Success Coming to the TRAINED MAN

If you want success you must train for it. Wealth, position, fame and prosperity do not come to the man who continues in the same old rut every day, minding everybody's business but his own.

The time that most young people spend in idle, fruitless amusements, if properly devoted to technical training, would mean a larger salary, a bigger business, greater success, position and prosperity.

The C. B. C. offers a grand opportunity for those who wish practical training that will put them ahead of the common crowd. There's no better recommendation any person could have—no better any one could wish for—than a diploma from the C. B. C.

If you wish to study shorthand, typewriting, book-keeping, penmanship, banking, office practice, business correspondence, English branches, engineering and navigation, you will find the C. B. C. is the one place where you get satisfactory training.

Chapels on Wheels.

The idea of having a chapel on wheels is by no means a new one in the British Isles, for even if the name of chapel can scarcely be claimed by the travelling vans belonging to Kessit and the Protestant Alliance, no one will deny it to the "Little Ark" of Carrigobhille, that did so much to keep the faith alive in Western Clare during those cruel years that followed the great famine in Ireland.

The motor chapel with which Fathers Vaughan and Norgate are carrying a beacon light of Catholic Truth through the eastern counties of England this summer is unlike its predecessor in almost every respect. Father Michael Meehan's "Little Ark" was a rough wooden structure built by a local carpenter in the wilds of Clare, and except for the fact of having windows all round, it was more like a bathing box than anything else.

The clumsy cartwheels on which it stood allowed but for the slowest locomotion, and though there were shafts attached to it, when the need for locomotion did arise it was more often the priest's congregation than his horse that pulled or pushed the chapel into place, for the circumstances that had called it into being forbade its being moved far off the narrow strip of foreshore or no man's land, whence even the law was powerless to remove it.

Father Vaughan's chapel, on the contrary, fitted with powerful engines of the most up-to-date pattern, can cover more miles in one day than its predecessor covered in the whole course of its existence, and its appearance, its finish, its internal and external appointments are almost as unlike the "Little Ark" as a mad-walled chapel is to a city church. Yet, motor and ark, chapel and chariot are all identical in one thing. All alike have been the throne of the Blessed Sacrament, and the home of God.

The work of Father Vaughan and his companions is almost entirely with non-Catholics, whether at home at the Mission House at Bronesbury Park, near London, or giving missions in the Catholic Churches of England, and, according to their latest development, travelling by motor to towns and villages where the Catholic Church exists as yet, where few if any Catholics reside, and where the traits of which they are the standard bearers are regarded either with stolid indifference or with facetious dislike.

The motor chapel is an important factor in a campaign that is both active and up to date. The "Ark" was essentially a passive resistor.
The former in combating ignorance and some facetious opposition. The latter was indeed an ark of salvation in a densely populated district where frenzied hatred of Catholicity were trying, with the aid of bodily persecution, to force those who had received the gift of faith from God to apostatize.

Religious tolerance has made such great strides in the British Isles during recent years that some people will hardly credit the fanaticism and persecution that were rife sixty years ago. Ireland at that time was only emerging from the thrall of the penal laws, and it was as yet impossible in the thickly populated districts of the west for the bulk of the people to be instructed in more than the absolutely necessary truths of religion. The National Board of Education was just coming into being, but its schools were few in number, and it was not only in religions but in secular knowledge as well that the people were lacking.

In the parish of Carrigobhille, a long, narrow peninsula that lies between the Atlantic and the Shannon, the Board had but one school for a population of twelve thousand people, but of these a third were carried off by famine and by fever, and the remaining eight thousand were left in the most utter destitution. The parish was twenty miles long and there were three priests attached to it, but none of them escaped the famine fever, the parish priest, Father Malsoby Duggan, having said Mass at an outlying chapel and administered the last Sacraments to no less than eighteen who were dying of cholera and fever on the very day he himself was stricken down. The Bishop of Kilmore, a namesake of Father Vaughan's, appointed Father Michael Meehan to Father Duggan's place, and when the epidemic had abated the prospect before the new parish priest was a serious one.

