The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XI.

Lady Falconer's eyelids go up and down like shutters, and Maud emits something like a groan and a sniff, through which is heard a giggle from Edie at the piano.

Aunt Fernor colors, and glances timidly and reproachfully at the innocent offender.

"Chucked!—I think you said 'chucked' my dear!"

"Chucked" was the word, huntie," assents Dulcie, cheerfully and conclusively. "It wasn't my word, you know."

"It is not a word that should ever pass any lady's lips," says Lady Falconer, with the air of a judge passing sentence.

Then Dulcie looks up, the color in her face, the old defiance in her voice.

"You mean that it is slang?" she says. "So it is; but in time it may come to be respectable English; half our every-day language was slang a hundred, fifty, years ago. It is a very expressive word."

"It is a word," says Lady Falconer, with fearful solemnity, "that I would be very sorry to hear escape the lips of a daughter of mine."

"But I'm not a daughter—" begins Dulcie, then she breaks off, and rises hastily, perceiving that if she remains another five minutes it will end in a wordy war.

"I think I'll go upstairs and dress," she says. "I've some letters to write," and leaving the antimacassar and the work on the sofa— a deed which is an outrage in the Falconers' eyes—she hurries from the room, and runs into the arms of Sir Hugh, who has just entered the hall.

"Halloo!" he says, speaking in the hushed voice he has to use when he meets Dulcie alone, and holding her imprisoned in his arms. "Where are you running to, my darling? What's the matter?" scanning the flushed face and flashing eyes.

"Hush!" she whispers, with a mock attempt at pushing him away, but in reality nestling against him. "They'll hear you. They are all in there like conspirators, or—or—a coroner's jury. And so they are! for they are always sitting on me," and she laughs softly, restored by the joke.

"He laughs too, but rather uneasily. "What have you been doing now?" he asks, drawing her out of ear-shot. "Breaking anything?"

"Only one of their social codes," she says. "Let me go, Hugh, they will come out—some of the servants."

He holds her still tighter, and draws her into a protected corner. "What is it?" he asks again.

She looks down, then up into his face appealingly. "It was only a little row—I mean a squabble; it doesn't signify in the slightest, only it was getting a little too warm, and I fled. He that fights and runs away, you know."

"You seem rather fond of fighting," he says, with a smile, fond and devoted, as he takes the small, soft ear between his finger and thumb and caresses it.

"No, I'm not," she retorts with a pout. "I'm one of the best-tempered creatures in the world when—when I'm not stroked the wrong way."

Weak, Anaemic Women, Thin, Nervous Men and Puny Children

Think what new health will mean to you— plenty of good rich blood, a strong healthy body, sturdy nerves, always feel well, sleep well, look well, awaken in the morning after a sound sleep, full of vigor and with a clear active brain, this is what Zotic will do for you— give you a new life, a different idea of health.

Zotic is not to be classed among the many patent medicines that have miraculously found a market for their worthlessness—Zotic is an absolutely reliable tonic, your doctor will tell you so. It is a new and improved combination of Pyrophosphates, fine coloring, purest Cod Liver Oil, extract of pure beef and the finest tonic wine.

The great Zotic contains actual elements of the human body, and for this, weak, nervous men and women, the action of Zotic in feeding the system with liquid iron without interfering with the digestion will unfold its wonderfulness in performing the work for which it is intended.

SUGGESTIONS TO SICK WOMEN

How Many Are Restored To Health.

First.—Almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Second.—The medicine most successful in relieving female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates and strengthens the organism; it overcomes disease.

For forty years it has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth, and the Change of Life.

Third.—The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Fourth.—Every ailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. "I desire, will bring you health and may save your life."

but they never, never stroke me the right way. "And—with a little reproachful glance—"you never told me that they were coming to-night, Hugh."

"Who?" he asks. "Sir Archie"—pause—"and Miss Fairfax," with a little emphasis on the name which she dislikes with instinctive repugnance.

He shrugs his shoulders and smiles. "I didn't know myself," he says. "You didn't? Why, Hugh, then you don't know that they are going to have a dinner-party to-morrow night?"

"I heard something about that," he says. "Something!" she echoes. "Why, Hugh, one would think that you were nobody."

"So I am," he says, good-temperedly—"in my own house, that is."

She stares up at him with all a woman's wonder that a big, powerful man should be ruled by—any other woman than herself.

"I heard something of it," he repeats. "Why should they bother me about it? I am always at home, and always ready, and I hate to be worried. And so Archie is coming to-night! Hem!"

And he looks down at her with a sharp little scrutiny.

"And Miss Fairfax," she says, mischievously. "Aren't you glad, Hugh?"

"Yes," he says, meeting her smiling eyes—"yes, of course." A pause. "Dulcie—"

"Well!"

"Do you think they have any inkling of our little arrangement?"

She shakes her head with earnest conviction.

"Certainly not! I wouldn't have them know it for worlds—not yet."

He strokes his mustache. "You don't think they'd better know before—before these people come?"

"No," she says, eagerly. "Certainly not! It would make them furious and everything disagreeable; and—with a smile—"it will be rather jolly having these people, won't it, Hugh?"

"I'm satisfied as it is," he says, with all a lover's content, "so that I have you."

"Yes, that's very nice, but in addition to me you have your shooting, and riding, and dogs, and all that. You don't have to sit working an antimacassar and listening to county customs as I have, and without the prospect of a change!"

"My poor, hard-used little darling," he says, pressing the tall, slim figure closer to him. "It is hard lines for you, but never mind, it will be better by and by."

"Do you think so?" doubtfully. "It seems to me, Hugh, that it will never be better, that they will dislike me to the end of the chapter."

"They wouldn't," he says, vaguely. "If they knew that it was all settled."

"No!" she says. "They must not know. Lady Falconer would have a fit, I know she would! We must break it to her gently, Hugh; and, oh, Hugh! you must be a little more careful when we are all together."

"As how?" he asks. "Why," smiling up at him, coaxingly, "you mustn't hang about me so much; and—you mustn't take hold of my hand beneath the table, as you did last night. Some of these times you'll get Maud's in mistake, and she will find out! And do you know, sir, that you called me Dulcie twice last night at dinner-time? you mustn't do it. My name is Miss Dorrimore, sir."

"Is it?" kissing the arch, smiling face; "then I wish it weren't. I wish it were—"

"I don't want to hear!" she cries, in a hushed voice, and pressing one ear against his breast, while she covers the other with her hand.

He looks down at her, as one might look at a beautiful wild bird, which one had captured and but half tamed, and which at any moment might take flight.

Some such indefinable dread seizes him, and at that moment, and half-jestingly, half-earnestly, he says: "Dulcie, don't you think we had better tell Sir Archie?"

