Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER IV.

"Very well," briefly replies Captain Glynnne. "But then, you see, you and I are fostering a clandestine attachment and sanctioning clandestine interviews and all sorts of improper things."

"Poor mademoiselle trusted me. I am silent for her sake," Yolande says, humbly and simply.

"Then I must be silent for your sake," says Dallas, drawing closer to her; "and, as we are sharers in the same fault, you will have to pray for me as well as for yourself when you go into the cathedral of an evening now. Will you?"

The girl looks up at him suddenly, with a flash of anger and rebuke in her eyes at what she thinks is mockery. But Captain Glynnne's bold-featured, handsome face is as immobile as marble.

"I am quite serious," he adds, in a very gentle tone; and the hand that holds a sapling at her back touches her shoulder either willfully or accidentally; and Yolande trembles at the touch, which seems to thrill her through and through.

She looks up once more, meeting the gaze of his eyes full for the first time, with the gold of the sunlight on his close-cropped, chestnut head and his white brow as he stands bare-headed beside her.

"Yes, I will," she says, answering him gravely.

The awakening spirit of her womanhood seems to spring up in the light that shines in her pure, child-like eyes, in the glow that warms and softens the outlines of the girlish face. It is such a change as comes when the south wind breathes over the buds of spring, the change that heralds the blossoming and fruition of the young, unfolded life.

There is a slight answering flush on

WOMAN SUFFERED FOR MONTHS

Weak and Nervous. Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Webbwood, Ont.—"I was in a very weak and run-down nervous condition, always tired from the time I got up until I went to bed. Sleep did not rest me at all. My sister recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and others told me about it, but it was from my sister's advice that I took it. It did not take long until I felt stronger, headaches left me and my appetite came back to me. I am a farmer's wife and have many things to do outside the house, such as milking, looking after the poultry, and other chores. I heartily recommend the Vegetable Compound to all who have the same trouble I had, for it is a fine medicine for women."—Mrs. LOUIS F. EXASASK, Hillcrest Farm, Webbwood, Ont.

Another Nervous Woman Finds Relief—Fort Huron, Michigan.—"I suffered for two years with pains in my side, and it worked very much I was nervous and just as tired in the morning as when I went to bed. I was asleep all the day and didn't feel like doing anything, and was so nervous I would bite my finger nails. One of my friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me so much that I soon felt fine."—Mrs. CHARLES BEZLER, 303-343 St., Fort Huron, Mich. Women who suffer from any feminine ailment should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dallas Glynnne's handsome face, a slight, troubled shadow darkening his bold, bright eyes.

"Thank you," he says, very quietly. Captain Glynnne, steeped to the lips as he is in the doctrines of the selfish, sensuous school of life in which he has been brought up, is not altogether a bad or a selfish man. Though lacking all reverence for those who are of the sex of the mother that bore him, he yet has—all unknown to himself—a heart strong and true to give to a woman who loves him—a strong, true, passionate love which has never been awakened. He has, too, the reverence of a man of honor for the purity and simplicity of a woman; and a restless feeling that he may be doing something wrong and cruel, disturbs him ere he can begin the flirtation with Yolande that he has half resolved upon "for the fun of the thing," as he says to himself.

"She looks as if she could fall desperately in love with me upon very slight provocation," he thinks, with cynical criticism, while he is gathering two or three purple-gray sprigs of the wild mint blossoms and some slender, green fern fronds. "I suppose it is on the cards that I shall marry her if the money is all right. She seems amiable and virtuous minded, and will be rather good looking and elegant by and by when her figure develops and she is artistically dressed. But it would be a frightful bore to have a wife of her description madly and jealously in love with one!"

Captain Glynnne involuntarily shudders at the bare idea of such a possible result of his marriage. And all the while he is artistically putting the flowers and leaves together, and Yolande is watching him with swift, shy glances, feeling that the little bouquet is for her, and yet rebuking herself for the boldness of the thought.

At last it is finished, and Captain Glynnne ties a long blade of grass about the stems and offers it to her with a frank smile. "Will you have it?" he asks, in a pleasant, friendly, fashion that puts her quite at her ease. "Let me fasten it in your scarf," he says, and pins it in dainty; while Yolande submits in silence, admiring his firmly knit, sun-brown hands.

But, his task over, he steps back a pace and looks at her with a slight smile in his cold, blue eyes. "Now what will you give me?" he asks, in a low tone. "I have nothing to give," answers Yolande, with her shy, burning schoolgirl blush, looking dreadfully frightened.

"That is a story, my little dear," Captain Glynnne says to himself; "you have thirty thousand charming gifts to bestow." He says never a word aloud; but, taking her pink, slender fingers in his, he stoops and touches them with his mustached lips—very respectfully and delicately, as if Yolande Dormer were his lady and his liege.

"I wonder if I ought to have allowed him to do that?" Yolande thinks, as they walk on once more together. "Why did he kiss my hand? It was very respectful. If I were a princess, he could not do more! What a handsome head he has, and what a beautiful smile—like sunshine!"

And, long before that pleasant ramble beneath the yellow autumn trees is ended, Captain Glynnne has won more than that kiss of homage from the girl who walks by his side. He has won Yolande's love—the first blossoming bud of the girlish heart, the first bloom and perfume of the young flower of life.

He is far too well-bred to embarrass her in the least with attentions; and they walk on, talking of scenery and pictures and places, until Yolande, grown quite at ease and friendly, has begun to answer and question him easily and confidentially.

"It is a walk through the Enchanted Land for one happy spirit that scarcely knows whether its feet tread earth or not, a long, long walk which is all too brief through the warm, yellow haze of the sunshine and the gold of the ruined woodlands' drifting about their feet. And everywhere the sweet, pungent fragrance of the wild mint reaches them. To Yolande's dying day the perfume of the blossoming weed will bring back to her the glory and the harmony of that afternoon.

"You have strong artistic tastes and perceptions and all that sort of

STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS Contain no Poison

"I had no money of my own until Uncle Michael died and left us all our money," Yolande continues. "Uncle Silas could not afford expensive masters for me. I can now have, of course, whatever lessons I like."

"Yes—you have plenty of money now, haven't you?" Dallas asks, smilingly, as one asks a confiding child a question.

"Yes," Yolande answers, still looking very serious, not to say solemn; and the big, velvety pupils look larger and darker than ever. "I have thirty thousand pounds, Uncle Silas and Aunt Keren say."

"That's a nice little sum!" Dallas observes, curiously, with a touch of bitterness. "I wish I had half of it!"

For a moment or so he does not think of any second meaning to his words, as he stares straight before him, his thoughts traveling far away over land and sea to an old Scotch mansion and this time a year ago among the crimson-heathered moors and hillsides, with dainty, golden-haired Joyce Murray by his side. A short, unbidden sigh rises to his lips, and he looks down at the girl who walks beside him now. All her simple, loyal, generous soul is in her ardent, wistful, upward gaze, and it does not need the swiftly downcast eyelids and the flush and averted head to reveal to him her inmost thoughts.

He is poor—this handsome, soldier-artistocrat, who is like a demi-god. He is a poor, elegant, well-bred man of fashion as he looks, and she is rich. So her money brings her nearer to his level; her money at least is a desirable, enviable thing in his eyes.

"If there were notes for fifteen thousand pounds in a neat little bag in her pocket this minute, I should stand a fair chance of having them handed over to me," Dallas thinks, with good-humored contemptuousness, but touched a little in spite of himself. "Foolish girl! She is just one of the class of silly creatures who fall a prey to the first mercenary scoundrel who pleases their ill-governed fancy! You ought to go to Italy and study there. Miss Dormer," he says aloud, with a slight iciness in his tone.

"Oh, I should so like that!" Yolande returns, earnestly. "Cousin Wilmot has been to Italy for a whole winter, and I have been longing to go too, and see Venice and Naples and Pompeii and Rome."

