Cure for the dropsy.—It is asserted that the dropsy may be cured by drinking, for a considerable period, the juice of the blackberry twice a day.

A preventative of apoplexy.—It is said, that snuff-taking is a preventative of apoplexy, it being difficult to find a case where a confirmed snuff taker died of apoplexy.

Sweet and agreeable breath.—It is a fact, but not generally known, that the common strawberry is a natural dentifrice; and that its juice, without any previous preparation whatever, dissolves the tartarous incrustation on the teeth, and makes the breath sweet and agreeable.

House Flies.—These troublesome little insects may be effectually destroyed, without the use of poison:—Take half a tea-spoonful of black pepper, in powder, one tea-spoonful of brown sugar, and one table-spoonful of cream: mix them well together, and place them in the room on a plate where the flies are troublesome, and they will soon disappear.

Receipts to cure warts.—Take the inner rind of a lemon, steep it four-and-twenty hours in distilled vinegar, and apply it to the warts. It must not be left on the part above three hours at a time, and it is to be applied afresh every day. Or divide a red onion, and rub the warts well with it, or anoint them with the milky juice of the herb mercury several times, and they will gradually waste away.

Apple Jelly.—It is not known perhaps, so generally as it ought to be, that apples makes an excellent jelly. The process is as follows:—They are to be pared, quartered, the core completely removed, and put into a pot without water, closely covered, and placed in an oven over a fire. When pretty well stewed, the juice is to be squeezed out through a cloth, to which a little white of an egg is added, and then the sugar. Skim it previous to boiling, then reduce it to a proper consistency, and an excellent jelly will be the product.

Brewing in a small way.—For the benefit of those who live in lodgings:—One peck of malt, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. liquorice root bruised, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb Spanish liquorice, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. treacle, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. hops, 1 oz ginger, this will produce six gallons of good beer. In a week this liquor will be fit to drink, and perfectly pleasant and nutritious. A Kettle that will contain $2\frac{1}{2}$ gallons is a sufficient substitute for a copper, a pail will serve as a marsh-tub, and a washing-tub will prove a good vessel for the liquor to work in.

To preserve the teeth.—The principal points to be attended to are, to avoid those causes which render teeth hollow and black, and to clean them every day after dinner. When the teeth are sound, cold spring water is the best. For washing them with, or red wine may be employed for that purpose. In the composition of the tooth powder, used for removing the tartar and adhesive impurities, care should be taken not to employ matters possessing properties so subtle as to attack the enamel, or exterior smooth surface of the teeth; bread burned to a coal and pulverised is regarded as the best and safest dentifrice.

To dry Cows which you intend to fatten.—Take an ounce of powdered alum; boil it in two quarts of milk till it turns to whey; then take a large handful of sage, and boil it in the whey till you reduce it to one quart; rub her udder with a little of it, and give her the rest by way of drink; milk her clean before you give it to her; and as you see need requires, repeat it. Draw a little milk from her every second or third day; lest her udder be overcharged.

Cows for labor.—We have never heard of cows being put to the yoke in this country, but it does not inevitably follow that the practice may not in some cases be attended with convenience if not with profit. Mr Young asserts, that "Mr. Baker will used to draw with oxen, but now draws all with cows. He finds them as handy as oxen, and they draw just as well as oxen of the same size. He keeps them chiefly on straw till three years old, when they go to bull and work till nearly four years old." In Spain, likewise, we are told cows bear their proportion of the labour of the field. These hints may be of use, to some farmers on new settlements, or those who live on small farms, and wish to make the most of a small stock.

Calves scouring.—Give powdered chalk and wheat meal, worked into a ball with gin.

ECLIPSES FOR THE YEAR 1824.

There will be four eclipses in the year 1824—two of the Sun and two of the Moon, in the following order:—

The first will be of the moon on the morning of the 16th of January, partial and visible as follows:

Beginning at 3 hours 4 minutes,
Middle, 4 hours 30 minutes,
Ecliptic ☾ 4 hours 36 minutes,
End, 5 hours 55 minutes.

Digits eclipsed 9 d. 23' on the moon's north limb.

