BIRMINGHAM'S WELCOME

An Enthusiastic Greeting to Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain-The Wedding Gifts.

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 8.—The Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain and his bride were given a cordial greeting by the people of Birmingham to night. The reception to the couple was held in the Town Hall, which had been converted into a salon and beautifully decorated. The gathering was a large and representative one. Referring to the feeling of kinship with America expressed in the address just presented he said that that was no new feeling in Birmingham. At the time of America's greatest trial—the crisis of the Union—the eloquent voice of John Bright, now unfortunately hushed for a time by illness, was raised again and again in that very hall to defend the integrity of the republic. The same feeling permeated the whole country. It was now admitted on all hands that a serious quarrel with America would be the greatest national calamity. [Cheers.] Differences were certain to arise from time to time but the democracies of both countries were determined that they should be amicably arranged. He was glad to say that even that august body, the American Senate had nothing to say about his private negotiations which his hearers had just rati-

The Rev Tamas W. Jeffery.

Reverend and Dear Sir: We have requested your presence on this occasion to give us an opportually of offering a slight tribute to the we have learned to associate your name and person. When it became known that you had been relieved of your late charge as pastor of the Western Methodist Church. Bloor-street, it occurred spontaneously to a number of your fellow-citizens that this would be a propitious moment to evince in some tangible form the intercourse with you.

We have no desire to indulge in fickle applanes for such we are aware is quite foreign to your taste; but we also know that speech is too frail a vehicle to convey a proper expression of those feelings evoked by certain Christian qualities which, on account of the rarity with which we meet them, affect us the more when brought before our notice. In everything that a large and liberal understailing of right com-concerned the happiness and comfort of others you have been the very soul of courtesy. With a large and liberal understanding of right conduct between man and man, frankness and a corrageous nature have been inseparably blended.

You have never been gullty of discriminating against the helpless and the poor. Of your sympathy towards others and genfullty towards all we have abundant proofs, and as these are rare essences in human nature we have keenly appreciated them in you. In all that goes to make up in human estimation the perfection of maniy decorum, kindness, sensitiveness for the interests of others, intentness to reason and politeness to please (grand unwritten laws, without which society must lose its greatest charm), we shall always think of you as one wearing the white flower of a pure and blameless life.

As a reminder in later life of this occasion of wearing the white flower of a pure and blameless life.

As a reminder in later life of this occasion of welcome and its import to yourself, and through you to your dear little Mary, we beg you to accept this gift. If amidst the thousand joys and perplexities of life which have and may beset your pathway it shall be the means to some extent of smoothing that pathway and of recalling to your memory any pleasant reminiscences of to-day, we shall esteem ourselves happy indeed in therecollection.
We earpestly pray that you may long be spared to enjoy the confidence of your fellow citizens and co-workers in Christ Josus our Lord, and to aid them with all your powers to extend the beneficial influences of our common Christianity.

Signed on behalf of your fellow citizens,

" [Cheers.] Mr. Jeffery then poured out his confidential avowals of true Christian fellowship with Revs. Dr. Potts and Dr. Briggs, their high character and great business abilities.

God Bless the Workingmen. The address was divided into terse paragraphs, each couched in Mr. Jeffery's familiar graphs, each couched in Mr. Jeffery's familiar idiomatic terms. Next in order, not of merit, but of incidental treatment came this: "Allow me to thank the workingmen and the labor organizations of the city of Toronto. You have not forgetten me just now. I attended him frequently in a professional way and he was a perfect marvel, steckily built and impulsive, and ever ready and competent to talk on any pubject. It is nonsense, however, for anybody to suppose that he is living. He died from alcoholism. You may be astonished at what I will tell you, but it is a positive fact that that man drank every day that I knew him one gallon of the best brandy that he could be.

It was simply idle to try to stop him. He was accustomed to having his own will gratified and could not be broken from it. He sould talk entertainingly on any subject, but when that talk would drift toward chemistry he was positively charming.

The Legal Aspect of Trusts.

Prof. Dwight, the worden of the Columbia College Law School, in the last number of The Political Science Quarterly makes a con-handise steady and adequate to the public wants, and of avoiding over-production, the Professor declares to be an innocent one in the egal sense. A trust, in the sense in which word is currently used at present, he holds se word is currently used at present, he holds se a partnership; an agreement to prevent competition between the producers forming t, he says, is not oriminal at common law yithout bad intent, such, for example, as to aise prices unduly.

Such are Prof. Dwight's views as to the awfulness of "trusts" under the legislation kisting over there and taken from judicial ecisions. Legislation to prohibit "trusts" ad make them illegal, he holds, would be oboxious to the constitutional provision that ersons shall not be deprived of their personal berty or property without due process of large number of legislators, but the Profes-or's paper will not likely be overlooked in the teps to right what is undoubtedly an econo-

The Legal Aspect of Trusts.

Prof. Dwight, the worden of the Columbia College Law School, in the last number of Prentice Boys, Crimson Banner Lodge No. 23. Prof. Dwight, the worden of the Columbia College Law School, in the last number of The Political Science Quarterly makes a contribution to the discussion on the suppression of "trusts." He takes the legal aspect of these organizations and seeks to point out that they cannot at present under existing awe be considered as criminal and doubts if, issuming them to be lawful, they can in such a country as the United States, restricted by a written constitution, be invahidated or promitted by legislation.
