Fruit Growers' Association, and was a candidate for the local house in 1888. Mr. Starr leaves three children, W. Rufus Starr, George Starr and Miss Augustus Starr, and one brother, Joseph Starr. His wife, a daughter of the late Ward Eason of Canada, died two years ago. After an address by the mayor and a suitable reply by the governor general, Lady Minto was presented with a large and valuable amethyst from rugged biondion and a book of beautiful photographs of Grand Pre and vicinity. She accepted these gifts and said she would treasure them as souvenirs of a most pleasant trip to the little town of Wolfville. ENUMERATORS GET THEIR PAY. All things come to those who serve and wait. Friday brought the checks for the St. John city census enumerators, in payment of work done several months ago. One man drew his cash on Friday and the others will be paid by check early. The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Globe holds that the long delay in paying the enumerators is not a serious ground for criticism. The correspondent adds: "Up to 1 o'clock today (July 26) checks had been issued to the enumerators in 157 districts out of 210, and by the end of next week all will have received the remuneration to which they are entitled."

HOW TO SEE NIAGARA FALLS.

To visit Niagara from Buffalo this astonishing summer you must get up extremely early in the morning. This is not slang; it is sedate and sober fact. For since everybody who comes to the Pan-American wants to see the falls, trains and trolleys and boats alike groan under their loads of sweltering humanity. Therefore you must get under way with the birds if you want a comfortable trip.

There are three ways to go. The train and the boats make the run in about an hour; the trolley takes an hour and a half from Main street. On the other hand, the trolleys run so frequently (about once in fifteen minutes, or oftener) that you sometimes save time by going that way. As for beauty, the water route ranks first, then the rail, and last the trolley. For unfortunately the electric road failed to secure right of way along the river, and is obliged to snake about through the unattractive streets of North Buffalo and Tonawanda, not reaching the water's edge until within four or five miles of the falls. The train, while it is cinders, skirts the river most of the way and gives you wide views of the lake and the water front of Buffalo.

But the boat, leaving the foot of Ferry street, easily outdoes them both. You will never appreciate the magnificent span of the Niagara as it leaves Lake Erie until you are afloat in mid-stream. Nor will you begin to believe in the splendid height of the Electric tower until you see it from the river, rising graceful and white above the city's smoke. Picturesqueness, save to a very placid and pastoral kind, the upper Niagara has but little. The Canadian shore is margined with fine slim, straight aspens and feathery willows between its toy villages; the American side is lined with grain elevators and lumber yards.

The steamer takes the Canadian channel from the head of Great Island, passing the thickly planted river clubs and landing at Sister's point above Chippewa, about three miles above Table Rock. Here, cooled and refreshed by the sail, you take trolley and follow the green shore through the pretty village of Chippewa, spin through the charming Dufferin Islands, skirt the Canadian Rapids, and come to a halt beside the Horseshoe in the mists of Table Rock. That is the limit of your ticket.

So much for the advantage of the boat. Now for the other side. First, it is expensive. You pay much to travel one way by boat (fifty cents) as you do for the round trip by train or trolley. Second, there are but six boats per day as against twenty-two trains and innumerable trolleys. But if you are willing to pay handsomely for the privilege of reaching Niagara fresh and unjaded, and untripped by the thousand and one menaces of the American village of Niagara Falls, you will rise early and take the 8 o'clock boat down the river, however you may elect to return.

Now, as to what to see and how to see it. Niagara was never meant to be seen in a day, and she takes a just revenge on people who insist upon trying to do it. Little as most people think it, there is a nervous wear and strain in the contemplation of tumultuous scenery, and a very definite limit to the amount of such scenery which you can enjoyably see.

To attempt to see the Niagara in one full day is to insure for yourself aesthetic indigestion, and a lasting distaste for the flavor of the place. Moreover, it is particularly difficult, this season, to see the Niagara for the people who swarm all over the face of nature. With a week, or even three days, to spend at the falls, you might easily avoid the plebeian crowds by making your tours about the islands in the cool of the morning, before the stupid sightseer is fairly awake, utilizing the heart of the day for the more unusual excursions which are beyond the pale of the multitude. Then, too, you would see the marvelous morning and evening lights of the falls, and if fortune favored you, you might even catch a glimpse of the pale spirit of Niagara—the lunar rainbow—arching spectral through the mists of the gorge. You might spend a delicious morning in the wooded Dufferin Islands, with the glorious rattle of the river all about you. Or you might devote a day to getting acquainted with the Foster flats, one of the least visited haunts of all the picturesque spots along the river.

