CHAPTER XXXIII.

Presently little Maude ran from among the women and came to his side, and stole her hand into his. "I'm not afraid!" she said. "Least, I am afraid, but I won't cry, Lord Gaunt."

He put his hand upon her head. "That's right, Maude, dear," he said. "There's not much use in crying, is there? And it's very likely that we shall all be laughing again presently."

The vessel still rocked in the same curious way, and the peculiar motion told Gaunt what had happened. The "Pevensey Castle" had drifted on to a rock or a sand bank, and was swaying to and fro on a pivot as the seas struck her.

Ages seemed to pass while he stood there, holding the crowd by the power of his eye and voice; but presently he heard the captain's step on the stairs, and he opened the door and admitted him. The captain took in the situation at a glance.

"Thank you, my lord," he said, calmly and quietly, as if he were thanking Gaunt for passing the salt. Then he looked round. "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "We've struck on a sand bank. He held up his hand as a cry of terror arose. "There's no need to be alarmed. There's no harm to a single soul to come to harm. I always think it best to tell the truth, and the whole truth; and here it is. We're off the coast of Mogador, and not very far from the harbor. The boats are ready, and I'll have you all put ashore as comfortably as possible; that is if you obey orders. Now, you will please come on deck a dozen at a time; a dozen and no more. Lord Gaunt will be kind enough to point out each lot and see that the order is carried out. May I trouble you so far, my lord?"

Gaunt nodded. "Very good," said the captain, calmly. "Then I can return to my place on deck."

He put a revolver in Gaunt's hand and went up again.

The crowd watched Gaunt with eager eyes, and almost seemed to cease breathing as he pointed out the first dozen—nine women and three men.

"The men will take charge of the ladies," he said, "and help them into the boat."

If any of the men had felt inclined to disobey him, his complete self-possession, and perhaps the sight of the revolver in his hand, would have restrained them. The first dozen were marshaled out of the cabin to the deck. The others, waiting anxiously, could hear the mate giving orders and the sailors' "Ay, ay, sir," as the boat was launched.

The captain called out: "Next lot!" and a second dozen were dispatched. And so it went on until ten remained. Gaunt had intended sending little Maude and her mother in one of the earlier batches, but the child had clung to him and begged to remain.

"Let mamma and me go with you," she said. "I know we shall be quite safe then."

As the turn of the last lot came, Gaunt picked up the child with his left arm, leaving his right free for the revolver, and led the way up on deck. The fog was still thick, but the ship was brilliantly lit by the electric light, and Gaunt looked round upon a scene of admirable order. All the boats had gone save two, and they were ready to be launched at the word of command.

The captain and his officers stood as calmly, and spoke as quietly, as if nothing whatever was the matter; and the crew were carrying out their orders with cheerful alacrity. The last boat but one went off with its living freight; it consisted of a number of the crew as well as some of the passengers. Each boat, as it left the rocking ship, sent up a cheer which was returned by those remaining on deck.

"Now, my lord," said the captain, as the last boat was launched. Gaunt helped the women into their places. He put Maude's mother in, and she held out her arms for the child.

"Good-bye, little one!" he said; and he kissed her.

She wound her arms round his neck and looked up at him imploringly. "Oh, no! 'good-bye!'" she said. "You're coming—you're coming? I won't go without you!"

"Presently, presently!" said Gaunt. He kissed her again, loosened her hold, gently, and, as gently, placed her in her mother's arms.

There was only one place in the boat remaining. Gaunt looked up the gangway. Besides himself, there were only two men left on deck. One was the captain, and the other, to Gaunt's surprise, was Jackson. The young fellow was very pale, and his lips were apart, as if he were breathing hard.

"Now, gentlemen," said the captain, "one of you get in, please. The quicker you are away, the better."

Gaunt stood aside and motioned to him. "You go, captain," he said.

"Thank you, my lord," said the captain, quietly. "I stand by the ship." Gaunt went up the steps quickly, and laid his hand upon Jackson's shoulder.

"On with you!" he said. "Do you mean it?"

"Yes," said Gaunt, as quietly as before. "I am going to stay with the captain."

"The d—d ship will go to pieces before the morning," panted Jackson. "It's certain death to stick by her!"

He had been drinking heavily, and his eyes were bloodshot and staring, and the sweat stood in huge drops on his forehead; but he was quite sober, and fully realized the peril and the chance of escape.

"And the more reason you should go," said Gaunt, quickly, but in a low voice.

Jackson still hesitated, and Gaunt, knowing the danger of delay, gripped him by the arm, drew him down the gangway, and almost forced him into the boat.

"My God!" murmured Jackson, brokenly, and he let his head fall into his hands as he sunk into the seat.

The boat got clear, and as she moved away, the last cheer arose, and Gaunt and the captain responded to it and waved their caps. She was lost to sight in a minute, and the captain and Gaunt, after straining their eyes and looking at each other. The captain held out his hand.

"You're a brave man, my lord!" he said, and for the first time there was a slight tremor in his voice.

Gaunt smiled as he shook the hand. "One might finish up in a worse way than this, captain," he said. "I suppose there's not much chance for us?"

The captain shook his head. "Not much, my lord," he said. "The wind's getting up; there's a hole in her bottom—don't you hear the water rushing in?—she'll heel over before long—" There was no need to finish the sentence. "It's a pity," he added, after a moment, "a pity! She was a fine vessel, and I'm—fond and proud of her." His voice broke slightly, and he moved away as if he did not like Gaunt to see his emotion.

Gaunt made his way with some difficulty to the bow, and leaning against the bulwark, looked into the fog. A strange feeling of peace and rest was stealing over him. As he had said, one might make a worse finish than this. It had been no great sacrifice on his part, the surrender of the place in the boat to Jackson, for he had not the least desire to prolong a life which was now a burden to him. To such men as Gaunt, life is only precious while it holds the possibility of hope and love. He was sorry for the poor ship, sorry for the captain's grief, and still more sorry that so brave a man should perish; but for himself he had no regret, no desire to escape the end.

Indeed, he did not think of himself, but of Decima. As he gazed into the fog, his memory and imagination were limning upon its gray surface the scenes in which he had acted with her. He recalled their first meeting at the Zoo; the day they had met by the stream; the many times they had been together at the Hall; the night of the ball, when he had held her in his arms; and lastly, the night of their parting, when he had told her of his love and she had whispered her confession of her love for him.

He could hear her voice, like weird music, infinitely sweet and infinitely sad, coming through the roar of the waves, the grating and grinding of the doomed ship; he could feel her kisses warm upon his lips; feel her arms about his neck, her heart beating against his.

Memory is a strange thing. At that moment there came back to Gaunt's mind some verses which he had read years ago, and which he had not thought of since:

"There is no hope," the curlew moans;
"She is not thine; she ne'er can be!"
"No hope!" the murmuring sea "lonesome;
"No hope!" the wind sighs mockingly.

"Oh, love! though miles may stretch between Us twain, I see thy face, thy form;
Thou dwellest within my heart, my quest,
And on my lips thy kiss is warm.

"Oh, love, my love! for some short space
Think of me, in this lonely spot,
Haunted by your dear voice and face;
And oh, my love! forget me not!"

Forget me not! What right had he to wish that she should remember him? His very love for her had fallen like a blight upon her young life. No! Rather let him wish that she would forget him. And, surely, she should do so. She was young; her life still stretched before her. Her love for him would gradually wane and die; some other man would come and stir her heart with love again. But let him be whom he may, though he were a thousand times worthier of her than Gaunt was, he would not love her with a more passionate and devoted love than that which had burned like a pure flame in Gaunt's heart.

He pictured her, the wife of another man, with a keener anguish than any fear of the approaching death could have aroused; but yet with no bitterness, for, as he thought of her, his lips moved in fervent prayer for her happiness.

"God bless you, my dearest, my dearest!" he murmured. "May my mad love never cast its shadow over your future happiness!"

The captain came up to him. "She is sailing fast!" he said. "She will go over presently." Gaunt nodded.

"All right," he said. The captain took out his pipe. "Have you any tobacco?" he asked. Gaunt handed him his pouch, then filled his own pipe.

They stood side by side, smoking in silence. Suddenly a big wave, which seemed mountains high, struck the side, the vessel heeled over, and Gaunt was thrown on his back. When he looked up, half blinded by the spray, he could not see the captain. The brave man had gone.

Another wave smote the vessel, and Gaunt felt himself swept against the deck-house so violently that he was half stunned by the contact. A spar from the rigging lay across his chest, and instinctively he clasped it. He lay thus, for it was impossible to stand, for some minutes; and then came another wave, and, still grasping the spar, he was swept overboard.

