SUDDEN DEATH AT BATHURST

Mr. Isaiah Scofield of Montreal Died Suddenly Monday Morning

WAS VISITING THERE

Had Been Attending the Convention of R. R. Enginemen at River du Loup

The very sudden and unexpected death occurred at Bathurst on Monday morning about 8 o'clock of Isaiah (Fred) Scofield of Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Scofield accompanied by their daughter and niece, Miss Florence Williams came to River du Loup a week ago, where Mr. Scofield attended the "Locomotive Engineering" reunion of which association Mr. Scofield was a prominent member, on Friday all four came to Bathurst to spend Sunday with Mr. Scofield's mother, Mrs. John Kane, and intended returning home to Montreal on Tuesday.

Mr. Scofield was not in the best of health but nothing so serious as death was expected. After spending the evening pleasantly with friends Mr. Scofield retired and slept well until about 3 o'clock he awakened with a pain in his side but said nothing about it until about seven o'clock he took a hemorrhage and immediately Dr. Duncan was summoned but before his arrival death had come.

It certainly put a gloom over their visit here and their many friends and relatives sympathize deeply with Mrs. Scofield and family. Mrs. Scofield was formerly Miss Maggie Kane of Bathurst and first married Alfred Dorrain of Montreal who died about twenty years ago, leaving an only son Alfred who lived here with his grandmother until a few months ago when he went to Montreal with his mother. Mrs. Scofield has five children; the eldest about fourteen years of age, all in Montreal.

Mr. Scofield formerly lived in Smith's Falls, Ontario, a son of Mrs. R. Whitehead, whose first husband died some years ago. He was 75 years of age and at the age of 18 years started in work on the C. P. R. which means that he was one of the youngest yet oldest persons on the C. P. R. on which line he was very popular. For the past 18 years he has been engineer on the road from Smith's Falls to Montreal and will indeed be badly missed in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

The remains were taken to Montreal for interment on Monday. Mrs. Scofield with her daughter and niece, Miss Williams, went also, together with Richard Kane a brother of Mrs. Scofield's.

The following officers were installed for the ensuing quarter at a meeting of Newcastle Lodge L. O. O. F., on Friday evening last.

D. G. M. Bell of Chatham assisted by Bogs, L. H. Abbott, J. L. Stewart and Stanley Mowatt as Grand Lodge Officers installed the above officers.

After the meeting the visiting brethren were entertained by the Newcastle members at the Metropolitan Cafe.

MEETING OF PRESBYTERIAL

Meeting Held at Chatham last Thursday. Was Largely Attended.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The Presbyterial, which met in St. Andrew's Church Thursday evening, consisted of delegates from all the auxiliaries of the W. F. M. S. of the Miramichi Presbytery. The meeting was opened by Rev. W. W. Rainnie, who briefly explained the object of the meeting and gave out hymn 430, after which he read a short lesson and Rev. Mr. Ross offered prayer. His Worship Mayor Nicol was introduced and made an address of welcome to the fair delegates, paying them some very pretty compliments. Mr. Nicol was very eloquent on mission work and showed that he had given some thought to the subject. Mr. Y. Burton Loggie sang "Thy Will Be Done" in his usual good style. Rev. Mr. Myers followed with an address on Foreign Mission Work, which was listened to with interest. Rev. Jas. Ross, superintendent of Home Missions, addressed the meeting on home mission work, speaking thirty five minutes notwithstanding the fact that the thermometer had registered 90 in the shade all day and the congregation had been in the church over an hour before he began. Mr. Ross' address was earnest and eloquent.

Rev. James Scotchard read a brief address of welcome to the delegates from the President of St. Lukes F. M. S., and Mrs. George Tait also read a very short address from the W. C. T. U. The choir rendered music during the evening. Probably owing to the heat the attendance was very small, less than half a dozen of the male sex being present, but a fair attendance of the fair sex made up the audience.

Services were held morning and afternoon in St. Andrew's Hall, Friday, at which the following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mrs. John Ferguson, Newcastle.
President—Mrs. G. B. Fraser.

Vice Presidents—
1st Mrs. Aitken, Newcastle.
2nd Mrs. Leck, Dalhousie.
3rd Mrs. Archibald, Hexton.
4th Mrs. J. M. McLean, Chatham.

Secretary—Miss Jerrard, Charlottetown.
Treasurer—Miss A. B. Cameron, Dalhousie.
Secretary of Young People's Work—Mrs. James Anderson.

Mrs. Snowball took the delegates and their hostesses and the members of the W. F. M. S. for a sail from 5 till 7 p. m. on the St. Nicholas, and refreshments were served on board. Miss McCully, a Korean missionary, who is home on a holiday, spoke at the evening meeting for more than an hour. She displayed the costumes worn by the people and showed some articles of ornament worn by women. Much of the ground covered by Miss McCully had been fully discussed here before, but she is an interesting talker and would have held the attention of her listeners if the night had not been so warm, but the atmosphere was so uncomfortable that many left the church and one lady fainted before the speaker ceased.

