DEBATE CONCLUDED

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, May 9 .- The formal hear ing on the church union bill before the private bills committee of the House of Commons closed this afternoon with a clash of declarations over the reported utterance of Rev. Dr Gandier regarding "the great national Protestant Church." Rev. W. G. Brown, of Red Deer, witness against the bill, yesterday stated that he heard Dr. Gandler at a meeting of the union committee said: "This is the beginning of a great national Protestant Church. government would dare resist such a church.

Just after finishing the final state-ment for the unionists this afternoon, Rev. George Pidgeon, of Toronto, handed in to the chairman a denial of this utterance by Rev. Dr. Gan-

"I desire to say," said Dr. Gandier in his statement, "that no such state-ment was ever made by me. Mr. Brown has attributed to me something I have never said either in public or private, in committee or

At once George A. Campbell, K.C., of Montreal, counsel for the opponents of the bill, stepped forward and stated that the Rev. Mr. Brown asked permission to file an affidavit in regard to the matter. The permission was at once granted.

The hearings on church union which closed this afternoon, had occupied seven full days of the com-Sum Up Arguments.

The greater part of today has been consumed in argument and counterargument, summing up the case, each side being given an hour for sum-mary and the unionists having half an hour for reply.

The opponents of the bill have claimed that the proposed measure is beyond the powers of the Do-minion parliament, and that the Presbyterian Church courts which agreed to it exceeded their jurisdiction. The advocates of the bill have replied that the regular procedure of the Presbyterian Church, including the barrier act, had been followed throughout union negotiation, and further, that the constitution of the Dominion was complied with by reason of the fact that appropriate legislation was be sought from both Dominion of provincial legis-

The powers of the United Church rather than that of the Presbyterian Church were what W. N. Campbell, K.C., of Montreal, in summing up the case against the church union bill this afternoon before the private bills committee of the House of Commons. In opening Mr. Campbell announced that F. H. Chrysler, K.C., parliamentary agent and counsel for the opponents of the bill, was detained from the commit-tee by indisposition. Mr. Campbell appeared for the Presbyterian Church Association and for the Women's League for the Preservation of the Presbyterian Church.

He stated that Mr. Tilley would have to find somewhere else than in the "rules and forms of procedure" of the Presbyterian Church authority for the power to change its creed. Those "rules and forms" were exclusively internal regulations and did not contain the substantive powers of the church. He claimed that this had been admitted in a report of a committee of the general assembly, of which Rev. Dr. Gandier had been convener and Sir Robert Falconer a member. ### Spinal Adjustment Corrects the Cause of Disease

The Chiropractor considers has been recognized for ages, but there has never been until now a system of correcting human ills, based upon an intelligent recognition of that fact. When man has suffered from some organic trouble, the rule has been to supply a name for the surface play of symptoms, and then to attempt to suppress symptoms individually or collectively as they appeared. Chiropractic has demonstrated to the satisfaction of thousands that nearly all bodily BY READJUSTMENT OF THE BONES OF THE SPINE.

In succeeding lectures an effort will be made to show how various specific parts of the body are affected by pressure upon nerves which control them and how scores of ailments or abnormal conditions of health arise which may be traced directly to nerve pressure in the spine and which may be relieved by readjustment that removes this pressure and allows the affected nerve to resume its function.

Red Bird Shop Will Be Open Until Midnight Next Week.

Quite an innovation in merchandising has been originated in the city. The proprietor of the Bicycle and Motor Sales, G. A. Wenige, has conceived the idea that bicycles can be sold at night as well as in the day time. So next week he is making the big part of his selling day from 6 p.m. till after midnight, his idea being that as Hobby Fair, the Circus and the Better Homes shows are all being held in the vicinity he can capitalize the time and opportunity the crowds will have to introduce his own pet commodity—the bicycle. It will be interesting to watch the results of this departure from regular merchandiing procedure.

The Young Wife Whose Husband Is Still Ruled By His Mother-The Girl Who Is "Too Old" for Her Escort-Problem of the Wife Whose Husband Was for Twelve Years a "Non-paying Guest."

Dear Miss Dix-I have been married since September, and am very much in love with my husband. We live with his parents because he has not had work until recently, and even now he does not make enough to keep a house going. However, he. is offered a position in a city about 200 miles away, which would give him a good salary and a prospect of promotion, but he is going to refuse the chance because he is an only child, and his mother says i will kill her if he leaves her.

My husband has talent, and feel sure that he could succeed it he would break away from his parents and try to stand on his own feet, but he listens to his mother instead of me, and I do not what to do.

A TROUBLED WIFE.

Force your husband into accepting the good situation if you can. What he needs is to have his mother's apron strings cut, and to be thrown out on his own. In that way only can he ever attain his stature as a man. As long as he stays at home he will be a perpetual minor-mother's fair-haired darling boy, but a boy who is under authority, and who has no chance to use his own judgment.

It is very sweet and lovable for a man to be so devoted to his mother that he is willing to forego the prospect of success to stay with her, but it shows a weak streak in him. The men who do worth-while things in the world are not those who cling to their mother's petticoats, and who stay at home sweetening mother's tea for her, and catering to an old woman's whims. They are the men who have the grit to gird up their loins and go after fortune wherever it beckons.

Moreover, when a man is married he is a husband first and a son second, and his duty is to his wife instead of to his mother. It is her future and the future of her children that he has to consider as well as his own, and he has no right to sacrifice them

She is a selfish mother, anyway, who would clip her children's wings and keep them in the home nest, half-starved and poorly feathered, when abroad they could find plenty of nice fat worms for the scratching and in honor of the distinguished artist gay plumage. Real mother love stifles its own pangs at the separation, and sends her sons and daughters forth with cheer and encouragement to make the best they can of their lives.

Of course, the overfond mother will be lonely if her son goes, but she will not die of a broken heart. Millions of other sons leave home to pursue their careers, and there are no undue fatalitics among mothers. And your husband can comfort himself with this reflection, that the very mother who tries to keep him away from this opportunity will be ashamed of him if he stays at home and is a failure. And she will never be done boasting of him if he goes away and makes a success.

So, Worried Wife, buck your husband up into cutting away from the home ties that hinder him, and push him through the door that opportunity is opening for him. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix-I am twenty-nine years old and for the last three years have been going out with a young man one year my senior. He tells me that he likes me, but he impresses upon me the fact that we are not engaged, and he tells other people that he never intends to marry me and that when he settles down he is going to marry a girl about eighteen. If I am too old for him to marry, don't you think I am too old to have him waste my time? TROUBLED.

I certainly do, my dear. Evidently the gentleman is one of A the selfish sort who thinks that a girl has no rights that a man has to consider, and that it is his privilege to amuse himself at

He monopolizes your time. He keeps other men away from you. He fills your heart so full of love for him that there will never be a place in it for another man and then he plans to leave you in the lurch when he has grown tired of you. It is a foxy little scheme for enjoying himself at your expense, but you will deserve to be a sour old maid and the laughing stock of flappers if you let him get away with it. Your play is to drop him before he can drop you. Beat him to it. Have enough pride to let him know that you are not hanging on, waiting to be taken or left, as he sees fit.

Besides, probably the only thing the man needs is a good jolt to wake him up to his real sentiments toward you. Most men think that they adore extreme youth in a girl, but in reality they often find it exremely crude and callow. Generally, sweet eighteen is a terrific bore to a man of thirty. He has got past the giggling, gum-chewing, shrieking, monkey-on-a-stick stage himself, and he cannot adapt himself to it in the artless young creature whose entire conversation is a series of hysterics and who wants to be doing something strenuous and jazzy every moment of the time.

As for a man's settling down with a girl of eighteen, that's absurd. He has to settle up, and it is a wearing process. So I would advise you to send your friend to hunt for his eighteen year-old bride, and my word for it, he will soon come back to the inteiligent, restful companionship of a woman of twenty-ninc. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix-I am a woman of thirty-five and have been married fourteen years. Two years ago my husband left me because I demanded that he pay half of the household expenses. He refused to do that. He wanted me to support the home. He likes a good time and to spend his money on his pleasures instead of supporting his family. We remain on friendly terms, and he calls on me occasionally, but he says he has not had

What would you advise me to do?

Personally I should let him keep on running, but I should gently but firmly suggest that he take his exercise in the opposite direction from where I lived. A husband who has to be supported does not appeal to me as an attractive household pet, but, of course, that is a matter of taste. I read in the paper the other day about a woman who keeps a tame skunk.

However, I would suggest that you keep the gentleeman on a casual calling basis rather than take him back as a non-paying guest. The Peter Pans who never grow up, the philanderers, the butterfly men, are much more agreeable as occasional visitors when they have on their best manners than they are as husbands with whose weaknesses you have to put up

Young Chuck Has a Strange Ride When Farmer Brown's Boy Tows the Log

Despair is a very dreadful thing. I is the feeling which comes in time of seeming danger when there is no hope. The young Chuck, drifting on a floating log on the flooded Green Meadows, was for the first time in despair. He had been frightened, dreadfully frightened ever since the water had driven him out of his home and he had begun his strange jour-ney on that old log. But until now he had had hope, at least a wee bit of hope from the moment he had scrambled up on that old log. He

Hospital Day Recalls the Beauty of Service

Monday is Hospital Day and Hospital Day means Florence Nightingale.

