IN MEMORIAM

Address by Rev. E. Underwood in St. James' Church
May 20th, 1910.

Text: 1 Chron. XXIX. vv. 26, 28, with 1 Kings II. 12. "Thus David, the son of Jesse, reigned over all Israel.....and he died.....full of days, riches, and honor; and Solomon, his son, reigned in his stead. And his Kingdom was established greatly."

It has been said that there is scarcely a phase in human life but may find its due expression in words of Holy Writ. It certainly did occur to me that the words of our text would be most fitting for the occasion bringing us together today.

The King is dead! Long live the King. Just two weeks ago today we were apprised of the fact that King Edward was ill, and within a few hours thereafter of the further fact that he had "passed away", and I think I need hardly say, the news came as a great shock, indeed, its suddenness (comparatively speaking), was startling. And now, today, we meet here in God's house to pay a tribute to his memory in this our solemn memorial service.

In all probability no wiser Monarch ever reigned over a nation. In all probability no Monarch ever reigned who was so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of what is known as constitutional rule, and who was so careful to keep ever before his mind the responsibility of the Sovereign under the well understood principles on which His monarchy rested. And thus it came to pass that King Edward VII occupied an unique position among the royal rulers of the world. Never did a Sovereign extend his royal sceptre over a more united and more loyal people. Never did the crown of a great people sit more securely on human brow. Never has the British throne been rooted more deeply in the hearts and minds of the people of a world-wide empire. Adhering strictly to the usages and traditions of a constitutional ruler, he followed in the footsteps of his revered mother, and maintained the throne upon a sound and enduring foundation—possibly making it even more secure. In his first utterance after his coronation, speaking of the death of Queen Victoria, he said: "My constant endeavor will be always to walk in her footsteps. In undertaking the heavy load which now devolves upon me, I am fully determined to be a constitutional Sovereign in the strictest sense of the word, and, so long as there is breath in my body, to work for the good and amelioration of my people."

That pledge he kept. He failed in nothing. He has handed down his glorious heritage unimpaired. He has won an enduring place in the affections of his subjects of both high and low estate. Almost his last words, so we are told, were: "It is all over, but I think I have done my duty." And I venture to suggest that when the history of his reign shall come to be written, posterity will declare that he spoke the truth.

But besides being a kingly King, Edward VII was, by universal consent, a manly man, and again I venture to think that this is an even much higher tribute than to say what is undoubtedly true—that he was the first gentleman in Europe.

What think you was the secret of his unremitting labors in the interests of peace? Surely that he possessed the heart of a man,—a true man. Undoubtedly his unrivalled position as the supreme social head of the British Empire gave him a status in the eyes of the world, which united with charming and gracious manners, a keen intellect, a wide experience of men and the motives which rule them gave him unparalleled opportunities to work for good. But, then, he might have abused rather than used these opportunities, or, at any rate, neglected to grasp them. But, no, his heart was too manly for that, too human in the best sense of the word, and he never allowed an opportunity to slip, nay, rather, he sought on every possible occasion to promote the peace and well-being of the world at large. As one writer says (Halifax Chronicle, May 9, 1910. "His great desire was at all hazards to protect the world's peace, to avoid at whatever cost, the pitfalls to which nations rush headlong. He standardized the motives of British international policies and the world trusted him fully. He became a greater conqueror than Kings who had led armies. He wielded the baton of a Master of Orchestra, with Princes and Statesmen as his fellow workers, and the whole world took direction from his hand. The Chancellors of Europe opened at his slightest touch. Oriental peoples found in him their interpreter, American homes and hearts treated him as the constant bidden and ever welcome guest."

He was also allied with the spirit of true democracy—so much so that the masses, both at home and abroad, loved him. If occasion required, his dignity and majesty was unimpeachable, but as occasion offered he also made himself simple and without ostentation one of the people, entering into their joys and sorrows, and getting an insight into the first-hand of their lives. His point of view. Is it any wonder, then, that a whole civilized world today pays homage and tribute to his memory!

THE KING IS DEAD.

"Around the earth the empires nations mourn,
And half-mast high the saddened banners fling
To every breeze their red-cross folds forlorn
In grief for one, who every inch a King,
Hath passed the portals of that unknown bourne
Which men call Death. It is no light-some thing
To see a realm bereft of such as he,
Beneath whose hands were blood-red emblems furled,
Greater in force than ironclads at Sea,
Our Lord of Peace around the Anglian World.

"This master mind no diplomatic hand,
Of labor knew; whose strong yet skilful hand
Flicked back with tickling whip the sullen hounds
That bayed for war. He passed from land to land
And by that touch which makes the whole world kin
Dissolved like mist the gloom of courtly rings
And left a smile upon the face of Kings,
Where only brooding thoughts before had been,
All honor pay this King of Kings and Men;
And lasting glory crown his three score years and ten.

"In every cot, in each baronial hall,
Where nations gather round the Martyr of Trade,
Quiet as shadows of the evening fall,
Fell on the waiting world, a world dismayed,
"The King is dead." Upon us all is laid
Fell sorrow's hand. And every soul shall bear,
With roll of imaginative ear,
The "Dead March" roll in solemn tones that bring
A nation to their knees around a coffin King."

But our text gives us another thought and one which we should not miss on this occasion tho' not concerned with it primarily.

"And the King died full of days, riches and honor; and Solomon his son reigned in his stead."

The King is dead; the King lives; long may he reign. As you all well know, in theory, the King of Great Britain never dies, and so it comes to pass that "The King is dead, long live the King" is uttered in almost the same breath, and the one Monarch is scarcely cold in death ere the next is proclaimed.

I allude to this because even in this solemn hour of mourning we have a duty to George V, and, for this reason, by our Bishop's express direction we shall incorporate even in our service today special prayer and thanksgiving for the now reigning Monarch. But there is another point of view. The feeling has been voiced in some quarters that England could ill afford at this present time to lose her former King, and grave doubt has been expressed as to the ability of George V. to worthily succeed his father, especially in view of the very serious state of internal politics in the mother-country at the present moment.