How long he retained consciousness after he had been dashed into the sea can not be told. To swim was impossible; the ground swell was too violent. Mechanically he still clung to the spar. The tide was setting out to sea, and as he floated, he saw that the fog was gradually lifting, and as he was borne on the top of a wave, he looked round for the vessel. She had disappeared.

"HOMCO" is a superior grade of Cornmeal, inasmuch as the grain is hulled before being milled, and the husks are not ground up as is ordinarily the case.

It is the ideal meal for horses and cattle and is a great milk producer.

SALADA BUILDING, BOSTON.

This building, situated at Stuart and Berkeley Streets, Boston, is constructed of granite and limestone, and has eight stories and a basement. It is replete with every modern convenience for the speedy and cleanly packing of tea.

Prof. Morrison Legge, the eminent British scientist, in a recent address before the students of Harvard University, described it as "the finest example of commercial architecture he had ever seen."

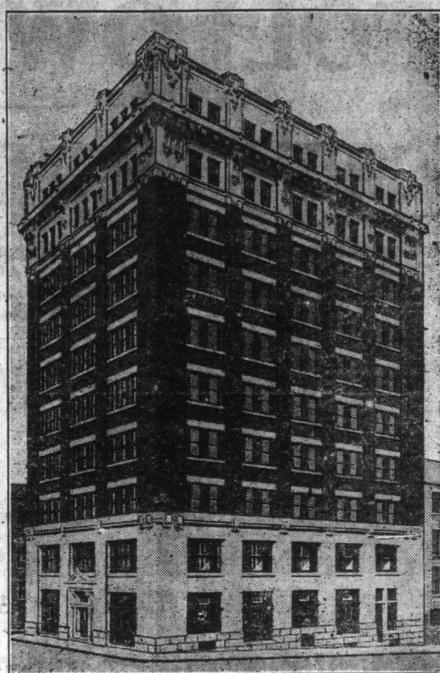

SALADA BUILDING, TORONTO.

THE THREE LARGEST TEA WAREHOUSES IN THE WORLD.

These three huge warehouses owned and operated exclusively by the Salada Tea Company, are the largest in the world devoted to the blending and packing of tea. In less than 30 years "Salada" has become a household word throughout Canada and the United States and is, indeed, by far the largest selling tea in America. Large quantities are also exported to South America and to Europe.

Besides these buildings in Toronto, Montreal and Boston, other Salada offices are situated in Winnipeg, New York, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco and London, Eng. The Company trades only in tea and only in tea of Salada quality, thus assuring undivided attention to the product. Every packet of Salada wherever bought may be relied upon to be of exactly the same fine quality and to yield an unequalled cup of tea. This policy of keeping faith with the public has been responsible for Salada's extraordinary sale.

SALADA BUILDING, MONTREAL.

The magnificent building shown above, situated at the corner of St. Lawrence Blvd. and La Royer Streets, Montreal, will be occupied by the Salada Tea Company about February 1st next. The present building at St. Paul and St. Sulpice Sts. erected 11 years ago, has for some time proved inadequate for the business.

CRAWFORD MOBBED.
MONCTON, N.B., Dec. 6. Lindsay Crawford was not allowed to speak here to-night, and after the meeting broke up he was mobbed and made to kiss the British flag and given until the first train left to get out of town.

INUNCTION SET ASIDE.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. An injunction against the Shipping Board forbidding the sale of the former German passenger liners, issued by the District of Columbia Supreme Court, on application of William Randolph Hearst, was set aside to-day by the District Court of Appeals. The subsequent action by the Congress authorizing the sale of the ships, the court said, made the question involved as to the Board's powers a "moot" one.

WORST STORM FOR A DECADE.
MONTREAL, Dec. 6. Following protracted rain of the weekend the river level took a jump and is now thirty feet eight inches, or eight inches over highwater mark in a thirty-foot channel and over a foot above Saturday's level. From the standpoint of horticultural and nursery gardeners, the recent storm is the worst in over a decade. A combination of sleet, rain and frost playing havoc with the trees and has caused widespread mortality to young trees. All telephones and telegraph communications between Montreal and Three Rivers has been cut off by the breaking down of many poles.

WHAT DEVALERA SAYS.
NEW YORK, Dec. 6. Britain must withdraw all troops from Ireland and liberate all political prisoners as a preliminary to the restoring of peace in Ireland, Eamon DeValera, President of the Irish Republic, declared here to-day in a statement relative to a message despatched to Lloyd George, concerning the Premier's initial steps leading to peace.

KING CONSTANTINE RETURNS.
LUCERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 6. Former King Constantine will embark at Brindisi on a merchant ship for Athens, probably on Friday or Saturday. This decision was definitely reached to-day.

TO PROHIBIT IMMIGRATION TO U. S. A.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. A favorable report on the Johnson Bill, prohibiting immigration into the United States for a period of two years, was ordered to-day by the House Immigration Committee. Chairman Johnston of the Committee, said the measure would be given preference in the House.

AMENDING HOME RULE BILL
LONDON, Dec. 6. The Government was again defeated in the House of Lords to-night, when an amendment, proposing a new clause to the Home Rule Bill, offered by the Marquis of Salisbury, was carried by a vote of fifty-one to fifty. This amendment provided that neither a northern or southern parliament should be established until the King's authority and protection of the rights and liberties of all persons in both Northern and Southern Ireland were fully assured and that otherwise an appointed day for putting the act in force should be fixed by the resolution of the Imperial Parliament.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND HOMELESS.
AYLONA, Alba, Dec. 6. An earthquake occurred in Tepeleni

District, to the S.W. of this city Sunday, rendering fifteen thousand persons homeless.

U.S. TRADE.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. Great Britain and Japan were the only ones of the large countries that took less goods from the United States in October than during the same month a year ago, while Canada, Mexico, Chile, Germany and the Dutch East Indies were the only countries from which the United States received more goods than during the corresponding period of last year.

ASKS PRAYER FOR PEACE.
BELFAST, Dec. 6. Archbishop Hartly, speaking in Thurles Cathedral yesterday said, "We ought to pray for Irish peace and peace with justice and honour." "I am convinced," he continued, "that continuance of violence would spell ruin for Ireland. In some ways time seems favorable for peace. At least there is a rift in the dark clouds which have been over our country for some time. The Archbishop of Tuam has appealed for a truce of God and Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland, has given his blessing to the appeal."

FISH CARRIER ASHORE.
TURKS ISLAND, Dec. 6. The British schooner Glast King ran ashore near Ambergris Cay in the Calcos Group, on December 1st. The crew and passengers on board were saved. Assistance has been sent to the stranded craft and it is believed she will get off safely. The schooner recently brought a cargo of fish from Newfoundland to Kingston.

STRIKE THREATENED.
OTTAWA, Dec. 6. An immediate strike ballot by unions affected will probably be taken on the Canadian railroads, if the famous order of D. B. Hanna, Director of National Railways is not withdrawn or so modified that it will not interfere with what are looked upon as inalienable rights of citizens to seek public office according to information received here to-day.

HARDING WANTS BETTER TEAM WORK.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. The third and final session of the sixty sixth Congress began to-day with President-Elect Harding in his seat in the Senate. The day of co-operation and friendly relations between the White House and Congress was forecasted by Harding in his short address from the floor of the Senate. Though disclaiming any desire to criticize the present administration Harding declared it one of the ambitions of his four years as chief executive to insure better team work between the two branches of the United States Government.

WANTS ARBITRATION.
MONTREAL, Dec. 6. "We are ready to put men right back to work the very minute that authorities of the company state their willingness to have differences between us decided by an Arbitration Board of any kind." This was a statement made to-day by Jas. Murdoch, delegate of striking railwaymen of Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co., who is in this city at present conferring with D. H. MacDougall, President of the Company.

TWO MORE BANKS UNDER.
BISMARCK, N.D., Dec. 6. The Citizens' Bank of Edgely and the State Bank of Nortonville, closed their doors to-day, according to word received by O. E. Lofthus, State Bank examiner. This brings the total of recent bank closures reported here to twenty-two, all on account of depleted reserves.

SINN FEIN DOCUMENTS SEIZED.
LIVERPOOL, Dec. 6. Sensational Sinn Fein documents, alleged to deal with the purchase of arms and munitions on a great scale, are reported to have been discovered during a raid at Seaford. In the course of the raid two young and stylishly attired Irish girls were arrested.

