THE MAIL of this morning should contain a full and sufficient apology from that journal to Mr. Piddington, for attaching his name to the communication sent to Col. The passenger is made conductor, collector, cashier, and sometimes a police officer. The corporation compels the public not only to endure overcrowding, but to act as agent for the company in collecting fare and helping to run the car. New York may learn from Chicago how to get rid of these nuisances. They were run on several streets in this city for a long time, and until the public made up its mind that it would not stand the imposition any it would not stand the imposition any longer. People refused to pay their fare unless a conductor came to collect it. One gentleman took the leadership of this truand larger cars as rapidly as they could be built. Ladies in Brounded Silk Trousers,

(London World, October 12.)
I had heard and read of the "Ladies I had heard and read of the "Ladies' dress reform association," with the Vicountess Harberton for its high-priestess, but I had no idea the reform had made any pratical progress in England till last week, when I actually twice stumbled against ladies in the new garb in the streets of London—one in Bond street and the other in Cromwell road. Well, I am bound to say I like it. To be sure, the ladies I happened to see in it were both handsome and well set-up, carrying themselves like queens. But really in itself there appears nothing objectionable, and the dress certainly contributes to freedom of movement, and, I should imagine, the comfort of the wereer. It is for all the world like a riding-habit cut short to just above like a riding-habit cut short to just above the ankle, exhibiting merely the extremities of the trousers. I must mention them. Only instead of the dress and nether gar ments being in cloth, those I saw were of a black proceeded silk stuff that fall greece. a black brocaded silk stuff that fell gracefully and looked quiet and ladylike. Trousers worn thus, with a long skirt over them are very different from the loud vulgar Bloomer costume of former efforts in this direction; and it is just possible that the reform may spread. But to do so it must come from above, else society will not have it on any consideration. At the ladies' dress reform association may be seen a specimen of this "rational dress," as it is called. In this the trousers are made very wide, with a deep flounce at the extremity, which combines with the skirt worn over them, so that in all ordinary

8,486 attended church, while 20,309 attended chapel. In thirty years, although the population has increased by 100.297, the attendance at charch has fallen off by 299, while the attendance at other religious ous services has increased by 6,865. The contrast is all the more remarkable inasmuch as the morning and not the evening service was selected for comparison. If the latter had been taken the increase of nonlatter had been taken the increase of non-conforming worshipers would have been brought up at least to 10,000. New churches have been built, but the people seem disinclined to attend them. The per-centage of worshipers has fallen in New-castle from 21.31 in 1851 to 15.06 in 1881, and in Gateshead from 13.76 to 9.62. That the percentage of decrease has not been much greater is entirely due to the nonmuch greater is entirely due to the nonconforming bodies, but there is not likely to be the slightest recognition at the Church

unless a conductor came to collect it. One gentleman took the leadership of this trusade. He would tell the people in every car in which he rode that he would pay all their fares whenever a conductor presented himself to coliect the same. The refusal to pay fares under this encouragement soon became so general that the company was compelled to yield to the public pressure in order to save its profits. The company resorted to several devices to save the "bobtails," but did not care to get into the courts. It soon put conductors on the "bobtail" cars, and then substituted other and larger cars as rapidly as they could be built. The New York people can secure the same reform by adopting similar measures.

Under the above heading, some of the French papers are relating the following story, which appears to be received with credence, despite the numbers of similar but mythical tales that have from time to time been circulated. deep excavation, the entrance to which was covered with bushes and undergrowth. They proceeded to explore it, and having with some difficulty removed several large stones found themselves in a well-built chamber of Moorish design, the walls of which were ornamented with undecipherable characters. In the middle of the chamber were two tombs of admirable workmanship. On removing the metal covers by which they were closed the explorers discovered two colossal mummified bodies, one on the right being that of a young woman, the other that of a man. On the head of the woman was a diadem set with stones which, if genuine, are of inestimable value. Around her neck was a necklace of large pearls, two enormous earrings were attached to her ears, and her fingers were covered with rings. On the head of the man was an imperial crown, and in his right hand he held a sceptre. Six of the discoverers remained to guard the treasure, and the others have been described by the consult the authorities. The inhabitants are said to have known of the cavern, but had neiver entered it, thinking it was only a resort of serients and the character of Religion in England.

MR. PHIPPS ON THE CONFISCATION OF PAINE AND VOLTAIRE.

An Unwise Official Action—How it Will Excite The Public to Read Books That Would Have Otherwise Remained in Oblivion on the Upper Shelf.

To the Editor of The Toronto World.