The King himself says:—"I am deeply sensible of the heavy responsibilities which have fallen upon me. But is not all this simply history repeating itself? And may not history repeat itself again? Few thought that Edward VII. would ever measure up to the standard he almost immediately did. And King George V. says:—"To endeavor to follow in his footsteps and, at the same time, to uphold the constitutional government of these realms, will be the earnest object of my life." And who shall say but that he, too, by the blessing of Almighty God, in answer to a nation's prayers, shall so be able

TRIFLES ABOUT TRAINS.

Signs and Signals That Should Interest Canadian Travelers.

There are many signs and signals on the British railway that are apt to puzzle even the most seasoned of season-ticket holders. The men who reads and remembers the simple facts given below can pride himself on knowing considerably more than most people.

One point that puzzles many people is the fact that engine-drivers pass some danger signals and stop at others.

Well, the ones he passes are "distant" signals. Those he stops for are "home" signals. When the driver sees the "distant" signal against him he goes right on. He knows it only means "Be careful—the home signal may be against you!" When the "home" signal is against him, it means "Stop, and quickly!"

The "distant" signal is only a caution signal. It may be a "wall-on-tail" even, there is a wedge-shaped piece cut out. The "home" or "stop" signal, on the other hand, has an arm with a square end.

Sometimes it is necessary to have a signal on a particularly high post, in order that it may be easily seen. When a second signal on the same post, only very much nearer the ground. This second one is called the fog arm. In foggy weather it can often be made out when the higher one cannot.

A signal with the letters "S" on its arm is intended solely for the use of engines and trains engaged in shunting. A signal with the letter "O" on its arm is, at many busy stations, used for slow and local trains; while the fast-line traffic uses the ordinary signals.

On some lines signals are to be seen with two round holes in the arm. These are used to control the movements of "backing" trains, or trains that the engine pushes instead of pulling.

Perhaps you have wondered how a porter, by glancing at an approaching train, can tell whether it will stop or not, and where it is going? Well, he knows the engine code. It is a very simple one. He tells by the lamps it carries both by night and by day.

If you look at an approaching engine and you see two lamps on the platform the boiler rests on one above each buffer—the train is a passenger express. If there is one above the right hand buffer and one on top of the boiler, at the foot of the smokestack, it is a goods express. If it is a train of empty passenger coaches there will be three lights—one above each buffer, and one at the smokestack. A slow local train has only one light, and that at the smokestack. An engine running alone has only one lamp. In this case it is over the left-hand buffer.

If you remember these simple points you should not have the faintest difficulty in telling whether a train coming in the distance is yours or not. The position, by the way, of the two wooden arms sometimes to be seen at the foot of the smokestack indicates the route the train takes.

Besides the lamps on the engine there are the lamps at the other end of the train. At night the last carriage has to carry a red light. If there are two red lamps, side by side, it gives station-masters and signalmen warning that a special train is coming immediately behind.

In daytime this warning is given by a red flag beside the tail lamp, or by a red board with the words "Train following" painted conspicuously on it. The reason of the tail-light system is to let the signalmen, as the train passes, know whether the train is complete or not. There must be no stray carriages left on the line for the next train to smash itself against. Hence the red light.

Breaking It Gently.

The somewhat careless major of an English regiment stationed in India returned to London after an absence of several years. His sluggish liver needed touching up, he thought, and so he went to a famous physician for advice and paid his advance charge. "Major," said the doctor, "you are in a serious condition, but I think we can pull you through. You must purchase a tub four feet wide and two deep. Then you must fill it with tepid water."

"Not boiling, doctor?"

"No; merely tepid. Then you must stand in it and with a sponge moisten your body. Having done this, you must apply some saponaceous matter."

"Will plain yellow soap do?" asked the patient.

"Yes," said the doctor. "Having thoroughly soaped yourself, you must dry off with a rough towel."

"Why, doctor, this is awfully like a bath," exclaimed the veteran.

"Well, it is open to that objection," replied the famous physician, "but I feel, sir, that you need it."

Monument to Good Women.

In the Lady Chapel of the new Liverpool Cathedral there will be magnificent stained glass windows in commemoration of the deeds of good women. Famous women of the Old and New Testament are to be included, but there will also be memorials of good women of modern times—Mary Cook, Grace Darling, Josephine Butler, Elizabeth Fry, Ann Clough, Mary Somerville, Mary Rogers, the stewardess of the Stella, Queen Victoria, Susannah Wesley, and others.

Boy Scouts on March.

The Australian Boy Scouts are something more than juvenile fire-side soldiers. Recently a party of the Brisbane corps arrived in Tenterfield, having walked all the way, nearly 200 miles, in eleven days, some rough country being covered in the journey. During the trip the party wore out two pairs of boots each. The boys range in age from 14 to 16 years.

Anthracite Coal.

While anthracite coal was discovered in Pennsylvania in 1770, its record in actual trade dates from 1804. As late as 1833 it was difficult to place the new fuel as plentiful as it could be mined. For years it was a drug on the market.

R.M.P.

Some of the Trials of Territorial Policemen in England.

The observant civilian in London and other garrison towns will have occasionally noticed, stalking in rear of an alert and grim-looking non-com in blue uniform and scarlet cap, a brace of brawny soldiers, Guardsmen or line wearing on their right cuffs an armband, with the mystic letters R.M.P.

The non-com in blue is a "Red Cap"—one of the Military Police force, whose duty it is to keep order among soldiers out of barracks, and the men in rear are his "bulldozers," stout fellows, specially picked for this duty from the troops in the district.

What is sauce for Tommy is also sauce for the Territorial, and when ever the latter is under arms, in camp, or quarters, his corps is called upon, by regulation, to provide an adequate police force, to keep him in paths of virtue and righteousness.