MET HEROIC DEATH.
EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 6. Guy Patterson, a pioneer of Hardley, Alta., and his two young daughters, aged seven and four, were burned to death when the Patterson home was destroyed by fire to-day. Patterson's efforts were successful in saving his eldest daughter. In a desperate effort to rescue the two others, he was overcome and died with them. Mrs. Patterson was badly burned in her efforts to save the family.

What a Beak.
As everyone knows, the beaks of birds differ to a certain extent. Few people, however, realize exactly how closely a beak is adapted to do its work. The heron uses its beak as a dagger, and very expert it is in its use in this respect, for which purpose the beak is specially suited. The helmet hornbill uses its beak in exactly the same way as we use a hammer, and its beak is hard and shaped for this use.

The beaks differ because of the birds' different methods of dealing with their food; this is the case with many fish-eating birds. The scissor bill, for instance, differs considerably from the puffin; the short flat beak of the latter bird is made for holding as well as catching fish, but it is also remarkable for another reason. At the base of the beak are certain brightly-colored plates; when the moulting season comes round these plates are shed with the feathers. They appear again, however, the following spring.

The strangest beaks of all are perhaps those belonging to the hind bird of New Zealand, for the beak of the male bird differs from the beak of the female, and when food is found by one to be out of reach of its beak, it is said that the male is called, to see if, with its different shaped beak, it is able to capture the morsel.

A Clock Without Hands.
The ingenuity of the Newfoundland-lander is not surpassed by any people of the world, and this fact is demonstrated daily in their struggle for existence on the deep, and the unique methods which they contrive to overcome the most difficult tasks. Apart from this, they have a genius for the cultivation of the finer arts and this fact was brought forcibly to our attention on Saturday last. A clock whose face, at first seemed a blank with a space in it where the hands of an ordinary time piece would be at 4.20 was shown to us. This space is 1 in. by 3/4 in. in size, where the hours and minutes of the day come into view in their regular order. A pair of discs, one bearing the hours, the other the minutes, are arranged so as to revolve as the hour and minute hands on the "hand-clock," but the dial of this clock is oblivious of all time except the time it is at the moment. It is certainly a clock the motto of which is "Now, this hour is the living present." The piece of mechanism here referred to was made by Mr. Charles McCarthy, architect (a Carbonar man), and it is certainly a piece of work that shows this gentleman to be a skilled artist in this craft of novel construction.

Mainly About People.
Mr. Bradford Norman, Jr. and Mr. Junian R. Sloan, of New York, who met while serving in the navy, and both of whom are prominent in Newport and New York society, have sailed from Vancouver for the Orient on their way to India in quest of big game. They are armed with cameras, still and movie, and will only use weapons when forced to do so. Their tour will include Africa. General Joseph Mangin, who commanded many American troops in the world war, has just been chosen to head the mission sent to South Russia to study General Wrangel and the Anti-Bolshevist situation there. He has eight children, the largest progeny of any allied general who commanded in the world war.

The value of chess as a path finder was shown in the New York experience of Samuel Reszewski, the nine year old wizard. He was in the big city but two days when he was able to find his way to the Pennsylvania hotel by treating every locality as a chess board. He recently won a $10 wager from his cousin by marking the maze of streets that intersect the East Side.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO LISTEN!

Not long ago I was telling my small niece about certain changes which had occurred since I was a little girl of her age. Said I: "When I was a little girl, only a very few people had telephones. There was only one in all our neighborhood and when we played at that little girl's house we used to go and look at it because we had never seen one anywhere else."

"But how did they call it?" said she. "But how did you call it if you didn't have any telephones?" I thought of that conversation the other day when millions of American women were going to the polls to cast their first vote for President.

McAuliffe Says Dempsey Will Be An Easy Winner.

New York.—Georges Carpentier's chances to rock the heavyweight crown off Jack Dempsey's brow are very slim, according to Jack McAuliffe, retired undefeated lightweight champion.

The former lightweight king, credited with being one of the cleverest fighters of the old school, bases his opinion on a workout he was fortunate enough to have with both principals in the next battle for the championship.

"I have boxed with both of them and have had a chance to study them at close quarters," he says. "I like Dempsey's style of boxing and I don't like the form of Carpentier. Dempsey slides and glides around like a panther. I have never boxed with a man so hard to hit. He has a clever knack of twisting his head that makes even the best directed blow just a glancing blow. On the other hand Carpentier comes in straight and rushes in a crouching position. This style of fighting would be pie for the champion.

"Another thing. I don't like Carpentier's overhand punch. He leaves himself wide open and gets himself off his balance. While it is the hardest thing to get over on Dempsey, the Frenchman is comparatively easy to hit.

"That means a lot with a puncher like Dempsey. The champion does not know how hard he can hit and how really strong he is. He rocked me several times with short blows that did not come more than an inch or two and yet he insisted that he was drawing them.

"Both are punchers, but Dempsey her father and mother go off to the polls together. "When I was a little girl the women stayed at home while the men went to the polls."

"But how did they vote?"

"And probably her niece will say: "But how did they vote if they didn't go to the polls?"

Truly it is wonderful to see how quickly and easily we assimilate new inventions and new customs. And I do not believe that this one will be any different from the rest.

THANKSGIVING.

For strength which has sustained us through the day
Dear Lord, our thanks we give!
For every smile that lights life's drearily way,
And makes it good to live.
Once more, with grateful hearts and reverent prayer,
Our gratitude we offer for Thy care.

For fruit of field and vine and orchard tree,
The sunshine and the rain,
The tempests weathered on the land and sea,
Accept our thanks again,
Almighty God from whom all blessings come,
Hear now our prayers, though long our lips were dumb.

For freedom and our country, clean of hate,
Our children at their play,
Our homes where peace and love and joy await,
Accept our thanks to-day.
Oh God, in all we do and yet may dare,
Make us, we pray, more worthy of Thy care.

This Week's Wisdom.

Honesty is no use if you have no reputation for it.

If a man has but one shirt he never owes a big wash bill.

Few women realize how beautiful other women really are.

As an eye opener, what's the matter with an alarm clock?

Crying babies and good intentions are not always carried out.

Truth lies at the bottom of a well. That is why so many people let well alone.

It's a stiff neck that has no turning—when a pretty girl trips down the street.

HUMAN NATURE.

The climate here is luscious, very, and even winter days are warm; but my old heart is so contrary I sometimes long to see a storm. Where I abide the weather wizard provides the smoothest goods he owns; and yet I long to hear a blizzard whoop past the house, with madlin tones. The tourists come, a cheerful legion, and visit me a while and say, "This is the finest, grandest region—here every day's a perfect day!" They dance around, the joyous friskers, ecstasie over things they see; and I remark, "You bet your whiskers, this country's good enough for me." But when the tourists leave my shanty, in general pairs or blocks of five, I say to Jane, my spinster auntie, "I wish a cyclone would arrive! Oh, for a good old Kansas twister, destroying barns, uprooting trees! Oh, for a hot wind that would blister, oh, for a cold wind that would freeze!"

And were I back where winds are blowing, and winter's white with snow and rime, some grievous fit I would be throwing, denouncing such a beastly climate. There is no bliss for any mortal until he quits this vale of woe, and enters, through the shining portal, the land where all the righteous go. And that bright land—perhaps he'll scan it, and mutter to his saintly guide, "This place looks cheap beside the planet where I grew up and loved and died."

Reports Sent Abroad.

It has almost become a tradition with the Government press to hurl accusations at the Opposition papers, charging the latter with furnishing information, damaging to the interests of the dominion abroad. During the whole discussion surrounding the operation of the Fish Regulations and the effect on trade caused by their enactment, Government editors went blue in the face in their efforts to saddle upon the newspapers opposing these measures—and which do yet oppose them—the whole sin and responsibility for making known to outsiders the condition of things at home. That such a charge was baseless did not concern the honorable gentlemen who made them. So long as their journals circulated amongst the fishermen and their fiery articles were believed by these men, having no means of disproving them, everything went well, and the Opposition press was held up as unpatriotic and a menace to the future prosperity of the land. But when the fishermen foregathered at St. John's and learned from bitter experience that the Fish Regulations were really the cause of the low price of fish locally, their eyes were opened, and they saw with a clarity of vision that such things as had been doled out to them daily by the Government organs were entirely false and misleading. These men will take home with them the impressions gathered during their stay in the capital, and will not hesitate to inform their friends and associates just how much of perverted truth they had been reading in the official Government papers, and the object of the propaganda carried on by them.