It is London's first experience of a day which has long been observed in other parts of the world. It commemorates the birth of a very great woman whose life was spent in the service of mankind and whose influence has endured for more than a century. Her influence has not merely endured. It has developed. It is represented today in thousands of hospitals where suffering is relieved and where life is given again.

Florence Nightingale virtually gave hospitals to the world. It is fitting indeed that the world should pause to remember the heroine of the Crimea and, remembering her, to reflect on the beauty of unselfish service.

Hospital Day is valuable to London because it provides an opportunity to realize the part played in community life by the city's hospitals.

Few people in London realize that the city has not two hospitals, but seven, and that these institutions each day carry on battle against every type of disease and affliction. London's seven hospitals represent the product of the best brains in the world of science; they represent unselfish service; they represent courage and skill; they represent things worth

Elsewhere on this page will be found a summary indicating the magnitude of the work which London hospitals are doing. The figures are a revelation. Last year for example London's seven hospitals treated over 11,000 patients, nearly 6,000 being admitted to Victoria and St. Joseph's alone.

Of these 11,000 cases there were 5,304 operations performed, or 14 operations every day of the year. Nearly 4,000 of these operations were performed in Victoria and St. Joseph's.

London's hospitals represent a material value in property and equipment of nearly ten million dollars-a pretty valuable

What Seven Hospitals Do For City of London

There are seven hospitals in London: Victoria, St. Joseph's, Westminster, Queen Alexandra, Bethesda, War Memorial, and Ontario, in addition to other institutions of service such as the Victoria Home.

Figures representing the work done by these hospitals provide a surprising revelation of the great service which they render to the city. The following totals are prepared from figures given by the officials of each hospital

Total number of patients treated during past year, 11,378.

Bright Nursery.

Through a double door and along narrow passage one comes to the nursery, a bright, sunlit, green-tinted oom, with little wire cages arranged ound the sides, in which under the small covers, one sees a glimpse of small downy heads and the pink of tiny fingers. The hospital serves the city no better than in the faithful duties of the nurses and staff who are in charge of this quiet, sunny ward, with its flower bowls, its wicker chairs and its isolation from the rest of the hospital.

On the ground floor at the west nd of the building is the small room n which the deep-therapy X-ray machine is housed. Though installed in November, the machine was not ready for use before February, and the first patient treated was in the the first patient treated was in the early days of that month. The beneits accruing from the use of a machine of this type, eveloping two hundred thousand volts, and of producing rays similar in intensity and curative properties to those of radium, are incalculable mankind.

Modern improvements in the way of protection for the operators have made its use absolutely safe, and diseases which have in the past proved beyond successful treatment. Victoria paid $5,000 for the machine and had to wait a long time before it was able to afford it, but medical superintendent of Victoria and the War Memorial Children's termined to have the best that science could offer in the way of equipment, believing that an institution representing the city in the matter of health and the cure of disease should be able to offer the day, both of which are used in Westminister Hospital very largely in the care of certain nervous disease and afflictions. This is a want long felt in London's hospital.

Laundry Equipment.

Nothing is more essential to a hospital than its laundry equipment, and Victoria, with a power laundry industry, finds its insistent accompaniment in nervous troubles, and the hospital of today, as in all other a three-hour service to the wards, is planning a new arrangement that will give greater facilities, quicker service and less duplication of work to the staff. At present there are nine girls and three men in the department who are kept busy eight George Ramsay and is now render-and a half hours a day looking after the work of the hospital. The room of the hospital has been declared by in which the dressings are prepared is close to the laundry and opens on to the storeroom, from which the efficient of its kind and a model to dressings and the clean linen are be copied with benefit by any other issued to the wards.

A department that has a tremendous community value, and one that is supported by the federal, and the provincial governments, as well as by the city of London, is the venereal ward in the west wing of the hospital. Aided by the authority of science, every day giving medicine new grip on the social diseases, this is a department of the modern hospital the benefits of which are only too vaguely realized by the ma-

and there is an increasing use being made of the room and its equipment. As in all operating rooms the smell of ether seems to permeate every-thing, and the chief points of the landscape to the casual eye, are bottles and dressings, instruments in their glass-windowed cases, and a variety of enameled boxes and containers, white and mysterious tainers, white and mysterious.

There are 320 beds in more or less the duties and performance of a constant use in the hospital, and 62 private rooms. The patients are evenly divided as between those using private and semi-private rooms and those occupying the ordinary wards, about 50 per cent being in each class.

The infectious wards, where are placed patients suffering from all the "catching" things are at the back of the main building facing the River Thames. They have large screened windows which are mostly open and through which relatives, standing at a discreet distance, are allowed to converse with patients. The finances of Victoria Hospital are raised in many ways, apart from the federal and provincial and city grants though these give more than half the revenue. Paying patients, students' fees, and donations comprise the remaining sources of in-come. The donations are very small

DEVOTED WOMEN'S CLUB ORGANIZED VICTORIA HOME

The Pioneer Society of Brave Workers Undertook Care of Incurables.

ESTABLISHED IN 1875

On the fifteenth day of March, 1875, a number of devoted women banded themselves together under the name of "The Women's Christian Association of the City of London."

Their avowed object was to care for the poor and sick, the lonely and the homeless. This was, it is believed, the first organized women's society of this city. Of that little band of beginners, none are living now; the last to leave was the first president, Mrs. Gregsten. After varying activities, such as a home for the aged, an infants' home, afterward taken over by the Salva-tion Army, and organized work among the poor, it was considered advisable to establish a home for a certain class of people not otherwise provided for, namely, those afflicted with some disease pronounced in-So the Home for Incurables.

Present Quarters Inadequate For Today's Demands-Hospital History Told.

ESTABLISHED IN 1888

St. Joseph's Hospital had its beginning in this city in 1888. That the Sisters of St. Joseph had the courage to undertake the work was due to the advice of Dr. O'Reilly, who was then government inspector of hospitals and harities for Ontario. When making his annual visit of inspection at Mount Hope Orphanage that year, Dr. O'Reilly strongly urged the community to purchase a suitable site and build a hospital. The opportunity to follow Dr. O'Reilly's advice soon presented itself and the present site on which was a fine residence was purchased at a cost of $7,500. The house was re modelled and adapted to hospital purposes, the present buildings being added at different times as finances permitted. LITTLE ONES SUPREME

The Maternity Hospital's Very Atmosphere Breathes Motherly Care and Efficiency.

Among the hospitals of the city, Bethesda has a unique function. Its walls, its shining equipment, its efficient staff move and have their being solely to minister to woolly blankets whose contents are sooner or later to develop into our men of affairs. The very center of the universe is a movable rack upon which repose rows of bables, wrapped al-ternately in blue and pink blankets, and each bearing upon a ridiculous-ly tiny wrist the tag of its identity, and the name of the mother for whom it is usually to be found crying lustily.

Since the Bethesda Hospital is operated by the Salvation Army, its officers are captains or lieutenants. stern titles which suggest a martial severity and vigor. But with an army of babies, the title to bear weight simply does not exist. An adjutant is a kind soul whose eyes are meant solely to mirror the charmingly toothless smiles of infancy. Captains and figurements report each day to pay heed to unexpected commands which have their origin in the my-sterious recesses of a baby's brain. In short, the privates of Bethesda Hospital are the commanders. The babies rule, and their blue and white nursery is the headquarters of all law. They are the axis of the institotion, and doctors, nurses and anxious waiting mothers must re-ive about them. For its especial object, the Bethesda Maternity Hospital is beautifully-equipped. The bright, immaculately-equipped. The roomy wire baskets, which form beds for the babies are ranged along the wall, with a door opening onto a second-story veranda, and with spacious windows, the nursery, with regard to light and air, is perfection itself.

So Adjutant Holland, matron of the hospital, informs her visitors. And So Adjutant Holland, hospital, informs her visitors. And hospital, informs her visitors. And thus we find that the nursery has recently been done over and given new equipment. The room was redecorated and painted. In the majority of cases constipation is present, and the complexion takes on a greenish-yellow pallor. The treatment is quite easy and simple. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just the tonic to remedy this wretched state of health. They act directly upon the blood, and as it becomes rich and pure, strength and activity returns, the glow of health comes to the cheeks, and soon the trouble will disappear and good health follow. I took dizzy and fainting spells, had no ambition whatever, and did not care to go about. I was in this condition for nearly a year. I had treatment from two doctors; but did not regain my strength, so my mother, who was very uneasy about me, decided I should try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After using the pills for a while I felt somewhat better, and continued taking them until I had used about a dozen boxes, when I was again well and strong. Paranoic Delusions the Gateway to Tragedy

Steadman, Who Murdered McClure, a Music Teacher, an Incurable Victim of Dread Mental Disease— Not All Paranoiacs Are Dangerous — Jealous and Suspicious Folks Are in Peril, Likewise Very Vain -Many Paranoiacs Become Tramps.

By F. G. GRIFFIN

NE Saturday afternoon, just two months ago, William A. Steadman stepped forward to meet Herbert McClure as the latter turned into a crowded Toronto business thoroughfare, spoke a few words to him, fired a shot, killed him instantly, and walked calmly away. He was arrested without resistance a few minutes later within a few hundred yards of the spot where the dead man lay.