UNDER THE FALLS.

However, if you cannot be persuaded to take time for Niagara, the next best thing is to spend your meagre time well. Theoretically, one should do, beginning with the least and ending with the most impressive views. But this is topographically impossible unless you are willing to go zigzagging back and forth across the river. Besides, that leaves the finest part of the trip for the faded rag end of the day. Some sort of circuit route is desirable. If you arrive by boat on the Canada side your course is clear. Come down by trolley to Table Rock, and stop over there for a long view of the Horseshoe. Then, unless you intend to be outrageous enough or foolhardy enough to struggle through the Cave of the Winds on the other side of the river, you had better go into the Dufferin restaurant and allow yourself to be arrayed in fantastic rubber-cloth garments and go for a dip in the falls. A creeping hydraulic elevator will lower you to the base of the cliff, where you can scramble over the slippery rocks, buffeted with fierce driven spray to a point whence you can see a little way into the inscrutable mist-veiled arch of the Horseshoe.

This is fine, but the rest of the experience is finer. You enter the mouth

DOWN THE GORGE.

Released from your rubber abroud, you are ready for a trip down the gorge. If you are both wise and sturdy you will walk as far as the steel-arch bridge, stopping long at Prospect Point, and at the little bazaar building whose wide plate-glass window frames in the whole expanse of the American Falls.

At the bridge you change trolleys for Queenstown, a trip best made without stop-overs. The inclined railway at the Whirlpool Rapids charges a quarter to carry you down the bluff, and the view is practically the same which you get without extra expense from the American side of the river. The best part of the ride down the Canadian bluff is from the Whirlpool down. The trolley circles the edge of this strange loop in the river, treating you to amazing views of this most amazing phenomenon.

The Whirlpool itself is too placid-looking to be as impressive as some writers would have you think. But the great sweeping river angle in the stream where the Lewis and Clark ancient pre-glacial channel of St. David's gorge, is profoundly impressive, as well as geologically significant. At Queenstown the trolley shows you, too, the ancient shore line of Lake Ontario, known as the Niagara escarpment, a sharp range of bluffs overlooking the placid vineyard planted plain which stretches away to the modern lake. Here the river, its tumbling and rioting over, spreads out into a broad blue stream too limpid and too languid so much as to ripple.

Nobody who knows how to see Niagara makes the mistake of coming back up the gorge on the Canadian side. The trolley runs too far from the edge to catch the finest views which were available going down, and then the Gorge road views at the water's edge are incomparably finer than anything from the top of the bluff. Therefore at Queenstown you cross the river to Lewis and Clark and the American trolley up the river.

IN PROSPECT PARK.

Arrived in Prospect Park, you had better go down the inclined railway to the foot of the American Falls. With your umbrella with you, to feel the splendid rush and mighty volume of the river, an effect which you can never hope to get fully from the top of the fall.

The Maid-of-the-Mist starts from the foot of the incline and thrusts its impertinent prow into the very arch of the Horseshoe. If you have not already been into the mist on the Canadian side you will want to don a rubber-hooded coat and take passage in the morning if you please. The Maid lies helplessly for a few moments in the heaving water of foam at the base of the Horseshoe, and then precipitately retreats. Either the trip by the Maid-of-the-Mist or by the elevator is satisfactory to the Cave of the Winds, but one of the three every visitor to Niagara ought certainly to take to be convinced of the full majesty of the falls.

So much for the route, starting from the Canadian side. If you arrive on the American side it is best to go at once to the foot of the inclined railway, then to Prospect Point, then across the bridge, and possibly up to Table Rock. Whether you ride or walk you must see the Horseshoe at close range. From Table Rock the route is the same as if you had arrived by boat at Sister's Point. Go down the Canadian side to Queenstown and up the American coming back to Prospect Point.

Prospect Point disappoints so many strangers that it is safe to save this view for the latter part of your trip. When you have gotten acquainted with the falls in broadside, in profile and from their foam-shedded base, you are better prepared to feel the fascination of watching the easy slip of the arch at the top of the American fall, and you will no doubt linger there.

There remains the islands. It may seem a mistake to leave this quieter scenery for the last, but by the time you have seen the gorge and the Horseshoe you will be well content to admire little things. Whether you walk, or take a carriage or patronize the reservation barge, you will want to stop and dismount at Luna Island, at the Horseshoe and at Terrapin Rocks. These Sisters, however, are not very interesting to an already tired tourist. If you stay several days at Niagara they are abundantly worth while. But by the late afternoon there are at least three self-conscious maidens posing on each rock, and one needs to be a lover of humanity in large quantities to enjoy the view.