The second will be of the sun on the evening of June 26th, at 7 hours 25 min, invisible.

The third will be of the moon on the evening of July 10th and morning of the 11th, partial and visible as follows:

Beginning at 11 hours 11 min. in the evening of the 10th, Middle, 11 hours 55 min.
Ecliptic ☾ 0 hours 6 min. morning of the 11th day,
End, 0 hours 39 min. morning.

Digits eclipsed 1 d. 37' on the moon's southern limb.

The fourth and last will be of the sun, on the morning of the 20th of Dec.
at 6 hours 26 min. invisible.

Venus will be morning star until the 29th day of July, thence evening star throughout the year.

There will be a very near appulse of Jupiter to the Moon on the evening of the 5th April.

A concise Account of the Planetary System in Verse.

Observe how regular the Planets run,
 In stat'd times, their courses round the sun;
 Different their bulk, their distance, their career,
 And differing much the compass of their year;
 Yet all the same unerring laws obey,
 As God's unerring finger points their way.

The extracts from the letters of Agricola in last year's calendar having proved acceptable to the farming class, we have devoted a part also of this year's to such passage of the same book as were likely to be most useful. We have also inserted some receipts and other information from the New England Farmer:—

Agriculture is not an Art, which may be acquired, like other mechanic trades, by patient drudgery and plodding dulness. It consists not in the corporeal ability of turning the glebe, and blindly committing the seed "to the faithful bosom of the earth"—thus entrusting all to the unassisted efforts of nature, without the direction of scientific skill.—

FEBRUARY hath 29 Days.

Rolls round the sun, thro' his small circle bright;
 All that dwells here must be warm'd and bright;
 Bodies like our's such heat could not endure;
 Our earth would blaze beneath so fierce a ray,
 And all its marble mountains melt away.
 Fair VENUS next fulfils her larger round,
 With softer beams and milder glory crown'd;
 Friend to mankind, she glitters from afar,
 Now the bright evening, now the morning star.

The ignorant and unlettered boor is no more capable of being an enterprizing farmer, than the team which he drives. His ill directed and unenlightened efforts may fell the forests and burn the timber, and in this way obtain a stunted and ungenerous crop: but he wants the talents and address to court vegetative nature in her coy moods, to draw forth her latent beauties, and induce her to display the full luxuriance of her charms. These, she only reveals to those ardent and scientific admirers, who penetrate her sequestered recesses, who study her in all the windings and mazes of vegetation, and labour to acquire the knowledge of soils, the application of composts and manures, the structure of implements, the habit of plants, and all these philosophical improvements, to which husbandry has been indebted during the last century, and which have been converting England, France, the Netherlands, Italy, and a great part of Germany, into little short of well cultivated gardens. There is perhaps no other application of our active powers, which requires so much science as Agriculture, and there is none upon which, in this country, less has been bestowed.

Summer Fallow.—It is told of Demosthenes, who carried ancient eloquence to its utmost height, and himself attained such unrivalled excellence as to have eclipsed not only his own contemporaries but all succeeding imitators, that being one day asked, what was the chief glory and merit of an orator? he replied, action; what was the second?

APRIL hath 30 Days.

And measures out exact the distanc'd space;
 Nor hearer does he wind, nor further stray,
 But finds the point whence first he roll'd away.
 Still more remote from day's all cheering source,
 Large JUPITER performs his constant course;
 Four friendly moons, with borrow'd lustre rise,
 Bestow their beams benign, and light his skes.
 Still far beyond the extensive round of Jove, SATURN with all his retinue doth move.

