Iwo Big Helps for the GOOD

Why She Prefers Blue Ribbon Baking Powder

1st. Because every spoonful in every can is of exactly the same Strength and Quality. There is no guessing—no allowances to be made—not the slightest chance of the cake being spoiled by variations in the baking powder. She can rely on it with perfect confidence.

2nd. Because it produces Pure and Wholesome Food, containing no harmful residue of any kind whatever.

3rd. Because a little less is required of Blue Ribbon than of other kinds, on account of its greater "Rising Strength."

Why Blue Ribbon has these qualities more than other powders

Because Blue Ribbon Baking Powder is manufactured with special care from the very highest grade of pure ingredients.

Such ingredients cost more, of course, but they are worth it, because they are free from all impurities. These impurities in low grade ingredients are apt to set up chemical reaction, cause variations in quality, reduce the strength of the baking powder and even injure the quality of the food.

And every ingredient used in manufacturing Blue Ribbon Baking Powder is thoroughly tested, and if the least below our high standard is rejected.

All this means extra cost to us, but the price to you is the same as that of ordinary kinds; 25c. a pound.

Young cooks will be saved much worry, disappointment and loss of time and good materials if they use Blue Ribbon Baking Powder right from the start.

She likes the Blue

Because it is so practical and up-to-date, so econo mical in use of ingredients, and so conveniently arranged. -

SPIRIT OF THE EASTER LILIES.

By ELLEN FRIZWELL WYCKOFF.

went on the low monotone that comes by right of divine mercy to persons that are much alone, "was the len went down. It was a long way down, for Miss Allen's room was just under the sloping roof. She had begun on the second floor, ten years ago, but she had gone upward, flight after flight, till at length she had reached the cheapest chamber under the roof. For her voice had failed ten years ago and she had come off of the stage, bringing her stage name with her. Part of it had always been her own and she clung to the quaint sweetness of it, lovingly.

Her money had given out soon after the beginning, and she had found work. All day long, year after year, she sat in a dingy little window in a great clothing house and worked buttonholes in the finer garments. But there had been more than one siege of illness, and there had been trouble with her eyes. So the buttonholes were fewer and the weekly check smaller and smaller.

that the new preacher had come to the church across the street. When Miss Allen had lived on the second floor she used to go over to church. on Sunday mornings. But as her eyes grew worse and her check grew smaller and her rooms were nearer and nearer to the clouds, she had remained at home trying to be content with such scraps of the music as drifted her way. So she was not interested in the coming of the new minister.

"I think you'll all like him", Mrs.
Grimley had said, smiling at the two rows of boarders. "He's a fine man, fresh from the country. I should be awful glad if you'd go over and hear him," and she looked at them pleadingly over the top of her big pewter coffee urn.

Miss Allen had felt no interest in the new preacher, but one day when she was at home resting her eyes, there was a death in the house, and Mrs. Grimly, loud-voiced in her aggressive sympathy, had passed Miss Allen's door with the new preacher in her wake. Miss Allen had heard them coming, the loud grief of the landlady, and the flapping of her slippers on the bare floor, and beyond

It was at the beginning of the year | these a firm footfall with a ring in it that caused the little woman to slip the bandage from her eyes and look up. The two were quickly past, but Miss Allen had fallen back in her chair, white-faced and trembling, and presently she crept off to bed to cower under the bedclothing, weeping and Sunday I sang the new anthem in the little white church at home—that last Sunday!" she was silent now, and a far-away look had come into the soft brown eyes.

And then, somehow, the elegant church across from her window faded away and the street changed to a green meadow, and beyond that was a hill with a little white church perched upon its rugged shoulder, and a fringe of live oaks and magnolias all around it. A wee brown cottage nestled like a bird among the green. And there were tears, now, is Miss Barbara Allen's pretty brown eyes, and when she blinked them bravely away, the meadow and the hill and the church and cottage went with them, and the elegant church with the busy street before it was in its accustomed place. Men were carrying in the pots of tall, snow-white Easter lilies, and groups of smiling busy women were making the church ready for Easter

On Sundays she had peeped out from a slit in the curtain that hung before the dormer window, and when she saw the tall figure of the minister at the corner of the street her face always whitened and she watched him with frightened, fascinated eyes as he walked down to the church. Sometimes she had seen him take off his hat, and she strained her eyes to catch the smile on his face and the glint of the sunlight on the threads of silver in his thick, dark hair.

The new minister had early won his way to Mrs. Grimley's heart, and his sayings and doings furnished her much food for conversation. She had been to his home, and one day she rounded it all up by declaring Mrs. Howell to be the sweetest and most.

lovable woman in all the length and breadth of the city. That was the day that Miss Allen had fainted at the table. Two of the gentlemen had carried her up to her room.

When Miss Allen was well again

she had watched as usual, but the minister was always alone. Sometimes she put on a veil and walked up and down the street upon which she knew he lived. She longed to know which house was his, but the courage to enquire was beyond her. The houses were set back in little gardens. She saw pretty smiling women and nursemaids with laughing children, and flowers and glimpses of happy homes. And after these walks her eyes were worse, and for all her going up to the cheapest room, she was no nearer out of the landlady's debt, and no nearer to the going away that she longed for.

So now the evening before Easter had come, and her check was pitifully small. When the bell rang she carried the slip of paper down and held it out tremblingly to Mrs. Grimly, before the others came in.

"You don't seem to be catching up any, do you, Miss Allen? Everything is awfully high now, and if you can find a cheaper place, I don't know but you'd better take it. I'd be willing to take what you owe me a little at a time. I can get more for that nice little south room than you are paying me," Mrs. Grimley said.

Miss Allen had expected it. She had tried to be prepared for it, but her knees weakened and she became faint and sick. The others came in and she dropped into her place and tried to

The sound of the voices about her was as meaningless as the roar of the wind outside. She longed to be near the lillies in the church. She might have them now, all to herself. Tomorrow would be too late. She dared not wait. The sound of the preacher's voice might be too much for her. She must see the lilies now.

She hurried away unnoticed. The church door was open. The sexton was clearing away the litter of preparation. Like a whisp of shadow blown by the wind, Miss Allen crossed the street, and slipped into the great, solemn, silent church.

Her eyes filled with tears as she stood before the pulpit. The sexton was busy in the vestibule, and she crept to the altar and, hidden by the bank of tall lilies, pressed her lips to the floor. "Larry, if I hadn't, if only I hadn't come away," she whispered. She knelt, small and humble, behind

The scent of the lillies came to her sweetness. Almost she heard the drip of the May-time lain on the low roof of the little brown house under the hill. She crept close to the lilies and lifted her hands up to them and pressed them against her hot cheeks. She kissed the shin-ing petals, and her tears, like the drops of dew, glistened on them. Then she closed her eyes and crouched low, for the sexton was coming inside. When she heard a door close, she ventured to look up. The church was quiet and the lights were out! A street light blazing against the beautiful windows shot their colors across the darkness.

With a cry of gladness Miss Allen sprang up. She might have the place to herself for a little while. She rested her head upon the open Bible and stained the pages with her hot tears. But after a short, fierce storm a calm came upon her. She knelt with clasped hands and uplifted face in the silent, holy place, and her low voice rose with the perfume of the lilies before the altar.

"He shall never know, Dear Lord. Only help me to hide away, only put me where I can do him no harm: for I am weak and I love him. Burv me away from his finding and let me be content with a life from which my own hand has shut all happiness. A life that is all but an unhidden death."

A new strength was upon her when she rose from her knees and stood she rose from her knees and stood again among the lilies. It was the plied.

"Now, are they perfect from every with firm, quick step she walked down | point of view?" to the door. With her hand on the unyielding door-knob she trembled, dismayed. But there were other doors, and one by one she tried them all. They were locked and she was shut in. But the windows. She might find escape through one of these.

The windows were heavy, but she moved one a little way, straining every muscle in her frail body. there was a hot flash of pain, a dull, sickening sound and darkness stifling and noiseless.

And then-was it the wind in the southern pines? Was it the ripple of the river on its way through the meadow? And then she remembered. It was the splendid music of the church organ. The pain throbbed through her again and she knew that her arm had been caught under the falling window. She was a prisoner and there were people in the organ loft. Oh, to get away, to die, to remain unseen!

They were practising the Easter | the little brown cottage and was Lar-

And the pretty woman in the trailing blue velvet gown stopped suddenly before the shrinking figure under the window. "Mr. Howell," she called softly, "come here quickly!"

Together they looked down at the pleading, terror-stricken face. The minister pushed the window up and gathered the unconscious form in his strong arms.

The Easter sun was shining when she opened her eyes, but it was not through the dormer window that it came to her. There were lilies in its pathway and their fragrance came with the sunshine. And then she saw a broad east window with a row of lilies on the deep sill. And there were faces, and one of them was his. All the others vanished with the wide opening of her eyes, but his was close to her, and his arms were about her.

"Barbara, little woman, are you awake now?" Had she but dreamed it all? Was this her own chamber in The throat trouble came and I didn't go with the Company. I have been working. When you came I tried to get away, but---'

"It's all right now, little woman. The poor little arm will soon be well." He touched the bandages tenderly, and there were tears in his clear blue eyes. "It's so good to have you back, Barbara."

Barbara leaned back into the strong arms with a contented little sigh. It was good to be sheltered after the storm and stress of all the weary months that had passed. Surely life was worth living after all, and a vague sense of joy began to enter her heart. It soon fled, however, when she began to realize all that had transpired in the months since they had been

"But, Larry, darling, don't you understand? There is your—there is—Mrs. Howell!" Her eyes were full of horror.

"Mother? Why, surely you don't mind mother, Barbara. You used to love her dearly. And she has been everything to me since-since they took you away. She sold the valley farm and we went away. I tried to forget you, but I was always looking for you. I read and studied, and at length mother thought of college. So I went and she kept house for me. Tell me, dear, that you don't mind having

And then a sweet, rosy, wrinkled face bent over her and Barbara lifted her well hand and drew the face down to her lips. "Why, Barbie, little girl, how glad I am to have you back again." And tears ran like little rivers down the wrinkled cheeks.
"Can you forgive me? Can you forget that I was wicked and foolish and vain?" came sobbingly up from

"Barbie," and the sweet old voice broke a little, "I've been thinking it out. Now you listen, little girl. It was an awful thing when they persecuted and crucified the blessed Lord. When they had buried Him, it seemed that there could never be any more joy or gladness or love in the world. but out of it we have our risen Redeemer.

"And so, Barbie, when the theatre cople I took to board that summer. found your voice and tempted you away, when love and marriage seemed small and of poor account when you thought of the world and its applause, oh, then, girlie, everything looked dark for my boy and me. But out of the disgrace and sorrow and disappointment Larry has come up to be what he is, what he never could have been if peace had not gone with you from the little brown cottage. For we were all content. You went the wrong way, Barbie, but God brings good out of evil and life out of the grave."

Barbara laid her cheek against the wrinkled one and smiled her gratitude. Tears were too near the surface to trust herself to talk too much; then, too, the tumultuous thoughts rushed through her brain so rapidly, it was hard to know where to begin.

The perfume of the Easter lily filled the little room like incense on an Altar. The spirit of the day was upon the three and they sat silently with clasped hands until the chime of the Easter bells rang out clear and sweet.

"I must go now to preach mother's sermon to my people," the minister said, stooping to kiss Barbara's tear-stained face. "I won't stay, little wife."

The gentle old woman stood up and looked from one to the other. "Ive been thinking it out," she said softly. "The world out there in the sunshine. and it is a bit cruel, as both of you know. When you come back, Larry, bring good old Doctor Osborn with you, and we'll have a renewing of vows, not because the old ones are not good enugh for us, but for the sake of the people who ask questions that must be answered."

"She is right," Barbara said. "Oh, Larry, I'm so glad to be back with you, and it was the spirit of the Easter lilies that brought me!"

music. There were many lights, and | they shone upon the tall lilies and upon the white face under the window. Floating down through the sweet stillness came the beautiful anthem of the Lord: "Consider the lilies how they grow! They toil not neither do "Consider the lilies how they spin. Yet Solomon, in all his glory, not arrayed like one of these."

And then she heard someone talkig softly coming down the aisle. And she saw the minster, tall and grave, and beside him a yellow-haired woman in a trailing blue velvet gown. Her face was fair as one of the lilies and her grace as rare and stately.

"I am not altogether pleased with the arrangement of the last lilies. I wanted you to come and look at them!" and she smiled up into the minister's face.

"They seem very beautiful to me. Let as change them if another arry calling her in the old way to get his early breakfast? The light caught at the silver in his hair, and she knew. But her lips were dumb, and he looked down pitifully at the agony in her "Arent' you glad to see me, Barbara? Is it—is it so bad as that?" He stood up, dismayed before her.

"Larry!" She caught his hand I've been so wretched. I've watched you from my window. I was going to hide somewhere. Don't think that I meant to spoil your life again. I just went there to see the lilies. They are like the ones you planted in our

"Yes. I dont' blame you, Larry.

From My Rosary of Easters-A Real Reminiscence.

By CLARA MORRIS.

Easter! What joy and triumph in the almost the listeners expect to see above liencing the rough comfort of a clay-ound! If one wished to express Easter them "the Spirit like a dove," as at Jor-chinked log house, where cooking was her power and proceeded further to sound! If one wished to express Easter in one single word, I think renewal would be that word. The renewal of Nature's life in swift-rising sap and upspringing of grasses, the renewal of health and strength and joyfully quickened pulses in our own bodies, and, above all, the renewal of spiritual hope and faith in every tried soul. Easter is renewal—renewal is joy!

Long before the coming of our Master the power of this April time was felt and responded to by humanity, and was made a time of splendid festival in honor of the goddess of Love-Eoester. But after the blessed Lord's short and wondrous earthly life had been closed and followed by His glorious resurrection and ascension, the ecclesiastics applied the name to their great Christian festival, held to commemorate the blessed resurrection. So Easter has become to us not only an expression of physical joy in natural beauty, but is enriched with a spiritual meaning and value absolutely immeasurable.

But oh, the churches! The piled-up splendor, the glory of color, the ocean of perfume, the solemn thunder of organ, the high-piercing sweetness of young voices crying, "Holy! Holy!" voices crying, "Holy! Holy! Holy!". The still white flame of lilies, the blushing azaleas' fleece of blossoms, the living trumpets of the crowding golden daffodils, the rustling like a wind when the great throng kneels, and the sea-like murmur of human voices repeating that most perfect, most touching prayer known, "Our Father—" A mysterious exaltation thrills all hearts, and as some exaltation thrills all hearts, and as some voice mounts above the organ's roll, pure, clear, higher and even higher, great throng kneels, and the sea-like dan. Oh, Easter, even if you fall in March, under the gray sky, the bellowing winds are the trumpeters of glorious tidings, and the whole earth tinkles with the silvery music of myriad streams, and rills and threads of running water, the very first thing spring frees from wintry death-ever triumphant and joyous spirit are you!

In reviewing my rosary of Easters, I came upon one so oddly different from the rest, so grottique, so pathetic, yet so tremendously satisfying, that I venture to share its memory with you to whom am speaking. A little girl, quite a little girl, since she awaited anxiously her eighth birthday, was by way of being intensely and most sincerely religious. She was not a happy little girl, being very poor and the adviser of her mother in matters that should have been Greek to her for years to come. So it happened that all her joy came from her worshipping love of the gentle Jesus, who was always tender to little children. The Sunday-school habit was so strong upon her that through summer's heat and winter's cold she attended faithfully a Methodist school in the morning and a far-off Presbyterian school in the afternoon, with a full service and sermon in between; and to show how deeply her feelings were engaged, she always read of the Crucifixion on her small knees, in all the starchy misery of stiff done at the open fire; where the spinning-wheel whirred at one end of the room, and a loom bulked big out on the rough porch. Where each day was a long procession of wondrous discoveries, though the joy of them was stabbed often by the pain of contemptuous ridicule from a band of cousins, barefooted, loose-maned, who jeered at her ignorance of farm and forest.

But fancy what the blow was to the religious little maid when she learned there was no church to go to. Her old, old grandmother explained, while she dried the child's tears, how far away was the very nearest church; how only now and then a devoted man of God, riding circuit across prairie, through woods and up and down streams, came to this place, and according to the weather, held service at the log-cabin schoolhouse or at some nearer farmhouse; where he would pray and preach, and do up all the marryings, and maybe go to some grave and make a prayer over the one who had been laid there in silence without religious funeral service.

From that time on the stricken little maid used to study her verses as usual, and content herself by reciting them to her mother. Then stealing out behind the big barn, sing a hymn, say a prayer, sing another hymn, and with bowed head dismiss herself, and go back to the house work her imagination, and made plays out of nearly every story told.

Well, things went well with Carrie until the approach of that churchless Easter Sunday. A sort of fever came upon the child. She fell asleep with tear-fringed lashes, she watched the rising sun with a great large child. ing sun with a great lump climbing high in her throat. She talked and talked of the glory and wonder of Easter and the shame and sorrow of doing nothing, nothing at all in memory of our Saviour's joyful rising from the grave. And the boys began to look gloomy, and say, "Gol durn, it is too bad!" And they even asked about going to that far-off village church. But Dad said, "It would take the whole day goin' and comin', and the horses wouldn't be fit for plowin' next mornin'."

Hearing that, Carrie fairly broke down and cried. Then with a pointed stick she drew on the dry road a ground plan of a church, showing where the pulpit stood, and the communion rail, and the three aisles, and made a round ring where the baptismal font went. And Aleck broke in with the suggestion:

"Why can't we have a church our own selves?

"Oh, oh!" Millie exclaimed. "How awful! We'd be punished for playing church. It would be wicked!"

But Carrie was flushed and a-quiver

EASTER MORN.

Seek ye the Lord?" the angel said— The Lord ye thought as with the dead;— He here was laid, But he has made The tomb a glory-place instead!

"He is not here; thrice-victor he; His bonds are burst, and he is free; The Lord he lives. And comfort gives To those who wait in Galilee!"

Seek we the Lord and we shall find A guardian blest, a Master kind, Whose words, as balm, Will soothe and calm The weary heart and anxious mind!

AN EASTER HYMN.

BY THE RT. REV. J. L. SPALDING, D.D.

HAIL Easter Morn, hail new-born Life, Forth rising from the grave! The Lord hath conquered in the strife, Who died from death to save.

Let the heavens weep for joy, and earth In fragrant flowers bloom, While we acclaim the glorious birth Cf life from out the tomb.

Let children's happy voices ring In thankfulness and praise; Let virgins whitest blossoms bring And dew-besprinkled sprays.

Halleluia, halleluia still, Till echo speak the song And every heart with gladness thrill, And every soul be strong.

Where now, O Grave, thy victory? Where now Death's cruel sway? The Spell is broken, we are free, And bright is all our way.

To Thee sweet Jesus, thanks be given; To Thee our all we owe-The joy of earth and hope of heaven, And faith which conquers woe.

AN EASTER PRAYER

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE.

Thou who art the conqueror of death, Thou who hast broken thro' the gates of night, Roll from my sepulchre of grief the stone, And Lead me to the light!

O Thou who art the risen Lord to-day, The victor over darkness, grief and sin, Uudo the seals of sorrow from my tomb, And let the daylight in!

O Thou, the risen Christ, bid me arise And Leave the death-like robes that I have worn.

Roll back the stone, that I may see, dear Lord, The perfect Easter morn!

THE EASTER LILY.—By Minna Irving.

Γ is only an Easter I ly, brittle and blackened now, But once as white as a snowdrift, and pure as an angel's brow.

It is kept on a crimson cushion, with a yellow letter or two, A button bearing an eagle, and a scrap of army blue, She was a Southern maiden, slender and sweet and shy, He was a youth from New Hampshire with a clear and fearless eye.

Their love was newly plighted when the drums began to play, And he left her hastening Northward, to muster against

After the war was over, still in his blue and gold, The captain rode to his sweetheart, but found her changed and cold.

'Here is your ring of rubies, take it;" she said, "and go! am Virginia's daughter, you are Virginia's foe!' Slowly the years rolled onward, lonely and full of care, Stealing away her roses, silvering o'er her hair. Sometimes she read his letters while all the household slept, Oft in the dreary midnight she called his name and wept.
When from the chains of Winter the blossoms found release.

She mailed him an Easter lily, a fragrant token of peace,

Culled from the chapel altar, in tissue and cotton sent, Fresh and fair to her lover, far in the North it went. Under her cottage window the tulip broke in flame. name and—and perhaps He will be there. Anyway, He won't be angry to us for praying and singing to Him on Easter

There was a thrilling silence. Then the girl of ten said, "Let's do it! Shall our church be in the barn?"

"Oh, no, no!" objected Carrie. "Let's make a church in some deep place in the woods!" And with eager faces they made a rush through the orchard and across a field to reach the privacy and beauty of the virgin forest.

The spring was/well forward, and Easter Sunday fell in the second week of April. Tree-buds were swelling against the pale blueness of the sky. With a cry of joy, Carrie pointed to the pussy-willows, "See, there are our flowers for the altar!"

And in a mighty tangle of wild grapevine, that fell like a lovely curtain from tree to earth, was selected the site for the church. Six rails, laboriously carried from a distant fence, were upreared, three at a side, their top ends meeting, and within that space four legs supported a starch-box pulpit, which Millie was to furnish with a "fair white cloth" and Carrie's own little Bible. The work was hard and at intervals they rested and earnestly discussed and elaborated their plans. Then arose the question of creed. "What is this church?" asked Aleck. "Dad used to be a Baptist once, and Mom and Gran are Methodists."

"Oh, we don't need any name," largely answered Carrie. "It's just the same God always, in all the churches. Ours will be just the Lord's Church."

They were all so curiously serious over their talk that never once did they break into romp or rough squabbling. The sun was low when they stood admiring the great triumph of their day. To finish their structure two small saplings growing close together in a direct line with the pulpit, by a united effort, were drawn down and their tops tied together, and when released they sprang up again and formed an arch that at once became the door through which they would enter their church on Sunday morning. Then binding themselves to secrecy, they wearily went home, where they could scarcely eat their supper, so nervously exalted were they, so enlarged by the mystery and secrecy beloved of small people.

Next day, Saturday, the sun shone after a shower with June force, but all remained at home lest curiosity should be directed toward that for-true church in the woods. They met in the hay-loft, and Carrie commenced to arrange her rubric for Sunday's service on the back of an envelope. The oldest boy was offered the position of preacher, but blushed red behind his freckles in "lowing he would help with the hymns and the amens, but he didn't know nothin' bout preachin'." Every one else about Every one else shirked duty in like manner, and finally the whole responsibility was thrust upon Carrie; and she too reddened with confusion. Her service called for a prayer, then a hymn, after a reading from the Bible. Then a sermon, another hymn and prayer, and then dismissal. But she couldn't preach the sermon. For a moment the whole Easter scheme seemed tottering to its fall. The crooked elbow was already on its upward way to hide her tears, when memory came to her of a Quaker service she had attended; sitting amazedly through the long waits for the spirit-moved speech of some member. With radiant eyes, she announced:

"We will be just Quakers at the sermon-place, and then do all the rest the way we have it here.

Easter Sunday dawned with a soft and balmy air and a radiance of sunlight that made small Carrie's heart swell with rapture. There were many secret nods and signs exchanged between the small fry, and while Carrie repeated her verses and Millie's mane was plaited, Will was sent to gather catkins to decorate the pulpit.

He was also entrusted with the fair fell into line, walking sedately—Carrie and little Tom, Millie and Aleck, and Will behind. Chipmunks flashed and zig-zagged over the ground; squirrels skipt from branch to branch, and from deep in the woods came the strong drumming of the woodpeckers; while now and then small nuthatches corkscrewed their way about the great tree

But the small congregation moved steadily on without comment, and came at last fair upon the arched entrance to their temple. They looked within, and then looked at one another—then within again, and gasped. For the floor space, that they had laboriously cleaned of ruck, was now a restless, waving sea of violet-pink wind-flowers. It was as if God had breathed upon the spot, Carrie's heart swelled high.

"Oh," she cried, "no other church has such flowers as these that theirselves have bloomed for Easter!" And very carefully they entered through the arch, and picked their way over the sheet of blossoms that spread to the very pulpit's edge only to find glorious as a temple veil the fall of grape-vines, covered with the pink-gray velvet of half-opened leaves.

Carrie went to the pulpit, while the congregation sat down flat. After the first prayer, the hymn was given out, "On Jordan's stormy bank" rose on high, clear, childish voices. Then Carrie opened her small Bible and read some verses from the Sermon on the Mount. Then she closed the book and stated seriously, "Now we will be Quakers for a while and see if the spirit moves us to speech," and left the pulpit and seated herself with the congregation. A perfect silence is a thing unnatural and uncanny to a child. These young creatures had their nerves tuned up to a high pitch; their imaginations were warmed and ready for action. Sitting with closed eyes and with inheld breath, a thousand cracklings and small rustlings seemed to assail their ears as never before. Then something strange happened-from far it came, a slow deep sigh from the whole waiting wood. Then they felt an air pass above them; soft, warm, out from the East it came. They left some living presence was there. The color faded from their tanned cheeks; they tumbled to their knees and clung tight, each to the other, before this the miracle vouchsafed to them. Carrie in an agony of joy and terror cried, "Dear Savior, we are only little children; please don't frighten us, because we love you so!" Then ventured to open her eyes, and saw like a sign a bolt of living blue sweep downward on strong wing from the swaying grape curtain, and springing to her feet, with a very rapture, she cried, "He is not angry to us. We are not good enough for a dove to be sent, but He sends a bluebird! Now let us give thanks, and then we will be dismissed." Down they dropped again, and with juivering voices said aloud the prayer that is suitable alike for infancy or old age. Then in one line, holding hands, they marched out of the solemn wood, and not one of that small group doubted the Presence at that grotesque but honest service of love and prayer and praise.

Carrie yet holds that Easter Sunday as one of the most spiritually satisfactory of the many she has known. I speak positively—yes, for I am justified, as you will see if you take from the corner shelf that small Bible, and look at the fly-leaf-for there you will find written in clerkly hand:

"This book was won at the First Presyterian Sunday-School by Clara Morris, for the recitation of the greatest number of verses from the Bible." And to this very day, Christian as I hope I am, I still have a secret faith in the old pagan tradition, that the sun dances upon Easter morning.

He was also entrusted with the fair white cloth and the Bible, and was carefully instructed not to enter the church by the front way, but to creep in behind the pulpit, prepare it, and then back out and meet the congregation.

This plan was carried out to the letter. They crossed the field in open order; but in the wood, with serious faces, they

There, over across on the "Bridge" road, was the old Torrey homestead, looking set fire to the woodwork inside," exactly as it had always looked. Mrs. Torrey went on. "At any rate, Farther on were the Gilsons' roofs, then the Witherells' chimneys, and away beyond the unpainted corner of something that must be the little new chapel his mother had written about. On the nearer side was the Harwood place, and, nearer yet, the Caswells' barn, which, from this point, he remembered, shut off the view of the house.

Miles continued on his way with a feeling of lively satisfaction in finding so few changes after his five years' absence, so when he had turned the corner and come to where the Caswells' house ought to be and there beheld only its blackened timbers lying on the ground, he was a good deal shocked.

"When and how did it happen?" he asked his mother, after he had enjoyed to the full her astonishment

"Aunt Mary and Uncle Nathan all over!" exclaimed Miles. "I guess there was never anybody in trouble anywhere around that they didn't

"They think the chimney must have been burning out and somehow nobody saw the smoke in time to save anything, and everything was flat when they came back."

"Too bad, too bad!" said Miles.
"I suppose they went to live with the boys?"

"Yes, though I couldn't make out from their letter which one they're with. Neither Mary nor Nathan were ever much for writing."

After talking for awhile on matters that concerned themselves more nearly, Miles spoke again of the Caswells. "I don't like to think of that gap in the landscape," he said.

"I never look over that way, if I can help it," his mother confessed. "I've somehow always thought of that house and this as twins; you know your grandfather and Nathan's father had them built the same year, according to the same plan, and they at seeing him, and each had inquired after the other's health.

"It was three months ago, in September, just after that last letter I side of the road. But, dear me! I side of

"Perhaps they'll build again."

"Oh, they can't. They were too good-hearted ever to save much, and there was no insurance."
"It isn't likely that Ed nor Gib can help them any," Miles reflected.

"They're two as good fellows as ever lived; but they were never money-makers. I would have stopped to see them as I came through the city, if I hadn't been in such a hurry to get home. But I'm going again soon, to talk with an architect.'
"An architect?" Mrs. Torrey's face flushed. She had always wanted a new house—one in which the south side was not wholly taken up with entries and stairways and closets—a house with a bathroom and a furnace and bay windows, and possibly a little conservatory. Was her wish to come true? or was Miles thinking of getting married?

"Yes, Mother, I've made my pile worry about your not being able to afford a house.'

"I guess not, either," he agreed.
"I'm going to start on the building of it just as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring."

"Where are you going to have it?"
"Where the house is now is the sightliest spot on the farm, isn't it?"
"Yes, I think so. What will you do with this house?"
"Tear it down, I suppose," he answered slowly, "though I kind of hate to."

"I shouldn't quite like that either," Mrs. Torrey said, "even though I never liked the house."

"We might move it off some-where," Miles suggested. "That would be better, I think," she agreed. They were both silent for several moments, then Mrs. Torrey cried out suddenly. "Oh, Miles! Why couldn't out there, and you're going to have your house."

"But, Miles, have you made enough for that? It takes a good deal of money."

He laughed as he took from his pocket an old letter and wrote some bire chimner and all?"

"On, Miles! Why couldn't it be moved over for the Caswells."

He was alert in an instant. "That's so!" he exclaimed, "and not let them know anything about it till 'twas all ready for 'em. Wouldn't it be great!"

"But could it be moved, "Are the process of the could be moved over for the Caswells."

wouldn't come back for anything."
"Maybe so," she assented doubtfully. "But you will be seeing them pretty soon, and can find out all about it.'

It was two weeks later when Miles went to the city. He met Nathan Caswell on the street, not far from his son Ed's house. His white hair and beard, his bent figure, and an air of depression, made him look pathetically old for a man but little over sixty.

Miles barred his way. "Don't you recognize your old neighbors, Uncle Nathan?" he asked, smilingly.

It was wonderful how the bent figure straightened and the dull face lighted up. "Well, well, well!" he lighted up. "Well, well, well, well, exclaimed, shaking hands as if he exclaimed, stop. "I don't know never would stop. "I don't know when I was ever gladder to see anybody than I be to see you, Miles Torrev."

He urged Miles to go back with him to the house. "Fannie's washing up the floors, and has got most of the windows up, airing out the rooms the windows up, airing out the rooms she's a pretty partic'lar housekeeper, Fannie is—but I reckon we can find a place somewhere to sit down."

"Of course I'm coming," Miles answered. "I don't want to miss seeing Aunt Mary."

"Oh, she ain't here," Uncle Nathan told him. "She lives to Gib's. I was lest starting over there to see her."

jest starting over there to see her."
"Then I'll walk along with you,"
Miles said. "You don't mean to say, though, that you don't live together?" he asked incredulously.

"It ain't be'n so we could, yet," said Uncle Nathan. "You see, the folks in the city have to crowd up pretty close, and so I kinder fit in with the odd boy at Ed's, and Mother with the extra girl at Gib's."

"Humph!" said Miles bluntly. shouldn't think that was a very satisfactory arrangement. Why doesn't one of them hire a large tenement?"

"They do think mebbe they may, in the spring; but a bigger house would come consider'ble higher, and it costs a sight to move. Of course our being here is a good deal of expense to 'em, anyway," he added.

"Do you get to see each other oft-en?" Miles asked.

"I walk out there every day, 'cept in real bad weather, then I stay to home, just to humor Mother, she's so afeared I'll get sick or suthin'. She ain't never got over the idee that I dont know how to take care of myself," he explained, with an indulgent pace.

She doesn't come to see you, then?"

"Oh, shes be'n a few times, but 'tis most too far for her to walk, and on the electrics it's a roundabout way, Im scairt to death a-thinking she'll lose her way or get run over. She kinder hates to call on them for the money, too-though I wouldn't have you think they've ever begredged it to her. They're real good to us, the boys are, and their wives, too.'

"Well, are they contented there?" Mrs. Torrey asked Miles that evening as soon as he reached home. "Contented!" he exclaimed.

tented!" he repeated. "Why, Mother, I don't think you could scare up a more thoroughly homesick pair if you searched for a year. They're plucky though—not a word of complaint from either of them. But I sized up the situation: Uncle Nathan, who was always such a worker, has nothing at all to occupy him, and is as uneasy as a fish out of water; while Aunt Mary, the soul of order, is wearing herself out trying to keep things tidy in her easy-going daughter-in-law's house. They miss the old home, they miss their independence, and they miss each other.'