McClure was a teacher of music who had previously given lessons to Steadman's children. He was a man of irreproachable character and good standing in the community. Friends and acquaintances testified to the high repute in which they held him, declaring his record blameess and his morals above reproach. Such was he man whom Steadman shot under the delusion that he had interfered in the domestic happiness of his home, citing apparently circumsnow and the sound of kissing in the dark.

At the trial for murder, two weeks ago, half dozen alienists gave evidence to the effect that Steadman was a paranoic laboring under the influence of baseless suspicions and ungrounded delusions. His counsel pleaded an "irresistible impulse"—an expression which the judge scored and which is not compatible with paranoia. And the jury acquitted him of murder "on the grounds of insanity."

The judge, Mr. Justice Lennox, disagreed with the eminent medical authorities and declared his belief that Steadman was sane within the meaning of the law and ought to be held responsible in law for the killing and found guilty of murder. However, he bowed to the jury's verdict and committed Steadman to an asylum indefinitely

What is paranoia, this form of insanity which caused Steadman to harbor delusions for months which finally ended in the killing of an innocent end inoffensive man?

According to Dr. aHrvey Clare, noted Canadian alienist, it is a definite and clearly defined mental disease and Steadman is suffering from sticking a knife in me." it in an absolutely definite form. Steadman will never get better. He will probably grow worse. The fact that the object of his delusions is dead will not cure him. The delusions will remain. Other delusions will be added to them as the vears go by.

"His usefulness in the world is over," declared Dr. Clare. "He is broken down mentally. This was no irresistible impulse affair. It was caused by a disease of the brain which Steadman has in its worst form. It is known that he resisted the urgings of his diseased mind for two or three years. Then came the time when he simply made up his mind in his own disordered way that the best thing he could do would be to shoot and kill his fancied enemy. He was acting according to the dictates of his perverted thoughts and following the natural sequence of his twisted reason. This was no brainstorm case or example of irresistible impulse. In no sense of the word is it comparable to the Harry Thaw case. Steadman was the victim of a serious, regular, well-identified mental disease which in his case followed the exact lines it follows in very many cases."

Parallel Case to Steadman's

HE very day after the Steadman killing -curred Dr. Glare was consulted about another paranoiac who had a gun and was determined to kill a man whom he suspected of the policemen. of ruining his home. The tragedy of this case was that the principals in the case were aged. The man and his wife had been happily married for forty-five years. They had grandchildren. The wife who figured in the man's suspicions was a gentle, feeble, white-haired old lady, incapable of wrongdoing except in the cracked mind of her old husband.

His delusions were exactly parallel to Steadman's. Fortunately a tragedy was averted. Care hoboes, wanderers, according to Dr. Clare. They and watchfulness will prevent its occurring. But' believe themselves persecuted in their jobs. a sorrowful family will have to put up with the tragedy of aged paranoia until death ends it. For there is no hope of recovery.

"There is no recovery," declares Dr. Clare. You can't cure it even if you recognize it early. I've seen them go out from the hospital apparently improved, but they invariably come back. Every paranolac is a paranolac for ever."

Paranoia is defined as a chronic mental disease, of which systematized delusions with or without hallucinations of the senses are the prominent characteristics. The delusions may take the form of ideas of persecution or of grandeur and ambition. These may exist sepan ambitious character.

cesses of the subject and become fused with his personality. As all such delusions are coherently formed there is no manifest mental confusion in their expression. So that a paranoiae might appear rational and convincing and, to the layman, in no wise insane.

Conquer Your Suspicions

CUSPICIONS are usually the firm symptoms Suspections are doubled to Dr. Clare. Not that every suspicious person is a paranoiac, though some of them may have what is known as a paranoiac mental condition and escape the second state of the disease in which the suspistantial facts about chloroform, footsteps in the cions become fixed and delusions appear. In the second stage come these delusions, usually of persecution, or, as in the case of Steadman, of jealousy that leads to murder. A third stage of paranoia possibly succeeding the first two stages is the stage of grandiose delusions in which the victims frequently regard themselves as very great personages, kings and such, or the descendants of exalted folk whose address and qualities

Dr. Clare pointed out that in considering mental trouble it is very hard to draw dividing There is no dividing line between the normal and the slightly eccentric; and so on up through all the steps and gradations until the absolutely insane are reached.

But one of the first symptoms of paranoia. according to Dr. Clare, is an exalted idea of one's own importance. A man begins to feel that he is not being recognized at his real worth; that he does not get the respect or reward he deserves. Again, it must be emphasized that every grouch one knows is not necessarily a paranoiac.

The next step of such mental processes is Why don't they recognize my worth? They're jealous of me. They're down on me. They want my job. They're knocking me. They're

"This outlook is very common," Dr. Clare nted out. "It denotes a paranoiac mentality. The subjects are not necessarily insane. I often tell my students that there are a couple of them in every group and then derive a certain amount of amusement out of watching them look at one another quietly to decide which of them the description fits."

But from this stage the descent is easy, especially if the subject is run down in health. Dr. Clare told of a woman he knew who came to him and complained that everyone was against her, that her friends did not treat her properly, that they were going outside and talking about She declared men on the streets had been told about her and that they were constantly laughing at her. Paranoiac suspicions and delusions of a common nature without a shadow of reason but absolutely real to the unfortunate

Said Police Laughed at Her

WOMAN came to Dr. Clare's hospital A for throwing carbolic acid in a policeman's face. She declared that everywhere she went the police laughed at her. They watched her incessantly. When she passed one on the street he whistled or made a sign to another down the street, who watched her as she came up and then signed in turn to the next one. Finally, as in the case of Steadman, she came to the conclusion that the only way to end this persecution, which was absolutely real to her, was by attacking one

Not all paranoics reach the asylum or develop a stage of the malady which make them potentially dangerous. Many men and women, abnormally jealous and suspicious, go through life in the bosoms of their families who put up with them and shelter them without realizing that they are really suffering from a mental disease. Such people may never reach the stage of active delusions which may lead to tragedy. A great many paranoics become tramps, They imagine people are against them. So they leave the town. They seek a fresh place to start. But the suspictons and delusions arise again. So they flee again, and again, always away from the enemy that exists only in their perverted thoughts. In the asylums of Canada there are five times as many male paranoics as female. The woman, for social reasons, cannot pull up stakes and escape from the imaginary wrongs as the man can, so she comes finally, not always, of course, to the asylum.

The delusion stage is a tragic one of mental suffering, real suffering, to the victim. Dr. Clare knew a certain man who did not eat a meal for a whole week because of the delusion stely or run concurrently in the same indi- that someone was trying to poison him. Freor delusions may gradually change in quently he went into restaurants and was about olarse of a patient's life from a persecutory to begin a meal when he imagined he saw a wink passed and an attempt to slip something into In paranoia erroneous beliefs or convictions his food. #### Thought Man Spat at Him

HERE was a well-bred Englishman in a Canadian/ hospital who was a paranoias. A cultured man, widely traveled, who taught Dr. Clare to play chess and with whom the superintendent delighted to talk. Perfectly normal, one would say, unless when in the grip of his delusions that people were against him. One day, chatting to him in the corridor, Dr. Clare remarked to him, he seemed so rational: "Why don't you get rid of those delusions that people are making fun of you? You've got to get rid of them and then you'll be all right?"

The man glanced down the corridor and became white and trembling. "Did you see that?" he exclaimed, pointing.

"See what?" questioned the doctor. "That man came out of the room down there, looked across at me and spat at me. He spat

The man in question was nearly three hundred feet away. He had come out of a room where he had been smoking, and as he passed a spitoon had casually spitten in it. He had no thought of the other inmate in mind. But his action, to the paranoic, was a deliberate insult. This perhaps will help to explain to the reader how the paranoic may build delusions on slight, actual actions which have not in any sense of the word the significance which the diseased mind of the paranoic gives them.

A man remarked casually to Steadman one day two or three years ago that if it were his is largely based on personal vanity or an exagcase he would not have a male music teacher gerated idea of self. #### Broke in Neighbor's House

CERTAIN prominent professional man had not been suspected of paranoia until one day he broke in the door of a neighbor's house, declaring that two policemen were concealed there who were plotting against the happiness of his wife. After that he went about with the delusion that the police were pouring electricity into his brain to kill him. He even wrote a letter to the mayor of the city demanding that he make the police stop.

These hallucinations of taste, sense and smell which lead the victims to believe that attempts are being made to poison them or gas them or pour electricity into them are very common. They send them with their food to chemists for analysis; cause them sometimes to seal up hermetically every opening into their rooms to prevent the entry of obnoxious fumes; or make them set their bed on glass castors with a view to insulating electric currents.

Paranoia, it will be seen from the foregoing, which egotism plays a big part. The former kaiser must have had a paranoic tinge in his

As a result the stage of potential violence passes and the patient becomes a happy individual usually filled with grandiose thoughts of power and personality, imagining himself Frederick the Great or Julius Caesar, and trying to live up to the role with which his crazy imaginings have invested him, uttering commands to visionary vassals or giving away half of his kingdom with a mere wave of the hand. This stage is usually a harmless stage that approximates to senile dotage. The victims are often likeable and amusing in a pitiable, pathetic way.