The Presbyterial closed its session with a social at which ice cream and cake were served.

Employee in Munroe & Turnbull's

Mill Met With Service Accident.

Jas Petrie an employee of Turnbull & Munroe's mill met with a painful accident on Tuesday last which resulted in the loss of the left hand. Dr. John Benson, assisted by Dr. Baxter performed the operation. The man was insured in the Dominion of Canada Guarantee to Accident Insurance Co. through the agent Mr. G. M. Sinclair for $1500 and will receive about $300 as compensation.

Mr. Samuel McDonald, of Chatham employed in the Ruddock Foundry had his hand badly injured by a steam hammer. He also carried insurance with above company. This company is noted for its prompt payments.

John McDonald Contractor & Builder of Chatham who carried insurance with Mr. G. M. Sinclair also receives benefit for injuries sustained while travelling. Benefits are doubled when injuries occur on public conveyance of any kind steamboat, railroad or public coach.

Mr. McDonald carries $5000 with above Co. and has always found them prompt in their payments.

ARRIVED HOME FROM SUSSEX

Field Battery C.A. Arrived Home Saturday Afternoon.

CREDITABLE SHOWING

Battery to Have Entire New Equipment of Guns, Etc. For Next Camp

The 12th Field Battery C.A. arrived home by special train from Camp Sussex Saturday and a more bronzed and soldierly crowd it would be hard to find. The work of unloading guns and equipments at the depot was done with the utmost despatch and in a most orderly manner.

At Camp Sussex the battery as usual acquitted itself well and is confidently expected by the officers that it will obtain as high a position on the list as previous years. The battery this year was composed of only four guns, as this is the intended number for all field batteries of this class in future.

In the sham fight of Friday the 12th was in the attacking party and by its rapid marching and quick maneuvering was given much of the credit for the good showing made by the attack party. The men and horses were without food or water for over six hours and the heat was intense, but all did their best and no complaints were heard.

We understand that all the equipment of this battery has been ordered to be sent in to headquarters and that the new 12 pound breech loaders will be supplied with new equipment.

Already gun carriages and baggage wagons for the new equipment have arrived and the guns are expected before the next annual camp.

Major Laylor is taking a very active interest in the battery and we hope to see this fine force kept up its high standing under his command. There is a shortage in the commissioned officers which it is hoped will shortly be filled.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Malcolm Patterson, one of the pioneer residents of Campbellton, died of heart failure at his home last Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

The deceased gentleman was born at Glasgow eighty five years ago. He served an apprenticeship of blacksmithing in Scotland. When nineteen years of age he came to Restigouche, landing at Fleurance Point. He later worked with the shipbuilding firm of Ferguson and others for a number of years, and from his savings bought a farm above town, erected a blacksmith shop and worked at his trade. A few years later he went in the mercantile business on a small scale, which prospered and was enlarged. During the construction of the L. C. R. he did a very extensive business supplying the various contractors. About fifteen years ago he retired from active business, having by his business ability and thrift amassed a considerable fortune.

The funeral held on Monday was one of the largest ever saw here. Rev. J. A. Leck, assisted by Revs. H. E. Thomas and R. H. Colman, conducted the service. The pallbearers were Messrs. J. McAllister, W. W. Doherty, Charles Murray, J. A. Verge, Charles Stewart and Angus McLellan.

A widow, who was formerly Mrs. A. Smith of Bathurst, survives, and has the sympathy of the community.—Events.

DOAKTOWN.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the W. F. M. S., held their annual thank offering service last week. Miss McCully, returned missionary from Corea, spoke to the people. Her address was interesting and Miss McCully's abilities as an orator are second to few of the speakers of the day. A large audience listened with deepest interest as she recounted the work done there and the work yet to be done. The Doaktown people are deeply interested in the Korean mission. Miss McCully, sister of the missionary, treated the audience to a solo. The thank offering of the ladies was $27.00. The general offering amounting to $6.59 was handed to Miss McCully.

Schools closed last week. The attendance, owing to sickness, has fallen off very much, but the work done at the public examination showed the care and attention of the teacher over the whole school. A number of the scholars are taking the Normal entrance examination.

Mrs. O. Hildebrand, Mrs. M. A. Kelly and Miss Rena Russell were delegates of the Women's Auxiliary to the Presbyterial at Chatham on the 8th July.

Had Paralysis of the Face

Lost power of speech—Five doctors failed—Electricity proved ineffective.

Mr. Wm. J. BRENNAN, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "For a year I suffered with paralysis, which five doctors failed to cure or even relieve. The trouble began like an earache, and ended by drawing the left eye half way down the cheek, and the mouth twisting up towards the right eye. I finally became speechless and dived into bed. In a few days I was lying in bed, unable to move, and after trying everything I could hear of, even to the electric battery, I gave up in despair. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food curing a similar case, I began its use, soon to find that I was improving. By continuing this treatment I became sound and well in every way, have resumed my work, sleep well, and my eye and mouth have returned to their normal position. I would not go back to my former condition for all the gold in the country, and feel that I have a new lease of life."