The average man might very reasonably be supposed to take for granted all that was written of the iniquity of the newspapers hostile to the policy of the Coaker-Squires Administration, because the chances were that he had not an opportunity of reading both sides of the discussion. It is easy to forget that there are many avenues through which reports are sent from Newfoundland abroad, for the information of tradespeople who have commercial interests and connections with the mercantile body here. Agencies have officials in touch with every situation as it develops, and these officials make daily reports, or more frequently if necessary, to their principals. All these are collated and published, a copy being forwarded each subscriber, so that at a glance he can size up financial occurrences and make his dispositions accordingly. Apart from these agencies there is the constant coming and going of commercial men, whose report at the end of their trip is made to their principals, and in numerous instances it is not at all unusual to have interviews with these travellers published in the press of the country to which they belong. Then another source of information to the foreign press and its readers comes from the ever-increasing numbers of people leaving and in some cases, returning to the dominion. As a rule, these when approached by newspapermen do not hesitate to frankly state the conditions which impelled them to emigrate, and do not minimize their description of home affairs. Lastly, but perhaps the most important of all, is the press correspondent, whose duty it is to supply the Press Agencies abroad with daily reports for publication. Not a day passes without some dispatch being sent over wires and cables, informing an insatiable outside press that such and such has happened in Newfoundland. Whether it is a fire or a failure, a wreck or a wake, a deal or a disaster, the ubiquitous correspondent quickly gathers the details and gets them into shape for his press service. And so in the ways mentioned, do the business men of the world outside derive their information and make their dispositions in accordance therewith. The Opposition newspapers, therefore, are not the great sinners that super-patriotic local journalists in the pay of the Government would represent them to be.

Former Consecrations in the R. C. Cathedral.

In view of the Consecration ceremony about to take place in the Cathedral to-morrow, it may be interesting to recall some previous ceremonies of this kind which took place in St. John's within the last hundred years. The first Roman Catholic Bishop to be consecrated in Newfoundland was the Rt. Rev. Bishop Fleming, who received Episcopal Consecration in the old Chapel at the hands of his predecessor, Rt. Rev. Dr. Scallan, on October 28, 1829. In these far off days, as may be easily understood, it was difficult to comply with that condition of the Rubrics which demanded the presence of two Bishops on the occasion. A dispensation had to be obtained from Rome, and Bishop Scallan in the Consecration ceremony was assisted by two Priests, Fathers Ewer and Devereaux. The next ceremony of the kind to occur took place more than a quarter of a century afterwards in the present Cathedral, when Bishop Dalton of Harbour Grace, was consecrated by Bishop Mullock, then Bishop of St. John's. On this, as on the previous occasion, Bishop Mullock was assisted by two Priests, Dean Mackin and Rev. Charles Dalton.

After the lapse of thirty-five years more the Cathedral was again the scene of a Consecration ceremony, this time the Rt. Rev. M. F. Howley, late Archbishop of St. John's, being consecrated Bishop of Annapolis on the 24th of June, 1892. This ceremony was in striking contrast with the two previous Consecrations in Newfoundland, in that the elaborate and imposing ceremonial was carried out in all its detail. The consecrating Prelate was the Rt. Rev. Bishop Power, the Bishop of St. John's, assisted by Bishop McDonald of Charlottetown, and Bishop McDonald of Harbour Grace. The sermon on the occasion was preached by the late Bishop O'Brien of Halifax, and was an effort in sacred eloquence, which has not yet been forgotten by those who had the pleasure of hearing it. All the principal figures in this imposing ceremonial have since passed to their eternal reward.

The next Consecration in the Cathedral did not take place until July 26, 1911, when the late Bishop of St. George's was elevated to the Purple. The officiating Prelate on this occasion was Most Rev. P. K. Stagni, of the Apostolic Delegation, assisted by Archbishop Howley and Bishop March of Harbour Grace, the latter having been in the meantime consecrated in his own Cathedral in Harbour Grace on November 4, 1906. His Grace Archbishop Howley, one of the distinguished predecessors of Bishop Power in St. George's, preached the sermon on the occasion.

On June 29, 1915, the present Archbishop of St. John's received Episcopal Consecration in his Cathedral at the hands of the Apostolic Delegate, assisted by Bishop March of Harbour Grace and Bishop Morrison of Antigonish. Bishop O'Leary of Charlottetown being also present in the Sanctuary, and Bishop Power of St. George's delivering the oration. This was the largest number of Catholic Prelates to be assembled on a single occasion in Newfoundland.

To-morrow the noble edifice will be again the scene of an imposing ceremony when the Rt. Rev. H. T. Renouf will be raised to the Episcopacy by His Grace the Archbishop of St. John's, assisted by Bishops March of Harbour Grace, and Morrison of Antigonish, the latter being also the preacher. The Consecration of Bishop-elect Renouf to-morrow, will mark the sixth ceremony of its kind to be held in St. John's within the last century, and will no doubt be witnessed by a congregation befitting the solemnity of the occasion.

Helping Trinity Voters.

One of the busiest sights on Water Street to-day is at the western end of the General Post Office, where the extensive addition to that premises is now under way. Crowds of curious ones stop to gaze at the ingenuity of the concrete mixer, which human-like lifts the cement and sand from the platform to the mixing trough. The dozens of fishermen from Trinity Bay who take a look at the operations leave the place with words and expressions of disgust at the way their money is being sunk in a monument to the Hon. W. W. Halfyard's memory.

Herring Schooner Lost.

The Deputy Minister of Customs has received the following message from the Sub-Collector at Port au Port: "Schr. Emmeline Burke, of Channel, Seely, master, with a cargo of herring, went ashore at Point Mal, east side of this Bay, on Friday last. The crew are safe but the vessel is reported as a total wreck."

The Premier's Body Guard.

The Premier, Hon. R. A. Squires, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon by a special train sent to meet him at Port aux Basques. Although the time of his arrival was well known it appears that not more than a baker's dozen were at the station to greet him. Diligent enquiries could not elicit the names of any other gentlemen who were present than the list shows. Dr. Woodell, Dr. Campbell, Robert Walsh, Hon. Halfyard, J. Brown, Mr. Gosse, M.H.A., J. T. Meaney and Mr. Parrell. When the Premier stepped from the train there was not a cheer given by his supporters, and the rain continued to drip off the eaves of the station in a pluvial lachrymal welcome home to the wanderer.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, Dec. 7, 1920.
Colds in the head are not uncommon at this season of the year, and in order to save what is sometimes a great deal of annoyance, it is well to attempt to stop a cold in the head as near the start as possible. About the most effective application for this purpose that we have come upon, is that preparation known as V.E.M. It is a compound Eucalyptus Ointment, and so far resembles several other popular remedies of the kind. But the real merit of V.E.M. is the effective manner in which the remedy is applied to the inflamed and irritable mucous membrane. By means of the simple tube provided, the Ointment is placed in direct contact with the whole of the inflamed surface of the nose, and at once begins its soothing work, with the result that the cold is soon relieved and then cured. Price 70c. a tube.

An Act of Courtesy.

And High Consideration. The following communication from His Grace the Archbishop received the consideration of the Importers' Association which met in the Board of Trade Rooms to-day, Mr. Ayre presiding. The appended letter from His Grace the Archbishop to Judge Morris was read, and the reasonable request contained therein granted, as shown by the response of the Secretary of the Importers' Association:

The Palace,
St. John's,
Dec. 4, 1920.

"My Dear Judge Morris.—The ceremony of the Episcopal Consecration of the Bishop-Elect of St. George's, as you are aware, will take place in our Cathedral on Wednesday next, beginning at 9 o'clock, and should be over at about eleven. As the ceremony is a very unusual one, and of rare occurrence, we are naturally desirous that as many of our people as possible should be present on the occasion. As the stores are open on that day, unless some arrangement can be made large numbers will be prevented from being present."

"I thought perhaps that as Chairman of the Committee of citizens who are making preparations for the fitting celebration of the event, you might interview some members of the Importers' Association, with a view to ascertaining whether it would be possible to have Catholic samples of the various business places or at least some of them, given a few hours leave of absence on Wednesday morning."

"I am aware that business will be getting a little more brisk than usual towards the end of the year and if there is any inconvenience whatsoever attached to my request, I have no desire to press it. It may be that many will not avail of the permission even if it is granted, but on the other hand I am sure there are large numbers, especially in the West End, who wish to attend if possible. At the same time I should wish to make it perfectly clear that I do not desire to make any unreasonable or embarrassing request and I shall be quite satisfied with any decision the importers may come to."

Sincerely yours,
E. P. ROCHE."

REQUEST GRANTED.

"Hon. P. J. Morris, K.C., J.P., City.