There had been a certain number of hedge schools in the district which were held mostly at night, and where some secular and good deal of solid religious instruction could be obtained, but now some local Protestants, led by an agent named Marcus Keane, knowing that the people were hopeless and helpless after the famine and the fever, professed themselves anxious to help them to recover from the effects of these double calamities, and their first act was to establish schools where the children would be provided with food and clothing as well as with free education. This was a bait which, when backed by an assurance that there should be no interference with the children's religion, was naturally irresistible to people who were still only one step removed from starvation.

This being so, even when the assurances of non-interference were disregarded, the doles of food and clothing were continued, though the understanding that the receivers should attend the Protestant church.
With a cry upon their lips that was heartrending, "Good-bye, God Almighty, till the potatoes grow again," the parents allowed their children to remain at the schools, that were now avowedly proselytizing centres.

To combat the evil Father Meehan was at his wit's end. He had neither church nor school in the neighborhood where this proselytizing was going on, and though he tried to say Mass every week in one or other of the people's houses, he soon found that those who thus made him welcome did so at a heavy cost, and more than one of them were dispossessed of their farms in consequence. Father Meehan then managed to buy the good will of a couple of cottages from two families who were emi-grating, and throwing them into one, he erected an altar, and so, under their thatched roof the Charch of Saint Patrick came into being.
Almost immediately however the priest's claim even to this miserable shelter was disputed, and the same late overtook him as had overtaken those who had allowed him to say Mass in their houses, and meanwhile the work of the proselytizers grew and flourished, nourished on the starvation, spiritual and temporal, of its victims.

It was now, when everything seemed hopeless that the idea of the "Little Ark" came to the almost depairing priest. So it was built and placed on the foreshore, whence neither landlord nor proselytizer could displace it, and Sunday after Sunday, in the best of five summers and for five wet, stormy winters Mass was offered in the frail moveable chapel, with the congregation knocking bargained on the sand or along the roadway, heedless of the weather, but offering to God the cand mite of faith, the hundred thousand welcomes that were dashed to him elsewhere.

So by slow degrees the leakage was stopped, and even at last those who had succumbed in their hunger to overwhelming temptation came back to the Faith that in their hearts they had never abandoned. The existence of the "Little Ark" became known to others outside the peninsula on which it stood, and both English and Irish papers having taken up the cause, the originators of the proselytizing were obliged to give the site for an immovable church.

The "Little Ark" had done its work, and so, too, had its promoter, and when Father Meehan was laid to rest in the new church, his last moments consoled by the thought that ten schools, the result mainly of the generous contributions he received during two visits to his exiled flock in the United States, during the early sixties, would carry on un molested the work on which he had expended his life, the "Little Ark" was near him still. And there it still stands, no longer a movable chapel, only a relic of the past, and of the great number who have gone in the last sixty years to seek their fortunes over the ocean, scarcely one has gone without carrying a chip of the weather-stricken timber as a reminder that wherever they may go, their Faith must be to them, as it was to their fathers, a thing worth struggling and suffering for.

The motor which, after so long an interval, has reawakened the interest of the Catholic public in movable chapels has been started to combat no active enemy, but rather to try and pierce the dense cloud of ignorance and prejudice towards Catholicity that the passing of centuries, since East Anglia was the British Church, has made well nigh impenetrable. It is in districts where there are already Catholic churches and Catholic congregations that missions to combat heathenism are needed. Father Vaughan and his companions have embarked on a different campaign. They are proclaiming the Truth where for generations no one has dared to proclaim it. When funds had been provided for the building and equipment of the motor, it was formally blessed by the Archbishop of Westminster and then, under the patronage of St.
Angeline and St. Gregory, it started on its first tour. Besides the altar, with its vessels, its candles sticks and vases, its crucifixes and pictures, it is well stocked with leaflets, pamphlets and books, for in these days of the ascendancy of the press it is not wise to rely on speaking alone; even when the speakers are some of the best known of the time, the diffusion of literature is a most necessary part of the scheme.