She looks up with a smile. "Not for worlds!" she says; "why it would spoil poor Sir Archie's visit. He would be heart-broken."

"Oh," he says, grimly. She sees her mistake, and how he has taken it, and the red flushes her cheeks.

"How stupid you are!" she murmurs. "I was only in jest; of course he thinks he is in love with me."

"Oh, he does, does he?"

"Now!" with outstretched hand and reproachful eyes, "didn't you yourself tell me that he fell in love with every young and decent-looking girl he met? But perhaps I am not young and decent-looking!"

He laughs; who can help laughing at this wild, light-hearted creature who assumes a vanity she is innocent of?

"Look here, Dulcie," he says, with a little earnest frown. "Don't frown so," she says, putting up her finger to straighten the noble brow. "That is better—now?"

"Well," he says, "I am going to say if that idiot Archie—"

"He is not an idiot, but never mind, go on."

"If that idiot makes love to you before my eyes, I—I shan't like it."

"You won't mind if he does it behind your back then? All right, I'll tell him."

He laughs, then frowns again. "Be serious, Dulcie. By Heaven! this is a serious matter. Dulcie, I don't think I ever told you, but in addition to my other numerous bad qualities I am of a very jealous disposition."

"You did mention it," she says, smiling serenely.

"And when I'm jealous I am a changed being."

"How nicely you said that," she murmurs, admiringly. "I can understand."

"Well!"

"It's a bargain!" he says. "What now?" for he sees the dark brows come together again.

"I was thinking—no matter—!"

"Yes, speak out!" he says. "I was thinking how deeply, how genuinely I hate her!" she says. A pause. "Hugh!" with sudden earnestness.

"Well!"

stand now how you could kill all those poor people, as the papers say you did. Why, it's worth while making you jealous to see you look like that. Do it again!" and she mimics his frown with her heavy dark brows.

"But seriously," he says, struggling with a smile. "Archie is all very well, and it is very amusing to see him make love—when he isn't manufacturing it for one's future wife. Dulcie"—suddenly, with sober and straightforward earnestness—"be serious for once, and listen to me. I love you so deeply—more's the pity—that I could not bear to see him dangling at your feet. Dulcie, promise me that you won't flirt with him!"

She looks at him, shame, indignation, amazement portrayed on her face; then it grows wistful and touching.

"Are you really serious?" she says, her eyes fixed on his face. "Could you really be jealous of that—that doll?"

"He isn't a doll," he mutters. "He's the best-looking man in the United Kingdom."

"He is a doll—a blue-eyed, golden-haired doll!" she repeats, vehemently. "And if he was the handsomest man in the world, do you think it would matter to me? Do you think— Oh, Hugh!" she breaks off with a sigh, a long breath of intense significance.

"Ah, how little you understand! Let me go!" pushing him away gently but firmly.

"Dulcie!"

She looks at him for a moment, then she lets her head droop on his breast again. "Hugh," she murmurs, "you will never learn how much I love you? I am very unlucky—very, very. Other women can show it and make it plain, but I—why do you doubt me?"

"I do not! I do not!" he says, wistfully. "You do!" she says wistfully. "I am trying to be good, and I shall be in time; but you must give me time. Meanwhile—"

"I must let you flirt with Archie, I suppose," he says, with affected carelessness.

She leans away from him and looks up at him.

"Why do you treat me so?" she says. "Suppose I asked you not to flirt with—with Lucy Fairfax?"

He colors. "Pshaw!"

"It's all very well to say 'pschaw!' but I might do so with just as much reason; according to them!" "Them," is Lady Falconer and Maud.

"You used not to mind flirting with her."

"Pshaw!" he exclaims again. Once for all there—"

"Yes, I know," she says, "and 'once for all,' there is nothing between Sir Archie and me; and so it is a bargain, isn't it? I am not to flirt with him, and you are not to flirt with her."

"It's a bargain!" he says. "What now?" for he sees the dark brows come together again.

"I was thinking—no matter—!"

"Yes, speak out!" he says. "I was thinking how deeply, how genuinely I hate her!" she says. A pause. "Hugh!" with sudden earnestness.

Look in the Mirror

And see how nice the reflection of some room looks, with the firelight gleaming on pictures and furniture, and the friends you love smiling back at you in the glass.

Then—see how bare and unfinished some room of yours without Mirror or Overmantel looks by contrast.

Then—go to the Showrooms of the U. S. Picture & Portrait Co., see the large selection of beautiful Mirrors and Overmantels they stock, make your choice of one, have it sent up right away and Then—you'll wonder why you were so slow at making such a great improvement in YOUR room.

HATS AND COLDS.

"I often wonder how I manage to catch so many colds," explained Mrs. Up-to-date dresser. "I am always careful to wear my rubbers on these stormy days, and yet I am always sniffling and blowing. I can't understand it."

"Maybe your feet are properly dressed but your head is not always cared for," replied Mrs. Common Sense. "For instance, I saw you yesterday with your fur hat on, and today you are wearing a mere covering of gold lace and wire. Surely it is colder to-day than yesterday."

And Mrs. Common Sense was right. So many of us are careful about our throats being protected, and our feet dry, but we carelessly change our hats without a thought. No two hats are very often alike in weight. A velvet hat that fits the head closely is warmer than a flaring brimmed one of silk. A fur hat is warmer than lace and so it goes.

To-day we tuck our head into a fur toque, and spend most of our time in the hot stores, and to-morrow we go to a bridge wearing the lace one. Donning the early straw hat after wearing the heavy velvet and fur ones is indeed a dangerous feat, and is usually followed by a disagreeable head cold. Care should be taken in the choice of the hats to suit the weather as well as any article of our wardrobe.

And the Worst is Yet to Come

When Spring Comes.

There remain, at the most, six weeks of fighting weather. Fighting will still go on for a while after that, but nothing of importance can be undertaken. The story of the campaign of 1917 is nearly told. It has not been one of the great years of the war; it was to have been, but the collapse of Russia upset the plans of the Allies, and Germany was at the end of hers. We are speaking, of course, of the military history; great events have happened in 1917, but their effect on the battle front is for the future rather than the present. The Russian revolution prevented the delivery of the great blow from all sides against Germany and her allies, but prevented it only for 1917. The entrance of America was the great event but its effect on the military situation will not be felt until 1918.

