NORTHERN BUSH FIRES WIPED OUT AND NUSKA; AT LATTER PLACE FIRE DEAD LAY ON THE RAILROAD; HERONS

Sixteen People Killed in one Root House at Matheson--Flames Travelled 60 Miles an Hour--Little Girl Nine Years of Age Guarded Two Babies Saved From the Fire

Cobalt, Aug. 1.—It will be many days before a complete list of the dead in the Northern Ontario fires can be obtained. A few of the people known to be dead around Matheson are: Mrs. McKnight, Mrs. Banerman, Mrs. Small, Mrs. Robinson, J. Schmidt, Tom Little, Ray Wilman, sen., B. Carey, J. Stack, J. and Mrs. Elvin and two daughters, the little daughter of Mrs. Whittier, and Miss Della Labelle of Wahyabeg.

Terrible Scenes at Nushka. The list cannot be long and dreadful. The fire pounced on Matheson like a tiger. One woman went to a store to do some shopping and she was caught there with two children, away from the rest of her people, who were only at the other end of the street.

Foreman Saved All His Men. At Pankiller Lake the foreman at Carteridge Mine saved all his men. Four of them set out in a boat, but the waves were so high it was thrown over before they were forty feet from shore, and it was an hour before they touched bottom again.

Prospector Hero's Vivid Story. Bill Fairburn, a stalwart prospector, who undoubtedly saved many lives on that awful Saturday, gives a most vivid description of the fire. "It came," he said, "sped by a howling tornado, a living wave of flames, travelling at sixty miles an hour, and nothing lived in its wake.

are recorded, one especially of a girl of about sixteen years of age, who carried her baby brother for some distance till she dropped in the streets, her limbs burned to the knees. The following stories told by survivors tell the gruesome tale of the fire:

Lay in Water for Hours. Ed. Alfred, a prospector, who had been working some twenty-two miles up the Abitibi River, lay in the water with eight companions for hours waiting for the flames to pass in order to reach Matheson by canoe.

Lost Her Little Baby. Mrs. McWhirter, who was admitted to the New Liskeard Hospital last night with three children more or less burned, lived on a farm near Matheson. Her three-month-old baby was burned to death.

Many Matheson District Refugees. The Government must formulate a scheme to re-establish settlers on their farms, for it will be the root-blow to northern colonization that Ontario ever received.

PORTJUNCTION WIPED OUT BY FIRE. This is the station where the fire from Irigoquo to Timmins, Ont., crosses the main line of the T. and N. O.

stake obscured the sky, and men and women felt their way through the thick fumes, fumbling their way out to safety. Those who have headed rescue parties fear to think what the drains and hollows of the countryside will reveal.

Croesus Mine, in Munro township, and all surrounding district are swept clear. Last night, in Matheson all but three of the men were accounted for.

Duncan Graham is seriously burned about hands and face. He is the man who placed his wife and child in a trench, covered them with blankets and kept the blankets wet till the fierce sweep of the fire had passed.

Young Heroine of Sixteen. A number of heroic acts on the part of some children in helping their younger brothers and sisters.

Freight Train Saved Many. Haliburton, Aug. 1.—Information obtained in this locality is to the effect that had it not been for a north-bound freight train stalled at Matheson, owing to the destruction of the bridge at Wahyabeg, the list of casualties would have been even more serious than is now the case.

Heartrending Scene at Nushka. In the neighborhood of Matheson settlers and residents had a most heartrending experience. The fire made rapid headway in this district, and it is reported that at Nushka, ten miles north of Matheson, the inhabitants had a chance to come away on a train, but stuck on to the last, thinking they might have a chance of escape.

Little Word From Cochrane. The greatest damage was wrought between Cochrane and some distance south of Matheson along and adjacent to the main line of the T. and N. O. Railway. Very little communication has been received from Cochrane, but it is beyond question that a very large proportion of this place has fallen a prey to the flames.