The Empress of Heaven

*DR. CLARE has known scores who have reached this state, the last in the tragedy of the paranoic. Out in the asylum is an old lady who has thus passed the acute stages of paranoia and has reached this state of deranged peace which comes like a haven after a quartercentury of ugly, soul-tearing storm. She is a sweet old woman now who calls herself, let us say, Empress of Heaven. She wears a crown and a red regalia of state round her shoulders. She knows all the enemies the world possesses. But she has their measure. She has great She issues orders for instant execution in a most imperious tone. "Pull down all the buildings from here to Main street," she may command Dr. Clare when he comes to see her; and expects to be obeyed. Poor, crackbrained old lady. Luckily she forgets what she

Ten per cent, of the insane in the Ontario asylums are paranoics. At Guelph are several who have killed or tried to kill. One of them is a Walkerton man who went out one morning with a gun and shot his next-door neighbor. Then there was an old fellow who lived in a slum. Joe Jasmine, who went out one day, crossed the road and shot a neighbor. A parallel case. They all follow very similar lines. course of the delusions, and the result, run along certain very definite paths. Jasmine grew more and more crazy with delusions until his death in Guelph a short time ago.

The paranoic in the delusion stage is always potentially dangerous, according to Dr. Clare, though not one out of a hundred reach the point of actual violence or attack. Most of them retain a certain self control up to a point. They fight to tetain the sane reactions.

A strange thing, Dr. Clare said, was, "All the nicest looking patients in here (the hospital for the insane) are paranoics. Their vanity is responsible. They are important people. take care of themselves. They are clean, well kept, well dressed. The best workmen we have are paranoics."

Paranoics cause many a tragedy that has no element of violence in it. A man declared once that he had lived on practically every street in Toronto. One year he had moved twenty-two times. The reason was his wife. She was a paranoic, though probably he never knew it until he talked to Dr. Clare, when she was finally committed to the asylum. All he knew was that she was a queer, suspicious woman who was always imagining things, fancying insults, raising rows. The family would scarcely have moved into a house before there was a rumpus that shocked the street, a terrible row with the grocer's boy because of some supposed act on his part or a scene because the neighbor next across the fence. All imaginary, of course, but none the less real to the victim and to her unfortunate, long-suffering husband.

Critical Period of Adolescence

D.R. CLARE said that the theory is held now by some specialists that much paranoia has its inception in the critical period of adolescence in boys, though its full development in the later stages does not generally come before the thirties. Everyone knows the difficult time most boys pass through in their early 'teens when they are the victims of self-consciousness, when their hands are always in the way and their feet are awkward, when they blush on the slightest occasion, when they always think people are talking of them, the pompous egotistical period of Booth Tarkington's Willie Baxter.

It is a period of interest to the psychologists, Boys are in a mental state often which has a paranoical tendency. A little harshness, brutal teasing, lack of understanding on the part of elders may throw a strain on mental equipment which will bear sad and terrible results in years to come. Of course, the normal, healthy-minded boy will gradually throw off his morbidity and self-consciousness and develop the sane balanced equilibrium of the ordinary adult. But in a num ber of cases it is reasonable to suppose that at this time the seeds of paranoia are sown.

Not all paranoics are approaching early middle age when the outbreak comes. Recently a young fellow of twenty-four or twenty-five shot a man he had never seen before in front of a theatre in Fort William. There was no cause except that the paranoic had got into his head the delusion that all Englishmen were in league to destroy him. The man he shot was an English-To his crazed brain he was an enemy whom he had to destroy. "These d— Englishmen are all making fun of me," he declared after the shooting. "I've got one of them and I'll get

Dr. Clare has gone about on his guard lest a paranoic should carry out a twice-expressed threat to kill him. This man had been in the hospital for a time when Dr. Clare had been under the necessity of testing his blood. patient had got the delusion as a result that Dr. Clare had ruined him physically. He came up to Dr. Clare one day, white and angry, and hissed in his ear, "A life for a life. You ruined

His friends took him out of the asylum. One day Dr. Clare met him, and again he approached and uttered his angry threat of a life for a life. The doctor walked warily for a time, and was rather relieved in his mind when the patient returned to the asylum. A man or a woman, remember, cannot be committed to an asylum unless two doctors certify that he or she is danger-That is why so many paranoics are not definitely identified as such until they actually commit some violence which may have fatal re

Dr. Clare has had a woman who has been patient and has been released come into his office as to a friend to ask his advice about shooting a man about whom she had delusions. The revolver which she gave up to him is still in his office as a reminder of the experience.

Fled From Imaginary Persecution

FRE is a strange case of a bright young woman which Dr. Clare related and which illustrates effectively the course and progress of paranoia. She developed the delusion that a lawyer was trying to ruin her because she had spurned his love, which probably was never of fered to her. She would obtain a position, only to imagine when she was there a day or so that the lawyer had whispered things about her which made everyone smile about her and talk behind her back. So she would leave, only to imagine the same thing over and over again.

Finally, as in the case of the men mentioned earlier in the article who become tramps to es cape from affliction, she decided to flee from the persecution. Wearing a heavy veil to hide her face, she started out one night for Montreal. was in the winter time, and when she arrived at the Montreal station it was still dark.

She stood with her grip beside her on the station platfrom, her face covered with the heavy veil While she was standing there, she related afterwards, a man came along, pretended to fall over the grip and lay on the platform so that he could look up under her veil in order to find out her identity.

Alarmed, in her mentally unhinged state, she determined to flee further, and immediately took a train for Ottawa. There she took a room which she did not leave for four days even to obtain meals. On the fourth day she glanced out of the window to the street, and the first person she saw, or imagined she saw, was a Toronto man, whom she put down as an emissary of the lawyer whom she considered her enemy So she came back to Toronto with the determination to shoot the latter as her only way out from such relentless persecution.

The whole affair had been a tragic figment of her disordered imagination, but none the less real for all that.

"Certain people are born with a weakness of judgment," declared Dr. Clare. "They allow their suspicions to run wild. Finally they cannot control them. Delusions follow. And then frequently tragedy. It is a common delusion of such people that the Catholics are after them. Or the Masons. Or the police. You find all sorts of delusions of that nature as well as those of the Steadman type which centre on a particular

Electric Currants

AN old lady from the country, on seeing an electric light for the first time in her life, was so amazed that she could not resist entering the shop-a large grocery store-and asking the assistant about it.

"I say, mister, how do you make that big light of yours? I'm tired of paying for paraffin.' "Oh, it is caused by electric currents," was he answer.

"Oh, is it?" she replied. "Then I'll buy a pound. When they're done for lighting they'll come in handy for a pudding."-Tit-Bits.

Forgot His Manners

AN Irish fireman, rescuing a woman at a blaze, lost his hold near the bottom of the ladder and landed heavily with the woman on top of him. A doctor, hastily summoned, pronounced Pat sound, though badly bruised.

"You are a brave man," said the doctor. "Brave, maybe, but no gintleman," replied Pat, rubbing his injuries, "or I'd have let the lady go first."-Pearson's Weekly.

"WETS" ARE READY "DRYS" CONFIDENT

Both Sides Busy Getting Ready for Coming Battle on the O.T.A.

N the prohibition headquarters of Ontario there is peace and quiet.

In the wet headquarters of Ontario there

In a fine old residence on Bloor street just east of Yonge, which has been altered into offices, sits Rev. John Bailey, secretary of the Prohibition Union of Ontario, amid the substantial surroundings of an old library, books, folders, maps and charts. He seems to represent something permanent, lasting, unhurried.

In a downtown office building, amid clattering typewriters, heaps of fyles and card indexes. in close, cramped quarters, sits C. D. Boyce, secretary of the Moderation League of Ontario.

He is hard to see. He is engaged. He has been out of town all week. Two men deputies have to be passed before you can get at him. They weed out your requests to see the boss. If it isn't important, would you drop in some other time?

The typewriters clatter. A man is working hard at a city directory culling names and addresses. A girl is swiftly enveloping letters.

If the Rev. John Bailey's offices are like the headquarters of a wide and benevolent and permanent institution, Mr. Boyce's offices are a cross between an election campaign headquarters and an advertising agency office.

In the one there is assurance and calm. In the other is high-pressure and determination.

"I have every confidence," says Rev. John Bailey, "and I think I reflect the opinion of the entire committee, that Premier Ferguson will not bring on a vote on the prohibition question without ample and sufficient warning."

"What do you regard as a fair time in which to prepare for a vote on the O.T.A.?" he is asked "Three months at the least," says Mr. Bailey. 'Not less. Three months will give all concerned

a proper period for the presentation of the facts of the case." "What do you think would be the likeliest month for the vote?"

"I think October would be the ideal month. The farmers would be freest, the city folk would all be home from their summer outings." "You do not feel that Premier Ferguson is in any way beholden to the wet vote and that to dismiss the obligation he might give the inside limit of thirty days' notice of a vote?" "I certainly do not. I think that whatever

Premier Ferguson's private views of the prohibition question, or that of his colleagues, he would give, in so important a question as this, at least ninety days' warning."

"What state of preparation is the new Proibition Union in?" he was asked. "Our committees are being organized," said Mr. Bailey, "and the basis of organization for

"We are ready for a vote now," replies Mr. Boyce. "But we don't know when it is coming any more than the next fellow. Some say it will the good ones: come this June, some say in September or October, others say in the spring."

"What warning do you feel you should get of the vote?'

"We don't require any. We are ready at any time."

"The Prohibition Union is confident that there will be at least ninety days' notice." "We are confident of nothing. We are prepared now. Our position is that the public has had two or three years in which to make up its mind on the subject, and all the preparation and campaigning in the world will make little difference to that opinion solidly arrived at. On that assumption, we are prepared for a vote right now."