It says much for the "Terrier" that such duty is nearly always a sinecure. But occasionally a "job" falls in the way of the Territorial R.M.P., and then his lot is no happier than the rest of his kind.

The writer has a lively recollection of one encounter. My battalion that year was brigaded with others near a certain seaside resort, and having secured unto myself the billet of provost-sergeant, I was strolling one evening, with regulation tread, along the parade, when I spied a swaying crowd just ahead of me.

I headed towards the crowd blithely. It burst asunder at sight of me, and revealed a perspiring civilian "bobby" dancing, as it seemed, a vigorous two-step with a large and ebullient Territorial, belonging to a corps encamped some three miles away.

Spotting my police badge, my comrade in blue called on me to participate. I hesitated coyly. There was a look in his partner's eye which I did not like, the look of a vicious horse. But, as the representative of military law and order I was not only bound to aid him in his capture, but had to take the large and ebullient Territorial into my own charge, and march him to camp as best I could.

I looked round for help, and, curiously enough, where there had been a dozen khaki-clad spectators a minute before, there was not a sign of one now to be seen.

In early days I had been something of a boxer, and to my knowledge of the fist art I attribute the fact that at the end of half an hour I had skulldragged my prisoner some forty yards across the marine parade and immured him temporarily in a building-machine. My own pugnet happened along just then, and I was able to consign my prisoner to their care.

Next night, on returning to camp, after seeing the "houses" closed, I found the guard-tent in state of siege with another ebullient specimen, crawling round on his hands and knees, trying to fight his way out under the brailing, and the guard outside frustrating his endeavors with ten-pegs and mallet handles.

I demanded to know whether the prisoner had been searched according to regulation, and deprived of his boots and belt. The corporal said he had not. He expressed an opinion, moreover, that it would be more than anyone's life was worth to attempt it, a view which the prisoner, with his head poked under the canvas, heartily endorsed.—London Answers.

Buying an Ancestor.

The famous quarterly reviewer, Mr. Abraham Hayward of London, once thought that he should like to have some ancestors. So he walked to Wardour street, where one can generally pick up an ancestor or two of the Cromwellian, Queen Anne or early Georgian period. Selecting a portrait of a cavalier in half armor, with features not quite unlike his own, Mr. Hayward made a bid for it, but, deeming the price asked too high, he went his way.

A fortnight after, the ancestral fever coming strongly upon him, he went again to Wardour street, prepared to pay the dealer his price. The picture was sold. A few days later Mr. Hayward went to dine with Lord Houghton and was astonished to see the picture in the dining-room. Seeing that it attracted his guest's attention, Lord Houghton said:

"Very good picture, that; came into my hands in a curious way; portrait of a Milnes of the Commonwealth period, an ancestor of mine."

"Indeed!" said Mr. Hayward. "He was very near being an ancestor of mine."

Tired of Selling Books.

Scotland has given birth to some wonderful artists, but none who leaped to fame so quickly as Mr. John MacWhirter, the Royal Academician. Apprenticed early to a bookseller and publisher, he ran away and commenced his artist life; and when his talent that his early studies of wild flowers at home and abroad were selected by Ruskin as examples for his Oxford class. "The Three Graces," which brought him his A.R.A. in 1879, is typical of the work which has opened the eyes of the layman to the delicate beauties of the birch tree. Mr. MacWhirter is an ardent yachtman.

Relics of the Waratah?

A quantity of wreckage has lately been washed ashore in the neighborhood of Mosab Bay, a significant object being a cushion marked "W." A hatchway which was found has been sent to the builders of the missing liner Waratah with a view to identification. The Waratah left Durban for Cape Town on July 26 last, with nearly 200 persons on board, and was seen the next day in a violent storm. Since then she has not been heard of, and was recently posted at Lloyds as "missing."

Waited on Napoleon.

An interesting person is William Johnstone, who is 106 years of age, and now living in a religious institution at Sydney, N.E.W. He was a cabin boy in 1816 on H.M.S. Northampton, the British warship that took Napoleon to St. Helena. He remained on the island for some time as one of the fallen emperor's attendants, and he has a book with Napoleon's writing in it.

HEALTHY CHILDREN

Psychine Made Her A Robust Child

It is not necessary for us to speak any words of our own, for the facts given below are strong enough to convince the most skeptical as to PSYCHINE'S power to restore health. Mr. John Sykes, of Victoria Harbor, says:—

"When Nellie was about 4 years of age, she had wasted away so much that she looked like a little skeleton. The doctor treated her for 2 or 3 months, but the child got worse, and the doctor said he could do nothing more. We called in another doctor who told us every thing had been done and that the child could not get better. We decided to take the little thing to a Montreal doctor, who said her lungs were filled with pus and that she would have to undergo an operation if we would save her life. The next day he came, down from Montreal and operated upon her, but the operation was a failure, as he was unable to get any pus from the lungs.

"We were disappointed, and fully thought little Nellie was not going to get better, but it heard what a wonderful medicine PSYCHINE was for the lungs. We had been reading some of the advertisements in the papers of people who had been cured through PSYCHINE. We thought it would suit our little girl, and so decided to give it a trial. This we did, and after Nellie had taken our little girl began to improve. Gradually the little girl began to fill out, and she was quite well. That was two years ago, and she is as well and robust to-day as the other children are.

"We have a great deal to be thankful for. We firmly believe little Nellie would never have lived if we had not heard of PSYCHINE. We shall be pleased to answer enquiries at any time."

INDIAN FIGHTER KILLED SISTER.
Raymond Hayes, Aged Fourteen, Shot and Killed Invalid Sister Aged Nine.

Chicago, May 14—Raymond Hayes fourteen years old, shot and killed his invalid sister Helen, nine years old, while entertaining her with an exhibition of Indian fighting, and the boy is a prisoner today.