"Perhaps you will go with 'Cousin Wilmot,'" suggests Dallas, curiously.

STORYTTES THEY ALL AGREED. It is the custom in many places nowadays, when so much interest is taken by the man in the street in matters political, to have local parliaments in which various "locals" take the parts of members of Parliament.

At one of these gatherings one of the "hon. members" much annoyed his fellow legislators by shouting "hear, hear!" to everything that was said.

One of the speakers had occasion to refer to a well-known political character of the time, whom he represented as a person who wished to play the rogue, but had only sense enough to play the fool.

Where, he exclaimed with emphases and much gesticulation, "where shall we find a more foolish knave or a more knavish fool than this man?"

his business career very serious and used to deny himself many pleasures. One day a friend offered him choice cigar. He refused, saying "Although I'm the biggest smoker in England, I never smoke cigars."

"Prefer a pipe, I presume?" asked his friend. "No, I never smoke a pipe either. Cigarettes, then, of course? No, nor yet cigarettes. Indeed! said his friend, greatly puzzled. Then may I ask what earth you do smoke?" "Bacon," said Sir Thomas.

French Consider Britain's Policy Towards Germany too Lenient.

Storm in Manitoba Leaves a Trail of Destruction—Strike Negotiation Continues—French Extend Zone of Occupation.

DOOR STILL OPEN.

PARIS, July 13. The feeling that prevailed in official circles this morning was that Premier Baldwin's speech on the reparations situation did not absolutely close the door to an understanding with Great Britain, although there was an immense gulf between the policies of the two countries which the courteous and friendly phrases of Premier Baldwin did not hide. The press also resents what it regards as the British Premier's undue leniency towards Germany.

cocks and chicken coops were blown incredible distances. The farmer and his family narrowly escaped. Other farms nearby were unharmed.

LADY ASTOR'S BILL THROUGH COMMONS.

LONDON, July 13. Lady Astor's bill restraining the sale of intoxicating liquors to persons under eighteen years of age passed the third and final reading in the House of Commons to-day.

FRENCH OCCUPY ELBERFELD.

BERLIN, July 13. French troops have occupied the big industrial city of Elberfeld, on the edge of the Ruhr region, according to advices from Ruhr to-day.

THE LIQUOR MAJORITY.

WINNIPEG, July 13. The referendum on the Moderation League Bill was approved by a majority of exactly forty thousand electors of Manitoba, according to the final returns tabled to-day. The vote polled totalled one hundred and seventy-six thousand, the largest ever in the Province.

NEGOTIATIONS CONTINUE.

SYDNEY, July 13. Negotiations instituted yesterday by Premier E. H. Armstrong and Dr. Lawrence MacKinnon of Halifax were resumed to-day. The Premier and Dr. MacKinnon met again this morning with the steel workers and a number of company officials for the purpose, Mr. Armstrong said, of obtaining statistics. Dan Livingstone, president of District 26, arrived at Sydney this morning, but as few knew his coming there were not many at the station to meet him.

TO ATTEND PICTOU CELEBRATIONS.

QUEBEC, July 13. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, accompanied by several other officials, left Quebec this morning on the Canadian Government steamer Lady Grey for Pictou, N.S., to assist at the ceremonies there in connection with the anniversary of the landing of Hector with the first Scottish immigrants to Canada, over one hundred and fifty years ago. The function commences Sunday and will last the whole week.

CANADA'S HUGE CROPS.

Western Canada will require approximately twenty per cent. more harvesters to garner this year's crops than were needed last year, according to present indications. This means the importation from Ontario, Quebec and Maritime Provinces and British Columbia of some sixty thousand harvesters.

Attempt to Salvage.

$5,000,000 in Gold From Sunken Lusitania.

London, July 6.—The salvage steamer Sempor Paratus left Dover yesterday with clearance papers for the North Atlantic, presumably to attempt salvage of the gold from the sunken Lusitania. Connaught, one of the owners of the salvage company, who was on board, would only admit to questioners, however, that the task might possibly be attempted.

The Lusitania on her ill-fated voyage carried five million dollars in gold in the strong room in addition to the purser's safe, which was said to contain approximately one million dollars in gold and jewelry.

Conditions of Labrador Coast.

Winter conditions prevail on the Labrador coast. Snow covers the ground and the ice remains close to the coast. Few fishing vessels have made farther north than Battle Harbour where there is a good sign of fish.

A King's Ascot.

London, June 27.—(By Mail)—This has been a King's Ascot. His Majesty's success in the Royal Hunt Cup with Weathervane at the long odds of 20 to 1, was even more popular than his triumph of the opening day with Knight of the Garter. It was the outside public who followed the King, the racing crowd for the most part forgot Weathervane altogether. There have never been more gorgeous costumes worn at any meeting, and this year the picture frocks in delicate pastel shades of lace and muslin, big hats and artistic wraps gave the English type of beauty the exact setting which emphasizes its points. They were not all picture frocks, however, tailor-mades were well to the fore, and black and white was a favorite combination.

One of the events of the week has been the dinner given by the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The guests, who included Lord Dufferin, Viscount Mersey and the Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., were much intrigued by Mr. Beatty's speech. He insisted that what Canada seemed to need was "a balance immigration." Especially was this the case at the present moment when the flood of unrest which has swept through Europe has even touched the Dominion, and sent many skilled workmen over the border to the United States. One of the speakers deplored the absence of Canadian competitors in most of the International sports tournaments. The speaker had apparently forgotten that Mr. Hilton Belyea, the Canadian amateur sculler, has come over here to win the Diamond Sculls from the American Walter Hoover, and that according to latest reports he stands a good chance of doing so.

Home's Report.

Capt. Norman of the Home sends the following reports of fishery and weather conditions in the Straits:—Whiteley's crew at Bonne Esperance have 1500 qtls. codfish landed. From Bonne Esperance to Battle Harbour nothing has been done to date. The weather has been too stormy to allow boats to operate. On the Newfoundland side of the Straits the fishing is good, but a scarcity of salt is in evidence.

Manoa Outward.

The following passengers sailed to-day for Montreal by S.S. Manoa:—Geo. and Mrs. Best, Mrs. M. Bailey, J. Pendergraat, A. and Mrs. Wasser, C. C. and Mrs. Pratt, Miss V. and Mrs. Cherrington, Miss M. Ryan, Miss G. Ryan, Miss M. Hiscock, Miss S. Walsh, Dr. A. and Mrs. Campbell, Amello F. Campbell, E. Houlihan, P. Healey, W. Healey, W. Aspell, Miss Eva Squires. June 20, 1923.

The Longest Word.

Until recently the longest word in the English dictionaries was "disproportionableness," which is not so very long, after all, when it is compared with some of the gigantic names of modern chemistry. Henry Carey, an English poet, wrote, somewhere around the year 1700, a burlesque called by the sounding name, "Chronothothologos," in which there was a character called "Aldeboronthosphoratho." This whole play is full of long words and bombastic phrases, a noted example of which is the following: "His cogitative faculties immersed in conglutination of cogitation." An English newspaper is on record as having used (with what meaning it is hard to guess) this truly Gargantuan word, "Polypyrasiticothionimmedagoludulation." This was possibly a burlesque on some long-winded political proclamation. But the king of them all, the longest word, without a doubt, ever coined, was a word used by the Greek comedy writer Aristophanes. It is unnecessary to give this word. Besides, lack of space forbids. Suffice it to say that it has seventy-nine syllables and 171 letters.

Brains.

Money is like brains. It was formerly believed that the bigger a man's brain was the wiser he would be.

The main thing in a brain is not size, but activity. Many a man with a small head is at the top of a big company; and many a man with a big head is a postman, making his living with his legs.

It is not the amount of your capital that matters, so much as the activity.—Forbes Magazine.

Unlocking Secrets of The Elusive Compass.

