WAR IN SOUTHEAST CHINA REBELS MASSACRE AND LOOT

Mission Station Attacked and Chinese Officials Assassinated—Gunboats Hurry to Scene.

Swatow, Province of Kwangtung, China, May 27.—A rebellion has broken out at Wong Tung in the Uping district of the Chinchu prefecture. All the civil and military officials at Wong Tung have been assassinated and their yamens burned.

The local revolutionists who were joined by natives of the neighboring provinces concentrated for their attack on the officials without being molested by the populace.

The military commander here has started the station guards, and started for the scene of the outbreak. Steps are being taken by the local police to prevent excesses here. The Chinese bankers have organized a steam launch patrol off the coast to prevent piratical attacks on the part of the marauders of the sea ward.

Chinchu or Tsing Chow is a maritime district of China, comprising parts of the provinces of Kwang Tung and Fokien on the south east coast. It is inhabited by a hardy and industrious people who furnish the majority of the men who form the crews of the Chinese imperial and commercial navy.

Swatow, from which the news of the rebellion comes, is situated in about the center of the Chinchu district, and is a treaty port of China on the Hang Kiang River, about five miles from the open sea, and 225 miles from Canton.

Berlin, May 27.—According to dispatches received here from Shanghai and Hong Kong native rioters have destroyed the German mission station at Lien Chow, near Pakhoi. The missionaries escaped. The German boat Hiltz, reinforced by 20 marines from the gunboat Teling Tau, has left Hong Kong for Pakhoi, and it is expected that a British gunboat will also be sent to that port.

Canton, May 27.—Admiral Li, with the Kwantiah and Meefoo, on board which are detachments of troops, is proceeding to the scene of the rising in the Uping district.

Berlin, May 27.—According to advices received by the German Cable Company from Shanghai, disturbances have also broken out at Pakhoi, and the situation there as well as at Lien Chow is apparently serious.

AWFUL PERIL OF FAST NIGHT TRAIN

Fiendish Attempt to Wreck the Erie's Crack Limited Express.

Buffalo, May 27.—An attempt was made to wreck Erie passenger train No. 16 Saturday night, at a point a mile and a half east of Alden. This is the Erie's fast night train from Buffalo to New York, and on Saturday night had a full load of passengers. The spot chosen for the work was just east of what is known as Sullivan's Crossing. The tracks are laid on a deep fill over a long ravine, and at a point in the middle of the curve a heavy 40-foot rail was placed across the eastbound track and bolstered up by huge stones. Several farmhouses are visible from the tracks.

The train was composed of Pullman sleepers and heavy day coaches, and could not have been going more than 25 or 30 miles an hour, when the head-light showed the rail lying directly across the track. Engineer Wolfe shut off steam and applied the emergency brake. An instant later the locomotive struck the rail. One rock being smaller than the one on the opposite side, the loose rail was shoved over it and thrown into the ditch. The engine pilot was smashed to splinters.

The train crew got out and carefully examined the ground. It was raining, and footprints were discernible all around the spot. A messenger was immediately started back to Alden, and a telephone message sent into Buffalo giving particulars of the attempt to ditch the train.

The train continued on its way. No effort is being speedily by the Erie officials to apprehend the wreckers.

Arts Exams at the Western Results of Recent Tests

Five Students to Receive the Degree of B. A.—The Honor List—Unusually Large Classes.

Below are given in full the results of the recent examinations in the arts faculty of the Western University, for which a goodly number of students have been anxiously looking these past few days. In other years it has been the custom to make the marks known before Victoria Day, but this year, on account of the larger number of papers consequent on the much-increased attendance, it was found impossible to keep up the former practice. The examiners report a number of papers of very high standard, such as in their opinion would compare favorably with those written in any other institution in Canada, which proves that it is an unusually successful year of study that has just been brought to a close.

The results are stated in two ways. For students in honor departments the standing is given by classes, those attaining 75 per cent and over being counted first-class, those attaining between 65 and 75 second-class, and those attaining between 50 and 65 third-class. For students in the pass or general course the standing is given by grades, those attaining 65 or better being graded A, those attaining 50 or better being graded B, those making from 35 to 50 being graded C.

Receive Degree of B. A.
The following students have completed their full course and will at the coming convocation receive the degree of bachelor of arts:

Miss Winnifred Owens, Miss H. McMillan, Miss N. Norris, Messrs. T. J. Hamilton and P. J. Grant.

To take a supplemental in medieval history before being admitted to the degree—C. F. Washburn.

Fourth Year by Subjects—Honors by Departments.

English and history (moderns option)—Miss Winnifred Owens obtained Class I in English, Class II in French and German and Class III in history.

Subjects of the General Course.

English—Grade A, Miss McMillan.

Grade B, Hamilton, Marshall, Grant.

Grade C, Washburn.

Latin—Grade C, Grant, Washburn, Hamilton.

Latin—Grade C, Marshall, Miss McMillan, Hamilton, Grant, Washburn.

French—Grade B, Marshall, Miss McMillan, Grade C, Hamilton, Washburn.

German—Grade B, Miss McMillan.

Grade C, Miss Morris.

Canadian Constitutional History—Grade A, Hamilton, Grant, Grade B, Miss Morris, Marshall, Grade C, Miss McMillan, Washburn.

Modern History—Grade B, Miss McMillan, Grade C, Miss Morris.

Church History (theological option)—Grade A, Hamilton, Grade B, Washburn.

Economics—Grade A, Miss Morris.

Grade B, Washburn.

Roughhouse in Zion

Chicago, May 27.—Following a riotous meeting in Shilo Tabernacle, at Zion City, yesterday, in the course of which Wilbur Glenn Voliva, John Alexander Dowling's successor as head of the Christian Catholic Church, found it necessary to call for police intervention, to restore order, 800 opponents of Voliva last night united to overthrow him at the September church council. The clash came over the alleged opposition of Voliva to the calling of a general conference. Voliva announced the right to name his successor, and declared he would take the fight into the courts.

WINTER BLIZZARD GRIPS MICHIGAN

Six Inches of Snow and More Coming—Eastern Pennsylvania Cold.

Detroit, Mich., May 27.—Snow is reported from all over the lower peninsula of Michigan today, with a veritable winter blizzard prevailing over the Saginaw Valley. Cadillac reports that five inches of snow fell last night, with more coming, and six inches have fallen at Petoskey. Snow fell during the morning at Jackson and Kalamazoo. In Detroit, a cold rain fell, with the thermometer hovering close to the freezing line. High winds are reported from all of the lakes. It is feared that the cold will cause heavy damage to vegetation.

Reading, Pa., May 27.—The thermometer touched close to the frost mark in the Schuylkill Valley during the night. It was as low as 38 degrees. Flakes of snow fell, and residents of Northern Berks County report that a regular snow visited that section before daylight. Farmers fear that continued wet weather will cause growing vegetation to rot in the ground.

THE BORDEAU RACE.
Paris, May 26.—The Belgian Van Houvaert won the Bordeaux-Paris bicycle race yesterday, the time being 19 hours, 38 minutes and 27 seconds.

LONDON TEACHERS RETURN HOME: INSPECTED CLEVELAND SCHOOLS

Find Course of Studies There Much Same as in London and School Rate High.

The London pedagogues who went to Cleveland on Wednesday evening last, returned to this city Saturday night. The party included School Trustee Strong, Inspector Edwards, Principal Radcliffe of the Collegiate Institute, and about 100 teachers.

The trip to Cleveland was made without incident, the party reporting that the journey on the lake from Detroit to Cleveland was a calm and peaceful one, despite the fact that on land in this district, at least, the weather was very bad.

Trustee Strong, Inspector Edwards and Principal Radcliffe were seen by The Advertiser this morning, and they expressed themselves as highly pleased with the trip, and with the information gleaned from the visits made to Cleveland schools.

The teachers undoubtedly combined business with pleasure in a very practical way. Many schools were visited, the teachers being divided into parties, and guided by Cleveland school officials.

The Londoners speak very highly of the treatment accorded them by the Clevelandites. Everything it was possible to do to make the London teachers feel at home, and to furnish them with useful information, was done. Those to whom the local teachers are very much indebted are Superintendent W. H. Elson, and Assistant Superintendent W. E. Hicks and H. C. Muckley. These gentlemen took an especial interest in the visitors.

Reception on Arrival.

Upon arrival in Cleveland the Londoners were met by Superintendent Elson and his staff, the principals of the high, normal and public schools, and a reception was held in the Willson School, one of the finest in the city. Superintendent Elson made a short address of welcome. Responses were made by Inspector Edwards, Principal Radcliffe and Principal McQueen. Trustee Strong was prevented by illness from attending the reception.

A programme of music and recitations was then carried out, and the exercises concluded with the singing of "God Save the King" by the Clevelanders to the Canadians was greatly continued on page eight.

NOT GOING TO LIVERPOOL.
Hamburg, May 27.—The appointment of Messrs. MacIver, the Liverpool ship-owners, as agents of the Hamburg-American Steam Packet Company at that port, has led to a misunderstanding of the aims of the German company there. Director Ballin, of the Hamburg-American Line, today stated that the company has no intention of establishing a direct service between Liverpool and New York.

$10,000 DAMAGE SUIT IS ENTERED

Widow of Mr. Fred Howe Begins Action Against the McClary Company.

An action to recover $10,000 damages was commenced in the high court of justice today against the McClary Manufacturing Company.

The plaintiff in the action is Mrs. Howe, widow of Fred Howe, who met his death while at work in the defendants' factory, on the afternoon of March 21. Mrs. Howe sued on behalf of herself and her two infant children, Josephine and Alfred.

Howe, who was a member of Bennett's Vaudeville orchestra, and one of the best-known musicians in the city, was employed as a laborer in the McClary works, and he was working at some shafting when his clothing caught in it and he was instantly killed by being whirled around the pulley.

An effort was made to settle the claim, but the sum offered by the McClary Company was not acceptable. Mr. R. M. C. Toth is acting for the plaintiff.

The case will come to trial at the sitting of the high court in September.

2 BUFFALO HOODLUMS ATTACK KUROKI'S CAR

Husky Porter Ejects Roughs Who Would Invade General's Privacy.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 27.—Two men attempted to force their way into the private car of Gen. Kuroki just before he left for Buffalo last night. The porter heard them at the door, and opened it partly, when the man asked for something to drink. The porter attempted to close the door, but one of the men placed his foot against it, and called to his companion to come on. The porter grappled with the intruder and finally ejected him. As the man was thrown out he turned and smashed the glass in the door. It is said this morning that the authorities knew the parties. It is believed the men were intoxicated.

The late Mr. Rickard was 67 years of age, and was well known in the well-known in the neighborhood in which he resided, and his death came as a great shock to a large number of friends.

He was a bachelor, and lived alone on his farm near Tempo. With the exception of several nephews and nieces, residing in London, he had no immediate relatives.

The funeral will take place from the undertaking parlors of D. M. Stewart, Dundas street west, on Wednesday afternoon at Mount Pleasant Cemetery. Services will be conducted at 2 o'clock.

Standstill in Saunby Suit Appeal By the Plaintiff

Ruling in Favor of the City Causes Delay in the Assessment of Damages.

Another kink has developed in the Saunby suit.

The argument on the damages question came to an abrupt ending last week, when the plaintiffs' solicitors, Messrs. I. H. Hellmuth and C. H. Ivey, objected strongly to certain expert evidence being introduced by the defense.

Mr. T. G. Meredith, city solicitor, pressed the point, with the result that Judge Finkle ruled in favor of the defense and decided to accept the evidence.

Messrs. Hellmuth and Ivey then gave notice of an appeal against the Judge's ruling, and once again the time-honored legal dispute grounded on the shoals.

City Solicitor Meredith and Mr. Ivey were seen by The Advertiser today in regard to the Tangle.

Mr. Meredith said he was not in a position to discuss the matter, as he has not as yet been served with notice of the appeal of the complainants.

Mr. Ivey was not in a position to say anything on the subject, either.

The Defense Contentions.
It is understood, however, that Mr. Hellmuth objected to the city being allowed to introduce any evidence whatever in rebuttal of the evidence which he had submitted as to the damages which the plaintiff, Saunby, had sustained.