One moon to us reflects it's cheerful sight ;
 There five at equinox brighten up the night ;
 Here a blue firmament bedeck'd with stars ;
 There over head a lucid arch appears ;
 From hence, how large, how strong, the sun's bright ball ;
 But seen from hence, how languid, and how small !
 When the keen north with all it's fury blows, Congeals the flood, and forms the fleecy snows,
 'Tis heat intense to what can there be known ; which they have been hitherto treated. These have been either so much impoverished or are so much infested with weeds, that they are laid down to grass from necessity ; and their owners are fearful to open them anew, least their hopes of a crop be defeated by the multitude, strength and rapid growth of these formidable enemies. Hence man, who is constituted the sovereign of the soil, is forced to abandon his own possessions and leave them for the maintenance of the lower and domestic animals ; and for himself and the supply of his own wants, he must hew down the forest, and there seek that wheat which his skill cannot produce from the fields, that have been cleared by his own or the industry of his forefathers. The introduction of summer fallow

Warmer is our poles, than it's burning zone.
 Farthest, and last, scarce warm'd by Phœbus' ray,
 Thro' his wide orbit HERSCHEL wheels away
 How great the change ! could we be wafted there,
 How slow the seasons, and how long the year !
 Who there inhabit, must have other pow'rs, Juices and veins, and sense and life, than ours ;

 will apply a remedy to these multiplied disorders. It will afford the means of perfecting our youth in the art of ploughing ; it is the best preparative for winter and spring wheat : and by it alone can our weeds, of endless names and characters, be effectually eradicated.

Dung Pits.—With respects to the formation of a dung pit, I would recommend that a place be chosen near the barn, which should be dug about three feet deep, and of a size proportionate to the stock of cattle usually kept by the farmer. It is not necessary, that it should be built round with a wall, or have a perpendicular descent, as it may slope gently inwards, and deepen gradually towards the centre. After it is thus hollowed out, the texture of the bottom should be examined, and if found firm, impervious, and capable of containing the juices, no further trouble is

One moment's cold, like their's, would pierce the bone, Freeze the heart blood, and turn us all to stone, Strange and amazing must the difference be 'Twixt this dull planet and bright MERCURY!
 Yet reason says, nor can we doubt at all,
 Millions of beings dwell on either ball,
 With constitutions fitted for that spot,
 Where providence, all-wise, has fix'd their lot.

 requisite, and the work is incomplete; but, if open and porous, it should be coated with clay, and lined with large and coarse flags. Into this pit, earth from some neighboring field, should be first brought, and strewed over the bottom and sloping sides, to the thickness of from 9 to 12 inches. Thus a safe depository will be prepared, for the cleanings of the barn, for waste straw and weeds, for the sweepings of the kitchen, for the stems of peas, beans, cabbages, potatoes, and in short, all vegetable matter of woody fibre, as well as the dung of the feeding cattle. After a complete layer of putrescible matter has been spread all over, and when the symptoms of an active fermentation have become visible, the earth, which was thrown out of the excavation, may be slowly returned, and scattered on the

John

Come forth, O man, you azure round survey,
 And view these lamps which yield eternal day.
 Millions of stars on heav'n's wide vault appear,
 With radiant glories hang the boundless sphere:
 Bring forth thy glasses; clear thy wond'ring eyes:
 Millions beyond the former millions rise;
 Look farther; millions more blaze from remoter skies.
 Hence, we the bold, but just conclusion draw surface of the heap, to catch the exhalations which are ascending. Hither, too, the urine should either be conducted by a drain, or carried by buckets; for it is an unpardonable waste to lose the benefit of this rich and invigorating manure. The earth which lies at the bottom will greedily drink up the urine and the vegetable juices, and thus gain a large accession of nutriment and value. So soon as the pit is filled up in the manner herein described, it should be emptied of all its contents; and these should be carted to the field where they are meant to be afterwards applied, and there laid down in some convenient corner, to be mixed up and sorted into a profitable compost. The pit—adjoining the barn—may be again lined with mould,

 We see the blue expanse abounding full
 With suns, which, doubtless, light surrounding worlds
 And since the astronomer tube displays
 To view a ten-fold univers beyond ;
 Can reason form a doubt, that farther yet and the former operations repeated in procuring and augmenting its contents.