The lad had drawn pictures of Indians on the wall just over a cot where his sister lay. Breaking open a trunk belonging to an elder sister where he expected to find some candy she had hidden, the boy found the revolver. He aimed the pistol at a picture of an Indian in full regalia. Just as he did, the girl started to rise. The supposedly unloaded revolver exploded and the girl fell back.

THE FIRST ESSENTIAL.

The first step in keeping disease away from dogs is to keep them away from them.

Not a day passes over the earth but men and women of no note do great deeds, speak great words and suffer noble sorrows. Of these obscure heroes, philosophers and martyrs, the greater part will never be known till the hour when many that were great shall be small and the small great.—Chas. Reade.

Nervous Prostration For Three Years

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine cured me of a period of nervous prostration of over three years duration, and the Anti-Pain Pills are as necessary to us as the roof of our house. They have been household remedies with us for many years."
WM. J. LOUGHRAN,

Much sickness is due to nervous troubles. Headache, dizziness, epilepsy and insanity are nervous troubles. Then there is a large class of disorders which arise from a weakness of the nerves of an organ or part, as weak lungs, heart, stomach, kidney, bladder, eyes, etc. Dyspepsia and indigestion are usually the result of nervous disorders.

Restorative Nervine soothes the irritated nerves, and assists the nerve cells to generate nerve force.

to meet the requirements and exigencies of his office and time, as to be able to conscientiously say in the face of the "greater mystery" when his time comes to depart this life, "I think I have done my duty!" At any rate we have it on the authority of an intimate friend of our Royal Family and one who knows King George well, that he has undergone sedulous training and has been educated to rule by learning to obey. "The country," he says "will discover in him what those admitted to his confidence have ever realized—admirable traits of kindness and strength; wise common sense; practical judgement of affairs; shrewd insight into character, and a singularly upright and lofty conception of his kingly duty. He has a frank, generous, unspoiled nature, is quick in apprehension, deliberate in thought, careful in expression, controlled by far-reaching consciousness of duty, and animated by a vivid sense of his exalted mission. He is an admirable father and husband, and a loveable man."

I speak thus because I want to mention a suggestion which some of you may have seen. King Edward VII was regarded as one who made no mistakes, i. e. as a King. Now, who shall say, — as the Archbishop of Canterbury, asked in Westminster Abbey last Sunday week— "Who shall say that this is not in answer to the countless prayers that daily ascend to the throne of grace for the reigning Sovereign?" What a duty, then, we owe to King George V. Undoubtedly a heavy task lies before him. Undoubtedly he feels his weakness, natural and otherwise, as much as anybody, and undoubtedly he needs our prayers, and to give them would surely be the best way of honoring the memory of King Edward VII. May this, then, be one of the thoughts we shall take home with us today from this memorial service, and act upon it, then shall history record something like this:—"Edward the peacemaker, son of Victoria, the good, reigned over all Great and Greater Britain. And he died full of years, riches, and honor, and George, his son, reigned in his stead. And his Kingdom was established greatly."

"For tis not crown nor sceptre men revere,
But the majestic mind and regal soul,
That amid clashing clamours serve
...to steer
A realm unto its goal."

Then there is just one other thought. We could hardly take part in such a service as this without mind and heart going out to that illustrious lady who henceforth is to be known as "Alexandra, the Queen Mother." Without question, hers must be the grief saddest of all. To adapt some words of the Dean of Nova Scotia. "I am sure the hearts of all go out to her in profoundest sympathy. From the time she came to Eng. and, "the sea-King's daughter from over the sea" she has won all hearts, and been enshrined in the affections of the English people. Simple, unassuming kind, gracious, thoughtful of others, a model wife and mother, a model Queen Consort, she leaves to the daughter-in-law who takes her place an example most sweet and inspiring. And one feels sure if the love and admiration and sympathy of a nation and empire can bring consolation to her stricken heart then has she all this in full and abundant measure."

"Once more, alas, the passing bell tolls out
The tidings of our loss. The King is dead,
Our Royal Edward, noblest of his name,
Few years but happy has the Empire seen
Since from his sainted mother's hand
He took the Sceptre and with it the vow
To live and reign as great Victoria's son.
Now he is gone, and in our hearts of hearts
We say "Amen" to his last whispered word.
His task is o'er, his duty is well done
God comfort her who sheds a widow's tear."

Mr. Underwood wishes to say he is indebted to various issues of the daily press for much of the matter in this sermon.

The Finance Department has for some time been looking into the question of designs for the new gold coinage of Canada and on these the head of King George will appear the first of January, which will probably be the date of the inauguration of Canadian gold coins.

No, sir; it's not very nice to have dust and dirt sifting down through cracks above the milk bucket. The floor above the cows ought to be tight.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Leghorn Hats Smart This Season—A Fancy For the All Black Creation. Leghorn in the natural color, which is a deeper yellow than some other straws, is very good style this season. The all white hat is almost a necessity to the summer-girl, and Paris sanctions the lace trimmed straw hat. Large black hats are simply trimmed with huge bows, requiring from ten to twelve yards of crisp, glossy ribbon. The black hat is not mourning except when the mistake is made of choosing too dull a straw and too dull a ribbon. Paris features the crown so low as to suggest a flat or plaque, but we see few hats with this crown as yet in millinery on this side the pond. The more daring the turnup of the hat brim the more up to date is the hat.

Wreaths of simple white roses lie flat upon the broad brims of plain black hats for those who avoid the flaring brim.

Fouard silk is very popular this season, and the gown illustrated is carried out in this material.

JUDIC CHOLLET.
These May Manton patterns are cut in sizes for the blouse from 22 to 42 inches bust measure and for the skirt in sizes from 22 to 32 waist measure. Send 10 cents each for these patterns to this office, giving numbers—blouse 621 and blouse 622—and they will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which insures more prompt delivery.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.
What the Season is Showing in Tailor Made Suits. Many new tailor made suits have sailor collars on the coats—that is, the sailor shape appears on the collar at the back, while the front effect is shawl shaped. The skirts of these suits are plaited or in some way depart from the plain lines of last season.