July second was the opening day of the first mission; the place, Haverhill, in Suffolk; the missionary of the week, Father Bernard S. J., and the motto, "Stick to it, stick to it, stick to it, now Popery."
Near by a rival "movable chapel," manned by the Protestant Alliance, displayed its old warning, "No Popery," but in spite of this, the hall in which Father Vaughan's lectures were given was crowded, and Fathers Herber, Vaughan and Norgate, with a lay helper, were kept busy in attending to the Question Box, wherein any written query might be placed for answer on the following evening. The Protestant Alliance also had not been idle, and on leaving the ball the workers were hissed and booed by an antagonistic crowd, but before the end of the week public feeling seemed to have changed, and Father Vaughan's clearly expressed hope that on his next visit to Haverhill he would speak to them, not in a public hall but in a chapel of their own, was greeted by the people with cheers.

The second week's mission at Royston, where Father Allibon, himself a convert, was the preacher, was no less successful than the first, while four other weeks have had the same reports to give, of missions preached by the fathers of the missionary society, by Father Nicholson, C.S.S.R., and by Monsignor Benson.

When the full programme of the summer and autumn campaigns have been carried out, the motor chapel will return to its winter quarters in London, and it is not now, but in the future, that the work it has done will develop. The seed have been sown, but no one can tell when or where the harvest will be gathered.

But those who have assisted at a Mass said at that movable altar, the first Mass to have been said in most of the places since before the Reformation, have no doubt that the grace of God must linger round those places, and that His blessing is upon those who have carried the Truth or who have received it through the Motor Chapel.— America.

Pledging the Children.

"An eminent medical scientist," says the Ave Maria, "after a long study of the drink evil, has become convinced that as a rule, intemperity is contracted while the victim is still in his teens; and that if a young man has not indulged to excess in intoxicants before he is twenty-one years of age, he is unlikely to do so later in life. These deductions show the wisdom of the custom, now an established one in numerous American dioceses, of having children take a total abstinence pledge, binding until they are twenty-one, on the day of their First Communion or at Confirmation. Besides safeguarding their health and morals, the youthful abstinence pledge has the advantage of observing the effect of the bowling on their elders, and will learn for themselves that drinking is an expensive and luxurious as well as injurious habit, that nowadays 'old lopers' die young of Bright's disease; that confirmed drunkards are often prostrated from the onset of moderate drinkers; and that stumbling results in occasional drunkenness even among those who are said 'never to commit themselves.'"

In the diocese of Hartford, Conn., the custom is to bind the children until they are twenty-five. Speaking recently to a group of total abstinence Governor Baldwin of Connecticut gave high approval to the work done by Bishop Nihan and his predecessor, Bishop Tierney.
He told the young men that they were wise in taking the pledge in childhood and binding themselves to total abstinence till they were twenty-five. Thus were early years safeguarded. Later on they could see for themselves the evils of intemperance; and their own intelligence, self-respect and sense of self-preservation would teach them that their best interests required them to remain total abstinence all their lives. "It is remarkable," commented the Catholic Transcript, "how almost identical are the words of the Governor and those of the Bishops."

Departmental Reforms

It is reported from Ottawa that the Laurier Government have left the administration service in a curiously mixed and chaotic condition, instances of duplication being numerous and much waste of effort and expense being incurred. As a consequence of the change of Government an extensive remodeling of the service is likely to be inaugurated. Very probably the work of remodeling will be systematically undertaken by a small commission being appointed by the Government to examine into the situation and draw up a coherent plan for the grouping of the various services.

While no names as yet are mentioned in an authoritative manner, the suggestion is heard that J. M. Courtney, former deputy minister of finance and chairman of the Courtney commission through his experience and ability would make an admirable member, so would Jos. Pope who has had great administrative experience.

If a member of the government were assigned to consider the question the name of Geo. H. Perley would at once occur. He has remarkable executive ability, has first class business experience and as minister without portfolio he is not in a position to favor any one department over another.

Among the changes in prospect one which is almost certain, is the transfer of the department of external affairs to the prime minister. The treatment of this department by the Laurier government was ludicrously unbusiness-like. It first created it as a separate department, it then, possibly because the deputy minister had entered office in Conservative days, crowded it aside and the reciprocity agreement, surely a case of external affairs, was concluded without a reference to the recently formed department. It was as if the chancellor of the exchequer in Great Britain were to conclude a trade treaty over the head of the foreign office. Henceforth the prime minister will have at his hand the materials for forming correct views as to the external policy of Canada.