It was Mr. Hellmuth's idea that the intention of the court which ordered the assessing of damages was that the plaintiff should go ahead and show to what extent he had been injured, to the satisfaction of the Judge, but that the city, or rather the water commission, should not be allowed to contradict, or seek to contradict, this evidence.

On this all-important point, City Solicitor Meredith was very firm, and he won his point before Judge Finkle.

The city is consequently highly elated on this success today. The matter will now go to the court of appeal, but when it will come up for argument no one can say.

The Saunby suit has had its effect. Continued on Page Eight.

Farmer's Fatal Mistake Death of Wm. Rickard

Drank a Quantity of Poisonous Horse Medicine in Mistake for Whiskey.

Taking a drink from a bottle containing horse-medicine in mistake for whiskey, William Rickard, a Westminster farmer, residing near Tempo, poisoned himself on Friday night. He died at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Rickard, who was in comfortable circumstances, came to London Friday morning to secure some medicine for a colic which was ill, and which he valued highly.

From a veterinary he secured a bottle containing a liquid, of which he had a large part. When leaving the office the veterinary warned Mr. Rickard to be careful in administering the medicine to the colt, as it contained much poison.

Rickard listened attentively and appeared to appreciate the necessity of being careful.

Having some other business to transact in the city, Mr. Rickard remained in the city for some time, and later in the afternoon he started home. On the way he stopped at a friend's house, near his home at Tempo, where he stayed for a time, chatting, and in good spirits. On resuming his journey he said he intended calling at Tempo postoffice for his mail.

Later in the evening he returned to his friend's and appeared to be in great pain. "I have poisoned myself," he said, as he walked into the house.

Dr. Routledge, of Lambeth, was sent for and arrived in a short time, but during the interval Rickard suffered great pain.

"If I can stand it an hour, I will get over it," he said. "But I'm afraid I'll die; the doctor said so."

When Dr. Routledge reached him, Rickard was beyond hope. The drug had taken such an effect upon him that it was thought he could live but a few hours, but he lingered until 3 o'clock the next afternoon.

It is thought that on the way home in the dark, Rickard took a drink from the wrong bottle, both bottles, it is said, being very much the same in size.

The medicine bottle showed that several teaspoonfuls had been taken from it.

Dr. Routledge, who is the coroner of the district, did not deem an inquest necessary.

WIFE AND ESCORT HAMMER HUSBAND

Couple Had Separated, But He Objected to Her Keeping Other Company.

To be attacked by his wife and knocked to the pavement by a young man in her company was the rather uncomfortable experience of Edward Gremstead on Saturday evening.

Gremstead and his wife quarreled several months ago, and since that time have not been living together. But, notwithstanding their long separation, it was too much for Gremstead to see his wife with another man, and when on Saturday evening about eight o'clock he saw her walking along Richmond street, near the Masonic Temple, with Andrews, he immediately approached the couple and informed Andrews that he had no right to be with Mrs. Gremstead.

The latter thereupon attacked her husband and Andrews followed suit, striking Gremstead and laying him out full length on the pavement.

At this stage of the performance, P. C. Lucas put an end to the strife.

When sentencing Andrews, Magistrate Love informed him that he had no right to be with any other man's wife, even although she was separated from her husband.

"I do not approve of young men running about with married women," said the court, "and if they get into trouble through it they will have to stand the consequences."

Both Mrs. Gremstead and Andrews were severely reprimanded for their conduct. Mr. Gremstead did not say a charge of assault against his wife.

A NORFOLK TOWN HIT BY TORNADO

Sunday Afternoon's Storm Does Considerable Damage to Nixon Village.

Simcoe, May 26.—Buildings blown down, trees and fences uprooted, the tracks of the Wabash blocked by the contents of a huge coal chute and its ruins, is the result of a cyclone which at 5 o'clock this evening swept the district a few miles west of here, the center of which is the village of Nixon.

The tornado, which came up suddenly from the southwest, cut a comparatively narrow swath, but within the borders of that path ruin and devastation followed its course.

Great damage was done in Nixon, two houses being blown down and a grocery store badly wrecked. In one of the houses destroyed an old lady named Croft had a very narrow escape. She was in bed, ill and alone, when the building crumpled up and collapsed like a house of cards. Ill as she was, however, she managed to crawl out of the debris, and beyond a few severe bruises and a bad fright sustained no injury. In the other house no one was injured.

In Nixon the Wabash has a coal chute, in which, in addition to a large amount of coal already unloaded, were five loaded cars. The whole structure collapsed under the terrific stress of the storm, and hundreds of tons of coal, with the beams and timbers of the chute, were piled upon the rails, effectively blocking traffic.

The man in charge was in the chute at the time, and fell with the ruin, but escaped without injury.

The farmers resident in the district are all of a well-to-do class and their farm buildings are of substantial quality. Well and strongly put up as they were, however, they might as well have been of the flimsiest construction, for all the resistance they could offer. Roofs were torn off and carried long distances, and in many cases the walls, too, were demolished. Several groves of trees suffered severely, and the fields were swept bare of fences.

So far as is reported from the stricken district there has been no loss of life, but the loss to the farmers will be heavy, and later details are likely to increase the extent of the disaster.

In Simcoe the storm was very severe, but no great damage was done.

Boisterous at St. Kitts.

St. Catharines, May 27.—Just as the people had gathered in the different churches on Sunday evening, this city was visited by a severe electrical storm with a downpour of rain. The people were much alarmed, fearing another cyclone, but the storm passed over without doing any damage to speak of. The barns of Fred Goring, a few miles from the city, were struck by lightning during the storm and destroyed. Loss $1,000; insured.

BIG FIRE AT ROCHESTER

Heavy Damage Done in the Downtown Business Section.

Rochester, N. Y., May 27.—Fire which did at least $100,000 damage broke out in the top floor of the building occupied by Oaks & Calhoun, at 107 Main street east, this morning. Every fire company in Rochester was called out to fight the flames, and the exact amount of damage done cannot yet be estimated, as the fire is still burning although under control.

Although the fire was confined to the building occupied by Oaks & Calhoun, and the top floor and attic of the National Clothing store, several neighboring buildings suffered from smoke and water. The Chamber of Commerce building, saved by the thick fire walls from the smoke and flames, was flooded with water, which, coming through the basement wall, filled the engine room and cellar with water to a depth of four feet. Water and smoke damaged the Cook Opera House.

HAPPY NEW ENGLAND

85,000 Workers Get 100 Per Cent In crease, and There's More Coming.

Boston, May 27.—The general upward movement in the wages of New England cotton mill workers today affected about 85,000 operatives in Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Vermont and other places in Northern New England. The advance, which became operative this morning in the sections named, amounts to about 19 per cent. Early next month it is announced a increase of 5 per cent will be given in many mills in other manufacturing districts. The cotton mills of New England employ upwards of 200,000 hands, when the machinery is fully manned.

ETHEL BARRYMORE ILL.
Chicago, May 26.—Ethel Barrymore is seriously ill here. Her company will remain idle in Chicago until she recovers.

FIRE IN CROWDED HOUSE

Lodgers Awakened by Smoke and Flames and Some Perish.

San Jose, Cal., May 25.—Two unidentified bodies were taken from debris of a lodging house that burned early today, making four known dead. A dozen other bodies may be in the ruins, according to firemen. G. W. Lavery was arrested today on suspicion of having set fire to the food store where the blaze started. It is alleged that Lavery was seen yesterday cutting up a laprobe, portions of which, found today by firemen, were well soaked with coal oil.

The fire broke out in the rear of Brown's commission store on North Market street, and in a few minutes spread to Lavery's lively stable and the Union lodging house, directly above it. Twenty horses in Lavery's stables were burned.

There were about 40 persons asleep in the Union lodging house, and the stamping of the terrified horses in the stables below gave the alarm. Rushing into halls, half-clad, groping their way through the choking, blinding smoke, many of the frightened inmates, guided by the firemen, reached the street in safety, but others got lost in the smoky, narrow halls of the old building and perished.

The Chinese claim to be the originators of the newspaper. The Imperial Gazette of Peking is said to have been published for over 1,500 years.

"OPSONIC" THEORY

AT GENERAL HOSPITAL

A "NEW THEORY" THAT IS NEW ONLY IN NAME, BUT CORRECT IN PRINCIPLE.

The Toronto general hospital is making a series of tests of a "new theory" in medical science, which they claim will revolutionize the theory and practice of medicine. The system is, "Find the germ of any disease, then by a method of increasing the patient's ability to digest or kill the microbes by increasing the white corpuscles of the blood and filling it with serum, make his recovery possible." This is in reality Dr. T. A. Slocum's theory of thirty years ago. Dr. T. A. Slocum said: "The white corpuscles of the blood are the foe of disease. If I can sufficiently increase these and strengthen digestion and circulation, I have solved the problem of overcoming disease." Dr. Slocum devoted his life to the working out of this problem. When, after innumerable experiments through days and nights and weeks and years of patient labor, he discovered that the powerful remedy, Psycline, he exclaimed, "Eureka." "I have found it." For a quarter of a century this remedy has been doing exactly what the authorities at the general hospital are at present tracking their brains to accomplish. Psycline is exactly what they are looking for. It enables the white corpuscles of the blood to overcome bacteria and disease of every kind. Speaking of a number of cases that came under their observation, J. R. Andrews & Co., of Bishops' Crossing, says:

"The party whose case was most remarkable, having been given up by several doctors, among them consulting experts from Montreal, and who, so far as can be determined, was restored to comparatively good health by the use of Psycline, most of which I supplied. I have to direct you to their new home at Edmonton, Alta., formerly Cookshire, Que. This woman was past audible speech except a whisper, was only given ten days as a possibility, friends had been to say good-bye and so forth. No other remedy, so far as I know, was used. Well-known case, Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, 179 King street west, Toronto.

BAND CONCERT

AT ARMORIES

Forty-Eighth and Seventh Furnished an Entertaining Programme.

It has been said that the Scotch appropriate everything, so it is not remarkable that Empire Day should have been turned into a Scotch festival. Not only were the laddies in kilts, masters of the town on Friday, but they completed their conquest on Saturday night, importing two lassies (in the same picturesque garb) to help them out.

The occasion—a band concert by the combined bands of the Seventh and Forty-eighth, under the brothers Slater—drew a large crowd to the armories, and it was worth braving the weather to see and hear. One can say, "see," because not only was there but real, fling, sword-dances, and what not—graceful, neat, picturesque, and full of the fascination of all national dances.

Of the Band of the Forty-eighth Highlanders little need be said. It is among the foremost of military bands on this continent. John Slater has worked up a band of fine sonority, and first-class ensemble. In addition, some of the bandmen sing part-songs, marionettes and comic, with good tone, enunciation and fine vim, the tenors being especially good.

The Seventh Band did splendidly. Few can realize the uphill fight that Bandmaster Albert Slater has had, but all can realize that he is nearing his goal, and the time is within reasonable foretelling when the regiment will have a truly first-class military band.

No matter how much remains to be done, the men and their leader have a prestige that comes with victory in the first of a hundred rounds, and none can doubt that they have success with a capital "S" ahead of them.

David Robertson sang some Scotch songs with humor, and a smooth, resonant baritone voice. How is it that the supposedly dry Scot excels in the comic song. Those who missed "Hey, Donald," missed a treat.

The dancing of Alex. Munro, and his able assistants, Misses Bannister and Smith, of Glasgow, Scotland, was neat, graceful and exhilarating. The steps are difficult, as those who have tried them know. Not a false move was made, and the audience appreciated.

Miss Bannister and Miss Smith were introduced as an extra. The intricate sword-dance, so hard to perform gracefully and accurately at the same time, was perfectly done, and the ladies responded to a well-deserved encore.

The union of the bands was managed tactfully, and gave each the best opportunity, making an enjoyable popular programme.

KUROKI AT BOSTON

Visits Points of Historical and Educational Interest at the Hub.

Boston, May 25.—Following two days and two nights of sight-seeing, entertainment and visits to spots of historical and educational interest, Baron General Kuroki, the Japanese military leader, bade farewell to Boston today. The general's last public appearance here was at the Victoria Day dinner of the Victorian Club last night. He arrived in his hotel to obtain a good night's rest in preparation for his journey to Niagara Falls.