"You have done some advertising?"

"For funds-yes. And we got gratifying returns. Certain business men have advised us that while they will not contribute to our funds, they have ceased to contribute to the prohibition funds. We have a thoroughly well-kept filing system in which we preserve the opinions of people on the O.T.A., and there is a heavy weight of opinion, we believe, amongst business men, that the O.T.A. must go. We are confident that the time is ripe for a further vote on the

Radio Sets Now Made in Many Forms of Furniture

URNITURE radio, so called, is becoming more and more popular. Virtually all the leading radio manufacturers are now turning out radio sets made in the form of attractive furniture. Thus the self-contained and attractive furniture radio set is finding its way into the living room of the finest home, instead of being relegated to some odd corner as in the past, when it required mussy storage battery, a mass of "B" batteries, and a maze of unsightly wires. The furniture radio move is an excellent one and will no doubt do more to give radio a definite place in the home than anything else. How ever, there is the ever-present danger that furniture radios may become more furniture and less radio. That is to say, there are already ample signs that the radio end of some furni ture radio sets is not what it should be. Too much attention is paid to making the set look attractive, and too little to radio details. Furthermore, the wish is often expressed by the public that the manufacturers of the highest grade and most efficient radio sets put their highest type radio sets into furniture radio form. After all, it is the radio set proper, and not the beautiful Jacobean period cabinet, that brings real pleasure into the home.

NOT "GAY KING ALFONSO" YOU HAVE READ ABOUT

Business-Like Ruler, Who Could Be Elected President Any Day by an Overwhelming Popular Vote

T HEY say that even a cat can look at a king.

But on the authority of a first-hand witness, Alexander P. Moore, United States ambassador to the Spanish court at Madrid, the palace pussy gets no more kick out of her proverbial prerogative than the felines of any other well regulated households.

The sensational stories you may have been reading about the capers of King Alfonso at Deauville and Biarritz are quite untrue, says the ambassador, who was the husband of the late Lillian Russell.

"They can't be," Mr. Moore tells Robert C. Washburn in an interview for the New York World Magazine. "The king wouldn't have time for that sort of thing, even if he wanted to. He works too hard. He works in his office just like anybody else. And he puts in a good day, work. After the game I was chatting with him. to have her innermost secrets artistically vivi-'I am sorry I was late,' he said. 'I always hate to be late, but I was kept by my work at the office until after five.' He very seldom is late. "If Alfonso were not king of Spain he would be the best young business man of Europe. He is a very real power in Spain.

"After I had been in Spain some time the queen mother asked me one day, 'How do you like my boy?' It was just exactly like any other mother asking the question. I told her I liked before. him very much. 'I am glad,' she said, 'I am glad when people like him. I had such a responsibility. He was born a king, six months after his father died. I knew that at eighteen he would take over the actual responsibilities of government, that he would have to have the maturity and wisdom of twice his age. I had to educate him for this, but I didn't want to injure his health. I don't think it has.'

"He is over six feet tall and very athletic. He loves sports. He is a crack motor car driver, the best horseman I have ever seen, and a fine polo player. He doesn't let them treat him easy when he plays either. He wouldn't play with anyone who wouldn't try to run him down if he could. And he does the same himself. When he plays, he plays hard.

When King Alfonso goes about he never has a bodyguard. There are no motorcycle policemen to run ahead and clear a path, or keep the small boys from running alongside to catch a glimpse of him. There is nothing special on his car except a small crest, just as everyone has over there. The crowds make way nevertheless. He has no secret service men to follow and proteet him, as we always have for functionaries in this country. One day when I was with him I remarked to him on the subject.

'What do you mean?' he asked. should I have anyone to protect me? I have two hands and two eyes and two legs.' He has tremendous physical courage.

"You see, as I know him he is perfectly simple and human. Alfonso was born to rule Spain, and he thinks of the whole country just as his family. He has an affection for his people and he works for them. His connection with the people is a much closer one than the connection of our people with officialdom in this country. He is king, but he goes about with less ostentation than one of our mayors. You take off your hat when you see the king, but he takes off his hat to you, too. It is the custom in Spain for and that sort of thing.

"It is quite unfair to Spain to talk of a change in government such as they had there last fall as a revolution. It is more comparable to an election over here. It is simply a change of ministers. The power of the king remains. He is immensely popular. No party would stand a chance for a minute if it were against the king. It is certain that if he should run for and how much do you need?" president, no one would have a chance against

"We associate violence with revolutions. We call Primo de Rivera a dictator. He is really a premier. There was no violence in Spain last fall. I asked Primo de Rivera one day what was the significance of this martial law that didn't seem to have changed the life of Madrid any. He said, 'Well, we just let the people know that we could enforce it if we wanted to."

AMERICAN POLITENESS SEEMS GOOD TO MAGUIRE

You Couldn't Want Anything More Obliging Than a Buffalo Policeman

ALFRED MAGUIRE, former mayor of Toronto, is of the opinion that American politeness at its best is fairly good. To a group of motoring men who were discussing their experiences the other day the exmayor related an incident that featured one of his visits to Buffalo.

"You couldn't want anything more obliging than a Buffalo policeman," said Mr. Maguire. "I drove over there one day, and when I wanted to park my car on one of the main streets I could not find a place where there was room and where there were no 'No Parking' signs. I saw a police officer standing nearby and remarked to him that it seemed rather hard to get a parking spot. 'That's right,' he said. 'It does seem pretty crowded. 'But we'll see what we can do.' Then he took up the 'No Parking' sign and moved it far enough up the street to let me get my car in. You can't beat that for

A GUILTY CONSCIENCE

ONE of the best of the many broadcasting stories that are floating about just now was told recently at a social gathering by Mrs. Winston Churchill.

A flapper and her best boy were seated alone together on the sofa, listening-in for the first time with the latter's new wireless set. Nor did the fact that both of them were wearing their headphones prevent them from snatching an occasional kiss. Just as they were in the middle of one particularly long-drawn-out embrace came the title of the next song: "Take those lips away."

"Oh, George!" gasped the girl, as she drew back, blushing. "Oh, George! They can see us!"

Duse, Spurned, Still Acclaimed D'Annunzio as Priest of Beauty

Having Squandered the Great Tragedienne's Fortune, the Prince - Poet Cast Her Off -Made Her Feel Old-Vivisected Her in a Novel.

N Italy, Gabriele D'Annunzio has been made a prince. In America, they have put the body of Eleonora Duse on a liner bound for home. "One time he was late in coming out to Everything she had-name, youth and fortuneplay polo. Duse, as a matter of fact, never grew bitter towards D'Annunzio. Even on the last tragic tour of America to retrieve her diminished fortune, she emphasized that. "I have no bitterness towards him now. Love is worth its price," she told Prosper Buranelli, who reports his interview in the New York World Magazine. "There is regret for the parting, but no regret for the love. It is over, but the memories are left. Gabriele D'Annunzia and I are still united in the bonds of the spirit. To me he is still the sublime master, the flame of talent, the priest of beauty."

That is how she regarded him even a few days before her death, the homage of the creator toward the thing created. For it was the enamored and worshipful Duse who carried D'Annunzio to the greatest height of his glory.

When she met him she was in her mature years, at the height of her reputation. For twenty years she had been famous as-a tragedienne. Only Sarah Bernhardt disputed with her the crown of supreme eminence in the theatre. D'Annunzio had from his earliest years been a poet and novelist of precocious reputa-But he had never written plays. It was Duse who turned his mind to dramatic writing. She staged his works with everything lavish that could make them successful. She acted in them herself. She backed them with the large fortune she had earned, even when they gained no favor with the public. She even acted popular things in her repertoire to make more money to devote to the plays of her lover.

Even a more fiendish form of cruelty he had in store. "It was that he made her feel old," says Alice Nielsen, the celebrated prima donna, who played in the same theatre and lived for a

Glories in Hurting Women

LL through his life D'Annunzio has seemed A to glory in hurting women. There is the case of his wife, the infatuated Princess di Gallese, whose fortune he squandered, before he cast her aside.

For twenty years Duse, for her part, brooded in nun-like seclusion. She felt that no blessing could ever come to her again. But with her American tour, she seemed to have recaptured her youth. Money and acclamations were showered upon her, before the end came so unexpectedly at Pittsburg from the results of a cold.

Gabriele D'Annunzio

It was the war that gave D'Annunzio his and novels became his daring air raids. It was perhaps his oratory that brought Italy into the war on the side of the allies. It was D'Annunzio who took possession of Fiume in the name of his countrymen, in open defiance of his

But he is still the same D'Annunzio, the most eccentric mass of contradictions on the continent. One day he is burning his sixteen military decorations on his own rock-hewn altar underneath which lies the body of his own unknown soldier. The next day he is seeking the lost fountains of youth by means poses to continue doing so. "You must not laugh when the great maestro of Doctor Voronoff, whose secret visits are HERE were no medical laws sixty years ago, when Dr. J. S. Black, the grand old man of medicine in Nova Scotia, began to practice. Registration, when it was made compulsory at last, in 1873, had to be verbatim, he says in some racy reminiscences in the April bulletin of the Medical Society of Nova Scotia. "I well remember the first medical sign I ever saw in Nova Scotia," he writes, "I think it was in 1862, at my first visit to the province, riding towards Wolfville, on the old post road. I saw a small unpainted house, on a window of which was a shutter, which I thought was a large box cover, and on this was painted, in good sized black letters, 'T. R. Jones, M.D.' I never saw the man, but he must have been a character, from the stories told of him. He was shrewd and Irish and had the very pleasant wit of his countrymen.