SIR,—Whether the result of their labors be praiseworthy or no, yet as zealous and effective workers for the promulgation of infidel literature, no one can deny our custom house officials that meed of appreciation deservedly their due. Neither the keen with of Voltaire nor the energetic mind of Paine could have devised a more successful method of bringing themselves again into notice than that we owe to the management of those directors of the press who sit at the receipt of customs in Toronto. But a few days past, and Paine and Voltaire seemed condemned in perpetuity to the oblivion of the upper shelf, few copies were imported, and fewer demanded; they were dead stock, and would have so remained; our moral and theological atmosphere was quiet not enumerate. The only class who were likely to read them they would not have injured. Of themselves, they could never have attracted other readers. But an official action, which I must call most unwise, and to which might honestly be applied epithets more forcible, can hardly now be prevented from forcing them into the hands, and by every attraction of roused curiosity, pressing them on the attention of a very much larger class, among whom they may do very great injury indeed. Their day was past. What good—what evil—they could naturally perform was done, and they would have done no more. They laid innocuous on the shelf, a half-forgotten memory of a violent and a fruitful period. But when the rulers of a country deliberately set the powerful machinery at their command at work in the manufacture of command at work in the c command at work in the manufacture of unnecessary evil, there are few materials joined, of course. When the story got to too harmless to be pressed into the service, and this, most unfortunately and most needlessly, is being done here to-day.

Toronto, Oct. 23, 1881. THE BKACKLIST CASE.

Their alleged immorality is another

JUDGMENTS AT OSGOODE HALL.

Their alleged immorative is another affair. As to their cursuesses or impurity, apart from their inidelity, they are but on a level with the ordinary literature of their day. It is not, of course, claimed that these or any authors advocate directly immorality; the charge is that the description familiarizes with, and tends to the commission of that which is similar. But what can a collector of customs do in the matter? Suppose our Toronto official sets to work at this business. He examines English literature. What will he do with Shakespeare; He examines the scenes in Troilus and Cressida—he reads the conversations between the princess and the lords in Love's Labor Lost; he reads the sonnets—what can he say? "Grossly immoral?" "Shakespeare cannot be admitted?" He tries others. What of Smollett? He reads Roderick Random's French adventures—the episode of the travelling friar—the pretty maid who had a tendre for the hero—"Terribly introns—length and fornication be not?? "Undoubtedly we must exclude Smollett!" Well, take Sterne. He read Tristram Shandy. I wonder, by the way, if our learned arch bishop agrees with the learned doctors of the Sorbonne. "Well, takes the strevels tendency to indecency all through. SOLID PROGRESS.

There are different kinds of Life Insurance Agents. Some recogniring their responsibility as men, will work for only the best companies, and accept reasonable remuneration. Others will work only for the company paying the highest salary, irrespective of its standing, and will do any kind of business required of them. One of this class told the writer, two years ago, that he was ready to work for Old Nick's company if he gave him a good salary. He very soon met with an engagement but not on the Etna's staff.

Certain gentry of this class are now making a bugbear of the fact that the Etna's insurance in Force and Income have decreased since 1872. But they forget to explain that everything was done on a greenback basis in 1872, and that there is no American company which has not occasionally made a little "progress backwards" since 1872. The Companies reporting to the New York Insurance Department, aggregate as follows:

To say of a firm, or a bank, that its Debts had decreased and its Assets increased would be very strong testimony in favour of that firm's, or bank's, good management and present strength.

The following statement shows Solid Progress in Assets and in Surplus over all Liabilities—that is, after making provision for the re-insurance of the first column, year by year:—

19,482,417 20,657,603 22,092,734 23,357,648 24,141,125 25,120,804 25,636,195 26,403,440

In 1872, therefore, the ATNA had only $180 on hand to each $1,000 of Policy. To-day it has $338 40. In 1872 its Surplus, after laying aside enough to re-insure all its Policies on the New York or Canadian standard was $2,153.962. To-day its Surplus is $5.387,773, an increase of 150 per cent. The amount at Risk has now, with returning good times, increased in 1880 over 1879.

We have given sufficient to satisfy any one that the Atna Life has all the elements that constitute a strong and reliable Company. But, the gentry above-mentioned say, its death rate "greatly exceeds the average of all the American companies." So it does, and it would be almost a miracle if it did not, for it is one of the oldest companies. But in 1880 its deaths were only $15 per $1,000, while the rate of all the other companies was $14 50 per $1,000, showing but a very trifling difference. But the ETNA has the money in hand for them as they come.

For Insurance which Insures, and which never becomes worthless through inability to pay a premium, after two or three years in force apply to the Etna Life Insurance Company.