It is unnecessary to point out the part the magnetic compass plays in the development of a new country, especially a country of such great distances as Canada. Contrary to general belief, the compass needle does not point directly north, but more or less to the east or west in different parts and is forever wavering and forever changing in its direction, though ever so slightly, with the passage of time. To-day it may point in one direction; ten years hence at the same place its direction will undoubtedly be different. The greatest measure of usefulness, as a direction-finding medium, is obtained from it by a careful examination and computation of magnetic observations. These are studied by magnetic experts in practically every country of the world; expeditions are sent everywhere for this purpose. The seven seas have been traversed by non-magnetic ships the last few years, and untold information with regard to the vagaries of the compass on the oceans.

In Canada, it has for the last forty years been studied by Dominion Land Surveyors in the employ of the Topographical Survey Branch, working in the territory stretching from the Pacific ocean to Hudson Bay, from the International boundary north, a territory comprising prairies, forests, mountains, wildernesses and barrens. With every facility for taking observations upon the magnetic needle during the regular course of their work, the surveyors have studied it on all sides and sent it to the head office at Ottawa the results of their observations, until now over 20,000 observations have been taken. Charts showing the variation of the compass in Western Canada and other magnetic information are available upon request.

But the magnetic needle still has secrets in spite of all that has been done. Elusive earth currents and stubborn static still claim the right of highwaymen to hold up the telegraph, the wireless, and the radio. We know that they are related in some sort of way with the dancing northern lights, with the magnetic needle, and with the black cyclonic spots that try to rob us of our light and heat. But beyond this we know very little and here a vast field is opened for scientific research, once the vagaries of the magnetic needle are fully understood.—Rud and Gun in Canada.

England Approves Establishment of Empire Air Routes

London, July 13.—The latest plan for commercial aviation in England is the establishment of a British Imperial Airship Service which will connect England with all the British possessions by regular air routes. The first part of the scheme, which was originated by Commander C. D. Burney, R.A.F., provides for the establishment of a service of super-Zeppelins to Australia. This has been placed before the Air Ministry, and there is every prospect of its adoption. The Burney scheme would immediately make England the foremost country in commercial aviation, and add considerably to the strength of the air forces.

The fact that England has not already a gigantic fleet of commercial plants is not due to lack of enthusiasm on the part of the commercial aviation companies. The English companies now operating air lines to Paris and Holland, with the aid of subsidies from the government, are making a success of their projects.

The government has previously been reticent in accepting these plans because of the huge sums involved and the small chance of such lines ever paying, but it is now expected that the Air Ministry will push the establishment of new air routes.

Briefly the scheme provides for the establishment at once of a super-Zeppelin service between London, India and Australia. The Zeppelins will carry 200 passengers, goods and mail, and make the trip to India in three and a half days and to Australia in a week. Such airships will have a speed of 80 miles an hour and will be capable of a non-stop flight of 12,000 miles, about half way around the earth. This would cut the travelling time between these places to less than one-fourth the present time.

Weird War Machine Predicted.

Melbourne, Australia, July 13.—In the next war there will be craft that fly like hawks, swim like ducks, waddle like armoured tanks, and dive like seals in approved Jules Verne style, according to a British military official who is in Australia on a secret mission. Behind closed doors of laboratories and in secluded workshops, says this authority, who desires that his name for the present remain undisclosed, there has begun, with government funds, the strangest and weirdest battle of wits that has ever been embarked upon.

"Tanks that swim, great metal sea destroyers that fly, uncanny air machines which dive silently beneath the water to hide themselves," he says, "and crews who must learn to live and fight in three different elements (land, sea or air) are all necessities of the future." He states that Great Britain is building a giant airplane which cleaves the surface of the water prior to taking wing and develops 3,000 horse power, and is also constructing the largest flying boat in the world. This winged vessel is intended to go out, with the fleet for long periods.

"The hull of this new flying monster," says the British army man, "when resting on the water will ride out rough seas. It will taxi along the water like a surface ship, or speed through the air. It is to have anchors, foehorns, riding lights, and all the equipment of the ordinary vessel of the sea, while its crew within the hull will eat and sleep on board just like the crew of an ordinary naval craft.

The new machine will fight like a tank on earth, will be a super-destroyer on water, and climb to give combat in the air, and when concealment is required it will fold its wings, seal its hull and drive like a submarine beneath the surface of the sea. Science is striving to make these craft both silent and invincible."

Stories of Herbert Jenkins.

HIS SECRET OF HAPPINESS.

It has been said that the late Herbert Jenkins, publisher, and the author of "Bindle," "killed himself by overwork." It is a pity to spread this legend, for the cause of his death was that same scourge which carries off seventeen people per day—cancer; and had he been the laziest man on earth, that wouldn't have saved him. It is true that H. J. worked like one possessed, but he threw on it. Indeed, his constitution was so little impaired by his excessive toil that he lived several months longer than the doctors had expected.

"Congenial work is the secret of happiness. I am quite convinced," he wrote me not long since. "I can see it in the staff I have about me. I think they are all happy in their work, and if anyone can be happy working with me in command they they could be happy in Hades."

HIS JOY.

His only real interest and joy in his was his business, into that he poured his immense vitality, literally living for it and for nothing else. Yet, strangely enough, from the moment he took to his bed he seemed to put it out of his mind, and never a single question did he ask about it during the long months of his illness.

I used to urge him to buy a car or a boat, to travel, get more fun out of life—used to talk to him of Monte and Luxor and Stelly. "Presently," he would say. "Later. Some day I really mean to go to some warm place. I could get some writing done then. What am I doing all this for?—with his enigmatical smile—well, who does a stone roll down the hill?"—John O'London Weekly

Two London Girl Pioneers in New Profession

Yet another profession which hitherto been regarded as exclusively men has received women into its membership.

Miss Gladys Gregory and Miss Maudie Davis, both London girls, the first women to become qualified actuaries and members of the Institute of Actuaries of Staple Inn.

The result of the examination is one of the "stiffest" tests in mathematics, created great surprise in the insurance world.

Miss Gregory is employed by Prudential Assurance Company and Miss Davis by the Guardian Assurance Company.

The examination has only been taken by women for three and a half years. "When I matriculated from Broomwood Road Council School," said Miss Gregory to the Daily Mirror recently, "I became a teacher, and a short while afterwards I resigned my post and entered the Prudential."

"Miss Davis and I 'coached' together, and we did some very 'swotting.' I was delighted when I knew the result, and I was delighted that Miss Davis had passed too."

"There was only one other woman sitting for the examination." Miss Gregory, a pretty, brown-haired girl of twenty-four, surprised examiners. Her papers were faultless and if any degree of excellence had been registered, it is certain she would have come out first.

City of London Schoolgirl. Miss Davis, who is twenty-eight, attended the City of London School for Girls. She went later to New College, Cambridge.

She obtained her mathematics honours, became senior optima, passed examinations which entitle her to the degree of M.A. under recent concession made at Cambridge to women students.

"I began studying for the actuary examination as soon as it was decided to allow women to enter for it," told The Daily Mirror.

Both girls are the heroines of their respective offices. Their work has been considerably increased, and both stand a very good chance of attaining high-salaried posts as actuaries to their companies.

More Fish for North Sea

RESTOCKING THE DOGGER BANK

The question of the shortage of fish in the North Sea, of which fishermen are complaining, is under consideration by the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries, Great Britain.

Mr. H. G. Maurice, secretary of Fisheries Department, said recently: "It is true that the returns show a gradual diminution in the number of fish being caught, and particularly the case of plaice, which is one of the most valuable forms of fish in the home markets."

Taking the Dogger Bank, the North Sea fishing ground, the increase in steam trawler catches in 1918 is shown by the following figures of cwt. caught per 100 hours' fishing: 1920, 148; 1921, 145; 1922, 140.

The shortage of plaice is due to the fish being of sedentary habit and therefore suffering more from intensive fishing than more active fish.