After the military hibernation, the great battle which was to have been fought in 1917, the battle between the Teutonic Powers and all the Allies, will begin in the Spring. Nothing can prevent it except the success of that movement to which Germany's endeavors are now all directed, the attempt to seduce or bribe a German peace, and we can safely dismiss that from consideration. If no great change takes place on the Austrian or the Russian front, we shall then see the United States on the battle line in sufficient force to take an active part, and with barely touched reserves of strength behind her. England is amply equipped with both men and supplies, and far from the end of her resources; and we know now that the submarine campaign has failed to "bring her to her knees." France is at the maximum of her strength; she is well supplied for 1918, though she has reached the end of her drawing power. We shall see, in the Spring of 1918, these three allies delivering their blow on the western front at Germany, whose resources are diminishing, whose man power has reached its maximum and whose growing lack of the necessary material for war is established by many indications.

We shall certainly see Italy in a dominating position in her war against Austria. How much General Cadorna can achieve before Winter no one can predict, but if Winter came to-morrow he would still have Austria to the hip. She is much more shaken than Germany, her needs are greater, and he is not only on her soil but pushing his way across it. Italy's allies will be guilty of an inconceivable mistake if they fail to aid her with whatever she requires in the way of munitions and supplies.

Russia is the uncertain quantity, but even if she does not regain her equilibrium she can aid her allies by keeping German armies busy. This she will continue to do, whatever happens, for not even in the improbable event of a Bolshevik triumph could she safely leave the eastern front unguarded. She could not, because the patriotic party would not assent to the betrayal of Russia, even if an unpatriotic party, momentarily in power, should undertake to negotiate a separate peace. Much more probable than any such outcome are the gradual resumption of discipline in the army and the gradual spread of enlightenment in the nation, until Russia shall be able to play more than a passive part in the military operations. But even if she is still restricted to a passive part, that part has been highly useful to her allies this year and would be next year.—N. Y. Times.

Fads and Fashions.

Most fur-trimmed suits have coats of three-quarter length.

Jewel colors, like ruby, night blue and jade green, are very good. Ivory buttons, etc., are used on serge frocks with smart effect. Pumps and spats will be more than ever the proper footwear.

Obi sashes are one of the Japanese features frequent in dresses. There is no doubt that satins will be prominent in winter fashions.

The smartest of sailor shapes have shorter brims in the front.

Velvet and short-haired furs will be used for ceremonious toilettes. Cyclamen-colored chemises of crepe de chine are the latest note.

There is a suggestion of the Empire line in some of the new gowns. Tan, brown and gray are in favor for smart footwear for autumn.

Narrow belts of leather are smart if worn with tailored costumes. Short fur coats are worn with frocks that are wisely banded with fur.

A good deal of eyelid embroidery appears on pink crepe de chine blouses.

Every now and then it looks as if the threatened narrow skirt had arrived.

Among the novel trimmings are feathers, bands of burnt coque, hobnail, breads of gorgeous color, and laced velvet ribbons.

Willys-Overland Motor Cars

Integrity of Value

In the Overland Big Four-cylinder touring car and the Overland Light Four-cylinder touring car, the luxurious and the practical are in proper balance to produce lasting satisfaction.

The Big Four is finished in a deep rich brown, while the colour of the Light Four is a beautiful shade of gray. These two models exemplify the remarkable values made possible by tremendous production. Size does not of itself constitute greatness.

An industry is as great as its service to the public. But size does usually constitute opportunity for service. In the case of Overland, size originally was an indication of foresight and courage.

It constituted an opportunity to establish new values in motor cars—this was a service.

Growth came as a reward of this service, and with growth came opportunity for further service—further revision of values.

Today's immensity means experience, facilities and resources, plus the public confidence, which gives these things stability for yet greater service.

The Willys-Overland ideal of service is integrity of value in the product throughout the whole life of that product's service.

The Willys-Overland Motor Cars which we have to show you exemplify this ideal and constitute the most comprehensive range of models ever built by any one motor car producer.

Another War Coincidence.

London Daily Chronicle: Sir Arthur Yapp, of the Y. M. C. A., has been one of the valuable discoveries of the war. He had been the secretary of the Manchester Y. M. C. A., housed in a splendid building, until shortly before the war, when he was appointed to his London post. The instant the war broke out Mr. Yapp summoned all the leaders of the Y. M. C. A. and outlined a great scheme of huts. Some folks thought the money would not be forthcoming, but his faith in the British public has proved well founded, and long ago the first million pounds was passed. Sir Arthur had a curious experience the other day. He chanced to ask a soldier where he came from, and he named Brigades Hold Church Parade.

Colonel Rendell attended Divine Service yesterday afternoon at the C. of E. Cathedral in conjunction with the C. of E. B. C. Along the route of march the band sounded patriotic airs, while the turn out, which despite the unfavorable weather, was the best for the season.

Fashions and Fads.

Collars reach to the ears and extend below the shoulders. Even pockets on the new, fine afternoon wraps are of fur. Maroon and light blue are combined in a very pretty frock. Black velvet is the most fashionable fabric for millinery. Lots of velvet and satin are used in Parisian coats and wraps.

Installation of Officers.

Territorial Deputy, C. O'N. Conroy, Esq., K. C., has installed the officers of Terra Nova Council Knights of Columbus, elected for the ensuing year.

Do You Weigh the Cake of Soap You Buy?

The increase in the cost of nearly everything that is used in the manufacture of soap makes it impossible to give the same size, same weight and same quality as heretofore, without increasing the price.

Some soap manufacturers have cut down the size and reduced the quality.

KIRKMAN'S BORAX SOAP is the same to-day as it has been for over a quarter of a century—no change in the weight, in the size or in the quality.

When buying laundry soap, be sure you get—Full weight, full size and full quality.

MONDAY, October 8, 1917.

The Social Service Congress.

If to draw general and close attention to the existence of evils is to take a long step towards their removal or amelioration, many too long neglected problems affecting our public welfare show welcome signs of receiving practical treatment. The Social Service Congress which will occupy the greater part of this week follows close upon the Child Welfare discussion which recently created so much interest and should be productive of so many good results. Though wider in its scope than that movement, it has much in common with it and has essentially the same object, the improvement of social conditions. The particular directions in which the improvement is needed and will be pointed out and discussed by the different speakers are many of them matters to which we have lately attracted much attention here. Among the things, for instance, for which the Council stands are "the right of the child to be well born, well developed, well reared and well educated; a living wage, an eight-hour day where possible and the Sunday rest; the abatement and ultimate abolition of poverty; insurance against accidents, sickness, unemployment and old age; the adequate care of dependents, defectives and delinquents; proper housing, the promotion of health and the prevention of contagious diseases; wholesome recreation for all the people, especially the children." These are practical, not visionary, aims; it would be strange if the mere exchange of views upon them did not sow the seeds of practical results. But the Congress will produce something more than the mere exchange of views, for the distinguished visitors who represent the Council will speak from expert knowledge and valuable experience. They will be assisted by a number of our leading citizens who will deal each with a phase of our public life with which he is familiar. We feel sure the general public will be quick to remark the essentially utilitarian nature of the Congress and to welcome it the more on that account. We trust that it will show its appreciation by attending and following the meetings in that earnest spirit without which the smallest attempts at reform are doomed to die away fruitless.