"One story is as follows: Someone told him that he must get a license from the medical board at Halifax, or he would be fined. Straightway he posted to Halifax for his license. He was referred there to Dr. John Slayter. The doctor saw that he had a character before him, and humored him. 'Mr. Jones,' he said, 'I understand you have a large number of cases of diphtheria in your practice.' 'I have that,' said Jones. Then the doctor asked, 'Would you tell me what is your treatment of this disease; I understand you have much success in its treatment?' 'Ah,' said Jones, in good, rich brogue, and putting his thumb to his nose, 'and wouldn't you like to know?" So ended the examination for license."

HOSE Ponsonbys! London has held up its hands at their doings so long and so often that they have grown weary, but they had to be elevated again recently when it became known that Miss Elizabeth Ponsonby, daughter of Arthur Ponsonby, under-secretary of state for foreign affairs, has been appearing as a mannequin in fashionable dress parades here, and pro-

Arthur A. W. H. Ponsonby, a kinsman of the Earl of Bessborough, was once a page to Queen Victoria, and was at one time in the diplomatic service. Now he is known as one of the ablest men in the Labor contingent in parliament. It was he who electrified his friends last year by introducing a bill to abolish hereditary titles in Great Britain.

His daughter, Elizabeth, is a grand-daughter of the late Sir Hubert Parry, Bart., and of Lady Maud Parry, sister of the fourteenth Earl of Pembroke. In 1922 she startled her friends in exclusive social circles by joining the Compton Comedy Company at the Nottingham Repertory Theatre, and further surprised them by sticking to her chosen career and winning a modest suc-

Clemenceau, with whom he was, until the war, almost continuously at loggerheads, in making a comparison between him and Briand, is reported to have said: 'Poincare knows everything, and understands nothing; Briand understands everything, and knows nothing."

"M. Poincare is of medium build, with a high, smooth forehead and penetrating eyes. Work is the only thing that matters to him, and he gives his whole life to it. No form of games or sport appeals to him, and even when, as president or the French republic, he was entertaining the king of Spain, at Rambouillet, he declined to take part in the shooting party which had been organized for the amusement of the Spanish sovereign because he did not like to participate in the slaughter of birds, which he loved. Similarly, when he returned the visit by going to Spain, where he had a considerable political success, he would not attend a bull-fight which had been arranged in his honor. He has a great love of animals, and history says that two days before he was elected president of France he paid a special visit to his brother, Lucien, because his pet goldfish was ill. I am glad to say that he managed to diagnose and cure the fish's illness.

"He had many interesting experiences during the time that he was practising at the Bar. He was the favorite advocate of all who were in any way connected with literature, and on one occasion he defended Jules Verne, the famous author of 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea. However, so far as he was concerned, I suppose the greatest case that he was ever engaged upon was the one in which he was acting for a lady client, when he marshaled his arguments with such skill that he not only won the case but the lady's heart into the bargain. His charming wife fires his imagination with just as much zest to-day as she did when he fought for her and won in the battle in the law courts.

"He is a great reader and a great thinker, and when he talks he talks perhaps not volubly as is the way of many of his compatriots but with great force and directness.

"Albert Capus, the French litterateur, once described his personality as being based upon temperament dominated by mind. As far back as 1792, when an ancestor of his was defending a certain town against the Duke of Brunswick, he caused a wooden horse, with a box of hay in front of it, to be erected upon the ramparts of the town. He then sent a message to the enemy, who were pressing him hard, to the effect that he would surrender when the horse had eaten all the hay in the box. It is this same spirit which dominates M. thousand dollars a day! That's what it has been costing the taxpayers of British Columbia to feed their White Elephant, the Pacific Great Eastern Railway. The figure includes operating losses, interest, and depreciation, but not provision for

The Pacific Great Eastern is a legacy of the boom days. It starts at the little Indian village of Squamish, forty miles north of Vancouver, wanders through 350 miles of mostly unproductive country, and comes to rest in the cow town of Quesnel, Cariboo district.

Trains run twice a week in summer, and also in winter, if the snow slides, rock slides, mud slides, and wash-outs are not too bad. The average speed is well under twenty miles an hour, and occasionally there are only two or three passengers at a time in the coaches.

To provide this service, an investment of $42,349,527.38 had been made, up to June 30, 1923, according to the government's official fig-

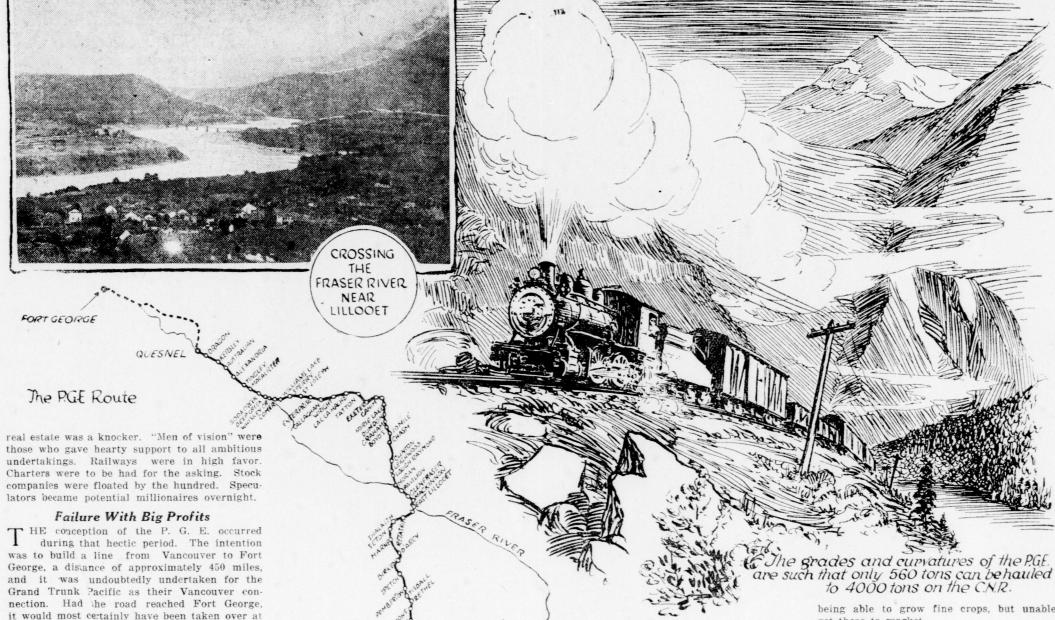

As it exists to-day, the Pacific Great Eastern is in two distinct and unconnected sections. There is a short line running from North Vancouver to the summer resort of Whytecliffe. The service consists of eleven trains each way per day, and this section really functions as a sort of glorified street car service for the suburbs of greater Vancouver.

Over one-third of the passenger revenue of the P. G. E. comes from the North Vncouver division: $39,000 out of a grand total of $92,500 in twelve months.

The second and main section runs from Squamish to Quesnel. To reach Squamish from Vancouver takes four hours by steamer, the distance being forty miles. It was the original plan to build a railway from Vancouver to Squamish, but it is now recognized that the physical obstacles would almost bankrupt the

"The P. G. E. was conceived in enthusiasm, and brought forth in iniquity," in the terse language of caustic critics. As to the truth of this, the man who studies the history of this unique railway may judge for himself.

in as short a time as possible. The grades and curvatures of the P.G.E. are such that a 70-ton engine can haul only 560 tons, while in the Canadian National it can haul 4,000 tons. In other words, an engine can haul only one-seventh of its average load!

Before the line was built range cattle were worth ten cents a pound on the hoof; to-day the price is down to three cents. URING the year ending June 30 last, the freight revenue on the Squamish division totaled $284.511, while passenger revenue amounted to $53.588. The total operating revenue was $437,017. This is less than fifty cents on the dollar for what the company has invested in locomotives, freight cars and passenger coaches alone, which amounts to get these to market. In discussing this recently, Hon. J. D. Mac-Lean, minister of railways, pointed out that it would cost from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 to build the necessary additional 300 miles of road. This financial barrier cannot be surmounted under existing conditions.

It is, however, within the realm of proba bility that the line will be completed to Fort George. Some railway experts believe this piece of work can be done for around half a million dollars. The settlers in that district are anxious to see the line extended, but residents of other parts of the province hold that too much money has already been spent upon what they consider an ill-advised and hopeless enterprise.

Three railway experts who are well-known throughout Canada-J. G. Sullivan, J. S. Dennis and W. P. Hinton-were engaged in the spring of 1922 to make a thorough survey of the P.G.E., and report on conditions and prospects. This cost nearly $10,000, and extinguished the last feeble spark of hope in the breast of the few surviving optimists.

The three experts agreed that the road should never have been built, and pointed out that "it was logical to suppose that business interests in Vancouver and Victoria, for selfish reasons, aided real force that brought about the Pacific Great

T. P. and the C. N. R. have been amalgamated, the P. G. E. is of no value to that system. The road has no strategic advantages, except the possibility that the craze for building railways should ever demand an Alaskan rail connection.