General Kuroki and his suite had chairs reserved for them on the train leaving Boston at 10:45 a.m. for Niagara Falls, by way of Albany, over the Boston and Albany Division of the New York Central Railroad.

THE UNSEARCHABLE RICHES OF CHRIST

Paul's Great Message to the Gentile World—Contents of a Treasure House.

Though last evening's weather was anything but propitious, Jubilee Rink was filled with an assemblage that listened with the closest attention to Rev. Dr. Wharton's forceful, earnest, and at times pathetic, utterances. The evangelist expressed his pleasure at the growth of the congregations that attended in spite of unfavorable conditions. He then mapped out the work for the rest of the week. A good meeting, he said, was held on Thursday last in the McClary Company's establishment, where a similar gathering would be held next Thursday. On that day, too, he will address the city policemen, besides conducting the 3:30 p.m. services in the First Congregational Church and addressing the night meeting in the rink.

The Power of Prayer.

In asking his hearers to pray for the success of these meetings Dr. Wharton said: "The greatest power of your lives is prayer. You can go into your room and turn God's attention to China, India, Africa or South America. The mother can follow her boy all around the world with prayer, and by it means you can turn the searchlight of the Father's love on those far away who are to you most dear."

The choir was largely reinforced last night. Leader and chorus are understanding each other better, and better, and the singing was decidedly spirited and inspiring in its character. By having the choir alone sing a verse, the audience taking up the refrain, or by having different sections of the audience sing separately, and then everyone joining in the chorus, the vocal part of the exercises is made unusually interesting.

After the opening prayer by Rev. George H. McAllister, of Centennial Methodist Church, Dr. Wharton read and commented on part of Ephesians, chapter III, in the first verse of which Paul speaks of himself as "the prisoner of Jesus Christ." In referring to this expression, the speaker said Paul was a prisoner of the gospel, of Christ, but he was not a prisoner of the apostle. In this chapter, Paul speaks of "the mystery" of redemption. "It is a mystery," said the speaker, "that angels desire to look into, that finite man cannot understand; but if we reject and disbelieve all that we don't understand, we shall not believe much. It is a mystery how the food and bones, and (in some cases), brains, but the fact remains the same though beyond our comprehension."

At the end of the Scripture reading Dr. Wharton said the ushers would take up the offering, "and in a humorous way he described the difference between an offering and a collection, the former being more in the nature of a sacrifice than of a trivial gift. He told of a boy who begged his mother to cut a good slice of roast lamb for his dog, Fido, instead of which she handed out a plate of bones and crumbs from the table. "Here, Fido," said the boy, as he fed his dog, "here is a collection for you—it's not an offering."

Dr. Lau sang a solo, while the offering was being taken.

Paul's Mission.

Dr. Wharton took for his text the words in Ephesians, III, 8: "Unto me who am less than the least of all saints is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ." Dr. Wharton commented on the humility of Paul, one of the most useful and consecrated of men, who called himself the "least of all saints." Dr. Wharton said that is how the true Christian feels if he takes a right view of himself. "God can't work with the proud-hearted, stiff-necked man." He won't save us in opposition to our will. The lowly Ily is more admired than the towering, braced-faced answerer. Paul said he was less than the least of all saints, but he was one of them, "and all the powers of earth and hell cannot separate the humble Christian from the Father's love."

Don't be humble, but his occupation was a noble one. The speaker said he heard the noted Theodore Cuyler once remark: "It's a long way down from the pulpit to the highest throne on earth." Some people seem to think that if a man is no good for anything else, he is good for a preacher. Dr. Wharton commented on this mistaken idea. It has been remarked that God had only one son, and he made him a preacher. "It is the greatest of all privileges," said Dr. Wharton, "to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ."

A Great Treasure House.

Under the figure of rooms in a great treasure-house, Dr. Wharton went on to speak of one room which contained the unsearchable riches of Christ's power to save. "Christ," said the speaker, "had to overcome Satan, sin and death before he could offer salvation to you and me." Christ overcame the temptations of Satan. Temptation comes first through the body. Dr. Wharton spoke of the temptation to drink, which in the United States alone sends every year 100,000 men to drunkards' graves. Temptation comes through the mind. The ambitious young man who seeks fame and power and influence, and the woman who would shine in society, are tempted by Satan to gain their object at any cost, even at the sacrifice of their spiritual welfare. Satan knows the key to human nature. Temptation comes through the soul. The devil seeks to make men doubt, dampens his ardor and destroys his usefulness. But Christ overcame Satan. He conquered sin by the cleansing power of his blood shed on Calvary's heights, and he defeated death when he rose triumphant from the grave. It is Christ who says, "I am the light of the world, and he who believes in me shall never be in darkness."

Then another room contains the unsearchable riches of his pardoning love, and in another are the riches of his spiritual grace. "The devil says you won't hold out, but God will not forsake you; you may have many trials, but there will be many triumphs. And so we lean on his arm, we look into his

HOME FROM LONG TRIP

Dr. and Mrs. Eccles Return After Spending Four Months in the Levant.

Dr. F. R. and Mrs. Eccles arrived home at noon yesterday, after a four-months' trip to the Levant.

Dr. and Mrs. Eccles left this city on Feb. 1, sailing from Boston a day later for the Mediterranean. They visited Egypt and Palestine for the purpose of taking in many of the places of interest, and en route home, stopped in Turkey, Greece and Italy. Everywhere the weather was delightful, not a single thing occurring to mar the pleasure of the journey. Around Joppa, in the middle of March, the Londoners saw orange groves laden with fruit, far superior even to that grown in Italy.

One of the most interesting parts of the Londoners' tour was spent at the ruins of Memphis, the ancient capital of Egypt, situated on the west bank of the Nile, ten miles south of Cairo. Judging by the extent of the ruins, Dr. Eccles says, the city had a population of not less than half a million. Many interesting discoveries were being made daily.

Everywhere Dr. Eccles went in Egypt he was very much impressed with the wonderful influence of Lord Cromer, the former British high commissioner. Especially was this noticeable among the businessmen. At some places there was a little feeling among Egyptians who were aspiring to power, and were using the cry of "Egypt for the Egyptians" at every opportunity, but they had no following. Throughout the entire country there was every indication of prosperity, land values increasing steadily. In Cairo, the price of land had doubled in five years. The large dams being constructed along the Nile were giving the Egyptians increased facilities for irrigation, and formerly where land was a barren waste it is now cultivated and fine crops are being raised.

A peculiar coincidence occurred in connection with the trip of Dr. and Mrs. Eccles. They sailed from Lord Cromer on the Levant on the same day as Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Smallman left New York for Cairo, Egypt, on a visit to their daughter, Mrs. (Major) Morgan. The Londoners met again at Cairo, and on Sunday evening last, without any prearrangement, they again met at the Lehigh Valley depot in New York City, as they were about to board the train for London. Dr. and Mrs. Eccles were accompanied on their tour by Dr. Holmes, wife and daughter, of Chatham.

HUMMEL SOLDIERS

Little Lawyer Plays Sick to Escape Prison Work.

New York, May 25.—"No. 952 is still in the hospital suffering from nervous prostration and stomach trouble. He is on a milk diet and may not recover for two months."

This was the reply of the physician in charge of the hospital ward at the Blackwell's Island penitentiary when asked as to the condition of Abraham H. Hummel, who is serving a year's sentence for conspiracy, brewing out of the Dodge-Morris divorce tangle.

Despite the report, the impression among Hummel's fellow prisoners and his keepers is that the convicted lawyer is "soldiering."

"Hummel's only stallion," declared one of the keepers today, "He's wise, all right, and he'll do his bit, but, you see, he won't do more than he can help."

PASSENGERS PRAY

AS SHIP ARRIVES

For a Month 1,500 Immigrants Had Been at Mercy of the Sea.

New York, May 26.—The Russian steamship Korea was towed into port by two tugs today with 1,500 passengers kneeling on her decks in a prayer of thanks for deliverance from perils of the sea that had beset them for almost a month.

With her wooden deck fittings chopped up for fuel and a part of her cargo burned to keep the engines going, the Korea had fought almost incessant storm.

For three days the ship was helpless in a gale, her shaft having broken in the middle of the night. As the vessel rolled and pitched in the heavy troughs of the sea, her officers had difficulty in restraining the 1,500 Russian steerage passengers in their wild plan of taking to the boats to save their lives.

Provisions ran low and there was a shortage of fresh water. This condition of affairs threatened to become worse and Capt. Kirschjedd turned the ship's nose toward Boston and the signals of distress were seen off Boston light and aid given him.

When the ship came up the harbor today her propeller was three-fourths out of water. The steerage passengers were on their knees giving prayers of thanks.

THEY ARE A POWERFUL NERVE-RE-DRYPPERS

Dyspepsia causes derangement of the nervous system, and nervous debility once engendered is difficult to deal with. There are many testimonials as to the efficacy of Farnese's Vegetable Pills in treating this disorder, showing that they never fail to produce good results. By giving proper tone to the digestive organs, they restore equilibrium to the nerve centers.

A Bad Stomach

Lessons the usefulness and merrit the happiness of life. It's a weak stomach, a stomach that can not properly perform its functions. Among its symptoms are distress after eating, nausea between meals, heartburn, belching, vomiting, flatulence and nervous headache.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures a bad stomach, indigestion and dyspepsia, and the cure is permanent. Accept no substitute.

THE WORLD'S WHEAT.

That persistent reports of shortages in a number of the wheat-growing countries should have the effect of raising prices is but natural, but whether the farmer's dream of "dollar wheat" as a permanency is to be realized is quite a different matter. The fact that owing to differences in the harvesting times of various countries a fresh crop reaches the market every month of the year, makes the supply of new wheat continuous. Australia, New Zealand and Chili are first to reap their crops; then follow India, Mexico and other countries in the same latitude; next come China, Japan, Argentina, Central Asia, Morocco and Texas; then Southern Europe and Southern States; then Roumania, Germany, France, Australia, and the Northern States; then Canada and Northern Europe; then South Africa and Peru, and finally Argentina and countries similarly situated. This continuity of supply, coupled with the vastly improved means of shipping, has this effect—that as soon as an abnormally high price is reached in one quarter of the globe shipments are at once directed thither from other parts. Thus, while there may be a falling off, or even a failure, of wheat crop in certain countries, the world's production keeps steadily advancing, instances of an actual decrease being extremely rare, as will be seen from the following table of the world's production:

Year.	Bushels.
1897	2,432,322,000
1898	2,481,805,000
1899	2,562,913,000
1900	2,660,557,000
1901	2,562,518,000
1902	2,509,320,000
1903	2,325,268,000
1904	2,948,246,000
1905	2,783,885,000
1906	2,640,751,000
1907	2,955,975,000
1908	3,126,624,000
1909	3,224,993,000
1910	3,170,723,000
1911	3,337,400,000
1912	3,407,400,000

At the present time Russia leads the world in the production and exportation of wheat, and the Argentine Republic, on account of its small home consumption, is likely to hold second place as an exporter. Owing to the rapidly increasing home consumption, the United States is falling back as an exporter of wheat.

The following table prepared by the United States bureau of statistics shows the comparative production of wheat, in bushels, in the United States and Canada:

Year.	United States.	Canada.
1890	490,560,000	27,551,816
1900	547,303,845	53,701,000
1901	522,229,305	91,424,000
1902	745,060,213	100,051,000
1903	670,065,089	94,583,000
1904	637,821,895	74,634,000
1905	552,339,517	113,022,000
1906	692,979,489	120,000,000

This showing is most satisfactory to Canadians. Of course, our consumption has not increased proportionately, and the consequence is that Canada's exports of wheat and wheat flour are rapidly gaining on those of the United States. The following comparative table, showing the exports, in bushels, of wheat and wheat flour reduced to wheat, the domestic product of each of the two countries, is of interest:

Year.	United States.	Canada.
1880	180,304,180	7,541,164
1890	109,450,467	940,219
1900	186,096,073	20,365,393
1901	215,990,073	14,867,133
1902	234,772,515	31,098,000
1903	202,905,598	38,888,000
1904	120,727,615	24,855,528
1905	46,112,910	20,646,589
1906	91,609,007	47,293,443

A careful estimate places the amount of the wheat crop of the United States exported in 1880 at 40.13 per cent; 22.31 per cent in 1890; 34 per cent in 1900; 18.92 per cent in 1904; 7.99 per cent in 1905, and 14.09 per cent in 1906, showing that, with the exception of last year, there has been a steady decline, and indicating that the neighboring republic must soon cease to be a wheat exporting country. Canada's production, on the other hand, is steadily growing, and will continue to increase for many years, while her exports are increasing at a corresponding ratio. Last year our exports of wheat and wheat products amounted to 39.41 per cent of the production. The ratio retained for home consumption of course varies much between good and bad crop years.