A stylish skirt model for cloth suits has a double row of plaits, forming a double skirt. The fullness is manipulated with mastery skill, and the result is an attractive line that bespeaks ease and comfort in walking.

Hollyhocks "are in." Paris shows whole hedges of these stiff flowers on her model hats, and many other tall, spikelike blossoms are in evidence. When the stem is not stiff enough to hold them in place they are wired into upstanding position.

Short overskirts or tunics that are cut to form points at the sides are among the prettiest to have appeared. The skirt in the cut shows one of this ilk. It is especially adapted to bordered materials.

This May Manton pattern is cut for girls of two, four and six years of age. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 623, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which insures more prompt delivery.

FADS AND FANCIES.

A Brand New Embroidery Design. Blouses Fasten at Shoulder. Perhaps the newest things in embroideries is a German embroidery done on a batiste background which looks somewhat like rice bread.

A number of Dutch collars in linen lace and embroidery are seen, but the finest lingerie dresses are made collarless, and they will do duty for what might be called second best.

There has come about a wide return to blouses that fasten across one shoulder or both. In the latter case there is no fastening under the arm. The opening is straight across the top, and the garment goes over the head like a sweater. It is then fastened down each shoulder seam with small loops of braid and crochet buttons.

Tunics of transparent material with overblouses to match worn over plain foundations are exceedingly good style, and the model illustrated is extremely graceful. Both the overblouse and the tunic are made of lace, and the skirt and the slip beneath are of messaline.

VANITY'S VISIONS.
Hints For the Economical Woman. Hat Decorations. Short women should not wear immense hats, even though the shapes be alluring in line and decoration.

Never economize by making one hat play the role of outing hat and the shape for dressy occasions, for the shabby for both. The first double expense is better economy in the end.

From the handsome embroidered gown, worn out in spots and past redemption as a dress, there may be cut pieces of rich handwork to use for other purposes. The embroidered hand bag for wear with summer dresses may be made of a silk lined piece of embroidery.

Finely plaited black lace is wired into a tall fan and fastened with a gold cabochon to a gold colored straw turban for wear with a pongee frock.

The simple little gumpe that is tucked to form its own yoke is always a pretty one for the younger children. This season it is being made from dotted, crossbarred and embroidered mesh as well as from plain, but it is ever the same plain little garment.

PROPRIETOR AND PUBLISHER.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1910.

It is a pleasure to record the many efforts at improvement being made by our citizens in the way of beautifying Bridgetown, not only in the way of building improvements, painting and repairing, but in attention to the neatness and attractiveness of their grounds and premises. From the sanitary as well as the ornamental aspect the movement is to be commended, for the first step in improvement must be a general "clean-up." After this comes attention to the lawn and walks. If the premises are too small for a lawn they are not too small to be kept neat and tidy. No place is quite complete without a few flowers or a little shrubbery. A back yard garden, where there is no chance for one in front, often puts to shame the ambitious but misguided attempts, or the careless indifference shown in the cultivation or lack of cultivation of larger grounds.

Very few of our citizens but take proper pride in the neat and tasteful appearance of their individual premises, and in this fact should be a pointer for our town fathers. The one thing that mars the appearance of the town more than anything else is the litter and filth lying or blowing about the streets. People who try to keep their premises neat are thwarted by the careless acts of passers by who toss paper, fruit-skins and other rubbish wherever they may happen to be. A few metal receptacles placed at the street corners on the main streets and attached by a chain to posts have proved in many towns a great aid in keeping clean streets. In addition to this street cleaners should be employed to do more frequent service, and the watering cart should reduce the dust nuisance to a minimum. As another effective aid the by-law on the town books regulating the driving of cattle on the public streets should be strictly enforced and a new by-law should be enacted prohibiting spitting on the sidewalks or in public places.

With such regulations as these in force we should more frequently hear the remark from strangers, "Bridgetown is such a pretty town" without the qualifying phrase, "but so dirty."

THE C. F. R. FLORAL DEPARTMENT.

It is alleged that corporations have no souls. But the lover of flowers and the promoter of this love in others must have something closely resembling a soul. The Canadian Pacific Railway, some years ago, conceived the idea of establishing flower gardens at all stations on its vast system. This scheme has been in operation for several years under the supervision of Mr. Stewart Dunlop. In the autumn Mr. Dunlop sends bulbs to the station keepers. In the spring he sends flower seeds. At the proper season he furnishes snrubs and trees to those who are able to place them. Thus every station of the C. F. R. has some flowers about it. The stopping place may be some barren spot among the rocks, but if there is not soil enough for a flower bed, the earth is procured. Officers of the Company who are stationed in lonesome places have some brightness imported into their lives. Those who have neighbors furnish an example to a community which may be neglecting this civilizing influence. The example set by the Canadian Pacific, may well be followed by the intercolonial and other railways.

Granville Centre

Early on the morning of May 16th, after an illness of three months, Hannah N., wife of Mr. Joseph Troop of Granville Centre, departed this life aged eighty-eight years. She was a daughter of the late Ebeneser, and was the last but one of a large family. Capt. Jacob Bent of Granville Ferry, survives her. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. T. Suckling, rector of All Saints church, of which the deceased was an ardent member, and was able until a year ago to attend the services there. Mrs. Troop was the mother of nine children eight of whom, with her aged husband survive her. Mrs. James Olinger, Mrs. Robert Tanch, Mrs. Gilbert Ray and Arthur, of Granville, W. I. Troop, Bridgetown, Capt. John R. Troop, New York, Mrs. Gilbert Halliwell, California, Mrs. Charles FitzGibbon, Somerville, Mass., Capt. R. B. Troop, of London, Eng., died several years ago. Mr. Troop has the sympathy of all in his loneliness.