Dear Sir,—The Importers' Association held a meeting to consider your letter covering a letter to you from His Grace Archbishop Roche.

"It was unanimously decided that all employers present would grant permission to Roman Catholic employees to attend the service, on application for leave to do so."

Yours truly,
R. A. TEMPLETON,
Hon. Secy. Importers' Ass'n."

Made Record Trip.

Capt. Conrad of the schooner Gilbert B. Walters, now lying at Balne Johnston's wharf who was mate on the Lunenburg schooner Delawana gives some interesting side lights on the international race which he would relate to anyone interested. He says the Delawana sailed over 2 1/2 miles more water than the Esperanto and then was only 4 minutes behind. The Gilbert B. Walters is the schooner that led the fleet till the last 4 miles in the fishermen's race at Halifax when she broke her fore topmast, which she had to tow all one tack before it was cleared away. On the run from Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, to this port the Walters made a record trip. Leaving there Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock she arrived in St. John's on Thursday morning at 11—in all from wharf to wharf 82 hours. She is now loading fish for Barbados.

War Veterans' Meeting.

A general meeting of the G.W.V.A. took place in the T. A. Armoury last night when a fair attendance of members were present. The meeting was called to order at 8.30 o'clock and owing to the illness of the President, Lt.-Col. G. T. Carty, the chair was occupied by the Vice-President, Mr. C. Kearley. The Secretary read the minutes of the last meeting, which after some little discussion were received and adopted. The financial statement was also read by the Secretary and showed the Association to be in good standing. The chairman, however, remarked that the Club rooms were not being patronized by the members, and urged all the men to visit the rooms and become more interested in the Association's work, thereby giving the executive the assistance that is required to satisfactorily carry out the work of running the Association. Correspondence between the Association and the Canadian Bank of Commerce in connection with the placing of a returned man as fireman and messenger in the Bank's employ, was also read and will be discussed at a later meeting, when the facts of the case have been more fully dealt with. Capt. H. A. Anderson, chairman of the committee appointed to interview the Government in the matter of the housing problem and increased pensions made the following report:

Mr. Chairman—Comrades. As Chairman of the Special Committee appointed to deal with the matters of increased pensions and housing for returned service men, I would like to state what has happened during my chairmanship. I understand Mr. Higgins, who kindly acted for me during my absence in the United States, told you at the last general meeting what had transpired to that date. How that a 20 per cent. increase, dating from January 1st last, had actually been paid in the following instances:

- (a) Totally disabled.
 - (b) Orphans of sailors and soldiers.
 - (c) Children of deceased sailors and soldiers.
 - (d) All other cases where a deceased or totally disabled sailor or soldier was, or is, the sole support.
- He doubtless told you, too, of our unceasing efforts to get the 20 per cent. all round increase paid. I will read you two letters which I addressed to the Acting Prime Minister since my return, which I think reflect the whole situation:

Water Street, St. John's, Newfoundland, November 20th, 1920.

Hon. W. F. Coaker, Minister of Marine & Fisheries, City.

Sir—Regarding Mr. Higgins' and my conversation with you on Wednesday last on the matter of pensions, it has occurred to us, that in view of the following facts:

- (a) That the increase was actually promised by the Executive Government some months ago.
- (b) That the vote for the general 20 per cent. increase passed the last Assembly.
- (c) That it is desirable to pay it out before the end of the year, it has occurred to us that in order to effect the actual payments by Christmas time, (which, happy suggestion came from yourself), the suggestion for paying out the increase should be put into motion at once.

Would you, therefore, kindly prepare the way by causing instructions to be issued to the Pensions' Authorities to make up the accounts in question, in order that, when the proper time comes, the cheques may be issued without further delay? I understand the process in question will take some weeks.

If you could do this, it would be something definite to tell the veterans at the next general meeting, which is shortly being held. A lot of them feel, I know, that the matter has been unduly delayed.

May we expect a reply, please, early next week?

I am, Sir, Your obedient servant, H. A. ANDERSON, Chairman Special Committee, Great War Veterans' Association, St. John's, Nfld., December 3rd, 1920.

Hon. W. F. Coaker, Acting Prime Minister, City.

Sir—I have the honour to enquire if the matter contained in my letter to you of the 20th ult., has had the attention of the Executive Government, and if instructions have yet been issued to the Pensions' Commissioners to pay the general 20 per cent. increase for the year 1920 to Newfoundland pensioners?

A general meeting of War Veterans is being held on Monday, the 6th inst., and I would be grateful if you could furnish me with a reply before that date.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant, H. A. ANDERSON, Chairman Special Committee, Great War Veterans' Association. There has been no answer from the Government, and one can only assume that the Acting Prime Minister is waiting until his colleagues, Messrs. Squires and Warren, return to the country. We know, of course, and are sorry for it, that Mr. Brownrigg, the Minister of Finance, has been on the sick list for some time.

But in view of Mr. Squires' assurance that there would be no hold-up in paying the all round 20 per cent. increase, even though he himself was away, I consider the delay in paying it quite unnecessary. Major Parsons' report, which you will remember was awarded by the Government, has been in their hands for some months, and I understand, supports the 20 per cent. increase. Mr. Coaker suggested that the additional cheques would come in nicely for Christmas time. They certainly would these hard times, but unless the Government decides quickly it does not look as if the cheques will be in the hands of pensioners by that time. Of course the 20 per cent. all round increase dates from January 1st, 1920, to December 31st, 1920. I don't know what will happen after that. You may rest assured that my Committee will keep plugging at the Government and will see that they are kept to their promises.

We know that the finances of the country are by no means as good as they might be, due to trade depression. This is not peculiar to Newfoundland, but is world wide. Anyhow a hundred thousand dollars will not make or break the Government, and a promise is a promise.

I think, however, that War Veterans are not unmindful of the seriousness of these hard times, and will do everything in their power for the sake of economy and increased output of work. We don't want it to be said that Veterans are trying to bleed the Government, but that they are only endeavouring to get their rights—rights which were promised to them.

Now a word about the housing. We have some twenty-five ex-service men who are actually and sorely in need of houses. While, of course, it is impossible to do anything in the building way this year, we have, I think, the sympathy of the Government to do something next year. There is a possibility that we may work in conjunction with the Dominion Co-operative Building Association, who have successfully erected thirty houses this summer, and that we will build, twenty-five in the spring for War Veterans, the latter paying as much as possible towards the cost of erection themselves, the Government lending the rest, and of course, becoming landlords of the houses. We are at present working on a proposition to this end, and the Acting Prime Minister, Mr. Coaker, gave us his assurance that a scheme of any reasonable nature would be backed by the Government. Possess your souls in patience, therefore, those of you who are in need of a house, and let us hope that in the spring something will materialize from the promises of our sorely-tried Government, who I feel sure are doing their best.

Mr. J. G. Higgins, as a member of the Committee, endorsed Capt. Anderson's report, and also explained that he had also written several letters to the Acting Prime Minister, the Hon. W. F. Coaker, in connection with the matter of increased pensions and the replies received were not satisfactory. Mr. Coaker, whilst assuring the Committee that if the Government had promised an increase that same would be granted, still he had no remembrance of same. Major Parsons, Chairman of the Pension Board, has already handed in his report, and up to the present nothing has been done in the matter. Comrade Higgins therefore proposed the following resolutions, which were seconded by Comrade C. Garland:

- WHEREAS at a joint meeting of the Executive Government and a Special Committee of the G.W.V.A., held at the Prime Minister's Office last July, the Executive Government promised that they would grant a 20 per cent. increase in pensions in the following cases:
- (a) Total disability.
- (b) Orphans of sailors and soldiers.
- (c) Children of deceased sailors and soldiers.
- (d) All other cases where a deceased sailor or soldier was or is the sole support, which promise has been fulfilled.

AND WHEREAS the Executive Government further promised a general increase of 20 per cent. to all Newfoundland pensioners as from Jan. 1, 1920, upon receipt of a report on Pensions from Major Parsons, provided his report would favour such an increase;

AND WHEREAS we understand Major Parsons' report was handed in to the Government some time ago, and is favourable to the general increase;

AND WHEREAS this general increase has not yet been paid; THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that we members of the G.W.V.A. protest against the loss of time in paying this general increase, and demand that the 20 per cent. be issued without further delay.

On being put to the meeting the resolutions were unanimously passed. The Chairman then read the general report of the Association for the year, which on motion was unanimously adopted.