A Perilous Coast.

The Graveyard of the Atlantic receives yet another victim, not far from where the "Ebuoron" and "Kristianstaden" will leave their unburied bones. Disaster has overtaken the "Norse" at the moment when a compatriot ship lies in our dry dock having injuries repaired which might have spelt disaster to her also and which she sustained in the same perilous vicinity; while another has just come off the coasts which went ashore further up the coast. It is out of our power here to prevent foreign captains from taking the short cut, too often fatal, which hugs Cape Race, but we might do more to make the course a less dangerous one than it obviously is. The combination of fogs and current that so often prevails there has destroyed many a fine ship and will destroy many more until far more ample warning to eye and ear is provided all along this terrible coast. Several master mariners have expressed the need of it and pointed out how it can best be filled; it is surely time their advice was heeded. The present case of the Norge points the necessity of more than warning apparatus; had the sea been rougher, it is said by the crew, they might have perished within sight of those on shore, willing but powerless to help them. What devices are there for life-saving along the whole shore? It is a question for the Government to ask itself, seriously, before another tragedy shocks it into action. The record of these few miles of sheer and foam-fringed rock is not one we can take pride in, nor which we should care to see grow longer.

Conductor Luby Injured on Train.

At 8 o'clock this morning, while coupling cars at Bay Bulls, Conductor Luby, of the Trepassay train, met with a painful accident when the heel of his left foot got caught between the couplings. Though badly squeezed no bones were broken, the main force of the blow being somewhat checked by the heel of his boot. On arrival of the train he was removed to the General Hospital.

Shipwrecked Crew Arrives Here.

Had Narrow Escape—Were Four Hours in Lifeboats.

Captain McKinnon and crew of the Norwegian steamer Norge L, which was doomed at St. Shotts on Saturday night last, reached town this forenoon and are quartered at the Seamen's Institute.

In talking to a Telegram representative, Capt. McKinnon said that their experience, after their ship struck the land, was thrilling. "It was brief, but it lasted long enough. Continuing, he said it was deplorable in this enlightened age that there were not more facilities in the way of communication for the benefit of shipwrecked seamen in that particular section of the coast, which was known in nautical parlance as the Graveyard of the North Atlantic, with monuments of disaster everywhere one looked. At St. Shotts it was very difficult to land, especially in rough weather, and he thought there should be some life-saving apparatus there for the rescuing of stranded seamen, and that a telegraph station should be erected to communicate with Trepassay whereby aid could be procured as quickly as possible when vessels were in distress.

The Norge left New York on Sept. 27th with a cargo of cordage, rails, etc., for the Harbor Grace Shipbuilding plant. Heavy weather was encountered and the ship's steering gear was put out of commission. She put into Halifax for bunker supplies and repairs on Oct. 1st. After a delay of two days she resumed the voyage for Hr. Grace. Light fog with heavy seas and strong winds were experienced at the outset. Gradually the fog increased in density. On Saturday evening just at dusk the vessel was carried in by the strong current near St. Shotts and struck Western Head. The captain gave long blasts of the whistle and then himself and crew took to the lifeboats. The ship began to break up, as there was a heavy sea running. The crew had a trying time as their little craft was badly buffeted. After four hours adrift they reached the land with the assistance of people from the shore who came off to meet them. They were housed for the night by the people of St. Shotts and treated hospitably. Capt. McKinnon thinks that had the wind increased while they were in the lifeboats "it would not have been possible for them to effect a landing, for although they were seen by the shore people after leaving the steamer, these were powerless to render aid. Capt. McKinnon and crew are grateful to the people of the Southern Shore for the kind treatment accorded them.

The Board of Agriculture is in receipt of some splendid samples of apples and plums grown by different people in the districts of St. George's and Twillingate; also a piece of beet of phenomenally large size and weighing five and a half pounds. We were shown as well to-day at the Department wheat raised in Codroy Valley. The exhibits are indeed excellent and strikingly illustrate what can be done in Newfoundland from an agricultural standpoint.

Visiting Divines at the City Churches.

ST. THOMAS'S.

At 11 o'clock service yesterday morning the preacher was the Rev. Canon Tucker, Rector of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Ontario, and Chairman of the National Social Congress and a member of that organization now visiting the city. Taking as his subject: "If I, then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet ye ought also wash one another's feet," in a scholarly and eloquent manner he showed how our Lord had served others. The prophets and apostles were all servants and the highest of all servants was the suffering Son of God. Christ says: "I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me"; and, "Inasmuch as ye did it or did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it or did it not to me." In speaking of the present great struggle he referred to the great wastage of human life not only in the trenches but in our everyday life. Impurity and ignorance are slaying in tens of thousands. The infantile mortality is very great, what can we do to check it? At Evensong Canon Tucker again occupied the pulpit and preached another eloquent sermon.

AT GOWER STREET.
The Rev. J. G. Shearer, D.D., of Toronto, a noted Presbyterian clergyman, preached to a large congregation at Gower St. Methodist Church last night, taking his text from the parable of the good Samaritan. Down through the years, said the preacher, disproportionate emphasis had been laid on the great law of love of God, and the other great law of love to our neighbour had been neglected.

Rev. Dr. J. Albert Moore occupied the pulpit at George Street Methodist Church yesterday morning. He said the church was awakening to utilitarianism and the need for a religion for the body as well as the soul. It was not possible to make a man religious of moment by legislation could enact laws to "change" his environment. The preacher showed where social reform had done wonders in many places not only in saving men from the curse of drink, but in helping the women who had deviated from the paths of morality. The child welfare work has been a great success in many of the large Canadian cities.

Soldiers' Wills in Rhyme

Editor Evening Telegram.
"Sir.—Wills made by soldiers in the trenches are being upheld by the law in England; no witnesses are necessary. Those wills are very odd. Even if the signature is lacking the will may still be accepted if there is evidence as to the handwriting to the testator. Many of those wills are humorous, some of them are in rhyme. I came across copies of some made in rhyme while looking over some editions of papers recently received by mail. Here is one which was written while the soldier was on duty at a listening post in "No Man's Land":

I haven't a sweetheart, I haven't a mother,
I've only one sister, not even a brother;
My sister, Susan, is all I've got,
So of ought that's mine she can have the lot.
Here is another will which went through the courts leaving his money to the "first comer":
Whoever first sets eyes on this
Gets everything I leave,
My kith and kin are dead and gone,
And I've not a friend to grieve,
There's a tidy bit in bank you'll find,
And my army pay, though small,
So, stranger, breathe one sigh for me,
You're welcome to it all.