Mr. Willett Wade, another of our old residents, died on May 23rd, after a lingering illness, at the age of eighty-seven years and seven months. Funeral services were held in the Episcopal church, of which he was an active member as long as his health permitted. He leaves two daughters Misses Ida and Fannie Wade, who tenderly cared for him in his last sickness. His wife and one daughter, Margaret, pre-deceased him several years ago.

Mr. John W. Wade informed your correspondent on the morning of May 23rd that he had ripe strawberries for breakfast grown on his own farm. The plants were taken from the ground in February and grown in a box until now, where they have produced quite a number of fine ripe berries. Next!

Miss Daniels of Kentville spent the 24th with her friend, Miss Annie Eaton.

Mrs. Frank Willett, of Tupperville, visited relatives and friends here last week.

Mr. Archibald O., the firm of Reed and Archibald, has been here the past week looking after the interests of the firm.

The recent rainy weather has very materially interfered with the progress of the works here.

Teams double and single from far near are hauling stone for ballast for the piece of crib now being put into the wharf where the steamers will lay to load ore.

The ladies of the Baptist church of Victoria Beach held an Ice Cream social and Lobster supper on Saturday evening, which was largely attended by the workmen of this place and others.

The new piece of railroad under construction now will soon be completed.

BRITISH LABOR EXPERIMENT.

Official Exchanges Assume Task of Finding Work for the Idle.

An interesting experiment in practical economics has been undertaken in Great Britain, namely the establishment of official employment bureaux in London and the other large cities of Great Britain and Ireland, whose employees of labor can find all the help they need, and wage earners of any class may register and make known their wants without the payment of a fee. It is thus proposed by the Government to bring the employees and the unemployed together on an official basis, and the arrangements are such that opportunities for employment in any part of the kingdom may be communicated promptly to all of the exchanges, as the agencies are to be called, and posted in a prominent place for the information of whoever is most concerned.

The Government does not undertake to recommend or to give any information further than that which is communicated by the persons directly interested, and will assume no risk; but will simply act as a medium of communication. There is considerable curiosity as to how the scheme will work and the labor unions generally are skeptical as to its practicability. But the undertaking is a benevolent one and should be well supported.

Daily reports will be made from each of the exchanges to headquarters and to each other, so that workmen who cannot find employment in one locality will be advised as to the outlook in other districts. In case employment is offered by responsible people, railway tickets will be furnished workmen of good character to such places and the cost collected from their second month's earnings. It is proposed to erect buildings in convenient locations as permanent homes for the exchanges. Special attention will be given to finding employment upon farms for boys whose physical condition will permit them to do manual labor, and those who are physically incapable of manual labor will be certified to hospitals and sanitariums, where they can receive proper treatment. The general superintendent of the system of exchanges will be W. H. Beveridge, a recognized authority on labor questions and author of "Unemployment."

The success of the enterprise will depend entirely upon the co-operation of the employees, because if they ignore the new exchanges in seeking help it will be useless for the unemployed to make application. Many of the labor unions are hostile to the plan, and officers are expected to be distrustful of an agency that can supply any number of laborers and mechanics at any time they may be needed for any purpose. They argue that such an agency places in the hands of the Government an instrument that will defeat any strike at short notice. But the law establishing the exchanges expressly stipulates that strike breakers shall not be furnished.

An Interesting Link.

One curious incident in the siege of Badajoz may be related. The day after the assault two Spanish ladies, the younger a beautiful girl of fourteen, appealed for help to two officers of the rifles, who were passing through one of the streets of the town. Their dresses were torn, their ears, from which rings had been roughly snatched, were bleeding, and to escape outrage or death they cast themselves on the protection of the first British officers they met. One of the officers was Capt. Harry Smith of the rifles. Two years later he married the girl he had saved in scene so wild. Capt. Harry Smith in after years served at the Cape as Sir Harry, and this Spanish girl, as Lady Smith, gave her name to the historic town which Sir George White defended with such stubborn valor—"Wellington's Men."

Going One Better.

"Ma father's a sapper," said a little Scotch lassie.
"An' ma father, too," said her playmate.
"Ah, but ma father's a brave man. He's been in war, an' he's got a hale gang o' medals. An' he's got the Victoria Cross. The King pinned it on him wi' his ain hand!" breathlessly announced lassie No. 1.
"An' ma father's a braver!" cried the other little one. "He's been in dozens o' wars, an' he's got gages an' gages o' medals an' Victoria Crosses. An' he's got a bonnie wuddie leg, an'—with a triumphant shriek—"The King nailed it on wi' his ain hand!"—London Exchange.

How Those Lords Love Each Other.

Lord Lansdowne once congratulated Lord Oress on an eloquent speech in the House of Lords.
"I have followed it," he said, "with earnest attention, not only on account of the importance of the subject, but also on account of the noble lord's judicial attitude. I admired his eloquence, but what impressed me most was his impartiality."
A pause.
"Yes, until the last minute, I did not know on which side of the fence his lordship was coming down."

The Wonderful Scott.

Volume and quality both considered, Sir Walter Scott was probably the most wonderful writer ever known. More than 10,000,000 volumes of his "Life and Works" have been printed, and the demand is by no means exhausted. Within five years after the fame of "Waverley" had gone abroad he was read by all Europe and America, and the annual profits of his novels amounted to more than $60,000.

At the preliminary trial before Justice Messenger yesterday two lads, Walter White and Jack McLaughlin, accused of perjury in an assault case, were sent up for trial before the Supreme Court which meets in Bridgetown on the 21st of the month. One of the boys was the defendant in the assault case, the other the witness. Both boys are cut on bail.