General discussion of matters in connection with the welfare of the Association then took place in which various members took part, after which the outgoing officers vacated their places and on motion Lt.-Col. W. March was appointed chairman to conduct the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows:

- President—Capt. H. Anderson, Capt. B. Dicks, J. G. Higgins.
- Vice-President—Major Butler.
- Asst. Vice-President—C. Kearley.
- Asst. Secy.—Treasurer—H. Mitchell.

Forty-One Years in the Public Service--The Evening Telegram

Civil Servants and the Irish Question.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir.—Mr. P. J. Kinsella's letter about the L.O.A. Resolutions drew my attention again to the fact that a number of civil servants have been making themselves prominent on the Irish question—too prominent in fact. Some of the expressions used by officials in this country would if made use in a foreign country by servants of the state be sufficient reason for a declaration of war or for the demanding of an apology coupled with the dismissal of the offender. We Newfoundland civil servants have privileges: we have also responsibilities and some things which other people may say or do with praise from all men might be deserving of censure if said or done by a civil servant.

The Judges of the Supreme Court do not protest because they are disenfranchised and cannot vote at any election. Civil servants are not supposed to take an active part in politics. Each civil servant may have his own private opinion and may even vote at an election but he cannot stand in a public platform or write letters to the newspapers boosting Squires or Ashin, Coaker or Crosbie. Anyone who is free to do so, but not a civil servant.

The gentlemen who form the British Government are superior officers to the civil servants of Newfoundland. Their powers, it is true, are limited with regard to us. They cannot dismiss us; but then the Minister of Justice, Mr. Warren, cannot dismiss a policeman. The Inspector General alone can do that. In fact the Attorney General cannot give direct orders to a policeman, yet he is the latter's superior officer, and it would sound strange to hear the policeman on Rawlin's Cross abusing Mr. Warren to all passers-by.

In the same way abuse of the British Government by Newfoundland civil servants is a piece of impertinence. Abuse of the British Cabinet by anyone else in Newfoundland is often right and proper and may not be unlawful.

Mr. Editor, I cannot and will not enter into any controversy on the Irish question. I am grieved to see it brought into our community. True, it makes me smile to see the facts of history misquoted and misapplied by both sides. As to its being a religious question I would say what the chameleon said, and the moral of that fable should apply both to proponents and opponents alike. It is over thirty years since I read the poem on the chameleon and I cannot remember it all. I give some of the concluding lines:

"All stared, the man looked wondrous wise.
My friends, then the chameleon cries,
(Then first the creature found a tongue)
You all are right and all are wrong."
"Think others see as well as you
Nor wonder if you find that none
Prefers your eyesight to his own."
Yours truly,
WARWICK SMITH,
Dec. 7, 1920.

Curliana.

The Annual meeting of The St. John's (Nfld.) Curling Association was held last evening in their rooms. The President, Hon. F. H. Steer, M.B.E., who so ably presided over the Association for the past two years occupied the chair and submitted his annual report, which was heartily and well received by the Curlers present.

The minutes of the last general meeting in April were then read and the Secretary's account submitted, which showed the Association to be in a good financial condition. Both reports and statement of accounts were received and adopted.

The election of officers was then proceeded with resulting as follows:

President—W. J. Higgins, K.C., M.H.A.
1st Vice President—W. H. Duder.
2nd Vice President—D. MacFarlane.
Secretary—A. H. Salter, M.B.E.

Committee of Management—George Whiteley, H. J. Duder, F. C. Crane, Hon. F. H. Steer, M.B.E., H. E. Cowan, and F. T. Behm, with the captain of the White Division to be elected.

The Curlers' new President, although young in years is old in experience, being prominently identified practically since his youth with all sports that tended to make a better citizen. We have been informed that he is a keen and canny Curlier—a good winner and a good loser and the Association is fortunate in the election of their new President.

Mr. Higgins, in thanking his brother Curlers for the honor thus conferred upon him, assured the Curlers that he would do his utmost to make this season a happy and successful one. He felt assured that with the cooperation of his brother Curlers and with the advice of the Committee of Management, the year would prove all that could be desired.

The annual fixtures will be arranged for in a day or two, and we wish the President, Officers and Curlers every good luck for 1921.

He Wants to Pass the Good News On, Says Armstrong

"It's Wonderful The Way Tanlac Has Improved My Wife's Health," He Declares.

"The wonderful improvement in my wife's general health is entirely due to Tanlac, and I am glad of the chance to tell folks what a splendid medicine we have proved it to be," said William Armstrong, of 88 Winter St., St. John, N.B.

"No one will ever know what she has suffered during the past few years on account of indigestion and gastritis. Rich or heavy foods acted like poisons on her stomach and she had to be very careful in her diet. But even so the gas would form and bloat her up until she would almost choke and sometimes she would faintly groan with agony on account of the pains which she had after eating. She had frequent bilious attacks that left her so weak that she could hardly stand up, and at one time she was so bad that we had to send her to the hospital. They patched her up for a bit, but it wasn't long before she was just as bad as ever."

"When I saw in the papers that so many people with stomach trouble were being helped by Tanlac, I got some for my wife, for I reasoned that if it didn't do her much good, it couldn't do her any harm. She often remarks now what a good thing it was when she tried Tanlac, and after the way it has helped her we have absolute faith in it. She now has a good appetite and can eat anything without fear of any stomach trouble afterwards. She is never bothered with biliousness and indeed feels better in every way. She is more grateful than I can say for all the good Tanlac has done her, and we never miss the opportunity of passing on the good news of what a splendid medicine it is."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gables by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in Millertown by Exploit Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freake. —adv.

Premier Squires Had Busy Mission.

Premier Squires, of Newfoundland, who arrived here this morning from England and Montreal, leaves to-night for St. John's on the steamer Kyle. He is accompanied by Mrs. Squires.

When seen this morning at the Belmont by a North Sydney Herald representative, the Premier seemed in a very pleasant mood, but said he was sorry he had no news of interest to give out.

"I was in England engaged in matters connected with the Canada-Newfoundland boundary dispute," said the Premier in answer to the Herald reporter, "and feel that the colony will get a fair deal in the matter."

"What is the outlook for the fishing industry in the Old Country?" asked the reporter.

"Well, just at present it is hard to say, but I gave the matter no little attention, and marketing fish in the Mediterranean was one of the matters I attended to while in England."

Premier Squires added that other matters that engaged his attention were the winding up of Newfoundland's military affairs, the graves of Newfoundland soldiers and war memorials.

While in Montreal he was making enquiries into the closing of the ore mines of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. at Bell Island, which has thrown so many men out of employment, but did not say whether it was the intention of the corporation to renew activity at an early date.

"I am going to pay a visit to the company's plant to-day," said Mr. Squires, as he excused himself to the reporter to catch the ferry steamer to Sydney.—North Sydney Herald, Dec. 4.

Andy Carnegie's Own Story.

One of Andrew Carnegie's habits was to keep a diary, in which he set down his experiences and impressions at fairly regular intervals. At certain times they were extremely frank, being intended for no other eye to light upon. Later on they seemed to contemplate publication some day, and became more reserved. The diaries form the basis of the steel king's autobiography, which has recently been issued with the consent of Mrs. Carnegie. Andrew Carnegie never was a popular man. He was too rich, despite his benefactions, and his benefactions themselves, while they somehow failed to win the public affection and gratitude. There was also a feeling, perhaps, that Carnegie, like Ford, projected his views into realms where they were of little value. No doubt when it was found that the Laird of Skibo had left many millions behind him his remark that it was a disgrace to die rich was unflatteringly recalled.

The autobiography shows Carnegie in other aspects. For one thing, it reveals the love he entertained for his father and mother, amounting to reverence for the latter. He said that "none could ever know her—I alone did that," and we must suppose that one of the greatest happinesses of his life was the fact that his mother lived long enough to see him develop into one of the great business men of the age, and was able to spend her declining years in affluence. Carnegie began humbly enough, but of his inheritance he writes: "The mother, nurse, cook, governess, teacher, saint, all in one; the father, exemplar, guide, counsellor and friend. Thus were my brother and I brought up. What has the child of millionaire or nobleman that counts with such a heritage?" The father was a weaver in Dunfermline, and in him was strongly ingrained that Scotch craving for education, for he was one of the five weavers who started the Dunfermline circulating library.

With the coming of steam machinery the father's earnings declined, and the family emigrated to the United States, the move being made possible by a loan from a devoted woman friend of Mrs. Carnegie. They found it almost as hard to get upon a self-supporting basis in the United States, and for a while Mrs. Carnegie earned four dollars a week binding shoes to make the family exchequer adequate. Andrew started work at the age of 15, and earned one dollar and a quarter a week. Later he became a messenger boy, and gave his first demonstration of organising ability. Messengers were entitled to collect an extra dime for each message delivered beyond a certain area, and naturally there was competition for such errands. At Andrew's suggestion all this extra money was pooled and evenly divided, thus abolishing hateful competition, and maybe assisting the consumer by removing the personal desire of the messenger boy for the extra dime destined for the community chest.