Another pressing reform is the cutting away from the department of agriculture of the extraneous services such as the census, statistics, patents, trade marks, copyright, public health and archives.

Simultaneously grain inspection should move over from trade and commerce to agriculture. Census and statistics may be attached to labor.

Yet another subject for reform is the making of maps. At present the cartographical work is done by the militia, the interior, the geological survey, the marine and fisheries and even the post office departments. The creation of one map making bureau has long been agitated, but came to nothing under the lethargic administration of the Laurier cabinet.

Seventy-three women have been injured in Philadelphia because they wore high heels and hobble skirts, but they doubtless looked stylish on the way to the hospitals—Washington Herald.

Opinion of the London Times

In the course of an editorial in its issue of September 29th the London Times, referring to the Dominion elections has this to say:

"The Canadian people have answered an old question in the old British way. More vigorous indeed in its expression than they themselves for the most part expected, their verdict against the policy of the Washington Agreement is only the same verdict which they delivered first when Confederation was carried, for the second time when the National Policy was framed, and for the third time when Sir John Macdonald issued his famous manifesto and won his last great fight. Mr. Borden may claim with justice that his majority represents a substantial body of opinion in every part of the country and among every class of the community. He has worked much and endured much in the making of his power. Often in difficulties with sections of his own party, to whose leadership he succeeded in a time of almost complete disintegration and impotence, he has led it with an honesty of method, a grasp of principle, and a constant disdain of the lower ways of politics which prove him worthy of his new place. He is at present little known in this country but all we know of him is good, and we look forward to knowing him more. He succeeds to office in the greatest of the Dominions at a time of deep importance in Imperial affairs, and now that his opportunity has come, we endorse with confidence our Canadian correspondent's predictions of two years ago, that no sounder British Imperialist will fashion legislation and direct opinion in the Dominion over seas."

The real test of a Cabinet is not in what preconceived notions anyone may have of it, but in the work it will do.—Mail and Empire.

Well, at all events, Canada can't keep us from reducing our tariff when we finally make up our minds to quit cheating ourselves.—Bangor News.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier retires from the Liberal leadership the popular man to succeed him seems to be Mr. German of Welland. Mr. German is the only Liberal member of this Parliament who was on the popular side of the great question at issue.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

The following named Ministers of the Borden Cabinet, have been constituted the new Treasury Board: Hon. W. T. White, Hon. George E. Foster, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Hon. F. D. Monk, Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. Frank Cochrane. Many important matters come before the Board at once.

It is stated semi-officially from Ottawa that all the contracts let in the dying hours of the late government will be held up on the orders of Hon. F. D. Monk, Minister of Public Works and submitted to a close scrutiny. These jobs, about thirty in number, total far up in the millions and will include the Courtenay Bay improvements, I. C. R. extensions, etc. They were put through but not finally awarded owing, it is said, to Earl Grey's disapproval of this course.

"The Maple Leaf Forever" may not be the song of Culture, but it is the Song of Canada. The band played "The Maple Leaf Forever" when E. L. Borden returned in triumph to his native town in Nova Scotia. At Regina, Winnipeg and the coast cities, as truly as in Ontario and the Maritime Provinces, rejoicing Canadians found in the simple melody of heartfelt words that came from the heart of Alexander Muir a tribute of affection for Canadian nationality and British unity that they could not find in offered substitutes for Canada's own song.—Toronto Telegram.

In first names of the new Cabinet is proof that Canadian parents of fifty years ago stuck to the good old-fashioned designations. There are two Williams, two Roberts, two Georges, Frank, Tom, Sam, Fred, Charles and John in the new ministry. The growing boys of today named Wilfrid may safely be said to have been named after the former Prime Minister. Seeing the name Robert is so frequently met with, those named after the new Premier will have to be christened "Robert Laird" in order to distinguish them from the ordinary "Bob."—Ottawa Journal.

On Thursday evening last, Hon. J. D. Hazen, Premier of New Brunswick, who has become Minister of Marine in the Borden Cabinet, tendered the resignation of his Government to Lieutenant-Governor Tweedie. Following the advice of the retiring Premier, Hon. J. K. Fleming, Provincial Secretary, was called upon by the Governor to form a new administration. He accepted the task and the new Ministry was sworn in on Monday. Mr. Fleming becomes Surveyor-General and Mr. Grimmer Attorney-General and Mr. McLeod Provincial Secretary. The solicitor General is to be chosen.