Four Facts For Sick Women To Consider

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Has an Unequalled Record of Cures—Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Is Confidential, Free, and always Helpful

FIRST.—That almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, displacements of the uterus, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing-down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

SECOND.—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of absolute cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can.

For thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, curing backache, nervousness, kidney troubles, all uterine and ovarian inflammation, weakness and displacements, regulating menstruation perfectly and overcoming its pains. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the change of life.

THIRD.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

FOURTH.—Every ailing woman in Canada is asked to accept the following invitation. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, your trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

HEAVEN'S ARTILLERY LET LOOSE OVER GRAND FALLS.

Worst Electrical Storm in the History of the Town—One Man Struck and Stunned by Lighting—Horses and Cattle Killed—A Big Log Jam.

Grand Falls, July 9.—Ted Parent has a crew of men engaged in attempting to break the log jam in the narrows. At the wells and rocks are piled six feet deep and extend from wall to wall of the canyon. There are over 3,000,000 feet of logs in the jam. Dynamite will probably be used. Drivers working on the jam take lives hands owing to the swirling rapids and whirlpools, and hemmed in by the rocky walls of the gorge, should the drive take a sudden start they would never reach shore.

On Saturday, July 1st, Grand Falls experienced the worst thunder storm in its history. About five o'clock there was a terrific thunder storm—the flash of the lightning was blinding and the rain came down in torrents. The thunder and lightning lasted half an hour, but the rain continued, and people thought the worst was over. Shortly before dark another terrific thunder storm passed over the town. However, thunder storm succeeded thunder storm, and for four hours bolts of chain lightning zigzagged in every direction.

Alfred McMillan, who resides a few miles below town, took refuge from the storm under a tree, and was struck or stunned by the electric fluid. Dr. Puddington was summoned, and according to last accounts, he was still unconscious. A span of horses were struck and killed on Comeau Ridge. In several instances cattle were killed grazing in the fields. It was a terrible display of the forces of nature.

SCIENCE HUNTS FOR ADAM.

COLLEGE ETHNOLOGISTS DIGGING IN MARYLAND CAVE TO FIND REMAINS OF FIRST MAN.

Washington, D. C., June 27.—Ethnologists are continually making excavations in cave in the hope of discovering evidence of a race of men supposed to have inhabited North America in prehistoric times.

One of the recent investigations has been completed by Dr. Charles Peabody, of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. A large cave at Cave town, Md., was the scene of the exploration, and Dr. Peabody, with Warren Moorehead and ten men, dug more than a month.

No fossil human bones were found but in the quarry three hundred feet from the mouth of the cave fossil bones of animals were unearthed. Some were of the early cave bear and the elk.

The cave is about one hundred feet wide by one hundred feet long. The upper stratum of the floor consists largely of camp ashes &c., and excavations by Mr. McGuire revealed large quantities of broken pottery, arrow heads, bone and stone tools which had been left by the early Indians.

Underlying the camp ashes is a layer of stalagmite, six inches to several feet in thickness, and underneath this is real cave earth, similar to the formation found in caves of Europe in which fossil bones of animals and ancient man have been found.

LEIBIG'S FIT CURE

Royal Bank of Canada.

Fine New Quarters Provided for this Progressive Institution.

The Royal Bank of Canada is now finally settled in its handsome new quarters.

The Royal Bank of Canada, formerly the Merchant's Bank of Halifax, established a branch here in 1885 in a small building near the Post Office. A few years later the present site was purchased from the Customs of Canada and was at once occupied by the Merchant's Bank. In 1895 the quarters became too small for the increasing business of this institution and the interior was remodelled and at that time it was thought that adequate quarters had been provided. A few years ago the Merchant's in a very pretty pattern. The office fixtures and furnishings supplied by the Canada Office Furniture Co., are of antique and golden oak panelled. The wickets are finished in bronze and all are in perfect keeping with the other fittings. The manager's office is spacious and neat. It has an open fire place with red brick mantle. The finishings in this office are of golden oak with hardwood floors. The main bank is large, roomy and airy, has plate glass windows on three sides which give abundance of light and fresh air. Here the staff attend to the business of the bank. To the rear are the vaults. These are they are to be complimented on the fine work done.

The present staff which is a large one is made up as follows:

E. A. McCurdy, Manager.
G. Jardine, Accountant.
R. S. McGillivray, Teller.
W. A. Clarke, Ledger Keeper.
John A. McKendry, Discount Clerk.
L. McAllister, Collection Clerk.
John Morris, Cash Book.

This office of the Royal Bank is now one of the finest

ROYAL BANK OF CANADA, NEWCASTLE, N. B.

Bank of Halifax changed its name to the Royal Bank of Canada. To-day it is known thus throughout the entire Dominion, and has branches from Halifax to Vancouver.