From being telegraph boy he gradually worked into the railroad business, and at the time of his father's death was earning a dollar a day. This caused the gentle father to say shortly before his death, "Andra, I'm proud of you." His railroad advancement was rapid at the time of the Civil War, for his immediate superior, Thomas A. Scott, had been appointed Assistant Secretary of War. He saw the future of iron bridge building, and early became a bridge-builder. He also bought an interest in the patent for the parlor car, which was destined to be the foundation of his fortune. So well had he prospered that in 1868 he wrote: "Thirty-three and an income of $50,000 per annum. Beyond this never earn—make no effort to increase fortune, but spend the surplus each year for benevolent purposes. Cast aside business forever except for others. Settle in Oxford and get a thorough education. . . settle then in London and get a controlling interest in some newspaper or live review. . . . Man must have an idol. . . . Whatever I engage in I must push fearlessly, therefore should I be careful to choose that life which will be the most elevating in its character."

His views about $50,000 a year being ample were modified, for Carnegie then was but really beginning, but it is only fair to say that even as a young man he was a systematic giver. The death of his mother and brother in 1886 was a tremendous blow to him. Shortly afterward he astonished his friends by marrying Miss Louise Whitfield, who brought him great happiness. It was after the birth of their only child, Margaret, named for his mother, that he bought Skibo Castle. His attraction for his native land was better displayed in the purchase of a beautiful public park for Dunfermline. It cost him $3,750,000, and he said that "it was the most soul satisfying public gift I have ever made or can ever make." His love of books was sincere, and throughout his life he never ceased to acknowledge his debt to a friend who had first developed in him the reading habit and made him free of a small library.

What Some People Eat.

In those days of the high cost of food in civilized countries, it is interesting to note how some other peoples obtain great food supplies from articles we would never think of eating.

The Arabs who inhabit the Sahara desert welcome the approach of the locusts as the means oftentimes of saving them from famine. To prepare these insects for food they dig a deep hole in the ground, build a fire at the bottom and fill it with wood, then, after the earth is heated the coals and embers are taken out and the cavity filled with live locusts confined in large bags. The mouth of the hole in the ground is then covered with sand and another fire built upon the top of it.

To prepare them for eating they are pulverized in mortars and mixed with water sufficient to make a kind of dry pudding. They are sometimes eaten singly without pulverizing.

The Korannas and Bushmen of the Cape save the locusts in large quantities and grind them between two stones into meal, which they mix with fat and grease and bake in cakes. Upon this fare they live for months.

The natives of Madagascar speak highly of the locusts as a food.

Bees have always been employed as an article of food. Knox tells us that the natives of Ceylon, when they find a swarm of bees hanging on a tree, hold burning torches under them to make them drop, then carry them home to boil and eat them. The inhabitants of the Caribbean Islands eat the young bees raw or roasted. When the negroes of Guiana are stung by bees they in revenge eat as many as they can catch.

ures more than two inches in length. Its larvae, called the grougrou, which is large, white and of an oval shape, lives in the tenderest part of the palm trees, and is considered, fried or boiled, one of the greatest dishes in the West Indies. These worms are laid on the coals to roast, and are looked upon as highly agreeable prepared in this way. Capt. Stedman tells us these larvae are regularly sold at Paramaribo.

He mentions, too, the manner of preparing them, which is by frying in a pan with butter and salt, or spitting them on a wooden skewer; and that thus prepared they taste of all the spices of the India mace, cinnamon, cloves, nutmegs, etc. The natives also make a butter by melting and clarifying the fat of this larvae.

sibility of any rapid economic development of the country making it capable quickly of supporting any great increase of population." The religious problem is more difficult. The Moslem Arabs and the Christian element look with disfavor on the influx of Jews and the probable interference that would come with the Jews to their religious rights and privileges. The Arab looks with much suspicion on the influx of the Jews. There is a stubborn conviction in his mind that the Jew, the Zionist in an atheist at heart, and will respect no one's religion. For as long as he can remember the Moslem has respected and guarded the Christian shrines, and if he has ever feared for them the Jew has been the source of the fear. But the old-established Jew he had come to regard as harmless, if not as friendly. Of the new Jew, the Jew of the Zionist immigration, he has a lively dread. He says that the Moslem will always respect the Christian Holy Places, for the Moslem has a reverence for the Lord Jesus Christ; but that the Jews will not, for he is either hostile to Christianity or is an unbeliever hostile to all religion.

faith." Already the Jews have organized a constituent Assembly for government. Its progress will be awaited with much interest not free from anxiety as to its ability to harmonize the numerous and rather antagonistic elements of the population.

Japan's Sacred Mountain of Fuji.

It is the name of Japan's most famous mountain, and no Japanese thinks anything of himself until he has made some effort to ascend its sacred heights. To climb Fuji is a religious duty to most Japanese, while only a pleasure to some and a boast to others. The graceful cone, like an inverted fan, is so familiar to all admirers of Japanese art that it needs no description here.

But in Japan every mountain has a spirit, and the spirit, and the spirit of a beautiful or awe-inspiring mountain is to be strictly respected.

Evil people are not permitted to ascend it. This precaution was overlooked in the case of a profane foreigner, who went up the noted volcano Asama to get moving picture views of the crater; and his descent into the office to be photographed so offended the spirit of the mountain that for three years afterward the entire community for miles round was daily terrified by the fearful noises made by the mountain, which not only shook the earth all around, but emitted dreadful fumes and ejected stones a distance of twenty miles.

Grand Season for the Ascent.
The first two weeks of August form the grand season each year for the ascent of Fuji, though one may go up any time between the middle of July and the first of September. In the climbing season all roads and railways are swarming with white clad pilgrims, whose gently tinkling bells announce their missions. Parties are of all sizes, from two to two hundred, and one may see them straggling about in all towns and railway stations within one hundred miles of the mountain. Some go direct from home to the sacred heights, while others take in a number of shrines by the way.

Most of the pilgrims, of course, are poor. How, then, do they pay their way? It is not an expensive trip, to begin with, and every pilgrim belongs to a pilgrims' association, the members of which pay a trifle for membership fee in the hope of being so lucky as to draw the lot that decides which member of the association will represent the community in climbing Fuji that season.

It is a great honor, for he conveys the respect and worship of the whole community to the spirit of the mountain. The various community representatives of the same district meet and form a party, travelling together and putting up at the same inn, in front of which they proudly float their banners.

They move slowly, not being in a hurry, as it is the slack time between rice planting and harvest and the crop can take care of itself.

Pilgrims Mostly Peasants.
The average pilgrim is of the peasant class, with some artisans, to all of whom religion is a vital thing, especially the side of it that looks after the capricious moods and ways of the more terrible deities and tries to keep them pacified.

The best of good humor prevails among a crowd of Fuji pilgrims during the trip, their camaraderie extending even to strangers they fall in with by the way. As they toil up the ash, sloping sides of the cone they chant a religious ditty, their rosaries on their wrists. A huge-parasol-like hat is worn on the head to keep off the torrid heat of the summer sun, and a yard or more of matting on the shoulder in case of a shower.

Each bears a long white staff of new wood, which is branded by the priest who presides over each of the ten stations up the incline.

The first ten miles of the journey up the cone can be done on horseback, if one likes, though few of the pilgrims can afford this; but it is a tremendous help to get this lift 9,000 feet up. There are five trails by which you can ascend, all not equally easy, by any means.

If the weather is fine magnificent views of the surrounding landscape for nearly a hundred miles are afforded all the way up, but should rain come on, one sees nothing, and may as well turn back, as a storm on the heights is no fun. One may be storm-stayed for days in a tiny hut with many others. The experience is so suffocating that no one ever has a desire to repeat it. Sometimes the storm is of snow even in summer, and the heights are always cold.

Extinct Volcanoes.
Fuji is 12,365 feet in height, and only 200 years ago was an active volcano. There are still signs of fire in the jets of steam that spurt from parts of the cone, though one may now descend the crater with safety.

All about the base are great boiling springs, hot enough to cook an egg in a minute. These are known as Ogioku, or "Great Hell." Whether the idea was taken from the Bible or not is not known. But Buddhism has much teaching of hell of its own.

Some 300,000 pilgrims ascend the cone every year; and this year, being a special one in sixty, according to the Japanese calendar, the number was much greater than usual.