Three Houses Left in Matheson. According to stories, there is nothing left of the town of Matheson but three houses that were situated on the hill, and were owned by Mr. John Hugh, the Mining Recorder, Mr. McDonald and Mr. Carter.

wright. The remainder of the buildings have been totally destroyed. It is said that the residents escaped with nothing but what they wore. Porcupine Towns Mostly Escaped. For the past fortnight bush fires of a local character have been burning in the district, but little alarm seems to have been felt. On Saturday, however, the breeze fanned the burning element spread, devastating over a wide area. The Porcupine towns seem to have escaped the trail of the devouring flames, although the outskirts of Timmins were touched, while the flames finally sweeping away.

victims as on this occasion. In 1911 83 people lost their lives, but, according to information received from Mr. C. W. Lee, the T. and N. O. Railway Commissioner, at North Bay, this afternoon, there had been 189 deaths up to that time. The following deaths are reported from Ramore: Eugene Plon, wife and three children, and brother Edward; Xavier Clement, wife and two children; Albert Pape, wife and three children. The Kelso deaths were stated to be Dr. Reid, at one time of Renfrew, but for ten years in Kelso, and Postmaster Mitchell. The $10,000 store station at Matheson was destroyed, and seventeen buildings at Timmins, according to advices received this forenoon, were also destroyed.

ITALY NOT FIGHTING GERMANY BECAUSE OF TRADE TREATY

By Special Wire to the Courier. Paris, Aug. 1.—The only reason which has so far prevented Germany from declaring war on Italy, says the Petit Parisien, is a commercial treaty signed between the two countries in 1891 and renewed in 1904. This treaty subordinated Italy to Germany economically, according to the paper, and was considered of the greatest importance by Germany.

THE FAIRY OF THE TULIP. Once a very little girl named Minna watched a bed of red and yellow tulips blazing in the sun like red and yellow fire. And when the wind fluttered the petals open and shut, open and shut, she thought she saw—fairies! Um, hum! As true as I live! Fairies sitting in the sunlit heart of a flower and laughing as fairies will when wind and flowers and sunlight make the sort of air the fairies love to breathe.

THE SITUATION.

The British had a quiet day at the front on Sunday, while the French were subjected by the foe to some violent counter attacks, which were successfully repulsed with very heavy losses to the Huns.

The troops of General Brussloff continue their triumphal progress in spite of all the Teutons can do to stop them. They have now swept across the Stokhod river, and are still further strengthening their grasp around Kovel, where five important railways converge.

General Sir Douglas Haig, head of the British troops in France, has given a notable interview, in which he points out that during the first two years of the war, the allies had to bend every effort to gain time by keeping the Germans from forcing a decision, while the necessary preparations were made to take from them the offensive. The latter process was now under achievement.

"The third year of the war will be the Allies," says Sir Douglas, and no one can doubt that fact, least of all the Kaiser and his crew. Satisfactory though the present progress is proving, the British commander points out that John Bull will not achieve his full strength on land until next summer. He adds: "Our men ask only to keep on attacking. They feel that they have taken the measure of the Germans."

So without any doubt they have, and that the "contemptible little army," to which the Kaiser made sneering reference, is now recognized by the Huns as a mighty engine of offense, is best illustrated by the fact that they are opposing their best against them, but to no permanent avail.

THAT BLACK LIST.

Although a number of U. S. papers are still hot under the collar over the placing of a number of American firms on John Bull's black list, it is marked that the majority of said firms are not making any protest and seem quite anxious to have the agitation die down. As a matter of fact, the time is fast approaching when any trade alliance with Germany will prove much more of a handicap than anything else, and they probably realize that. Meanwhile the Wilson administration has sent a sharp note in which it protests:

"Against the attempt of a belligerent power to insure or abbreviate the rights of American citizens."

As a matter of fact, John Bull has done nothing of the kind. He has simply warned his own people not to trade with certain firms having connections with the enemy, and this he has a perfect right to do.

The New York Journal of Commerce aptly puts the case when it says:

"We know well enough that there are German concerns here, and American concerns, which keep up some sort of trade with Germany for her benefit and their own profit. They have a right to take all the risk of doing so. Our Government does not try to prevent it, and the British Government has no right to prevent it at this end of the line. It has a right to prevent its own subjects from doing it through these intermediaries, if it can, and that is what it is attempting."

A LONDON WAILER.

The London Advertiser (Liberal) is keeping up a constant squeal over the removal of troops from that camp to "Camp Borden." It alleges that the latter is not only a "blunder" but a "plunder" and that Sir Sam Hughes has fled from the mess he has created. There is absolutely not one tittle of truth in the assertions of the Advertiser. Camp Borden is a needed institution, splendidly situated, with an abundant supply of pure water and is moreover not adjacent to any centre of population with the attendant temptations which always arise under such circumstances. It is a desirable and a wholesome thing to have large bodies of men who are in training, concentrate upon that work without nearby distractions. The camp within itself, has plenty of healthy diversions for the benefit of officers and men alike.