New Governor-General

Duke and Duchess of Connaught Arrive.

ARE ACCORDED A GRAND RECEPTION.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught, who are to preside over Rideau Hall at Ottawa as representatives of King George for the next few years, arrived at Quebec last Thursday evening and landed Friday morning. They were accorded just such a reception as they might be expected, from loyal Canadians to members of the royal household. The streets were gaily decorated for the occasion and everywhere was manifested the liveliest interest in the reception to the new Governor-General. His Excellency was received by the Deputy Governor-General, the members of the Dominion cabinet, the inspector general of militia, the director of naval service, the Lieut-Governor of the province of Quebec, the Prime Minister of the province and the members of the provincial cabinet. As he stepped from the boat the band broke into the National Anthem and cheers were given by the thousands who had assembled to do honor to the representative of Great Britain's ruler. A salute of 21 guns was given. His Royal Highness was escorted to the carriages which were to convey him and his party to the Parliament building. The actual ceremonies of installation took place in the legislative council room and were most impressive.

Their Royal Highness occupied seats on the dais in the legislative council chamber. Around a long table immediately below the dais were ranged the members of the new cabinet seated in order of precedence. Immediately behind the ministers, and just below the dais on the right hand side were Lieutenant Governor and Lady Langelle. The supreme court judges occupied similar positions on the left hand side. When all was ready, Capt. Victor Pelletier, aide de camp to the lieutenant governor of Quebec, entered the hall from the Speaker's apartments, and announced to the supreme court judges that their Royal Highnesses were about to enter. A brilliant military staff, including the royal staff and members of the militia council at Ottawa, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess. Col. Lowther, military secretary to His Royal Highness, advanced to the table and read the royal commission appointing the Duke governor general of Canada. Mrs. Borden at this point presented a bouquet to the Duchess. The oaths of office were then administered by Sir Louis Davies of the supreme court. His Royal Highness signed the oaths and this act was followed by the firing of a salute from the citadel and the playing of the six bars of the National Anthem by the bands in attendance at the Hall.

The presentation of the great seal of state to the governor general by the secretary of state, Hon. W. J. Roche, followed, as is customary. It was returned immediately to its former keeper, as an indication that the new ministers are to continue the advisers of Earl Grey's successor.

"I am thankful," said Sir Charles Tupper in a recent interview, "that I have been permitted to live, not only to see carried out all the great measures—with the exception of Imperial preference—to which my public life has been devoted, but also to see the entire concurrence with these great measures of public policy of both great parties in Canada. The great advance in mutual preferential trade between Great Britain and her Dominions has been achieved by the triumph of Mr. Borden, who is strongly devoted to that policy. I have no doubt that the consolidation of the Empire by that means will be accomplished at no distant date. Mr. Borden is a man of high personal character and great ability, and has carried on this struggle against reciprocity both in the House of Commons and throughout Canada in the most effective and brilliant manner. He has secured not only the unbroken phalanx of the Liberal Conservative party, but also the hearty co-operation of a large number of the most able and influential men in the regular Liberal party. His success is, therefore, a triumph of principle and patriotism on a vital Imperial issue. The great question which endangered Canada in 1891, and on which the Liberal party were then defeated, has now been permanently settled. It is dead—killed by the overwhelming majority of the people. The main ground on which I opposed the proposal of reciprocity was because President Taft was supporting it as the means of preventing the adoption of Mr. Chamberlain's policy for the consolidation of the Empire."

War News

Tripoli, Oct. 12.—Gen Canava, commander in chief of the Italian expedition has decided to act quickly and it is believed that the troops under him will march immediately against the positions occupied by the Turks. A reconnaissance of the desert today disclosed the central body of the Turkish troops with field guns not far from the city.

Nineteen more Italian transports escorted by warships and carrying the second division of the troops, arrived this morning. The men were hastily landed. The division is 15,000 strong and there are now 22,000 Italian soldiers on the coast of Tripoli for its defense. Not only is the Italian position now safeguarded against surprise, but an effective occupation of the interior can begin.