The present building is one of which Newcastle can well be proud. It is built of Miramichi grey sandstone and presents a handsome front. At the main entrance are carved columns also of grey free stone. The interior of the outer office presents a rich appearance. The floors are tiled very large and therein are kept the bank's valuables. One is made fire and burglar proof for the reception of all cash and securities. The other, which has a marble floor and is fire proof is for the reception of all books and documents in connection with the carrying on of this large institution. There are also lavatory, stationery and telephone rooms.

Messrs. J. C. Damarasq & Son of Halifax were the architects and E. J. Horn of Halifax the contractor, and in the Maritime Provinces and shows a progressive spirit on the part of that institution. Also it shows that the management believes that our town is going to increase in importance and consequently their business will grow also, for which this increased accommodation has been amply provided.

The manager and staff have reason to be proud of their fine quarters. We wish them every success in their new home.

POE AND POVERTY.

The Poet Was Born to Need and Left It as a Legacy.

According to Charles Marshall Graves, writing in the Century, the poet Poe was two years old when his mother, a gifted actress, was living in Richmond in the direct want.

Mrs. Poe's last stage appearance was in the Richmond theater in October, 1811. The theater burned on Dec. 24, and seventy-eight people perished with it. Poe's father had died in the spring, and Mrs. Poe and the baby poet and his younger sister went to live on Main street, in the Bird in Hand region, in a tenement cellar perpetually wet by the Shockoe creek, which then flowed through the middle of the street. Here the wretched woman contracted pneumonia and died. And from the cellar the future poet, described as a "baby skeleton," was rescued by Mr. Allan.

Sixty years and more later Rosalie Poe, the poet's younger sister, appeared on Richmond streets in poverty as bitter as her mother's had been to get a few coins by selling photographs of her brother.

The man who was perhaps America's greatest poet and certainly one of the few poets who have vitally influenced the literary art both in prose and verse was born into the most wretched poverty and left need as keen behind him.

Forgot His Own Tongue.

A traveler in arctic Siberia, Mr. Vanderlip, a gold hunter, told the following of his return to civilization: "I found that half a dozen of the officers and men of the steamer which my employers had sent for me had come to hunt me up. The captain dismounted, and I tried to address him in Russian, but he said, 'You forget that I speak English.' Now, it may seem scarcely credible, and yet it is true, that for a few moments I was totally unable to converse with him in my native tongue. I had not used a word of it in conversation for months, and my low physique

It's the trouble that never comes that causes loss of sleep.

A good many people only think they think al condition acting on my nerves confused my mind, and I spoke a jumble of English, Russian and Korak. It was a week before I could talk good, straight English again."

Hard to Move In Russia.

An American wished to move from the Hotel Europe, the principal hotel in St. Petersburg, to a smaller hotel around the corner. He came down with his bag packed ready to go. "Sorry," said the manager, "but you cannot leave this hotel or register at another hotel until we get your passport from the police, and that will take a day and a night. You must go through exactly the same procedure as if you were leaving the country."—World's Work.

Mending Amber.
To mend amber requires a certain amount of care, though the process is a simple one. Apply some linseed oil to the broken edges, and then hold the oiled parts over a gas jet, covering the cloth. As soon as the oiled parts become sticky with the heat press the edges which are to be united together and hold them very carefully till cold.

SERIOUS FIRE AT ALBERT, N. B.

Many Buildings Destroyed There
Friday Afternoon Last During Heavy Gales.

LOSS ABOUT $40,000

Albert, Albert Co., July 8.—A south west gale was blowing on Friday afternoon when a fire from some unknown cause, broke out at Brewsters and Co.'s carriage and woodworking factory on Bridge street at the lower end of this pretty village. The building was soon a mass of flames, and burning embers were carried to adjoining buildings and almost before the village realized the peril, the whole of Bridge street on both sides as far as the McNulty buildings was in flames. Under the pressure of the stiff gale the burning embers were carried enormous distances, and several buildings outside of the district named were set afire during the afternoon and early evening, but fortunately were suppressed. Clouds of smoke arose bearing the burning embers and scattering the same even as far as Riverside. At more than one mile away several fires were started but fortunately put out without serious damage. Coleman Starratt's barn, half a mile back of the village, caught from an ember but the fire was quickly mastered. The fire swept up Bridge street until the Baptist church was reached. This caught several times, but the bucket brigade made a heroic stand and by saving the church, it is believed saved the rest of the village.