A far greater percentage of United States wheat is exported as flour than of Canadian. According to a comparative statement of the exports of flour and wheat, and the percentage of flour in the total exports of both, from each country, the United States wheat exports have been largely in the form of flour in the last four years—viz., 48.73 per cent in 1903, 45.36 per cent in 1904, 50.04 in 1905, and 47.72 in 1906. The proportion of Canada's wheat exports in the form of flour in the same years did not exceed 30.11 per cent in 1904, while last year it dropped to 14.58 per cent. Twenty-five years ago very little of the wheat exported by the United States was ground before shipping; today nearly all of it is. The explanation of the small percentage of Canadian wheat, exported as flour is, of course, the inadequacy of our milling facilities to handle the vast crops, but the indications are, with new mills starting up in all directions, and the industry offering such a splendid field for investment of capital, each year will see less and less of our wheat sent abroad to be ground.

POPULATION OF UNITED STATES.

The United States census bureau has issued an estimate of the population of the United States in 1906. With admirable precision it puts the figures for the continental United States at $3,941,510, and for the whole American "empire" at $3,182,200. The word "census" carries a presumption of authority that will cause this to be widely accepted as an accurate count, but it is, of course, only approximate. The actual population of the continental United States last year was probably nearer 38,000,000 than 34,000,000.

The census bureau's guess of the population of the state of New York last year was $2,296,990, and of the city of New York $1,113,043. These figures are not very far from the mark, for in this case there was a state census in the preceding year to build on. There is a similar advantage in the case of Boston, which is credited with 662,278 inhabitants in 1906, the population by the state census of 1905 having been 695,380. Chicago is put down at 2,049,185, Philadelphia at 1,441,735, and Baltimore at 553,669. These guesses are near enough the truth to make it safe to say that the United States is the only country in the world that possesses two cities of over two million people each and three with over one million. St. Louis protests that she has over 700,000 inhabitants instead of the 649,320 the census officials concede to her. Kansas City shrieks that she has 225,000 instead of 182,376, and Seattle tearfully accuses the Washington mathematicians of ciphering her down to 100,000 less than her real population. To these complaints the director of the census bureau humorously responds that the bureau cannot revise its estimates "at the whim of this or that city," although he admits that "in individual cases the computations of the census bureau may be wide of the truth."

The census bureau allows Pennsylvania 6,293,575 inhabitants in 1906, Illinois 5,418,670, and Ohio 4,448,577. These estimates certainly do not err on the side of exaggeration, so that it may be said with confidence that one member of the American union has at the present moment over eight million inhabitants, another over seven, and a third over five. Four states have now a population of over twenty-five millions which is more than the whole north had at time of the Civil War.

The city of Toronto is to spend several million dollars upon beautifying its waterfront. In this city we find it less trouble to make a dump of the breakwater.

The death of Theodor Tilton recalls the cause celebre which shook the English-speaking world. There are now few who do not believe that Tilton was rashly and cruelly mistaken, and there is scarcely a scar on the memory of Henry Ward Beecher.

duces an abundance of trees and vegetation, the same is highly appropriate. Old English localities are reproduced in the three counties—Wiltshire, Surrey and Cornwall. The parishes hardly correspond with the counties. Why there should be the parish of Manchester in Wiltshire and a parish of Portland in Surrey is not apparent at first sight, but the parish of Trelawny, in Cornwall, is in perfect accord with the fitness of things. The parish derives its name from Sir William Trelawny, a former governor of Jamaica.

OF COURSE.
[Pick-Me-Up.]
A golfing judge, according to the story, had occasion to interrogate in a criminal suit a boy witness.

"Now, my lad," he said, "I want to know if you are acquainted with the nature and significance of an oath."

The boy, raising his brows in surprise, answered: "Of course I am, sir. Don't I caddy for you at the Country Club?"

DRESSED FOR THE CONCERT.
[New York Tribune.]
Heinrich Conried was talking about old-fashioned concerts.

"Some of the hits directed at these concerts were merited," he said.

"One hit, and a good one, was made by an old Chicago millionaire. He called up stairs to his daughters: 'What time you girls take a getting ready for the concert? Look at me: a bit of wadding in each ear and I'm all ready.'"

LONGING FOR COUNTRY LIFE.
[Baltimore Sun.]
A strange thing is the universal longing of professional men and others who have come to the city and have prospered, as they advance in life, to get back to the country. It is seldom that they do return, and when they do there is a deep disappointment and things do not appear as they did long ago. The change is in the man himself, but he thinks it is in the country. Nevertheless, the desire to get back to the old country place to end one's days is very general. Sir Walter Scott refers to it and compares the course of a man through the world to that of the hare which is started from her lair and after long chase and making a large circle ends by returning to the nest from which she started.

LOOKED THAT WAY TO HIM.
[Chicago Tribune.]
"Miriam," said her mother, "have you ever given young Mr. Stapleford any reason to believe you cared for him enough to marry him?"

"He seems to think so," answered the daughter, "because I told him the other evening that he was sending me too many costly flowers, and ought to begin to save his money."

HE'S ALL RIGHT.
[Metropolitan Blatter.]
"Hello, old man! Haven't seen anything of you since you got married. How goes it?"

"Thanks, fairly well. But marriage is a costly job. If you only knew what the dressmakers charge!"

"So, I suppose you regret it?"
"Oh, no! I married a dressmaker."

A BAD ONE.
[La Rive.]
"Did you ever make a mistake, doctor?"

"Yes, once. I was called in by a patient and diagnosed his case as stomachic. I only learned the following day that he was rich enough to have appendicitis."

MUST MEAN LONDON GIRLS.
[Ottawa Journal.]
A Canadian commercial agent in England suggests that there is a market for Canadian peaches there. There is one particular brand of "peaches" in Canada which should never be allowed to leave home.

A SENSIBLE VIEW.
[Toronto News.]
There is nothing of hostility to Britain in the idea of Canadian nationalism or Canadian national spirit. Neither is there anything that conflicts with the best and truest Imperialism. A young man does not come to his career by antagonizing his friends. Rather he seeks to strengthen old friendships and to cultivate new ones.

Even if there were no ties of commerce and self-interest, we are bound by ties of sentiment, fine as silk yet strong as steel. Yet will we shape our own destinies and pick and choose from the nations those strands of policy which seem to suit us, or if necessary we will be the authors of our own. And it should be said that Canadian sentiment toward Britain does not rest on the event of a shilling to be won. We would no more dictate Britain's domestic policy than we would submit to have Britain dictate ours. We are getting too big to be petulant because the motherland is not yet eye to eye with us in these matters, and we are confident that we will prosper whether or no. And yet, more and more we look to the old land for inspiration and example in social and moral reform, in the higher planes of citizenship, and more and more we value that heritage of independent speech and spirit and of sober and sturdy temper which enables us to face the future with faith and unflinching.

[London Chronicle.]
To the modern world a "calendar" is merely a harmless necessary reminder of weeks and days, to be hung up on New Year's Day and consulted in darning letters throughout the year. It has not such mournful sound as "calendarium" had for the ancient Romans. The original "calendar" of their time was the money lender's account book, so called because interest was due from the debtor on the calendar, or first day of each month. That is why the word "calendar" as a word invented outside the course of nature on account of human greed. It is a word which may help to persuade us that the world has grown kinder.

HOME ON WHEELS FOR HONEYMOON

Novel Car in Which the Space Is Utilized for Every Comfort.

London, May 25.—In a builder's yard in Fulham stands the quaintest little home in London, a caravan representative of the water months this snug little home has been occupied by a young married couple, who toured the eastern counties in it during the summer.

"We shall not tour again this summer," said W. Barron, the proud owner of this house on wheels, "because my wife thinks it is time we settled down, and for that reason I am thinking of selling it. But I shall be sorry to part with our little home, for in spite of its small dimensions, we have been very happy in it."

Mr. Barron believes that his caravan, which is built on Fulham car lines, is the most complete of its kind. It has a large, deep drawer, which pulls out from underneath the range, and holds at least half a hundredweight. On one side of the chimney-piece, which is furnished with a miniature over-mantel and china ornaments, is an airing cupboard.

Cupboards are indeed to be found in the most unexpected places. One one side of the end entrance floor is a hanging coat for Mrs. Barron's dresses; on the other side the china closet with a "wine cellar" underneath. Two upholstered seats lift up and reveal spacious recesses. The flap of the table folds inward instead of outward, and becomes a chest of drawers. In the bedroom, which is about 8 by 8 feet, the bed occupies most of the space, but there is room for a washstand and dressing-table as well.

League Leaders WERE BLANKED

the first shutout of the city league season. Suddenly the depleted tail-enders, walloped the much-vaunted leaders. Thirdly, the Perrins played the best game they have put up this year, having only one error.

At the sound of the gong the Perrins lassoed a lone point, then reared for a round.

In the third session Perkins, the narrow-rode to first on an error, pulled second, and scored on a two-sack hit by "Chink" Ward. Captain "Wanny" made the initial station on a fuke, and Ward went up a notch.

At this juncture little Edward Stein ramblled up to the pan and smote the ball, scattering the crowd, driving Ward over the plate, Wanless going down to third. Sir Edward pinched second, and the pair drove home on a single by Tozer, a recent addition to the Perrins' staff.

Siipi Wanted To Quit.
After the first half of the fifth "Doc" Siipi decided he had enough and proceeded to call his uncouth warriors out of the game, and the cat-calls and roasts from the shivering fans, who apparently were all rooting for the hitherto unfortunate Perrin nine.

Wanless begged Siipi to continue, but the latter only shook his head. Apparently the "skyscrapers" were going to funk, and the crowd renewed its shouts of derision and sympathy.

With all the Perrins' crew at this point, and everybody appeared afraid that although having virtually won the contest they were going to lose out on a petty technicality.

Eventually, however, after an eighteen minutes' rest, the whitewashed first of the Perrins, which had chilled both players and spectators to the bone.

The Rockets, who had two pitchers occupying outer-garden positions, could do nothing with the speedy Clark, while Davis proceeded to become as wild as a chorus of March hares. Especially was he subject to poor eyesight, when faced by a southerly batsman.

Little Seitzer reached first three consecutive times, by acting as receiver-general for his twists, and Wanless performed a series of acrobatic turns and twists par excellence in trying to avoid being punctured each time he came to the pan.

More Bingles and Runs.
The beginning of the sixth session found the hungs "Bakers" again piling up bingles and runs. Seitzer received a bender between the third and fourth ribs, and went down, later stealing second and third. Wagner drew a pass and stole second. Brother Perkins got away with a bingle and Seitzer, by "Wag" drove in, Perkins going to third on a wild throw at the plate to catch Wagner. Ward laced the ball for a sack and Perkins scored on the hit. The "Chink" stole second and third, but got no farther.

In the last half of that round Davis got the merry ha ha from the crowd, when he hit safely, reached first, and when thinking he was out started to walk toward the bench. At this point the umpire cried "safe" and Davis turned and made a dive for the sack.

Wanless, who had walked several feet away from the bag, with the ball in his hand, saw him coming, however, and nailed him with a "safe" call.

State's Great Play.
Eddie Stein pulled off a clever stunt in the next session, but he carried it too far by a base. Two strikes had been called on the husky back-stop, when Davis took art ascension and sent one in roof-high over Mines' head.

Stein, seeing in the incident a chance of salvation, made a blunder that reached the flying pellet, which he could not have touched with "Jimmie" Bell's famous "Long Betay," and plodded down to first. So far so good; but the sad part of it all has now to be told.

Ambition constitutes a large portion of Stein's makeup, and he figures that he might just as well have two sacks in the bag as one, so he struck out.

Have You a Carpet Need To Fill This Spring?