The Advertiser talks as if London had some God given right to have a large camp in its vicinity. Why?

Trouble with troops they had and later trouble with their own men at Borden, cannot certainly be regarded as recommendations. Brantford and Brant County, on the per capita basis of men offering for the front, possessed far more claim for consideration than London, but the fact that a camp was refused here hasn't caused a lot of childish whining. Canada's part in this war is far too big a thing to lead to petty and small souled local considerations as to what profit can, or can not be made out of the soldiers.

The need for such a camp as Borden was fully established and in location and equipment it is admirable. One hears no kick about it from members of the Brant County and other Battalions and without any doubt they are just as good as the London outfit.

As for Sir Sam running away, the contrary fact is that he came back from the Old Land to face the now exploded Kite charges—charges, which like the Advertiser's criticisms, were intended to make some miserable party/capital during an Empire crisis.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

"Fryatt was murdered," said Premier Asquith in the British House yesterday. He further emphasized the fact that when the time came those responsible would be punished. Let it be remembered that the Kaiser personally is in that list.

Instead of adding the Russian Bear to his menagerie, the Hun Emperor would now willingly give a few million kopeks to get the "animale" off his trail.

Sir Douglas Haig points out that the total British losses in July, during a continuous offensive against the tremendous defence works, has been less than five times the total of June when the men were kept in trenches. And one month of pushing forward is certainly worth any five months of equal loss in men standing still.

July, on the basis of leap year, having warmed up to an extent which did not gain the affections of anybody; it is to be hoped that August will adopt that half of the cool stunt, which is often so much more effective.

O. Henry Stories

IX.—A Double Dyed Deceiver.

By O. HENRY

THE trouble began in Laredo. It was the Llano Kid's fault for not all friends, as happens often where men ride in from afar to shoot Folly as she gallops. There was a row over so small a matter as a pair of queens, and when the smoke had cleared away it was found that the Kid had committed an indiscretion and his adversary had been guilty of a blunder, for the unfortunate combatant, instead of being a greaser, was a high blooded youth from the cow ranchers of the Kid's own age and possessed of the friends and champions. His blunder in missing the Kid's right ear only a sixteenth of an inch when he pulled his gun did not lessen the indiscretion of the better marksman.

The Kid, not being equipped with a retaine nor bootifully supplied with personal advisers and supporters—on account of a rather unbecoming reputation, even for the border—considered it not incompatible with his indisputable fame to perform that judiciously practical act known as "pulling his freight."

Quickly the avengers gathered and sought him. Three of them overtook the Kid within a rod of the station. The Kid turned and showed his teeth in that brilliant but mirthless smile that usually preceded his deeds of insouciance and violence, and his pursuers fell back without making it necessary for him even to reach for his weapon.

But in this affair the Kid had not felt the grim thirst for encounter that usually urged him on to battle. It had been a purely chance row, born of the cards and certain epithets impossible for a gentleman of the West. The Kid had passed between the two. The Kid had rather liked the slim, haughty, brown faced young chap whom his bullet had cut off in the first pride of manhood. And now he wanted no more blood. He wanted to get away and have a good long sleep somewhere in his sun on the mesquit grass, with his hand on the mesquit grass, with his hand on the mesquit grass. Even a Mexican might have crossed his path in safety while he was in this mood.

The Kid openly boarded the north bound passenger train that departed five minutes later. But at Webb, a few miles out, where it was flagged to take on a traveler, he abandoned that manner of escape. There were telegraph stations ahead, and the Kid looked as he did for his escape.

The man whom he had shot was a stranger to him. But the Kid knew that he was of the Corralitos outfit from Hidalgo and that the punchers from that ranch were more relentless and vengeful than Kentucky fencibles when wrong or harm was done to one of them. So, with the wisdom that has characterized many great fighters, the Kid decided to pile up as many leagues as possible of chaparral and pear between himself and the retaliation of the Corralitos bunch.

Near the station was a store, and near the store, scattered among the mesquits and elms, stood the saddled horses of the customers. Most of them waited, half asleep, with sagging limbs and drooping heads. But one, a long legged roan with a curved neck, snorted and pawed the turf. Him the Kid mounted, gripped with his knees and slapped gently with the owner's own quirt.

If the slaying of the temerarious card player had cast a cloud over the kid's standing as a good and true citizen in the darkest shadows of dispute. On the Rio Grande border if you take a man's life you sometimes take trash, but if you take his horse you take a thing the loss of which renders him poor, indeed, and which enriches you not—if you are caught. For the Kid there was no turning back now.