JUNE WEDDINGS

O'NEILL—PETERS

On June 27th at half past seven a very fashionable wedding took place at St. Augustine Church, Rustico when two popular young people Miss Emily Peters of Rustico, and for two years book keeper for the Singer Co., at Newcastle N. B. and Mr. Thomas Henry O'Neill Manager of the Singer Co. of the same place were united in holy bonds of matrimony.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of cream silk voile with trimmings of point lace and wore a bridal veil with orange blossoms. She was attended by her sister Miss Juliet Peters who wore a gown of cream voile with lace trimmings and hat to match, while Andrew Gallant cousin of the bride ably supported the groom. The peals of Mendelssohn's wedding March, played by Miss Annie Peters niece of the bride, the bridal party entered the church which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Chaisson P. P. after which high mass was celebrated, while Miss Minnie Peters niece of the bride and the Misses Tharsile Martin and Kate Doucette sang beautiful hymns. After the ceremony the party drove to the residence of the bride where a sumptuous repast was served. The bride's travelling costume consisted of fawn ladies cloth and Russian blouse with applique trimmings. The numerous and costly gifts testify the esteem in which both are held. The groom's gift to the bride was thirty dollars in gold, to the bridesmaid a silver bracelet, and a gold cross to the groomsmen—Charlottetown Guardian.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill arrived home from their wedding trip last Friday, and are receiving the hearty congratulations of their many friends here. The Advocate joins in wishing the young couple many years of happiness and prosperity.

FROM the point of view of the criminal expert," said Mr. Sherlock Holmes.

"London has become a singularly uninteresting city since the death of the late lamented Professor Moriarty."

"I can hardly think that you would find many decent citizens to agree with you," I answered.

"Well, well, I must not be selfish," said he, with a smile as he pushed back his chair from the breakfast table. "The community is certainly the gainer and no one the loser save the pair out of work specialist, whose occupation has gone. With that man in the field one's morning paper presented infinite possibilities. Often it was only the smallest trace, Watson, the faintest indication, and yet it was enough to tell me that the great malignant brain was there, as the greatest tremors of the edges of the web remind one of the foul spider which lurks in the center. Petty thefts, wanton assaults, purposeless outrages—to the man who held the clew all could be worked into one connected whole. To the scientific student of the higher criminal world no capital in Europe offered the advantages which London then possessed. But now?" He shrugged his shoulders in humorous deprecation of the state of things which he had himself done so much to produce.

At the time of which I speak, Holmes had been back for some months, and I at his request had sold my practice and returned to share the old quarters in Baker street. A young doctor named Keston had purchased my small Kensington practice and given with astonishing little delay the highest price that I required to ask—an amount which only explained itself some time later when I found that Keston was a distant relation of Holmes and that it was my friend who had really found the money.

Our months of partnership had not been so uneventful as he had stated, for I had on looking over my notes that this period included the case of the papers of ex-President Murillo, and also the shocking affair of the Dutch steamship Friedland, which so nearly cost us both our lives. His cold and proud nature was always averse, however, to anything in the shape of public applause, and he bound me in the most stringent terms to say no further word of himself, his methods or his successes—a prohibition which, as I have explained, has only now been removed.

Mr. Sherlock Holmes was leaning back in his chair after his whimsical protest and was unfolding his morning paper in a leisurely fashion when my attention was arrested by a tremendous ring at the bell, followed immediately by a hollow drumming sound, as if some one were beating on the outer door with his fist. As it opened there came a tumultuous rush into the hall, rapid feet clattered up the stair and an instant later a wild-eyed and frantic young man, pale, disheveled and palpitating, burst into the room. He looked from one to the other of us, and under our gaze of inquiry he became conscious that some apology was needed for this unceremonious entry.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Holmes," he cried. "You mustn't blame me. I am nearly mad. Mr. Holmes, I am the unhappy John Hector McFarlane."

He made the announcement as if the name alone would explain both his visit and his manner, but I could see by my companion's unresponsive face that it meant no more to him than to me.

"Have a cigarette, Mr. McFarlane," said he, pushing his case across. "I am sure that with your symptoms my friend Dr. Watson here would prescribe a sedative. The weather has been so very warm these last few days. Now, if you feel a little more composed I should be glad if you would sit down in that chair and tell us very slowly and quietly who you are and what it is that you want. You mentioned your name as if I should recognize it, but I assure you that boy—the obvious facts that you are a bachelor, a solicitor, a Freemason and an asthmatic I know nothing whatever about you."

Familiar as I was with my friend's methods, it was not difficult for me to follow his deductions and to observe the untidiness of attire, the sheaf of legal papers, the watch chain and the breathing which had prompted them. Our client, however, stared in amazement.

"Yes, I am all that, Mr. Holmes, and in addition I am the most unfortunate man at this moment in London. For heaven's sake, don't abandon me, Mr. Holmes! If they come to arrest me before I have finished my story make them give me time so that I may tell you the whole truth. I could go to jail happy if I knew that you were working for me outside."

"Arrest you!" said Holmes. "This is really most gratifying—most interesting. On what charge do you expect to be arrested?"

"Upon the charge of murdering Mr. Jonas Oldacre of Lower Norwood."

My companion's expressive face showed a sympathy which was not, I am afraid, entirely unmixed with satisfaction.

"Dear me," said he, "it was only this moment at breakfast that I was saying to my friend Dr. Watson that sensational cases had disappeared out of our papers."

Our visitor stretched forward a quivering hand and picked up the Daily Telegraph, which still lay upon Holmes' knee.