"Regarding suggested extensions: I have driven over some of the proposed lines, and if they are built they will be a further burden to the P. G. E., for the reason that the total receipts with ten times the present development will not pay interest on the cost of the proposed lines leaving nothing for operation or hauling traffic over the main line.

"Indications are that at the end of ten years the total indebtedness will be nearly doubled. without taking into account necessary expenditure for new equipment."

No Sugar Coating on the Pill

IN making specific suggestions as to what should I be done Mr. Sullivan does not put any sugarcoating on the bitter pill. He recommends: -Stopping the operation of the North Vancouver short line, and trying to sell this to some -No construction work north of the G. T. P lines, because (a) there is no business available at present, (b) the heavy grades would preclude hauling freight at a profit, in competition with

-The abandonment of the partly-graded line from Quesnel to Fort George.

-The discarding of steam-trains, using in stead one-man crew gasdriven motor cars for pas senger and mail traffic. The operation of freight train once a month, or once a fortnight i ousiness offers during the summer. The closing down of that portion of the line where snow trouble occurs during the winter. The abandon ing of the 25-mile stretch between Dragon and Quesnel, where mud slides are almost continua for four months every spring.

-The abandonment of the line from Clinton

-The abandonment of the entire system unless the taxpayers are prepared to continupaying from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 a year fo the next ten years at least on the investment ready made.

For some time there were suggestions building the line from Clinton south to Ashcro where it would connect with both the C. N. and the C. P. R., in the hope that one of transcontinentals would either buy outright, at least operate, the P. G. E. But after the ports of the three experts had been received, officials of the big railways, in polite but mistakable language, declared they would not cept British Columbia's white elephant as a g under any conditions

One proposal which has met with consideral favor is that the rails be torn up from Squami Clinton (167 miles), and that the roadb ade into a scenic automobile highway. Clinton this highway would merge with the toric Cariboo road, running from Ashcroft to Peace River country.

There is no doubt that such a highway wou be a great attraction to tourists, for the scen along the Squamish-Clinton section of the line extravagantly praised by men who have trave the world over. There is nothing to surpass in British Columbia, and when one has said one has said a great deal.

The attitude of the powers-that-be, howe seems to indicate that there will be no rad change for the present. Everything from the sublime to the ridiculous can be found on the tiny monuments Many of them bear glassed-in photographs of the little dog whose hame they commemorate. Some inscriptions are very appropriate. Dogs can be companions to lonely hearts-and also to merry ones. Their fidelity and affectionateness may well be remembered with gratitude, but their death can scarcely be regarded as the cause of a despair that can never know consolation, such as the following effusion indicates:

Started this morning, will run all day today, each night next week from 6 to 10 o'clock and all day Saturday, May 17. A grand and glorious opportunity for dad to get his lad a Red Bird

--- a bicycle that means the accomplishment of an ideal and the exciting achievement of an ambition. Read the big news.

"I want to help the boy who thinks the world is 'cuckoo' without a Red Bird, the real, red-blooded, honest-to-goodness kid, full of pep, zip, vim and energy. You know the boy I mean—he's your boy, and there is none better on earth. Yes! He's your boy, on the way to a manhood which will be healthy if he gets a chance, and vigorous, too, if fresh air and exercise are not denied him at this formative period of his career. But, Dad, I don't want to inconvenience you in the slightest way or put a pitfall in your path.

"And so this great night sale has been planned. Here's the big idea—the culmination of years of bicycle merchandising.

"You don't want to leave your work to get the boy a Red Bird?

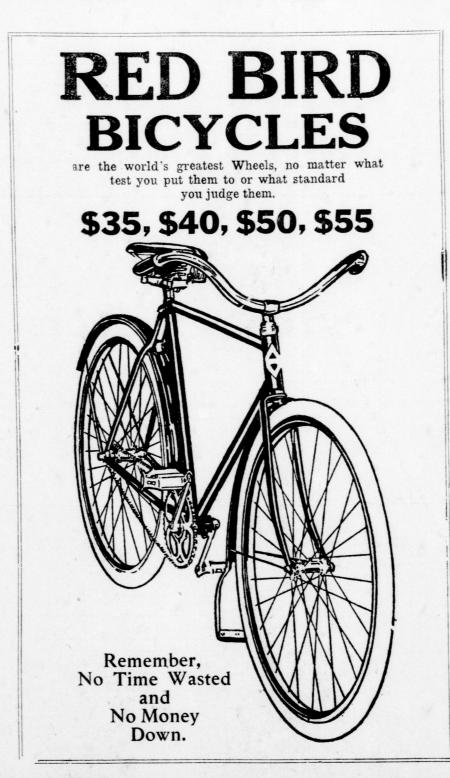

"It is not necessary—come to the night sale.

"Your boy cannot neglect his education by staying away from school?

"Certainly not-bring him at night to the night sale.

"Well, you're going to the Hobby Fair at the armories, or the Better Homes Show in the Winter Garden. Bring the boy along. Buy him a Red Bird at our salesrooms on Wellington

"Dr. Chase's Ointment has completely relieved me of eczema and piles. I also used this Ointment for my baby, who broke out in eczema. A few applications were all that was necessary in her case. Dr. Chase's Ointment has been worth a hundred dollars to me, before using it I had spent a great deal more than that in unsuccessful treatment from doctors. ## FOR FIFTY YEARS

SINCE the "Seventies" the people of London have been riding street cars. Half a century ago they were horsedrawn, as may be seen from wood-cuts of the period. People used to walk long distances in order to ride "down town" in the slowly-moving cars. Now there are dozens of miles of track, hydrodriven cars, and frequent service. Fifty years ago the merchants counted on the horse-cars for many of their customers.

Nowadays the hours between 9 and 5 bring thousands of city shoppers to the down - town district in street cars - the "limousine of the common people.'

The fact is, the city's transportation system has kept pace with progress, and the London Street Railway has been a great public servant.

The street railway franchise was so framed that at its expiration the city should have a chance to acquire the road. This time is now at hand. The city voted in 1922 against the proposal to buy the road on the basis of the Bunnell report, but the idea of public ownership is still entertained.

An opportunity has now arisen for the city to buy the road by agreement. The street railway is about to name a price, which if approved will be submitted to a vote.

If the city does not want public ownership, there is only one fair alternative—to allow the company to continue operation, on a fair basis as to length of franchise, fares and service. If the city wants public ownership, it has a chance to buy, at a figure that would mean dividends to the ratepayer on a five-cent fare.

Any attempt made later to force the street railway to suspend in the hope of securing an advantage, would only mean enormous inconvenience, the acquisition of the property at much greater cost, the outlay of millions on rehabilitation, a seven-cent fare, and a consequent burden upon every taxpayer's purse.

THE STREET RAILWAY IS BEING OFFERED TO THE CITY AT A FAIR PRICE

Co-operation Civic Need

M AN cannot live unto himself, and this universal truth i particularly true of the man in the business world, of the merchant right here in London. The merchant needs your assistance and support, householder; you need the merchant, and a commercially progressive city, such as ours, truly needs you both. Let us go hand-in-hand along the route to a greater metropolis, and thus make the city's future progress a sound We must help both the merchant on the first rung of the ladder of financial prosperity, and the merchant at the top.

Now that the wave of business depression has fallen into the trough, we may hopefully say of London, that as the tide in her commercial status approaches, each and every citizen will substantially show his appreciation of the renewed signs of advancement.

The opportunities of the time are too great to be neglected so do not let us pass by on the other side, the side of decline, but let us gather momentum by every means justified by ideal citizenship. If we aim at that greatest of all goals in the business world, commercial success, we will, through perseverance and co-operation surely reach it, and reach it in the most honor

The hospitals of London are famed throughout America. They are built in keeping with the excellence of the city and territory they serve.

Each hospital is ideally situated for its purpose, and collectively are prepared to cope instantly with any health crisis that is likely to arise in the community.

The equipment maintained is second to none of any city of similar size. The facilities for operations of all purposes are excellent, and have been commented upon for utility by physicians of the highest standing. The superintendents, nurses, and executive staffs are capable, careful, energetic and sympathetic. It would be hard to find a diversity of hospitals in any city better qualified from a managerial and maintenence standpoint to alleviate suffering.

The City of London upholds a proud record, from a medical standpoint. Its hospitals, Institute of Public Health, Medical School and medical profession are held in high esteem.

The skill of the medical men of London is known throughout the world. The services of surgeons and physicians living in this city are sought in Toronto, Chicago, Minneapolis, Cleveland, New York and numerous other larger centers.

Medical men elsewhere often seek the advice of doctors who practice here, and persons from all parts of the continent have been relieved by skillful operations of local surgeons.

It has come to be generally recognized that the people of Western Ontario are particularly fortunate from a health standpoint, and are always well advised to seek advice in London before proceeding "across the line."

Free To Asthma and MAH JONG Foster Talks About Two Principal Formations in the Game.

formation is that it gives the player 20 points for Mah Jong, and that he wins from everybody and pays nobody; but that is only a small part of it, as we shall see presently.

The Set Formations.

Let us look first at the simpler orm of the game, the set formations. so that we may understand the chances for getting certain things, and the reasons for trying to get things that are difficult in preference to those that are easy under certain circumstances. It is very important that a player should keep constantly before him the proportionate difficul-ty of filling sets of various kinds, as in many cases the returns are much greater than the risks.