In a private letter, Dr. Austen K. DeBlais, writing from Grandma, says he has visited Bordeaux, Seville, Cadix and Bobadillo, after leaving Paris.

It is reported that Mrs. G. H. Hooper of Montreal gave Rev. A. Williston, pastor of Greenock Presbyterian church, a cheque for $2,000 for the building of a manse, and subsequently provided a lot on which to build it. The trustees of the church during the past winter had the manse built and the surrounding grounds graded and fixed up. The work cost more than the $2,000, and the money to make up the difference was borrowed by the trustees. Now, for some reason not made public, Mrs. Hooper, through her local attorney, cancelled the gift, and the trustees have recovered the property to her, she to liquidate all outstanding claims against it.

WHEN LORD SALISBURY IS SPAKING.

Lord Salisbury speaks best when he rests his elbow on something. In the House of Lords he usually finds the support he needs in two or three books placed one above the other. Somebody one day removed one of these (it was some book of reference), and Lord Salisbury missed it immediately. His eloquence was checked, he floundered in his speech, and did not resume it until the book was returned. On another occasion at his own house, where there was a political meeting, he began to speak rather lamely, and after considerable hesitation he walked across the drawing room to where there was a high fire-screen. He got inside this, with his back to the fire, and, facing his audience, with his elbow on the screen, proceeded to make a most eloquent harangue.

CALLED "OFF."

Two Irishmen were one day somewhat intoxicated when fishing one day. One sat down on the pier while the other stood, and just before beginning operations they made a wager with each other as to who would catch the most fish. They had been fishing for about half an hour, with little or no success, when Pat, who was standing, lost his balance and fell overboard. As Pat went headlong past Mike, the latter gave a yell and said: "Begorra, if ye are goin' to dive for 'em, the best's off!"—Penny Pictorial.

WHY YOU SHOULD DRINK BUTTERMILK.

The virtues of that old-fashioned and easily procured drink, buttermilk, have not been half sung these days. Physicians say that its lactic acid is even more healthful than the citric acid of oranges and lemons. It is credited, too, by those who should know, as being of value to a rheumatic patient, has been found to be both nourishing and fattening, as well as remarkably easy of assimilation. If liked at all, it is undoubtedly a better drink in summer than many of the celebrated, artificially flavored drinks that are consumed in almost unlimited quantities.

COMPLIMENTARY.

A city man complained bitterly of the conduct of his son. He related at length to an old friend all the young man's escapades.

"You should speak to him with firmness and recall him to his duty," said the friend.

"But he pays not the least attention to what I say. He listens to the advice of fools. I wish you would talk to him!"—Penny Pictorial.

Teething, Fretting Children.

When a child frets and cries almost continuously, the root of the trouble in nine cases out of ten lies with the stomach or bowels. Fermentation and decomposition of the food mean colic, bloating, or diarrhoea, the latter is especially dangerous, frequently fatal during the hot weather months.

REVOKED HER GIFT.

The Sun's St. Andrew's correspondent writes:

It will be remembered by readers of the Sun that last fall Mrs. G. H. Hooper of Montreal gave Rev. A. RECENT DEATHS.

General regret was expressed Saturday morning when it was learned that James F. Hamilton, for many years a prominent lumberman in this city, had passed away. He died of heart failure. Mr. Hamilton was the son of the late Charles Hamilton, who died in this city a couple of years ago. His family came here from Portland, Me. The father came first, and bought and operated a sawmill on the Straight Shore. Later his son, James F., who was a paymaster in the United States navy, resigned that position and became his father's partner here. When the old mill was burned, Charles Hamilton retired from the business and James F. built the present mill, which he operated for a time and then sold to Miller Bros.

The family lived for a time on Douglas avenue, but have of late been boarding on Wellington row. Mr. Hamilton was about 60 years of age. His wife was Miss Russell of Portland, Me., and she, with one son, Russell Hamilton, about 15 years old, survives. Mr. Hamilton was very popular with the business community, and was one of the most ardent sportsmen in the city, having fished at various times practically all the lakes and streams in New Brunswick. He was a member of St. John Encampment, Knights Templar. He was a member of the Union Club, whose flag is at half mast because of his death.

Many St. John citizens will learn with regret of the death of John McCann, one of the oldest settlers of Chappel Grove, and a very worthy man. Mr. McCann leaves a widow and three sons and three daughters to mourn their loss.