"If you had looked at it, sir, you would have seen at a glance what the errand is on which I have come to you this morning. I feel as if my name and my misfortune must be in every man's mouth." He turned it over to expose the central page. "Here it is, and with your permission I will read it to you. Listen to this, Mr. Holmes. The headlines are: 'Mysterious Affair at Lower Norwood. Disappearance of a Well Known Builder. Suspicion of Murder and Arson. A Clew to the Criminal.' That is the clew which they are already following. Mr. Holmes, and I know that it leads infallibly to me. I have been followed from London Bridge station, and I am sure that they are only waiting for the warrant to arrest me. It will break my mother's heart—it will break her heart!" He wrung his hands in an agony of apprehension and thumped backward and forward in his chair.

I looked with interest upon this man who was accused of being the perpetrator of a crime of violence. He was flaxen haired and handsome, in a washed-out negative fashion, with frightened blue eyes and a clean shaven face, with a weak, sensitive mouth. His age may have been about twenty-seven, his dress and bearing that of a gentleman. From the pocket of his light summer overcoat protruded the bundle of indorsed papers which proclaimed his profession.

"We must use what time we have," said Holmes. "Watson, would you have the kindness to take the paper and to read the paragraph in question?"

Underneath the vigorous headlines which our client had quoted I read the following suggestive narrative:

Late last night or early this morning an incident occurred at Lower Norwood which points, it is feared, to a serious crime. Mr. Jonas Oldacre is a well known resident of that suburb, where he has carried on his business as a builder for many years. Mr. Oldacre is a bachelor, fifty-two years of age, and lives in Deep Dens House at the Sydenham end of the road of that name. He has had the reputation of being a man of eccentric habits, secretive and retiring. For some years he has practically withdrawn from the business in which he is said to have amassed considerable wealth. A small timber yard still exists, however, at the back of the house, and last night, about 12 o'clock, an alarm was given that one of the stacks was on fire. The engine was soon upon the spot, but the dry wood burned with great fury, and it was impossible to arrest the conflagration until the stack had been entirely consumed. Surprised and expressed at the absence of the manager of the establishment from the scene of the fire, and an inquiry followed, which showed that he had disappeared from the house. An examination of his room revealed that the bed had not been slept in, that a safe which stood in it was open, that a number of important papers were there, and that a number of small, dark, and slightly traces of blood being found within the room, and an oaken walking stick, which also showed stains of blood upon the handle. It is known that Mr. Jonas Oldacre had received a late visitor in his bedroom upon that night, and the stick found has been identified as the property of this person, who is a young London solicitor named John Hector McFarlane, junior partner of Graham & McFarlane of 48 Grosvenor buildings, E. C. The police believe that they have evidence in their possession which supplies a very convincing motive for crime, and altogether it cannot be doubted that sensational developments will follow.

Later—it is rumored as we go to press that John Hector McFarlane has actually been arrested on the charge of the murder of Jonas Oldacre. It is at least certain that a warrant has been issued. There have been further and sinister developments in the investigation at Norwood. Besides the signs of a struggle in the room of the unfortunate builder it is now known that the French windows of his bedroom (which is on the ground floor) were found to be open, that there were marks as if some bulky object had been dragged across to the wood pile, and finally it is asserted that charred remains have been found among the charcoal ashes of the fire. The police theory is that a most sensational crime has been committed, that the victim was clubbed to death by his own builder, or by a hired assassin, and his dead body dragged across to the woodstack, which was then ignited, in order to hide all traces of the crime. The conduct of the criminal investigation has been left in the experienced hands of Inspector Lestrade of Scotland Yard, who is following up the clews with his accustomed energy and sagacity.

Sherlock Holmes listened, with closed eyes and finger tips together, to this remarkable account.

"The case has certainly some points of interest," said he in his first place. "May I ask, in the first place, Mr. McFarlane, how it is that you are still at liberty, since there appears to be enough evidence to justify your arrest?"

"I live at Torrington Lodge, Blackheath, with my parents, Mr. Holmes, but last night, having to do business very late with Mr. Jonas Oldacre, I stayed at a hotel in Norwood and came to my business from there. I knew nothing of this affair until I was in the train, when I read what you have just heard. I at once saw the horrible danger of my position, and I hurried to put the case into your hands. I have no doubt that I should have been arrested either at my city office or at my home. A man followed me from London Bridge station, and I have no doubt—Great heaven! what is that?"

It was a clang of the bell, followed instantly by heavy steps upon the stair. A moment later our old friend Lestrade appeared in the doorway. Over his shoulder I caught a glimpse of one or two uniformed policemen outside.

"Mr. John Hector McFarlane?" said Lestrade.

Our unfortunate client rose, with a ghastly face.

"I arrest you for the willful murder of Mr. Jonas Oldacre of Lower Norwood."

McFarlane turned to us with a gesture of despair and sank into his chair once more like one who is crushed.

"One moment, Lestrade," said Holmes. "Half an hour more or less can make no difference to you, and the gentleman was about to give us an account of this very interesting affair which might aid us in clearing it up."