"Did they say anything about com-ing back?" Mrs. Torrey asked.

"Uncle Nathan did after we left Aunt Mary's. They want to come and comp out in their barn next summer, he to work for the next summer, to work for the neighbors. guess the boys don't think much of iend 'em the furniture for it. I made up my mind then and there that they must have this house. We'll give 'em the biggest kind of a surprise.

"I'm glad you said what you did about their camping out," said his mother. "It would have been cruel not to have let them have anything to look forward to."

"That's the way I felt. I stopped to see Hale on the way home. At first he said positively he wouldn't touch it till spring; but when he found 'twas for the Caswells, he said he'd watch his chances and move it this winter. It seems Uncle Nathan did him a kindness once, and he's never forgotten it."

"We can store our things and go
"We can store our things and go Mrs. Torrey, energetically. 'Twill be a real help to her, and will give me time to spend fixing up the house inside after it's moved."

The winter was long to the Caswells. "If it wa'n't for Miles Torrey coming to see us and tell us the news now and then, I don't see how we could endure it to wait till summer." Aunt Mary said once, in an unusual burst of feeling.

"And summer is only a 'perhaps,'"
Uncle Nathan returned dejectedly. "Ed and Gib seem to think it so foolish, our wanting to go back, and Fannie and Sophie are so afeared we couldn't stand it to rough it! Land o' Goshen, who cares if 'tis! And I could stand it to live in a barrel, like an old settin'-hen, 'f the barrel was on the old farm."

"I'd be glad to do it," Aunt Mary responded, laughing a little at the

"Seems 'sif 'twould be too good to back there, be true for us ever to go back there, even for a day," Uncle Nathan said, with homesick longing.

But in March came Miles Torrey ith an invitation: "Mother wants with an invitation: you both to come out and stay over Easter Sunday; the new chapel is going to be dedicated then. And I am going to take you there in my new automobile."

The journey was interrupted halfway by the rain, and Miles and his guests had to spend the rest of the afternoon at a hotel. At nine in the evening, however, the rain had entirely ceased, ad they started once more. The air was warm, but there was a great deal of water standing in the road, and that and a dense fog made it necessary to proceed at a snail's

Aunt Marys' and Uncle Nathan's cheerfulness was unimpaired, but Miles was disappointed and disgusted. This was all so different from what he had planned. The afternoon was with rousing reception and a big with a rousing reception and a bg supper at the end of it. He had imagined exactly how Uncle Nathan and Aunt Mary would look when the oldnew house burst upon their astonished vision. Now he would have to tell them about it, and it would be all so very flat and tame.

Then suddenly the fog suggested an idea. He would still let them think they were going to visit his mother, and let the situation reveal itself as it would. He could not be a witness to the surprise, but wouldn't it be tremendous! He laughed as he thought of it, and began to talk very fast to divert Aunt Mary and Uncle Nathan and keep them from thinking too much where they were going. He even went by a little different route from usual to throw them more entirely off their guard.

"Here we are, at last," said Miles, bringing the automobile to a stop. "And it is as I feared; everybody is abed."

"Don't wake her up!" they both be-ought him earnestly. "You jest sought him earnestly. show us to our room, and we won't make a bit more noise than we can

"Perhaps I'd better do that way," said Miles, with a show of reluctance. "Mother would like it, of course, but she's such a shy sleeper-she probably wouldn't go to sleep again all

In a few minutes they heard him slip the bolt in the front door, and then he came out to them with a very dimly burning lantern.

"Somehow or 'nother I can't make it seem at all natural, here," said Uncle Nathan, when they were on the ground. "Miles has be'n talking so interesting about that mining country that I'd no idee we'd come anywhere near so far, and I've let myself get turned 'round completely.

"No wonder, with the fog so thick you can't see your hand before your laughed Aunt Mary. thinking there was a little more of a rise up to Ellen's front door," she added meditatively.

Miles uttered an exclamation. Something had just happened to the lantern and it had gone out just as the door was reached. "Never mind," whispered Aunt

"You jest lead the way and we'll follow."

So in the dark he conducted them to their room, where he presently brought them a lighted lamp and left

"Why, Nathan Caswell!" his wife cried, as she gazed about her. "Jest see what Ellen Torrey has done! She's gone and fixed this room up exactly as ours used to be."

"Why, so she has!" said Uncle Na-nan. "That old chest of drawers and the high-post bed-and the looking-glass; they be the very image of

"But the wall-paper, Nathan-and the chairs and straw matting! Ellen must have done it a-purpose. Twas dretful kind of her, I think."

It seemed as if they couldn't gloat over it and exclaim over it enough. "We can purtend for one night that we're in the old house, and it never burned down," Aunt Mary said.

"Feather bed, too," Uncle Nathan said, as he settled down into it with a sigh of content. "I s'pose them hard old mattresses are more healthy -Fannie says they be-but I'm blest ií I ever could think they was comf'-

A Sabbath quiet brooded over the house when they awoke in the morn-Outside they could hear the birds singing—chickadees, bluebirds, a robin, a nuthatch.

They talked for awhile in whispers, then Uncle Nathan said, "Dont you s'pose we could get up real still and slip out and over to the old place? Seems 'sif 'twould make it seem more like Sunday somehow."

"I don't see why we couldn't," Aunt Mary answered. "I wonder if "I wonder if we can see it from here."

She got up and went to look out of one of the front windows.

"Why!" She held the curtain farther aside and looked harder. "Whv. I can't make it seem-right. Why, "the sun is rising over across the road in the west, or else I'm losing my mind!"

Uncle Nathan sprang out of bed and stared out over her shoulder. "It ain't the Torrey place," he said slow-joke on us. If I didn't know it couldn't be, I should think-

Nathan!"—as the sun burst forth— He went to a window on the other

"Mary—come quick!" he cried excitedly. "It's our elm tree, and our barn; the Torrey place is over there, and their house is gone!"

Aunt Mary sank into a chair. "What does it mean?" she asked weakly.
"I don't know," he answered, beginning to dress in feverish haste. "Hurry up and we'll go somewhere and find out." They were both dressed, when a large piece of paper, half under the door, caught their attention. As Uncle Nathan's name appeared on it, he opened and read it. "They moved the Torrey house over here and fitted it all up for us."

said Uncle Nathan in an awed voice. They looked at each other as if stunned for a moment, then Aunt Mary threw herself into Uncle Nathan's arms and they cried together. He was first to recover. "How ridickerlous for us to stand here aweepin!" he said. "Come-let's explore.'

Aunt Mary wiped her eyes and followed him out into the kitchen.

"Just like our old one, for all the world!" said Uncle Nathan. "And the woodbox full of kindlings, all ready to start a fire."

In a vase on the sitting-room table was a bunch of beautiful Easter lilies. Aunt Mary's eyes filled again as she bent over them. "We mustn't forget 'tis Easter, Nathan," she said.

"I guess there ain't no danger," he answered soberly. "I feel 'sif I uncerstood how them two Marys and the disciples felt, better'n I ever did before, from knowing how I feel just to have our old home come to life again."

They went over the house together. "I see how 'twas," said Aunt Mary thoughtfully. "As long as the house itself was like the old one, they thought they'd make the rooms as near like as they could, and everybody helped. The grandfather clock must have come from Jed Washburn-you know his and our'n was jest alike; the sitting-room carpet is the one Susan Wetherell had in her spare room-we bought 'em off the same piece; the paper is some Silas Crane had left on his hands when he failed up five years ago; Dr. Burrell gave that old deskwhy! I can tell where 'most every single thing come from!"

They visited the pantry last. There, in the usual place, on the shelf in front of the window, was a pot of beans and a loaf of brownbread. While these were warming for breakfast, Uncle Nathan and Aunt Mary discovered their own old cow, Brindle, out in the barn.

"I don't see how we can be any happier when we get to heaven than we be to get back here," Uncle Nathan said, two hours later, as he hid the doorkey in the old familiar place under the corner of the doorstone.

Then with grateful hearts they walked along the road they had traveled so many times before, to meet their old neighbors and join them in the "Miles has been playing some Easter service at the new chapel.

One of Our Readers Tells How Her Husband Learned

What Washday Means to a Woman.

Dear Editor:—Most men have no realization of what "washday" means to a woman. My husband is one of the best men that ever lived, but he laughed when I asked him one day to get me a 1900 Gravity Washer. I told him it would wash a tubful of clothes in six minutes. "Why, wife," said he "a washing machine is a luxury, and, besides, there s no better exercise than rubbing clothes on a washboard. It's good for the back. I think we had better wait till we get the farm paid for before fooling away money on such new fangled things as washing machines."

That settled it. I gave up the idea and

I am not very strong, and the washing, with all my other work, finally got the better of me. I hal quite a sick sp 11, and after things had gone at sixes and sevens for nearly two weeks I suggested to John that he had better do the washing. We couldn't hire a girl for love or money, and the situation was desperate.

So one morning he started in. My! what a commotion there was in the kitchen. From my bedroom I occasionally caught glimpses of poor John struggling with that mountain of ditty clothes.

If ever a man had all the "exercise" he wante 1, my husband was that man! Couldn't help feeling sorry for him and yet it made me laugh, for I remembered how he made fun of me when I hinted so strongly for a 1900 Gravity Washer. When he finally got the clothes done and on the line he was just about "all in."

That settled it. I gave up the idea and kept right on washing in the same old wav. I confess I felt hurt, but I knew John had no notion how hard it w s to do the washing for a family of five—three of them little tots.

That's all he said, but he lost no time in sending for their Free Washer Book. The book came in due time, and with it an offer to send the 1900 Gravity Washer on thirty days free trial. My husband jumped at the chance to try the Washer without having to spend a cent. "We'll have four weeks' use for a family of five—three of them little tots.

It was sent promptly, all charges paid, and the 1900 Washer Company offered to let us pay for it in little easy payments. The next week I felt well enough to use it. It is the nicest Washer I ever saw, and it almost runs itself. Takes only six minutes to wash a tubful, and the garments come out spotlessly clean.

We were all delighted with the Washer, and wrote to the company that we would keep it and accept their easy payment terms of 50 cents a week. We paid for it without ever missing the money, and would at part with the Washer for five times its cost.

The Indissolubility of the True Marriage.

By Lloyd Starr.

If a woman has been left a widow, | justification for a second marriage. If has she a right to marry again? If a man has been left a widower, has he a right to marry again?

The subject is an old one—a very old one—but it is continually assuming new phases. The latest phase is the facility with which modern disciples of the creed answer the questions for themselves in the affirmative, a phase which makes one wonder if the Esprit De Corps of matrimony is waning and if constancy is a departed jewel.

We read a great deal in our time about the multiplicity of divorces, the laxity of the divorce law, and the consequent dire effects on our future manhood and womanhood; but never a word do we read about the second marriage, not the result of a divorce, but of a death. The mental attitude which harbors this ability to love again ostensibly is everywhere regarded as a rightful part of our earthly existence.

Let us see if such a view can be defended: Suppose a man takes to himself a woman totally unsuited for himthe friction increasing with the yearsthat man never truthfully interpreted his marriage vows, could not "love her, comfort her, honor—her" in life nor grieve for her in death. That man never was married. On the grounds of divine inheritance is he not therefore entitled to a true union?

But the man who seeks and finds the woman of his heart, and, until death intervenes, lives happily in her company —that man truthfully interpreted his marriage vows, could "love her, comfort her, honor — her" in life and grieve for her in death. That man was married. On what grounds, therefore, is he entitled to another union?

Some of the arguments adduced in favor of this second marriage where there has already been a first and true marriage run as follows:

"His wedded life was blissful, but it had an early and sorrowful termination. He took unto himself another wife to show that, while matrimony has tribulations, still it is a success."

Or "Papa felt so lonely without a companion, felt so lonely he couldn't endure it.'

Or "She had three children to bring up and drew very little life-insurance. That was why she accepted him." Or Mr. — believed his motherless boy needed a woman's directing hand." If a man's wedded life was blissful connubial law than did our forefathers. through the agency of love, and then miserable through the agency of death, fellow's unions—saw one eventful period and miserable do not end. They live as an experience. They are an indist the poet's first union was a true union, been. He cannot escape from these causes by inviting a second union. He cannot escape from them unless he escapes from himself, because the true

Modification of this view must tend to give marriage—divinest of all institutions-the savor of commercialism, drag it down to the level of brute creation where blind instinct prevails, and where devotion is purely sexual.

As to Argument No. 2, an effectionate man naturally feels lonely when his wife, in truth, is no longer his earthly helpmate. But, in the majority of cases, is that loneliness not shared by childrenhis children? The loss of the mother to them is just as mournful as the loss of the wife to him. And what redress have the children? None now, though some day it may become fashionable for a son to take unto himself a fosterfather when his own father dies, a daughter a foster-mother when her own mother dies, instead of as at present both being taken unto foster-fathers and a widow has three children to educate and little monetary assistance she appears to be on the sympathy of the world. Yet that in itself is insufficient the woman is imbued with the sacredness of the first marriage she will not permit herself to think of a second marriage. She will look to the world and her ability to make the best of a sad situation. She will know these sad situations exist for the exalted as well as for the humble-make up life's crises. And she will know that the Crown of Wild Olive is not for those who flee from the crises, but for those who face

We have many instances where courageous women have endured the varying trials of widowhood and consequently won the love and reverence of their children as they never could have done in the role of second mother. And we have instances, too, where homes have been swept by calamity and where maidens with sweat of brow, have watched over baby brothers and sisters, and grown grander in God's image for having done so. Yet we do not hear of any plan whereby such noble characters are to be superannuated in their nonearning days. Is the widow entitled to alleviation but not the maiden?

The fact that a widower has a wayward boy is scarcely valid reason for marrying again. There are numbers of homes where fathers and mothers are both living and where continuous battle is being waged against the symptoms of insurrection in a youth. If the mother who surely understands her offspring cannot rule the boy, can a mother who is a total stranger to him? If the boy is able to face the world, the stepmother will find little difficulty in driving him from home. But that is not ruling him. It is not ruling herself. In the foregoing we have a survey of a few of the arguments adduced in favor of second marriage, where there has already been a first real and true marriage, with rea ons both from practical and sentimental viewpoints, why those arguments are considered untenable. Now, let us turn to history that we may observe how the sacredness and beauty of marriage—first and only marriage—operates on the human mind. Perhaps from these glimpses of the famous dead -here a poet singing of love and living the antithesis of it; here a poet at oneness with himself and hi Hymen-we may arrive at a more appreciable understanding of the omnipotence of the

The world looked serenely on Longthe causes that made his life blissful succeeded by another-yet the world knew, or ought to have known, that as only an effacement of the memory of it could make a second union possible.

The world looked on Burns as the husband of Jean Armour, saw him go capes from himself, because the true companionship of life is God-given, God-guided; and what is God-given, God-guided, is in essence perennial. The how so proud a spirit as Burns could ever have resolved himself into that state whereby he could accent the shadow marriage because he had lost the substance marriage?

The world looked on Josephine, relict of a great and distinguished soldier, saw Napoleon espouse her and rejoiced at the good fortune. And, if the East Wind of humiliation 1 id not swept across her pathway, the world might have continued to think her fortunate. would not Josephine, the inflexible widow of a Beauharnais have been a more worthy character to dote upon than Josephine, the ambitious for power, the ambitious for wealth, and the proselyte of inconstancy when such was essential to the realization of these sordid umbitions?

The world looked on Lowell's overwhelming grief at the death of his first wife and, perhaps, ventured to believe that one who could sing

"Whether, as now, we journey hand in hand,

Or, parted in the body, yet are one In spirit and the love of holy things." could never know a second home-coming of the heart. But when the world saw the wooing of Miss Dunlap, and had a smile for the altar scene, did it re-read those lyrical and elegiac effusions with the same responsive passion?

The world looked on the love companionship of Thomas Hood and his Jane Reynolds—a companionship of twenty-one years—only to be dissolved by death, but really never to be dissolved. When the world saw the wife's queenly solicitude for the poet in his closing hours, and saw her, as the result of that queenly solicitude, contract the symptoms of a fever which was to lay her in the grave eighteen months after—the world had no reason to conjecture why he who could carol about "men with mothers and wives" could fain endure those closing hours without her presence at his side.

And, lastly, the world read Campbell's lines on the death of an admiral of the same name; and when on the 15th June, 1844, it read anew about the grief that

Which Are You?

The two kinds of people on earth I mean Are the people who lift and the people who lean.

Wherever you go you will find the world's masses
Are always divided in just these two classes.

And oddly enough, you will find, too, I ween, There is only one lifter to twenty who lean.

In which class are you? Are you easing the load overtaxed lifters who toil down the road?

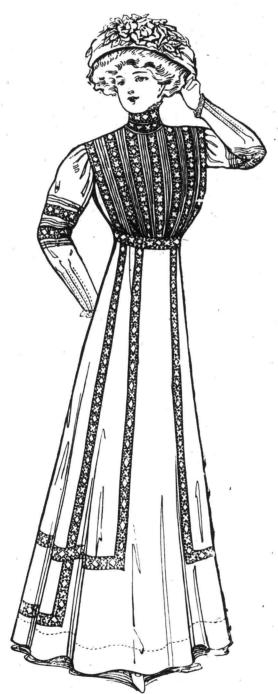

Or are you a leaner, who lets others Your portion of labor and worry and are?

Good Cookery Substitute for Beauty.

Manitoba, March 22, 1909. Editor.—Having been a constant reader of your most interesting paper, and having had considerable amusement out of the correspondence column, I have decided to join your merry circle; that is, if this letter escapes the waste basket. I am of medium height, brown hair and eyes, weigh 104 pounds, and have never been called ugly, nor yet an old maid. I am, as a great many of your writers, a farmer's daughter, and although I have spent some months in town, I prefer the country, in summertime anyway. Manitoba, March 22, 1909.

Now, I think it is hardly fair to call the city girls down so, for the boys must be as bad, though so far I have found neither sex so very bad.

I think "Tipperary's" letter in the November issue quite amusing. Say.

I think "Tipperary's" letter in the November issue quite amusing. Say, girls, he is in an awful hurry; take pity on him some one. Yes, "Greenhorn," feed a man when your beauty has failed and he will forget your failing when he thinks of your good cookery; and they also say good things are done up in small parcels; but so is poison. However, a line from you or any of the others would be most welcome to me. My address is with the editor. "Hazel."

Editor.—I have been reading the W.
H. M. for some time though I am not a subscriber, but soon will be. I think it a grand paper for young folks. I have become interested in the correspondence column. Some of the letters are very good; they catch me just right. I would like to correspond with any of the girls, or boys who would write to me. I am very fond of receiving letters and answering them as promptly as I receive them.

As it is customary to describe one's self, I will do so. I am 5 feet 3 inches in height, weigh 150 pounds, brown hair and blue eyes, aged 21 years. Just my own boss a short time. Do not drink anything stronger than tea, use no tobacco of any kind and am naturally fond of music. Dance a little. Would be pleased to see this in print if the waste basket is not too handy. "Maloney" Bars Catholics.

Calgary, Alta, March 20, 1909.

Editor.—Having been a reader of the W. H. M. for some time I thought I would join the ranks of the correspondents. I would be pleased to hear from any of the fair lassies from 25 to 30, except Catholics, as I am a Protestant—Methodist. I an. a bachelor with a homestead, and horses and implements enough to work the same, and I think there is plenty of room for a helpmate. If it is my good fortune to get a wife who is capable of taking care of her part of the work, I will make it very pleasant for her as I have batched long to ough to appreciate a good wife. I would not expect her to be everything, such as chore boy, roustabout, etc.

I am fond of music, singing, reading and skating. I do not use liquor, nor chew, but take a smoke once in a while. I am 32 years old and 5 feet 7 inches tall, weigh about 140 pounds, dark hair and blue eyes.

A Good Sensible Letter.

Dauphin, Man., March 24, 1909.

Editor.—Being much pleased with the letter written by "Dotty Dimples," of Prince Albert, in your November issue, I thought I would have one published too, if you will permit, and also take this opportunity of enclosing a letter which you will kindly forward.

I judge from hers, with many other letters, that she is not on a matrimonial hunt but rather enjoys the tinge of romance in connection with an acquiantance through correspondence. Being in the same boat I beg to be introduced. Thanks! Dauphin, Man., March 24, 1909.

Thanks!

Though it seems customary to describe one's self, I wish D. D. to write to me so think it policy to withhold, just at present at least, the awful truth. It is only fair to her to sav. however, that I'm under thirty and single, also she will have no complaint to make regarding Carrie.

single, also she will have no complaint to make regarding Carrie.

I might just say that I have been reading the W. H. M. for several years now and find it very instructive, interesting and, considering some of the letters, amusing. I read the letters and try to imagine what the writer is like. With the information in the letters, and bebetween the lines, you can generally get at least an idea of them spiritually, morally and physically. I think your correspondence department is much to be appreciated; besides its value for pastime there is a considerable educational value to be derived from it. I would rather see the members endeavorime to raise the standard of these columns than to be continually harping on what chores a woman should do and what habits a man should have. Wore this a strictly matrimonial bureau this would be all right, but I think I am correct, sir, in maintaining that it is not, though a happy marriage may result from an acquaintance gained through this medium and followed by personal acquaintanceship as well as being personally introduced. I would not care to correspond with any one becoming a sonally introduced. I would not care to correspond with any one becoming a member for the sole purpose of matrimony, but I do enjoy correspondence for itself. I thank you, "mine host," for many pleasant evenings spent through your hospitality, with "our mutual friends."

Quite a number of the very young girls seem to be on the outlook for a hubby. Wait a while girlies, what is all the hurry. I think girls of 16 or 17 are better at school educating their mind instead of thinking about getting married. Ontario, March 20, 1909.

man to lavish all his love and tenderness on a girl before their marriage and use her any old way after it. She should be treated just as gently and as courteously, and there would be more happy homes; for I tell you, boys, these are the little attentions that count and make a woman happy. "A loving woman finds heaven or hell on the day she becomes a bride." And if the man does his part well, of course, the rirl should do her best to make herself and everything else as bright and attractive should do her best to make herself and everything else as bright and attractive as possible and use her hubby as kindly as she herself would wish to be treated, so that their home would be the dearest so that their home would be the dearest spot on earth.

The man I marry must not drink, chew or swear, but I will want him to smoke the pipe of peace, and he must be kind to horses and all dumb animals. I would rather be beaten myself than see them abused. He must also take an interest in church and everything noble and good.

noble and good.

I suppose everyone will be wondering what old "solemn Johnny" wrote such an awful lecture as this for. Well, I am not the least bit solemn or cross, but I had better describe myself or the boys will think I am an old and ancient maiden aunt.

"Laurhing Water" is a farmer's daughter of 21 summers. She likes to milk cows but will run from them if they happen to have long horns. She is 5 feet 4 inches high and weighs 116 pounds, has dark brown hair, with eves of violet blue. Good features a fair pounds, has dark brown hair, with eves of violet blue. Good features, a fair complexion, with cheeks as red as a rine snow apple. Have often been told that I am pretty but do not think I am myself. Now this is the honest truth. I am very fond of music, reading and all beautiful things. I like skating and outdoor sports and lots of fun and company; take an interest in everything and every person. I would like to correspond with some of the Western boys and girls, for in the winter months it is often lonely in our big white tepee with my sisters all at school and by brothers away to the hunt.

I am not one of the ones who are away to the hunt.

I am not one of the ones who are thinking of getting married as I think there is plenty of time, but would like to write for pastime. I like the letters written by "Adonis" and "Uncle Bill" in the September number and by "Challenge" and "Sauerkraut Bill" in October number, and "A Mountain Bachelor" in the November number. Now boys I will be pleased to correspond with you, but would like you to write first as I feel rather shy. I like "Adonis's" description of himself; it just suits me. Hope he and "Challenge" will write or exchange post cards. I will leave my address with the editor and will try to answer any one who would care to correspond. My best wishes to every one the wide world over.

No Mail Order Hubby for this Girl.

Ontario, March 16, 1909. Editor.—I have for some time been a reader of the W. H. M. and like it very much.— I live on a farm but don't have to work out of doors excent to milk. I can play the piano or organ, like dancing but don't approve of cards, drinking or tobacco. Am 5 feet 6 inches tall, have brown hair and hazel eyes. I am 23 years old.

I don't approve of advertising for a husband or wife. I would like to be able to talk personally with any one I was going to marry.

I noticed some one I noticed some one said one country girl is worth ten city girls. Now. I don't think that is right, although I'm a country girl myself. I am acquainted with some city girls and think they are all right. I would like to exchange post cards with girls or boys. My address is with the editor. Hoping to see this in print, I am, "Ontario Girl."

Down on the Boozer.

Ontario, March 19, 1909. Editor.—As this is my second attempt at sending a letter to the correspondence page of your interesting paper, I hope it will have better success than my first epistle, which never appeared at all at all.

my first epistle, which never appeared at all.

Everyone seems to be discussing the matrimonial question and therefore, like "Alexy Ann." I desire to ba my sav with the rest. In the first place. I have no admiration for the man who can take a drink once in a while; neither the one who swears. Both habits, to my mind, are worse than the use of tobacco. Smoking in moderation is not detrimental to the health of a full-grown person. Some of the girls object so strenuously to it, but they should not forget that our sex is not free from faults that sometimes are equal to, if not worse, than smoking. However, I do not uphold it, for it is an unnecessary habit. I think that to live happily together each should endeavor to conquer their own failings and not to get cranky over little things, but to try to cultivate a loving and forgiving disposition. A home would indeed be happy if forbearance with each other's faults are predominate.

As it must be very trying to the editor to be compelled to read so many letters.

As it must be very trying to the editor to be compelled to read so many letters to be compelled to read so many letters I will conclude with a brief description of myself. Am 21, have brown hair, grey eves and fair complexion. Live in the country and have good education. I am a Christian. If any one cares to write to me I will answer all letters promptly. "Avanelle."

Must Be Home-Lover and a Protestant.

Oxbok, Sask., March 20, 1909.

Editor.—As I am a subscriber I thought I would have the privilege of having a short message sent to some of your lonely readers, especially the bachelors. I enjoy reading the Western Home Monthly throughout. As for me, I think it is a very interesting paper and do not intend to let it stop as I am sure I would be lost without it now.

This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print. I am not writing just to get a husband, but for pastime, and if I find one I like well enough it might be my luck to get him. If I get one he must be a home lover and a Protestant. I will not have a man that drinks. I do not mind chewing and smoking although I think a man can do without either of them when he has his wife to talk to him, of an evening. He must also be good to me and I will certainly do my best for him as I would not like to live quarrelsome with anvone. I think that some young ladies are going to fall in the "soup" some day as all these nice young men are not just what they profess to be or they would have been married long ago or had some one in view. Although I like "Dante's" letter in the October number, and if he will write to me first I will answer, and all other letters from either sex; and will exchange post cards with any one who cares to send me one.

As I see the rest give a general description of themselves I think I will. I am 17 years of age, blue eyes and brown hair, and am a farmer's daughter and know how to keen house as good as the majority. Now, anyone wanting any more news will have to come to me direct and they will find my address with the editor of this paper.

A Christian Young Lady. Oxbok, Sask., March 20, 1909.

A Christian Young Lady.

Ontario, March 14, 1909. Editor.-I am a new subscriber to your very interesting magazine, and I must say I have taken great pleasure in reading your valuable magazine, especially the correspondence columns.

I see most of your correspondents are describing themselves, so I must be in the fashion, too. I am a Christian young woman, 22 years old, about 5 feet in height, blue eyes and brown hair, and as for being good looking or not, I think I would pass in a crowd.

I think that letter which was written by the "Preacher" was very interesting. I am also glad he did not forget to say he was a Christian, for some people, in writing a letter of that kind leave that most valuable part out, and in fact, some would never say they were a Christian for fear of being laughed at. I have heard people say so, but I think that is one of the best things in the world to be able to say you are a Christian. I am sure "Bare Teddie's" letter in January issue was very interesting and there was so much advice to be got out of his letter.

I would like to correspond with any young ladies or gentlemen who would write first. I would like to correspond with "The Preacher" and "Bare Ted-die" if they would write first. My address will be with the editor.

Wishing you the compliments of the season. "Lily of the Valley."

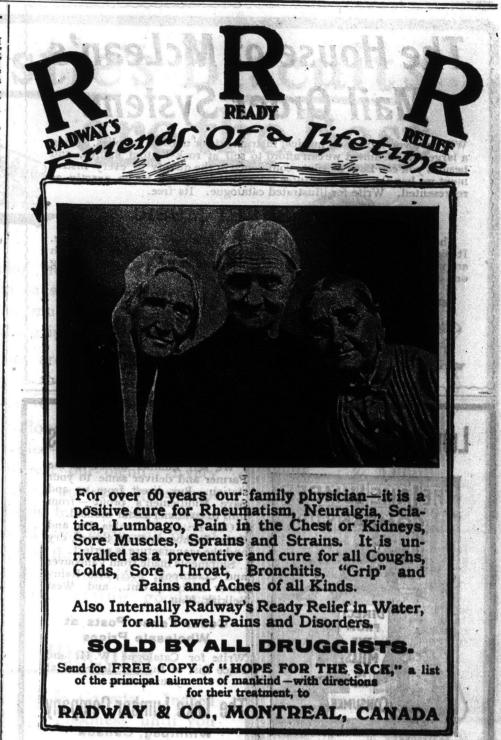

The Doctor Likes Music and—?

Outlook, Sask., March 10, 1909. Editor.—I have been a most interested reader of your charming paper for one year and I derive much pleasure and amusement from the correspondence columns. The only thing I see wrong with it is, that it does not come often enough. I think it should be weekly.

Don't you think the girls are rather hard on the poor bachelors? suppose they are as bad as they are thought to be. I guess the ones that have so much to say are old maids on the shelf. I am a Bohemian and have been in this country four years. I talk German and nearly all slavic languages. I am 22 years old, about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weight 135 pounds, dark grey eyes and dark brown hair. Smoke, but do not chew nor use strong drink. I am good natured and loving. I like music very well. As this is my first letter to the paper I will be wondering if it escapes the waste basket till I see the letter in print.

I will not write any more, hoping to hear from some nice girls, in which I am very interested. I will leave my name and address with the editor. Hoping I have not occupied too much space, I remain, "Doctor Maly."

This Gent Says He's Shy.

Brockest, Alta., March 13, 1909. Editor.-Will you allow me space in your much used columns for just a short epistle. I have been a subscriber and reader for about six months and enjoy very much reading your correspondence columns, although some of the letters are very foolish.

I should very much like to correspond with some of the fair sex. I would like to hear from "Cellege Widow," of January, if she will write.

I am 24 years old, 5 feet 10 inches in height, weight about 150 pounds, brown hair and grey eyes and am entirely temperate, but like a smoke once in a while. I am very fond of music and all kinds of sport. I will answer all letters that may be sent to me. Now, young ladies, please write to me first, as I am kind of shy. Hoping that I have not taken up too much of your valuable time and space, I will close, wishing your paper and your correspondents every success."

Manitoba, March 16th, 1909. Editor.—I have just got the January issue of the W. H. M. and am very much struck with the correspondence column. This is the first time I have seen it, but I mean to be a constant reader in future. I notice it is customary to give a description of one's self, so I will give you mine. I am a bachelor farmer, 26 years of age, 5 feet 10 inches in height, weight 165 pounds, medium brown hair, blue eyes. I don't chew nor tamper with liquor, but I am pretty fond of the pipe. Thinks He's Pretty Nice.

Manitoba, March 13th, 1909. Editor.-Will you kindly allow me a short space in the W. H. M. correspondence columns. I have taken the W. H. M. for about a year and am very much interested. I notice from time to time in the columns, esome good letters pecially some of the girls' letters; others are not so good. Now I think if some of the girls and boys in writing could be more original and not copy; what I mean is, just to write as they would talk. The readers would understand them better and would be able to size up their general disposition and make up, which would help a great deal in choosing a congenial person to correspond with.

Perhaps some of the girls might think of writing to me, so I will describe as I see myself. I am farming at present in southern Manitoba, have 1/2 section of land; am a bachelor in my twenties, 6 feet tall, 175 pounds, fair looking, with very dark hair and blue eyes, square build, broad shoulders, stand erect, 41 inches chest measure, No. 7½ shoe, and No. 9 glove; somewhat of a social favorite, the girils say that I am a dear, sweet—? But here they stop. I guess they are not able to describe or make out what it is. However, if any of the girls would write, I would be pleased very much and would appreciate and respect their letters and answer them promptly.