The friends of Miss Lillian Sutherland, Granville Ferry, will be interested to learn that she was among the list of prize-winners at the closing of the New York school of Applied Design and was awarded the scholarship given by Mrs. Fred Vanderbilt for "general excellence of work," one of the highest honors awarded. She also won first prize in flower planting. In the examination for the advanced department, Miss Sutherland won the second award. These prizes were won in competition with over three hundred pupils.

Greatly to the surprise of most of our people, who thought Halley's Comet had taken its departure out of the range of ordinary vision, it made its appearance high in the western sky on Friday night about ten o'clock. It could not be said to be a brilliant sight, but there was no mistaking its identity as a comet, tail and all, the tail appearing as rays of white light. Those who witnessed it, and most people in this vicinity did, felt gratified to be able to say they "had seen the comet." It has not been visible since, owing to an overcast sky.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, Hoyt in California and Maurice, in business with his father, and one daughter, Lila, now Mrs. McFee and residing in the north west.

Thousands Viewed the Body of Dead Monarch

The ninth carriage was occupied by Lord Strathcona, lord high commissioner for Canada, Sir George Reid and William Paul Jones.

The two carriages following carried persons in waiting.

Arriving at Paddington station the casket was placed in the funeral car, which carried the funeral party to Windsor. The royal saloon was upholstered in purple and white silk and a catafalque erected in the centre supported the casket. The car was occupied by King George, Queen Mary, the Queen Mother Alexandra, eight other sovereigns and near relatives.

Special teams followed with the high officials, foreign representatives and special envoys.

It was a bitter winter day when the body of Queen Victoria was borne up the hill to the medieval chapel of St. George's. To day the castle gates at Windsor opened to receive the casket of the Seventh Edward, with the green of an English spring on the trees and within the massive walls. The grey towers and battlements over which the Union Jack was flying at half-mast never appeared more impressive.

A SEETHING MASS IN WINDSOR STREETS.

In the streets below was a seething mass of people in black with a line kept open by two solid lines of soldiers for the cortege to pass through.

When the royal train arrived at the station the body of the monarch was again placed on a gun carriage and the procession was re-formed with the addition of the ambassadors, ministers and other representatives of foreign states. Thus it passed through the purple draped streets to the castle and into St. George's chapel.

The clergy who were to conduct the service were in chapel when the cortege arrived. They were Archbishop of Canterbury, Archbishop of York and the Bishops of Winchester and Oxford and the Dean of Windsor, the three latter respectively the prelate chancellor and registrar of the garter.

THE CASKET BURIED IN FLOWERS.

The casket was placed on a purple catafalque before the altar, which was fairly buried in flowers, as the minute guns boomed and bells tolled the casket borne on the shoulders of the Grenadier guards was placed on the catafalque. King George as the chief mourner stood at the head of the casket. His majesty's body guard of gentlemen of arms stood at the left of the bier with axes traversed. The funeral party filled the edifice and overflowed into the prince consort's chapel to the south. There was a moment of profound silence when positions had been taken, and then the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Winchester advanced to the casket. The choir chanted "Man is born of woman," and the congregation recited the Lord's prayer, the low rumble of many voices being accompanied with Gounod's music. The service of the Church of England was followed throughout.

THE PRAYER OF THE GARTER KING.

Following the Lord's prayer, the anthem, "How Blest are They," was sung, after which the garter king advanced to the altar and spoke as follows: "For as much as it has pleased Almighty God to take out of this life unto his divine mercy the late most high, most mighty and most excellent monarch Edward by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, Emperor of India, and sovereign of the most noble Order of the Garter, let us humbly beseech Almighty God to bless with long life, health and honor and all worldly happiness the most high, most mighty and most excellent monarch, our sovereign Lord George, now by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great, Britain and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, Emperor of India, and sovereign of the most noble order of the garter. God save the king."

THE ANSWERING MURMUR FROM THE ASSEMBLAGE.

An answering murmur of "God save the King" arose from the assemblage.

The Archbishop of Canterbury pronounced the solemn benediction after which, with the Bishop of Winchester, he knelt before the altar in a moment of silent prayer. As the clergy rose to their feet, the hush was broken and the procession withdrew from the chapel in order of its entrance. The body of Edward VII. remained before the altar, later to find a permanent resting place in the royal tomb house in Albert Memorial chapel.

CASKET LOWERED INTO THE CRYPT.

Windsor, May 20.—During the service at St. George's chapel the widowed queen moved to the foot of the casket and knelt. At the conclusion of the service the casket was lowered to the crypt. Before this was done King George placed a royal standard on the coffin.

Opportunities for Young Men in Nova Scotia

To the Editor of the Halifax Herald: Sir,—I noticed in your paper of recent date some young man asking what could be done to induce him and some others to remain in your city and not come west. The answer I would give, they are the ones to do something to induce others to stay. I lived in Nova Scotia for thirty years and know lots of opportunities for young men with small capital to start in different lines of business, such as fruit growing, mixed farming stock raising or manufacturing. I visited my old home last summer not far from your city and was surprised when one of the meat merchants told me he had driven eighty miles that day and could not find a beef fit to put on the market.

Look at the price of country produce today compared with twenty years ago, and you can't begin to supply the demand.

This, of course, is a large country, and a man who feels like roughing it for a few years, not only will succeed as a farmer. In the cities and towns the business men are simply working for their landlords, rents and other expenses are so extraordinarily high: so when you consider your expenses compared with the rest, the enjoyments of life and the morality of the two countries, I stay at home and enjoy life and help to build up one of the best provinces in this great Dominion of ours.

THE REVOLVER EVIL.

(From the Montreal Star.)

Since we do not allow the sale of poisons without a physician's order, we ought, at once, to see that no dealer disposes of a revolver without written instructions from the Chief of Police, or a Stipendiary Magistrate. If the regulations governing the first of these commodities is desirable, the second, is many times more so. We ought to prevent dealers playing up on the ignorance of immigrants by tempting them to purchase fire-arms and the best way to accomplish this will be by forbidding the promiscuous inclusion of revolvers in window-displays. We ought to punish severely any of that all-too-numerous class of bright young men who carry "a gun" habitually and display it occasionally. Until something is done in this direction, we have no right to expect any falling off in the absolutely needless accidents and fatalities for which revolvers are responsible.