A private wrote the following, he was isolated for three days from his comrades without food or water. It reads as follows:
If I'm knocked out by bullet or bomb
When over the top we go,
A gallon of beer I leave to Tom,
Another to 'squint-eyed' Joe.

URUGUAY ENTERS THE LISTS.

Germany has still another nation arrayed against her in the world war. Following closely on the action of Peru, the Republic of Uruguay has severed diplomatic relations with her and the German Minister has been handed his passports. Although Germany has committed no direct act of hostility against Uruguay, the President of the Republic in his message to Parliament said it was necessary for Uruguay to espouse the cause of the defenders of justice, democracy and small nationalities.

WEATHER HAMPERS OPERATIONS

LONDON, To-Day. Unfavorable weather conditions have interfered with operations around Ypres, and according to Field Marshal Haig's report to-night there was little beyond artillery activity on Sunday. The text of the report reads: The weather is stormy and heavy rain has fallen all day. An advance attempted by the enemy at dawn was broken by our artillery, rifle and machine gun fire. Towards dusk this evening the enemy put down a heavy artillery barrage on the greater part of our front between Broodinde and Holtbeke, but no infantry action followed. Artillery activity on both sides was considerable to-day on the front. There was nothing of importance on the remainder of the British front. The weather was still very unfavorable for flying on Saturday but a little artillery was done. One and a half tons of bombs were dropped on enemy targets, including a railway station, and our fighting machines went out whenever possible. One failed to return, and one bombing machine also is missing which went out on Thursday night.

LORD READING MAKES ELOQUENT APPEAL

OTTAWA, To-day. In a powerful and eloquent appeal for greater unity of war effort to the end that justice may triumph over crime, and right be victor over wrong, Viscount Reading, Chief Justice of England, and a member of the British Mission to the United States, on Saturday addressed a crowded luncheon meeting of the Canadian Club. The gathering was presided over by Mr. Justice Duff and attended by H.R.H. the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Northcliffe, Sir Robert Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, members of the Cabinet and other prominent men. Viscount Reading in the course of his address said that Britain was a peace-loving nation and before the present great war had engulfed all Europe the people of that country had placed their confidence in treaties between countries. They had thought that the plight of a word of a nation was as trustworthy as that of an individual and respected as such, but Germany had rudely destroyed that belief. After three years of war, said Viscount Reading, German military power was beginning to dwindle. He felt that the Allied had passed through the most anxious period of the war. He expressed confidence that Russia would emerge from its present internal trouble to fight with renewed strength in the cause of liberty.

Would the person who picked up a Silver Badge, No. 242, belonging to a returned soldier, please return it at this office.—11

The Naval Battle

Off Chili.

Many accounts have been published of the engagement off Chili, when the Good Hope and the Monmouth were lost, but the following account sent home by a member of the crew of the Glasgow will be fresh to our readers. He says: "Everything was against us from the start. The light and weather were very bad, which was why the Good Hope and the Monmouth could not get their main-deck guns to bear. We started on Sunday evening, November 1, at five minutes past seven. When we had been fighting about fifteen minutes the flagship Good Hope caught fire and a terrific explosion took place. She blew into the air—funnels, boats, guns and men, a thousand feet high, and flames 500 feet high—and shortly afterwards sank with the Admiral, all officers and hands. Then the Monmouth caught fire. The crew managed to put it out, but they were making water fast. During this time we were fighting four German ships, two of which were much bigger than anything we had ever seen. All the men must have been killed in the Leipzig's battery with our gun fire. Ahead of my boat not one man was killed, and only five injured. It is estimated that at least 1,000 shells fell around us. One hit our second funnel and exploded, making a great hole in it and injuring two men. We had half-a-dozen holes in the sides, one of them enormous. The shells and the bullets flew round us like a hailstorm. Men felt them whistle and tear past their bodies and heads. Some even had their clothes torn by fragments of bursting shells. During this time the Monmouth had fallen out of the battle line. Then, for twenty minutes we fought like Britishers, because the Germans meant to put us under; but our magnificent turbine engines and boilers saved us, as they could not do the speed that we could. For two hours we moved as we have never moved before, doing twenty-seven knots an hour in a heavy head-sea, and twenty knots for 30 hours afterwards. The Monmouth was nearly under water, and we could do nothing for her by stopping. Two of the enemy ships were too big for us, but we gave the two smaller ones as good as we got."

The House of Lords.

London Daily Telegraph: If the war has revealed the great virtues of democracy, has it not also brought out into high relief its perils and defects? We urge this as a convincing reason for repairing our shattered constitution without delay, and for setting up a new and complete political machine which shall be worthy of the political genius of these islands. We believe in the principle of the Second Chamber; we believe that its powers should be a reality and not a sham, and that its composition should be in accord with the ideas of the time without breaking wholly with its noble historical past.

Lieut. N. A. Outerbridge

KILLED IN ACTION.

Definite news was received by relatives of Lieut. Norman A. Outerbridge, who has been reported missing since the battle of Mobezy-le-Preux on April 14th last, to the effect that he was killed in action on that date. The information was cable by Sir Joseph Outerbridge, father of the gallant officer, and is as follows:—
"Postcard received from prisoner, Private Joy, saying, Lieut. Norman Outerbridge was wounded twice, April 14th, carried on, then was killed. Joy saw him fall."
The first report of that famous battle indicated that quite a large number of our men were taken prisoners and there was every reason to believe that Lieut. Outerbridge was among the number.

Lieut. N. A. Outerbridge, was the second son of Sir Joseph and Lady Outerbridge and was one of the most popular officers in the Regiment. In private life he was a Director of Harvey & Co., enjoying to an unlimited degree the confidence of the business community. He was married in 1910 to Mary, daughter of Dr. Henry Shea, of this city. For many years he was an officer in the C. L. R. He enlisted for active service in April 1916, obtaining a commission and the rank of 2nd Lieutenant. He embarked for England in August 1916 and was drafted to France in November of the same year. Early in April 1917 he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant and on the 14th of the same month he was killed in action, after being twice wounded.

Two brothers, Major Leonard Outerbridge, with the Canadians and Lieut. Herbert A. Outerbridge, of "Our's" are serving the colours. Two other brothers are, Mr. P. E. Outerbridge, commission merchant, of this city, and Basil, now attending College in Canada.

To Sir Joseph and Lady Outerbridge and to his widow now in the Old Country the Telegram offers deepest sympathy.