The International Council for the Exploration of the Sea at their meeting at Copenhagen proposed that a zone of the coastal waters of Denmark, Holland, and Belgium should be closed to all steam trawlers and motor trawlers of more than 500 tons for the entire year and a further zone for nine months of the year. The zone is about 300 miles long and extends to about 25 miles from the coast. It is a fruitful breeding ground for plaice.

From this "preserve" it is proposed to transplant fish when sufficient grown to the Dogger Bank, starting with 1,000,000 the first year and increasing this number at the rate of 1,000,000 a year if successful.

British fishermen complain that while they are debarred by the scheme from fishing on the preserve the fishermen of the country whose coasts it runs will be able to fish it in sailing craft as much as they like.

The Fisheries Department repeats that it is impossible so to debar the zone as to prevent the continued fisherman from using it; also that the nets used by the Danes are of more selective character than those of powerful trawlers. Small fish are able to slip through their meshes, and even if brought to the surface are done so undamaged and fit for return to the sea.

The question of who shall pay for the transplantation is now under consideration. Since the bulk of the fish taken off the Dogger Bank is caught by British fishermen, it is urged that Great Britain should bear the brunt of the cost.

SPORTOGRAPH

LAST NIGHT'S GAME.

Under ideal weather conditions and with the record attendance for the season the Guards went down to defeat at the hands of the Cadets by a score of 2 to 0.

The Guards won the toss and elected to defend the western goal, giving the Cadets the disadvantage of the sun. Young opened hostilities by trying out Gushue, who responded nobly but placed it behind.

On changing over Walter Callahan had a try which went wide. Kavanagh cleared a pretty combined attack by Clouston and Andrews.

Unaccountably weak was the Kent batting at Trent Bridge, but Seymour can seldom, if ever, have played a finer innings than his 86 not out in a total of 178.

The Bright Side of Things.

There is a greater feeling of optimism abroad and we trust will remain. We have been passing, it is true, through a period of depression, and despondency is depicted on many a face that hitherto never showed a sign of care.

Already, if we are in the mood to observe the signs, there is a glimmer showing beneath the 'black' cloud. Grand Falls is enlarging the scope of its activities at Glovertown and Bishop Falls.

Yesterday His Excellency the Governor assented to the Humber Agreement, which apart from our fisheries is the greatest project ever launched in this country.

Our chief industry always has been, and always will be, of an uncertain nature, and this cannot altogether be changed, but it can be modified and rendered more stable by the strict enforcement of rules governing the cure of the fish, and by a system of co-operation in the disposal of the catch.

There is no purpose served in anticipating difficulties that may never arise. There is nothing attained by living over again the dangers that are past. Let us live in the present. The trees that last winter were gaunt and bare are shrouded in green, the fields are clothed in the rich promise of autumn, the lakes have burst their icy bonds and are rippled of silver. Go out and see them to-morrow; forget the business worries and for one day find hope and faith in the face of Nature.

THOMAS-POPE.

A quiet but pretty wedding was celebrated in the Queen's Road Congregational Church at 11 o'clock this morning, when Violet H. B. Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Thomas, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Charles E. Pope, Chief Officer of the S. S. Manco, and eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pope of this city. The bride who looked very attractive in a beautiful gown, with hat to match, carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations, as she entered the church escorted by her father. She was attended by Miss Jennie Pope, a sister of the groom, while Mr. A. H. Thomas, brother of the bride, performed the duties of best man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. B. Holden, M.A., pastor of the church, in the presence of the relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. After the signing of the roll, the party left the church and proceeded by motor cars for a drive around Quidi Vidi Lake, later returning to the home of the bride's parents where a sumptuous morning breakfast was served. The health of the bride and groom was proposed to by Rev. T. B. Holden, M.A., and was fittingly responded to by the groom. After the contracting parties had received the hearty congratulations of all, amidst showers of confetti, etc., they left by motor car for Kelligrews and later proceeded to Colinet where they will spend their honeymoon. The bride, who is one of St. John's most popular young ladies, was the recipient of a large collection of costly and useful presents. The Telegram joins their many friends in extending to them their best wishes.

C. of E. Garden Party.

Preparations for next Wednesday. The men's committee, in connection with the C. of E. Orphanage Garden Party, met last night in the C.L.B. Armory for the purpose of making arrangements for next Wednesday's event. Though the attendance was small the meeting was enthusiastic and quite a lot of work was disposed of. The sports program will be looked after by the C.L.B. It will include football sixes, a pony race, one mile race, 100 yards dash, Hot Guides relay race and an exhibition by the C.L.B. Gymnastic squad. Mr. W. J. Higgins will be asked to act as Field Captain again, with the C.L.B. officers assisting. His Excellency the Governor will be asked to give his patronage and attend. Reports were received from the ladies that they have their arrangements well in hand. It will be remembered that last year the receipts were small owing to the rain, but this year with the weather, it is hoped to make up the deficiency. The ladies and gentlemen who are working for the Garden Party, will meet on the grounds at 7.30 Monday evening.

The C.C.C. Band is now open for engagements. Persons requiring the services of the Band shall apply to the Commanding Officer first for permission. The ROYAL STORES, Limited

In Passing.

The Humber and Railway agreements are now accomplished facts, inasmuch as that His Excellency the Governor at a special session yesterday afternoon officially assented to the Bills, which were duly signed and recorded.

Many rumors are current as to the contents of the Finance Minister's Budget, which will be delivered in the Assembly on Tuesday. One of the many is that the Government will favor a reduction all around of the salaries of the civil servants. Another is that certain taxes will be increased and that provision will be made for the floating of a new loan which will be negotiated between now and the early session of 1924.

That the Government's determined policy to collect and expend will be continued for another period is a safe assertion.

Hon. Dr. Campbell, Minister of Agriculture and Mines, is a passenger by the S. S. Manco to-day en route to his native home in Prince Edward Island, where he will spend an extended holiday and in the meantime look over some Model Farm stock and equipment.

The Model Farm gobbled up over fifty thousand dollars of the last loan, all of which was expended, as well as other grants allocated by the Legislature.

The Agriculture and Mines Department was likewise accorded almost one hundred thousand dollars from the 1922 loan, and the total expenditure of this department struck up a new record when the million and a half dollar mark was reached.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the spending of the loan which comes to light is that of the Controller's department, as will be shown by the figures published elsewhere. Incidentally voted by the Legislature amounted to $2,000,000, which sum was increased over four hundred per cent; whilst the amount expended for stock totalled $537,206.06, against the $150,000.00 allocated by the Government.

The Government's loss on the Pitt Prop account is nothing short of a crime. The gross amount spent was $1,593,439.56, for which the returns total $156,828.44, leaving a startling deficit of $1,436,611.12. That the greater portion of these big expenditures occurred during last fall and the early months of this year previous to the general election will in itself reveal the motives behind same and explain the utter disregard which the Government entertained for public moneys in their mad race for power.

Once again the question of child labor has come up for discussion. The alleged actions of an East End baker, which were unfolded in the Magistrate's Court yesterday, are responsible for the new interest that is manifested in the subject. We learn of many incidents of this nature which would bear investigation with beneficial results, and offer the opinion that the authorities or organizations which time and again have interested themselves with this question should once more give it their attention for the purpose of giving necessary protection regarding healthy surroundings and remuneration to the hundreds of young girls who are forced to work for a miserable wage under conditions which would not be otherwise tolerated.

A Pleasure for Every Woman.

Most women to-day use Face Powder. The selection is difficult for many powders, possess certain and distinctive qualities. The Three Flowers Face Powder though, stands out prominently as being the most fragrant and generally satisfactory powder to use. It is a well known fact that ladies who are particular invariably will be found using Three Flowers toilet goods. Ask your druggist what he considers the finest Face Powder and abide by his decision. Invariable he will tell you THREE FLOWERS, for his best customers buy this kind and speak very highly of it.