Barn-Floors.—There seems only one plan by which the defects of our present barn floors may be effectually obviated ; but as there is a choice in the materials to be employed, such may be selected as are most accessible in any particular district. After tearing up the planks, and building the foundation round close to the sills, the void space below the flooring should then be filled and packed firm with earth. As there will be a necessity to cut away all the present sleepers or joists, which, besides supporting the planks, bind and unite the two sides of the frame, pieces of square timber may be stretched across the whole breadth and at a lower depth, and be secured to the bot-

There are not suns and worlds innumerable,
 At distances far short of others still,
 And those surpass'd by countless systems more,
 That fill the vast extent of boundless space?
 Amazing truth! of which no human thought
 Can ever form an adequate conception,
 For though to man the mental sowers are given To mark the planet's motion, to compute tom of the sills, either by a mortise, or by driving down a round iron bolt. By this means the strength of the frame will be preserved unimpaired; and the operations may proceed without endangering the structure. The earth should then be filled in, till it rises to the level of the present floor, and it should be beaten down by a heavy mallet, till it is completely consolidated. A stratum of clay should be next laid over the whole surface, by which the moisture may be retained and hindered from escaping through the earth. After dividing the interior into its respective compartments, the arrangements must proceed according to the use for which each part is designed. The stalls for the horses and cattle claim a distinguished share of attention. The forehead of the animal should stand on higher ground than the hind, and there should be in every stall a gradual declivity backward, terminating in a gutter, in order to carry off all liquid matter. To this gutter an easy descent should be given outward, that all the urine may flow towards the pit on the outside of the building, which I have described as the great reservoir of this putrescible stream. The floor of each separate stall, as well as the gutter, may be laid with plank while the clay is soft and yielding, and every seam and interstice may be closed by the same substance. These planks—thus pressed and imbedded in the clay—may be nailed and secured to transverse beams running along the length of the barn, and so adjusted as to

Each moment opening to th' enraptur'd mind
 New scenes of splendour and magnificence, Unnumber'd orbs diffusing endless rays
 Of various lustre through the spacious whole;
 Still would the grand idea, thence conceiv'd
 Of all creating all sustaining power,
 Be lost and swallow'd in the vast immense,
 As is the falling drop in ocean's wave.

preserve a sloping direction in the feeding stalls and gutter—But in every case where stones are within the reach of the farmer, they are decidedly superior in firmness, durability, and usefulness; and having the floor with them, although perhaps a little more expensive in the first instance, will in the end much better answer his expectations. The stalls should be laid with them exactly in the manner, in which Water-Street here has been lately improved; and the gutter may be formed either of similar materials, or preferably of smooth flag-stones, like those forming our foot pavements.

Directions for coming into Halifax Harbour, taken from the printed Directions in the Custom-House at Halifax.

SAMBRO Island and Light House is in latitude 44 deg. 30 min. N. and longitude 63 deg. 32 min. W.

From the westward, bring the light to bear N. E. ; if it bears more easterly stretch to the southward till it bears N. E. and as much more northerly as you please, there being no shoal or ledge to the southward; then keep it open on your larboard bow; give it more than a mile and a half birth, as much more as you please.

Note—The western ledges lie from the light S. W. distant two miles, the other W. S. W. about one league; the eastern ledges lie in a range nearly, some above water; the outermost one mile and a half from the light, bearing from it E. N. E.

When the light bears north, distant about 2 miles, run N. E. 4 miles, then north will carry you to Chebucto Head, at a proper distance clear of all danger.

When a breast of Chebucto Head, run N. $\frac{1}{2}$ W. for the south point of George's Island.

When within half a mile of George's Island, you may enter the harbour west of it in 12 fathoms, or east of it in 15.

In passing between Sandwich point and Meagher's beach, run nearest the point, to shun a shoal which runs off S. W. from the beach.

There is also a shoal lying one mile south of Sandwich point.

Coming from the eastward, run for the light, and you cannot fail seeing Chebucto Head as you open Halifax harbour; the light being 4 miles distant from the Head to the S. W.

TO TRAVELLERS ;

For the information of Travellers between Windsor and Parrsborough, &c.
THE Parrsborough Packet sails regularly between Windsor and Parrsborough every week, from the 1st April to Christmas, viz. it leaves Parrsborough on Monday, wind and weather permitting so as to be at Windsor on Tuesday; and will sail from thence the first high water that happens at or after eight o'clock in the morning of that day: the Packet frequently goes twice or three times a week when business requires it.

Time of going through the Falls.