So now, girls, I am sending my address to the editor. Please forward the enclosed letter to "Shy Lass," in the January number of the W. H. M., 1909, and oblige, with best west for the continued success of the W. H. M. "Billy Sweet."

Wants Lady Who Will Love Rim.

Brocket, Alta., March 13, 1909. Editor.—I have been a reader of the W. H. M. for some time past and take great pleasure in reading the correspondence letters in your columns.

I would like to correspond with one of the fair sex, but I am not very good at writing letters. I am a native of Ireland and very bashful. I am a fireman by trade and at present I am running a pump for the C. P. R. I love to be among boilers and engines but since I came out west I feel very lonely in the evenings. I am 24 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, and weigh 150 lbs. I have light brown hair and hazel eyes. I am of a bright and loving disposition, very easy to get along with, like a glass of beer at meal time when it registers over 90 in the shade, and smoke tobacco. I am pretty well fixed financially as I save my wages. I don't like a girl who loses her temper at every little thing that goes wrong. I like to see people happy, and if ever I be so lucky as to possess a wife, my one aim in life will be to make her happy, so I hope some young lady will take pity on a lonely Irishman whose heart is yearning for someone to love. Anyone wishing to correspond with me will find my address with the editor If this is so lucky as to escape the waste paper basket. "Irish Mick."

Sweet 17, and a Singer.

Magnetawan, Ont., Mar. 14, 1909. Editor.—I have been an interested reader of your correspondence column for some time and find some of the letters very sensible and some amusing. Some of the bachelors are very lonely and seem to need a wife. Though I am not thinking of matrimony I would like to correspond with some of the bachelors for pastime; also some of the girls if they will write first.

I live in a town and do not know much about country life, but think it would be pleasant in the summer though lonely in winter. in winter. I am going to try and go to the West for a trip. I do not blame the bachelors for being lonely and hating to cook their own meals.

I see it is the custom to give a description, so here is mine. I m 5 feet 2 inches tall, blue eyes, brown hair, fair complexion and a very good singer, 17 years old.

I agree with the girls that if a man drinks one glass it leads to another, so, boys, don't take the first glass. abhor to see men chewing tobacco, but do not mind smoking.

I think that if "Bare Teddy" were down here he would find that the Eastern girls don't fall in love so easily as he imagines. There are not so many old maids as some of you bachelors imagine. I am fond of skating, dancing and driving. I would like to hear from "Indian Paddy," "Alberta Homesteader," and "Golden West," if they will will write first; also any of the boys or girls that care to write, they will find my address with the editor. the Eastern girls imagine that the bachelors in the West have hearts as big as pumpkins and that's the kind for Wishi the W. Corresponding for Pastime.

Creelman, Sask., March 17, 19009. Editor.—For some time I have been a reader of your paper. I find it very amusing, and good as well. It certainly is a great bachelor paper. But as for getting a "pard" for life, I do not believe in it altogether, and I must say that is not at all my object in writing, as I only thought of doing so for pasttime. But if one can believe it is right and get acquainted with the right one it is all for the best. A great many have queer ideas about matrimony.

I must say I am not a farmer's daughter and am not sure if I could cook anything or not as I have not cooked at all for a few years. I work in an office. Most of the boys have not much use for girls that cannot do cooking, but I am not looking for a man, but would not mind writing for pastime.

I am just an every day Western girl and can boast of no good looks. I have also lived in the East. I would like to hear from "Golden West," of the January number or "Bill, the Cowboy," of January number also, if they would write first. I am very fond of boating, skating and in fact most all sport. I do not blame the girls for not wanting a man that drinks or chews, or left them the pigs to feed. I should not like that, and think the girls would be better single. "Sliver."

Manitoba, March 11, 1909.

Editor.—I have been a subscriber and interested reader of the W. H. M. for over a year and I saw so many letters from all over the provinces (but more from this little town), I thought I would write a few lines, hoping this escapes the waste paper basket.

I see the others describe themselves so I'll "follow suit." I am 22 years old, rather tall, have dark brown hair and grey eyes. I am fond of amusement and horses but quite agree with B. C. Optimist in regard to girls playing cards and smoking cigarettes.

I was interested in "Irish Rifler 1's" letter and would like to exchange post cards with him. I have over 200 now but only one from India.

"Nobody's Darling."

Wants a Working Wife.

Saskatchwan, March 11, 1909. Editor.—I have been a subscriber to your most interesting paper for nearly one year and enjoy it very much, and I see so many letters from boys and girls that I think I would like to say a word if you can give me a little corner.

As I don't want to get married today, I am not going to give any description of myself only I am no kid and yet would make a pretty young grandfather. I think it is a nice ay to get acquainted but a poor way to get a wife. As for me, I don't want to buy a "a pig in a bag."

I see all the girls are good looking: I suppose they are, but to my way of thinking, there is more than good looks to size up. All the writers give a good description of themselves; if it is true or not, we take for granted it is true. There are some men who are not worthy of having a wife, and again some women not worthy of the name "wife." One does not need to go far from here to see it. When a man is too stingy to buy himself clothes, what will he do when he gets a wife. I think she would have to go to bed hungry. On the other hand, if a man gets a woman that all she thinks of is silk dresses, paint and powder and soft hands its a bank she wants, not a farmer; and if she is too good to milk a cow or feed a pig should the man be gone, what good is she to a farmer? There are plenty of those kind of women in this country now. When a woman lets a country now. When a woman lets a cow go four days without milking because the man was not home to do it as he was away threshing. If I had a woman like that there would be something doing when I got home. I don't say all of you girls would do that sort of thing; you may call me a crank or what you like. I think this . ter writing is a nice pastime taken from a certain standpoint but there is more needed in a house than good looks and good descriptions. Just a plain every day girl with lots of love and kind words and willing to work for her own good as well as mine is enough for me. if any young lady would like to correspond with me my address will be with the editor. I will answer all let-ters the best I can, though I am not much at writing. "Mr. Crank."

Would Like to Go West.

Kensington, Que., March 13, 1909. Editor.-I have been an interested reader of the W. H. M. for nearly a year now and am very much amused by the correspondence column, so I thought I would write to see if any of those bachelors of 22 or 23 would care for a correspondent from down in Quebec, as I have often thought I would like to take a trip to the West to see some of those bachelors and prairie homesteads. I am a young farmer's daughter, not yet out of my teens, and I am neither dark nor fair, tall nor short. Oh! just a regular beauty just like all the others who write. I will tell all the rest of my good qualities if the boys care to write. Guess I will ring off and leave room for somebody else. Wishing your club every success "Happy Peggie."

Pluffy Ruffles from Ontario.

Ontario, March 12, 1909. Editor.—As I am a very recent reader of your very valuable and interesting paper I decided to pen a few lines, hoping I will not be refused a short space in your paper, also asking you to forward enclosed letter.

I see it is customary to describe one's self, so here goes. I have fair curly hair and blue eyes, and am 5 feet 6 in. tall, age 18 years. As for looks, I will not say much as I might not tell the truth. I would be pleased to hear from any reader and will try to answer all letters as I think it a very interesting way of becoming acquainted with other parts of this fair Dominion. Wishing the W. H. M. the success it surely de-

"Gypsy" is No. 1 Hard.

Forestville, March 14, 1909. Editor.—I have been an interested reader of the W. H. M. for some time. I think it is an excellent magazine.

This is my first letter to your paper. The lonely bachelors have my sympathy; it must be hard to do one's mending and cooking.

I am a farmer's daughter and must say I am proud of it. What has become of "White Pine," B. C.? I would be pleased to hear from some of the bachelors, especially "Living in Hopes" and "A Mountain Bachelor." spent quite a lot of my time in towns and cities but I enjoy the country best. I think that contentment is the keynote of happiness and that is the one thing that married people ought to have; if a woman is contented she will be happy and if happy, she will try to make her home as attractive as possible. I am one of those home loving creatures, nothing would be difficult for me if it would help to make the home any brighter. I think any true woman will agree with me when I say that a woman that loves her husband will gladly help with the chores if it is necessary. Now I never do that kind of work on my father's farm because I don't have to do it, but I would not think it was hard if I ever marry a farmer and have "Sauerkraut Bill," Wake Up.

Pine, Ont., March 6, 1909. Editor.—Really I shall have to confess a considerable amount of disappointment at not seeing my first letter in print, but I must not be selfish, and through kindness of Mr. Editor I hope to have more favorable luck this time. For the past six months I have read your valuable W. H. M. with growing interest. The correspondence section is of vast importance and popularity, hence the quantity of letters appearing in each issue from many parts of the

My home is in a small, remote part of that world, in the province of Ontario. I am a lumberman's daughter of 18 years, and being a great deal alone I am anxious to gain correspondents of either sex through this letter for pastime only. Any of the club interested in music, amateur photography. etc. shall be heartily welcome long with all others from country or city who are equally as lonely as I. "Sauerkraut Bill" has impressed me greatly by his letters of past dates. He is blessed with a valuable amount of sound common sense, and should be see this I shall be pleased to welcome him as one of the many correspondents I hope to have. I should like to know something of the West, for the land of the rising sun and the self-sacrificing tillers of the soil have been of great interest to me. "Pine Tassel."

Ho Followed the Crowd.

Calgary, Alta., March 12, 1909. Editor.-The January issue of your paper came to me through a friend subscriber, and while looking through the correspondence columns was very much struck with many of the letters, and at once decided to contribute a few words myself if you will kindly spare them a little space.

I suppose I had better 'follow the crowd" and give a short description of myself. (I am afraid a long one would not look well in print.) I am 19, lightweight, 5 feet 6 inches tall, fond of athletics and girls. Am also somewhat musical, can play two or three instruments a little, but the phonograph is perhaps the one in which I excel most.

My object in writing is to get up a correspondence with some of the jelly, good natured girls for pastime. I am strictly out of the matrimonial list. Intend taking a long chance and wait a few years. Now, girls, take your pen in hand and "get busy." Don't wait till tomorrow; remember what some "wise guy" said: "Procrastination is the thief of time," so if you don't write now, I might die, or get married, or worse, and then you'll be sorry.

Thanking you in advance for the space in your valuable paper, (or wastepaper basket), and wishing the former every success in the future, I will close and give someone else a chance. My address is with the editor. "College Kid."

The Two Johns.

British Columbia, Mar. 12 1909. Editor.—How are chances for two loggers or lumber jacks as we are called, to enter into your correspondence column? Although only one of us takes your valuable paper, still we both read with great interest the letters in it. Well, ladies and gentlemen, we lumber jacks are not thought much of as a rule; we are generally put down by town people as a careless crowd of fellows, but perhaps you will agree with us that there is good and bad found everywhere, and likely we have our faults same as the rest.

Well, guess a little description of ourselves wouldn't hurt, so here's a go. We are both about the same height, 5 feet six inches, one with dark brown hair and grey eyes, weight 156 pounds; the other with dark brown hair and blue eyes, weight 142 pounds. We are not so old, our ages can be found somewhere between 19 and 29. us have the habits of drinking liquor or chewing tobacco, but one has a crooked stem pipe that he sometimes lights up and brings forth a tremendous As for matrimony, guess we will not be included in this year's number. We will leave our address with the editor and any young ladies wishing to correspond with either of us, should they be uncertain as to which is which, they can look over our description again and state to the editor which one they wish to correspond with, grey or blue eyes. So hoping this will escape the refuse pile, we will close, wishing the editor and his paper every success.
"Up a Gumtree."

A Happy-Go-Lucky Scrt of Chap.

Pheasant Forks, Sask., Mar. 15, 1909. Editor.-I now take time to write a few lines to your correspondence column. Being a constant reader I thought I would send my little say to be put into print, if it would be acceptable. There seems to be a keen rivalry existing between some of the old maids and bachelors that are growing crony, seedy, cranky, awkward, old and stubborn. Well, boys, I suppose some of you will be getting married very soon but I do hope you won't let her drudge away and carry her life in her hands to the grave like some of them do, but think of her as the better half, treat her so and if she is good, womanly, and wifelike, she will return your kindness, and how much sweeter the home will be. We are only intended to live in this world once and why not

I like the letter that "Polly" wrote in the last issue, also "Black-eyed Betty." Well, now I suppose I will describe myself. I am of average height, weight the same; and for good looks, well, I guess If I were hunting lions in Africa they would run when they saw me Jack of all trades, master of none. Wishing your paper every success. "A Happy Saskatchewan."

A. Doughty, "Silent Pardner."

By Holman F. Day.

BODGE, of the schooner T. P. Todd, felt a flush | ter. spread hotly under his grizzled beard a contrasting trickle of cold along his spine. He blinked away haze that had suddenly obscured his vision as he gazed on Farmer Aminadab Doughty. The farmer relighted his pipe, set his chair legs more firmly into the spongy sod and leaned back against the weather-stained clapboards of his domicile. He had spoken last. Now he smoked and gazed sererely out across the sun-freckled cove, toward a squat-

Captain Bodge picked up his glazed cap from underneath his chair, moved his lips once or twice, as though to speak, and then began to lumber slowly away over the dooryard sward.

Her playful tone of authority brought the crinkle of a bashful grin upon his weather-beaten face, and he went back to his chair. When the distant clatter of crockery announced her departure from the window, Farmer Doughty observed, lock that is a marked improvement over the usual fence lock. It is made of the same quality wire as the rest of the fence.

NOTE—The ends of this lock are curved in such a manner that the lock practically interlocks itself. This gives it a "double" grip. A "double" grip means a "twice-as-strong" lock. A "twice-as-strong" fence, a "twice-as-good" an investment.

The tie will not slip. It securely holds the cross and lateral wires which combines to add strength to the fence, and allows it to conform to uneven as well as level ground.

Mrs. Andrew Savoy, Grattan's, N.B., writes: In the year of 1905 I was taken sick and did not think I could live any length of time. My trouble was with my heart and people told me that nothing could be done for a caso liko mine. I consulted the very best doctors but they could do me no good. For seven weeks I could hardly cross the floor. I had no pain, but was so weak nobody in the world can believe how I felt. I had given up all hopes of living and had given my little girl to my sister-in-law.

One day a friend came to see me, and calling me by name, said, 'Lizzie, if I were you I would try a dose of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as they are good for heart trouble.' My husband got me a box, but for two days I was not feeling any better. but on the fourth day my husband said, 'I believe those pills are doing you good.' I was able to say 'Yes, I feel a good deal better this morning.' He said, 'Well, I will get you another box right away.' pipe and listened. The clatter of dishes continued, and there was the croon of a woman's voice singing in the summer kitchen. Reassured as to his daughter's lccation, the old man went on: "Here's you and me jest ripe for a pardnership. I've got a cargo of swale hay that I ve pressed to look like herd grass; insurable for herd grass, providin' some one with a reppytation for honesty-say, like you—gets it insured. You've got a schooner that reelly ain't fit to set for an eel pot but which is insurable extry on account of aforesaid reppytation for honesty. By gad, Dunk, you've got capital there in that reppytation! It's a shame to let capital like that lay idle. And it sha'n't! You hear me? It sha'n't. It shall beused in the family. You take my hay and your schooner, insure, as I've said, start for market, let accidents happen as they may, get picked up in your dory by a coaster or a fisherman, collect insurance - reppytation assisting-and come back to hear the weddin' bells a-ringin'. Then you've got the cash for a five-eighths into a new schooner—and me jest a silent pardner. There! I've been plain and open. It's safe and sound and wuth your while."

Doughty leaned back once more and regarded the skipper with deep ed that this ruthless old man could smash the little temple, even as he had boasted. Captain Duncan Bodge dian't understand matters of the heart very well, anyway. Let me ten ye one more thing, murmured the farmer, rapidly and muskily, for the rattle of dishes had ceased and the rapid whisk-whisk of a broom hinted that kitchen was being tidied; "wimmen folks are deeper than ye think and they don't say all they know. Do they love a man that's dog-poor and pussylanimous and no git-up to him? No. Do they love a man that's bold and stands by their family and says to their father: Dad-in-law that's-a-goin'-to-be, you say snacks, it's snacks. Shake!' Well, you bet she loves him! Nah-h-h! I know you never stole northin' yet -and you ain't got to now. But if you don't know the difference between stealin' and a commercial transaction, then the next time you go up to Boston you step up to State Street and make a few inquiries. Do you think they're gettin' rich there on day's wages?'

It was evident, however, that the farmer didn't care to have his daughter know just then his ideas of what constituted business, for he suddenly ejaculated: "Hold hosses, Cap. Dunk she's comin'."

He was droolingly sucking the like that to fit into me," said Bodge, sullenly.

"Then ye won't fit into my family," retorted the farmer. "Your reppytation may be your capital, but my daughter's my stock-in-trade."

"Well, I reckon 'Liza will have something to say about that when I say something to her." The captain was clearly rebellious.

"Not when I have my say first. My gal sticks by me. She ain't ever be lieved anything agin' me yet and she never will. If that wan't so, then she wouldn't still be livin' with me to home—a gal with her looks! You, yourself, Dunk Bodge, couldn't make her harbor no grudge agin' me, not if you swore on a stack of Bibles. Listen, cap! You can tell the truth, but you can't do even that very well. I can lie twict as fast. In two days, with my inside track, I'll have ye fixed out so that my gal will pour bilin' water on ye.'

The skipper rolled his cap in his hands and looked at the crafty old farmer moodily. He realized his own inefficiency against the odds presented This love that had come to him late in life seemed a very fragile fabric in his eyes. He feared to see it dashed down at any time. He believ-

"I'm too square for a round idee match flame into his pipe as his daughter came out of the house, unrolling her knitting.

"It's lovely out here, isn't it, Cap'n Duncan?" she observed, in her cozy way. "I suppose you and dad have got that business all settled by this time. I think it will be just fine for you two to go into it together. Dad has been cheated so many, many times by goin' into business deals with men that were dishonest. But everyone knows that Cap'n Duncan Bodge ain't that sort.'

She bent to count some knots on her bright needle, and the two men looked at each other-Captain Bodge with that expression one sees in the eyes of a pleading St. Bernard pup.

"Dad has told me about it," she re-sumed, cheerfully, "and I never was so glad of anything in my life. I hope you will do just splendid, and if this buy and ship. When are you go-to load, cap'n?"

We might as well start in to-morrow, cap." Doughty hastened to The Tasker boys ain't workin' or anyone now, and we can get them to help, and I'm a good man on a ckle myself."

He got up and went along and pinched his daughter's ear.

"Liza," he said, "there ain't no man in the kingdom that I'd ruther throw a good slice of bus'ness in the way of than this same Cap Dunk, right here. He don't throw it back into your face. I'd sacrifice to do it. P'r'aps in this deal I've been talkin' about I could do a mite better than even snacks if I took on some one else, but I don't care about that. The happiness of them that's near and dear to me is more than fine gold—yea, better than rubies. Ye are good children—the both on ye!" And then, evidently unable to master his emotion, he stum-bled away around the corner of the "Blessed old dad," murmured his daughter, her eyes misty as she watched him out of sight: "he's always like that, cap'n. Ain't he good?"

Captain Bodge, after what seemed to the woman a violent effort to master his own emotion, choked out affirmation.

"He seems to think an awful sight of you," she went on. "He was saying to me this morning that he was going right along with you to market and help sell the hay, for, of course, he knows all about hay."

The captain gulped hard as he heard

"And you can see what kind of a true, generous friend you've got in dad. He's going to let you have Lester Trask stay at home and get a new job, Dad's goin' to take his place and work for nothin'. There! Cap'n Duncan Bodge, how is that for liking

In Trask's personality were combined the mate, the cook and the entire crew of the T. P. Todd. The captain gulped harder as he swallowed this additional news.

"I'm glad you are going to discharge that Lester Trask," she said, with a flicker of spirit in her eyes. He has bothered me dreadfully by hanging around the house here. Phew! seems as though I can smell that cologne and hair oil now. like these smarties that think a wo-I don't man is going to fall down and worship store clothes and a twisted mustn't-touch-it on their upper lip.' The captain's face was squizzled with an anxious frown, "Les Trask? Has he been courtin' you?" he faltered.

"Huh! I don't call it courtin'," she sniffed. "Of course I s pose you might call it attentions, lut, after all, I'm glad you're goin' to let him go off the vessel. Father says he guesses he's a wolf in sheep's clothing. Dad invited him here first, but dad says he really didn't have any idea he'd try to-to-well, dad guesses you'll discharge him now."

The captain was too engrossed in his heart matters to ponder just then in Doughty's inconsistencies of con duct and opinion.

"I don't want nobody courtin' you, 'Liza," he blurted, desperately. haven't knowed jest how to say it to you-but I don't want nobody courtin' you except me. Wont' you let me do all the courtin'? And I want to marry you, too, 'cause there ain't no other woman in the world that I ever see that I loved. There!" He wiped the streaming prspiration from his forehead with the flat of his hand. "I think you're a good man, cap'n," she said, her fingers trembling over her needles. "I didn't believe anything in what Lester Trask said to dad about your havin' flirtations 'long

The captain was known from Quoddy to Cape Cod as a swearer of much volubility. Now he uprose, choked, thudded back upon his chair, rebound ed rapped his knuckles against his forehead and then blew a "poof" of hot breath upon the air, as though it were the essence and spirit of the oaths he had been swearing inside.

"I never believed a word," she went on, "but I don't wonder you don't want a man like that around you after this. Dad said no one could blame you for being mad. But as I was saying. Cap'n Duncan, father thinks everything of you, and father's all I've got since mother died, and he has been so good to me-. It americal to the captain, even in

GRASSES AND CLOVERS

WE ARE THE LARGEST GRASS SEED HOUSE IN WESTERN CANADA.

CLOVERS Each season clover spreads its dominion into new fields. Each year many acres are being planted in new localities with gratifying results. For Pure Seed you must depend upon the honesty of your Seedsmen. Impure Seed, of which there are large quantities being offered, is worse than none. Our High Grade Seed is the best suited to this Western Country. Pure, Clean, Plump and Solid. Write for Special Prices.

TIMOTHY Much Timothy is adulterated or full of cheap and dead seed. For instance, one sample analysis showed only 20.3 per cent. true to name capable of germinating. At $7.50 per 100 lbs. that sample cost at the rate of $37 00 per 100 lbs. Our Seed costs no more than cheap seed, but its exceptional purity appeals instantly. F.o.b. Brandon, per 100 pounds, $7.50; f.o.b. Calgary, per 100 lbs, $8.50

WESTERN RYE It thrive on all soils, but is peculiarly adapted to our prairie lands, even when impregnated with alkali. Affords excellent pasturage, makes good hay. Resists drought and cold and is easily grown. We are unquestionably headquarters for Western Rye, and owing to the purity of our stocks sell large quantities in the States. Fo.b. Brandon or Calgary, $11.50 per 100 pounds.

BROME Drought defying, frost resisting, it adapts itself to almost every condition of the soil, yielding enormous crops of splendid hay and affording early and abundant pasturage. MILLETS

One of the greatest advantages of these Grasses is that they give quick returns. If sown about June 1st they can be cut in 90 cays, and und r suitable conditions of soil and cultivation, large yields of excellent fodder can be obtained. Hungarian gives the largest yield, but Common Millet ripens a week earlier. Our Millets are very beautiful and distinguished in appearance, and of a beautiful color. FENCE TALK No. 3

Page Wire Fences only seem to cost a cent or two more a rod than common wire fence. They really cost fully three cents a rod less-and then some. Figure it for yourself:

High-carbon Page wire will stand a strain of 2,400 pounds. The other kinds break at 1,800 at best.

That explains why a Page Fence will stretch tighter and stand up longer.

That accounts for Page Fences needing but two fence-posts to the other fence's three.

See now what that figures in a mile of fencing:

Two cents a rod more for Page Fence in the first place, or 100 fewer posts for the Page Fence-because the tougher wire lets it stretch tighter and stay tighter. Are the 100 posts worth 12c. apiece? Call it that—tho' it's nearer 20c. a post, most places. But call it $12.00 saved in posts—which balances the 2c. a rod more first cost and leaves $5.60 to the good.

What would you take to dig 100 post holes? To cart 100 posts? To set and tamp 100 posts? To staple the fencing 100 times oftener than you need to with a Page Fence?

Doesn't ten dollars look small for all that extra work?

Well, that is only a part of the saving you make on every mile of Page Fence you put up, as compared with any other fence. Our free book, sent from the nearest Page place for your asking, tells the rest-and tells you how to prove Page betterness beforehand.

Doughty was occupying altogether too commanding o position in affairs. He determined to have a look at the family barometer.

"Liza," he stammered, "it don't seem hardly a good idea to let third parties mess in too much, even if they be clus relatives. I've seen turrible messes come out of it. Now, ain't it goin 'to be better if you and me just make our bus'ness our own, between ourselves?"

"Cap'n Duncan, blood in the Doughty family is a good deal thicker'n water. It always has been-it always will be. I should hate to think you were trying to stir up any kind of a touse between me and my dad." She stared at him in a way that sent a little, cold trickle down his back.

"I ain't the man to make trouble in any family," he hastened to say.

"That's just the idee I'v always had of ye" cried Aminadab, cheerily and paternally, re-appearing from the ell door. He came along and patted the captain on the shoulder. "I suppose it's settled about the marriage bells goin' ding-dong?" he queried, with a wink as emphatic as the snap of a cigar cutter. Captain Duncan blushed and the daughter looked shyly at him, and then away.

"When lovin' hearts are all agreed, Of words there ain't no special need quoted Aminadab, cheerfully. "You suit the Doughty family, Cap Dunk, and that's enough said on all sides.' And then more briskly, now that what he considered the frivolity was ended, he said: "I'll speak to the Tasker boys this afternoon, and if you'll work the Todd into dock early to-morrow we'll have that hay aboard like slidin' down a suller door."

like slidin' down a suller door."

The captain got up and put on his glazed cap. He felt dizzy. There was a smarting in his throat, as though unuttered words were blistering it. An ugly rancor surged in him along with mighty joy, but he didn't know what to say. As he was about to depart, Farmer Doughty clapped a broad liand against his shoulder and jovially pushed him toward Eliza. pushed him toward Eliza.

'Contracts ought to be sealed, cap." he snickered, disregarding his daughter's indignant protests. "As the lawyers say, 'L.S.'—place for the sealed stands for 'Lips Sweet,' and you can see the place just as well as I can. Come, cap!" And with his other hand he pulled his blushing daughter forward.

A moment after the skipper was staggering down the grassy slope with a shivery glow running all through him from a little burning spot on his

"Oh, Lord! Oh, Lord!" he quavered, softly. "She's a-goin' to marry

But the joy had died out of his face by the time he had stumbled into his dory and took the oars.

"The old scamp!" he gritted. "He's got his spear in my back, and all I can seem to do is wiggle.

When he clambered over the Todd's dingy side, he felt in very proper frame of mind to have it out with Lester Trask. The "crew and cook and the gallant mate" was simpering before a bit of glass propped on the house roof, and was shaving. He wore a fancily striped shirt, and the legs of his new trousers were hunched up to his knees so that the crease might not be spoiled.

"Gettin' ready for a pink tea, I persume?" the skipper growled, stiffing his impulse to leap at once on the traitor's back. "If there's anything I hate, it's a shipboard dude

The crew turned up a mild blue eye, wondering at this astonishing hostility from one with whom he had been on equal terms of comradeship for so long. In justice to Trask, it should be stated that he had never dreamed that his secretive skipper was loving in the same direction in which his own fancies had recently turned. Therefore, there was nothing on his conscience.

"I wont' have no more of this primpin' and fubbin' and flirtationin'
'board ship," roared the skipper roared the skipper. hoard ship," roared the skipper, shooting his fists up into the air. The choler he had been swallowing back on shore now loved on this vicarious victim.

A medical writer says—"The use of a thoroughly reliable preparation of cocoa should be universally encouraged, and it is the consensus of opinion among medical men as well as laboratory workers that the breaktast cocoa manufactured by Walter Baker & Co. "Anything in ship's papers against a man's shavin' and puttin' on decent clothes when he goes ashore?" demanded Trask, bridling.
"Well, I hate a dude," sneered the skipper.

"Hate, then, and be derned, but don't joggle my elbow," returned the crew, with a coaster's unconventionality in discipline, and he daubed more lather upon his cheeks. The placid rak-rak of the razor went on irritatingly.

"I ain't goin' to 'if-and-or-but' with you a minute, Trask," resumed Bodge, his ferocity not abating. "I owe you one month and three days which is twenty-two-fifty, and here it is, and when you go ashore you take you.

dirty dunnage and you stay."
For full fifteen seconds did the crew regard the skipper silently and with growing malevolence, trying to remember cause for this amazing outburst. Then came vituperation on both sides-the skipper concealing the real secret that prompted him, the crew maddened by a sense of injustice. A few minutes later the skipper had crew, a slighter antagonist, on his back, clutching his jutting ears, slip-pery with soap, and then he rapped his head smartly on the deck until Trask grunted for mercy.

When at last the muttering Lester had gone over the packet's side, tugging his canvas bag, Captain Duncan sighed and murmured: "I feel some better, but it ain't better enough to brag on!" During the next few days the lading of the T. P. Todd went on placidly enough. When the news went abroad in the hamlet that Captain Bodge had discharged Lester Trask and hired Aminadab Doughty for 'fore the mast, there was some speculation as to what it meant. The explanation of a business partnership satisfied most persons. But Lester Trask, haunting the wharf, and gloomily eyeing operations, grumbling to himself and to those who would listen, was not satisfied.

On the morning of the fourth day at sunrise Captain Bodge and his new crew went on board, and an hour later the T. P. Todd was rolling down the channel, hay bales stuffing her old sides and tiered so high on deck that her booms had scant clearing in which to swing.

Captain Duncan, at the wheel, turned now and then to wave his glazed cap in answer to an apron fluttering from the ell door of the Doughty farmhouse on the hill.

"Love is some better'n beet greens, hey, Dunk?" quizzed Aminadab. He was perched on a convenient bale, his knees under his chin, his gaunt arms clasped around his legs. His patriarchal beard flapped in trailing strands against either ear

"But stop your wavin'. She can't see you. I want to talk to you about something that amounts to something. You say Griffin was ready to put on the insurance all right and tighty?" "Yes," sourly mumbled the skipper.
"Didn't hem and haw about it?"

"Said if it was anybody but me he'd want to paw 'round a little more, but said he knew anything I was in was all right." Captain Duncan's bitter gloom didn't fit the self-commendation that he was uttering.

"What did I tell ye," chirped the old man. "Reppytation is like cash capital. But cash capital ain't turnin' in northin' till you invest it. I've been and showed ye how to invest yours, but you're actin' the billiousest I ever saw a bus'ness man act when he's got a good thing." Doughty tamped his tobacco into his pipe and puffed with much content. "Say, Dab Doughty," gritted the skipper, "I've been coaxed and poked and slicked and headed-off into this without seein' a dodge-hole to get out of, and you've done it. You put me where I had to go on or else tell a good and innercent daughter that her father was a skin and a land pirut, or act as if I had jilted her, and now I'm in it allover. But you go to braggin' any more that you're doin' me a favor, and I'll tie you to the jib boom by them whiskers of your'n and let you swosh. Now shet up whilst I mediday. A snapping west wind filled the old hooker's patched sails and drove her with lathering bows across the Gulf of Maine. Old Doughty smoked and gazed serenely into the lashing sea, or, with landsman's caution, dragged himself about over the hay-bales.

"Never was a handsomer job," he muttered, over and over. grass fillers and herd-grass wrappers-what a smoke 'twill make for old Davy Jones! And no one knows about e'm but me and that Canuck hired-man that went back to Canada after they were pressed. Say, cap," he inquired, after one of his congratulatory tours across the deck load, where will we be at midnight, do ye reckon?"

"Prob'ly thutty miles to the so'east of Thatcher's," replied the skipper,

"Plenty of Gloucestermen passing in these waters? 'Usually."

"I believe the understandin' is that ways and means is to be left to me?" A grunt.