With the springing roan under him he felt little care or uneasiness. After a five mile gallop he drew in to the plainsman's jogging trot and rode northeastward toward the Nuces River bottoms. He knew the country well—its most tortuous and obscure trails through the great wilderness of brush and pear and its camps and lonesome ranches where one might find safe entertainment. Always he bore to the east, for the Kid had never seen the ocean, and he had a fancy to lay his hand upon the mane of the great Galf, the gamesome colt of the greater waters.

So after three days he stood on the shore at Corpus Christi and looked across the gentle ripples of a quiet sea.

Captain Boone of the schooner Fly-away stood near his skiff, which one of his crew was guarding in the surf.

When ready to sail he had discovered that one of the necessities of life, in the parallelogrammatic shape of blue tobacco, had been forgotten. A sailor had been dispatched for the missing cargo. Meanwhile the captain paced the sands, chewing profanely at his pocket store.

Miss Claudia Chonister had a narrow escape from drowning while swimming in the Delaware river opposite Bristol, due to a new-style skirted bathing suit.

Peter Van Viissingen, a confessed million dollar forger, has been freed from the state penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., after serving seven years and eight months.

Easton, Pa., council has established a "hospital zone" in the vicinity of the city hospital, and will arrest autoists, teamsters and others making unnecessary noises.

"Buenaos Tierras, coast of South America—I forgot what they called the country the last time I was there. Car-gosse lumber, corrugated iron and ma-cheetes."

"Where are you going to?" asked the refugee.

was just looking at it. Not thinking of selling it, are you?"

"Not this trip," said the captain. "I'll send it to you C. O. D. when I get back to Buenaos Tierras. Here comes that capstan footed lubber with the chew-in. I ought to've weighed anchor an hour ago."

"Is that your ship out there?" asked the kid.

"Why, yes," answered the captain.

"If you want to call a schooner a sally, and I don't mind lynin'. But you better say Miller & Gonzales, owners, and ordinary, plain Billy be damned old Samuel K. Boone, skipper."

"Where are you going to?" asked the refugee.

"Buenas Tierras, coast of South America—I forgot what they called the country the last time I was there. Car-gosse lumber, corrugated iron and ma-cheetes."

"What kind of a country is it," asked the kid—"hot or cold?"

request of the city tax-collector. The unlucky baker's dozen were adjourned until to-morrow. Four drunks were summarily disposed of in the usual manner. Thos. WATER IS PURE Indignation is felt by the city water commissioners at rumors which during the past few days have gained credence throughout the city, to the effect that the city water was polluted, and that various foreign objects had been found in it. To these rumors a most emphatic denial is given by the commissioners, who state that same is not the case, and that the city water is as pure as precaution can make it. The warning issued recently advising all citizens to boil the water is only one more such precautionary measure during the hot weather. Steps are now being taken to trace out the originators of the stories concerning pollution of the water, and if found they will be severely prosecuted.

Notwithstanding the busy season and extreme heat, friends to the number of about 60 gathered to do honor to the worthy couple, who were celebrating their 25th wedding day and judging from the youthful appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Langs, the event might easily have been taken for their wedding of 25 years ago. The gifts to the bride and groom were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which they are held by their friends. After a very sumptuous dinner had been served and enjoyed, the after

Rear Admiral Hood was in Great Storm

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 1.—That thrilling incident at the height of the hurricane at Alpa, Samo in 1831 when the crew of the lumbering United States warship Trenton, cheered the British warship Calliope as the latter fought her way inch by inch out of the harbor and into the open sea and safety has been recalled in Sydney by the death in the Tutland naval battle of Rear Admiral Horace L. Hood, of the British navy. Hood was a midshipman on the Calliope on that occasion as were other youths who have since been more or less conspicuously engaged in this war. Some of them besides Hood were Frank Brandt, who commanded the Monmouth when she was sunk by the Germans off the coast of Chile, Wilmont S. Nicholson, who commanded the Hecge when she was sunk in the North Sea by mines. John C. T. Clossop who commanded the Sydney

NO TIMBER WILL BE LEFT

If War Lasts Another Three Years, Forests Will Be Gone.