THE Falls are level (or still water) about three hours and an half on the Flood, and about two hours and an half on the ebb, which makes it passable four times in 24 hours, about 10 or 15 minutes each time. No other rule can be given, as much depends on the floods in the river St. John, and the time of high water or full sea, which is often hastened by winds, and in proportion to the height of them.

From the Percy Anecdotes.

THE CAVE OF LIFE.

IN the early period of the French Revolution, when every thing was settled by the guillotine, a gentleman of the name of Lau-renson, who had been a municipal officer of Mornand, was condemned. After judgment, he was conducted to the Cave of Life, which made him consider his emancipation as certain. A few days after his arrival, he received a very strong and energetic address from the inhabitants of the Commune, who retracted their denunciation, and owned that they had been deceived. This important document Laurenson now considered as of no use, since his life was in safety, and he put it carelessly in his pocket. At this moment his name was called. He went out at the summons, when, to his astonishment, he found himself tied to a chain, with others who were to be led to the guillotine. Astonished, and almost stupified, scarcely knowing whether he really were to die, or whether it was only a frightful dream, he marched forwards. At length he was roused by perceiving the address which had dropped from his pocket, at his feet. One of the gens d'arms who accompanied the prisoners, picked it up.
"Ah," said Laurenson, " 'tis a paper I have just received ; if my judges could but see it, I should be saved."

The soldier immediately quitted the escort, and darting away like lightning, hastened to the tribunal, presented the address, and received an order for the prisoner to be released if his fate had not already been consummated. He flew back to the scaffold, Laurenson was yet alive ; another moment, and he had been lost ; forty persons were that day to be guillotined ; thirty nine had already fallen. Laurenson was the last, and he was already bound to the plank. Panting for breath, the soldier arrived, and called on the executioner to stop. He produced the mandate from the judges for the release of the prisoner ; the officer attending read it, and ordered Laurenson to be released. He was un-hounded from the plank, but was found to be in a swoon, senseless and motionless. He was carried to the hotel de Ville, where he was three times bled before he shewed any signs of recovery ; at length he opened his eyes, but they were wild and haggard ; life re-appeared, but his reason was entirely gone. He saw nothing but the last horrible objects which had been presented to him.
"Where is my head ?" cried he, "is it not upon the ground ? let them give it me back ! let them give it me back ! See you not that blood how it smokes ? it runs down in a stream ; it runs over my shoes. See there that gulph heaped with bloody corpses ! O, save me ! save me ! I fall, I fall into it !" His wanderings excited at once compassion and horror ; and he was earried to an hospital, there to be properly attended till his reason should return.

THE CAVE OF DEATH.

IN the early part of the French Revolution, the prisons of Lyon were filled with thousands of unhappy victims. Seventy two prisoners who were condemned, were thrown into the Cave of Death on the 9th of December, there to wait the execution of their sentence. This could not be the next day, because it was the Decadi. One of the prisoners, of the name of Porral, only 22 years of age, of a bold and ardent spirit, profited of this interval to devise a plan of escape. His sisters having by means of very large bribe, obtained access to this abode of horror, began to weep around him. "It is not now a time to weep," said he, "It is the moment to arm ourselves with resolution and activity, and endeavour to find some way by which we can elude our menaced fate. Bring me files, a chissel, a turn-screw, and other instruments; bring wine in abundance; bring a poignard, that if reduced to extremity, we may not perish without the means of defence. By this grate, which looks into the Rue Lafond, you can give me these things; I will be in waiting there the whole day to receive them."

The sisters retired; and in the course of the day, at different visits, brought a variety of tools, twelve fowls, and about sixty bottles of wine. Porral communicated his project to four others, bold and active like himself, and the whole business was arranged. The evening arrived; a general supper was proposed; the last they thought they should ever eat. The prisoners supped well, and exhorted each other to meet their fate the next morning with heroism. The wine was briskly circulated, till the company were laid fast asleep.

At eleven o'clock the associates began their labours; one of them was placed as a sentinel next the door of the cave, armed with a poignard, ready to despatch the turnkey, if at his visit at two o'clock in the morning, he should appear to suspect any thing; the others pulling off their coats, began to make their researches.