"We gets supper—I gets it, and being kind of green at sea work, and none surprisin', that ain't, and the galley funnel runnin' right out between the hay bales, I must have got too big a fire, and sparks settle under a bale and smoulder, and the fire runs along, and the first thing we knows out she bursts about midnight something awful, and then there aint' no-thin to do but drop astern in the dory and leave the poor old Todd to her awful fate. S-pt-o-o-o!" The old man put back his pipe and blinked shrewdly at his companion. "First rehearsal, cap. I tell ye, when I get all the details worked in, that's goin' to be a corker of a story. And the brave fight we made to save her! Chanst for a reg'lar dime novel. How we were backed inch by inch, still fightin', to the stern rail. Do you know what I'm goin' to do?" His eyes sparkled as his imagination took fire. "I'm goin' to singe off half my whisk-ers for a proof. Then I just want to have a dad-blamed insurance adjuster come up and give me a holler if he dares to. I'll singe 'em now," he shouted, eagerly. "You need to see a sample of real grit. You need to be

With the skipper eyeing him mood-ily, he puffed his pipeful into the glowing coals and fired a twisted spill of his whiskers, patting out the malodorous smoulder as it approached his cheek. But as he went on with his task, the sportive wind flapped a streamer of beard unbidden across the pipe, and a puff of flame and smoke and a howl of pain showed that the damage was more than his caution

Only vigorous swats upon his smarting face saved him from serious burns. After that, until dusk settled, he regarded himself ruefully in a pocket mirror, and whined as he wrinkled his cheeks tentatively. "But it's good evidence," he groan-

Occasionally the skipper broke out into vehement abuse of him and his iniquity, but Doughty couldn't be crawn into altercation. When his big silver watch, winking at a match flash, told him it was near midnight, he grimly set about his task. Bodge saw his tugging a big can from a hiding place in the galley, and by the way the dim figure was bobbing around over the hay, he knew that the villainous business was now near its climax. The rank odor of kerosene puffed to the skipper's nostrils, and he clung to the hand spokes and shivered. Then he lashed the wheel, ran below and gathered a few belongings. He groaned helplessly as he did so, and cast a pathetic look of farewell around the Ettle cabin. But above, on deck, old Doughty was calling huskily:

"I'm ready to touch her off!" So he floundered up the ladder, pulled the towing dory to the rail, dumped his dunnage in, and turned his back on the glare of red flame that sprang up amidships. The next moment both men tumbled with clatter of feet into the dory and began to row des-niche scrambled Lester Trask, his mouth stuffed with ship's biscuit, his eyes goggling in excitement.

"Smelt 'twas a plot—knowed there was something up," he gasped, "but, on, my Gawd!"

A dozen bales were flaming, and smoke clouds from others were unrolling upon the wind. For a moment the man stared aghast, and then he grabbed a dangling sheet-end, leaped overboard, soused himself alongside, as one would soak a sponge, Sputtering and spitting, he came up hand-over-hand, grabbed a boat hook and charged the heart of the fire.

The first bale came hardest, but he caught the hook under the wire, and, after a mighty effort, tugged the flaming mass to the side. It went overboard and under water with a screaming hiss. Then by aid of boat hook, water bucket and deck pump, each in its turn, he battled furiously, nerved by the lust of salvage, and urged by the spirit of revenge. half hour later-blistered, blackened, singed but happy—he was at the wheel of the T. P. Todd, steering the craft back along the course toward Portland harbor and a custom house whereat he might declare.

"She ain't no rose jar for smells," he soliloquized, "but she's a lily of the valley for salvage, and—well, the sight will be wuth lookin' at the next time Mister Lester Trask walks up to the Doughty house in his Sunday ciothes and winks at Mr. Min'dab Doughty, and says 'Back to the coast!' to Mr. Dunk Bodge, and says to Miss 'Liza Doughty—" In his glee he broke out into raucous improvisation:

"Oh, Er-liza! Dear Er-liza! "Won't you love your true love when your true love spies yer?"

This couplet, sung over and over served to solace many of the long hours of ratching back against a wind that set dead ahead.

Many times during that first half hour farmer Doughty played a queer game of peek-a-boo. As the dory would toss to the top of a wave he hung upon his oar, scruffed the sweat from his brow with his forearm and growled:

"Well, that's a blame slim bonfire!" "You didn't put on enough kairo-sene, prob'ly," suggested the skipper, entirely willing to quarrel.

"All there was in a five-gallon can," retorted Doughty. "But most likely she went whoosh! all over, like an oiled rag. How long does it take a fore-and-aft schooner to burn?"

"The last fifteen I torched up averaged eighteen minutes and forty-four seconds apiece," said Captain Duncan, sarcastically.

"Still on - bus'ness-like - still on reconciled to a good stroke," sighed the farmer. "Why don't you think the farmer. about 'Liza and about five-eights into a new packet and livin' happy ever after? Why don't you be sensible, Cap Dunk? Hain't you goin' to pick out your weddin' suit in Boston this trip—me a-helpin' you? Be sensible!"
One last dim reflection of red from the sky lit up the first smile that had crinkled across Captain Bodge's weather-worn features for a long time.

A Gloucesterman, smashing Bostonward with a halibut catch, picked them up in the gray of morning. It was a masterly tale that Doughty relateda tale lit with burning hay, hissing flames, red gleams and tottering masts and singed whiskers.

"Rehearsal number two," he mumbled in undertone to Bodge, who had listened with saturnine intentness. "Wait till I tell that at the custom house!"

It truly did prove an official story without flaw, and that same evening the two conspirators embarked upon the steam packet for Portland in high good humor, Captain Duncan carefully conveying a parcel with "Blank & Dash, Ready-Made Clothing," printed on its wrappings. The farmer, with great facetiousness, kept trying to punch the bundle or tear a slit in the paper, and once, when the skipper wasn't looking, he licked a stubby lead pencil and marked "Weden Sute" on the bundle.

They slept uneasily in saloon chairs. When the hooting of fog whistles! to You, Madan, our 1909 Propost Dainty Millinery awakened them they went out on deck and forward, Captain Bodge impelled by his seaman's instincts. The steamer was feeling her way up the harbor in dense morning fog, the pilots hanging from open windows and listening for whistle toot or blast of horn to answer their signals. But suddenly a lumbering schooner showed them her stern almost underfoot, and it was not until the big steamer had thrashed the sea into milk in her reversing that the pilots found voice to make many sulphurous inquiries about: "Your horn, you blank, blank skipper of a tin skimmer!" The schooner was falling off into the fog from under the steamer's counter. The man at the wheel turned up a smoothed face.

'One feller can't do more than he can!" he screeched.

Doughty grabbed Bodge, and Bodge grabbed the farmer, and they threw each other back from the rail like partners in a dizzy two-step.
"The T. P. Todd," gasped the skip-

"Hay and all!" choked the farmer. "Les Trask!"

"And there ain't no ghost to that outfit! Did you smell it?"

Until the steamer was docked they looked into the harbor fog, mournfully speculating, wildly guessing. The farmer drew Bodge off into a corner of the gloomy freight shed, and endeavored to hide the shiftiness of his gaze and put sincerity into his

'Where he's makin' his stab for is the custom house," said Doughty, "but in this fog there's no telling what wharf he'll land at. All is, you've got to post yourself at that custom house and lay for him an case he should get past me. That's your ich all cut out for you. I'll hire a boatman and go down the harbor to meet him. I can handle him better'n you can, Cap Dunk. You ain't got no diplomacy. You can't lie. You ain't no good in dealin' in skin games. Hump yourself for that custom house." And he grabbed the costom And he grabbed the captain by the shoulders and rushed him out to the street.

For several hours, wearily shifting his bundle from arm to arm, consumed by doubts and sweating in anxiety, Captain Duncan Bodge patrolled the sidewalk before the custom house. The sun came up and the fog drifted away. At last he could endure the suspense no longer. He posted back to the steamer wharf. Among the Scotiamen and the coasters that were anchored in the lower harbor, his seaman's quick eye saw no rig resemblin the Todd's, but away down past Cow Island there was a familiar blur of dingy canvas. It was standing out

"Prob'ly that ain't northin' you're wantin'. She's only a hay coaster that I carried her skipper off to a little while ago."

Once more the captain shifted the burden of his wedding suit and his lips moved quiveringly, but he did not speak. Then he went dragging his feet over the slivers up the whari, trying to understand this new phase of the farmer's craftiness. He wondered if that evil old man of the singed whiskers would dare to take Trask out to sea and dump him overboard. Then other reflections occurred to him, and with his bundle squeezed tightly under his arm he trotted to the wharf of the eastbound coastwise packet. When she sailed he was seated well forward, humped over his parcel, his elbows akimbo, as though he was trying to hasten the craft's flight. And anyone with half an eye could see that Captain Duncan Bodge was revolving mighty thoughts. It was about a month later that two men who had come down by stage coach had scuffed through the grass on the slope fronting Aminadab Doughty's cottage. A comfortable glow of lamplight from the window wited them.

"Lester, that light looks kind o' consolin' after our perels of the deep," bserved one of the men, with senti mental tone.

"It seems jest as if it shone from the winder of Heaven, Mister Doughty," said the other, with as much sentimentality. "This being lugged clear to Europe and fired back, and only one suit of clothes on ye all the time, ain't what it's cracked up to be," he growled.

"I didn't know which way the darned old liner was goin' when I waved to it," lamented Doughty. "I was all turned round and you was asleep."

"Well, bein' home ag'in, home ag'in, from a furrin shore, makes up for it, Mr. Doughty. Now, one last word before we go in, so that there won't be no stubbin' toes. I can depend on you, you say, to fix it for me with 'Liza. All I've got to do is to look pleasant and seal it with a kiss at the proper time?"

"Ex-actly. The Doughty family understands each other," declared the farmer, poudly. "If you want to see a girl that knows her bus'ness when her dad speaks, then you travel close behind me and keep your eye peeled." And, with the assurance of the master of the house, he opened the door and went stamping in. The next momenhis daughter was in his arms. Blinking over her shoulder in a keen survey of the room, he saw Captain Bodge calmly rocking away in a big chair that had always been sacred to Aminadab Doughty.

"I reckoned you and Les would show up all right in good time," said the skipper, acknowledging the greeting. "I've pacified 'Liza, 'cause I know that them that's born to be well, I knowed you was both good, spry men," he concluded, lamely.

The farmer leveled baleful gaze on this visitor so amazingly at home. But he checked the fiery speech trembling on his lips, and said as graciously as he could:

"I'm glad you're here this evenin', 'cause it's a good thing for me and you and Les to settle our bus'ness fore we have much to do outside talkin." He hurried, as though he wanted to get over some disagreeable matters as soon as possible: "I hope you ain't been thinkin' hard things ag'inst me, Dunk, for leavin' as I did. But it had to be done."

"Oh, I suppose you had reasons good and sufficient," returned the skipper, cheerfully. "I've backed your play the best I've knowed how. I've said you was in the hospittle gittin' over burns caused by a heroic struggle to save the T. P. Todd. That went here fust-rate.

"Why, with a few more lessons, you could do a pretty fair lyin' job. Take that ability and the cash value of your reppytation, Dunk, and you'll be makin' money fast as anyone 'fore you know it." Doughty's tone was ad-

"I'm doin' fairly well," Bodge rejoined.

"Glad to hear it, sartain I am. But now, folks, for business!" Doughty's tone was very brisk. "Liza, we have some very special matters to talk over such as prob'ly wouldn't interest wimmen. Can't you run up to your room for a little while?"

"It's my bedtime, anyway," she said. "Now, cap," went on the farmer, sinking his voice to a growl, "we-" he jabbed his thumb significantly at the floor and added, "the T. P. Todd. Got took to Europe on a liner. Got back. Story was that we'd got blowed away from seine bo't. Nobody fussin' to look it up. The first Todd story still stands. mutual interests-mutual interests, you understand. It's a fair whack-up. You and me gets the money—and that's the main thing. Les gets 'Liza—and when a feller is willin to give up salvage thataway, it shows he loves a gal enough to make her a good husband. And, of course, he gets his old job on the new schooner. I've promised it, Cap, and you'll have to stand behind. As for 'Liza, she sticks to her dad always."

"Why, gents," said Bodge, calmly and blandly, "it's none of my affair about this Todd matter. Les Trask and you, Doughty, took her away after she was safe in harbor and wrecked her. Wrecked my property, you understand. But I know what temptation is-he sighed-"and I ain't agoin' to make it rough for you. You can settle the matter between yourselves. But I'd advise you not to make any talk about it. You might get into trouble, you two! I understand, of course, that I could send you to State prison, but if you stay sooavable, you can depend on me to stay quiet—and 'Liza, too! She had to be told, of course, to keep her from startin' a hue and cry." His tone was very patronizing.

Trask and Doughty looked at each other nervously. The farmer recovered his composure first.

"I'll still run my own family, Cap'n Dunk, if you please. So we can call it settled that you ain't to hang around Liza any more."

"Oh, we're married," said Captain Duncan, as calmly as though he were mentioning the direction of the wind. Yes, we're married cozy as can be. You helped me pick out my weddin's suit, you recollect."

"Did you dast to marry my daughter without—" roared Doughty, jumping up and cracking his fists, but Bodge pushed his back into his chair with one emphatic punch.

'Shut up, father-in-law," he growled. "Now you listen sharp. I've collected that money and bought fiveeighths into the new Simeon Estescashing in my reppytation that you've had so much to say about. You didn't have any property in that line to cash in, but seein' it's all in the family, I'll make believe you've got a shavin' of an interest in the schooner. But me and your daughter, as majority stock holders, have voted you out of active directorship. You're a silent pardner -- and you want to stay blame silent, if you know your business. Understand?" The last words were almost a snarl. The old man cowered.

'Mister Trask," the skipper cried, whirling on Lester, "it ain't polite of you to stand 'round on one foot and listen to family matters." While the ex-crew was still muttering something beseechingly about "salvage," Captain Duncan pushed him into the night and bolted the door after him. "Now, father-in-law," said the skipper, in that tone of patronizing toleration which proved to be the torture and retribution of the old man's remaining days, "you take your lamp and run right away to bed, for want you up early to help me about the calking on the Simeon. If you're spry and handy, and keep your yap still hereafter, you shan't go to State prison as long as I can protect youand that's a son-in-law wuth havin'."

MUSIG AND DRAMA.

The amalgamation of the Winnipeg, Dominion and Grand theatres came is a great surprise to local theatregoers. Mr. W. B. Lawrence, of the Winnipeg Theatre, who now assumes command of the trio, announces no new change of policy with the exception of melodrama holding the boards of the Grand instead of legitimate drama as at present. On the whole, the new arrangement is being very favorably welcomed and it is safe to predict for it an immediate success.

Ben Hur was the stellar attraction at the Walker Theatre last month and, as anticipated, drew capacity houses every night. Lew Wallace's great drama, presented by an efficient company, far outshadowed any other event of theatrical interest but there were several other plays which proved big successes. "The Wolf" a play by the author of "Paid in Full", made its first appearance before a Winnipeg audience and was thoroughly enjoyed—an interesting fact being that the scene of the play takes place in the Canadian Northwest. Two or three musical comedies sandwiched in between the heavy dramas proved a welcome relief.

Miss Maude Fealy has evidently obtained a strong hold on local playgoers, judging by the large houses which nightly greet this dainty actress at the Winnipeg Theatre. The management have very wisely picked out plays giving her great opportunity but not confining themselves to any one class of play. Accordingly during March she was seen in tragedy, drama, comedy and farce and it says much for her versatalty that she scored a tremendous success in all. "Romeo and Juliet", "A Contented Woman", "Merely Mary Ann" and "The Prince Chap" was Miss Fealy's repertoire for March.

For the first time in Brandon Julian Edward's comic opera, "Dolly Varden," was presented at the Auditorium on Wednesday, March 31st, as an opening to an engagement of four nights by the popular San Francisco Opera Company, under the management of Frank W. Healy. This piece has one of the most phenomenal runs in New York to its credit, and during its only road tour, played to capacity houses in every large city from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It was Lulu Glaser's most triumphant starring vehicle, and is considered by many competent critics the daintiest of all competent critics the daintiest of all com-

The San Francisco Opera Co. opened at Saskatoon on March 19th in "Dolly Varden" to the biggest house ever seen there. Since the show was there last fall their return has been looked forward to eagerly by local theatre goers, and they were certainly not disappointed. The company is if anything stronger than it was before, this being especially noticable in the chorus, and the girls have also improved in looks. Dolly Varden is one of the prettiest operas imaginable, the music, costumes, stage settings, powder and patches blending harmoniously. Nothing has ever struck Saskatoon in the same class with the San Francisco company and odds are it is a long time before there is anything else like it.

An enjoyable entertainment was given at Elkhorn on March 17th. The programme included a solo by Mrs. Mooney "Killarney," a humorous reception by Mr. W. L. Waines "The Irish Philosopher" a vocal duet by Messrs. Mooney and McLeod, a recitation by Mr. E. McLelland, which brought down the house and a vocal solo by T. D. McLeod.

"The Gondoliers." the comic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, was performed at the Opera House, Moosomir on March 25th.

Grenfell was en fete on March 17th, when a highly successful concert was given by local talent. The program

Portage la Prairie is rapidly assuming metropolitan proportions in the theatrical world and if the patrons will only make good the city may have the best attractions on the road and shows fully equal to the best they have in Brandon. The next attraction is the Summers company, and while this company caters largely to the small towns and so-called country circuit, it has made a hit all along the line and is one of few really good stock organizations now on the road.

The Swiss bell ringers gave an entertainment under the auspices of the Bowden Brass Band at Innisfail on Monday, March 15. There was a fairly good attendance and the hearty applause which greeted every number of the programme testified to the excellence of the entertainment. Every item was a musical treat.

A most enjoyable entertainment was given at Dufferin on March 12th. 800 Lives Saved

The saving of lives of all on board the "Republic" through the medium of Marconi Wireless, has demonstrated for all time the tremendous value of this system. Since the news of the Republic affair, a wide demand has appeared for the different Marconi stocks, and this demand will probably result in much higher prices within the immediate future.

How Great Fortunes Grow

A few hundred dollars in one instance after another, has grown to millions, even the man with a few dollars wisely invested during the early stage of those things which satisfy a public demand, stands to-day with unlimited wealth to satisfy his every need. On this continent there is no more interesting story of fabulous wealth, built up from small capital, than that presented by those who had the fore-sight to become interested in such successful investions as the EDISON ELECTRIC LIGHT, BELL, TELEPHONE, WESTINGHOUSE AIR-BRAKE and the allied gifts of our great inventors' brains.

Great Demand for Marconi Stocks

The growing demand for this stock will carry it to higher and higher levels. Do not wait until it has been developed to its utmost and the price of its stock has risen to its highest level. The price will advance in the early future to an amount equal to hundreds per cent. in dividends and you should make an immediate purchase in order to take advantage of that increase. Wire Fencing.

Owing to the rapid increase in the export business of the Page Wire Fence Co., of Walkerville, Ontario, since the introduction of its 'Empire' white fencing for railway, farm and ranch use, it has been thought best to have the foreign business handled by a company of a name similar to that o the fencing, and to this end The Empire Fence Export Co., Ltd., has been formed. It is owned and controlled by the same people as the old company. The head office and factory will be at Walkerville, Ontario.

Have used it two or three times a day since, using clear stuff and bandages, but not the wash. At any price, am satisfied with your remedy and thankful to see him go without the limp." A New Northern Fruit.

A new bush fruit, known as the Hippophae berry, is being placed on the market this season by the Buchanan Nursery Co., of Winnipeg. The plant is a native of Lapland and other secflons of Northern Europe. It is botanically related to the Buffalo berry, which is native in some sections of Manitoba, but the fruit is much larger than the Buffalo berry and is of decidedly better quality. It is also much more easily picked than the Bucalo berry. This new fruit has been under trial for some years in the grounds of the Buchanan Nursery Co., at St. Charles, near Winnipeg, and has been found perfectly hardy. once shown a trace of damage from winter killing. On account of this extreme hardiness, the plant is likely to prove of considerable value here. The fruit is produced in liberal quantity.

The Hippophae berry is a strong-growing shrub, with small, silvery green leaves and minute flowers of a yellowish color. The fruit is a bright orange colored berry, somewhat larger than a currant. It has an acid flavor, and is of a juicy nature. It makes an interesting ornamental shrub when in fruit, which is ripe late in August, and hangs well to the bushes. is also useful for hedges. Disc Records Popular.

There is a great deal of controversy between graphophone enthusiasts as to which of the two styles is the best, cylinder or disc? Most people familiar with both say that the disc is the best and that this is easily determined when you examine and hear them both side

The Winnipeg Piano Co. inform us that the disc styles are now selling more largely than the cylinder on account of the great improvements recently made in the disc; all great improvements in talking machines ((improvements that are really useful and lasting) are confined to the disc style on account of its being the better proposition of the two and attracting bet-and record giving a much better tone to their production; this explains why you can get far better disc than cylinder records.

Disc records now have selections on both sides and the music, surface and lasting qualities are better than those of the old single faced record. needle cut disc record contains more music than the sapphire cut record owing to the grooves of the former being finer and not taking up so much room, so that you can get better value in this respect, still more so with an extra selection on the other side of the disc. Write for prices; address the Winnipeg Piano Co., Winnipeg. When writing, mention this magazine.

A Good Little Book to Have.

The well-known fence expert, E. L. Dyer, of Toronto, has written an instructive little manual that tells things every fence-buyer ought to know before he buys. How to test wire—how to build fence. Readers of the Western Home Monthly have a limited opportunity to get a copy of this useful book by sending ten cents (stamps or coin) to Mr. Dyer, King Street and Atlantic Ave., Toronto; but, as the number of copies available at this nominal price are few, it would be as well to write for it at once, and be sure to mention that you are a subscriber to the Western Home Montlhy.

Canada's National Song.

It has hitherto been matter of regret that more suitable English words had not been provided for Lavallee's magnificent air "O Canada," which has rapidly come into favor as our national song. No fault is found with the French words of Judge Routhler, but they have not admitted of an altogether suitable translation. English have now been written by Mr. New words in Recorder Weir, and published in connection with Lavallee's melody re-harmonized by G. A. Grant-Schaefer, now of Chicago, but still an ardent

This song has been approved by the Governor-General, who suggested to the School Commissioners of Montreal that it be adopted for use in the public schools, a suggestion that has been followed. RICH HUMAN NATURE.

By Charlotte Gilman.

"Poor creatures of dust-and feeble nature, feline nature-these differ markhymn-book is not the Bible; one would think to read hymns that creation was a failure. "Poor human nature," we say deprecatingly, and "we are all poor creatures!"

We are not.

We are the finest kind of creature on earth; our nature is as good as the rest of nature, and that is very good indeed. The shallow thinker, the careless observer points out "man's inhumanity to as something quite new in the world, and imagines that we alone are vicious and diseased. Other animals besides the genus Homo have d seases, even the clean-living wild creatures we have never interfered with.

The common hare, as innocent a vegetarian as breathes, is subject to a pestilence which well-nigh exterminates him. Most diseases are caused by parasitic growths of some sort, and we have no patent on parasites.

As to our vices—even these we so abhor that we call them "unnatural" are found among other animals whenever the conditions of their lives are such as to produce them.

The temperance exhorter tries to shame us by saying that no other creature gets drunk. He should betake himself to a Western ranch and observe the antics of a "locoed cow." There is a little leguminous plant, known to the ranchman as "loco-weed," for which cattle develop a morbid appetite. Under its influence they get hopelessly drunkshamefully, helplessly, ridiculously drunk -and they like it.

We are not alone in our weaknesses, but in our strength we are.

In point of fact, the worst features of our lives are not due to real "human" nature at all, but to the nature of our prehuman ancestors, still strong within us. All animals share certain traits in common, but they are distinguished by others belonging to their several species. Canine nature, bovine nature, equine in proportion.

says the hymn-book. The edly, though all are distinguished by a love of offspring, an appetite for food. So we, as still in animal form, share these and other common animal traitsthey are ours, but they are not in any distinctive sense "human."

The human body has weight, but so has a rock. A human mind has memory, but so has an elephant's. Our human nature is something we alone can show, and it is good, good, and growing better from age to age. We still make war, but the Red Cross follows to heal and save, and the Peace Association labors to prevent. We still practice immorality, but there is a high-er, purer ideal of marriage among us now than the world has ever known, and many who know its joys. We are still dishonest, but the public conscience steadily pursues the public thief. Our standard rises. We improve; we clearly and rapidly improve from age to age, and never so fast as now. Nation after nation wakens and stirs and reaches out for better things. Russia, bound and beaten, is pouring forth a flood of heroism that must inevitably make her free some day. China, whose chains have been forged through centuries, is striving to break them. Japanis the marvel of the ages.

Poor human nature indeed! What other nature ever lifted itself by conscious effort? That is our prerogative-to see ahead, to set up an ideal and strive for it. We have been at this work since we began to be human; and today there are thousands of us spending whole lives for this one thing-the improvement of humanity.

There is another measurement for the goodness of human nature; that is, to compare it with its conditions.

Here appears one of the most beautiful truths of life-people are always better than their conditions warrant. And not only so, but this further-the worse the conditions, the better the people are man's character is the home test. To know a man you must live with him. "Is that man a christian?" said someone to George Whitefield the great field preacher. His reply was: "I don't know, I never lived with him." Recently the letters of Mrs. James G. Blaine have been published in two beautiful volumes. This is the way in which she spoke of her husband, the Hon. James G. Blaine: "I have always said—that those who know him most love him best. I dare say he is the best man I have ever known. Do not misunder-stand me. I do not say he is the best man that ever lived, but that of all the men whom I have Old Dr. Lyman Beecher, the father of Henry Ward Beecher understood He regarded physical exercise as absolutely indispensible. His biographer says concerning him: "The doctor depended upon constant manual labor for keeping up his own health; and in Boston, where he could not enjoy the luxury of a garden to dig in, he was often puzzled to find means to keep himself in good working order. The consequence was that he sawed all the wood for his own large family and often fording that large family, and, often finding that too little, would beg the privilege of sawing at the wood-pile of a neighbor."

PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY

Genuine Christanity is love in Wherever action. manifests an unselfish love for his fellowmen, there you have a beautiful illustration of practical christianity— There you have love in action. The following is The following is from one of our leading denominational papers: 'An interesting instance of this fact was recently brought to our notice in connection with the visit of a young Turk to New York. He was shown the great sights of the city—buildings, bridges, subways, newspapers, churches, colleges-as products of Christian civilization, but none of these things seemed to impress him greatly. no appeal through these things. But his host suggested that he might enjoy seeing a hospital. He was taken to a Christian hospital, and there found Jews, Arabs, Turks, Chinese and Hindoos. He was dazed. When he was told that the faith of a man was not even asked at admittance, but the hospital played the good Samaritan to all, he confessed it beplayed the good Samaritan to all, he confessed it beyond belief. He talked with the Turk, a Mohammedan, in the ward, and the Tukr told him the nurse was "an angel." As the Turk left the building he stopped on the pavement, in front of the door, and striking the Mohammedan posture, then and there prayed such a prayer for God's blessing on the Christians as his bost had paver heard. The on the Christians as his host had never heard. The story needs no comment."

Young men, keep your eyes on Taft—the new president of the United States. He has a TAFT modest way about him, which at the present time, is making a tremendous appeal to the solid people of the United States. Recently when addressing the members of his college class, referring to the White House, he said: "I am going there to try and do good" and when on the inauguration day, he took the oath of office, the following incident is recorded of him:

"It is now known that President Taft's lips fell upon a very significant verse in the Bible when he reverently leaned over and touched with them the open face of the sacred book held by James H. Mc-Kenny, the veteran clerk of preme Court of the United St States. passage was in the third chapter of First Kings, at the point beginning, "Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great people?"

The man who works for ap-WORKING FOR plause will never get enough APPLAUSE of it to satisfy the cravings of his heart, but the man who works because he is inspired by a great principle will have an internal satisfaction which will bide by him to the very end of his earthly life. Listen to the noble words of the Scientist, Charles Darwin: "I very often think that what I have done in science has been much overrated, but my comfort is that I have never consciously done anything to gain applause.

A FAMOUS DESPATCH

Stonewall Jackson was a great fighter and a great Christian. He knew how to fight and he knew how to pray-a splendid combination of qualities-by the way. Even when out on the field of battle he was not unmindful of his duties and responsibilities to his church at home. The following story is told of Stonewall Jackson:

"During a modern war, a decisive battle had been fought. The telegraph lines were down and the news was slow in reaching some of those most interested. At length a letter from one of the Gencrals came to his home town. His handwriting was recognized, and there was a general impatience to have the letter opened. The general's pastor to whom it was addressed, broke the seal, and read the following message: "I remember that this is the following message: "I remember that this is the day for the collection for foreign missions. Please find enclosed my check." Then came the signature of the hero of the battle and that was all. In the rush of our modern life we are apt to forget His benefits and our obligations."

In this day when every Evan-AMUSEMENT gelist and preacher has something to say concerning amusements it is well to have concerning the mind fixed upon some fundamental principle by which you can steer the bark of your own life. You will find nothing in all literature better than the following words from a letter by Mrs. Wesley to her son, John Wesley: "Would you judge of the lawfulness or unlawful-ness of a pleasure, take this rule: Whatever weakens your reason, impairs the tenderness of your conscience, obscures your sense of God, or takes off the relish of spiritual things; whatever increases the authority of your body over your mind—that thing, to you, is sin."

TIME

"Time is money."—"Take time by the forelock."—Time is the stuff out of which life is made." How many striking proverbs there are about Time. These will all be "On February 14, 1876, Alexander Graham Bell filed his application with the Patent Office for a patent to the telephone. On the same day there came to the Patent Office, a caveat from Professor Elisha Gray of Chicago, which gave notice that he was at work upon a similar instrument. A caveat being defined as "An instrument giving public notice that the applicant is at work on an invention which he has not yet perfected, and is fully as protective, the law, as an application for a patent."

Bell's application was filed first upon the books and therefore had the preference. If Gray's caveat had been sent to Washington twenty-four hours earlier he would no doubt be known today as the patentee of the telephone; and out of it would have made a large fortune. Large sums have been often lost in the business world by unnecessary delay; and failure to act promptly in spiritual matters has cost many a man his soul."

SMART BUT NOT RICH

great university

Harvard's retiring president, Dr. Eliot, is not rich, but what a profound influence he has exerted as president of a Who will challenge his wisdom in deciding to give his life to the buliding of character rather than the accumulation of money. Here are his own words:

"I have listened," continued Dr. Eliot, "for the past two or three months to much praise. It was painful at first. I am getting used to it now, and there is a great satisfaction in the thought that the standard of success which the praise has in mind is not the so-called American standard of money mak ing. It reminds me of what the mate of a steamhoat said to me once. I had traveled often on the boat, and the men knew me. The mate said to me one day: 'I want to ask you a question. We've been talking it over. You're a smart man, why ain't you rich?''. It is refreshing to see that the American mind is coming around to that point where it can realize that the great successes of life are irrespective of either poverty or wealth. President Eliot comes to the seventies a poor man. Yet we presume from the comments of all the country that his life is looked upon as one of the great successes of the century. There are many millionaires in the country whose lives have been conspicuous failures. One may make his life a great success with millions, as Mr. Carnegie has done, but one ma also live a rich, productive, beneficent life on a living wage only, as Dr. Eliot has done.

In reply to the criticism for his refusal he said, I promised my precious mother, only a few days before her death, that I would never use anything intoxicating as a beverage, and I consider that promise as binding today as it was the day I gave it."

He said quietly, "Then you have somewhere a little chapel of your own," a courteous assumption which perhaps set her thinking.

substituting an explanation for an achievement, "I did the best I knew how!" protested the dressmaker's apprentice, sullenly when she was sharply reprimanded for a piece of ill-judged work that ruined a valuable dress and vexed a valuable customer. "I don't see what she's blaming me

"I'm not blaming you for doing the best you knew how!" said the employer, overhearing and turning on her crisply; "I'm blaming you for not knowing better! You ought to—you've been here long enough. You meant well, but good intentions aren't enough to carry on the dressmaking business.

DOCTOR

Dear Old Doctor Cuyler has just passed away at 87 years CUYLER of age. Read his own story of his life. "The Recollections sincere to the core."

The N. Y. Christian Advocate

said concerning him: "He was universally accessible. The poor were received as if they were rich, and therefo were received as if they were poor. His kindness was sometimes abused, but his penetration was re markable. A stranger called upon him and asked him to give him five dollars. Dr Cuyler immediately declined to do so. The visitor said, "Don't you believe in the Golden Rule?" "I do." Does not the Bible tell you to be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares?" "It does, but there are two kinds of angels, and I can tell from your breath that you are a fallen angel. The Golden Rule does not require me to assist you in living a life of vice." He was always ready to give his services in behalf of any good cause. He enjoyed being told of his own good deeds and it was a pleasure to him to praise the good works and characters of others.

It is probably still true that a good many people would rather fight for religion than live for it.—Woodstock Sentinel.

Good Citizens Welcome Up Here.

Ottawa Shylocks Wax Fat.

The practice of money lending has been prevalent so long in this city, especially in connection with the civil service, that borrowing has got a hold on many people almost like the opium habit.—Ottawa Evening Journal.