WEEK-END NOTES.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
(I. C. MORRIS.)

It was in the last half of the seventies that the Dundee ships first prosecuted the sealing voyage of the coast of Newfoundland. For long years these ships had sailed far north to Greenland for the purpose of prosecuting the whaling voyage, and their prowess and success were established at Dundee. At that date our sealing voyage was at its height, and although only a few sailing ships were left, there was a fleet of some thirty steamers, which took their place. With such a big catch of seals as was then brought to port, it was only reasonable that very glowing accounts were circulated as to the financial return from this source. So it came about that the Dundee Sealing and Whaling Company of William Stephen & Sons tried their luck in this direction; and for that purpose they built, what at that time was considered a wonderful ship, she being about nine hundred tons, and bark rigged. As many of our readers are aware the ship was named the Thetis, and was commanded by Capt. Adams. Captain Adams was comparatively a young man, and a very good looking man, and during his visit to St. John's he became very popular, and was well liked. The first venture was made by sailing direct from Dundee to the ice fields, but not much success was achieved, and the steamer continued on to her northern destination.

On the Arctic's first arrival at St. John's, she had very severe weather, the harbours being frozen over. The Arctic brought her whaling crew from Dundee to the number of about fifty men, but the sealing crew of about two hundred and fifty men, was shipped here at St. John's. On the whole, the Arctic was fairly successful, and other ships followed, all being built especially for the purpose. The second ship to arrive was the Aurora, commanded by Captain Fairweather, followed the next spring by the good ship Thetis, which ship, though for a long while in other waters, is now one of the remaining small fleet of sealers. The Thetis is still ornamented with a beautiful figure head, which is one of the few reminders of those features of shipping, which we have already written of. The barkentine cloths, which is some fifty years in the trade, also has an ornate figure head.

The early stages of the Dundee Company's operations were sufficiently successful to induce others in Scotland to form a second company, and they made their headquarters at the southside premises, formerly occupied by Stabb, Rowe & Co. Amongst their ships was the Esquimaux, Norwhale, and Polynia. These latter two ships were built by Lady Franklin as an expedition to search of her husband, Sir John Franklin, who was lost in Arctic exploration. The upper Dundee Company, as they were called, also built some new ships, amongst which were the Resolute and Terra Nova. The latter ship is still with us, and is commanded by our gallant commander, Captain Abraham Keen. For some ten or fifteen years these Dundee ships seemed to have been very successful, but after that the interest began to wane, and some of the ships were lost, notably the Arctic, and in the meantime William Stephen died, and whether because of financial loss, or because of lack of interest, the two companies finally wound up, and like the Arabs they "folded their tents and sped away." Thus it is that to-day, the name is but of the past, and the Dundee boats which some had expected would have established the sealing voyage, are gone with their sister ships, and evidently gone no more to return.

During the operation of the Dundee firms in St. John's their business and their crews added considerably to the industry and wealth of the port, and the ships made considerable local history. The Norwhale and the Polynia, being ships of the early Victorian age, were very quaint when compared with the new ships, such as the Arctic or Resolute. But there was one other ship which incidentally made port at the beginning of the Dundee operations, and for quaintness she surpassed anything that had entered port for long years before. Her name was the Xanthus; she was a Peterhead whaler, and having left early for the voyage she got driven in this direction and made port and immediately got in communication with her owners at Scotland. As is known by many people, the firm of the late Moses Monroe was agent for the Dundee ships, and so the same firm became agent for the Xanthus. On a reply being received from Scotland it was decided that the Xanthus should prosecute the sealing voyage out of St. John's before proceeding to Baffin's Land on her whaling voyage. The ship was given in command of the late Captain James Power, and a crew of about one hundred men signed on, and she got off with the fleet. To many of us the name was strange and of course sent us to our histories and to our Greek literature; but it was the quaintness of the ship and her conjected appearance about deck which chiefly attracted our attention, for we were better sailors than Greek scholars. She was bark rigged and was not more than two hundred and fifty tons gross. The Dundee ships were very fortunate in their career and came through with very little accident and but few fatalities, one of which happened on board the Xanthus, and it happened so simply that it made the tragedy all the greater. The ship left port about ten a.m. and was in the wake of the other ships, which had made their different channels through the ice in the harbour. The ice in the Narrows was mostly drift ice and extended out in the Bay, but there was a good deal of slob. As the Xanthus passed Chain Rock and continued through the Narrows, her progress was impeded by the pressure of the ice, and she not being a very powerful boat, the crew, as was customary, were ordered out to prize the ice from the ship's bow. Prizing, and blasting at that time were quite a feature in seal hunting. The ship was just clearing the Narrows, and was abreast the Hochstetner, when she was thus caught. Several of the crew got their prizing sticks and jumped out on the ice, most of them getting over the ship's side amidships. Amongst those who jumped was one of the crew proper, a young Scotchman of about 25 years of age. The young man evidently did not understand the ice like our people, and it seems he did not look before he leaped; but he made a spring from the bow, upon what he thought was hard ice, when, to the horror of all the crew, it was seen that just where he jumped was mere slob, and down he went, and was never seen afterwards. At duty's post the young man went down in an instant. It was simple, we say, but it was tragic all the same, and the quaint ship Xanthus was minus one of her brave men. Another accident, occurred on the steamship Esquimaux, which was in port getting ready for her whaling voyage. There was some little thing wrong with the propeller and Mr. Samuel Walsh one of the most beautiful and popular men of his day, went down as diver; but through some misunderstanding in the signals a mistake was made and the brave man was suffocated. Samuel Walsh was a master man—a man who was destined to have a place, and a say in his country. He was but thirty-two years of age and his death was a blow, felt keenly by the entire community. Thus came the Dundee boats, and thus they operated, and thus they passed away. Their name now is but a lingering reference, and all their prowess and all their strength is, as Kipling says, "One with Ninevah and Tyre."

THE OLD BOYS.

In Punktown's shady public square green benches line the path, and many greybeards gather there, to ventilate their wrath; the government is out of whack, its bulwarks are a wreck, and so they split it up the back, and smite it in the neck. The old boys' shoes are never shined, their pants are never creased, their whiskers flutter in the wind which bloweth from the east. And no one heeds what they may say, nor cares what they may do; their shabby duds give them away; they're dead ones, they are through. Of course it's true that sterling worth may be 'neath humble dress; some of the great ones of the earth were slovens, I confess. But such exceptions prove the rule, and we in haste decamp when some old greybeard starts to drool. If he looks like a tramp. But if a man who is attired in raiment up to date, hands out some sentiments inspired, we listen till it's late. We gather close about his knee like children when they hear some mystic tale of boneset tea disguised as Volstead beer. The frowsy greybeards in the park are worthy men, in sooth, but they have lost ambition's spark that fired them in their youth. Their hair is full of burs and hay, their fingernails are blue; so no one heeds what they may say, or cares what they may do.

Y'Never Know, Y'Know.

Great was the excitement behind the scenes of the Terrace Theatre, for it was the first night of a new play, and upon such occasions all concerned are worked up to a great pitch of nervousness lest it should be a failure.

The author was standing at the back of the stage watching the first scene being set up.

After looking on in silence for a few minutes, he turned to the stage manager, who was close by him, and remarked:

"I say, that's a peculiar-looking scene shifter over there."

"Yes, he is," replied the other. "He's an Eskimo."

"An Eskimo?" said the other. "An Eskimo? What on earth made you take him on?"

"Oh, I thought it would be a comfort to see one happy face if the play turns out to be a frost."

ON GETTING AWAY MENTALLY.