London, Aug. 1.—So much timber is being used for the war it is said by advocates of a government scheme for re-afforestation that in the year lasts another three years the British Isles will be entirely denuded of timber. One feature of the situation is that some pre-war sources of supply are no longer available. Fifty-five per cent of timber imported in normal times came from Russia, Sweden and Germany, four per cent from Norway; and 41 per cent from France, Portugal and Spain. Since the war this country has had to rely partly on supplies from Norway and Sweden and largely on French and Portuguese supplies, and to make good the deficit from woods and forests in the British Isles.

There are only three million acres of wooded land in the United Kingdom at the present time.

THIRD YEAR OF WAR WILL BE ALLIES' YEAR SAYS SIR DOUGLAS HAIG

All the British Soldier Asks Now is to let Him Keep on the Offensive—Maximum of Empire's Strength on Land Will Not be Reached Until Next Summer

By Frederick Palmer.

With the British Armies in the Field, Aug. 1.—At the close of two years of war and of the first month of the British offensive, Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the group of British armies in France, speaking of the situation, laid particular emphasis on the fact that the beginning of the third year of war saw the initiative entirely with the allies on all fronts, while England for the first time was exerting something like the power worthy of her numbers and resources on land.

"The tide has turned," he said. "Time has been with the allies from the first. It is only a question of more time till we win a decisive victory, which is the one sure way to bring peace in this as in other wars. Until this victory is won, it will become a British soldier in France to think of peace."

On the Battle Line.

Those who have had freedom along the battle lines during the last four weeks have had glimpses of the youthful and scholarly features of Sir Douglas in passing in his automobile on dusty roads, in the thick of the moving troops and transports, and again of his athletic figure alighting from his car at the headquarters of one of the army commanders for a conference.

But mostly his time is spent in a quiet room in a small chateau which forms his personal headquarters. In the centre of this room, where he had a talk with the correspondent yesterday, he raised a map of the region of the present offensive, with every detail, roads, woods, villages, trenches, ridges and valleys and all contours revealed at a glance.

The only other machinery at his command were little sheets of reports which come from the firing line through a system of shell-fire, giving the status of the situation at intervals on every sector of the front.

First Problem Accomplished.

"The problem of the first summer's campaign and of the second for the allies was to hold the Germans from forcing a decision with their ready numbers of men and guns and shells," said Sir Douglas. "Whether it was the able generalship and the heroism of the French on the Marne, the dogged retreat of the little British expeditionary force from Mons, and British to German effort for the Channel ports, the Russian retreat last summer, Belgium's or Serbia's sacrifice, Italy's stone-walling against Austria's offensive, or France's immortal defence of Verdun; the purpose was always to gain time for the preparations necessary to take the offensive away from the enemy."

He mentioned the days at Ypres in the Fall of 1914, when the British had not battalions where they have divisions now, and fought with Hun and blood against superior numbers. Since he took command of the army his favorite word has been "patience," to his subordinates and callers.

Built From the Bottom.

"Our unpreparedness at the start of the war was due to its unexpectedness; that is no secret," he continued. "While France, which had a great national army and universal service, was giving all her strength, we had to begin building from the bottom. The majority of our best regular officers had been killed or wounded in the early fighting. With the remainder as a nucleus to direct and organize the volunteers who were raw but had the 'spirit that quickeneth,' we undertook to create an army of millions, which must be officered largely by men of no military experience, to fight the German army, with its 40 years of preparation.

"We had to make uniforms before the men who had enlisted could be taken out of the civilian garb. We had to build plants before we could manufacture rifles, before we could arm our recruits, and we had to build guns and ammunition plants before we had artillery."

Stone-walling for Months.

"Meanwhile we had to keep on stone-walling in France with such troops as we had ready against that prepared foe, whose blows were the sturdiest, in his efforts for a decision owing to his realization that time was against him.

"Now the new army has had its first practical experience in an attack on a large scale."

After his plans were made and the order had been given to advance on July 1, he could only await the news of the results in this quiet room with its atmosphere of detachment. There was no change in his imperturbability in the half hour of suspense before the first definite information arrived out of a mantle of shell, smoke and confusion into which the British infantry charged over a sixteen-mile front. When night came he listened to the reports of his subordinates, made plans for the morrow and gave directions with his customary brevity.

As Fresh as at the Start.

With the hardy constitution of the Scot, keeping up his vigils and insisting on a fair allowance of sleep, he seems as fresh at the end of a month's battle and of two years of war as when the war began.