At the extremity of the second cave they found a huge door, and on this they began their operations. It was of oak and double barred; by degrees the hinges gave way to the file, and the door was no longer held by them; but still they could not force it open, it was held by something on the other side. A hole was made in it with the chissel, and looking through, they perceived it was tied by a very strong rope to a post at a distance. This was a terrible moment! They endeavoured in vain to cut the rope with the chissel or file, but they could not reach it. A piece of wax candle, however, was procured; and being lighted, and tied to a stick, they thrust it through the hole of the door, and burnt the cord asunder. The door was then opened, and the adventurers proceeded forward.

They now found themselves in another vault, in the midst of which was a large slab of stone, which seemed laid there for some particular purpose. They struck upon it and found it was hollow. This gave them hopes to find that it was placed to cover the entrance of some subterraneous passage; perhaps it might be one that led to the Rhone. They succeeded in removing the stone, and found, to their inexpressible transport, that it was indeed a subterraneous passage; and they doubted not that here they should find an issue. They then tied their handkerchiefs together, and one of them named Labatre, taking hold of the end with one hand, and carrying a light in the other, descended to explore the place. Alas! their hopes were in a moment blasted; instead of finding any passage by which they could escape, he found this was an old well, dried up and heaped with rubbish. Labatre returned with a heavy heart; some other means must be sought.

A door at the extremity of the cave now appeared their only resource. On this they set to work with the same ardour, and succeeded in forcing it open. But this led only to another vault, which served as a depot for confiscated effects and merchandize. Among other things was a large trunk full of shirts. They profited of this discovery to make an exchange of linen; and instead of the clean ones which they took, they left their own which they had worn for many weeks. Two doors besides that at which they entered, now offered themselves to their choice. They began to attack one; but they had scarcely applied the file, when they were alarmed by the barking of a dog behind. A general consternation seized the party; the work was stopped in an instant; perhaps the door led to the apartments of the gaoler. This idea recalled to their minds, that it was now near two o'clock, the time of his visit. One of the parties returned towards the Cave of Death, to see whether all was safe; and it was agreed to suspend their labours till his return. They had need of some moments of rest, and they took advantage of them, to fortify themselves for the rest of their work by taking some wine.

When the scout returned, he said, that on his arrival at the Cave of Death, he shuddered with horror to find the turnkey there already. The man, however, who had been left as a sentinel, engaged him to drink with him; and the scout joining the party, they plied him so well, that he at last reeled off without much examining the cave, and was in all probability laid fast asleep for the rest of the night. This was very consolatory news.

Quitting the door at which they heard the dog bark, they applied themselves to the other. They found here folding doors, one of which they opened, and found themselves in a long dark passage. At the end they perceived another door; but listening, they heard voices; it in fact led to the guard house, where several soldiers in their national uniform were assembled. This was indeed, a terrible stroke; had they then got so far, only to meet with a worse obstacle than any they had yet encountered? Must all their labours prove then at length fruitless?

Only one resource now remained, and this was a door which they had passed on the side of the passage, and which they had not attempted, because they conceived it must lead to the great Court of the Hotel de Ville, and they would rather have found some other exit; but,

" All desperate hazards courage do create,
 As he plays frankly who has least estate ;
 Presence of mind and courage in distress,
 Are more than armies to procure success."

In fact, having forced the door, it appeared they were not mistaken ; that they were at the bottom of a staircase which led into the Court. It was now half past four o'clock ; the morning was dark and cold, while rain and snow were falling in abundance. The associates embraced each other with transport, and were preparing to mount the staircase, when Porral cried out, " what are you about ? if we attempt to go out at present it is all over with us. The gate is now shut, and if any should be perceived in the court the alarm would instantly be given, and all would be discovered. After having had the courage to penetrate thus far, let us have resolution still to wait awhile. At eight o'clock the gate will be opened, and the passage through the court free. We can then steal out by degrees ; and mingling with the numbers that are constantly passing and repassing, we can go away without being perceived. It is not till ten o'clock the prisoners are summoned to execution ; between eight and ten there will be time enough for us all to get away. We will return to the cave ; and when the time of departure arrives, each of us five will inform two others of the means of escape offered. We shall then be fifteen, and going out three at a time, we shall pass unobserved. Let the last three, as they set off, inform fifteen others, and thus in succession we may all escape. This plan appeared judicious and safe ; it was unanimously agreed to, and the associates returning to the cave, made choice of those who should first be informed of what they had done.