The first woman to set foot on the top of Fuji was Lady Parkes, wife of the first British Minister to Japan, Sir Harry Parkes, and she accomplished the feat in 1867, when there was not a mile of railway in Japan.

Ireland; the Irish and the English.

(By T. Henry Smith.)

I have heard and read various reports and ideas concerning the Irish question since I landed in this country. So much is wrong, so much is right, that I think perhaps the Irish here would appreciate my humble view or opinion, as an Englishman, of the average disposition toward Ireland and the Irish.

In the first place I have some excellent friends who are sons of Erin, and who have some rare old talks and are really great chums, and personally, I look upon an Irishman as a gentleman in the first instance.

Now there is a great shindy going on in Ireland, but let me at once say to the English public, read of such sympathy and sorrow both for the soldiers and the Irish community. Do not know any man in the street who would deny Ireland Home Rule, but our government haggle and naggle about it year after year. "Let the fact be my countrymen say, 'Let them have Home Rule, let them scrap later, let them do as they please, let them have a go at it. Why not?' That is the simple truth—I am sorry to find some Irishmen misled by the press so far as to be hostile to Englishmen. That is altogether a false state of affairs and unjust to both sides.

The bogey of Ireland intriguing with an enemy of England? Rot! Ireland (or Great Britain) is quite able to look after herself in history books. Let us suppose Ireland did intrigue. What then? Hasn't France done so in the past? Did she wipe the floor with England? Not much! Besides if Ireland had Home Rule and ruled together for commercial success, she would naturally trade most with Great Britain and learn to know the Englishman as he really is—that is, as the man whose word can finally be taken as a guarantee in the world of business—and in that he stands pre-eminent always. Who will say this?

I have heard such remarks as this: "The Irish are too fond of drink to succeed." "They (the South folk) are not likely to become efficient in the industrial world." "The non-industrial districts out of proportion," etc., etc. Well, let them have their drink, and don't pay for it; (sub rosa; spare me from a dry country)—let them run farms or factories, let them tax as they please. To repeat, let them fight it out and then come to an agreement among themselves. That is how we English really feel disposed to the Irish, and, did the Irish appeal to the fair play spot in the Englishman and stop the shooting barneys, I think all would be well. We English are comfortable and would like to see the Irish better off in this world's goods; of course we should. Some Irishmen, however, have caused trouble for their own countrymen. When I was in a Belfast shipping office just before the war it was remarked to me (I was transacting business with the firm), "Yes! see those ladies going out, Mr. Smith. Well they've just booked their passages and are clearing out, have sold their property and are taking the cash out of our country." Well, Ireland could spare such renegades surely. Yet, what mischief there was in that Irishman's remark and to me, on my first visit to Ireland! But I did not appreciate him. I am a typical Englishman (at least I have often been told so in Europe), and I love sport and adventure. So does the Irishman and it is that spirit which leads the more impulsive to the ambulance business, etc. Who, however, can look on the shooting affairs without a wish to end such a stupid and unnecessary (sic) wickedness? I do not excuse either side. Death ends but it is no argument.

There is one saying I could wish to die out and that is, "The Irishman is the best fighter we have." Is that the reason we hired him to fight? If so let us all forget it; (Irishmen included) it would be for the best. Let us rather say "The Irish are an impulsive, courageous race." If the South of Ireland is poor, I presume the South cannot avoid such circumstances without help of a practical nature. If Ulster is rich then compel her to help. Man-made law can punish an idler in any country, if the law of nature does not anticipate.

Now! I fear some public men make a noise for notoriety only and some writers in the press create confusion worse confounded. The plain fact is, the English are angry over the shooting carry-on, but, ill will toward the Irish (apart from a little harmless race-rivalry)? Nonsense! It does not exist with the average Englishman, and never has.

In my travels I have met many notable Englishmen and have also mixed with the workers. I therefore write from a wide experience. Anyhow here's to good luck, peace, and better times for Ireland and the Irish. May I soon taste a drop of the "crathur" and drink their health. Them's my sentiments and my countrymen's generally.

Eskimos Are Eager for Winter.

Captain Mack, of the Hudson Bay Company, who recently returned from the Sunny North, having spent his summer in Baffin's Land and Chesterfield Inlet; and in other fashionable resorts on the Arctic Ocean, told The Star to-day that the residents of that neighborhood do not regard the coming winter with the concern felt by the city dweller of the temperate zone. Seal and walrus promise to be abundant, and while those who enjoy the doubtful advantages of civilization are straining every nerve to ensure an adequate supply of fuel, an achievement requiring not only a deep pocket, but even a high degree of fitness, the cheerful inmates of the igloo is looking forward with eager anticipation to the banquet of seal's blood and blubber, in the commodious snow house, heated by the ubiquitous blubber lamp. It is here that true happiness will be found this approaching winter, where the little Eskimo children play tag around the Pole, supplied by Dr. Cook with such astonishing ease as a monument to hardihood and enterprise; rather than among a people who are embarking upon a winter of discontent, with their faces already lengthened by the prohibition of a harmless and necessary commodity.

The good ship Nascopee, on which Captain Mack was carrying provisions to the posts of the Hudson Bay Company, left for the North on July 28, and after an uneventful voyage arrived at Lake Harbor, in Baffin's Land, where the Pelican was already safe in port. There had been some ice in Hudson Strait, which the Nascopee had negotiated without harm, but the Pelican, which had not been so fortunate, had been rammied by an iceberg, and had lost some blades of her propeller. She had run into heavy ice and was jammed tight in the pack, when the iceberg, moving with the undercurrent faster than the pack, came lumbering down on her and did the damage. Later on, when the Pelican left Baffin's Land, she knocked off another blade, and ultimately arrived in St. John's Newfoundland, with only half a blade left. She was lifted in St. John's in dry dock.

Everything was all right at the Hudson Bay posts, said Captain Mack, and the party returned with a good average supply of furs. The natives believe that the coming winter will be an exceptionally good season.

The Nascopee had carried one distinguished messenger, Oonawak, an Eskimo who had taken another man's life, and had been arraigned for murder. A party of Royal Canadian Mounted Police had charge of the prisoner and took him ashore at Chesterfield Inlet, which has apparently been chosen as the venue of the trial. It is understood that the judge will proceed to this fine old asstie town to sit upon the case.

The Inspector and four others of the R.C.M.P., who were on board, relieved a similar number of luckless fellows who were leaving that salubrious locality. On the way home the Nascopee carried three Catholic priests from Chesterfield Inlet and the Church of England minister from Baffin's Land, the Rev. Fleming.

"Nothing of any moment occurred throughout the whole trip," said Captain Mack.—Montreal Daily Star, Nov. 25.

Against the Best Irish Sentiment.

(New York Times.)
Mr. DeValera has never been highly successful in winning American support for Irish independence, and his apology for the Dublin assassins is a frightful blunder in tactics. He justifies the murder of English soldiers who are "as enemy spies" in Ireland, "rightly deserving death." To Americans this is revolting. So it is to right-thinking Irishmen.

Can it be that Mr. DeValera has never read the solemn denunciation of such killings uttered by Cardinal Logue and other members of the Catholic hierarchy in Ireland? Only a few days ago the Archbishop of Tuam wrote to a London paper: "I have always denounced the shooting of 'police or of other servants of the Crown as murder (outside recognized cases of self-defence). The Irish people have no sympathy with 'crimes of this kind.' And the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster, in a recent plea for a peaceful settlement with Ireland, on the most generous lines compatible with the "essential defenses of the empire," thus expressed himself:

There is actively, at work in Ireland a secret oath-bound association using as its weapon assassination; an association therefore, to which no Catholic who is obedient to the Church can possibly belong. I am assured that the real and legitimate Sinn Fein disclaims all connection with this association, and deplores and disavows all its aims and deeds. But Sinn Fein, while—so it is claimed—efficiently and effectually administering justice it has superseded the ordinary courts, is at present apparently unable to control the murder gang.

not in touch with these authorities of the Catholic Church. But in his rash defense of assassination, which he links up with the desires and determination of the Irish people, he really is guilty of an aspersion on their character. Even Lloyd George thinks better of the Irish than Mr. De Valera appears to. The British Prime Minister asserted in his Guildhall speech: "Irishmen have no real sympathy with this murder. Not a bit! They are heartily sick of the business, and 'I know it.'" Let Mr. DeValera attack the English and arraign English reprisals as bitterly as he pleases, but let him not condone foul and barbarous crimes. At least, let him not think to ingratiate himself with Americans by doing it.