"It cured me," or "it saved the life of my child," are the expressions you hear every day about Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No other medicine in use for diarrhoea or bowel complaints has received such general approval. The secret of the success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is that it cures. Sold by all dealers.

THEODORE FIRST.

(From the Toronto Telegram.)

Theodore Roosevelt, with all his failings and imperfections, was the biggest, noblest figure among all the non-British mourners who followed the funeral train of Edward VII. The manhood of Roosevelt was not dwarfed by comparison with the might of kings and emperors, who have simply inherited thrones anterior in grandeur to the sovereignty over 90,000,000, the sovereignty with Theodore Roosevelt achieved and then renounced.

LIFE STORY LIKE A NOVEL.

Convicted Man Tells of Historic Battles and Gallant Rescues.

Like a novel in epitome was a written statement handed in to a London magistrate recently by a man, against whom were three separate charges of stealing boots.

The writer of the autobiography was Beger, alias Patrick Hayes, aged thirty-three years, of Blomfield road, Bow. The boots stolen were the property of various boot dealers in the East End of London.

Hayes at once pleaded guilty to all three charges, in order, he said, "to save the time of the court." His written statement, as read by the magistrate, was as follows:

"I am an ex-P.C. of the Royal Irish Constabulary, and resigned from that force to take part in the Jameson Raid. I was sent back from Cape Colony with others when the leaders were captured. On returning to London I joined the Scots Guards, and went through the Boer war, receiving the Queen's and King's medals and clasps for 'Diamond Hill,' 'Belfast,' 'Johannesburg,' 'Modder River,' 'Paardeberg,' and 'Doornkop.'"

The document went on to tell how Hayes was promoted corporal on the field of "Belfast."

"For courageous conduct in the firing line, and later, at Jericho, in the Eastern Transvaal, was the means of saving twenty of my comrades, who would have been either killed or captured. For this I received the thanks and commendation of the general and officers of the column. I was invalided from South Africa for heart disease and debility, occasioned by the heavy marching and privations of the campaign, and subsequently transferred to the Reserves."

Then came the tragedy of the story, in which the writer said he could get no work by reason of his invalidity, and must now lose all hope of pension.

"In 1907 I was taken off the Reserves, and granted fifteenpence a day for twelve months. That ceased in July, 1909. The question of the renewal of the pension is under the consideration of the War Office authorities now, and is getting support from the general officer that commanded my division, but this disgrace will speedily terminate any good that may accrue."

"I found that being invalided for heart disease was the greatest barrier against my getting employment in the police, postoffice, or any railway company, and on that account my work has been temporary and casual, and is the means of my standing before you now."

Hayes, it was said, had already been bound over under the Probation Act, both at the Sessions and in the City, and the court missionary, and the officers about the court, had helped him.

He was sentenced to three months in the second division on account of his theft.

Artistic Enthusiasm.

An amusing letter of apology, in broken English, was left in the Roman villa at Brading, near Sandown, Isle of Wight, a place of great interest to antiquaries, when it was broken in on Easter Sunday. The offence was apparently committed by a visitor from Holland, as explained in the following note:

"I wanted to see and appreciate that famous Roman art. I was so unfortunate to come here from Holland on Sunday. You refused me to enter on account of it being Sunday. I did everything I could to convince you in vain."

"Nothing was left to me than to see it in a manner which is not the regular one. I climbed on the roof, but could not see through the windows. So then I broke the window. I give the sixpence (price of admission) to a poor of the isle.—Excuse me."

The authorities are searching for the offender and also for the person who received the sixpence.

Modern Heartlessness.

It has remained for England, through the operation of her old age pension law, to afford the world perhaps the most striking example of the heartlessness of the present age. This law provides that those entitled to its benefit cannot receive the aid offered so long as they are inmates of almshouses. In the search for homes which is being carried forward by the unfortunate, would-be receivers of old age pensions there has come a sad revelation of the supposed strength of family feeling. Out of 523 old men and women entitled to leave a certain workhouse on old age pensions only 37 were sure that they would be welcomed by relatives. As a matter of fact, it was eventually found that only nine of this number really had homes to which they could go.

"A Mischievous Imp."

Some interesting recollections of Sir Rufus Isaacs, the new Solicitor-General, are given in The Jewish World by one who was at school with him. He was, it seems, the very worst of boys from the schoolmaster's point of view. "Lessons he left unlearned, clean-work he shirked, and mischief was his only devotion. Nor was he mischievous only in himself—he delighted in mischieving others in his 'wicked ways.' Indeed, my recollection of the Solicitor-General is always associated with a demoniacal young mischievous imp, with sparkling eyes, who was always in disgrace or being cased, and yet who was ever merry and deliciously humorous."

Heir Is Missing.

A romantic story underlies the will of the late Ald. Dr. Barratt, of Birmingham. The doctor provided for his son Alfred to receive the income from $40,000, but there is a proviso in the will that at the end of a period of two years if the beneficiary does not appear his death shall be presumed and the money shall revert to the estate. It is half a century since Alfred Barratt was last seen in Birmingham. He was fond of sport and spent many years roaming about the world, but there is no information that he ever returned to his native land.

You Can Afford to use 40c. Tea Just as Well as 30c. Tea if You Use 40c. Red Rose

A pound of 40c. Red Rose goes further than any 30c. or 35c. tea and it is distinctly superior in quality.

30c. and 35c. Red Rose Teas are good teas, so good that very many people say they want nothing better. But, if they would once try a package of the 40c. Red Rose they would use nothing else in future

Just think, five cups of 40c. Red Rose Tea will only cost 1c. One lb. makes over 200 cups. Not a question of affording.