"I think there will be no difficulty in clearing it up," said Lestrade grimly.

"None the less, with your permission, I should be much interested to hear his account."

"Well, Mr. Holmes, it is difficult for me to refuse you anything, for you have been of use to the force once or twice in the past, and we owe you a good turn at Scotland Yard," said Lestrade.

"At the same time I must confess to your prisoner, and I am bound to warn him that anything he may say will appear in evidence against him."

"I wish nothing better," said my client. "All I ask is that you should hear and recognize the absolute truth."

Lestrade looked at his watch. "I'll give you half an hour," said he.

"I must explain first," said McFarlane, "that I knew nothing of Mr. Jonas Oldacre. His name was familiar to me, for many years ago my parents were acquainted with him, but they drifted apart. I was very much surprised, therefore, when yesterday about 3 o'clock in the afternoon he walked into my office in the city. But I was still more astonished when he told me the object of his visit. He had in his hand several sheets of a notebook covered with scribbled writing—here they are—and he laid them on my table."

"Here is my will," said he. "I want you, Mr. McFarlane, to cast it into proper legal shape. I will sit here while you do so."

"I set myself to copy it, and you can imagine my astonishment when I found that, with some reservations, he had left all his property to me. He was a strange little ferretlike man, with white eyelashes, and when I looked up the state of things which he had himself done so much to produce.

At the time of which I speak, Holmes had been back for some months, and I at his request had sold my practice and returned to share the old quarters in Baker street. As it opened there came a tumultuous rush into the hall, rapid feet clattered up the stair and an instant later a wild-eyed and frantic young man, pale, disheveled and palpitating, burst into the room. He looked from one to the other of us, and under our gaze of inquiry he became conscious that some apology was needed for this unceremonious entry.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Holmes," he cried. "You mustn't blame me. I am nearly mad. Mr. Holmes, I am the unhappy John Hector McFarlane."

He made the announcement as if the name alone would explain both his visit and his manner, but I could see by my companion's unresponsive face that it meant no more to him than to me.

"Have a cigarette, Mr. McFarlane," said he, pushing his case across. "I am sure that with your symptoms my friend Dr. Watson here would prescribe a sedative. The weather has been so very warm these last few days. Now, if you feel a little more composed I should be glad if you would sit down in that chair and tell us very slowly and quietly who you are and what it is that you want. You mentioned your name as if I should recognize it, but I assure you that boy—the obvious facts that you are a bachelor, a solicitor, a Freemason and an asthmatic I know nothing whatever about you."

Familiar as I was with my friend's methods, it was not difficult for me to follow his deductions and to observe the untidiness of attire, the sheaf of legal papers, the watch chain and the breathing which had prompted them. Our client, however, stared in amazement.

"Yes, I am all that, Mr. Holmes, and in addition I am the most unfortunate man at this moment in London. For heaven's sake, don't abandon me, Mr. Holmes! If they come to arrest me before I have finished my story make them give me time so that I may tell you the whole truth. I could go to jail happy if I knew that you were working for me outside."

"Arrest you!" said Holmes. "This is really most gratifying—most interesting. On what charge do you expect to be arrested?"

"Upon the charge of murdering Mr. Jonas Oldacre of Lower Norwood."

My companion's expressive face showed a sympathy which was not, I am afraid, entirely unmixed with satisfaction.

"Dear me," said he, "it was only this moment at breakfast that I was saying to my friend Dr. Watson that sensational cases had disappeared out of our papers."

Our visitor stretched forward a quivering hand and picked up the Daily Telegraph, which still lay upon Holmes' knee.

"If you had looked at it, sir, you would have seen at a glance what the errand is on which I have come to you this morning. I feel as if my name and my misfortune must be in every man's mouth." He turned it over to expose the central page. "Here it is, and with your permission I will read it to you. Listen to this, Mr. Holmes. The headlines are: 'Mysterious Affair at Lower Norwood. Disappearance of a Well Known Builder. Suspicion of Murder and Arson. A Clew to the Criminal.' That is the clew which they are already following. Mr. Holmes, and I know that it leads infallibly to me. I have been followed from London Bridge station, and I am sure that they are only waiting for the warrant to arrest me. It will break my mother's heart—it will break her heart!" He wrung his hands in an agony of apprehension and thumped backward and forward in his chair.

I looked with interest upon this man who was accused of being the perpetrator of a crime of violence. He was flaxen haired and handsome, in a washed-out negative fashion, with frightened blue eyes and a clean shaven face, with a weak, sensitive mouth. His age may have been about twenty-seven, his dress and bearing that of a gentleman. From the pocket of his light summer overcoat protruded the bundle of indorsed papers which proclaimed his profession.

"We must use what time we have," said Holmes. "Watson, would you have the kindness to take the paper and to read the paragraph in question?"