It is simply a reflection upon our sense of the reasonableness of things that we allow every Tom, Dick, and Harry to purchase at his own sweet will and pleasure weapons which may blot the life from some often entirely innocent person.—Montreal Star.

All the News Isn't Published.

People get the idea that everything of thrilling interest which happens in a community or district appears in the press. This is a mistaken idea. If the newspaper men printed one-half of what they know, the public would get a lot of awfully good reading.—Belleville Intelligencer.

Quite a Few Homesteads Left Yet.

That 200,000 free homesteads of 160 acres each of good land are still available in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta indicates that no would-be settler need yet stay away for lack of capital. But still it will not be safe to wait much.—Ottawa Free Press.

Linked Lakes.

If anyone will refer to the map, he cannot fail to be struck with the continuity of the series of lakes which extends north-westerly across Canada from the head of Lake Superior. Discarding the Great Lakes themeselves, this is the most important series of fresh water bodies in the world.—Toronto World.

Spiritualism's Margin.

According to Prof. W. G. Smith, of Toronto University, 95 per cent. of the phenomena reported by spirit mediums is fake. But the learned professor admits that he doesn't know what to say of the other 5 per cent. And that's the trouble with a great many people. It's the unexplainable 5 per cent, that saves the situation for the spiritist—Hamilton Spectator.

Noisy Lobbyists at Ottawa.

The lobbyists have got so obstreperous at Ottawa that the Railway Committee has to keep a policeman to maintain order. Of course the committee might adjourn until the lobbyists get through talking. Doubtless they find it quite as confusing as the members of the committee to have both sessions going on at the same time.—Montreal Witness.

Why Not Do Both?

"Do foreign missions pay?" is a question often asked. That depends. It may be answered that if a million dollars saves a soul it is well spent. The answer to that is spend it at home on the heathen there. There are millions of them. Then there are the poor. It is a criminal waste to send money to China and fail to cover the domestic field.—Windsor Record.

Too Much to Hope For, Apparently?

Talking about law reform, why should it not be the aim of mankind to work out a code of laws, and state them so explicitly, that all would know them and understand them, leaving to the courts only the task of sifting evidence as to facts? Facts will always be in dispute where self-interests clash, but why should there be eternal disputes as to laws and their meanings?—Brantford Expositor.

Fly the Flag.

To the creation and cultivation of true patriotism throughout a nation in the making out of very diverse materials, the display of the flag will powerfully contribute. With this end in view, we should get into the habit of flying the Union Jack from public buildings and private dwellings. Sentiment as well as natural resources and their development go to the building of a nation and that is the task upon which we are engaged on this northern half of the continent.—Toronto Globe

The "Saving Daylight" Proposal.

It is a simple matter to put the clock an hour ahead in Great Britain, but it is not so easy in this country of magnificent distances, where there are three different standard times, to say nothing of the C.P.R. plan of numbering the hours up to 24 in the West. Still, an extra hour of daylight would be a boon to people confined in stores and factories until 6 o'clock p.m. and would be worth a little confusion in clocks and watches.—Stratford Beacon.

When Winnipeg is a Seaport.

To have the wheat of the West loaded on steamers and barges at Winnipeg docks for transportation to Europe would put a new complexion on the transportation question and give the railways very serious competition to meet. Again, might it not mean loading the coal and steel produced in Cape Breton at the docks in Sydney, North Sydney and Inverness to be transported into the very heart of Canada without breaking bulk?—Glace Bay (N.S.) Gazette.

Farming as a Business,

There is also a business side of farming, which such organizations as the institutes promote. The modern farmer is every day becoming more and more a business man. He knows how to reckon his profits; he knows how to produce articles at the lowest cost and to sell them in the best market. The marketing of produce is, especially in a country like British Columbia, one of the most important aspects of agriculture.—Vancouver Province.

A Confusion of Terms.

Somebody startles this country every now and then by proclaiming that Canada is on the way to independence, and a long controversy arises as to what he means. The trouble arises from confusing independence with separation. Canada is virtually independent now, but there is no apparent desire for separation. Nobody denies that the United Kingdom is independent, but the United Kingdom does not desire to be separated from its partners.—St. John Telegraph.

The Great St. Lawrence Route.

The deepening of the Welland Canal will signify that if New York State had hoped through its deeper Eric Canal to divert the Canadian western grain traffic through that State and to the port of New York it is destined to be grievously disappointed. Canada will retain its business; and the port of Quebec—for it is not unlikely that the shipping industry of Quebec will in time be largely developed—will handle the great business which is bound to come from out the fertile and expanding Canadian West.—Montreal Gazette.

Great Britain and the United States.

Lord Lansdowne gave expression to sound and sane British policy when he said, the other day: "I rejoice the first place has been given to our relations with America. That is the power of all others where it would be intolerable should non-removable cases of friction have the effect of estranging. Nor is there any power we would more gladly co-operate with in showing other countries that it should never be beyond the powers of two great nations to find an amicable means of removing the sources of international friction and difficulty." And yet there are those, who get themselves listened to, who insist that friendship for Britain puts us in Canada under a moral obligation to be nasty to the States.—Toronto Star.

The Colonies and the Empire.

The Colonies are self-governing portions of the Empire, making their own laws and making whatever use they see fit of their own revenues. They do not desire the disintegration of the Empire; on the contrary, one and all of them would fight tomorrow to preserve its integrity. They love peace with honor, and will strive diligently to preserve it unbroken. They seek to oppress no foreign nation; but they have interests in every sea and in every ocean, and since this is a day of preparation for war in time of peace the members of the British family will presently take counsel together looking to their common security. The measures they will adopt will be adequate. These need give disquite to no friend of peace, but they will, nevertheless, be well calculated to restrain any nation which may cherish designs inimical to the welfare of the King's subjects in either hemisphere.—London Times.

$510.00 in Cash Prizes

The Peerless Poultry-for-Profit Club offers free advice and help to every Canadian farmer

EVERY farmer in Canada should raise poultry.

You will never realize what big money there is in this department of your farm until you start raising poultry right.

It has been estimated by an authority that the value of the table-poultry and eggs produced by Canadian farmers during the year 1908 amounted to $25,750,000.

Yet the supply was not sufficient to meet the demand.

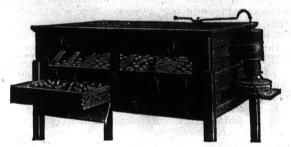

You should get your share of this money. You can if you raise poultry right—raise poultry under the advice and with the help of the Peerless Poultry-for-Profit Club.

Every Purchaser of a Peerless Incubator—every one who owns a Peerless Incubator now becomes a member of the Peerless Poultry-for-Profit Club without paying one cent and is entitled to advice and help absolutely free.

This advice deals with every problem that may come up in poultry raising and is given by experts who are raising poultry now and making money out of it.

The first step towards becoming a member of the Peerless Poultry-for-Profit Club is to write for our booklet "When Poultry Pays." Write for it to-day and start raising poultry right—profitably.

The Peerless—the most successful Incubator because it is built to suit Canadian conditions and climate

WE who make the Peerless Incubators are closely allied with the largest and most successful poultry farm in the Dominion—the Poultry Yards of Canada, Limited.

It was raising poultry on this farm, looking for every means to make it more successful, more profitable, that induced us to produce the Peerless Incubator.

We tested every incubator on the market—gave each one a thorough and careful trial.

Not one of them came up to the standard which we were looking for. The best United States machines failed because they were not built to suit Canada's climate. The Canadian incubators were mere copies of obsolete United States machines—built to sell, not to hatch chicks.

So we built the Peerless Incubators and brooders out of the knowledge and experience which actual poultry raising in Canada taught us.

Write for our booklet "When Poultry Pays"—it tells the whole story.

Why don't you try for one of the 103 Cash Prizes which we offer Canadian Farmers?

WE want to help the farmers of Canada raise more poultry and make more money out of it.

We want them to investigate the poultry department of their farms and see what big money they can make out of it if they go about it right.

For this reason we offer 108 prizes to the farmers of Canada who meet with the best results in poultry raising.

The prizes are as follows:

First Prize $100.00 Second Prize $50.00 Third Prize $25.00

Ten prizes of $10.00 each, twenty prizes of $5.00 each, twenty prizes of $3.00 each, twentp-five prizes of $2.00 each, and twenty-five prizes of $1.00 each, making a total of $510.

Professor A. G. Gilbert Chief of the Government Poultry Department at Ottawa has kindly consented to act as judge and when the winners are decided upon the names will be published in this journal. This competition is open to every owner of a Peerless Incubator.

Write to-day for full particulars of the contest.

We ship the Peerless Freight prepaid.

A widely-known railway official in Winnipeg re-cently showed t e Philosopher a copy of the Boston Transcript of February 23, 1885, containing the report of a lecture by Rev. Jo-THE WHEAT seph Cook, the famous clergy-EMPIRE man, whose sermons and lecever he went. He preached and lectured in many cit.es of the United States and Canada, and in the course of his travels visited Western, Canada in the latter part of the year 1884. In the course of the lecture in Boston in March, 1885, above referred to, which was largely taken up with an account of his visit to this country, he said: "It has been my fortune lately, in Manitoba and in British Columbia, to meet with experiences which have given me a new conception of the dignity of the Canadian Dominion. Conversing with a professor of a university, in the beautiful and energetic city of Winnipeg, while a map of North America was cpened before us, I put my compasses down, one fcot on St. Paul, and left the other swinging about the chart. 'Now,' said I to my informant,' how far north must I carry this loose foot of the compass to reach the furthest border of your good wheat lands?' 'You must carry it north,' said he, 'to the Peace River in Athabaska. On the barks of that stream the buffalo and their young may be seen feeding on grass on the 10th of May.' I opened the compasses until they reached the Peace River, some 1,500 miles north-west of St. Paul. I then swung the compasses around, and their northernmost point, when carried east, stood in the Atlantic ocean, and when carried to the south it stood in the Gulf. Incredible as the assertion may appear, there is more arable land north-west of St. Paul than east of it. Our American Consul at Winnipeg, the Hon. Mr. Taylor, told me that he is accustomed to divide North America into three belts—the cotton belt, the maize belt, and wheat belt—and that, in his judgment, three-quarters of the wheat belt lies north of the international line." That was a bold speech to a Boston audience twenty-five years ago. It must be confessed that there were thousands of Canadians then who did not realize that three-quarters of the wheat area of this country lies north of the international line. The world at large is aware of the fact now.

In an address to the Canadian Club, of Toronto, during the past month, the Dominion Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Fisher, who has charge of the THE GROWTH work of taking the census, said OF POPULAthat there will be 8,000,000 of us by the time the census of 1911 is TION taken, and that in thirty years the population of Canada will be 30,000,000. the first calculation the element of uncertainty hardly enters. It is surely a safe prediction that the census to be taken the year after next will show that there are then 8,000,000 people in the Lominion. Population is coming in at the rate required to reach that total in 1911, and two mil-Lon or more of that total will be in Western Canada. There is hardly more room for doubt that the other 12,000,000 or more will be added in the course of the next thirty years. The history of this continent shows that in the course of every generation during the past hundred years a new empire has been added to the already peopled portion. A century ago the population of the United States had not spread beyond Pennsylvania. In Lincoln's time Illinois was far West. Wave after wave bearing millions of settlers to homesteads in regions previously uninhabited save by the aborigines rolled onward towards the Pacific. All the West of the continent is now occupied except the last West, which is in Canada, and to this last West the movement of population is coming in ever increasing streams.

There are all the indications of an unprecedented inflowing of settlers into Western Canada this year. The land offices in the three Prairie Pro-THIS YEAR'S applicants for homesteads. One NEWCOMERS feature of this invasion, and certainly not t'e least pleasing feature, is the certainty that great numbers of settlers from the Western States will be among this year's newcomers. The activity which in the last two generations opened up Illinois, Kansas, Iowa, the Dakotas and the Pacific States is now being turned in full stream to this country. The railways report that there will be a greater movement across the international line this year than ever before. When we remember that last year 58,000 settlers came across the line, we may confidently look forward to an inrush this year that will be of great advantage to the development of our coun-From Europe also, and especially from Great Britain, there are indications that the immigration in 1909 will surpass anything heretofore known.

The announcement that already $46,000,000 has been spent on the part of the National Transcontinental which is between Winnipeg and Moncton RAILWAY DE- is one to make Canadians, to say nothing of the rest of the VELOPMENT world, realize how this country is forging ahead. This great work of constructing a new ocean-to-ocean high-way across Canada is being carried on for the most part in regions remote from general knowledge. The line from Winnipeg to Fort William is to be ready for use by September next. That will mean that the capacity of "the spouts of the West" will be four times what it was when this era of railway expansion started less than ten years ago. At that time there was just one line of tracks from Winnipeg to Lake Superior, the single track of the Canadian Pacific. Since then the Canadian Pacific line has been double-tracked, the Canadian Northern line has been built, and now the Grand Trunk line is to be ready for the next harvest. Four lines, instead of one, and all of them reaching inland to Edmonton, and most of the new construction opening up new fertile areas.

only a trifle over one-half of one per cent. of the tillable land of that Province UNREALIZED has as yet been brought under POSSIBILITIES cultivation. Alberta alone, without encroaching upon the acreage required for the production of coarser grains, is capable of producing a volume of wheat equal to that at present being produced by the whole of the United States. This is just one way of stating the impossibility of estimating the enormous potentialities of Western Canada. It is also one way of stating the importance of the continuance of an aggressive immigration policy, in order to secure the development of those enormous potentialities. Care should certainly be taken in the selection of immigrants. Elements which cannot be assimilated, and those unlikely to become capable of wisely exercising the powers of self-government should be rigidly excluded. But from the Germanic and Scandinavian countries as well as from the British Isles and the United States, a constant and ever-growing inflow of settlers should be secured. Our own and kindred races only, and not any others, white or yellow, should hold these vast

The Province of Alberta produced over 33,000,-

An English paper, the London Standard has been reviving a complaint that has no real life in it, though it is heard of once in a while. It is "CANADIAN" that our neighbors to the south monopolize the word "American," which belongs al-AND "AMERICAN" so to Canada. And to Mexico, as well, it may be added, to say nothing of the American countries south of Mexico. Says the American countries south of Mexico. Says the Standard: "If the United States formed the country of the nineteenth century, Canada will surely prove the country of the twentieth. population is already greater than was that of its southern neighbor at the beginning of the last century, and it has actually received a greater number of immigrants in a single week than were landed in the United States during a whole year at the beginning of the nineteenth century." almost unquestionably true but does not bear particularly upon the argument that Canadians should dispute with the people of the United States over the word "American." Usage is the law of lang-uage; and the usage by which the word "Amerimeans a citizen of the country to the south was primarily a usage that grew up in Great Britain. The Standard calls upon Canadians to invent an adequate and correct adjective" for the United States. Canadians are, and will continue to be, too busy to bother about anything of the kind. One of the Toronto papers some fifteen years ago invented the term "United Stateser" to denote an American, and labored to get it into general use. But it was wasted effort, as any such effort is hound to be. Let the Americans continue to be known as Americans. The people of this country are proud to be known as Canadians, and would exchange the name for no other.

A young man named Andrew Dietner, a Canadian of German descent, living near Berlin, On-tario, recently engaged to work for a farmer out in Nebraska. He was on his

A MISTAKEN way there when he was stopped

YOUNG MAN at Detroit and turned back, under the alien labor law of the United States. During the same week of the past month twelve Canadians were similarly turned back at Detroit. The question is, why should Andrew Dietner, or any other young farmer, want to go to Nebraska, or any other of the States? If he wants to take his skill, experience and industry to the best market, he should come to Western Canada. Why should a young Ontario farmer, who feels the call to new fields, want to go to Nebraska, when a whole half continent richer than that Western State ever was calls him into the West of his own country? Why should he subject himself to the indignity of being "turned back" at Detroit, when by reading the despatches in the newspapers of the same day that he suffered that affront he would have learned that hundreds of Nebraska farmers are trekking across the border to settle on Canadian wheat lands? He should read the papers, and keep tab on the opportunities that his own land offers. If he goes to Nebraska, he will merely get in at the tail end of the procession and take the dust of those who are teaming their goods and chattels back across the border into the great agricultural area of the future. Why follow? Why not get into the van of the movement?

Canadian inventive genius and enterprise are helping very conspicuously to hasten the day when navigation will become a practical reality in the service of the purposes of CANADIAN INVENTIVENESS travel and transportation, A young Canadian, J. D. McCurdy, has been making flights in a machine of his own devising, which he has kept in the air for half an hour at a time, under perfect control, while travelling at a rate of close upon a mile a minute. He is working at his invention in Nova Scotia, in company with the veteran Dr. Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, who in his old age is devoting himself enthusiastically to the problems of aerial navigation. Canadians take just pride in the inventive genius that gave the world the telephone and has assisted in many less familiar improvements and advances. It is satisfactory that in the new field of aerial navigation the inventors of Canada are keeping in the front rank of the world's advancement.

United States silver is common in every border community in this country, and indeed throughout Canada generally. The announcement was recently made by the Minister of Finance at Ottawa that it is the intention of the Dominion Government to renew the former arrangement with the banks by which United States silver was deported from Canada. The Canadian who gets United States silver in his small change every day is apt to get a little hot when he recalls his experience across the border, where Canadian silver and bills do not pass current. He knows that Canadian silver coin is every bit as good as that of the United States le is convinced that the banks which issue bills in Canada are a good deal more secure than those of the United States; and it is no wonder that he gets annoyed when he comes face to face with a condition in which his country's money is refused, while United States money is freely accepted in Canada. In these days of diplomatic negotiations between the two countries it ought not to be impossible to arrange some definite plan between the Governments of the two countries under which the money of each Government would be good for its face value in both countries; but if that is impossible the next best plan is the deporting of the United States silver from Canada.

That was a piece of excellent advice by the Eishop of London to the girls in a fashionable school in the West End, as reported in the cable A BISHOP ON "THE within the past fortnight.
"Never be cats," he said. dispatch in the newspapers

"There is the greatest difference in the world between an old maid and an old cat." There is, indeed. The old maid, at her best, is one of the best and finest of human creatures; but the "old cat," be she maid, wife or widow, is one of the most despicable. The Bishop of London told his schools; and one of the the of London told his schoolgirl audience that the curse of the fashionable was "the prevalence of a catty spirit." The cat—in some respects an estimated ble animal-will sit up for hours by a hole, waiting for a mouse. She might be otherwise employed, but she prefers to crouch and watch for some relpless victim. The "old cat" against whom the Bishop of London spoke sits likewise on the watch, intent on tearing her neighbors' reputations to pieces. She may do it crudely, or, like the skilful tabby, with a graceful sweep of velvet talon. Yet she is an old cat, nevertheless, deserving always to

"He is Risea" "Monthly" reaches its readers the glory of the Pascal morn will once more be flooding the earth. There are disputes about the exact date of our Lord's birth, but none about the anniversary of His ressurection.

Coming as it did at the time of the famous passover feast it was a date easily and generally recorded. me it has always been a most wonderful thought that centuries afterwards we look up into the Easter sky and see the same flood of moonlight that bathed the ancient city of Jerusalem and the garden of Gethsemane on the eventful night of our Lord's betrayal; that lighted the Roman soldiers as they guarded his tomb and the pathway of our risen Lord as he passed from that tomb through the garden out into the world of men and women; thus removing forever from the christian believers of all time the 'sting of death".

Is it any wonder that on Easter Sunday morning there is no hymn that rings so joyously as:

"Christ the Lord is risen today Sons of men and angels say.

Vain the stone, the watch, the seal. Christ hath burst the gates of hell; Death in vain forbids His rise Christ hath opened Paradise."

As we watch the Easter morn this year let us revel in the assurance that because "He" has risen, we may rise also and not only from physical but also from moral death. Easter, quite as much as New Year, is a time of beginnings, of new hopes and new aspirations. To all readers of this column I would give the Easter greeting that throughout the first centuries was the common greeting of the church on Easter morning "He is risen"

It is always with a Poultry certain amount of diffidence that I mention this subject because of not eing a practical dairy woman, but during the month I had an opportunmy of a long talk with that very successful and very practical poultry-raiser, Mrs. A. Cooper, of Treesbank. After years of experience Mrs. Cooper pins her faith to Barred Rocks and and her record at the various spring shows is one to be proud of. Personally I felt very proud of her, the I hursday evening of the Brandon Winter Fair, when she was the only woman called forward to receive a cup she had won. The thousands of spectators greeted her most heartily. The cup was a very handsome one and well worth winning. In chatting with Mrs. Cooper, she told me that she is devoting herself almost exclusively to raising fowls for breeding purposes and is finding it very profitable, as the demand for breeding stock is growing all over the Canadian West and people are finding it more satisfactory to secure home bred birds than to pay higher prices abroad for birds that may die during the process of becoming acclimatized. She does not, however, recommend new beginiers to go in for expensive breeding stock, stating that it requires very considerable experience before it is safe to venture into this line. She does, however, recommend the keeping of chickens to every woman on the farm, stating that with ordinary care they can be made to pay and pay well, and that not the least valuable thing about poultry is the fact that at intervals which amount to several hours a day, it would keep the woman of the house out on the open air, with an occupation that will entirely remove their minds from the daily round of dish-washing, etc., and give them new thoughts about many things. Mrs. Cooper was good enough to say that if any woman required more information along poultry lines she was quite welcome to write her at Treesbank, Man., and she would be pleased to give her any counsel or help in her power. She pointed out that poultry raising was more profitable, and much less laborious than butter making and required a considerably smaller capital to start

The author of "Sowing Seeds in Dan-Nellie L. McClung. was a visitor in Winnipeg for a couple of weeks in the month of March, and all who met with her were charmed with her modest and unassuming manner. It is not given to everyone who has produced a successful book to carry their honors so modestly. In the course of a chat I had with her one Sunday afternoon she admitted that she was hard at work on another book and that she was endeavoring to develop the character of Pearly Watson still further. What interested me more, however, was that she would give us something more about "Martha Perkins". All who have read the book will remember the toilworn girl whom the Motherwell's wanted their son to marry because she was such a wonderful worker, and how when she went to the party she did not know what to do with her hands. There are so many "Martha Perkins'" in real life that I am sure every reader could pick one, if not two in their own neighborhood. Like Martha of old they are "careful and troubled about many things". They are apt to be despised by society, but how much of the hard work of the world is done by them and how little they know of joy—I am sure every reader of "Danny" will be mad to learn more of "Martha Per-

The Children's something more about this muchneeded institution when it was once under way. It is equipped and running and has no lack of little patients.

My last notice about it has borne fruit, as already more than one woman has written to this column for details about what would be the most useful things to send from the country. For the benefit of those who are anxious for further information let me say they should apply direct to the secretary, Mrs. W. S. Grant, Wardlow Avenue, Fort Rouge, Winnipeg, and she will be able to give them lists of things most urgently needed. In Winnipeg on Easter Saturday scores of girls and young women will have tiny stalls in many of the downtown stores and will sell Easter boquets for the benefit of the hospital. The appeal of childhood in need will always be the strongest appeal in the world.

Dr. Grenfell

One of the great events of the month in Winnipeg was the visit of the famous Labrador missionary, Dr. Grenfell. In the West in common with all new countries the struggle for life is very arduous and people grow to live in the market place and material gain looms so large on the horizon as to blot out almost every other aim in life. It is good, therefore, to be brought face to face occasionally with a man of great and brilliant gifts who is devoting, time, medical skill and literary shility, not to his own advancement but to the betterment of the lives of others on one of the harshest frontiers of the world. Doing this with a simplicity that should bring the blush of shame to everyone who in the past has been wont to mention with any degree of pride the good deeds they have done. Those who have read "Doctor Luke of Labrador" and "Dr. Grenfell's Parish" by dor", and "Dr. Grenfell's Parish" by Norman Duncan will have some idea of the character of the work Dr. Grenfell is engaged in, for, those books though not biographical were almost wholly inspired by the wonderiul work on the Labrador coast. Winnipeg audiences had not only the great pleasure of listening to the man himself, but of having brought before them very vividly by means of the beautifully colored lantern slides the varied activities in which he and his helpers are engaged. To women, the pictures of the trained nurses who have volunteered for work in his hospitals were of special interest. Such strong grand faces and the tribute Dr. Grenfell paid them was such as to make every woman in the great audiences glow with pride to think she belonged to the same sex. There is to be a Grenfell association in the West and I hope to tell my readers more about it in a later issue.

We have hard times here in our Canadian West, but, our worst times seem ease when compared with the lives of those on the Labrador coast and it seems fitting that the prosperous and splendidly endowed Northwest should make some systematic effort to help the less fortunate Northeast of Canada.

I do not suppose that Spring many of my readers have as yet bought spring hats. All the big city stores have had their millinery openings and a great many hats have been ordered, as is the custom where hundreds of hats must go out from one workroom and if you want to have an Easter hat you need to order it early in February and cannot always be sure of it even then. One advantage of these early openings is the fact that it gives the writers of fashion pages a chance to see what is likely to be worn and to give their readers due notice as to the best in shapes, colors and modes of dec-

The shapes this season Shades are very striking and many of them exceedingly ugly, but fortunately there are a sufficient number of pretty shapes to give every woman a chance of a hat that will suit her face and her purse.

The leading shapes for spring are nearly all on turban or helmet lines though there are a sprinkling of huge flat hats with small crowns, which so far as I have been able to judge are not becoming to any woman, tall or short, thin or fat, old or young. They are to be avoided with care by the woman who has to drive for the hat pins have not been invented that would keep them on the head in a wind.

In talking with leading milliners who have been much abroad or in New York, I find that there is a very well established idea that later in the season small hats and even bonnets with strings will be fashionable.

Just at present the hats which are called small are really large, they are only small in comparison. Three shapes are to be recommended among the smaller hats: these are the bowler turban, the Spanish turban and the Helmet of Navarre. bowler turbans are very much the shape of a wooden butter bowl inverted, and off the head are the ugliest thing imaginable, but on many heads, please remember I do not say al are smart and becoming. They are of the order of the little girl with the curl in the middle of her forehead, for when they are good, they are very, very good and when they are bad they are very horrid indeed. They are only to be worn by women with plenty of hair of their own, or of someone elses. If worn with the hair done close to the head they invariably create the impression of an old-fashioned candle with the extinguisher put on.

The Spanish turban is on the lines which have always been recognized as turban, only the bands are very high and the crowns extremely large. They are usually made of fancy braids on wire shapes, do not require much additional trimming, are very comfortable on the head and are very generally becoming.

The helmet of Navarre is a hat as nearly on the lines of the helmet worn by the famous "Henry of Navarre" as it is possible for anything modern to be and the decorations whether they be plumes, wings, flowers, or ribbon, are arranged to carry out the idea of the "white plumes of Navarre". This shape is made up in both the dress and tailored effects and with either it is good and generally becoming.

Dutch bonnets are shown among cut with the horse-shoe opening be-of ribbon that may either be tied under the chin or allowed to hang down behind. Or there is the little Dutch bonnet coming close round the face and with large bunches of either ribbon or flowers above the cars. This style is very chic for ound fresh complexioned young girls, but older women should be very careful in selecting it, as it is trying and if not wholly suited to the face is very apt to emphasize age and wrinkles.

The leading colors this spring are blue, along the Colors Delf shades, old rose, canard, a shade between old rose and mahogany, prunelle, mulberry, Catawba, three shades along the line of purple or violet, rust brown and black and white. The purple shades are very popular, they are along the reddish lines, but should be chosen with care as they are very trying to anyone with a hint of yellow in their complexion.

All black hats, elaborately decorated with or entirely made of jet are very popular and combinations of black and white are especially good.

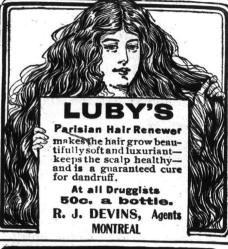

It is a flower year from Flowers start to finish and it is impossible to have too many flowers. Roses and poppies are almost the only large flowers shown but there is an endless profusion of small flowers, especially the old English field and garden flowers, pansies, buttercups, daisies, cowslips, wallflowers, evening primroses, batchelor buttons, morning glories are all shown and it is not extreme to find half a dozen varieties on one hat with a big rose or a big poppy along with them. It does not sound artistic but the milliners manage to make it look that way which is after all the main thing. Roses when they are worn are either, very large, or the tiny tea roses in pink or yellow, used in great clusters.

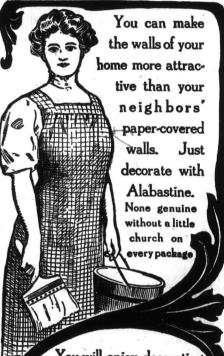

ornaments take Ornaments the form of cabuchons or great square buckles or pins with enormous heads and jet is the leading thing of which ornaments are made. Some of the jet cabuchons measure nine inches across but they are not considered correct by people of good taste. used with light colors and flowers is very effective, however and when not overdone is one of the smartest combinations of the season.

As has already been Materials hinted it is a season of hand made shapes and the braids used are almost a trimming in themselves, particularly what is known as taggle braid Chiffon is returning to favor and tulle is extensively used. Ribbons are also used to a considerable extent and are the liberty sating the control of the co ril bons in pastel shades. Touches of velvet in either harmonizing or contrasting colors are seen on almost everything. For example a Spanish turban of champagne straw was decorated with a coil of mulberry velvet and a bird of paradise feather caught with a buckle of dull gold inlaid with pale green ename! and brilliants.

A bowler turban made entirely of blue cornflowers shading from light the early styles. These are along two to dark was finished with a twist of lines. There is the large flaring shape deep blue velvet caught with handsae jet cabuchons

These descriptions will give some idea of the combinations being worn.

Several of the larger houses showed spring suits with the Suits hats and it proved a very popular idea. I would say to the girl who buys a suit this spring with the intention of wearing it next fall to get what is known as the three-piece suit. That is a dress in either princess or empire effect with a long semi-fitting coat. These suits are decidedly the newest thing now and will be more likely to be in the lead next fall than the skirt and coat alone.

The materials in suits this year are decidedly lighter in weight than has been the case for some years. Many suits are made of voile over silk and this is a decided innovation as no attempt to produce voile in tailored effects has been seen heretofore. The result is good in appearance but whether it would be serviceable is a question.

Black satin coats smartly Satin tailored are among the nov-Coats elties of the season and are both handsome and serviceable. They are made of a heavy weight satin and usually lined with white or very light mauve or blue so that they may be worn over light gowns without soiling them. are made either perfectly plain or trimmed with narrow silk braid or soutache. They are three-quarter length and semi-fitting and when worn over a plain grey, pale blue, catawba, or olive green gown, they are most effective.

For very dressy wear and the hot summer time lace Lace coats are going to be very popular. They come in white, black and champagne and are either lined with thin satin or are entirely unlined, the latter being the more They come in Battenburg popular. and Irish crochet and are machine made, but so good an imitation of hand-made lace that it would be difficult to tell the difference at a little distance. Some may be interested in the relative price of these coats and I might say that a very handsome one can be got in either black or white from $20 upward. The advantage of a coat of this description is that it can be worn in the hottest weather over a very thin wash gown and give it an air of great elegance or it can be worn in cooler weather over a plain silk or wool gown and do equally good service. The white ones are casily cleaned at home. They should not be washed but allowed to soak for a day or so in gasoline, then for a day or so in gasoline then squeezed out very dry and hung out in the sun and wind until the odor leaves them.

April's Sunbeam.

Daisy murmured, sleepy and surly: "Spring's too young yet—the air is

I don't believe in a sun so early-He's just playing at April fool."

Uncertain Charm.

"There is a lot of excitement in running an automobile," remarked the cheerful citizen. "Yes," answered the man who smells of gasoline, "it gives life the charm of uncertainty. You never know whether you are going to be late for dinner or early at the emergency hospital."

Novelties for the Easter Table.

A Bunny Place-Card.

As the Easter season rolls around once more the hostesses turn their attention again to spring luncheons and parties with appropriate and timely novelties for table decorations. Bunnies in all shapes and sizes always figure prominently in their ideas for centre-pieces, place-cards, etc., and the illustration, a place-card, shows an original touch in the three little bunnies peering through a bor-der of daffodils. The card measures five inches by seven, and the upper part, being quite free of illustration, affords space for a name, a quotation or a greeting. In copying this design paint the Bunnies in natural shades of brown, the long, stiff leaves of the daffodils a light green, and the blossoms that peep in between in their own beautiful yellow tints.

