TIES, ETC.

The new holiday ties are made of velvet, either black, green, blue or plum color, and lined with bright or pale tinted silks. These are very elegant. Bows made to match the tie are now also in the hair.

Uravats of light colored crapes are lined with satin of a contrasting color, as maize crape lined with blue, green with flesh

Wide black velvet ribbons attached to a medallion are worn around the throat. These ribbons are sometimes embroidered with small devices in gilt or silver, and sometimes threaded with pearls.

The high adlarattes are now most in vogue, these being of lace or embroidered Swiss. They are finished in front with the lace jabot or tasteful tie. Among the new est styles of parures may be mentioned the Recamier, L'Elegant, and the Cavalier collar of velvet. Besides these we have for open dresses Louis XIII, and Richelieu chemisettes, and Pompadour cravats.

Beautiful Roman scarfs, with fringed ends, are worn for cravats.

Beautiful Roman scaris, with fringed ends, are worn for cravats.

Many corsages are made open in front to the waist with velvet revers, and displaying elegant chemisettes of Valenciennes lace. These are finished with a laceruff at the neck and bows of ribbon.