Hopeful of Russia.

(From the New York Post.)

Of the direct results of Korniloff's abortive demonstration against the Provisional Government, the proclamation of a Russian republic by Kerensky marks one phase, and the action of the Petrograd Council of Workers and Soldiers reveals another. To Kerensky, evidently, the lesson of the Korniloff episode is a more emphatic need than ever of a national unity and co-operation. His proclamation recalls "the rapturous and unanimous approval of the Republic idea expressed at the Moscow State Conference." This is plainly an exhortation to all parties to lay aside their differences for the preservation of the one ideal, at least, upon which they all agree—a free, republican government. The extremists in Petrograd, on the other hand, have drawn the lesson that there can be no faith and no co-operation with the "bourgeois" parties, and that no time should be lost in putting through the Socialist ideal in the most radical form accompanied by the exclusion of non-Socialists from a share in the Government. But the Petrograd Council does not speak for the Central Committee of the Councils of all Russia, and that body has voted its confidence in Kerensky's programme of conciliation. At the same time the newspaper, organs of the Socialist Revolutionists, the party of the peasants and Kerensky, declare bluntly that the country is not ready for the Socialist economic regime and any premature move would be fatal. The signs are that compromise will emerge once more from this latest crisis in the Russian revolution.

Scotland Forever.

(Punch.)

They came from untamable highlands,
From glens where their fathers were free,
From misty and mountainous islands
Set fast in the throat of the sea;
They fought for the honor of Britain;
They died in defence of the right;
Their deeds are in history written
In letters of light.

They fell where the Ganges is flowing;
They lie beneath the Russian Redan;
Their dust o'er the desert is blowing
In the whirring of the far Kordofan;
Their sons of Glen Orchy and Rannoch
Sleep sound by the slow moving
Scheldt;
And the heroes of the men of Loch Fannich
Are white on the vejd.

But the Lewis and Lothmaben and Gairloch
Still march to the battle array,
And the fighters from many a fair loch,
Like their fathers, leap forth to the fray;
Red flame tears the darkness asunder
Where the curtain of battle is drawn;
Where the flamen through death-cloud and thunder
Go over at dawn.

In the strength of the hills and the heather,
With the salt of the sea in their blood,
They creep from the trenches together
With the force of an onrushing flood;
Like the billows that beat upon Moldart
When gales from the Hebrides blow,
Like storms on the mountains of Knodart
They burst on the foe.

Big Guns.

"No fewer than one hundred and seventeen miles of steel wire are wound on a twelve inch gun that weighs thirteen and a half tons," says a writer in the Millgate Monthly. "In appearance this wire, which is of the same quality as piano-wire, resembles tape; it is one-quarter of an inch wide and one-tenth of an inch thick. It is twisted to a breaking strength of one hundred and ten tons. The wire unwinds from a reel as the gunbarrel revolves, and a tension of about fifty tons to the square inch ensures mechanical accuracy in wrapping it round the gun. Various parts of the gun receives different thickness of wire. At the breech of a twelve-inch gun, where the chief strain comes, there are ninety-two layers, which gives a thickness of nine and a half inches of wire, but at the muzzle there are only fourteen layers. Over the wire the gunmakers shrink on steel rings at white heat. When they cool they contract and grip with immense force. The rifling of the barrel is an automatic process—an example of wonderful mechanical ingenuity. When the gun is finished experts test the accuracy of the rifling with plastic gutta-percha."

In place of the beruffled and befrilled petticoats that were once considered indisposible even in midsummer, children are now wearing bloomers of the same material as the frock, attached to sleeveless under-waists. The comfort and plain common sense governing this practice need not be emphasized. For baby's wash cloths use surgical antiseptic lint. You will find a ten cent package will furnish you with at least a half dozen and you will be surprised at their unusual softness. Boric acid solution is quite necessary for baby's eyes. It should be slightly warmed before dropping into each eye.

Many of the new skirts are trimmed with a wide band between the hips and the bottom of the hem.

While embroidery is not so fashionable, there is still a touch of it on serge frocks.

WAR SUMMARY.

Through squalls of rain and under low hanging clouds F. M. Haig is blazing away with his artillery for another rain into the German line in Flanders. Since the great advance of mid-week the British infantry have kept their trenches and shell craters except here and there where forays were called to a realignment of the new front, or counter attacks were necessary to hold back the weak German attempts to recapture the lost terrain. But the big guns never have ceased their activity and day in and day out great masses of steel have been and still are blasting the German points which are mapped out for capture, when the new drive is launched. The Germans are answering the British fire on various sections. Particularly heavy is the bombardment in the region running from Lanckenmarke to Zonnebeke, and especially to the east of the latter where the wedge of the British has been pushed in almost with striking distance of the Ostend-Lille Road. When the new offensive will be sprung cannot be predicted. Several days must elapse before Haig has sufficiently pounded the Germans to warrant sending his men across No Man's Land to the objectives assigned to them for capture; or the process of demolition already may have advanced to a point where the first grey streaks of dawn on Monday may see its commencement.

The army of the German Crown Prince in Champagne again has endeavored to dent the French line, but again have failed with considerable losses in killed or made prisoners. Heavy artillery duels continue along the eastern bank of the Meuse River in the Verdun sector.

Comparative quiet prevails on the northern part of the front in Russia and along this line to Roumania. In Roumania, however, the Russians in an attack northwest of the town of Sereth captured a Teutonic allied position, and made prisoners of 762 men and also took seven machine guns. Under a heavy artillery fire the Russians were later compelled to evacuate the position having previously repulsed several enemy infantry counter attacks.

Daily the Italians and Austrians are engaged in battles for supremacy in the slopes of Monte San Gabriele in the Gorizia sector. In the latest fight the Italians captured enemy positions on the northern slopes, and also took prisoners. On several other sectors of this theatre the Austrians have delivered attacks, but everywhere were repulsed.

THE RECENT FIGHT.

LONDON, Oct. 7. Reports from British headquarters in France show that in the British attack on Poelcapelle the Germans sustained particularly heavy losses. Six battalions of the front line were either killed or taken prisoners. Two battalions seen coming down the road, presumably as reinforcements, were blown to pieces by the British artillery before they could get into action. From one blockhouse an Australian officer, single-handed, brought forth 21 prisoners. The New Zealanders fought magnificently and moved their guns around with all the ease of a military tournament. During the day German airmen flew down low over the British infantry and at least one was brought down. A young Newfoundland officer had an extraordinary escape from death. A shell burst almost at his feet and killed the orderlies beside him. When he recovered consciousness he found that his puttees had been stripped off but that he was uninjured.

FURTHER PRISONERS.