A new idea for a souvenir or a place-card for Easter was simply made of a large visiting-card with gilded edges, on it rested a nest of myrtle which was fastened here and there by a few stitches of white silk thread. In this myrtle basket rested an Easter egg made by cutting a walnut in halves and removing the meat. The shells were painted white, and on the top half in gold letters was written: "Easter and the year." An Easter quotation or poem was tucked inside, the nut closed and it was tied with green baby-ribbon and laid in the myrtle nest.

For her first spring violet luncheon every girl wants something in the way of decoration new and prettier than she had last year. Well, here's a dessert secret, which even in imagination calls up a dainty, appetizing picture. Serve the ice cream, which should be all white—in bricks—on green glass plates. Sprinkle candied violets here and there, with one or two very small natural leaves over the top. The brick should rest on a mat of natural leaves.

Eggshell flower-holders for an Easter table were made by cutting an oval out of the side of some eggs, the contents removed and the shells dried. Then these cut edges were gilded and a butterfly or a spray of flowers painted on the side of each These little cups were then mounted on small pieces of Bristolboard.

The Easter colors, white and gold, may be beautifully combined on a dining-table at a very slight expense. From the chandelier suspend, say twelve white ribbon-ends for a party of twelve people, and tie each one around a gilt egg, bearing the name of a guest. These are to be placed at the several plates. A centrepiece of white flowers and ferns, in a crystal vase, together with yellow-shaded candles, completes this simple but SOUTHCOTT SUIT CO., London, Ont. effective table decoration.

Novel souvenirs of a spring luncheon are toast cards made of leather. Purchase a sheet of leather-board—a thick, leather-colored cardboard sold at the artists' supply shops-and cut it into pieces four inches square with beveled edges. Then provide the same number of pieces of brown Bristol-board seven inches square. Sketch in poker work or brown ink on each of the leather squares a girl's head, and beneath it a toast such as one sees on the brass medallions sold in the shops; or, better still, originate a verse or two suitable to the friends who are to receive these little gifts. Then mount the light squares upon the dark ones, exactly in the centre. Attach hangers of cord or narrow strips of leather and you have a group of presents that are unique and most inexpensive.

An inexpensive candelabra, one that makes an original and pretty ornament for a spring party-table, was made of a branch or short limb of a tree. Choose a tree of any kind with four or six fairly heavy branches. Drill holes in these branches for common-sized candles after cutting the branches about eighteen inches from the trunk, which should measure twenty inches from the bottom to the first branch. Drill three holes twelve inches from the bottom and insert twigs an inch and a half in diameter, which will serve for sup-ports. For decoration use garlands of evergreens and spring blossoms twisted around the branches, the trunk and the supports.

An "Easter tree" is a charming conceit for an Easter table centrepiece. The foundation is a small shrub of any kind, provided it is of good foliage and a deep green. It should be embedded in sand in a white or green jardiniere, with tulle and ferns arranged at its base. On its branches should be hung grace-fully a number of dark green cones, one for each cover laid. These cones are formed of six leaf-shaped sections, wide in the centre and tapering to a point at each end. Each section is two inches across at the widest part and nine inches long. The material used may be crepe paper, but soft China silk is preserable, as the paper is liable to tear and thus destroy the effect.

The sections for each cone are sew-ed neatly together at the base and one-third of the distance up, leaving two thirds of the petals free. A white Easter lily is slipped into each cone, and the green silk petals are brought up lightly over the lily and inclosing it: the green petals are held in place with green baby-ribbon run through slits cut in the upper point of each silk petal. The lower part of the green cone is securely fastened to the stem of the lily with twine. The cones are now attached securely to the tree by the lily stem, the fastening hidden under little sprays of smilax or fern. One end of the ribbon attached to each cone hangs down and runs to each cover, where it is fastened, under a jaunty bow, to the neck of a Bunny.

At a signal the guests pull their ribbons lightly, detaching them from the cones and loosening the petals so as to disclose the lilies within. sure the ribbon run through the green petals is held so lightly that the pull will act promptly. The China silk is so soft and light that the merest touch will hold the petals together so have the slits large and the lily securely fastened to the tree.

Such a case is that of Mrs. D. McGillivary, of Nanton, Alberta, who cured her two children with D.D.D., and is glad to tell others about it. She wrote on September 3rd last:

Five Pretty Easter Gifts.

A Handy Little Handkerchief-Holder.

One of the many well-planned devices for carrying handkerchiefs in a grip or a trunk is the one illustrated below. The original of this design was made of two pieces of cardboard, each one measuring three inches and a half square, this would make a charming and inexpensive Easter gift, acceptable to any admirer of dainty possessions, and the making should not require more than an evening or two of pleasant work.

A Good Design for a Booklet.

The next idea, planned for an Easter or really any-time gift, is the ttractively-designed booklet illustrated below. The method of making the leaves is simply the usual way of using sheets of white notepaper, piercing three holes through, all at the left-hand side ready for a cord. The cover for this booklet is a rather heavy grade of green cardboard, pierced at the left-hand side like the inside sheets. The decorations are somewhat unusual, being made of white crepe paper. It was an easy matter to trace the outline of some large letters seen in an advertisement, cut out the pattern and apply it to the crepe paper. Very thin mucilage was used in applying the letters and the clover leaf, first to a letter cut out of stiff white paper and then to the cardboard, and only a gentle pressure was needed to make it stick, the paper being soft. Be careful not to press out the crinkles. here and there and a fine line of gold paint all around the edges made a surprisingly good effect with its color scheme in green, gold and white. The cord used was harmonious in a deeper shade of green.

Two Popular and Serviceable Sachets.

Either one of these pretty sachets is worth the making and the having -the long, narrow one made of Swiss trimmed with feather-stitching, or the square one made of linen with a hemstitched border. It happens that both are filled with the ever-fragrant lavender flowers, showing that that tical value for the reason that the covers may be laundered and the perfume renewed at any time. On the under side of each at one end the muslin is finished with a narrow hem that is fastened with just a few stitches so that it may be easily opened.

A Portfolio for Large Magazines.

For keeping periodicals which are square or long in shape, for music or for a collection of prints, a large portfolio is almost a necessity, and it is usually a difficult matter to find just the right size in the shops. The only alternative, therefore, is to make one of desired measurements. The one illustrated shows a very good

The leaves and stems of the design were outlined with India ink. A novel idea for the enlargement of the folio, so that it will hold any number of pages, is the strip of red satin attached to the covers. It measures about six inches wide, and has four casings on it at even distances apart. Red ribbons are run through these casings, drawn, and tied in bows, or loosened so as to widen the back when the necessity arises.

Mr. John C. Harris, a prosperous young farmer of Chambersburg N. Y., went to bed last Thursday night feeling at well as usual. Next morning his wife found him dead in bed beside her! Was it murder? Yes and no. No, because he died from so-called natural causes—yes, because for months he'd known that he had heart disease, and that sudden death might come from the least over-exertion, or by sleeping on his left side, and this last proved too true! And yet this bright, intelligent young man, with everything to live for, wouldn't listen to reason—either to his doctor or to the earnest pleadings of his wife to do something. "It don't amount to anything," he'd say, "only a little palpitation, It's my stomach, I think. It will go away of itself." But delay cost his life! Was not this self-murder?

This case is only one; sixty thousand people die yearly of Heart Disease! Six in every ten have it. Many don't know it, they think it's something else and doctor the stomach, ple die yearly of Heart Disease! Six in every ten have it. Many don't know it, they think it's something else and doctor the stomach, kidneys, female organs, etc., and get no better; and a good many who do know think it can't be cured. Now Heart Disease is just as curable as any other disease; we have proved this fully by curing over a hundred and thirty thousand cases! Many of these were the most chronic, serious, complicated kind, in which all other remedies and doctors had failed, and hope seemed gone, but our treatment cured them quickly and to stay cured! In very many cases of Heart Disease the Nerves and Stomach are affected also, and in such it is useless to treat the heart alone, and one reason why our treatment cures is because it sets the stomach right, removes constipation, steadies and revitalizes the nerves and builds up the whole system, besides strengthening, controlling and curing the heart. We can cure YOU! no matter how bad off, and to prove it we will send you by mail, postpaid, without any conditions, without any restrictions, and without any cost, a regular full-size treatment of Dr. Fuller's Heart and Nerve Cure, and his illustrated book with which you will know your own case as well as any doctor. Both are free.

Understand this is not a "sample" or "trial," but a regular full size treatment. Neither is it a C. O. D. scheme or anything of the kind, nothing but a fair, square chance for you to fully test this grand treatment for yourself, in your own home, without cost. If you have one of the symptoms, Nervousness, Trembling, Twitching or Nightmare, Palpitation, Fluttering or Skipping Beats of the heart, Short Breath, Fainting, Smothering, Choking, Numb or Shoulder-blade, your heart and nerves are surely wrong! Sheep for Mutton

The following pointed observations of Professor Curtis, Iowa, on raising sheep for mutton show what constitutes a good mutton sheep. First let there be pronounced masculinity in the male and femininity in the female. Sheep should be neither sexless nor character-They should bear the stamp and character of the breed they represent. This breed character is a mark of good blood, and it should be manifest in no unmistakable manner. The sire should be distinctly the head of the flock in every sense of the word. To meet these requirements he must have good con-stitutional and vital powers. Without these no animal is fit to head a herd or flock. In selecting a sire look first at the head. If deficient there, look no farther, but reject at once. Insist on a head that faces you holdly, with a wide face, a clear prominent eye, and a

That the poultry industry of Canada is growing in proportions that are not realized by farmers in general, is proven by the following figures compiled by Prof. F. C. Elford, of Macdonald College.

The Canadian year book shows a total increase of poultry during the 10 years 1891-1901 to have been a little over 3,800,000 head. Taking the same percentage of yearly increase to have continued to the present and Canada has today 22 million head of poultry. Granting that 2-3 of these are laying hens and we have about 14,700,000 producing eggs. According to the same authority each hen in 1901 laid seven dozen eggs and the total sale of eggs gave a gross annual revenue to the country of nearly

The Toxin of Baldness.

A crystalline body which he calls trichotowin is regarded by Dr. Delos S. Parker as an active agent in producing baldness. It is carried in the blood, being chiefly produced in the lungs, and it can be detected in the exhaled air. The fact that females—who breathe more fully—are less affected with baldness than males is cited as evidence supporting the theory. It is concluded that persons who are losing their hair should practice breathing exercises, and the investigation seems to have shown further that ordinary turpentine

The Busy Bee.

With the coming of Spring, the busy season for beekeepers begins.

The long sleep of winter is over for the bees, and the first genial day of the month begins to make them active.

This is usually the time to remove colonies from the cellar—say the last of the month of April—but great caution shoud be exercised in so doing, or great loss of brood will follow.

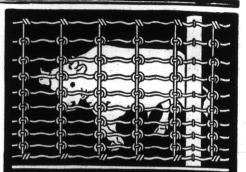

It is a safe plan to wait until the maples and pussy-willows are in bloom before bringing the colonies out of their winter quarters, as there will hardly be anything upon which they can work before this time.

Long and disastrous experience has proven the folly of placing colonies outof-doors without some extra protection from the variable weather that prevails at this season, and a neglect of this precaution results in spring dwindling of colonies and certain loss of honey

Perhaps the easiest and best plant is to place over every colony removed from the cellar an extra hive body, containing a sack of chaff or shavings, or even old newspapers, and then tack a piece of building paper around the four sides of all.

Then contract the entrance, and if the colony is in even fair condition when so prepared, no fear need be felt for its safety.

Don't be too anxious to open your colonies until a warm day will permit, for more broods are chilled and lost from the careless opening of hives in

The Fence That Saves Expense

One of the reasons why PEERLESS Woven Wire Fence is better than other fences is because of the PEERLESS lock. cold weather than from almost any other cause.

Where colonies have died in the cellar, be sure to place their combs out of reach of the live bees outdoors, or else a bad case of robbing will follow.

Brush all dead bees off these combs and out of the hive, and the hives and combs can be used for hiving new swarms which will usually be of sufficient number to make up for winter

Where colonies have been wintered out of doors, leave them alone until next month, with possibly the exception of removing out of danger hives in which the colonies have perished.

Poot Notes.

The success of a beekeeper is not measured by the number of colonies kept, but by the surplus secured.

Twenty-five hives, giving a surplus of fifty pounds each, are more profitable than 300 hives and no surplus.

The best form of sweet for either old or young is honey, because it is practically predigested, and is restful to the digestive organs. God created bees to store honey, and for several thousand years honey was the principal diet in the line of sweets, long before a sugar refinery was even thought of.

An extractor is of great value even to the producer of comb-honey. When the season is over the unfinished sections can be extracted and the empty sections saved and placed on the hives the following spring. If a colony run for comb-honey persists in swarming, the super of sections can be removed and an extracting super given to it, which will hold the colony together, and me honey may be extracted at the close of Extracted honey, if brought to a temperature of not over 160 degrees Fahrenheit, bottled and sealed while hot. will usually, if kept in a uniformly warm temperature, keep liquid for a year or more. But there is a great differnce in honey. Some will candy much more quickly than others. Cold atmosphere is quite favorable to candying of both extracted and comb-honey. Cellars and cold rooms, especially when subject to freezing, are poor places for honey. In melting candied extracted honey, the temperature should not go above 160 degrees, otherwise the fine flavor will in a large measure, be destroyed. The usual way is to place the vessel of candied honey in another large receptacle containing hot water.

Proving by Actual Experiment

This experiment will always interest the children, and will provoke a good deal of thinking. The explanation, of course, is that the lighted piece of paper which is inserted into the inverted glass drives out most of the air, so that when the mouth of the glass is quickly put down into the water there is very little air, and consequently very little pressure above the water within the glass. Hence, the weight of the pressure of the air on the water outside the glass drives the water up into the glass. A practical demonstration of this kind is always more convincing than any mere statement. This is particularly true of medical remedies.

The effect of the anti-toxin treatment for diphtheria is noticeable within a few hours, so that everyone must believe in its virtue. In a similar way, the treatment known as ORANGE LILY gives a practical proof of the progress it is making in curing women's disorders, and that, too, within a few days after commencing its use.

is making in curing women's disorders, and that, too, within a few days after commencing its use.

All authorities agree that in every case of women's disorders there exists a congested condition of the womanly organs. The circulation in these parts is sluggish or stagnant, and the result is that the broken down tissue or waste matter which should be carried off if the blood was circulating freely, remains in these parts, causing inflammation, irritation, oppression of the nerves. etc. ORANGE LILY is not taken internally, but is applied direct to the suffering organs. It is absorbed into the circulation, and its antiseptic properties at once act on the waste matter referred to above. The consequence is that t' is waste matter, which is causing the inflammation, ulcers, nervous troubles, etc., begins to be discharged, and it continues to be discharged until all foreign matter is removed from the circulation. At the same time the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened, the nervous trouble disappears, the circulation is restored and good health follows.

Teronto, Ont, June 2, 1904.

Dear Mrs. Currah.—I wish to tell you that Orange Lily is doing me a great deal of good. Those ulcers come away one or two every week, and I have less pain and fewer headaches. I feel sure I will be perfectly cured in a little longer time.

MRS. D. S. T.

The explanation of the wonderful cures performed by Orange Lily is very apple. It is a scientific remedy, based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lissimple. It is a scientific remedy, based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister. The conditions existing in all female troubles are alike in character, differing in degree and development only, so that a positive remedy, as Orange Elly is, acts with all the certainty of a chemical experiment. In order to convince every suffering woman that Orange Lily will cure her, I make the following.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

I will send without charge, to every reader of this notice who suffers in any way from any of the troubles peculiar to women, if she will send me her address, enough of the ORANGE LILY treatment to last her 10 days. In many cases this trial treatment is all that is necessary to effect a complete cure, and in every instance it will give very noticeable relief. If you are sufferer you owe it to yourself, to your family and to your friends to take advantage of this offer, and get cured in the privacy of your home, without doctors' bills or expense of any kind.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

By Miss Pearl Mervin.

ANNOUNCEMENT -Those of our women readers who read the auto-sketch of Miss Merwin given in the form of an interview in our February issue will be glad to learn that we have made arangements with her whereby she will favor us with special articles from time to time on Domestic Economy with particular relation to the home seamstress, Miss Merwin is an associate editor for Mc Call's Magazine, and is a regular contributor for a number of the leading women's fashion magazines of the States-Editor.

Perhaps the chief and most immediate result of my investigation into the general subject of woman's education as it is today has been to establish in my mind the confirmed conviction that we are drifting rather too far away from the puritanic standards of our forefathers by emphasizing the ideal to the sacrifice of the practical.

Which shall predominate in woman's education, the culture studies or the practical? This is a question much discussed and one worthy the most earn-est thought of every woman. Much may be said in favor of each without necessarily detracting from the value of the other. In a word, the culture studies, those designated as the liberal arts by our colleges and universities-the languages, music, the arts and sciences are, of course, desirable but in this busy work-a-day world of ours, may be classed among the luxuries. The practical, the sometimes so-called bread-and-butter subjects, are abso-lutely essential and should be a part of every woman's equipment for life.

To be able to play and sing are desirable accomplishments, but no woman's education can be said to be complete with these alone. Two things the every-day woman must know-how to cook and how to sew. I would not be misunderstood as wishing to say one word in disparagement of the higher education for women, indeed I could not consistently do that and at the same time remain loyal to my own ideals. The point I would make is that the essentials should come first. The proverbial adage of "work first, then play" will illustrate my meaning. How often we witness the lamentable embarrassdites of her own household.

Every woman should be competent to be her own judge of her wearing apparel. Indeed, every woman, however she employ a dressmaker, then a know- professional modiste.

ledge of dressmaking will enable her to know for herself the prevailing styles, colors best adapted to her type, how her clothes should fit, and to direct the making of her gowns. Every woman should know how to make her own dresses. Even though she may not have to do her own sewing. This applies to women in general, the wealthy as well as those in moderate circumstances, and the value of such knowledge is being proven over and over again every day of our nves. If a woman knows how a dress ought to be made, she will know whether or not it has been correctly made after it comes to her from the dressmaker.

Since dressmaking has been classified into a science, the thinking and ambitious woman is no longer content with the knowledge just "picked up." She aspires to the ability to make or direct the making of her own wardrobe. The industrial schools are recognizing this fact and are giving this important subject a prominent place in their departments of Domestic Science.

Although she is one who obviously does not have to do so, it is said that Mrs. Victor Howard Metcalf, wife of the Secretary of the U. S. Navy, can make her own gowns, and she has the reputation of being one of the best cressed women in Washington society. She believes in wide scope for women's work, but thinks the beginning should be in the home. Though one may be ever so favorably environed now, she never knows when she may be thrown upon her resources. The history of so-ciety is a continual recital of instances where women are compelled suddenly and unexpectedly to earn their own liv-

THE GROWTH OF THE PATTERN IDEA Right there is where I got my clue. This weak point in our educational system that educates our girls' heads but neglects their hands c allenged my at-tention as a field well worthy my researches and effort to help strengthen. Moreover I thought I saw that it need not be altogether a labor of love. I had long noticed the growth of the various pattern services which has probably been, so far, the largest factor in helping to meet this condition of comparative-shall I be obliged to say ignorance on the part of the seamstress in the home, than any other one agency. I had also incidentally noticed the immense success attendant upon their work and consequently the rapid incrase in the number of concerns engaged in the manufacture of ready. made patterns, from the dear old days we witness the lamentable embarrass-ment of the over-educated, under-train-line—the Butterick service, the Standed young housewife who is unable to ard, McCall's, New Idea, Pictorial Re-even direct, much less perform the view, Paris Modes, Ladies' Home Journal, the Peerless and May Manton, among the popular priced patterns for the general trade. The Chinese Lily.

The Chinese lily is easily grown and really needs very little care when once The bulbs should not have sprouted, but should be firm and solid in order to develop their blossoms.

Put them in a shallow bowl or glass dish which is one-quarter full of pebbles asd a little gravel. Steady the bulbs by placing pebbles and little stones loosely about them and then fill the dish with water, and keep it full.

The lilliss do not need direct sunshine, but should have plenty of light. This treatment should give you plenty of beautiful white or yellow blossoms and fill your room with fragrance.

In this case the skirt is cut slightly

For warm weather dressy wear white linen either with bands of the same or of color is much liked and always is handsome, and for the simpler suits of white there are linen finished cotton fabrics that are in great favor and both smart and durable.

For the ten year size will be required 54 yards of material 24, 4 yards 32 or 31/4 yards 44 inches wide with 1/8 yard any width for the banding and collar. A Graceful Gown for Early Spring.

Early spring will see a great many gowns made after the manner of this one, both with and without coats to match. With coats they become available both for street and indoor wear and costumes of the sort will have great vogue. The design also is quite appropriate for cashmere and the lighter, thinner materials that are utilized

The pretty bodice garniture makes one of the newest features of fashion, and in this case it is made of the material combined with embroidered filet and is worn over a guimpe of thinner lace. One material could be used for both portions of the garniture, however, the outer one being trimmed in some effective way, and such combinations as cloth and satin, silk and velvet would be found effective.

Diamond Dyes

Spring Suggestions

It is so easy to dye with Diamond Dyes that there is really no excuse for any one's not having bright new Spring clothes for herself and the children.

And it is really fun to dye with Diamond Dyes. Here are some Spring suggestions:

Change the color of your last Summer's dress.

Change the color of any silk waist you have worn for some time.

Change the color of your ribbons.

Change the color of any light colored stockings that are faded.

Change the color of your suit that you never liked very well, and make it over into a pretty dress for the little girl.

Change the color of your husband's "second suit" and make it over for the Manufacturers of

"My Children Are Well Dressed.

"I used to worry so about how to dress my children well on our income, That was before I began using Diamond Dyes--now my children are well dressed because I learned what Diamond Dyes will do.

"Every Spring and Fall, I go over my husband's clothes and mine carefully, and select thethings that are a little worn and that will make over nicely; then I rip up and dye them bright new colors and they certainly could not be told from new. Diamond Dyes help us dress better, too.

"I have made all kinds of pretty things for the house by using Diamond Dyes—sofa pillows—draperies, etc. I could not keep house without them."

ELLEN F. SIMMONDS, Boston, Mass.

IMPORTANT FACTS ABOUT GOODS TO BE DYED!

Diamond Dyes are the Standard of the World and always give perfect results. You must be sure that you get the real Diamond Dyes and the kind of Diamond Dyes adapted to the article you intend to dye.

Beware of imitations of Diamond Dyes. Imitators who make only one find of dye claim that their initations will color Wool, Silk, or Cotton ("all fabrics") equally well. This claim is false, because no dye that will give the finest results on Wool, Silk or other animal fibres can be used as successfully for dying Cotton, Linen or other vegetable fibres. For this reason we make two kinds of Diamond Dyes, namely: Diamond Dyes for Wool, and Diamond Dyes for Cotton.

for Cotton.

Damond Dyes for Wool cannot be used for coloring Cotton, Linen, or Mixed Coods, but are especially adapted for Wool, Silk, or other animal fibres, which take up the dye quickly.

Diamond Dyes for Cotton are especially adapted for Cotton, Linen, or other fibres, which take up the dye s.owly.

"Mixed Goods, also known as "Union Goods" are made chicfly of either Cotton. Linen, or other vegetable fibres. For this reason our Diamond Dyes for Cotton are the best dyes made for these goods.

THOUGHTS FOR WOMEN.

FOR LOVE'S SAKE

(Requested).

Sometimes I'm tempted to murmur That life is flitting away, With only a round of trifles Filling each busy day— Dusting nooks and corners, Making the house look fair, And patiently taking on me The burden of woman's care.

Comforting childish sorrows, And charming the childish heart With the simple song and story, Told with a mother's art; Setting the dear home table, And clearing the meal away, And going on little errands In the twilight of the day.

One day is just like another! Sewing and piecing well Little jackets and trousers, So neatly that none can tell Where are the seams and joinings-Ah! the seamy side of life Is kept out of sight by the magic Of many a mother and wife!

And oft, when I'm ready to murmur That time is flitting away, With the selfsame round of duties Filling each busy day, It comes to my spirit sweetly, With the grace of a thought divine; You are living, toiling for love's sake, And the loving should never repine.

You are guiding the little footsteps In the way they ought to walk, You are dropping a word for Jesus In the midst of your household talk; Living your life for love's sake, Till the homely cares grow sweet-And sacred the self-denial Centerpiece With Crochetel Border.

Those who wish to provide some especially attractive gift for the holidays or for some friend who is about to become a housekeeper, will make no mistake in choosing a set of table-doilies, varying in size, with crocheted borders. The centers are made of satin damask, in some simple design like the bird'seye, snow-flake, etc., remnants of which may be picked up at a low price during "sales" at the large house-outfitting es-tablishments. Do not, I beg, el-vate your nose at mention of crocheted borders, for they are considered "quite the thing," and are being sold at stores catering to the best 'carriage trade' at fancy prices. Of course, they are made by experts with the crochet-needle, each stitch being evenly and carefully set; but they may be home-made for "next to nothing" and furnish most appropriate gifts. They are durable and launder perfectly, especially if a rather simple design is chosen, and may be worked directly on the mat of damask or on a chain of requisite length, joined, after which the border is sewed to the center.

Make first the center by striking a circle of desired size. Cut outside the line, allowing for a narrow or rolled hem. It is a pretty idea to work a row of brier-stitch just inside the hem, using coarse linen floss.

Either buttonhole the edge closely, if intending to work on the linen, or moke

Once More from The Great West

Comes Evidence of The Great Work Dodd's Kidney Pills are Doing.

FINDLAY, Man., Apr. 3rd. (Special).—Cyrille Maginel, a well known farmer living near here, furnishes further evidence of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing in the west.

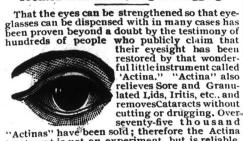

"I suffered from Rheumatism and Diabetes," Mr, Maginel says in telling the story of his cure. "My sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and I was tired and nervous all the time. I was treated by a doctor but he failed to cure me. Reading that Dodd's Kidney Pills were good for brick sediment in the urine, led me to try them, and after using twelve loxes I am as well as I can possibly be. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a new man of me and I am thankful."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no cure-all. They cure sick kidneys and that is all that is claimed for them. But sick kidneys are the root of numerous diseases caused by impure blood. For you can't have pure blood with sick kidneys. It is the work of the kidneys to strain the impurities out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Diabetes because it is a kidney disease; they cure Rheumatism because it is caused by sick kidneys failing to strain the uric acid out of the

The First Whistle of the Spring.

There are many strains of music That I now delight to hear, Instrumental, band and vocal All are wondrous sweet and clear; But when I was just a laddie, In the woods at early Spring From a chestnut twig I fashioned

A complete, entrancing thing; With my jack-knife deftly shaping Pounding till the bark would slip; When 'twas done the brook seemed laughing

As I gave the toy a dip; Then to eager lips I pressed it, Blew it, making woodlands ring Till the other boys came flocking To behold that wondrous thing.

Each in turn its music tested, Each in turn declared it fine, That first whistle of the Springtime With its melody divine.

Though the years since then are many And my locks are white with snow, To the woods with eager laddies In the first warm days I go, When the bluebirds flit before us And the happy robins sing From the twigs we gaily fashion The first whistle of the Spring.

The Garden Patch.

Those who do not plant a kitchen garden, even if only a few square feet are possible, miss a great deal of enjoyment that comes to the man who raises a few vegetables for his own table, and also miss that relaxation and exercise that caring for a garden brings. The richer the soil, the better, but almost any plot of ground available will do very satisfactorily. Plow or spade it, then harrow or rake until thoroughly pulverized. Furrow a part of it, making the rows two or three feet apart, and in these rows plant peas, beans, sweet corn, etc. Sow about one pint of peas to the fifty feet, selectlng two or three varieties. For cucumbers and summer squash, make small round hills, slightly raised and flat, about six feet apart each way, and putting in plenty of seed. If the size of the garden will permit, sow also beets, carrots, radishes, lettuce and onions. Get a garden drill and sow these in rows about eight inches apart. If you do not raise your cabbage and tomato plants in a hotbed, they can be purchased of a market gardener. Set in rows about three feet apart. Follow all the early vegetables with later plantings so as to extend the period of Early Flowers.

The first flowers of spring are the most welcome. Fully ninety per cent. of the shrubs bloom in May or June. In setting out shrubbery, give a little thought to early blooming. Hall's magnolia is one of the very showiest early shrubs, blooming at a height of two feet. A very fragrant blooming bush is the winter honeysuckle, though its flowers are not very showy. of these bloom as early as April.

In May we have the popular golden bells, Yulon magnolia and the Magnolia Soulongeana, with its colored flowers as large as six inches across.

If you prefer many flowers in May and June, confine yourself to verbenas, petunias and geraniums. These can be set out in full bloom from pots the middle part of May, or whenever danger from frost has passed.

There is nothing that quite equals a good garden in cutting down living ex-

Rhubarb should be sown in drills two feet apart, and the plants thinned to six inches in the drill. In the autumn following they will be fit to transplant into permanent beds, to be set three feet apart in the rows, which should be four feet apart. For the first year the ground between the rows may be used for lettuce, beans, or any lowgrowing crop; but after the second year the leaves will cover the whole space, and require it all for their full development.

The early spring is a splendid time to clean up the orchard. There are worthless trees that should go into the Box 2195 Winnipeg, Man. woodpile and their places should be filled with something more valuable. Cut out broken and decayed limbs from the larger trees, burn the bush and do all necessary trimming. Cover exposed or injured parts of the wood with thick paint or grafting wax. Dead wood in the berry bushes should also come out and go into the brush heap where fire will destroy a host of insect pests which hibernate in the de ing litter Examine the trees about the orchard. for the eggs of insects, which, when hatched by the heat of the sun, may defoliate the trees before they are dis-

The proper time to transfer plants from the hotbed or greenhouse to the cold frame is often a perplexing question to beginners. If the weather is unusually severe, it is often best to defer transplanting for a few days, but teo much delay may result in the spindling of the plants in the seed bed. If the rows of seedlings are three or four inches apart, the plants will often stand five or even six weeks before becoming spindling; but it is generally safer to transplant in about four weeks from the date of sowing. Sow at intervals of several days so that the plants will come on in succession.

About April 15th, plant hardy roses. These should be pruned a little more than established ones.

Sow about one pint of peas in fifty

Turn house plants frequently so that all sides may have equal benefit, of light and sunshine.

Gooseberries prefer strong rich soil on a northern exposure. It is a plant that requires much food and therefore needs to be fertilized heavily on light soil.

Humus in the soil is a very important part in gardening. This may be supplied in the form of well rotted manure where plenty of straw, stover and old leaves have been used in the stable for bedding.

The reason why the grower of vegetables seems always to have better vegetables on his table is because they are freshly picked, and because when picking for his own table he will pass over the ones slightly past their prime, which discrimination can scarcely be expected of the man growing for the

There are millions of acres of almost waste land that should be planted in fruit trees of some sort. Of course, you haven't a million, but probably you have one.

Pruning Pear Trees.

In pruning the pear orchard, a symmetrical shape should be given the trees, according to the form that the grower has decided upon. The pyramidal form, I think, is preferable, trimmed to a leader. This is begun when the tree is young, by cutting the lower branches to four or five buds, the higher ones a little shorter, and so on to the leader, which should be left longest.

The cutting-brek and thinning-out must continue annually to obtain the highest results. How closely this should be done depends upon the variety and the vigor of the tree. Some trees have a tendency to set more fruit It is necessary to than do others. watch the ordchard, and trim trees so inclined more severely, otherwise they will overbear, and, becoming exhausted, go into decline.

If a tree has become exhausted and stunted from overbearing or other cause, it may be revived by cutting back into the old wood, and allowing the tree to make a top of new wood. This has been repeatedly and successfully done. The person who trims should be able to tell what to cut, how to cut, why he cuts, and the probable effect of the pruning upon the tree. If he can not give'a reason for everything he does, he is an unsafe man to trust in trimming a pear orchard.

Repeat it: Shilo's Cure will always cure my coughs and colds."

Health Notes.

Eight hours of sleep in the twentyfour are none too much to build up the body.

Once a month is often enough to wash the hair, unless it is very only.

Peroxide of hydrogen dabbled on a cold sore frequently will make it disappear in a short time.

Stiff neck and pains in the chest may be relieved by rubbing with warm sweet oil and covering with a layer of absorbent cotton.

Sleeping with the mouth open has a tendency to thicken the cartiage of the nostrils, and spoil the shape of the

A little child's teeth should be looked after carefully, for upon their well being depends the strength of the second

For pain and inflammation, hot fomentations are very valuable. They will never burn if the cloth is wrung out perfectly dry before applying. Cover up well. It should retain its heat for two or three hours.