"However well trained an army," he continued, "however able its generals and however ample its artillery and munitions, the supreme test in a war of this kind is its capacity, unit by unit, for bearing heavy losses unflinchingly. Whatever sacrifice of life was necessary to the end these new army men have borne & without wavering and in a manner worthy of the best traditions of the Anglo-Saxon race when it has had to fight for principles associated with its history the world over.

"When her navy held England safe from invasion it was the principle that led these men, all volunteers, to fight on soil which is not their own. They realized the preparedness and discipline and the autocratic organization of the enemy which stood for militarism, which is abhorrent to them."

Turning to the map, he put his finger first on Pozieres and then on Deville Wood, where the British incessant struggle gained precious high ground.

Superior Man to Man.

"Here our men, after they had conquered a maze of trench fortifications which the Germans had been a year and a half in building, have fought under field conditions, digging what cover they could, withstanding counter-attacks with all the stubbornness of the regulars at Ypres, continuing to advance, pitting their skill and courage and resources against those of an army of forty years of preparation.

"Their confidence that as man to man, with equally good artillery support, they were the superior of the German has been justified by the events. Now they are victorious. If we had gained less ground, if we had not in conjunction with the French inflicted heavier losses on the enemy than our own, our offensive would have been worth while for its benefit to our morale.

"Our men ask only to keep on attacking. They feel that they have taken the measure of the Germans, in some regions our own losses have been severe, in instances of some units whose steadiness in the face of a most galling fire has ensured reliance in others under a similar task.

"I may say that the total for the month of July to date, in the midst of a continuous offensive, has been less than five times the total of June when we were in our trenches."

"But you have been able to see these things for yourself as a correspondent. Your pass will take you into the front line at Pozieres and to that of Deville Wood, as well as to any headquarters, from that of a battalion to that of an army, or wherever you please.

"The Sir Douglas referred to the character of the German army and that of the British army as revealed by the fighting of the last four weeks.

"The British soldier," said he, "is used to thinking for himself, and recognizes the stubborn task before him. He is obedient and takes his ideas from his superiors without question. He was led to believe that the offensive of our new army, which was not taught their kind of discipline, and therefore was inefficient, could not be formidable.

"When we followed the breach in their first line with a breach in their second line, the shock of our success was accordingly the greater to their minds. For the first time Germany that Germany was beaten. One of them, who was on his way to England and had glimpses of our new army in France, said that he had been told that the British had only a fringe of troops on their first line, and that once our attack was repulsed the Germans could rush to the coast and end the war."

General Alexieff says: "I think that we may now be said to have passed through the most difficult period of our great war. While still offering stubborn resistance, our enemy is beginning to weaken, but we have not yet begun to hope to attain the definite goal of our hopes."

Premier Sarajew of Russia, says: "At the moment when the allies are entering upon the third year of the war the Russian government is more than ever resolved to continue the struggle to the end, and in firm conviction that, with the help of the Almighty, the allies and their cause of justice and equity will triumph."

News From Terrace Hill

A benefit and impressive service was held in St. James church on Sunday evening last when a roll of honor was unveiled. The sermon was preached by the Rev. T. E. Jenkins, of St. Jude church, from the words, "Fear God and honor the king." The Rev. E. Sotley, rector, then spoke briefly, and read out the names of all enlisting from the parish, the number being 50. The Rev. T. E. Jenkins then, in the absence of Col. Cocksbutt, unveiled the roll of honor in a few well chosen words. God Save the King was then sung. The sermon was an eloquent and forcible presentation of the righteousness of the cause for which the Empire is contending, and the whole service one that will be long remembered.

The Sunbeams will give an evening entertainment at St. James' church Sunday school building to-night.

Jogging Laziness into Activity

The merchant whose business lags in the summer has himself to thank.

To slacken the selling pace in the hot season—to lessen Advertising activity—indicates a resignation which has no place in modern business.

If we think we cannot keep our business booming in summer time, we surely will not.

What a jolt it must have been to the fur trade, when the first mid-summer fur advertisement was run in a daily paper! Now many fur stores are following the example of that progressive fur man who dared to believe that fur sales need not go down as the mercury goes up.

Energy, linked with Advertising, has turned the month of January into the biggest selling season for white goods. Advertisements of a high stimulative power, combined with a disregard of "seasons," have opened up automobile selling two months earlier than was once thought possible. Advertising has started Christmas shopping early in October instead of the middle of December.

Advertising rises superior to seasons and thermometers. The right kind of Advertising strikes a responsive cord in human nature—and human nature is the same in August as in December.