Don't put off buying till another season. Carpet prices are soaring to greater heights than ever the most pessimistic expected. Almost every mail brings notice of unlooked-for advancement. Those who have carpet needs to fill will buy NOW, if they wish to avoid paying the material advance that is bound to occur in the retail store just as soon as present supplies are exhausted, the same as it has already done at the mills. There isn't any make of carpet that the merchant or wholesaler can buy again at old prices. One and all—the customer included—will have to pay high next season. Come in tomorrow and let us estimate on your order. Bring measurements, if possible.

Axminster Carpets

Axminster Carpet, for parlor, drawing rooms, libraries and reception rooms; made in Kidderminster, England. WONDERFUL WORK OF YALE JUNIORS

Furnished Sensation at the Annual Regatta of American Rowing Assn

Philadelphia, May 25.—The Yale University junior eight-oared crew afforded the sensation of the fifth annual regatta of the American Rowing Association here today by first winning the races for second eight-oared shells, and then defeating the fresh and supposedly strong Cornell Juniors. This was one of the closest races of the day for the Ithacans lost by only half a length. Yale's time for the course, 1 mile and 550 yards, was 6 minutes, 35 seconds, or two seconds slower than the record for the course made by the Cornell juniors two years ago. Yale earlier in the day beat Harvard and Pennsylvania freshmen by four lengths.

The New York clubs carried off the greatest number of first places. The New York Athletic Club was first in the race for first eights, second single sculls and first doubles. The Metropolitan Rowing Club defeated the Bachelor Barge Club and the University of Pennsylvania, and in so doing made a new record of 6 minutes, 35.1 seconds for this event, beating the record of 6:35 held by the Argonauts of Toronto.

The weather was cold, but a crowd of 5,000 saw the races.

Summaries:
First pair-oared shells—Won by Metropolitan Rowing Club, of New York; second, University Barge Club. Philadelphia, Time, 8:28 2-5.

A Prominent Montreal Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Completely Cured Her.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America in attracting the attention of many leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"Soon after my marriage my health began to decline. My appetite failed me; I was unable to sleep, and I became very nervous and had shooting pains through the abdomen and constant headaches, causing me more and more painful, and I became a burden to my family. I tried many remedies, but nothing helped me. I then tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I became a new woman. I am stronger and feel better than I did before I was married, and there is great rejoicing in the house over the wonders your medicine worked." Mrs. M. C. LeBlanc, 732 Cadieux St., Montreal, Quebec.

If you have suppressed or painful periods, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, pelvic catarrh, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, or some derangement of the organs. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Out of the Darkness

These were some of Rotha's thoughts; but it would be difficult to describe half of them. The leading idea seemed to be terror at what Robert might say to her, and yet in her secret heart she rejoiced at the knowledge that he was still unchanged. She fell asleep trying to recollect the contents of his last letter, and awoke depressed and restless.

A Sunday school treat was fixed for the following day, and when the children were safe in their dormitories, Rotha meant to go round to the vicarage to make the final arrangements with Mrs. Ord.

It was a lovely evening, and the setting sun streamed into the long, low room where Rotha sat among the little ones; the children had broken down in the middle of the hymn, and Rotha's sweet voice took up the refrain, and hummed it softly with a sort of weird croon, out a dolorous chorus of "We don't know it, mother," when the garden gate suddenly clicked. Fidgets, who was fast asleep, got up and limped to the door on three legs and began a furious barking, every hair bristling with excitement. Firm footsteps crunched up the garden-path, voices were heard in the little passages, the door of the mother's room opened and closed quickly.

"Run and tell the vicar I am here," said Rotha, breaking off her humming; "and, children, do not forget to get up and courtesy to him."
"May we come in, little sister?" said the vicar's cheerful voice over Joe's shoulders. "Do not let the children disturb you. No, do not come in just yet," he continued to somebody in the background. "Guess what visitor I have brought to see you, Rotha?"

"That is not hardly fair," returned Rotha, "but I will try to guess." "Let me introduce myself, Austin." A firm hand blocked up the entry, a tall man, gray-haired, with a worn, handsome face. Rotha stands up, white and trembling, with the sleeping boy still in her arms—it is Robert!

"Rotha, are you surprised to see me? I did not mean to startle you like this." Her only disengaged hand is taken and pressed kindly, and then Robert replaces her in her seat. She had not spoken one word of welcome—not one, except that low-uttered "Robert!"

was, although now and then Robert turned to her with a quiet word of smile, as though to show her presence was by no means forgotten, he never once strove to bring her into the conversation. But more than once the uneasy conviction seized her that her silence was understood and respected. And deeply as this thoughtfulness and delicacy touched her, it made her still more conscious. Now and then she started and flushed painfully as some tone or some expression of Robert's recalled Garton vividly. She had never thought the brothers alike, but a hundred times this evening some trick or fore her. Now and then she could look at him unperceived, and then she was struck afresh by the great change in him; and once or twice the thought crossed her, of what noble metal the man must have been made that the fire of suffering had so purified and strengthened him.

She had been perfectly content in her quiet corner, but she was more than ever tongue-tied and embarrassed when he walked with her to her own door. A dread of being asked with under these circumstances, was strong within her when she went out of the vicarage gate. "You see need not have been afraid," Robert seemed bent on putting her at her ease. Nothing could exceed his quiet gentleness. He spoke about the beauty of the night, and asked if she ever took long walks now. And he described an excursion Rufus they had got to Bryn; and then he shook hands with her and bade her good-night, as though he had been doing so every evening for the last five years.

Rotha gave up her thoughts in despair when she reached her own room. To disentangle and arrange such a hopeless confusion of ideas was next to impossible. A sense of disappointment and regret—inconstant regret—kindness were the paramount feelings, it increased her admiration and respect, but it humiliated her. He had months ago hinted at his despair. But now he was far the calmer of the two, and she herself had been taken unawares, and had betrayed her embarrassment in a hundred ways. The calm of the two! What if she had looked out that very moment and seen the lonely figure pacing up and down the sea-wall for hours?—could she have stood in the moonlight beside Belle's grave, and leaning his hot brow against the marble cross, and could he have said, "Dearest than ever—the one face Oh, my God! to see her every day and not to win her, will be more than I can bear. I must—I will win her! Something tells me that I shall, Rotha."

The next day was that appointed for the school treat, and Rotha had as early as possible to help Mary and Aunt Eliza to pack the hampers. But, started for Stretton, where he would probably be detained the greater part of the morning.

Rotha felt a chill of disappointment, for she had quite made up her mind to be her old self with him today. It relieved her, therefore, and sent quite a glow of satisfaction to her heart, when the vicar casually remarked to Aunt Eliza that she would certainly have her wish to see Robert gratified that very afternoon, for he had promised him faithfully to take the four o'clock train from Blackscar, and to be present at the distribution of buns; and as he always kept his word, she might be certain that he would make his appearance at the time specified.

Rotha said nothing, but she worked with redoubled zeal, and at the appointed hour joined the phalanx of teachers and children on the Blackscar platform, looking singularly appropriate to the occasion in her pretty spring dress, a soft blue—with her white chip hat. Dress always set off Rotha, but she never looked prettier than she did today, as Mary remarked to the vicar and to Aunt Eliza about half a dozen times.

There was nothing worth recording in the afternoon itself. As in most other school treats, the children were wild with pleasure, and ran all over the glens like a herd of young colts. Rotha strove once or twice in quiet moments, to bring back the sweet old-fashioned associations of the place, but for once so glorious, the sunshine so bright, the play of light and shade so delicious in river ran underneath so brimming over with ripples and joy, the little knots of eager rosy faces and warm depths, that a less happy nature than Rotha's must have expanded to the cheering influences; and more than one bright thought kept her pulses beating for many a long year had not heard up and down the shady walks, or sat on one of the tiny lawns keeping watch about five o'clock, when the children were ranged in orderly files on one of the green lawns, and the vicar was often wandered to the little white gate in the hope of seeing a tall figure advancing from the road; but tea was over and the children scattered to their games again, and still no Robert made his appearance.

Do You Eat Bread?

If so, do you not think that you might as well eat only the best? The best bread is that which contains the most nutriment and the least waste matter, and is absolutely pure. You cannot have good bread, however, unless you have good flour.

"FIVE ROSES" FLOUR

contains more gluten and nutriment, in more easily digestible form, than any ordinary brands, whilst it contains practically no cellulose or waste matter. In addition, it is more economical, as, pound for pound, it will make more bread and better bread than the flours so-called "just as good."

Its purity is assured by the care with which it is made, and users of it can rely upon getting the best flour for bread which the world offers.

but her heart is beating so that she can hardly breathe.

"That is not a very warm greeting after five years' absence," says the vicar mischievously, and Robert, gravely as before, just touches her cheek with his lips, and says quietly that Austin has brought him in to see the little sister in the midst of her children, and that he is glad to see her looking so strong and well, and so on. All spoken in the same calm, kind manner, as though the blood that swept over Rotha's pale face did not stir every pulse within him at the thought that he had the power to stir her every nerve, those burning blushes and quivering lips could not mean only that he had taken her unawares.

"I hope you do not mind my bringing him in like this?" Robert was so anxious to see you," said the vicar, trying to put a stop to this painful embarrassment. "You are so completely one of us, you know, Rotha, and Mary said she was sure you would be pleased to see him."

"I am very pleased," returned Rotha, finding her voice with difficulty. "When did you come?" lifting her eyes timidly to Robert, who was leaning against the mantelpiece, watching her.
"Only an hour ago; I got off the dust of my journey, and talked to Mary and Austin a little, and then Mary proposed our coming round to fetch you. How well dear Mary looks, to be sure! and as pretty as ever; only her hair is so gray—not so gray as mine though." And he tossed it carelessly from his forehead as he spoke. "Do you not think me very changed, Rotha?"
"Very much changed. You look as though you had been very ill," she returned softly. She was regaining her calmness at the sight of his, but her color still varied dangerously.

Yes, he was changed, wonderfully so; but she thought she had never seen a nobler face. His dark hair was quite iron gray, though he was hardly more than thirty-six; and his face was thinner and paler, and the forehead deeply lined. But the hard-set curve of the lips had relaxed, and the curve round the mouth was exceedingly sweet and sorrowful; only when he smiled, which he did rarely, his eyes were like Gar's. "I was very near death," he turned, reading the unspoken sympathy in her eyes. "I suppose if I had not been with good Samaritans it would soon have been all over with me. Rachael cried when she received your present, Rotha. When I gave it to her, I said it was so like the little sister that Austin talks about."

He had used the vicar's title twice, but not as though he had appropriated it. Was it merely to put her at her ease with him, or to remind her that he had no hope? Somehow the name jarred on her for the first time.

"You do not find Rotha much altered, do you, Robert?" he asked the vicar briskly. Rotha's face fell again before Robert's swift keen glance.
"No; she is not a day older. How do you manage to preserve your youth, Rotha—you look so young? And do you always wear that little cap? Do you know, it reminds me of the day I met you first in the castle gardens? You had a cap on then, had you not?"
"No; only a lace kerchief tied over my hair," returned Rotha, with a smile. "This is my uniform, Meg's and mine." She continued hurriedly. She knew intuitively why Robert looked so grave. Would he ever forget that day when he saw her under the low apple trees, a slim creature in her black dress? If he made her speak to him in her own frank way to see that look of pain on his face. "Meg will be so glad to see you, Robert."

"Ah, to be sure. Poor Mrs. Carruthers! I was so sorry to hear about her trouble; but you told me in one of your last letters that she has been more settled ever since. How good you have been, Rotha, to write to me so often!"

"You were lonely, and I knew you would like to hear about everything," she returned beginning to get her again. "You have no idea what letters she can write," he continued, turning to his brother, who had half a dozen of the children round his knee, and was talking to them in an undertone. "They used to be like a series of pictures to me, and clever pictures too. I don't think all these five years I have ever had to ask after 'Anybody.'"

"We did not know you were a scribe, Rotha," returned the vicar, laughing; "but here we are keeping Mary and tea waiting. Do you know we have orders to carry you off?"