Stout persons with a short neck should avoid wearing any collar or stock which would cause undue pressure on the arteries of the neck; particularly if there is an hereditary tendency to apoplexy.

Do not use pumice stone to remove superfluous hair. It does not kill the roots, and when they grow again they will be coarser and stiffer.

Breast milk is sometimes used in baby's eyes, when they are slightly in-flamed. This should never be done. A solution of boric acid is very cleansing and healing; half a teaspoonful in half a pint of boiled water, kept in a bottle, and used every hour or two, will heal in a short time. Use a dropper so that the solution washes the eyes. It is not at all painful.

If a severe headache comes on after sewing, it is due to eye strain. Bathe the eyes in cold water to relieve any congestion. Sometimes looking at builliant colors will relieve the eyes that have grown tired. Unless there can be complete relief from work that taxes the eyes, glasses must be worn.

Those who suffer from spiration of the feet should bathe them frequently in hot water with a soap containing plenty of rosin. Rock salt added to the water has a tendency to harden the skin, and tighten up the pores. Boracic acid powder, sprinkled in the stockings worn through the day is also a benefit.

A teaspoonful of sodium phosphate in a cup of hot water taken before breakfast for two weeks will correct bilious condition. Add the juice of half a lemon for its beneficial effect and to make it more palatable.

Walking and skating are the best kinds of exercise in the winter, provided common sense is used in stopping before completely fatigued. Many and women do not get the benefit from this outdoor exercise that they should because they do not dress properly.

The clothing should be worn closely enough to give plenty of breathing room, and the wraps should be as light in weight as possible, to give warmth, and yet not prevent free motion of the Glycerine.

In cases of illness in which the patient suffers from burning thirst, relief can be obtained by taking a teaspoonful of glycerine and water, and holding it in the mouth before swallowing it.

If the patient be too ill to swallow, it may be applied to the parched tongue with a feather.

For a cough, a cup of hot water, sweetened with sugar and a little glycerine, to which may be added a few drops of paregoric, will give relief.

Earache can sometimes be cured by pouring a few drops of glycerine into the ear, keeping it in with a little heated cotton.

A little glycerine rubbed into the scalp with the fingers, after the hair is shaken out, counteracts the tendency to dryness which is common to some

Glycerine is good for a sunburnt complexion.

For freckles, take equal quantities of lactic acid, rose water and glycerine. Use as a wash.

As glycerine absorbs moisture, it is better to dilute it when using it in a wash for the face and hands. For inflammations of mucous surraces as the mouth and throat, the undiluted glycerine is very effective, especially when used with other remedies.

A cement made by adding a teaspoonful of glycerine to a gill of glue is a great convenience in the k....ien and is especially good for fastening leather, paper or wool to metal.

Suggestions.

Here is a lotion for chapped, discolored hands: One ounce of oil of sweet almonds, one ounce of glycerine, two ounces of strained lemon juice, ten drops of carbolic acid. A few drops of oil of rose adds a delightful fragrance. Use this once or twice a day.

The finger nails require soap and water and the nail brush at least once a day. While the hands are still soft from the action of the water the cuticle about the nails should be pressed back gently. If this is done persistently the nail will soon acquire a dainty, oval shape and a surface the tint of a sea shell. If the nails are neglected the flesh will attach itself to the finger nails and then all sorts of painful "shreddy" little ends will appear. The proper manicure outfit consists of a flexible file, a polisher, ivory cleanser, cuticle knife, some good ointment and a powder for polishing.

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. J. M. Tweedale, 12 Napanee Street, Toronto, Canada, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was a great sufferer from female troubles, had those dreadful bearing down pains, and during my monthly periods I suffered so I had to go to bed. I doctored for a long time but the doctor's treatment failed to help me. My husband saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and got a bottle for me. I commenced its use and soon felt better. I kept on taking it until I was well and an entirely different woman. I also found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made childbirth much easier for me. I would recommend your Vegetable Compound to every woman who is afflicted with female troubles."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Tweedale, it will do for other suffering women.

Ulverton, Que., March 17th, 1908. I wish to place on record, for the sake of others who may be suffering in the same way that I suffered, that no medicine I ever took did me so much real good as "Fruit-a-tives" did.

Four Ways of Spinning Eggs.

Did you ever spin an egg? It is almost as good fun as spinning a top. The egg must be hard boiled, as a raw or soft egg will not spin w 1, because the liquid contents will not follow the motion of the shell exactly.

Now there is something queer in the way an egg spins. It is easy enough to make it spin on either the small or large end by standing it on that end on a plate and twirling it with your fingers, but if you try to make it srin on the side it refuses to do so, but stands up and spins on the large end. It is not quite so easy, though not very difficult, to make an egg spin without twirling it or even touching it plate which projects a little over the edge of the stable so that you can lift the plate without tipping it. . Take it up and move your hand rapidly in a small horizontal circle as if you were trying to make a lot of "naughts" with a pencil. The egg will begin to srin on its side, but wal soon be spinning on its large end. Or you can keep it spinning in this way even if you have to start it with your

It is possible, also, to spin an egg with a string, though, of course, you must not throw it on the floor. Wind the string around the midale of the egg, stand it on one end and steady it by touching the other end lightly with one finger. Then pull the string care-

Finally, you can spin an egg with a whip, like a whip top, if you do not whip it too hard, and take care not to hit it with the stick, but a glass "nest egg" or a wooden darning egg is better than a real egg for this purpose.

Some eggs spin better than others The best spinners are eggs that are quite regular in shape and have been boiled in an upright position so that a little to one side, as it often is.

Pobin and Crocus.

Crocus peeped out of the earth, in the chill April weather. The sky was gray, and not a spear of grass was to be seen, nor a single green leaf; a few old ones clung to the vines and trees, withered and brown.

But Crocus, brave and sweet, lifted its cup of gold out of the earth, close beside a patch of snow, and looked shyly about, contented and glad, though so quite alone, and so cold.
"Forward thing!" said a voice. Crocus started and shuddered-it was not

"Forward thing!" repeated the voice, dismally. "It would be more becoming were you to wait until your betters had come-not flaunt our your prettiness uninvited."

Now, poor Crocus knew that the Pine-tree was near, and had rebuked it: and the pine was tall, and old and

Just then Robin came hopping blithe-

"How do you do, little Crocus? Well met again!" said he. "Hey-dey! What is the matter? Why so sorrowful, dear?" he gently added.

But Crocus was so very down-cast it could scarcely reply. At last it told Robin how it came out of the dark earth so early, because the world was so very lonesome; and that by and by. when the fast company of grand and lovely flowers appeared, so simple a flower as itself would not be needed. "And when one means to do right, it is very bad to be thought wrong by those who are great and wise," added Crocus, sadly. And Robin answered, he felt so sorry he hardly knew what to do: "Those who are cruel are never great, though they reach to the very skies!

But never mind, little Crocus. Let me tell you. Whenever I plume myself ready to flit away from the sunny South, every one says to me:

"Foolish bird! Foolish bird! 'T is chilly and drear up there. Wait a little. You will find no leaves to hide away your nest.' But the more they say, the merrier I sing; and away I fly to the chilly north, to tell them the spring is coming-for fear they will all be discouraged. "And is it not something to make people glad, even if we must be chided?" Just then Claribel came down the path, and saw the Robin and Crocus together. She sang out: "Oh! the first Robin! I shall have my wish!" Then she paused with lifted hand, thinking which of all the delightful things in the world she now most wanted.

"It will be a hat with blue ribbons, and a flower like Crocus in the blue, for me to wear at Easter."

So Robin, when he heard this, soared away well pleased. And Claribel ten-derly picked the flower, saying: "Dearest blossom of 'all the year, you are like a drop from the sun, after the winter days. I will put you very near my heart." So she fastened the flower on her dress, and Crocus was comforted.

A Rainy-Day Game.

First, get a lot of old magazines, that your parents are willing you should destroy, and from these cut a let of pictures, both those illustrating the text and those among the advertise-ments. Cut these pictures out carefully, preserving the outline of each one, and then mount them all on heavy cardboard, pasting them firmly, for you will use them a great many times. You would better get some one to help you, brothers, sisters or playmates, for you will want as many pictures as you can get. It is well to start with at least fifty, and one hundred is twice as good. The pictures must all be of living things—animals and people, although you may use as many kinds as you like, from elephants to mice, giants to brownles, men, women and children, and the more different kinds, big and little, wide and narrow, you have, the better.

Now that your pictures are mounted on the cardboard and are quite dry, cut the cardboard into a lot of pieces of all sizes and shapes, squares, triangles, and figures of no regular shape, of .odd sides, and many corners, criss-crossing many times, so that your lot of mounted pictures becomes a lot of little pieces, scraps of pictures on bits of odd-shaped cardboard. board with a picture on it should be cut up into about five pieces or even Now you are ready for your

Heap the pieces up in the center of a table and draw your chairs close. Any number may play. You start the game by drawing at random a piece from the pile on the table's center. The player on your left follows, drawing one piece, and so on around the table. Then you draw another piece which you try to fit in some way to the piece you already have, the others follow, and by this time you may be able to make something like a picture from the pieces you have drawn. Again you all draw in turn, and again and again until one of you is able to make a picture from the scraps he has drawn, thus winning the game.

Luck and skill must combine to aid a player's winning in this game. You may have almost enough to make a complete figure but lack just one feature, say a head, and the next four or five pieces you draw may all chance to be hands and feet. Of course, you add these to your picture if you can, for it would make it all the funnier. Or you may draw a horse's head, a swan's neck, a woman's body with a long skirt, and a farmer's great boots, and so complete your picture in four draws. Skill in putting the pieces together counts almost as much as luck in drawing the needed piece from the pile.

A player is not obliged to use in his picture every piece he draws, but he may not trade these unused pieces with any other player, but must keep them until the end of the game, when all the pieces are shuffled and mixed together and again heaped in the center of the table and another game started.

Comfort.

In winter when the trees are bare, And nights are moonless;
When in the damp and chilling air.
The birds are tuneless;
When keen winds rattle on the road
And nip our fingers;
There is a comforter abroad Who never lingers.

Ever he sings in silent ways—
"The winter closes;
"Tis I restore the summer days;—
Time brings the roses."

When summer heats our veins oppress,
And the woods swelter;
When faint with noontide sultriness,
We pine for shelter;
When weary of the daily walk
O'er moor and meadow,
We long for change, for fireside talk,
And the lamp's shadow;
Still sings the soother of our woes—
"To sigh is folly;
The same kind hand that brought the rose

THE "NEW WOMAN" AGAIN.

A correspondent sends me some excellent things from the pen of one who may well be classed among the very newest of "new women," Helen M. Winslow, and who has this to say concerning home-loving and housekeeping: "There are people in the world in this enlightened age who are worrying about the relation of the woman of tomorrow to the home. They argue that the new woman with her opportunities, her relation to the business world, her college education, her mental development (which they delight in referring to as "so far ahead of her physical development")—that this woman of the future is sure correspondent sends me some excelthat this woman of the future is sure to cut asunder from all home ties; that we are to become a race of nomads, who roam desolately from one hotel or boarding-house or lodging-house to another, with no taste or desire for the old-fashioned home. But this is now as it always was, sheer nonsense. Ever since Eve hugged her first baby to her heart women have been proud and happy mothers. Ever since she urged Adam to partake of the fateful apple, women have been enticing men with dinners, good or bad. Think you that after thousands of years we are going to change our natures because of a little college training, a little "advanced thought?" Not while women are women. I suppose I am optimistic, but it seems to me that things are going very well for our sex, and that we have very little to complain of; also that the opposite sex has very little to complain of as well, for he is still far from a buttonless state, and he acts as if he enjoyed intelligent companionship from or with his women-kind.

I know it is the fashion to cry out "race suicide," and all that, but let us not take to heart too seriously the dismal state of affairs bewailed by certain sensational reformers. The world is still rolling on towards the good—still swinging out to the light. The wise Crethat this woman of the future is sure to cut asunder from all home ties; that sensational reformers. The world is still rolling on towards the good—still swinging out to the light. The wise Creator, when he made woman, gave her the true highest of the still sense. the two highest offices in His His gift— Kings boast those of wife and mother. Kings boast of reigning by right divine, and inscribe "Rex Dei Gratia" upon the laws of their land; but woman is the only creature who may truthfully use those words, and she may say, "I am a woman by the grace of God. and rule in a kingdom of kingdoms." She makes no laws, leads no armies, governs no enterprises, but she forms those by whom laws are made, armies led and great enterprises managed.

Statistics have already proven that the college-bred woman marries in the same proportion and infinitely better than her simpering sister who cares nothing for education. She not only has as many children but is manifestly better fitted to train them up to good citizenship. It is also evident that woman's experience in the business world—while it makes her more cautious about marriage representations. her more cautious about marriage—renders her a more sympathetic, appreciative and sensitive wife than the girl who waits at home for a husband who, she has been taught to believe, must ever after be her body-slave. And alever after be her body-slave. she has been taught to believe, must ever after be her body-slave. And although modern conditions make it possible for a woman to be self-supporting, and therefore not to marry unless she does it for the greatest reason in the world—love—the business of marrying and having children is going right on and having children is going right on age after age, generation after generation. So there is no real cause for worry."

TO WOMEN, FROM A WOMAN.

My correspondent feels that the little My correspondent feels that the little alk on the new woman, coming from a representative woman, must carry weight; I agree with her and am glad print, also, another little "sermonette" out the same source, promising it will set do the masculine renders of The lattern Home Monthly one bit of barm would it making personal applications. and it, making personal application:
If us be brave women and true, with

Let us insist on doing our share of work and only our share. When we do less we are shirking our duty; when we do more we are letting someone else shirk. Let us adopt the "I can and will" motto; but let us use it with discretion and will only what is right.

Let us keep a steel-rod vertebra instead of an india-rubber one in our backbone, especially when we have disagreeable things to do. For a backbone is what too many women—and men, too, lack.

Let us believe that there is much more of good than of evil in every human being; and let us help everyone with whom we come in contact to bring forth the good by recognizing their power to do this.

Let us remember that evil is but ignorance, and that to know all is to forgive all; and let us think of this every time we are inclined to condemn another

There is no "new woman." We are all identically the same as Eve and Sarah and Ruth and—I say it with all reverence—Mary, the carpenter's mother. Sarah and Ruth and—I say it with all reverence—Mary, the carpenter's mother. We have the same natures, the same intuitions, the same love of family and home, the same desire to be of use to others that women have always had; only in these wonderful modern times we have kept pace with the age, and are developing, both as individuals and as a whole. And now that we have stepped forth and won places as physicians and lawyers and ministers, now that we are widening the ranks of every profession as we go forth on the road to higher achievement, it behooves every womansoul of us to ask ourselves—What have I to do about it? Am I doing my duty to the rest of mankind? Am I bearing my share of the burden of the world? Or, if this last is denied me, am I possessing my soul in patience and living up to the splendid present? Am I sweet and gentle and strong and helpful? Am I critical of no one but myself? Am I loving toward my family, my neighbor, my friend, my enemy? Am I helping the cause of the woman of tomorrow by working out my own life-problem with the child-heart and Christ-love to sweeten existence for all around me? These are the questions we have to make faithful answers to."

A reader writes us:—I have learned from experience that many people make a big mistake in watering plants. At least, I did; never until last season, although I love flowers dearly and have tried year after year to have fine ones in winter, did I succeed as I wanted to, and I believe the fault lay in watering. At a florist's one day I exclaimed on the beauty of his plants and the dryness of beauty of his plants and the dryness of the soil. "Yes," he said, "I have not the soil. "Yes," he said, "I have not yet given them the drink they are waiting for this morning." "But do you let the earth become so very dry, often "I asked. "Always," said he; "that is, I do not give them water until the surface is dry, then I give enough for a thorough wetting." Then he told me that a great mistake made by amateurs is keeping the earth in pots wet all the that a great mistake made by amateurs is keeping the earth in pots wet all the time by watering regularly, whether the plants need it or not, thus actually rotting the roots and souring the earth. "Never water a plant until the surface of the earth in the pot is dry," said he. "There are few, if any, exceptions to this rule."

this rule."

I took his advice and my plants picked up wonderfully; so, as a lover off flowers, my own and everybody's, I am glad to pass the information along. The florist also told me something about the use of fertilizers I had not known before. No fertilizer should be given until a plant begins to grow of its own accord; you cannot force a plant to grow by giving fertilizer. It should never be allowed to touch the stalk of the plant, and should be applied at first diluted or weakened. Now I know that I killed a beautiful bed of pansies last spring by using a strong fertilizer on plants that had not become accustomed to their new quarters. to their new quarters.

Caramel Cake.—One cupful of sugar, one cupful of milk, one and one-half cupfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of saleratus, one-quarter cake of chocolate. Frosting.—One and one-quarter cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of milk. Boil five minutes without stir-Flavor with teaspoonful of va-

Baked Cabbage.—An excellent way to utilize cold cabbage is to put it into a baking dish and pour over it sufficient dressing to cover, made in the proportion of one tablespoonful each of but-ter and flour to one cupful of milk. Pour over this one well beaten egg, and cover with bread crumbs dusted with melted butter. Bake forty-five minutes.

Potato Doughnuts.—Two cupfuls of hot mashed potato, four tablespoonfuls of shortening, three cupfuls of sugar, and four eggs. Beat all to a cream, then add three cupfuls of milk, a little salt and nutmeg or any preferred flavoring and five teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted in the flour, using enough flour to make of the usual consistency of doughnut dough.

Deviled Cheese.—Run half a pound of good, mild cheese through a meat chopmix with one tablespoonful of butter creamed, one tablespoonful of vinegar and one of worcester sauce; tarragon vinegar is preferable. Season with one teaspoonful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of mustard and the same of salt. Spread between square crackers, and serve with salads.

Jenny Linds.—Make a thin batter of three eggs, two full tablespoonfuls of melted butter, pinch of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pint of milk and a quart of flour. Bake on hot griddle in cakes the size of a small plate. Butter on the wrong side, spread with fruit jam or marmalade, roll up, lay on a flat dish, sprinkle sugar over them and serve hot with cream or lemon sauce.

Amber Pudding.—Stir one teacupful cornmeal into one quart of boiling water; add one teacupful of molasses, one-half teacupful of salt, one quart sliced sweet apples, three pints of milk, and mix well; pour into a large buttered pudding dish and bake in a very slow oven for four hours, when the liquid will have evaporated to a clear amber-colored jelly throughout the pud-

Cocoanut Pie.-Bake under crust; put a pint of sweet milk in a pan and set it in a kettle of hot water. When the milk boils add three tablespoonfuls of sugar; then two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, dissolved in a little cold milk. Cook until it thickens; then add onehalf box of cocoanut. Take off the stove and add whites of the eggs, whipped to a stiff froth. Turn the mixture to the shell and place in the oven to Lrown.

Pound Cake .- One pound of sifted flour, one pound of fine sugar, one pound of eggs, one scant pound of butter, one tablespoonful of brandy, onehalf teaspoonful of mace.

Oyster Sandwi nes .- Have the slices of bread nicely toasted on one side. Have plump but rather small oysters thoroughly drained. Dip them in soft butter, mixed with a little paprika and lemon juice. Arrange on the toasted side of the squares of bread. Put together and brush both sides of each sandwich well with soft butter, arrange the sandwiches in a fine wire broiler and toast carefully. Serve at once, with sauce tartare.

Rice Cake.—One cupful of butter, two of sugar, two and one-fourt' cupfuls of rice flour, six eggs, the juice and rind of one lemon. Beat the butter to a cream, then gradually beat in the sugar and add the lemon. Beat the whites and yolks separately and add them to the beaten sugar and butter. Also the rice flour. Pour into a shallow pan to the depth of about two inches. Bake from thirty-five to forty-five minutes in a moderate oven.

Stewed Leg of Mutton.—Put a loin of mutton into a stewpan with a cupful of water, a glass of light wine, a clove of garlic, three cloves, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, with salt and cayenne pepper to taste. Cover and stew gently till tender. Strain the liquid, skim off the fat, and reduce with hot water if necessary; add a piece of butter rolled in flour, a little minced gherkin or parsley and a spoonful of lemon juice. Pour over meat and serve.

Bacon and Egg Sandwich—Have nicely streaked bacon cut thin, and fry or broil a nice crisp brown. Fry the eggs until they are just set, turning them when they are partly done, so that both sides are fried. Spread lettuce leaves on the hot buttered toast rounds and sprinkle the bacon, broken into bits, over the lettuce. Place the egg o- this and cover with another crisp leaf of lettuce and round of toast. Serve with tender, crisp celery.

Apple Custard Pie.-Into a cupful of stewed and strained apples stir the juice and grated rind of half a lemon, and a cupful of sugar. Half a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg or a teaspoonful of cinnamon may take the place of the lemon rind, if preferred. Mix a cupful of milk, or, better still, of sweet or sour cream, thoroughly with the apple, and then the beaten yolk of an egg, and, lastly, stir in gently the well whipped white. filling will make one pie. The pie may be made with a lattice top, in tart fashion, or, if the paste is very rich and light, a solid upper crust may be arranged.

Scotch Tart .- Line a square baking tin with a paste made thus: One heaping teaspoonful of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt sifted with one pint of flour; beat one egg in onehalf cupful softened butter, and stir in Roll out one-half pint sweet milk. thin, and cover with tart apples, peeled and cored, and sliced crosswise in halfinch slices; allow each row to overlap the shingles, covering the center holes of the preceding row. Sprinkle thickly with light-brown sugar, dot with but ter, grate nutmeg over, and bake until the apples are tender. Serve with cream, whipped or plain.

Sally Lunns are always popular at tea during the cool months. Place half a pint of new milk and half an ounce of butter in a saucepan. When milk is warm pour it over half an ounce of German yeast. Mix half a teaspoonful of salt with three-quarters of a pound of flour. Add a beaten egg to the milk and yeast, and then stir all lightly into the flour, with a wooden spoon. Grease two or three small round cake tins. pour some of the mixture into each, and set them to rise in a warm place for an hour. Then bake in a good steady oven from twenty to thirty minutes. When required for use, this tea cake should be cut into thick slices across. toasted, buttered, and served very hot. On this last greatly depends success.

About the Farm.

Dairy Wisdom.

For a spring tonic add a little oil-neal to the grain ration. Cows that are to come fresh require

They should have the freedom of a good, roomy box stall for at least a month before calving.

Fancy a sensitive mother cow, with her head fastened in stanchions, forced to drop her calf in the gutter! This is happening every day in this age. Such men never succeed, nor do they deserve succes Start in this spring with a pair of cales, tally sheets and a Babcock

Find out, for certain, which cows are aying you a profit, and which are eating up the profits of the others.

The coming season can be one of profit, and pleasure, too, if you use your brains.
Use plenty of land plaster in and about the stables. Do not let odors Never sacrifice a helfer calf from a first-class butter cow.

All are needed to supply the depleted Don't, oh, don't, use a scrub bull as a

Remember that the cows are tender from having been shut up in the barn so long, and do your best to shield them from the hard April winds.

Never tie a calf with a rope about its Ten chances to one it will get the neck. Ten chances to one it, will get choked to death. A stout strap about the neck, with a ring and a chain, are far better. A swivel will keep the chain from twisting.

be taken from the stable and strained. A milk room in the barn may be partitioned off from the cattle with tight walls and, if the barn is poorly venti-to avoid stable odors and dust. Milk that is strained and allowed to stand in the stable any length of time is often nearly unfit for use because of the bad odors it has taken up. If a room, remote from the cows cannot be provided the straining may be done out of doors, care being taken lest rain and dirt enter the can. This trouble can be-largely averted by covering the can be-tween strainings with a clean, moist

Under the best of conditions, some dirt will get into the milk, and the strainer is always a very important utensil and will remove a great deal of this dirt if well cleaned and provided with a fine wire gauze and two or three thic' nesses of cheese cloth. The strainer and cheese cloths should be well cleansed after every milking. This should be done by first rinsing with cold water, second by washing with warm water to which some washing compound has been added, and scalding. All dairy utensils should be cleaned in this manner and, when possible, should be thoroughly steamed.

As soon as the milking is finished, the cans should be placed in cold water, the milk stirred occasionally for a few minutes and the covers left off until the milk is thoroughly cooled, precautions being taken that no dirt gets into the milk. In order to hasten the cool-ing process, it may be necessary to change the water surrounding the cans occasionally.

The stable should be cleaned regularly and as often as necessary, and lime put in the gutters every day after cleaning will have a beneficial effect. Cattle cannot be kept clean and will not do their best if compelled to stand and lie in filthy mud puddles. Lime should be freely used on all earth floors.

The mangers should be clear of the ground, tight enough to hold any feed that may be given, and they should be arranged so as to be easily cleaned. In the feeding of such fermentable stuffs as brewers malt and beet pulp, the mangers and floors may be the sole lated and at times foul, the door to this room should be open from the outside milk. Musty or rotten food, fermented beet pulp, manure, etc., should not be stored where they will contaminate the milk, but should be well removed from the stable. Odors from such materials are readily taken up by milk.

Keeping Cream.

In a talk before a creamery patrons' meeting in Minnesota, the inspector

"I believe the cheapest and handiest arrangement for cooling the cream, and keeping it cool, is to have a small tank, through which all of the water is pumped to the large stock tank. Ordinary cream cans can be used, or better still, the old style of 'shot gun' cans. which are deep and narrow, thus giving a larger cooling surface. The temperature of the ordinary well water is in the neighborhood of fifty degrees, and it does not take long to bring the cream down to within a few degrees of the temperature of the water. Where the water in the tank can be changed often by the use of windmill, or otherwise, it is an easy matter to maintain this temperature, even in the hottest weather in summer. Cream should be kept in water the year round. It should be stirred once or twice while cooling, to allow the animal odors to escape. Warm cream should never be mixed with cold cream, as this has a tendency to cause bad flavors. Cream which has been handled in a cleanly manner, and properly cooled, should keep in fine condition two days in the summer and three days in the winter.'

Milk With Dry Hands.

It is a bad habit with many milkers to let the fingers get wet, sometimes deliberately dipping them into the milk so as to make them slide down the teats. The proper way is to milk with perfectly dry hands by squeezing, not sliding. Only in "stripping" to start the flow to get the last drops of milk it may be preferable to slide the fing-ers down the teats. These last drops, the strippings," contain the largest per cent. of fat, being almost as rich as cream, and not only for that reason. but also to keep up a rich flow of m'lk from the cow, it is important not to neglect the stripping. It is well known that by leaving more and more of the milk in the bag at each consecutive milking the cow is soon dried up.

Dairy Notes.

Use only salt that is fine in quality and grain for butter.

The sooner milk is set in a cool place ready for the cream to rise, the more cream there will be.

Money expended in making the cows comfortable will bring multifold returns to the dairyman's pocket.

Not only the flavor but the keeping quality of butter is injured by keeping the cream until it gets very sour.

It may be set down as an indisputable fact than an udder which is in an unhealthy condition cannot secrete pure

If the salt is not well mixed through the butter, it will crystalize on the outside and probably make the butter streaked.

Never put milk or cream into a dark, poorly ventilated cellar. Good butter cannot be made from milk and cream handled in this manner.

Whatever is given cows to eat never neglect to give them pure air to breathe, clean water to drink, and clean beds to lie down on.

Ventilation cannot be neglected to any extent without injuring the quality of the milk produced, and endangering the health of the herd and those who care for them.

The cheesy taste of butter is due to lack of thoroughness in washing and removing the buttermilk. Butter will not keep well if any of the buttermilk

The cream pot should have its contents stirred every day at least, and every time any cream is added. This insures an even ripening and better quality of butter.

HEELS UP-HEAD DOWN

There are some mighty funny things about common "bucket bowl" cream separators. One is that the bowls used in them actually run better when turned heavy end down-heels up, head down, as you might say.

The Sharples

Toronto, Can.

Prove it? Why, we knew it ten years ago, and have been proving it by building Tubulars with bowls rung heavy end down

But we have just proved it again—this time in a very simple and practical way with a "bucket bowl" itself. We took a common, disc filled "bucket bowl" machine-the sort with the bowl set heavy end up and fed through the top. The machine looked all right, but the bowl had the "shakes" so bad-that is, it trembled, leaned and strained against its bearings so hard—that we could not run it over 6,000 revolutions per minute, though it was supposed to run 8,000 in every day use.

You see, a separator bowl set heavy end up is always top heavy, always leans sidewise, even though the eye can't detect it, and consequently always trembles in its bearings. These tremblings gradually increase until they wear the bearings, shake them loose, bend the spindle and create so much friction that it acts like a brake and prevents getting up speed. That was the trouble with this disc filled "bucket bowl" we are talking about.

When we found this "bucket bowl" would not run in its own machine, we took it out, cut a thread on the bottom of the spindle, and hung it, heavy end down in a Sharples Tubular Cream Separator, just as we would a bowl of our own. You should have seen it run then. No trouble at all to run it 8,000 revolutions per minute. We easily ran it 12,000.

Could you ask any better proof that common "bucket bowl" separators, with bowls set heavy end up and fed through the top are built all wrong? Or better proof that the suspended bowl and bottom feed used only in Sharples Machine is the right way to build a cream, separator?

The manufacture of Tubular Cream Separators is one of Canada's leading industries. Sales for 1908 way ahead of 1907—out of sight of any competitor if not all competitors combined. 1909 is going to be better yet.

Get our catalog 248 and then you'll know all about it you'll be on the safe side.

The many exclusive advantages of Sharples Tubular Cream Separators are possible because only Sharples Separators have suspended bowl and bottom feed. This makes the Dairy Tubular bowl the lightest and simplest known, yet gives it twice the skimming power of common bowls. Also permits a low supply can that need not be lifted off to remove the bowl; wholly enclosed, self oiling gears; a single frictionless ball bearing from which hangs the bowl; a crank set just right for easy turning.

success as dairymen are the ones 'who have been especially noted for cleanliness and 'neatness in every department and detail.

While specks of butter are sometimes simply fine particles of milk curd. resulting from lack of care in skimming. sometimes they are small specks of dried cream, the result of dry cream having been scraped from the sides of the pan, and being too dry to thoroughly soften and mix with the rest.

The Poultry Yard.

Dust plenty of insect powder in the nests of those setting hens.

One man says there is more money in an egg farm than in either fancy birds

In the large city markets the best prices for fatted fowls are realized from about February to July.

Equal parts of boiled oats, corn and wheat, with now and then the addition of table scraps, makes a good egg producing ration.

Chickens meant for table purposes should be well fed from the first.

Hens are much better breeders than pullets, because a greater percentage of the eggs are fertile.

It is useless to attempt to raise early chickens for the market unless you have provided a place to care for them.

The profit in poultry raising for market lies in hatching early, pushing the chickens forward as rapidly as possible, and marketing them early in the seas-

Hatching eggs should be gathered daily, and twice a day if the weather is extremely cold. They should be kept in a cool, dry, dark place, but not too cold, and never over two weeks before setting or placing in incubator.

Any business must be learned and a great many perplexities must be encountered and difficulties overcome before it can be made successful. This is true of the poultry business, but no more true than anything else. To succeed at anything must be deserved by eternal vigilance.

Every cold day in spring used to bring us anxiety, lest some erratic set-ting hen would leave her nest for too long a time. The incubator relieves us Chickens hatched in of that worry. incubators are always free from lice and generally remain so until they are large enough not to be injured by them.

A cross of the large breeds upon the smaller will produce fowls at the first cross that will make a good growth and attain good size and many times increases the production of eggs. A cross of a good egg-producing strain upon a flock of fowls that are only moderate egg-producers will often have a marked effect in improving the qualities of the

The spirit of perseverance is illustrated by the experience of a woman we know. For three years after starting in the poultry business she lost money, the next four the business just about broke even, but since that, each year has shown a handsome profit. How many of us would be content to wait eight years before making a profit?

There are a great many people who spend a lot of valuable time wondering which incubator is the best. Even exper opinion differs upon this point, each make of machinery having its advocates and users. All the machines manufactured by advertisers have proven successful in hatching chickens and that is the principal requirement.

Average Egg Production.

It has been estimated that the average egg production of the hens of this country is about sixty eggs each in a A good many flocks, well cared for, are producing an average of ten

Those who have received the greatest | dozen eggs for each hen in a year. There are flocks in which the average is as high as 150 eggs per hen in a year, and some even exceed this figure.

Good Hatches Require Good Eggs.

No machine can make good hatches from poor eggs—those lacking in fertility or high egg quality. No machine can hatch chicks strong enough to live if not properly brooded. They may hatch beautifully and die peacefully in a few days. A hen could not do it, and a machine cannot do it, either. Few people there are who do not have to learn by hard experience that brooding the chicks is the greater problem of the two. It is an art and must be mastered before any great amount of success is obtained.