Underneath the vigorous headlines which our client had quoted I read the following suggestive narrative:

Late last night or early this morning an incident occurred at Lower Norwood which points, it is feared, to a serious crime. Mr. Jonas Oldacre is a well known resident of that suburb, where he has carried on his business as a builder for many years. Mr. Oldacre is a bachelor, fifty-two years of age, and lives in Deep Dens House at the Sydenham end of the road of that name. He has had the reputation of being a man of eccentric habits, secretive and retiring. For some years he has practically withdrawn from the business in which he is said to have amassed considerable wealth. A small timber yard still exists, however, at the back of the house, and last night, about 12 o'clock, an alarm was given that one of the stacks was on fire. The engine was soon upon the spot, but the dry wood burned with great fury, and it was impossible to arrest the conflagration until the stack had been entirely consumed. Surprised and expressed at the absence of the manager of the establishment from the scene of the fire, and an inquiry followed, which showed that he had disappeared from the house. An examination of his room revealed that the bed had not been slept in, that a safe which stood in it was open, that a number of important papers were there, and that a number of small, dark, and slightly traces of blood being found within the room, and an oaken walking stick, which also showed stains of blood upon the handle. It is known that Mr. Jonas Oldacre had received a late visitor in his bedroom upon that night, and the stick found has been identified as the property of this person, who is a young London solicitor named John Hector McFarlane, junior partner of Graham & McFarlane of 48 Grosvenor buildings, E. C. The police believe that they have evidence in their possession which supplies a very convincing motive for crime, and altogether it cannot be doubted that sensational developments will follow.

Later—it is rumored as we go to press that John Hector McFarlane has actually been arrested on the charge of the murder of Jonas Oldacre. It is at least certain that a warrant has been issued. There have been further and sinister developments in the investigation at Norwood. Besides the signs of a struggle in the room of the unfortunate builder it is now known that the French windows of his bedroom (which is on the ground floor) were found to be open, that there were marks as if some bulky object had been dragged across to the wood pile, and finally it is asserted that charred remains have been found among the charcoal ashes of the fire. The police theory is that a most sensational crime has been committed, that the victim was clubbed to death by his own builder, or by a hired assassin, and his dead body dragged across to the woodstack, which was then ignited, in order to hide all traces of the crime. The conduct of the criminal investigation has been left in the experienced hands of Inspector Lestrade of Scotland Yard, who is following up the clews with his accustomed energy and sagacity.

Sherlock Holmes listened, with closed eyes and finger tips together, to this remarkable account.

"The case has certainly some points of interest," said he in his first place. "May I ask, in the first place, Mr. McFarlane, how it is that you are still at liberty, since there appears to be enough evidence to justify your arrest?"

"I live at Torrington Lodge, Blackheath, with my parents, Mr. Holmes, but last night, having to do business very late with Mr. Jonas Oldacre, I stayed at a hotel in Norwood and came to my business from there. I knew nothing of this affair until I was in the train, when I read what you have just heard. I at once saw the horrible danger of my position, and I hurried to put the case into your hands. I have no doubt that I should have been arrested either at my city office or at my home. A man followed me from London Bridge station, and I have no doubt—Great heaven! what is that?"

It was a clang of the bell, followed instantly by heavy steps upon the stair. A moment later our old friend Lestrade appeared in the doorway. Over his shoulder I caught a glimpse of one or two uniformed policemen outside.

"Mr. John Hector McFarlane?" said Lestrade.

Our unfortunate client rose, with a ghastly face.

"I arrest you for the willful murder of Mr. Jonas Oldacre of Lower Norwood."

McFarlane turned to us with a gesture of despair and sank into his chair once more like one who is crushed.

"One moment, Lestrade," said Holmes. "Half an hour more or less can make no difference to you, and the gentleman was about to give us an account of this very interesting affair which might aid us in clearing it up."

"I think there will be no difficulty in clearing it up," said Lestrade grimly.

Burnt Church, N. B., July 4th, 1905.

TO THE EDITOR ADVOCATE, NEWCASTLE, N. B.

DEAR EDITOR:—We were visited yesterday by the interesting citizens of Chatham and Newcastle who enjoyed themselves most pleasantly on the beautiful shore here at Burnt Church and we were glad to see them in their good behaviour. After the Stm. Alexander left Burnt Church and all our decent friends were aboard on their returning home we were again on the same evening visited by a crowd of two teams of rascally individuals from Bartibogue. As they came to the St. Ann's church they attempted to open the front door which was bolted from inside and they were bold enough to kick the door with all their might till they succeeded to kick the door open and they went in. Rev. Father Robichaud's housekeeper is the person that saw the foolish conduct of these young rascals who were recognized as Michael Fox and Martin Connell accompanied by five young ladies. If these young men do not come to apologize most likely they will be prosecuted.

Yours Faithfully,
MITCHELL DOMINICK.

The "North Sydney Herald"

one of the most influential papers in Nova Scotia, recently published an interview with a Sydney Mines merchant in which it was stated that the sale of Manitoba hard wheat flour, the ROYAL HOUSEHOLD kind, was now equal to 90 per cent. of the entire flour trade in that district.