The sets have an intrinsic value, The sets have an intrinsic value, whether the player woos or not, but they also have a collective value when the hand is complete. If the straight game pays just as much player has no other object than just attention to the hand formation as

Foster Talks About Two Principal Formations in the Game.

By R. F. FOSTER.

Upon picking up and arranging your original thirteen tiles in the rack, the first thing that should be considered is the possibilities of the hand in two ways. These two ways are called "formations" and they are of two kinds.

First we have the formation of sets; that is, getting together pungs, and sequences. Then we have the formation for sets; that is, getting together pungs, and sequences. Then we have the formation for sets; that is, getting together pungs, and sequences. Then we have the formation for the start, and have it always in view as an objective.

To the average player it may seem that the only advantage of the hand formation is that it gives the player 20 points for Mah Jong, and that he wins from everybody and pages and sequences. The next would get about eight times in twenty. This style of play is usually all unded to as "dogging the hand," or running after everything in sight. Whether it is worth anything or not. A player who is dogging his hand would just as soon pick up a sequence of 3, 4, 5, as he would a pung of three Dragons. All sets look alike to the formation from the start, and have it always in view as an objective.

To the average player it may seem that the only advantage of the hand formation is that it gives the player 20 points for Mah Jong, and that he wins from everybody and pages and sequences. The next would do this.

The next most valuable tile that you could draw would be another 9 of Bamboos, which would increase of Bamboos, which w

Poor Player Only "Dogs."
While it is true that the player who pays no attention to anything but set formations can woo in the straight game, while in the one-double and cleared-suit games the player cannot woo unless he has also a certain hand formation, it is also true that the better player in the

you could draw would be another 9 of Bamboos, which would increase the value of your pair to 8 points. As there are two of these tiles to come, either of which you might get, your chances of getting another 9 of Bam-boos are twice as good as your chances of getting another 1 of Char-

How Chances Run. But the value of the chance is not the same, because the proportion is not the same. You would increase the Bamboo set from 0 to 8, but the Character set would increase from 8 to 32, or three times as much. The odds against it are 2 to 1; but the value is 3 to 1, as the Mamboo would add only eight points to your hand; the Character 24.

Turning to the Dots, there are no less than eight tiles, which would fill out that set, four 1's and four 4's. This would indicate that it is four times as easy to fill the Dot set as it would be to fill the Bamboo set, and eight times as easy as the Character set.

But what is it worth it when it is filled? Its only use is as a part of the hand formation. As a se-quence it is worth nothing, and that is why it is so easy to get. This might suggest that if such a set is taken at all, it must be taken as part of the hand formation, and not

Pung Easier Than Chow.
There is another angle to this question of comparative values and lifficulties, which is that the numset must be taken into consideration in connection with the ways of get-ting them. There are more opportunities to pung a tile than to

If you want to fill out a sequence while your hand is still incomplete, there are only two ways out of four to get that tile. These are to get it from the last discard on your left, or to draw it from the wall. If you want to fill out a triplet, there are four ways to get the tile you are looking for; your own draw from the wall and the discards of three other players, none of whom are likely to want the tile you want, except for a sequence, so that they are practically drawing from the wall

Take another example of the manner in which values and chances off-set each other. You have just drawn the 7 of Bamboos, and have to discard from these five tiles, all the rest of your hand being already made

If you keep the three 7s, the set is worth 4 points. You then have to guess which of the dots to keep, and no matter which it is, by this time probably one or two of each tile will have been grounded, or are among the previous discards. Say there are still two to come, and that you have two chances to fill, and must fill to woo.
On the other hand, if you discard one of the 7s, you have twice as many chances to woo, as you can fill your sequence at either end, but you must fill it to win out. As the wco adds 20 points to your hand, which would you rather do: take the 4 points for the set of 7s and have only two chances to get the 20 for mah jong; or let the go, and have four chance

As we shall see in the next article, on hand formations, this individual value of a set may have very wide fluctuations, according to its rela-tion to the formation of the hand (Copyright, 1924)

What to Buy, and Why

If you desire a tire—the best that can possibly be made, and having a world-wide reputation for efficiency-you will select Dunlop "Traction" Cord, Master of the Road.

If you desire a Cord Tire with a good record, but selling at a lower price than "Traction" Cord, you will decide in favor of Dunlop "Clipper" Cord-a tire that is being chosen by owners of many different m-1-es of cars.

If you prefer the highest-grade Fabric Tire, selling at virtually the same price as "Clipper" Cord, then your choice will be Dunlop "Traction" Fabric.

If it is a competitive price tire you want-but still one that is of recognized value—then you will buy Dunlop "Clipper" Fabric.

If the tire desired is for Livery and Truck purposes-in size 30 x 31/2-Dunlop "Bus and Truck Type" tire is "just the thing." It is a specially built pneumatic tire for this particular class of work, having the side-walls fully protected against curb or rut abuse. Other sizes of this type of tire are built heavier than ordinary Passenger Car types.

Every tire referred to above is sold by Dunlop Depots, and there is a price to suit all pockets.

You do not need to purchase tires of doubtful or unknown quality when you can obtain nationally known, sure quality Dunlop Tires to meet every requirement, such as referred to above.

As the tube is a vital part of the casing, it will pay to see that your expenditures for casings are amply protected by the purchase of Dunlop Regular Tubes or Dunlop Extra Heavy Tubes. There are no better tubes made, and, like Dunlop Tires, they are all fairly priced.

New York, May 10.—Extreme duliness characterized this week's irregular stock market. Prices developed a firm tone at the beginning of the week in response to the president's veto of the Bursam pension bill, but became unsettled later in reflection of unfavorable trade news and the Senate's insertion into the tax bill of a graduated surtax on undisturbed corporation earnings.

Steel shares were inclined to ease on reports of a further contraction in steel output and increasing price competition. Oil stocks turned heavy on publication of the weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute showing another increase in cruoe production for the week ended May 3. Sinclair was singled out for attack and hammered down to a new low record for the year on reports that the company was plan-

SOUTH AFRICAN MINING BETRAYS BRIGHT SPOTS

Small Spurt of Business At London Following Budget Evaporates.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, May 9.—The small spurt of usiness on the stock exchange enendered by the harmless nature of the pulget has avergored and in its gendered by the harmless nature of the budget has evaporated, and in its place there has arisen a certain amount of anxlety concerning reparations and the weakness of the continental exchanges. Prices therefore dropped fractionally this week the weakness being augmented by the poor buying demand. The South African mining market betrayed some bright spots, principally on account of the favorable character of the Central Mining Association's report. This corporation's numerous interests are reviewed hopefully, reference being made to the concern's participation with the Mond Nickel Company in the formation of a company for investigating Canadian mining properties. properties.

New Zealand, which is a very popular borrower in London, easily secured £5,000,000 this week.

EULER AGAINST TARIFF, TO VOTE IN OPPOSITION

Liberal Member Wants Protection, But Expects No Harm From Budget.

Mr. Euler made the positive declara-

He advocated the establishment of a permanent tariff commission to make a thorough investigation before changes in the figure believes the commission to make a commission to mak in the fiscal policy were made.
"I do not favor a prohibitive tariff, but I believe in a tariff which will enable legitimate industries to live if they are efficiently conducted," he maintained. He stated, however, that he did not believe the views of a member on the tariff should neces-

At this point the leader of the pposition began a series of questions. Mr. Meighen asked if Mr. Euler thought the guarantee given for Canadian National Railway bonds could be considered an active

The story women hair-dressers have to tell, however, indicates i must be the sobering influence o barbers that renders a woman mute and submissive when she occupies the tonsorial chair. For in your official beauty parlor the average young lady does not surrender her locks to the relentless shears without some misgiving and a mental struggle.

"Some customers make a terrific fuss when they come in to have their hair bobbed," a hair-dresser said.

"One had only a few strands removed when their hair box and their when she decided bobbed hair would not become her, and left the store." The next most serious problem with which hair-dressers are confronted is helping girls decide which type of bob best suits them. Few women know specifically what they want until the entire list of bobs, with illustrations, has been subjected to minute scrutiny. And even then they requently take days to make up as a clear, simple issue to the elec their minds.

To quote Pete Smith again, however, the Ina Claire cut is the style best calculated to please everybody. About half of the bobbed-haired brigade select it in preference to any others. It allows the kinkly curis to come up well past the nape of the neck, and provides for an attractive part on the size of the head. Some girls whose heads cannot stand the Ina Claire shingle take to the boyish bob, which comes second in popubob, which comes second in popularity. It's very attrac-tive also to girls with full faces." Here are some facts and opinions relating to the bobbed hair industry which were submitted to The Advertiser by a host of barbers:

The two main reasons for bobbedhair, barbers contend, is that it is more attractive than long hair, and about 50 per cent more economica Less combs are used, very few hair-pins, and women do not run up hairdressing bills to the same extent as formerly. Besides it is eminently more comfortable and convenient, entailing much less work, and making for greater efficiency and enjoyment plain. All they know is that for the past year girls have been coming into their shops about once a week Sees Many Defects.

Mr. Euler said that in his view the budget had many serious defects and omissions. He was sorry that the government had not seef fit to abolish the "nuisance tax" on commercial papers and receipts. He would have been glad to see a reduction in postage from three to two cents an ounce, and he thought such a reduction could have been made without hurting the revenue of the greatest disadvantage to being the slightest embarrassment when hot the slightest embarrassment when hot the slightest embarrassment when and asking for a bob.