Kept a Record.

A Wisconsin farmer kept a record of his poultry operations for a year and found that he had sold eggs for $42.03 and poultry for $26.52, making a total of $68.55. He kept forty fowls. No record was kept of the eggs and fowls used by his own family.

The breeder of table poultry must produce the class of fowl best suited for his market. If there is a good demand for first class fowls of large size and weight, then he must select the kinds which first grow good frames and afterwards add plenty of flesh and On the other hand, if the demand is largely for chickens of moderate size and very plump, then his chief regard must be for those kinds which grow meat as quickly as they grow framework. The Indian Game-Houdan cross is one of the best types of the latter kind.

Feather Eating.

Idleness and a lack of animal food will cause some fowls to get the habit of plucking feathers from the necks and breasts of their mates. The best preventive is to keep your fowls busy all the time scratching for their daily rations. It can be caused by a lack of a certain kind of food—usually an insufficiency of albuminoids. Feed your fowls plenty of beef scraps or other animal food. Sometimes a strip of salt pork hung up in the poultry house where they can peck at it will check the trouble. If the habit has become fixed in the flock, make an ointment of one teaspoonful of creolin and about a pint of melted lard and stir the whole until it is cool. Then rub in one tea-spoonful of extract of aloes. Aloes can be obtained at any drug store. Use this preparation to apply to the bare parts and the feathers around the bare area. Two or three applications a week will usually result in checking the habit, as the mixture is very distasteful to the guilty ones. The feathers will grow in again, but not until the fowl has molted.

HOME-MADE CONFECTIONERY FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Mut Bars.—Chop fine the meats of two or three kinds of nuts and mix thoroughly with the cream made as in cream nuts; shape into bars and cool.

Chocolate Almonds .- Blanch half a pound of almonds, dry and toast light brown in the oven. Melt half a pound of sweet vanilla flavored chocolate and of sweet vanilla flavored chocolate and dip each almond into the chocolate separately and lay them on oiled paper until cold. Melted plain chocolate added to melted fondant may be used for dipping, vanilla flavoring added o suit the taste.

Soft Caramels. — To one quart of moist brown sugar add on e cup of rich milk, third of a cup of butter and half a cake of chocolate, grated. Boil nine minutes, then take from the fire and stir steadily for abou five minutes, but not so long that you cannot readily but not so long that you cannot readily pour it from the saucepan into buttered tins. When partly cold mark into squares and let stand until cold.

Hickory-Nut Candy.—Boil two cup-fuls of sugar and one-half cupful of water together until it will thread, and water together until it will thread, and when done flavor with a teaspoonful of lemon and vanilla together, turn quickly into the beaten white of an egg (having the bowl set in cold water), stir in one cupful of hickory-nut meats, turn into a flat buttered dish, and when cold, break into squares.

In the treatment of summer complaints, the most effective remedy that can be used is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It is a standard preparation, and many people employ it in preference to other preparations. It is a highly concentrated medicine and it sedative and curative qualities are beyond question. It has been a popular medicine for many years and thousands can attest its superior qualities in overcoming dysentery and kindred complaints.

USUAL CROP-OF CREAM: SEPARATOR SNARES AND TARES

If actual merit alone prevailed the DE LAVAL cream separator would be the only one made, sold or used.

But the dairy farmer with his dollars is an alluring proposition to those who "need the money", so that every season brings with it a new crop of separator fakes and fables, with some of the old conjurers over again and always a few fresh ones.

Last year the new and improved line of DE LAVAL machines literally swept the field. This year everybody has a "new" machine, which is the one thing they universally, harp upon in their talk and advertising. But it is mostly bosh and nonsense. There is mighty little new to them. No more DE LAVAL patents have expired so that there is nothing else "new" that they can lay hold of this

There's the usual crop of fakirs appropriating the facts of DE LAVAL separator use and the endorsements DE LAVAL separators have received, and quoting them as though they applied to their own inferior imitations of the standard cream separator.

There's the concern which makes the inferior disc separator and speaks of the "disc" separator being "the machine which has won out universally in Europe, the home of the disc separator". True, but it was the DE LAVAL that has done the winning out in Europe, as it has in America.

There's the political separator concern, with the new "year" or "cents" trademark, whose claim it is to be hoped nobody ever believes, and which manifestly practices the circus man's theory that the great American public ever likes to be fooled.

There's the only concern which has stuck to the abandoned DE LAVAL "hollow bowl" of 30 years ago, but will this year desperately join the procession of ten year back DE LAVAL imitations with a "disky bucket bowl" machine.

There's the "Trust," striving to complete its monopoly of dealer and farmer, harvesting much costly separator experience. largely at the expense of buyers-for-use, through trying to build a cream separator like ordinarily made farm machinery.

There's the "mail order" outfit, with their cheaply made machines, bought here aud there, not made by themselves or sold under the real manufacturer's name, all claiming the earth and many of the things that should be below it.

But the merry lot changes and dwindles every year. They gradually drop out and leave their unfortunate patrons helpless with trashy machines. More will fade away this year. The dairy farmer, like the creameryman, is coming to know something of separators. He doesn't swallow mere "claims" so easily. 98% of the world's creamerymen use DE LAVAL machines. The percentage of farm users content with nothing else is always increasing.

There isn't a single reason why every man who buys a cream separator this year should not buy a DE LAVAL. There are many reasons why he should. The best costs no more than the various grades of inferior imitating machines.

A DE LAVAL catalogue may be had for the asking. Application for agency in unrepresented territory given prompt attention.

My Beardless Barrister.

I had trouble with the owner Of an adjoining lot About a trifling matter-I scarce remember what-And resolved for my amusement, And to aggravate the brute, To engage a lady lawyer On the matter in dispute.

When he got that lawyer's letter My neighbor threw a fit. She not only sued for trespass, But served a capias writ. A civil action she began, Likewise a case in tort, Oh, one needs a lady lawyer If he's going into court.

Her plea in surrejoinder Made defendant's counsel hum. And she set the ad quod damnum At a most audacious sum. When our case went to the jury She had but to show her face. Yes, it takes a lady lawyer To put ginger in a case.

The upper court rejected The question of arpeal, And rebuked defendant's counsel For exuberance of zeal... The full bench then accordingly A rescript kind send down-For a lady lawyer's smile dispels The stern judicial frown.

When I asked my fair attorney What her bill for fees would foot, A cheque for what she mentioned In a billet-doux I put; And I found it is by suing That a lady lawyer's pleased, For of her heart in mortmain I am now securely seized.

The Desperate Jim Panther.

One of the stories which Mr. Milo Bush used to tell was concerning a certain Jim Panther who formerly infested the town. That such a man had actually existed I know to be a fact, but I cannot vouch for all of the details of Mr. Bush's narrative. It sounded reasonable, however, as he told it—t ough, for the matter of that, everything he told sounded reasonable even when it related to how he (the speaker) had formerly earned his living by work.
"This here Jim Panther," Mr. Bush would begin, "was enterprising as a hen with one chicken. Always up to some money-making dodge. Honest as a sorrel hoss, but just naturally a business man. When the panic struck the town and two faro banks closed, and people lost confidence, and Deacon Tupper was detected using a false crown in his hat when taking up the collec-tion Sunday morning, Jim kept right on and never squealed. Sold an Eastern man who wanted a farm the land which had been reserved for the Pleasant Prospect Cemetery, and got an En lis'tman into a poker game, and-well, the next day you might 'a' hung that Britisher over a clothes-line and put two tramps a-walloping him with these here rattan carpet-beaters, and they couldn't 'a' pounded a penny out of him. Jim Panther never set around and croaked about the tariff, or said that the government ought to make buckwheat cakes legal tender.

"You see, in them days there was a good many Eastern tourists and suchlike out here, and a genyooine live to n with live folks in it being new to them, they gawked around a good deal and asked questions, and got in the way, and wondered at this and that. They was great hands to buy things to take home-Injun fixings, and big hats, and bear-skins, and western spurs, and other stuff. Jim had been running a small Injun-scalp factory for sometime as a kind of a side issue, but compettion was brisk and prime scal s got down to sixty cents apiece. some man went to putting celluloid scalps on the market instead of the genyooine horsehide scalp, and this spoiled the business. So Jim set to thinking, and talked matters over with his brother Bill and the city marshal. The next day he blossomed out wearing a red shirt, and a big hat, and a gun in his belt as big as a j'int of stove-pipe, and with thirty-nine-notches filed in the Then he stood about on the barrel. Then he stood about on the corner and looked gloomy and disappinted, and peered up and own the street as if he was looking for the feller that had said he wasn't a gentleman and an honest citizen.

Well, we seen our duty and we done it, as Judge Parker used to say in his

First-of-July speeches. tourists begun to ask questions-you can't shut off a tourist's questioner, 'W-w-ot is the person on the corner armed with the large pistol?' they would say. 'Oh,' we says, keerlesslike, 'that's only Rattlesnake Jim.' 'Er-er, wot is them notches on the barrel of his weepon? the tourist would go on 'Oh,' says we, 'juss where he's kep' count of the men he's shot, that's all. 'How—how many?' says the tourist. 'Thirty-nine,' says we; 'but don't speak of it, 'cause he don't want nothin' said till he's made it an even forty.' Then the tourist would go off and tell the the tourist would go on and tell the other tourists, and soon they all was talking about Rattlesnake Jim, from Bender's Flat, and wondering if he'd get his man before supper. By-and-bye Jim stuck a file belind his ear just to have it handy for the next notch, and the fool tourist got more interested. "In a hour or so Jim's brother comes loafing down the street with another big gun. Soon as they see each other they both yells, and yanks out their weapons, and they go bang! right together, and Jim flops down on h's back, and the brother travels off rapid. The mayor steps up, puts his hand on Jim's heart, rises solemn, takes off his hat and lays it on Jim's breast to cover the wound, and says in a choky voice; 'Gents, the bravest man that ever look. ed throo a collar is no more. No more, gents! Rattlesnake Jim is dead, and he mops his eyes with his elbow. Then he stoops over again, and picks up the weepon and runs his thumb along the barrel, and then goes on: 'Thirty-nine, feller-citizens. And he longed to make feller-citizens. And he longed to make it forty. Truly, truly death loves a shining mark! He was my friend, gents. After life's flitting fever he sleeps like a top!' and here he burst out and regularly boo-boos for a minute or two. Then he goes on; 'But Rattlesnake Jim was a poor man; poor, but honest. He gave much in charity but kep' little for himself. He often said to me, 'Old hoss, when I'm gone sell my effects and give me a decent burial." This small gun is his only effect, gents. Does any gent wish to buy it?" You ought to see them tourists wade in Inside of a minute one ists wade in. Inside of a minute one of 'em walked off with it for $50, while we carried Jim to his room at the hotel, where he set up and ordered refreshments for the bearers, and sent for a bottle of arnica to rub on his elbow where he hit the sidewalk as he fell. Two days after he was shot again, and after that died regular three times a week. He might 'a' got rich if he'd stuck to it and worked. But he couldn't stand prosperity. Insisted on having a hair mattress to fall on to and got so he kep' on smoking his cirar while he was a-laying there dead, and kicked because the mayor's tears spattered on it and put it out."

Rosenfeld. "Certainly," was the impatient ans-er. "An optimist is a man who looks after the eyes, and a pessimist is one who attends to the feet."

Pair Play.

An attache of the American embassy at London tells a story of a butler in the employ of a fine old English family, whose long service had inculcated in him a personal and proprietary interest in the sons and daughters of the house. Once, on the occasion of a large dinner party, the conscientious butler observed that one of the members of the family, a young girl who had but recently entered society, was devoting an amount of attention to her agreeable neighbor on the right, obviously in excess of that accorded to the less fascinating man on her 'eft. This fact perturbed the butler to a degree that could no longer be borne in silence. So, under pretense of passing the culrrit a dish, the butler managed to whisper respectfully in her ear: "A little more conversation to the left, Mew York Wasn't Open.

I repeated. 'Twan't open,' he said.

A Record Breaker.

Three fellow-travelers in the smoking room of a fast train were discussing the speed of trains.

"I was in a train once," said the first man, "that beat everything I rode in for speed. Why, it went so fast that the telegraph poles at the side of the track looked like an immense finetoothed comb."

"That's nothing," said the second traveler; "I remember riding in an express on the — and — that went at such a gait that the telegraph poles looked like a solid board fence

The third man made an exclamation of impatience.

'Ah, you fellows don't know what high speed on a railroad is. Why, I traveled west from Chicago last month in a train that went at such a pace that when we rassed some alternate fields of corn and beans they looked like succotash!"

A Tactful Reply.

Arthur A. Hamerschlag, a director of the Carnegie Technical School of Pittsburg, was speaking on the necessity of tact in dealing successfully with men. "There were two neighbors," continued the director, "and each had a pet diversion. Chickens was the hobby of one; that of the other, flowers. Because of the devastating instincts of the unrestrained fowls the flowers did not flourish. The gardener, however valued his neighbor's friendship more than he did the flowers, and made no remonstrance. The poultry farmer, one evening, visited his neighbor, and by way of introduction made a complimentary remark about the garden. 'What a beautiful bed of flowers you have here,' he said, glowingly. 'Yes,' added the gardener, dejectedly, 'but it just keeps me a-sweatin' to keep it from becoming a feather bed."

Correct English.

Professor Lounsbury, the noted grammarian of Yale, has democratic and liberal views on the subject of the English language. He strenuously opposes the displacing of simple terms by others of pedantic character. Recently he told this story while discussing the subject: "There was a little boy who began to keep a diary. His first entry was: 'Got up this morning at 7 o'clock.' He showed the entry to his mother, and she, horror stricken, Have you never been to school? Got un, indeed! Such an expression! Does the sun get up? And she scratched out "Got up at 7" and wrote 'Rose at 7' in its place. That night the boy, before retiring, ended the entry for the day with the sentence, 'Set at 9 o'clock.'"

A Pause Follows.

There is a certain small boy who rejoices in the name of Waite Pearsall. He commenced to attend school a short time ago, and the teacher had quite an experience in finding out his name.

"What is your name?" she asked, as

Waite took his seat. "Waite," said the boy promptly. The teacher looked rather surprised, but said nothing for a few moments, thinking, perhaps, he was frightened, then she asked again:

"What is your name?" "Waite," said the possessor of the name. After another few minutes' silence the teacher, becoming impatient, exclaimed: "Well, I have waited plenty long enough now. Please tell me your

That made the boys laugh, and finally the teacher understood.

The Dr. Sanden Electric Belt gives New Strength and Vigor to Men and I Ask no Pay Until Cured

The highest mental and moral development, the greatest possible success in life, either financially or otherwise, can best be attained when the organs of the body are in a normal state of health—when the ambitions and efforts are backed by rugged, manly

The man who is weak, who lacks nerve force and energy, is certainly handicapped to a greater or less degree in every undertaking where a clear brain and an abundant reserve fund of nervous energy and vitality are essential-and these qualifications are required at the present day more than ever before.

I have devoted my entire life to the minute study of the causes and effects of nervous debility and those weaknesses of men which sap the vital energy. In nearly every case the trouble can he traced to some tax on the nervous system in former years, such as overwork, hard study, dissipation, indiscretions, etc., for all these things lower the vital forces and rob the constitution, and what is still more unfortunate, they generally do so at that delicate period of life when youth is merging into manhood, when Nature should be most assisted in her work of perfect development.

DON'T USE DRUGS

It is in correcting the consequences of these unfortunate mistakes that the properly applied current of Galvanic Electricity gives the best obtainable results, because science tells us that electricity and nerve force are one and the same thing. I apply it through the famous Dr. Sanden Electric Belt, with Suspensory Attachment. It is worn about the body at night only, and gives new life and energy to every weakened organ, cuting while you sleep.

My plan of selling my Appliances should meet with the approval of every fair-minded man. It is not necessary to pay in advance, or even to make a deposit. You can make arrangements to get a Belt suited to the requirements of your case, on trial, not to be paid for until you are cured, and I only charge the regular list price. If you are not satisfied with the results, you can send the Belt back to me, and that ends the transaction. Isn't that a fair offer?

If you are weak and nervous; if you lack confidence and ambition; if you are easily discouraged and depressed; if you are not the man you ought to be, you need Electricity. Your nerves are craving for it just as the growing fields crave sunshine and warmth. In the great and sublime effort nature is making to restore your strength, she needs some aid. Will you assist her? You can if you will. you assist her? You can if you will.

Dr. H. Sanche & Co. Dear Sirs,-Oxydonor has done so much for me I would not part with it on any account. It will be two years in June that I received it, and I have never taken any medicine since. MR. JOHN A. SMITH,

Discoverer of the Great Rheumatism Remedy, "Gloria Tonic."

On the theory "that seeing is believing," John A. Smith, of Windsor, Ont., wants everyone to try his remedy for the cure of rheumatism at his expense. For that reason he proposes to distribute fifty thousand 50 cent boxes among all persons sending him their address. Mr. Smith had suffered all the agony and torture from rheumatism, tried all the remedies known and yet utterly failed to find relief.

At times he was so helpless that he had to take morphine and after considerable doctoring he gave up in despair. He regan studying into the causes of rheumatism, and after much experimenting, finally found a combination of drugs which completely cured him. The result was so beneficial to his entire system that he called his new remedy "Gloria Tonic." Those of his friends, relatives and neighbours suffering from rheumatism were next cured and Mr. Smith concluded to offer his remedy to the world. But he found the task a difficult one, as nearly everybody had tried a hundred or more remedies, and they couldn't be made to believe that there was such a thing as a cure for rheumatism. But an old gentleman from Seguin, Texas, wrote him saying if Mr. Smith would send him a sample he would try it, but as he had suffered over thirty years and wasted a fortune with doctors and advertised remedies, he wouldn't buy anything more, until he knew it was worth something. The sample was sent, he purchased more and the result was astonishing. He was completely cured. This gave Mr. Smith a new idea and ever since that time he has been sending out free sample boxes to all who apply. At National Military Home, Kansas, it cured a veteran of rheumatism in hips and knees. In Hannaford, N. Dak., it cured a gentleman who writes: "Since taking 'Gloria Tonic' I am as supple as a boy." In Stayner, Ont., it enabled a lady to discard her crutches. In Westerly, R. I., R. R. No. 1, it cured a farmer, 72 years old. In Fountain City, Wis., it cured an old gentleman after suffering 33 years, and after seven physicians had tried in vain In Hull, Quebec, it cured a gentleman of chronic inflammatory rheumatism which was so severe that he could not walk a block without sitting down. In Lee Valley, Ont., it cured a gentleman of lame back and Salt Rheum. In St. John, West, N. B., it cured a case of Sciatic Rheumatism after other remedies had failed. In Oconto, Ont., it cured an old gentleman 80 years of age.

Mr. Smith will send a fifty cent box, also his illustrated book on rheumatism. absolutely free of charge to any reader of Western Home Monthly. who will enclose the following coupon, for he is anxious that everybody should profit by his good fortune. TEMPERANCE TALK.

Some Fifteen Years Ago.

I wandered to the grog shop, Tom, I stood before the bar, And drank a bowl of lemonade and smoked a rank cigar,

The same old kegs and jugs were there, the ones we used to know, When we were on the round-up, Tom, some fifteen years ago.

The barkeeper is a new one, Tom the one who used to sell Corrosive tanglefoot to us is smoking now in H-alifax.

The new one has a plate glass front, his hair is combed quite low, He looks just like the one we knew, some fifteen years ago.

Old soaks came up and called for booze, and dudele's staggered in, And burned the lining from their throats with fine old Holland gin; And women stood outside the door, their faces seamed with woe, And wept just as they used to weep, some fifteen years ago.

asked about the old-time friends, those cheerful sporty men, And some were in the poor house and some were in the pen; And one—the one we liked the best— the hangman laid him low, The world is much the same, dear Tom, as fifteen years ago.

I asked about that stately chap whom pride marked for its own, He used to say that he could drink, or let the stuff alone; He perished of the James H. Jams out in the storm and snow, Ah, few survive who used to bowl some fifteen years ago.

New crowds line up against the bar and call for crimson ink, New hands are trembling as they pour the stuff they shouldn't drink; But still the same old watchword rings, "This round's on me, you know," The same old cry of doom we heard some fifteen years ago.

I wandered to the churchyard, Tom, and there I saw the graves Of those who used to drown themselves in red fermenti waves; And there were women sleeping there, where grass and daisies grow, Who went and died of broken hearts, some fifteen years ago.

And there were graves where children sleep for many a year, Forgetful of the woe that marked their short, sad journey here: And 'neath a fine tall monument, in peace there lieth low, e man who used

Why Men Do Not Stop Drinking.

Everyone knows something of the effects of whisky along the lines of vice and crime. But men who drink to excess are not all vicious, and comparatively few are criminals.

Everyone knows of the poverty and misery that follow in the wake of drunkenness. But men who drink are not invariably poor; neither do they all neglect their families.

Inebriety in itself is not a question of morals or economics. It is a question of physical condition. It may lead to different complications with different individuals. But there is one point that must be common ground with all men who drink to excess, and that is the physical effect.

Unquestionably the crime and misery that are justly attributed to whisky have much to do with the false ideas These things are too concerning it. often looked upon as the whole of inbriety, instead of as one of its factors. And the man whose potations are not characterized by such manifestations is apt to think it is because he drinks more moderately, rather than to attribute it to its true cause of a difference in temperament.

He doesn't like to be mentioned in the same connection with the man who drinks to excess, and if his family or friends venture to suggest that liquor is getting too strong a hold on him he resents it very duickly.

It is unfortunate that whisky is not more uniform in its visible results. For it is hopelessly alike in its real effect on every person who drinks it. Whether its use is commenced as a social diversion or a physician's prescription, if it is continued it will lead to disease and

Alcohol is distinctly a poison. And poisons cannot be taken indiscriminately without causing disease. poison of alcohol causes a diseased condition of the nerve cells. They become so accustomed to performing their duties and functions under its influence that they are dependent on it and will not perform those functions painlessly without it. This cell necessity constitutes the disease of inebriety, and the craving for liquor is merely asymptom of the disease

Some constitutions are more susceptible to the poison than others, just as some constitutions are more susceptible to the poison of different diseases than others. But the difference is not a question of intellect or will. It is a physical difference. Two men may be gin to drink under similar circumstances, and one may remain a moderate drinker while the other becomes a drunkard. But the man who becomes the drunkard may be the one with the brightest intellect and the strongest will.

There is no advance test of possibilities in this particular. And if there were, the moderate drinker is liable at any time to cross the somewhat indefinite and elastic line that is sup-posed to stretch between himself and the confirmed drunkard. Of course, he does not intend to. No one ever willingly became an inebriate. No one deliberately plans to destroy his health, ruin his happiness or wreck his busi-

But whisky will do all these things. It is more insidious than any other poison. It is more treacherous than any other enemy. It promises strength to the feeble, and success to the discouraged. But it breaks every promise. And it does this so shrewdly that its victim does not know he is being Whisky dulls a man's perception so that he cannot discriminate between advantages and disadvantages. It paralyzes his will, and when some glimmering of his 'true condition finally dawns on his benumbed consciousness and he tries to give up the drink that has caused his undoing he finds that he is powerless to do so. Whisky has controlled his actions like a relentless demon. But that is only a small part of its work. It has created a diseased condition that he cannot overcome. He is a sick man. And the strange feature of the case is that he must have the whisky. It has produced a condition that demands its continuance.

He doesn't understand the philosophy of it, but if he tries to do without liquor he suffers torture. His friends may advise, and his family may implore. He drinks because he must. He cannot cure disease by means of a diseased and weakened will.

Every man likes to feel that he is master of himself. Even the man who drinks because his associations are depraved wants to think that he can stop when he chooses. But there is something more than a mere question of preference involved in most cases. Business requirements have made sobriety a necessity. A drinking man cannot secure a position. The first questhat greets his application for work will determine his fitness in that respect. Does he drink? Everything seems to hinge on that. If he drinks a little—occasionally, socially, or in any other manner he may as -ll not go on with his application. No one wants him. It is a question of total abstinence or no job. Or at least a very undesirable job.

The demand for sobriety in industrial positions has been a great promoter of temperance reforms. Men who would not stop drinking through principle have made desperate efforts to stop for business reasons. Sometimes they have succeeded. But they have suffered much in doing so. It pays to suffer some-

LIVER COMPLAINT

The chief office of the liver is the secretion of bile, which is the natural regulator of the bowels.

Whenever the liver becomes deranged. and the bile ducts clogged, liver complaint is produced, and is manifested by the presence of constipation, pain under the right shoulder, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, slimy-coated tongue and headache, heartburn, jaundice, sour stomach, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc.

Is A Remedy Without An Equal For COUGHS. COLDS, And All Affections Of The THROAT and LUNGS.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the insidious earlier stages of throat and lung disease, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge of. "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is not Sold as a Cure for Consumption

but for affections tributary to, and that result in, that disease. It combines all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe. So great has been the success of this wonderful remedy, it is only natural that numerous persons have tried to imitate it. Don't be humbugged into taking anything but "Dr. Woods." SCRANTON WOMAN MAKES RE-MARKABLE DISCOVERY THAT PROVES TO BE A GREAT AID TO BEAUTY

Broad Minded and Liberal, She Offers to Give Particulars to All Who Write. Absolutely Free.

Della Ellison, of Scranton, Pa., seems to be the woman whose name shall go down in history as the discoverer of the true secret of beauty. For centuries past women have realized that wrinkles not only made them look much older than they were, but were also the destroyer of their beauty, and with ceaseless efforts they have sought to stay the hand of time, which robbed them of this most valuable charm.

Knowing that the homely woman with deep lines and furrows must fight an uncqual battle with her younger and better looking sister, many resorted to annoying and even dangerous experiments trying to regain their former youthful appearance. This new discovery, however, will do away with all these rash measures, as the treatment is harmless and simple. It is said that, aside from banishing wrinkles in from one to three nights, it is a great aid to beauty, making the skin soft and velvety and beautifying the complexion. Many who have followed Miss Ellison's advice look from five to twenty years younger, and, judging by the number of replies she is receiving daily, people are not slow at taking advantage of her generous offer.

It comes as a surprise that the discovery should be made by a modest little woman in Scranton, when our large cities are full of beauty doctors and specialists who have sought in vain for a treatment that would turn back the clock of time and place the imprint of youth on the fast-fleeting footsteps of age, but far more surprising is the fact that she is to remain where she is. In speaking of the discovery she said: "Yes, I know there would be many advantages in my going to some of the larger cities, but I have made arrangements to give particulars of my treatment Free to all who write me, so that the women in every city and town may have the benefits of my discovery.

This statement shows that she is both broad-minded and generous, and all who thou faithful, Christian soldier, faithful till thy day is done, Faithful till the Master calls thee, calls thee to receive thy crown. Hold aloft the cross of Jesus! high above the storms of earth, Keeping ever in His footsteps, Who has saved thy soul from death, Fierce and long the conflict rages, ever watchful thou must be, Praying ever for His guidance, who has given His life for thee Hear His voice forever ringing high above the toil and strife, "Be thou faithful till the finish, I will give the Crown of Life."

Help us, O Thou great Redeemer! all our lives to follow Thee, would be Thy loving servants, we would give our all to Thee; When the road is dark and dreary be Thou ever by our side; When the path is bright and cheerful, be Thou still our constant Guide..

Many things will surely tempt us, flery trials we each shall see, But we have Thy gracious promise, if we still but follow Thee;

Help us, then, to follow fully; fill our hearts with Thy great love; Then at last we each shall see Thee, in Thy glorious home above.

We shall see Thee in Thy kingdom, we shall hear Thy gracious voice, Thou wilt gladly give us welcome, Thou wilt bid our souls rejoice: "Well done, good and faithful servant!

And we answer, "Yea, Lord, truly! by the merits of Thy Son!" "By His love alone we triumph, He has led our hearts to Thee, He has kept us through life's journey, to His praise our song shall be;" Safe at last in Heaven's bright mansion, safe through all the toil and strife, will tune our harps right gladly, when we take the Crown of life. -Chas. D. Powell

MISCELLANEOUS.

A little salt added to the water when scrubbing willow furniture will give it a fresh appearance.

Match marks on a polished or varnished surface may be removed by first rubbing them with a cut lemon and then with a cloth dipped in water.

By rubbing nickel and silver ornaments with a woolen cloth saturated with spirits of ammonia they may be kept bright with but little trouble.

Tall flower vases should be weighted by pouring in a small quantity of shot or pebbles that they may not be easily overturned. Sand is also useful in this connection.

To extract juice from a lemon without extracting the seeds, roll the lemon until soft and puncture one end of it with a fork, when the juice may be easily squeezed out.

An enameled kettle which has been allowed to boil dry should be immediately filled with boiling water. water poured in in such a case would cause the enamel to chip.

Looking glasses ought always to be washed with soapsuds and warm water and then polished with a newspaper made into a pad. This will give them a very brilliant pelish.

Teapots that are made of metal, if unused for some time, will often give a musty flavor to the tea when next used. This may be prevented by placing a lump of sugar in the teapot before putting it away.

Diamonds, whether genuine or imitation, should always be cleaned by rubbing them with a soft brush dipped in soap and water. This will remove the dust around the setting of the stones. Then rinse the jewel in some alcohol, such as eau de cologne or spirits of lavender, and place in some fine bran or sawdust. Leave them for a little time; when quite dry the sawdust can be easily removed.

In packing away winter clothes a good way to avoid the disagreeable smell of moth balls is to pack clothes away in lavender. This not only keeps away moths, but imparts a delicious odor to your clothing when taken out in the

A Simple Lubricator.—The ice-cream freezer needed oiling badly, but no oil of a suitable character was to be found in the house, and no time to spare to get any from the store. In the emergency hot lard was used with the desired result.

The life of old linoleum may be lengthened by giving it a coat of clear varnish. When dried the varnished surface is easily kept clean with a damp cloth. When there is a badly worn spot in the center it is sometimes a good plan to cut the linoleum through the middle and bring the two outer edges together before varnishing.

To prevent insects from infesting bird cages great cleanliness is necessary. An occasional scrubbing with household ammonia and water will purify the cage wonderfully; but to do this one must have another cage in which the bird may be kept till the washed one is perfectly dry again. It is a good plan to keep a small bag of powdered sulphur hanging in the cage. This will not harm the bird, and will keep off the vermin that are apt to be troublesome in cages even when one is careful as regards cleanliness,

A Cheap Crib for Baby .- When baby needs a bed by herself, take three-foot poultry wire of desired length for the springs, one-foot wire for sides. Chair legs or rounds, which can be obtained at any furniture factory, make fine legs. They can also be used for head and foot. Make frame and tack wire on firmly. Paint all over with white enamel paint, and you have as cute a bed as one could wish for.

Gream Cheese.—A cook whose pantry was depleted of its supply of soft cream cheese, so handy for making sandwiches because spreading so eas-ily, tried an experiment. She took a slice of the common Canadian cheese, cut it into small pieces, then crumbled it with the back of a fork, then worked in enough butter to bring it to the consistency of cream cheese. When spread on sandwiches she was complimented on the excellent quality of the filling.

Ironing-Day Hints.—Proper starching lessens the work of ironing—hence these few hints. To make delicate fabrics look like new: Boil one cupful of rice in three quarts of water; drain and use water or starch. Wet the clothes in it, wring, roll in dry cloth for an hour or two, then iron. rice comes in handy for dinner.) Corn starch is better than laundry starch for stiffening lace curtains or other Starch of all kinds should become lukewarm before using. Hot starch turns dainty colors dark and ruins their beauty. Dissolve two ounces of powdered gum arabic in a quart of boiling water, strain, and keep bottled. A little added to starch for dresses and skirts (white or colored) gives an appearance of newness, and they will keep stiff and clean longer than when starched with ordinary clear-starch.

A Brass Cleaner.—A brass fire-set of shovel, tongs and poker I had always wanted. At last, when the much-desired set was in my possession, I thought my happiness was complete, but I soon discovered that I was wrong. The articles were bought for use, not for ornament, so of course had to be cleaned. Then trouble began in finding something that would do the work thoroughly and in as short time as possible.

At last the problem was solved. A lemon cut in halves and dipped frequently in salt did the work well. If the articles were badly soiled it took two lemons, but generally one lemon, a handful of salt, and about five minutes' rubbing did the work.

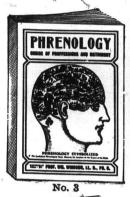

This remedy is tried and true and is passed on to some other sister suffering under a brass infliction, as guaranteed.

Repeat it:- "Shiloh's Cure will al ways cure my coughs and colds."