We were talking about world issues the other night, and trying to gauge the effect of certain big happenings, like the world war, on future generations, and of course our deductions were vague and diffuse and uncertain. "We are too near our times to judge them properly," said the author. "We need a perspective of a hundred years or so to see events in comparison with other special situations in order to gauge them with any degree of accuracy." "That started us debating the value of perspective generally. When Children Are Sick. There is nothing that helps in any difficult situation so much as standing off and viewing it from a distance. "When my children are sick," says a mother I know, "I get panicky until I force myself to sit down and view the case calmly. And when I stop thinking of this one sick child who seems to me so desperately ill, and think instead of the hundreds of children in ages past who have been just as sick and of the big majority who have pulled through, I lose that panicky fear and see the thing more clearly."

It is harder to get a proper perspective on the mental and moral life of our children. Sometimes we can get it best through the eyes of someone else.

Another mother friend of mine finds the scout master of the troop to which her boy belongs her best aid here.

When the Boy is Grouchy. "It is remarkable to me that man, who has never had a boy of his own, understands boy nature," she says. "John has gotten to that age of adolescence that I've always heard heralded as a difficult age to understand, and I can assure you its difficulties have not been overrated. He is so different. He is grouchy and snarly and touchy for no apparent reason. But when I spoke of it to the scout master one evening he said: "When a boy is crabby around the house you may make up your mind that he is taking something too seriously."

"I have come to regard this statement as almost axiomatic for it applies whenever I can get John's confidence sufficiently to find out the root of the trouble. Sometimes it is a fancied wrong—boys are far more sensitive than we credit them with being. Sometimes it is discouragement over his mistakes. And once, to my amazement, it was his sister's associates. That fapper Mary goes around with is too fresh. She makes me sick. Why don't you make her cut her out?"

Here again, it is because the scout master, a thoughtful, interested man, considers not only the boy but his relations to those nearest him that he can arrive at such sage conclusions. The boy's parents are too near to get that larger viewpoint.

How Big?

Einstein's theory of relativity has been visualized for the masses by a wonderfully clever motion picture. It is an excellent film for youngsters of this age to see. And for grown-ups as well. A boy of 15 described to me what an impression one part of it made on him.

There was thrown on the screen the picture of a granite boulder with the title, "How big does this look to you?" To the boy it looked about the size of The Old Man of the Mountains, a famous rock in the White Mountain Range near his summer home. And then the boulder appeared to recede from the audience into the background of the film, and as it was drawn farther and farther away, the base upon which it rested came into view—a human hand! The giant boulder viewed in its proper setting was nothing but a pebble in a man's hand.

A splendid lesson and one which I am sure will help those who saw it, to see the mountains of their worries as the molehills which they often really are.

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING JULY 13th.

Attended to landing of 70 sheep from S.S. Sabie L, all carefully landed. Received word from Furness Withy Co. and Mr. King, of the s.s. Sabie L, that they had notified Montreal, Halifax and Charlottetown regarding bulls arriving here without a proper ring in their noses, also re the overcrowding of pigs and poultry in crates. I might also say that Messrs. Campbell & McKay have made better arrangements for the comfort of sheep instead of tying them. They are put in pens from one to four in a lot and allowed to stand. Mr. McKay intends making greater improvements, for which we thank him. I was asked to put to death humanely three horses, one belonging to Mr. Hearn, Signal Hill, which had broken its leg in some unaccountable way; also a splendid horse owned by F. B. Wood Co. which had broken its leg while in a field on Blackmarsh Road, and another lately owned by a West End cabman, which had been suffering from disease. I also put to death three dogs at the request of the Municipal, one on Barter's Hill, one on Casey Street, and another on Buchanan Street. People did not want them and refused to pay their license. I might also state that the condition of the truck and cab horses is fairly good. I wish the school children were taught and the citizens would think to pick up nails and wire hoops from off the street as there have been several severe accidents from this source. Mr. Hickey, of Barter's Hill, one of our trustworthy cabmen, met with an accident because of his horse having his hoof caught in a wire hoop which caused the fall of the horse and the throwing of its driver off the seat, over the horse. As a result he has been laid aside for about a week. As far as I know all calls have been attended to. The Directors met yesterday afternoon and arranged to hold the annual meeting of the Society and submit their annual reports. All Garden Hints for the Month of July.

INSECT PESTS.

The bane of every gardener's existence is the attack of insects. The plants must be watched practically from the moment of their appearance above ground. Like most other ill, prevention is far ahead of cure. There is no better preventative than the daily vigorous water spraying of the plants, even when the insects appear. A thorough spraying is an effective method of checking their ravages. Support any specially affected leaf or stem with one hand and with the other turn a strong spray against it; this will usually clear off the trouble. If you have to meet a serious attack upon your bed, spray it all thoroughly with the hose. Put sifted wood ashes into a tin with a perforated cover and sprinkle the salt over the wet leaves. A corn popper makes a first class sifter for your wood ashes, or a shallow wooden box, the bottom removed, and replaced by a strip of wire screening, will answer admirably.

Wood ashes I have found to be especially effective for roses. The customary watering, when it washes the ashes off the leaves, conveys to the flower beds and thence to the roots of the plants, the chemical contained in the wood ash. It is a splendid thing to build up the frame work of the plant and it is also most discouraging to that stinky foe, the slug.

Convict's Noble Deed.

MAN IN COURT SAYS PRISONER SAVED HIS CHILD'S LIFE.

A good deed brought its reward at London Sessions recently. A man with a long list of convictions that began when he was fourteen pleaded guilty to stealing a tepee. He served in the Army with great credit. A man in court came forward and said: "This man did a very noble deed for me about two and a half years ago. He saved the life of my child. I am willing to employ him at once." The man added that he was in a large way of business.

Sir Robert Wallace: You do this with your eyes open. If this chance falls I shall send the man to penal servitude. Sir Robert postponed sentence for three months, saying: "Now make the best of your last chance."

The Cruise of Silvia II.

We have just heard from Mr. E. Holloway of the progress made by the Silvia II. on her way to Stag Bay. On Wednesday, July 4th, when the Silvia II. was in the neighborhood of Snug Harbour, in jibing the mainsail, Holloway was hit over the eye by the block which indicated a severe wound and rendered him unconscious. His shoulder came in violent contact with the rail and as it was feared that he was severely injured, all speed was made for Snug Harbour, where the Seal was lying disabled. Capt. S. Bennett, who was on board, rendered first aid and did everything possible under the circumstances. There was no doctor on the Seal, but upon the arrival next day of the Sagona, Mr. Holloway received the necessary treatment from Dr. Smith. It was found that no bones were broken but the doctor considered it advisable to return to St. John's. He still shows the results of his injuries but is quickly recovering. He wishes to thank all those who were unremitting in their attention to him.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Miss Margaret Garland, who has been teaching at Little Bay arrived in town on Saturday, to spend the summer vacation with her parents.

Rev. Ernest Davis, after spending an enjoyable visit here to his mother, Mrs. O. Davis, and other relatives and friends, returned to Curling, Bay of Islands, by Tuesday morning's train.

Mr. Ernest Noel, of the Southside left town on Monday last en route to Montreal, to engage in work there.

Messrs. Bert Davis and Wm. Yetman, who have been teaching school, are spending their summer's vacation with their parents here.

The different day schools have closed for the summer holidays, much to the delight of the scholars, and no doubt, the teachers as well are glad to have a rest from study. We hope that there will be a good showing when the results of the C.H.E. Examinations are made known in September next.

Mr. I. E. Forsey paid a brief business visit to Bay Roberts during the week, and returned again by Thursday afternoon's train.

A game of football was played at Shannon Park on Tuesday night, between a team from town and one from Carbonear. The result was a win for the visiting team.

Lots of fresh fish was in evidence during the week, and one party was reported to have secured a good haul. We trust this will continue.

Miss Lulu Kennedy, who came home recently to visit her parents, went to St. John's last week to undergo an operation at the General Hospital.

Little Miss Mary McRae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McRae, who was operated on for appendicitis at the General Hospital last week, is doing well all the time, we are pleased to note.

Misses Agnes Langmead and Marguerite Ross, arrived from St. John's recently, and will spend a time with friends here.