Montellier, a notary, and Baron de Chaffoy, to whom the means of escape were offered, refused to avail themselves of them, the former from a confidence of pardon, as he had been mistaken for his brother, and the latter, though in the flower of his age, declared that all his ties in the world had been broken, and that life had nothing now to offer which could make him desirous of prolonging it. They were both guillotined the next morning.

The fate of the fifteen who fled was very dissimilar, and the escape of the rest was prevented by the imprudence of one of them. The last of the fifteen, who, on quitting the cave, was according to the plan arranged, privately to apprise fifteen others ; instead of doing so, cried aloud, " The passage is open ; let him that can, escape." This excited a great movement among the prisoners. They arose in an instant, doubting whether what they heard could be true, or whether he who uttered these words was not mad. The noise they made alarmed the sentinel without ; he called to the turnkey ; they hastened immediately to the cave, perceived what had been done, and closing up the door by which the prisoners had escaped, placed a strong guard before it. Next day, who excited this movement, was, with three others, taken and executed. Another of the fugitives took refuge in the house of a friend, in an obscure street ; but he was discovered, brought back, and guillotined.

It was not thus with Porral, the original author of the plan,

He was the first that came forth from the cave. As he passed the sentinel in the court, he addressed him, "My good friend, it rains and snows very hard; were I in your place, I would not remain out of doors in such villainous weather, but would go to the fire in the guard room." The sentinel thanked him, and following his advice, the coast was left more clear for the prisoners. Porral took refuge in the house of one who was considered a good patriot, and escaped the observation of a party of the commissaries who entered the house. As soon as they were gone, he began to think of making his way out of the city as fast as possible. When he arrived at the Place Belle Cour, he found parties of the gendarmerie dispersed every where. Porral went into a house, and making known who he was, entreated an asylum. The inhabitants were women, timid to excess; but the desire of saving an innocent person, rendered them courageous. They conducted him into a garret, and concealed him behind some planks standing up in a corner. The gens d'armes arrived; they searched the house: they came into the garret where Porral was concealed. Here they found a large cask, the top of which was fastened down by a padlock. They asked for the key; the women went down stairs for it. While they were gone, one of the gens d'armes leaned against the planks, while a second said, "I would be droll enough if we were to find one of the fugitives in this cask." "More likely plate or money," says a third, "for it seems very heavy." The key at length arrived; the cask was unlocked, and found to be full of salt. The gens d'armes swore at the disappointment, visited the roof of the house, and then retired. In the evening Porral, dressed in women's clothes, with a basket on his head and another on his arm, passed the bridge of La Guillotiere, and quitted the city.

Gabriel, another of the fugitives, concealed himself among the bushes of the marshes of the Trevaux Perrache, where he was nearly frozen to death, but he got away to a place of safety.

The young Couchoux, who was one of the five that had opened the way for escape, made choice of his father, who was nearly eighty years of age, as one of the fifteen; but the poor old man's legs were swollen, and he was scarcely able to walk. "Fly, fly my son!" said he, "if thou hast the opportunity, fly this instant! I command it as an act of duty, but it is impossible that I should fly with thee. I have lived long enough—my troubles will soon be finished, and death will be deprived of its sting, if I can know that thou art in safety." His son assured him, that he would not quit the prison without him, and that his persisting in his refusal would only end in the destruction of both. The father, overcome by his dutiful affections, yielded, and supported by his son, made his way to the bottom of the staircase, but to ascend it was out of his power; he could just drag his legs along the ground; but to lift them up was impossible. His son, though low in stature, and not strong, took him up in his arms; the desire of saving his father gave him strength, and he carried him to the top of the stairs. His filial piety was rewarded, and both escaped.