LONDON, Oct. 7. Field Marshal Haig reports artillery activity along the entire battle-line. An additional 880 prisoners were taken by the British in the last 24 hours. Enemy airdromes in the Lille area were attacked with bombs, and railway stations at Westvobke Iseghom and Courtrai also were bombed. During the day in air battles four enemy machines were brought down, and five British machines are reported missing.

FRENCH SURPRISE ATTACK.

PARIS, Oct. 7. The French official reports artillery fighting in the region of Braye-on-Laonnois and on the right bank of the Meuse. North of Boisse-le-Cam-Champ in the Vosges, the French troops carried out a surprise attack near

URUGUAY BREAKS WITH GERMAN.

MONTEVIDEO, Oct. 7. Uruguay has severed diplomatic relations with Germany. A presidential decree announcing the rupture following a vote in favor of it by the Chamber of Deputies of 74 to 23. The German Minister has been handed his passports.

PERU FOLLOW SUIT.

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 7. The Government has handed his passports to Dr. Perla, the German Minister. The Spanish Legation has taken over the interests of Germany in this country.

The Peruvian Government, which yesterday handed his passports to the German Minister, to-day ordered the Peruvian Minister to Germany to leave Berlin. The Government also ordered the withdrawal of all Peruvian consuls in Germany.

PROPORTIONS OF BRITISH TROOPS.

LONDON, Oct. 7. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.) Much attention is being bestowed by the press on figures published by Reuter's, showing the proportions of British troops fighting since the 31st July, namely: English 70 p.c., Overseas troops 16 p.c., Scotch 8 p.c., and Irish 6 p.c.; the proportions of casualties being: English 76 p.c., Overseas troops 8 p.c., Scotch 10 p.c., and Irish 7 p.c. The Sunday Observer, commenting on these figures, says: The generous prominence given in communications to the exploits of soldiers of the Dominions as well as Scotch, Welsh and Irish, is England's response to the keen pride of nationality.

INTERESTING.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7. Eddie Clotte, of Detroit, piloted his team to victory Saturday over the New York Nationals by 2 to 1, in the first game of the 1917 world series.

AMERICAN PATROL SHIP FOUNDERS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7. An American patrol ship foundered in European waters on the morning of Oct. 4th while on duty. The Navy Department has no information as to the cause of the loss of the ship and has ordered an investigation. There was no loss of life.

KERENSKY ADDRESSES COMMITTEE.

PETROGRAD, Saturday. When a committee from the Democratic Congress visited Premier Kerensky to-day he addressed the committee men as follows: "The growth of anarchy, the political ruin which confronts the country, the extravagant demands of the various groups and the strivings in certain quarters to restore the former regime, force the necessity of union and coalition. Only a union of the Bourgeois and Democratic elements can save the country." Minister of Foreign Affairs Tereschenko pleaded for a reconstruction of the nation's forces so that the delegates who will participate in the Paris conference on Oct. 15, may point out to the Allies that our fighting force has been renewed and that our boasted strength is no myth.

GENERAL MEYER CAPTURED.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 7. Russian scouts from the Caucasus Army, in a daring raid, captured General Von Meyer, head of the German air service in the Black Sea district, says an official statement to-day.

PACIFISTS MEETING BROKEN UP.

LONDON, Oct. 7. A large crowd of soldiers and women broke up a meeting of pacifists which they attempted to hold at a Brotherhood Church at Kingsland to-day, by lighting a bonfire on the floor in front of the pulpit. The flames were extinguished by the police after considerable damage had been done to carpets, pews and pulpit. A crowd pulled the pastor down from the pulpit by his coat tails and threw him bodily across the room and out of doors.

MARTIAL LAW REPEALED.

MADRID, Oct. 7. The discontinuance of martial law throughout Spain was announced in a decree issued to-day.

HINDENBURG'S BIRTHDAY TALK.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 7. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, in replying to a congratulatory telegram from the Catholic People's Union of Essen, advised the policy of holding on and waiting as one for Germany to pursue, according to a Berlin despatch. We, too, desire what the Pope desires, namely, the termination of the war which was forced upon us, the Field Marshal's telegram reads. Our enemies, however, are not willing. President Wilson's note was not only an insult to the German people, but also to the Pope's good will. Our enemies, however, will gradually come to their senses. Therefore we must wait. Let us continue to be victorious and hold our peace.

STILL LOOKING FOR LUXBURG.

MONTEVIDEO, Oct. 7. A British cruiser stopped an outward-bound Spanish steamer seven miles off the coast, according to advices received here to-day. The steamer was held up. It is supposed, in the belief that Count Karl Von Luxburg, former German Minister to Argentina, who recently was given his passports, might be on board. A Buenos Aires despatch on Oct. 5th said that Luxburg had left Argentina that day, taking a tug to Colonia, Uruguay, and proceeding by train to Montevideo, where he boarded a Spanish steamer, which later sailed for Spain. He was said to have a Spanish safe conduct which diplomats in Argentine considered sufficient to protect his person, but not his papers, from capture.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS REFUSE TO GO TO THE FRONT.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 7. Eight thousand soldiers at Gomel, province of Mohilev, following a meeting, refused to go to the front, says a telegram from Gomel. The soldiers after became disorderly, and to prevent excesses they were surrounded by Cossacks, when they promptly surrendered.

PAPER FACTORY EMPLOYEES STRIKE.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 7. Workmen in all paper factories of Petrograd have gone on strike. The strike threatens, if prolonged, to seriously embarrass the early convocation of the Constituent Assembly owing to demand for paper for electoral bulletins which had been ordered from the factories affected.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Oct. 7. An official issued by the war office to-night reads: There was no infantry action. Artillery action was violent at times in Belgium, at various points on the Aisne front and on the right bank of the Meuse. Eastern Theatre.—Activity of artillery was quite marked on the Varder front, north of Monsstr, and in the region of the lakes.

ENEMY ARTILLERY ACTIVE.

LONDON, Oct. 7. To-day's war office announcement reads: The enemy's artillery showed increased activity on the battlefield but no action has been attempted by his infantry. A raid on our trenches south of Hollebeke was driven off by rifle and machine gun fire. A Welsh regiment successfully raided an enemy trench northeast of Cozeaucourt, bombing dugouts, and inflicting casualties upon the garrison.