Miss Lynn Butt, who was teaching at Britannia, is at home for the summer holidays.

At a meeting of the Regatta Committee held in the Firemen's Hall on Wednesday evening last week, it was decided that the Annual Regatta be held at Lady Lake on Thursday, August 9th.

Several of our Masonic brethren went to St. John's during the week to be present at the installation ceremony, when J. R. Bennett, Esq., was made Grand Master of the Lodge of England in Nfld. A deputation consisting of Messrs. H. D. Archibald, W.M., A. Stevenson, J.W., and F. G. Chafe, Secty., represented Lodge Harbor Grace at the ceremony.

Miss Alma LeDrew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John LeDrew, arrived in town by last night's train from Regina, Canada, on a visit to her parents. Alma's many friends are glad to welcome her back to the old town again, and trust that her stay will be most enjoyable.—COR.

Will Discuss Church Union.

Telegrams were sent out last week from the Methodist Church offices in Toronto for the purpose of summoning from distant provinces and from Newfoundland the members of the Methodist Committee of Forty on legislation in connection with Church Union, to meet in Toronto on July 18, and also to meet with the Presbyterians and Congregationalists in a joint committee on Church Union, on July 17.

The revision of the draft bills for submission to Parliament and to the Legislatures of the nine provinces and of Newfoundland, will be initiated at these meetings, each of the churches having already suggested minor amendments to the draft bills as submitted to the Methodist General Conference, Congregational Union and the Presbyterian General Assembly during the year.

Drowned at Sea.

A message to Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, C.M.G., was received yesterday from Mr. W. J. White, sub-collector at Ferryland, conveying the sad intelligence, as follows: "On Monday, July 9th, when the schooner Dorothy L. of Belleoram, Capt. Ralph Skinner, was 80 miles off the land, Capt. Skinner's brother, Alfred, was engaged with some of the crew in hoisting the mainsail and accidentally stepped on the main gaff, which lay on the deck, and he tripped and fell overboard. One of the crew instantly threw a rope overboard which covered the unfortunate man who, however, did not make any attempt to grasp it. The crew put a dory overboard at once but Skinner had gone under and they were unable to find his body. The unfortunate man was 38 years old and leaves a wife and two children.

Scouts in Camp.

The day opened rather wet and stormy, but cleared somewhat by noon, and the Scouts were in good trim and all was in good order. A football game was played between the Caribous and Foxes in the morning, which resulted in a draw 1-1, and in the evening the Caribous and Curlews played, the former winning by 5 goals to 1. Camp inspection showed the Caribous and Curlews perfect. New comers for the day were Jack Herder, Bob Perry, Raymond Cave and Sydney Maunder, the total now in camp is sixty-four. Visitors in camp were Inspector General Mutchings and party, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Peters and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Peet and Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards. The day closed with camp fire on the flats and a story by the Chaplain.

TRINITY

THE LIFE STORY OF A STRANGER WHO CAME TO TRINITY FOR A DAY 157 YEARS AGO.

In the early part of the eighteenth century, there lived in the town of Ennis, in County Clare, Ireland, two families that were well known and highly respected by all within the limits of the county. They were the families of Michael Farrell and O'Connell. The Farrell and O'Connell families adjoined each other, and for generations the owners of the best of friends, and deeply interested in each other's welfare. Michael Farrell and Patrick O'Connell were born within a few months of each other, went to school together, and having many traits of character in common, they grew up into manhood with as much knowledge of one another's doings and ambitions as if they had been brothers; and when they were of an age to assume the responsibility of perpetuating the family names they married the same girls. When, within the next two years, their sons were born to Patrick and Alleen O'Connell, it was no surprise to the neighbors or to their parish-priest, that at his baptism he was given the name of Farrell.

Farrell O'Connell was "born with a silver spoon in his mouth," and being the only son, he was spoiled long before he was old enough to be aware of the wealth of money and property that he was heir to. Neither money nor effort was spared to give Farrell the best education that could be secured for him, nor was he allowed to fret that he was supposed to follow the footsteps of his father, and to perpetuate the traditions of the O'Connell family, after his father had left him to his rest. Farrell, however, a streak of wanderlust in him, did not take kindly to the life allotted for him by his father; and frequent disappearances from home for days at a time, were caused by deep anxiety to his mother. The port town of Limerick was only twenty miles from Ennis, and Farrell only paid for the inconvenience of getting there and back again, by the sight of the vessels in port, and he left for hours on the wharves, watching the loading of them with tobacco, and other products of surrounding country. The lure of the Atlantic that came to him from the mouth of the river Shannon some miles away, became less able to resist, every time he watched its waters flowing onward to the sea during his visits to Limerick.

Farrell was fond of his mother, and because of her anxiety, he gave up many a tempting excursion to the sea-board that would keep him from home-overnight. Just after he had passed his twentieth birthday, his mother was called to her rest, and for a year Farrell stayed so continuously at home that his father began to hope permanent change had come over him, and that he would marry and settle down before God called him (his father) to follow his mother. At twenty-one, however, the pent up longings for a personal knowledge of the ocean that washed the western boundary of his island home, and the big world that lay on the other side of it, broke out afresh. Within a few days, during a temporary absence of his father from home, Farrell was missing, and a note addressed to his father and found by him upon his return, told of the carrying out of his wishes from boyhood; and that he had left home for a year or two, to go somewhere out into the big world of his longings and his dreams. It was not a great surprise to his father, though the results of Farrell's action were obvious to everybody in the old man's daily life, and it was no surprise to them when, within a year, the old housekeeper found that he had died during the night.

After the funeral the will was read in the presence of the parish-priest, and a few of the old man's neighbors who were called in as witnesses. Everything was left to his son Farrell. Arrangements were made to keep the house open and in order for Farrell's return. Five hundred pounds was set apart for a search to be made for him, and to acquaint him of his father's wishes. This was to hold good for three years, and if he had not returned up to that time, the property was to go to Peter, the youngest son of his old friend, Michael Farrell. In the meantime Farrell O'Connell had left Limerick in a vessel bound to the south of England. There he watched the outfitting of H. M. warships for active service in the North Atlantic. It was his first sight of the British Navy, and he was fascinated by it and the ideal life that it offered.

Just then the intelligence reached England of the capture of St. John's, Carboneau, and Trinity, Newfoundland, and the devastation of the trade and fishery by the French; and as sailors were in demand, Farrell had no difficulty in being accepted as one of the crew of H.M.S. Syren, commanded at the time by Capt. Douglas; and within a month he was on the coast of Newfoundland, chasing the French from the places they had captured.

The seafaring life that Farrell had dreamed about as a young man, to his own surprise, had begun to lose its charms for him, and his thoughts turned towards home. Having been sent on shore with a party of marines at Ferryland, he took advantage of the first opportunity to desert, and during the next few weeks he had all that he could do to prevent his being captured, and to find food enough to sustain life. By his own actions he had burnt the bridges behind him and County Clare, and consequently he knew nothing of what had gone on since he left two years ago, nor how anxiously they were trying to find him. For weeks he roamed the Avalon Peninsula and one day, more dead than alive, he found himself in Dildo at the head of Trinity Bay. Here he remained for the winter. During this time he arranged to give value for his board and lodging and to outfit himself with decent clothing. He longed to hear something about Ennis and the old home there, and if possible to return. To do that he was advised to try to get to Trinity as vessels were coming and going all the time between Trinity and Limerick. To get to Trinity at that time of year was not an easy task, and when he had accomplished it, he was suffering from the effects of cold and privations such as he had not been accustomed to in his earlier days, and which were making havoc of a constitution that was never robust.