"Indeed! But I do not think I can leave just yet; I have my working bed, and—"

"Perhaps not," interrupted the vicar, "but Mrs. Carruthers is on her way to help Caroline, so that excuse has fallen through. And as for the working dress, if you want to honor Robert by a festive attire, we will willingly escort you to Bryn; but I can assure you that that gray serge is quite as becoming in your eyes as gray silks would be." A mischievous little speech which made Robert smile, and after that Rotha would have gone in gray sackcloth, if there were such a material; but as she still hesitated, though far different reasons, Robert settled the matter by lifting the drowsy Dulcimer off her lap and, taking out his watch, told her that he would wait for her just five minutes—a piece of peremptoriness which reminded her of the old Robert Ord, and brought one of her sunny smiles back in an instant.

Rotha was very quiet and kept in the background all the evening, but no one seemed to notice it. For Robert and Austin had so much to say to each other, and were so busy in discussing the former's prospects, and every one had so much to tell him, that no one seemed to perceive what a silent listener Rotha was, although now and then Robert turned to her with a quiet word or smile, as though to show her presence was by no means forgotten, the never once strove to bring her into the conversation. But more than once the uneasy conviction seized her that her silence was understood and respected.

And deeply as this thoughtfulness and delicacy touched her, it made her still more conscious. Now and then she started and flushed painfully as some tone or some expression of Robert's recalled Garton vividly. She had never thought the brothers alike, but a hundred times this evening some trick or turn of Robert's voice brought him before her. Now and then she could look at him unperceived, and then she was struck afresh by the great change in him; and once or twice the thought crossed her, of what noble metal the man must have been made that the fire of suffering had so purified and strengthened him.

A dread of being alone with him, a terror of what he might say under these circumstances, was strong within her when she went out of the vicarage gate. But she need not have been afraid. Robert seemed bent on putting her at her ease, and he spoke about the beauty of the night, and asked Rotha if she ever took long walks now. And he described an excursion Rufus and he had taken, which lasted till the early morning, and then he shook hands with her and bade her good-night, as though he had been doing so every evening for the last five years.

Rotha gave up her thoughts in despair when she reached her own room. To disentangle and arrange such a mass of confusion of ideas was next to impossible. A sense of disappointment and regret—inconsistent regret—at Robert's calmness and brotherly kindness were the paramount feelings. It increased her admiration and respect for him, but it humiliated her. He had married her for five years, and only three months ago had hinted at his despair. But now he was by far the calmer of the two, and she herself had been taken unawares, and had betrayed her embarrassment in a hundred ways. The calmer of the two! What if she had looked out that very moment and seen the lonely figure pacing up and down the sea-wall for hours?—could she have stood in the moonlight beside Belle's grave, and leaning his hot brow against the marble cross, and could he have said, "Dearest than ever—the one face—the one woman in the world—to me. Oh, my God! to see her every day and when I win her, will be more than I can bear. I must—I will win her!"

Something tells me that I shall, Rotha. The next day was the day appointed for the school treat, and Rotha had promised to be round at the vicarage as early as possible to help Mary and Aunt Eliza to pack the hampers. But, early as it was, Robert had already started for Strerton, where he would probably be detained the greater part of the morning.

Rotha felt a chill of disappointment, for she had quite made up her mind to be her old self with him today. It relieved her, therefore, and sent quite a glow of satisfaction to her heart, when the vicar casually remarked to Aunt Eliza that she would certainly have her wish to see Robert gratified that very afternoon, for he had promised him faithfully to take the four o'clock train from Blackstar, and to be present at the distribution of buns; and as he always kept his word, she might be certain that he would make his appearance at the time specified.

Rotha said nothing, but she worked with redoubled zeal, and at the appointed hour joined the phalanx of teachers and children on the Blackstar platform, looking singularly appropriate to the occasion in her pretty spring dress—a soft blue—with her white clip hat. Dress always set off Rotha, but she never looked prettier than she did today, as Mary remarked to the vicar and to Aunt Eliza about half a dozen times.

There was nothing worth recording in the afternoon itself. As in most other school treats, the children were wild with pleasure, and over the vicar's head a herd of young colts, Rotha strove once or twice, in quiet moments, to bring back the sweet and mournful associations of the place, but for once the effort was manifest. The day was so glorious, the sunshine so bright, the play of light and shade so delicious in the bosky dells and hollows, the little river ran underneath so brimming over with ripples and tiny gurgles of joy, the children's mirth was so infectious, the knots of eager rosy faces such warm vivid pictures set in the green bowery depths, that a less happy nature than Rotha's must have expanded to the cheering influences; and more than one bright thought kept her pulses beating to a tune they had not heard for many a long year, as she walked up and down the shady walks, or sat on one of the tiny lawns keeping watch about five o'clock, when the children were ranged in orderly files on one of the green lawns, and the vicar was called upon to say grace, Rotha's eyes often wandered to the little white gate in the hope of seeing a tall figure advancing from the road; but tea was over and the children scattered to their games again, and still no Robert made his appearance.

MAD DOGS IN PLENTY

Belgian District Again Acquires Notoriety for Hydrophobia.

Brussels, May 26.—A district near Hasselt, called La Hesbaye, has acquired an unenviable notoriety for a succession of mad dogs. For four years hydrophobia has raged in one commune or another of this part of Hainaut. Last year a whole family of farmers was sent from Avennes to the hospital at Brussels suffering from hydrophobia.

News comes now that dogs with rabies are again infesting the neighborhood, and that some of them have been killed at Omal and Ligny. The municipal order is in force, but conditions are so serious that the people talk of petitioning the Government to take drastic measures.

Do You Eat Bread?

If so, do you not think that you might as well eat only the best? The best bread is that which contains the most nutriment and the least waste matter, and is absolutely pure. You cannot have good bread, however, unless you have good flour.

"FIVE ROSES" FLOUR

contains more gluten and nutriment, in more easily digestible form, than any ordinary brands, whilst it contains practically no cellulose or waste matter. In addition, it is more economical, as, pound for pound, it will make more bread and better bread than the flour so-called "just as good."

Its purity is assured by the care with which it is made, and users of it can rely upon getting the best flour for bread which the world offers.

DUKE'S AUTO STONED

Royal Princess in Peril While on an Excursion.

Baden-Baden, May 26.—While returning from an automobile excursion to Freudenstadt, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz was much annoyed while passing through the village of Forbach by several boys who threw stones into her automobile. The grand duchess narrowly escaped injury. In order to prevent such stupid acts on the part of the peasants, the police will issue a notice, which is to be distributed to all the schools and officials of the villages of Baden.

Supposed Millionaire Arrested for Fraud on Eve of Wedding.

Rome, May 26.—The arrangements for the marriage of Mlle. Carmen Melis, prima donna at the Constanzi Theater, to Umberto Carola, a supposed South American millionaire, were canceled yesterday, when the police arrested the latter on numerous charges of fraud. Detectives called at Mlle. Melis' residence while her lover was there, and took him into custody. The police asserted that he is not a millionaire, but a daring and clever criminal. The prima donna is prostrate with grief and cannot fulfill her professional engagements.

The "Bakers" victory on Saturday at "Tecumseh Lake" was a most popular one, judging by the rounds of good healthy applause handed out each time one of the bunch trotted over the home corner.

There was an open-air christening across the river Saturday. Brother Kerr, he of the dazzling drop curves, meandered up to where the press representatives were abiding and making notes, and somebody yelled "Ruba." Whereat Mr. Kerr grinned in true hay seed fashion and the deed was done.

The foundrymen have won out at last. The "champs" got drowned out on Saturday and the arbiter of strikes and balls gave the game to the former team. At that, though, the victors had a lead of six runs when the game was called.

Now that St. Thomas has had a road race, the place will have to be given a corner on the sporting map. The event was a 7 1/2-mile affair, and was won by a Springfield man.

There was fun galore Saturday afternoon up on the Heights, when a picked team of soccer players from the Forty-Eighth Highlanders played a match game with Company "F" of the Barracks. The grounds were a sea of mud, and the Highlanders, who played in their kilts, looked as though they had been taking a mud bath before the contest had gone ten minutes. At the end of the first half the score was 0-0, and the bout was called on account of rain.

London umpires are the cruel tipters. Notwithstanding the fact that the aqua was coming down in buckets Saturday, the Junior Orioles forfeited a game to the Iveys at Springbank, when the former had a lead of five runs. It wouldn't be such a bad idea to not begin local games when it is raining. Not only is a wetting dangerous to players, but the umpires might take cold and fly the coop.

Four of London's best runners are wandering about today vainly seeking sight of four trophy cups which they won at the Highlanders' exercises and games at Queen's Park on the 24th, and the reason they are mournful and sad is that owing to the fact that no representative of the Seventh was on hand at the park yesterday, when the prizes were given out. They are minus their hard-earned trophies. The athletes are members of the Seventh Regiment Medical Corps, and respond to the names of Amos, McKellar, Doupe and Henderson. In the account of the games it was erroneously stated that these boys had won out in the half-mile relay race, when in reality they lost that contest and took first place in the two-mile relay.

Perrin Nine Applied Very Thick
Coat of Whitewash to Rockets on Saturday.

With the Tecumseh Park bleachers a sea of umbrellas and the covered stands half filled with shivering, but nevertheless, enthusiastic fans, the tribe of Perrinites fell upon the recently invincible Rockets on Saturday afternoon, and daubed them with whitewash from spikes to helmets.

"Right to 'get some'" was the final word, and it came after seven long, chilly sessions had been endured.

The contest was pulled off in a steady rain and the field near the finish was almost a sea of mud.

Beyond a doubt Davis, "Doc" Sippl's undeveloped phenomenon, is having much hard luck in the matter of weather. The last Saturday on which he tackled the game in London the weather was cold enough to freeze even "Rube" Kerr's perpetual smile. Saturday it was both wet and chilly.

Second race, Hopeful purse, for 2-year-olds, 5 furlongs—Larkin, 103 (Diggs), 2 to 1; Wadd, 108 (Dubu), 10 to 1; 2; Prescott, 108 (McCart), 15 to 1; 3; Time, 1:02. Boll Weevil, Ena, Lady Powell, Shimonese, Aromatized ran.

LITTLE WILL NOT GO.
Philadelphia, May 25.—Raymond D. Little will not accompany the American lawn tennis challengers for the Paris Cup to England this summer. This was made known last night at the Germantown Cricket Club, where Little, T. J. Clothier, Beals C. Wright and Karl Behr are playing a round robin tournament.

America's chances of lifting the cup are lessened by Little's inability to make the trip and an endeavor will be made to find a first-class player to accompany Wright and Behr.

GAME AWARDED TO HOODOO NINE

East End Champions Would Not Play in Rain and Umpire Gives Game Away.

The first game scheduled for Saturday in the East End League was between the champion Somervilles and the Wortman & Ward nine.

True, the weather was not very inviting when time was called, a light rain falling, but it was nevertheless decided to start play.

Before the first inning had been completed, it was clear that it was all off with the champions. Their fielding was loose—they did not seem to be able to do anything whatever with the ball—and when the season ended 9 to 0 was chalked up in favor of the Foundrymen.

In the second spasm the Somervilles got three runs, while the Wortman nine failed to get a man across the plate, but in the third session the nine with the hoodoo got three more, making the score nine to three.

When the Wortmans had played their half of the fourth, the rain was coming down rather heavily, and the champions refused to play further. The umpire would not call the game, and as the Somervilles insisted in refusing to go on, it was awarded to the Foundrymen 9 to 0.

Roberts was pitching the game of his life, being hit safely but once in the three innings, while the Wortmans found Pitzmaurice safely six times.

The scores:
Wortman & Ward ... 0 0 0 0 9 6 2
Somervilles ... 0 0 0 0 3 1 4
Batteries—Roberts and McConnell; Pitzmaurice and Collins.

Umpire—Pierce.
The game between the Ramblers and the Stars was called on account of the rain.

LACROSSE.

ST. KITTS VS. BRANTFORD.
Brantford, May 25.—Brantford went down to defeat in the opening game of the senior C. L. A. series before St. Catharines. The visitors won by a score of 5 to 3, scoring two in first, two in second, and one in fourth.

Brantford got two in the first and one in the second, and was outplayed at all stages. Fred Washburn, of Toronto, refereed.

TORONTO WORSTED MONTREAL.
Toronto, May 25.—In an exhibition game of lacrosse at the Rosedale grounds Toronto defeated Montreal 5 goals to 3. The teams lined up as follows:

Toronto—Goal, Regan; point, Francis; cover, Menary; defense field, Hamberg, Kervin, Carmichael; center, McKenzie; home, Taylor, Barnett, Cameron; outside, Kalls; inside, Warwick.