COLD AND WET ON BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, Oct. 7. No infantry activity with the exception of raiding operations occurred on the Flanders front last night, according to to-day's war office report. Showery and cold weather has set in. The text of the statement reads: There was considerable artillery fire on the battlefield during the night. We successfully raided enemy positions northeast of Broodseinde, inflicting several casualties, and brought back twenty prisoners and a machine gun. A raid attempted by the enemy south of the Ypres-Comines Canal, was repulsed. Another successful raid was carried out by Leicestershire troops west of Cote St. Eloi. The weather is showery and much colder.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 7. The Russian war office to-day issued the following statement: In the Riga region small enemy detachments attempted to attack north of the Dakoff high road, east of Lemberg. They were repulsed by our fire. On other battlefronts only fusillades and scouting encounters occurred. On Thursday enemy airplanes, bombed Salez, in Roumania, causing several casualties among soldiers and civilians.

FRENCH DEPUTY ARRESTED.

PARIS, Oct. 7. Louis Turrel, representing Cotes Du Nord, in the Chamber of Deputies, was arrested to-day accused of having commuted with the enemy, a warrant being issued by an examining magistrate. An official statement issued by the Chamber of Deputies, Sept. 17, said that an envelope con-

NOT PETROGRAD'S REVOLUTIONARY MODELS.

The weariness generally begotten in the public mind by the more recent happenings in Petrograd has somewhat lessened the anxious interest with which developments would otherwise have been watched. The hopes engendered here in the earliest days of the revolution were based very largely upon remembrance of the great uprising in France after 1789, when the armed populace drove back in dismayed confusion the trained armies of Prussia and Austria on their invasion of the sacred soil. The trasseries and treacheries in Russia have destroyed this illusion, and, as a French observer remarked recently, the model of the Soviet has not been the Revolutionaries of 1789, who did a great thing, but their descendants of 1848, who talked themselves into extinction. "Does anyone to-day," he asked, "read Victor Hugo? If so, he will find the ideal revolutionary whom the Russians have not reached in the fiction of 'Quatrevingt-treize,' and the real in the fact of 'L'Histoire d'un Crime.' You have the active giants in the one and the passive dwarfs in the other. Louis Napoleon won in France in 1851 because his foes thought proclamations preferable to pikes. The Germans will win in Russia in 1917 because, as a telegram even of to-day shows,

In truth this year the valleys stand thick with corn, and if the weather will only be kind for a week or two we shall have cause for satisfaction this winter, so far as home food supplies are concerned.

MOTTO OF THE PRINCE OF WALES

Reports are current that a change is contemplated in the motto of the Prince of Wales. It is stated that the German words "Ich dien" (I serve) will be superseded by the Welsh "Eich dyn" which, I am told, means "Your man." At present there is a national prejudice against any vestige of things Teutonic, but it must be remembered that the crest of the Prince of Wales—three ostrich feathers with the motto "Ich dien"—commemorates a very glorious episode in English history. It was borne by the King of Bohemia, who was amongst the slain at the Battle of Crecy, and was then adopted by the victorious Black Prince, the son of Edward the Third. The crest and motto have been used by the Princes of Wales ever since that glorious feat of English arms. Its origin have given it a special association throughout the centuries. The significance of the Welsh "Eich dyn" would be lost on the ordinary individual.

WILLIAM FARREN IV.

An interesting point in connection with the all-star revival of Pinero's "Relativity of the Wells" is that William Farren, who plays an important part in the comedy, made his London debut at Sadler's Wells Theater thirty-seven years ago. The historic theater exists to-day in much the same state as it did in the Victorian sixties, the date of Pinero's play, but recently it has been used as a picture theater. Farren is the fourth of his name in direct succession. His father, William Farren III, died in 1908 at the age of 83, after acting for fifty years. William Farren II, like his son, a famous Sir Peter Teazle in "A School for Scandal", married Mrs. Faucit, the mother of Helen Faucit (Lady Theodora Martin). William Farren I, shared honors with David Garrick in the middle of the Eighteenth century. The present William Farren is possibly entitled to boast that he bears the oldest name in modern records of the English stage. He has a rival, however, in that respect in Frank Cooper, who is directly descended from Mrs. Siddons' father, old Roger Kemble.

KHAKI AND NAVY BLUE.

Many allied uniforms are to be seen in the West End of London, their wearers obviously in the English capital for the first time and intensely interested in its sights and scenes. Naval uniforms also abound, after a long spell when nothing but khaki and civilian tweed were the vogue. Enough officers and men and marines to fill a spare Dreadnought or two are also in London on short leave, competing with the soldier boys for the company of the ladies, and competing very successfully, 600. Soldiers swarm in the West End of the town, and one can never pass Victoria Station without seeing parties of them in full marching order, home from the trenches for a ten days' holiday. Fine chaps they look—hard as nails, browned by sun and wind, with a cheery word for everybody and a most praiseworthy reticence about their personal war experiences. It is the wounded men who talk freely. Very satisfactory it is to see that Navy leave is now being given a little more liberally. The exigencies of the service have stood in the way of granting leave as often as the Admiralty could have wished, and these still prevail; but those who have had occasion to be with the Fleet at its sea stations know how important it is that as large a number of a ship's company as possible should have a spell ashore if the long vigil of the coming winter is to be endured with the buoyancy of mind which counts for so much in the confined space of a ship. Another picturesque element of London streets just now is furnished by the women recruits of the army, many serving here in the home camps and many bound for France. Very smart they look in their short khaki skirts and saucy headgear, and they swagger about with their pretty chins in the air as proud as peacocks. Apparently, they have been drilled, too, for they use the short, quick step of the infantry, and swing their arms well. Indeed, swinging the arms is quite the thing among the girls of the day.

No Indigestion Gas Or Stomach Misery In Five Minutes.

"Pape's Diapepsin" for sour, acid stomach, heartburn, dyspepsia.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Millions of men and women now eat their favorite foods without fear—they know Pape's Diapepsin will save them from any stomach misery.

Please for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

MOTORING.

I chug along from burg to grad, good gaso- l i n e a-burning, where roads are good, where roads are bad, on high-ways straight and t u r n i n g. "Oh, motoring," I sigh, "is bliss, my good old car's a treasure; w h a t outdoor pastime equals this, for pure and lasting pleasure!" And as I gambol through the dust, with other autos racing, my treadbare tires begin to bust, and spoil both tube and casing. I toil and labor in the sun until I bust a gallus, and ere the weary work is done I drink from sorrow's chalice. For changing tires will break the heart of any portly mortal, upset his mental apple-cart, and kill his smile and chortle. At last new tires are on the wheels, and I resume my spinning; my laughter rings in merry peals, my smile is sweet and winning. Then something breaks about the torque; no more my car is speeded! I'll have to send to far New York, to get the part that's needed. When fixed, some other parts will break, some bearings, pins or collars, and when repairs the workmen make, they'll charge me ninety dollars. And so I'm walking near and far, on highways broad and narrow; I think I'll dump the motor car, and get myself a barrow.