In spite of all that, there was something about him that indicated a man above the common-place, and he had no difficulty in gaining admittance to the first house he came to in Trinity, and being kindly treated by the occupants. During the night he was taken ill with pneumonia contracted a week before, and before a doctor could be got he had gone into the presence of his God. There was nothing in his belongings to indicate where he had come from, or who he was, other than a slip of paper on which he had written: "my name is, Farrell O'Connell." His body was decently cared for, and given Christian burial in the Old Churchyard in Trinity, and though his grave is unknown to-day, yet in the Burial Register there is the following entry:— "April 8th, 1767. Interred—Farrell O'Connell, a stranger."

Within a few weeks of his death there came to Mr. Lester from the head office in Poolo inquiries about him, and the contents of a grave in the old churchyard, and an entry in the old Burial Register of a stranger who had come to Trinity for a day, and had given the name of the person who was inquired for constituted all the information that Mr. Lester could supply—and the fortune and property of Patrick O'Connell that was intended for his son Farrell the wanderer, passed to his home-loving neighbour Peter Farrell.

Miss Guy, who has been teaching at Bonnac Bay, is home for summer vacation. We are glad to see her, and to hear good reports of her work.

Miss Alice Ryan (daughter of Head Constable Ryan) who has been in the employ of Harvey & Co. at Belleoram, has brought home last week, suffering from neuritis, and is still quite ill. Her illness is a result of unselfish devotion to duty, and having had to share in the unprecedented hardships of a winter on that coast, such as were calculated to affect the strongest constitution. Home and home treatment should quickly change things for the better. W.J.L.

Rev. E. P. Hiseock has settled down to his work in the parish. He is lodging in the rectory and getting his meals at the Garland.

The views of the Governor and party, that were taken by Mr. W. Bannister of Trinity East on the day of the Governor's visit to Trinity are very good, and have found a ready sale. Copies may be had at any time. Orders may be left at Garland Hotel, or with Mr. Bannister, Trinity East.

The chestnut and oak trees that have sprung from the huts and corners that I brought from Nova Scotia, and planted in the cemetery here last year, have survived their first winter, and are now about a foot high and decidedly healthy looking. I hope the others that I supplied to friends in different places have done as well.

Mr. Gilmore, who represents Butler Bros., New York, registered at the Garland this week, and gave his usual close attention to business. We are always glad to see him, and we can understand why he has represented the same firm for fifteen years.

LEARNING
Take our President to-day—
Once, and not so far away.
He couldn't spell the simplest word
Mortals ever spoke or heard.
Couldn't add up two and two,
Didn't know where cotton grew;
Had to learn all that some way,
And he's President to-day.

But you, if we knew the truth,
He made plunders in his youth,
And in school our President
Wasn't always excellent;
But he had his troubles, too,
Just like me and just like you,
Wondered, too, at every turn
Why there was so much to learn.

There was nothing when he came
Proving he was born for fame.
Nothing more of skill or joy
Than God gives each normal boy.
He possessed, you have as much
As was his to clasp and clutch.
By his conquest he inspired
All the knowledge he acquired.
You begin where he began,
You're a boy and he's a man,
But with all that he can do
He was once a boy like you!
And for all that makes him great
He has had to work and wait.
Had to learn it, day by day,
You can learn the self-same way.

Standard Motor Signals.

The confusing variation in motor signals in different localities is at last to be cleared away by the adoption of standard motor signals for the whole country, as The Daily Mail suggested some months ago. In the early days of motoring, traffic had a local range mainly, and the systems of signalling devised locally served their purpose well enough. Nowadays a motorist may easily cover the whole country, and to such a traveller the different systems in use by point policemen and motorists themselves for guiding traffic and indicating intention are often contradictory and bewildering. Under the standard signal system all traffic will be immediately responsive to control and the gain to safety and ease of movement will be enormous.—Daily Mail.

JUVENILE RACE ON PROGRAMME.

At last night's meeting of the Regatta Committee, two additional races were added to the programme, viz: Juvenile and Senior League Football. The matter of having a swimming race on the programme was discussed at length, but it was not given a place.

After the adoption of the minutes, Hon. Secretary, C. J. Ellis read a communication from Bowring Bros. granting permission for the use of the Lake side grounds for the purpose of holding the Regatta.

The Junior Football League in reply to the Committee's request sent in the following rule governing their race.

"Those only shall row in this race who have been registered with the Newfoundland Junior Football League for their respective teams, up to and including July 7th, 1923. The decision of the League as to qualifications shall be final in all cases."

It was proposed by C. E. Hunt, seconded by A. W. O'Reilly that the rule be incorporated in the general rules governing the races.

The Newfoundland Football League through Secretary B. B. Harris, reported that the League had no objection to teams entering for a race but should any decide to do so the League would not be a court to decide any disputes that might arise. In this connection the representatives of four Clubs, Messrs. Maddigan, Stick, Ewing, Hart, wrote asking that the race be replaced on the programme. Vice-President Higgins suggested that should the race be put on the programme, that the football captains be communicated with and requested to make their own rules governing the race as in the case of the Junior League and also that they appoint their own court to make decisions as to qualifications. On motion of Mr. K. Ruby seconded by E. Brophy, it was decided to replace the League Football race on the programme with the understanding that the captains of the teams competing constitute a court.

Mr. E. Brophy reported that a number of Juvenile crews were practicing it was suggested that this race be again placed on the programme. The crews practicing are Post Office, Quidi Vidi, St. Joseph's and Southside. It was decided that the race be replaced on the programme. The crews intending to compete must therefore report at next Friday night's meeting and present certificates.

Owing to the small attendance at the regular meetings a discussion arose over the number of people who sport committee badges on Regatta Day, and in various ways take charge of the proceedings. The number of active workers being small in comparison with the names on the official list, it was suggested that the list be revised. Messrs. Hunt, Moore Hanley, Ellis and Williams took part in the debate. The latter gave notice that at the next meeting of the committee he would ask to have eliminated from the programme the names of members who do not attend the meetings, excepting only those, who through engagement at the course, are unable to attend.

A crew from the Commercial Cable Co. Staff, asked permission to row in the Mercantile Race. The Secretary was requested to reply acknowledging the request. It was felt that the crew should enter for the Amateur Race as there were six crews practicing for the Mercantile, whereas there are only two crews so far practicing for the Amateur Race.

Mr. Arthur Johnson on behalf of a number of swimming enthusiasts, asked that a swimming race be placed on the programme. The discussion over this matter was rather lengthy, practically all present joining in debate. It was felt that the Committee had not the facilities to conduct this race in a manner that would make it interesting to those on the bank therefore the request could not be acceded to. It was suggested that as a number of clubs have been formed, that they arrange a meet some afternoon of a half holiday during the season, when members of the Committee would render all the assistance possible in the carrying out of their programme. On motion of Mr. E. Brophy, the Guards' Band were given permission to hold a concert on the course every

Hon. F. J. Morris, K.C., Judge Central District Court.

Dear Judge Morris,—I am directed by the Regatta Committee to forward you a copy of Resolution, duly passed by them, as follows:—

CUTICURA HEALS BABY'S BLISTERS

Head Covered With Eruptions. Hair All Fell Out. Got Little Sleep.

"When baby was a week old a fine rash broke out on his forehead and scalp, which later formed small blisters. The blisters soon spread and when he was three months old his head was covered with sore eruptions. He cried and rubbed his head and his hair all fell out. He got but very little sleep."
"A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using he got relief and in two months his head was covered with new eruptions. He cried and rubbed his head and his hair all fell out. He got but very little sleep."
"Daily use of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Tablets helped to prevent skin troubles."

M. P. as Theatrical Star.

Political circles are much amused at the announcement that Mrs. Hilton Phillipson, or Mabel Russell, as she is better known, M. P., will quit the House of Commons for the stage for one day only to help at the Theatrical Garden Party. The latest woman candidate for St. Stephen's is Miss Louise Owens, for twenty years the confidential secretary of Lord Northcliffe. She is going to throw in her lot with the Conservatives, and has already arranged with Mr. Stanley Baldwin and Lord Derby as to a prospective constituency. She is interested in the industrial development of Glamorgan.