Montreal—Goal, Muir; point, Neville; cover, Holmes; defense field, Geo. Finlayson, Angus, Kenne, center, Nolan; home, F. Scott, Hamilton; Povey; outside, McInnes; inside, Scott.

CLEANED UP ON BRANTFORD.
St. Marys, May 25.—The St. Marys Juniors cleaned up on the Brantford C. L. A. Juniors here in a lacrosse game, which was fast only in spots, by a score of 7 to 1.

CRICKET.

WILL REVIVE CLUB.

Aylmer, May 25.—The interesting cricket match on the 24th between cricket teams from the Englishmen and the local players has aroused so much enthusiasm among the old players that steps will be taken to organize a good team. A few years ago Aylmer cricketers were in the first ranks and made yearly tours to Cleveland, London and other cities to play matches, but after a loss of their equipment by flood and with the introduction of bowling, to which the old-timers took naturally, interest in the game waned, and it had not been seen here for years.

LAWN BOWLING.

HAMILTON THISTLES LOSE.

Brantford, May 25.—Five rinks of the Hamilton Thistle Club visited the city yesterday and were defeated by a score of 105 to 87 in a bowling match by the Brantford club.

WERE BEATEN OUT IN SECOND HALF

The Toronto Varsity Lacrosse
Team Loses First of International Matches.

New York, May 25.—In an interesting and cleverly played, although rather drawn-out contest, the team of the Crescent Athletic Club won the first of a series of international lacrosse matches by defeating Toronto University at Bayridge today by a score of 6 goals to 5.

The first half ended 4 to 3 in favor of the Canadians.

A FINE EXHIBITION.
Montreal, May 25.—Under ideal weather conditions and before a crowd of 2,000 people, a fine exhibition of Canada's national game was played between Cornwall and the Nationals.

Both teams were evenly matched and, while Cornwall has lost all the old stars in the persons of John White, Burns, the Brodericks and McMillan, still the new team is a good one and quite a lively bunch. They put up a good game, but were beaten by 6 goals to 2.

CORNELL'S CHAMPIONSHIP.
Geneva, May 25.—Cornell defeated Hobart today at lacrosse in a deciding game for the championship of the northern division of the Intercollegiate Lacrosse League by a score of 2 to 1.

Woodstock, May 25.—The opening game in the series of the Western Ontario Baseball League was held here today between Guelph and Woodstock, and was a fair exhibition of ball.

Guelph won by a good margin, the game being called at the end of the sixth inning on account of rain.

The score was: Guelph 6, Woodstock 0.

Batteries—Guelph, Costello and Urchan; Woodstock, Dingwall and Harvey.

Killingsworth, of St. Thomas, umpired.

The ceremonies in connection with the league's inaugural game were interesting. Mayor Butler pitched the first ball, with S. N. Dansey, president of the league, at the bat. Both these gentlemen made speeches.

OPENER AT GALT.
Galt, May 25.—Galt and Ingersoll played baseball this afternoon at Dickson Park, in the opening game of the Western Ontario Baseball League.

There was a small attendance, owing to the rain, which fell during the entire game. The errors in the score are accounted for by the weather conditions. The game resulted as follows: Galt 17, Ingersoll 10.

The players:

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Galt ... 0 0 3 0 0 1 4 ... 17 20 7
Ingersoll ... 0 2 0 1 1 1 0 1 2 11
Umpire—Dyson, Guelph.

BIG TRACK MEET MAY YET BE HELD

English and American Universities Likely to Come Together.

Cambridge, Mass., May 25.—In relation to the dispatch from London that the proposed track meet between Harvard and Yale and Oxford and Cambridge has been given up, Manager J. Rowe, of the Harvard track team, said today that while he received no reply from the English university to his letter proposing the meet, he saw no reason why it should not be held.

Mr. Rowe also said that the time set for the meet, July 4, was merely a suggestion on his part, and might easily be changed.

CHICAGO VS. WISCONSIN.
Chicago, May 25.—University of Chicago track athletes defeated the University of Wisconsin today by 67 1/3 points to 52 2/3.

NEW ENGLAND MEET.
Worcester, Mass., May 25.—Dartmouth won the New England intercollegiate meet here today with 47 points.

Brown was second, Amherst third, Massachusetts' Institute of Technology, fourth, and Williams, fifth.

PENN. OUTCLASSED SWARTH-MORE.
Philadelphia, May 25.—The University of Pennsylvania track team today defeated Swarthmore College in a dual meet by the score of 86 to 22.

THE TURF.

CROKER'S COLT KILLED.
Dublin, May 25.—Richard Croker's 3-year-old bay colt Illinois, by American, out of Nara, which was entered for the all-aged stakes to be run at Ascot, June 20, was accidentally killed today.

ADMIRABLE RIDE BY KOERNER BEAT HEAVILY-PLAYED FAVORITE

New York, May 25.—H. R. Whitney's Dinna Ken, carrying 111 pounds, and admirably ridden by Koerner, won the Carleton stakes, one mile, at Gravesend today, beating ames R. Keene's heavily-played favorite, Peter Pan, in a drive. Sidney Paget's Charles Edward was third. Dinna Ken was a long shot, going to the post at 13 to 1.

The Whitney gelding in winning this race created a new track record for the distance by stepping it in 1:38 4-5, which is three-fifths of a second faster than the best previous time made by James R. Keene's Commando, carrying 128 pounds, June 1, 1901. The pace was hot, and Koerner kept in behind the leaders to the stretch. Then he moved up and took the race.

Peter Pan was made a decided odds-on favorite at 3 to 5. Saracinesca was next in demand at 9 to 2, with land officials and teachers. This latter appreciated by the visitors. Amongst the American teachers were a number of former Canadians, and these renewed old acquaintances in a hearty manner with the Londoners.

Fine Schools.

Speaking of the public schools of Cleveland, Inspector Edwards said they were a credit to that city. The buildings and equipment are very fine, the heating and ventilation are excellent, and the discipline maintained is very noteworthy.

There are eight grades in the public schools there, the same as in the London schools. The high school term is only four years. The Cleveland board of education has in addition a normal school of its own, controlled by the city exclusively.

The inspector of schools receives $6,000 per annum, and each of his assistants receives $3,000.

Course of Studies Same as Here.

The course of studies is practically the same in the public schools of Cleveland as here, though it may be that the Americans devote more attention to arithmetic than do the Londoners. All the principals of the two schools, with the exception of two, are ladies. The Cleveland people say that it is impossible to secure a first-class male principal for $1,800 per annum, which is the salary paid, and they prefer a first-class lady principal to a nondescript male teacher.

When boys become so bad that they cannot be governed by the lady principals, they are sent to a school where a male principal is in control, and there they are taught "who is who and what is what."

As many as 150 pupils a month find their way to this school of correction.

The Cleveland schools are modern in every way. At the Waterson School, which may be taken as a sample, the classrooms are 32x25 feet. The windows run from the floor to the ceiling, so as to give plenty of light. The building is steam heated, and ventilated by fans.

There are no platforms for teachers, as they are declared to be useless and expensive. The teacher sits on the same level as the pupils.

No Death of Music.

Each and every school has its assembly-room. In one school in Cleveland there are no less than eleven pianos, and the rooms are made as attractive as possible with pictures, etc. The conversation at this point turned toward the discipline of the pupils, and Trustee C. M. R. Graham, who was in the inspector's office, took a hand in the discussion which followed.

"City Engineer Graydon says that London boys are the most impolite of any on the continent," said the reporter to the inspector. He declares that if a boy meets you on the street and asks you the time, he never says please, and when you give him the information, he runs away without so much as a word of thanks."

Inspector Edwards and Principal Radcliffe would not agree with Mr. Graydon's deductions regarding politeness.

Trustee Graham was willing to admit that there are some boys in the public schools of London who might be polished up a bit.

West London Boys Polite.

"I must say," he said, "that the pupils of West London are amongst the most polite in the city. I have noticed, when umpiring games for the boys in the Public School League that the lads from West London have an air of straightforwardness and manliness which stands out in comparison with the other teams of the city. The West London boys have great control of themselves, and if they address you, they do so in a very polite way."

Continuing his impressions of the Cleveland schools, Mr. Edwards said the London teachers by an exchange of ideas on teaching methods, have learned much which will come in useful in their work in London.

School Rate is High.

In Cleveland, the school tax amounts to 10 to 25 mills on the dollar, against about 7 mills in London. Asked if the people of Cleveland did not consider the school tax there very heavy, the officials and teachers replied in the negative. They explained that the Americans appreciate the value of education and are willing to spend plenty of money to attain their ends.

Principal Radcliffe pointed out that in the high schools of Cleveland there are only four subjects given to the pupils to be carried throughout the year, against ten or twelve in the high school of London. Mr. Radcliffe is inclined to the opinion that the American rule in this regard is the better.

The high schools are free to the students just the same as the public schools.

The students of the high schools, as well as the students of the seventh and eighth grades of the public schools, are given homework to do at night. Mr. Radcliffe says he noticed a wide difference in the teaching of literature in Cleveland as compared with the method in London. Across the line, in classics, for example, more attention is paid to the biographies of the writers than to the text, with the result that the pupils there know much more of the men who are known as great writers than of the works of such men.

On the whole, however, he found the high schools of Cleveland very efficient in all respects.

Apostolos Mavrogenis, the last of the Greek champions of liberty of 1821, has died, at the age of 114. Mavrogenis was born at Piraeus in 1792, and on account of the cruelty of the Turkish Government, had to flee with his parents to Italy, where he later studied medicine. When the war of independence started he formed a legion of the Greeks studying in Italy, and with it served under the command of the great Kolokotronis. He continued in the army for 45 years and retired as surgeon-general.

COLD, WITH FROST

That's What the Weather Man Promises for Tonight.

Last night the thermometer at the observatory in South London registered 32.5 degrees above, or 6.5 degrees above freezing.

At 8 o'clock this morning it registered 42 above.

Cold weather, with frost, is promised for tonight.

At noon today there was a slight fall of 3.5 degrees above, or 6.5 degrees above freezing.

Medical Health Officer Hutchinson says that the present weather, while unseasonable and uncomfortable, is not injurious to health.

It only affects people with pulmonary troubles.

At present there is but very little sickness in the city. Only five cases of diphtheria have been reported, and there is not a case of typhoid fever.

WANTED TO PROVE GUILT OF HUSBAND

Mrs. Fox Secured Letter Sent by Him to Another Woman, and Opened It.

Opening letters alleged to have been written and mailed to another woman by her husband is the serious charge which has been laid against Mrs. Philip Fox.

The charge has been laid by Miss Mabel Brown, and the case was to have been heard at the police court this morning, but the crown was not ready to proceed, and Mrs. Fox was bailed to appear on Wednesday next.

It is alleged that Mrs. Fox went to the postoffice, and by using the name of Mabel Brown, induced the authorities to give her a letter which had been sent to Miss Brown by Mr. Fox. For some time Mrs. Fox had suspected her husband of carrying on a correspondence with Miss Brown, and it is said to have resorted to the above method of proving his guilt.

TRIP AROUND THE WORLD

Londoners Will Make the Journey in Four Days.

Julius Verne took his hero around the world in 80 days, but the Daughters of the Empire will take the people of London around the world in 4 days.

Beginning on Wednesday, June 5, at 8 o'clock, in the Armories, and continuing through the week, the public may visit the foremost nations of the world and be entertained by their representatives in a purely national spirit.

After the grand march on Wednesday evening, the opening day, Mr. Cyril Dwight-Edwards, London's popular baritone, will furnish a Scotch concert, at which His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario will be present.

On Thursday evening Mr. Albert Brown is giving a concert, assisted by the Bennett Orchestra, and a splendid array of talent.

Friday evening, Mr. Jordan is furnishing the programme, which will be very excellent, and Saturday evening it is hoped Mr. Dunn will entertain the public.

These are only a few of the attractions, as a general popular entertainment will be continually in progress.

This promises to be the greatest entertainment ever given in London, and for a most worthy cause, and the citizens are cordially invited to assist in making it an unqualified success.