It is reported that the Arabs have accepted the Italian occupation joyfully, but some of the natives remain in the harbor in readiness for emergencies. Troops were landed today also at Benghazi, Derna, Tobruk and Bombah.

Although the utmost precautions have been taken looking to the perfecting of sanitary arrangements, cholera has broken out and it is reported that four deaths have occurred. General Canava has addressed a proclamation to the inhabitants, assuring them they have not been enslaved by Italy. On the contrary they have been liberated from the yoke under which they have been laboring for years. They will be ruled by their own chiefs under the patronage of the king of Italy. The religious and civil laws will be respected and taxes will be reduced or abolished.

Nineteen transports arrived in the harbor this morning. They brought the second part of the Italian army expeditionary corps which is to occupy Tripoli. The landing of the troops, artillery, ammunition and horses began immediately.

When the transports were sighted the forts saluted and the colors of Italy were run up over the fortifications and principal buildings of the town. Great crowds of Europeans and natives in characteristic costume saluted and soldiers gathered along the shore. Entering the harbor cheers from the transports could be heard replying to the noisy welcome from the land. There was a great waving of rifles, hats and handkerchiefs.

Governor Bore, D'Olimo commandant of Cagliari, Mayor Hassan Karamani and several Arab chiefs went to the pier and personally welcomed the officers and men as they came ashore. The landing was conducted expeditiously, the experience of yesterday being utilized to advantage today. The Bersaglieri Sappers are busy constructing wooden huts for accommodation of the troops, the barracks being inadequate.

A part of the force landed today was sent to occupy Benghazi and Derna, Bombah and Tobruk. Smaller garrisons will be established at Marsa, Sosa, Toza, Medina, Lebda, Hissa, Moerata and a few other points.

Rome, Oct. 12.—Advice received here today from Tripoli state that the Italian governor, Rear Admiral Bore, D'Olimo has been ordered to expel several Maltese who were attached to the old regime, and have shown a disposition to resist the innovation. Their attitude has surprised the Italians.

The Officers are finding great difficulty in holding the soldiers within bounds as the latter are anxious to march on the enemy in the interior. Soldiers have now replaced the sailors on duty, and the advance posts have been extended to several miles around Tripoli. It is evidently the purpose of the Italians to gradually push their lines to the Gharian hills where the remnants of Turkish troops have retired. News from the interior is contradictory. Some reports have it that Manliur Pasha, the commander of the Turks, is about to surrender, while according to others, he is gathering a large army in preparation to resist indefinitely.

Thirty gold nuggets, some as large as peas, were taken from the crabs of six gasses raised by Israel Altschul of Santa Barbara, Calif. When neighbors heard of the find a small gold rush was started. The preliminary official reports from Washington indicate that the 1911 European wheat crop will be on record as a fairly close third in magnitude to the banner ones as in the preceding years. The estimates for the eight countries of Europe are 1,716,905,000 bushels as compared with 1,747,597,000 bushels last year. The deficiency in the European crop, due to a decrease in production in Russia, is coincident with an increase of 5,900,000 bushels in the wheat crop of Canada, and of 11,500,000 bushels in British India.

Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic Governor of New Jersey, addressing an assembly of a thousand of his fellow Democrats, told them Canada was a generation ahead of the United States in the regulation of corporate business, in her banking system and in her currency system. Canada rejected the reciprocity agreement, he said, because her people feared that by adopting it they would open the door to the evils that prevail in the business system of the republic. "The present contrast between Canada and the United States," he said, "is that in the United States the business is brutal and disturbed; in Canada it is absolutely brayed with confidence and with hope."

Ontario General Election

The Provincial Legislature will be dissolved very soon and a general election will be held the first or second week in December.

This announcement, made by Sir James Whitney late this Thursday, had been expected for several days. The primary reason assigned by Sir James is that the expense of holding bye-elections to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of former members of the legislature now members of the federal House of Commons together with the vacancy caused by the Hon. Frank Cochrane's removal to Ottawa, would amount to at least $15,000 and this expense would have to be duplicated in less than a year if the House were not dissolved now.