MEET ON SATURDAY

Advertiser Correspondence

Famine in China.

The Editor of The Advertiser:

The telegrams printed on Saturday from the Red Cross Societies' representatives in China indicate that the urgency of need for famine relief funds is now over. Direct information from our own missionaries shows that a moderate crop is expected in June.

It is to be remembered, however, that much distress will still continue among those whose houses, implements, etc., have been swept away; among those who either had no seed corn, and no plow oxen, or whose land was spoiled by river silt, and also among the landless poor, and those weakened by famine or disease, so that they are unable to earn food.

No fresh appeals will be made, but those who have planned for gifts or efforts on behalf of the sufferers need not be deterred by any fear that their gifts will come too late to be useful, or fail to meet a real need.

TOO BUSY WITH SCHOOLS

London Teachers Did Not Investigate Cleveland's Water Supply.

It is understood that the London school teachers who went to Cleveland did not find any time to investigate the water supply there, and the working of water meters, as had been suggested by the Real Estate Association. Consequently, they have no report to make. They say they were very busy studying educational matters.

Trustee Strong, who, by the way, was the only member of the board to accompany the teachers to Cleveland, made a hit at the American Hotel as a humorist.

It appears that the house, in order to take care of its extra quota of guests, had pressed into service colored men as waiters who knew nothing of the business.

One of these happened to wait on the table at which Mr. Strong sat. When the meal was concluded one day the London trustee called the waiter over to the table and thus addressed him:

"I have traveled quite a bit and have seen many waiters. I want you to take this half-dollar, because I never before met a man in your class. You're the worst waiter that ever waited on me."

The other waiters in the vicinity wrecked the rules of the house by laughing uproariously at their conferee's discomfiture.

ADVERTISER'S NEW STORY

A Great Tale by Sir Conan Doyle Begins on Saturday.

The Advertiser has purchased the serial rights of Conan Doyle's famous story, "The Hound of the Baskervilles." It will be published in daily instalments, beginning Saturday next. In "The Hound of the Baskervilles," the gifted author revives Sherlock Holmes, and unfolds a story of breathless interest in which the great detective's powers of induction are exhibited in their highest degree. The novel will have too fascination for readers, young and old. None should miss the first instalment.

The following were the pallbearers: David Robson, C. E. Morris, F. R. Sleight, William Robb, Charles Needham and Wm. J. Taylor.

—A St. Thomas exchange says: The alarmist reports sent out regarding danger to Hill Crest from the erosion of Lake Erie billows are premature by about a generation or so, as there has really been little inroad made upon the cliff, excepting a strip along its base. As the beach had practically disappeared several years ago, the damage done this year is scarcely noticeable.

The fact that residents of Orchard Beach were discussing ways and means of checking further depredations by the surf upon the coast has doubtless led to the circulation of alarmist rumors regarding the safety of Hill Crest. Port Stanley never was in better shape, and a banner resort season is expected, and with good reason.

DEATH OF MR. STOTHERS

An Askin Street Resident Succumbs to Attack of Pneumonia.

The death of Robert Joseph Stothers occurred after a short illness from pneumonia, at his home on Askin street. The deceased was the only son of the late Jas. Stothers, and was born in the township of North Dorchester, near Crumlin, on March 5, 1848. He resided on the homestead until seven years ago, when he removed to the city and retired. He was well known throughout the townships of North Dorchester and West Nissouri, as well as in the city. From early life he was a consistent member of the Crumlin Presbyterian Church, and succeeded his father, on the death of the latter, as secretary-treasurer of the church, which position he held for many years. He was married in 1899 to Miss Blair, of Embro, Ont. He is survived by his wife and three small children—Hilton, Rupert and Constance; and by three sisters, Mrs. J. B. Sundall, of New York city; Mrs. Arthur Wilson, of Crumlin, and Mrs. J. H. Weir, of London Junction. The funeral will take place at 2 p.m. tomorrow, from his late residence, 18 Askin street, South London, to Brown's Cemetery.

SHOT BY MISTAKE

Thinks They Are "Apaches," and Fires Revolver.

Marselles, May 25.—Charles Harfield, an engineer on the Bibby liner Shropshire, was returning on board the vessel in the small hours of Thursday morning, when three men approached him on the quay. Thinking that they were "Apaches," whose activity in this city recently had been a public scandal, he drew a revolver and fired three shots, wounding one of the men in the back. They were, it was found, custom officials, and Harfield was arrested.

He was brought before a magistrate yesterday, but was set at liberty, having proved that he was recently a victim of hoodlums.

MORE POLICE FOR LONDON

Metropolitan Force To Be Augmented, and Wages May Be Raised.

London, May 25.—The metropolitan police force, it is understood, is shortly to be considerably augmented.

About 100 men will be transferred from the uniformed branch to the criminal investigation department, and their places will be filled by recruits.

In every branch of the force additional inspectors and sergeants will be appointed, and this will mean additional vacancies for new men.

Although no official announcement is likely to be made until the police commission has finished its sittings, it is also stated that there is to be an all-round increase in wages, the object being to attract good men to the service.

VESUVIUS SPITS POISON

Deadly Gas From New Fissure in Southern Declivity.

Naples, May 25.—At Boscoreale, on the southern declivity of Mount Vesuvius, a fissure suddenly opened yesterday, from which a flow of poisonous gas escaped. A peasant who imprudently approached the fissure was killed, and nine others who rushed to his rescue, and fell asphyxiated, were saved with difficulty. The gas from the new fissure rises to the height of five or six feet, and carabineers have been posted in the vicinity to prevent persons going within the danger zone.

Closing Hours of Kilties' Welcome Visit to City

Services in Queen's Park—Rousing Send-Off and Interchange of Cheers.

Notwithstanding the disagreeable state of the weather, a large number of citizens attended the church parade and service, held by the Forty-eighth Highlanders, at Queen's Park, yesterday morning. The regiment fell in about 9 o'clock near their quarters on the grounds, and after engaging in a short drill, formed up behind the pipe and brass bands, and marched about the grounds, finally locating in the big covered grandstand, where Rev. J. G. Stuart, of Knox Church, South London, conducted divine worship, commencing about 9:30 o'clock. During the service the band of the regiment provided the instrumental music, and played the accompaniment to the singing of the hymns.

The soldiers were seated in the central part of the stand, with the bands at the back, while the preacher occupied a temporary platform at the lower end of the stand. On either side of the soldiers were large numbers of civilians.

Rev. Mr. Stuart's Address.

Obedience was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Stuart. He took as his text, Acts, iii, 28: "We ought to obey God rather than men."

The utterance of this principle, he said, showed that Peter was right in refusing to obey any authority but God, and God proved that he was correct in obeying him.

"The Scriptures emphasize obedience, which is one of the principal requirements in Christian life," said Mr. Stuart, who continued: "Knowledge is criminal if we do not obey. Obedience means that we must abstain from every form of evil. It does not only mean a life bound around by certain things which we must not do, but it means that we must be active Christians, in submission to God's will. A negative Christianity is worthless. Then we must not select only the laws which we like best and obey them; we must obey all God's laws. Our obedience must be complete obedience."

Necessity for Obedience.

To illustrate this thought of obeying, whether it pleased or not, the speaker pictured the disastrous results which would follow during time of war, if the individual members of an army each did as he pleased. "The eternal will of the Father controls the universe; he has a right to command, and us to obey. He is our Father, and we as children should be anxious to obey his commands."

"God wants faithful obedience, and it will help to make better men of us. Loyalty to Christ will cause us to obey God's laws."

"One evidence of the highest nobility of character which a human being can possess is obedience to God's laws. It is wonderful the way in which people will world over appreciate and admire obedience."

FOUND DROWNED IN ANOTHER'S CLOTHES

French Village Excited Over the Strange Death of a Girl.

Paris, May 25.—Sartrouville is in a state of excitement over the disappearance of a girl called Marguerite Genest, aged fourteen. A few days ago a girl's dead body was taken from the Seine at Frette and buried there without being identified. The girl's clothes, which were a green and white dress, were found in the Seine. A physician who knew about the disappearance of Marguerite Genest showed the clothes to M. Genest and to the girl's aunt, and both identified them in an unmistakable manner as having belonged to Marguerite.

The body was examined and an examination made, but M. Genest failed to recognize in the corpse the body of his daughter.

Marguerite was blond; the corpse was dark haired. Marguerite, though big for her age, was only fourteen; the girl's dressers assert that the corpse must have been nineteen or twenty.

There are some facts connected with the case which make it all the more complex and mysterious. M. Genest's first wife, by whom he had three children, is dead. After her death he married a Mme. C., by whom he had three more children. He has since broken off relations with Mme. C. and married again.

M. Genest took out a life insurance policy in favor of Mme. C., but when he separated from her he had the policy transferred to his children by his first wife. Of these the youngest, a boy called Andre, disappeared mysteriously like Marguerite some time ago, and has not been heard of since.

M. Genest suggests that Mme. C. has had something to do with Marguerite's disappearance, but Mme. C.'s friends scout the suggestion as ridiculous. Another suggestion is that the

The charge of the Light Brigade was mentioned by Mr. Stuart to show that obedience is admired by the world at large.

Perfect Manhood.

"It is by obedience that we attain to perfect manhood. The man who builds his life upon God's teachings will obey the commands of God, and, apart from creed, he will strive to build the best character possible, which can only be done by living according to God's will. Men, I wish you would take the lesson of obedience from your soldier lives, and put it into your lives as Christians, and as men. And may God help every one of you to stand up for what is right, no matter what the circumstances."

After the service a short return parade was held, the troops marching from the stand out onto the grounds, and there dismissing.

Enjoyed Their Visit.

Although the weather had not been the most pleasant desirable since the Highland laddies came to town, they evidently enjoyed themselves greatly while here, and that they have a warm spot in their hearts for Londoners was plainly shown by the hearty manner in which they responded to the call by their commanding officer, Col. Robertson, for three long cheers and a tiger for the citizens of London. The men removed their bushes and shouted with all their might again and again, until they made their London friends standing around feel that they had made no mistake in doing all in their power to make the visit an enjoyable one for the Scots.

Off for Home.

The six hundred husky Highlanders then fell into line, and marched to the East London station, where their train was awaiting them. Now had come the citizens' turn to cheer. They were right to the minute, and as the train with its load of kilties moved out of the station, cheer upon cheer rent the air, while many expressions of regret at their departure were to be heard from citizens, who felt that such a band of lads would be welcome to come and camp right in their midst just about as long as they wished.

While in this city the Highlanders participated in many amusing scenes, and found themselves in many humorous situations, which will all go to make their visit to the Forest City one never to be forgotten.

Kilties on Wheels.

On Saturday afternoon and evening the Princess roller rink was thrown open to the visitors, who did not fail to patronize it, and apparently took a great deal of amusement out of the roll which they enjoyed. The pipers attended in full force, and played between the regular orchestra numbers. According to the custom at the rink, special "bands" were reserved for the ladies, and whenever these "bands" were announced all the "men in kilts" would promptly respond to the call and glide out upon the floor. Their peculiar attire was not only picturesque, but humorous, in the extreme, as they rolled about the rink.

body found is that of Marguerite, but decomposition in the water has so altered it that M. Genest could not recognize it.

A FLAG INCIDENT

Winnipeg Roughs Tear Down Flag From U. S. Consulate.

Paris, May 25.—Theodore Tilden died in this city at 1:30 this afternoon. He had been unconscious for hours before he passed away.

Mr. Tilden's last illness had been very brief. On Wednesday he took his customary walk, and when he returned he mounted the five flights of stairs to the apartment of Miss Fuller, where he resided. He then complained of fatigue and went to bed. A physician was called in and diagnosed his illness as pneumonia. Mr. Tilden's failure to retain food accentuated his weakness, but at no time did he realize the seriousness of his condition. Only last night he asked for Lord Lytton's "Pausanias," and attempted to read it, but he soon dropped the book and sank into a peaceful sleep, from which practically he never awoke.

A score of friends who heard of Mr. Tilden's illness called to inquire about him, but they were not permitted to see him.

No definite arrangements regarding the funeral have yet been made, except that the service will be held on Monday next in the American Church. Mr. Tilden's children in America will decide whether his body will be interred in Paris or shipped to the United States.
