REPORT, &c.

The Committee of the Upper Canada Religious Tract and Book Society make their First Annual Report, the not without some feelings of regret and humiliation, that more has not been done in this new field of Christian enterprize; yet with a strong sense of thankfulness to the Author of all Good that he has given the will, and the ability to set on foot, and so far to mature the design.

It is, as far as we are concerned, a new field, and if at the end of the first year of its cultivation it has not yielded all the harvest of success which the most sanguine could have wished, your Committee are fain to hope, that seed has been sown which will not altogether perish in the ground, but will produce its fruits in due season; whilst successively and manifold increasing harvests will be reaped, as the soil shall be more and more cultivated with increased exertion and by additional labourers.

We have only to trace the rise and growth of that Society, which now stands foremost in magnitude and enterprize, among the beneficent Societies of the world, (the British and Foreign Bible Society,) to see how comparatively small and feeble beginnings, may issue in the most glorious and triumphant success. So also, the on a somewhat smaller scale, and in a less striking proportion, the Society in whose ranks we are now ranged, the London "Religious Tract Society" has risen, and prospered in like manner. In both however of these examples, we must remember that this success has only been attained, (under God's blessing) by the unremitting care and exertions of their first projectors, and of those who have subsequently joined in the work. Whilst therefore your Committee refer to these as instances which encourage us to hope, nor to "despise the day of small things," they would also point to them as examples of active and persevering efforts, made by friends really, and practically alive to the important good, which the Societies they promoted, were calculated to effect. If similar good effects may be expected from the future operations of this infant Society, your Committee trust that the friends around them will not be wanting in similar efforts to foster it, and bring it to a maturity, not weak, and inefficient for want of proper nourishment, and care; but vigorous, and active, and of good stature, sustained by their contributions, their active services, and their prayers.

Shortly after the meeting at which this society was organized, a remittance of £40 stg. was sent to the Tract Society in London, with an order for its Tracts and Books to that amount. In answer to this application your Committee received in due time, an assortment of the Society's Publications, amounting to upwards of £66 stg. but in order that their newly formed Society might not be altogether inoperative, during the interval which must elapse, before the supply from London could be received, a temporary supply was procured from the Kingston Tract Society, to the amount of £18 8. On the receipt of which the Society was immediately put into operation, both by the sale of Tracts, and by measures being taken for their gratuitous distribution, and for lending them among the poor.

Your Committee have further to announce, that from a persuasion of the beneficial effects which might be expected to result from the publication of a Religious Almanac, and encouraged by the example of the American Tract Society, they undertook to compile such a work, and to publish it under the auspices of this Society; and it has now for some time been before the public, under the title of the "U. C. Christian Almanac for the year of our Lord 1833." This Almanac was compiled by the gratuitous labours of a sub-committee, appointed from the general Committee. The astronomical calculations however were made, and presented to the sub-committee, by a gentleman of this town (J. G. Chewett, Esq.) to whom for this kind and valuable assistance, your Committee beg to tender the most sincere thanks of the Society.

Such have been the steps taken by your Committee for providing the material of the Society's operation. With respect to the extent in which this has been made available in furthering its designs, they have in the first place to remark, that from want of experience in the somewhat intricate details of keeping an accurate account of the issues of such small publications as Tracts, they are unable to Report the actual number of publications, or of pages issued: but some idea of the circulation may be formed from the statement that the receipt of sales at the Depository, including some Almanacs, rather exceeded £63. Gratuitous issues have also been made to the amount of some few thousand pages, of which between 5 and 600 pages have been given for the use of prisoners in the jail.

With respect to the funds of the Society, the following is an abstract:

The total of receipts has amounted to £110 12 3

Being £47 9 1 from subscriptions and donations, and £63 3 1 from sale of Books and Tracts, and Almanacs, The total of disbursements—including two remittances to London in part payment for Tracts, and for paper for the Almanac; bill for printing an Address; part payment of expenses of publishing the Almanac; and sundry incidental charges—amount to

The debts and engagements of the Society, amount to about £123 C'y. with respect to one portion of which sum, your Committee, have gratefully to acknowledge, that it was thro' the kind assistance of a gentleman distinguished for his promotion of every benevolent object, that they were enabled to make up so large a remittance as £40, in the first instance; the advance thus kindly made, forms an item of the Society's obligations, to the amount of £28 17 9 C'y. the other items of the Society's debt consists of £16 0 6 C'y. to the Kingston Tract Society for Tracts;

£18 2 0 C'y balance due for printing the Almanac, £26 9 3 St'g. balance due to the London Society for Tracts, £24 0 0 St'g. balance due for paper.

Converting the two last named sums into currency at the assumed premium of 9 per cent. the total debts of the Society, as before stated, will be very nearly £123 currency, the balance in the Treasurer's hands, and the proceeds from the sale of the residue of Almanac paper, will reduce this sum to something under £100 currency. As an offset to this are the expected returns from the sale of the Almanac; but although it was anticipated that the sale of this work would have covered the expence of its publication; this anticipation must fail of being fully realized, from the circumstance that several packages of the Almanac intended to be forwarded to different parts of the Province have been detained in York, in consequence of the want of those facilities of communication, which are usually afforded by the snow at this season ;—as this state of things, however, has been ordered by His Providence whose 'word, fire and hail, snow and vapour are everfulfilling;' we cannot doubt that it is so ordered for the bestwhilst, however, it becomes us cheerfully to acquiesce in any apparent obstacle which God may see fit to put in the way, even of what we believe to be a good work; this affords no reason why we should not proceed vigorously onwards where, the road is still open before us; and under this feeling your Committee earnestly press the state of the Society's funds as just represented, upon the consideration of its friends, and they trust the appeal thence made to them, for increased support, and co-operation will not be made in vain. The poor, and the ignorant, we have always with us; and these God intends and expects that we should relieve, and instruct; and there are few means by which we can more effectually, and successfully do the latter, than by putting in the hands of those who are perishing for lack of knowledge, plain, and scriptural, and at the same time, concise and interesting views of religion, and its effects upon those who have felt its influence. Such views and representations the publications of our Seciety are peculiarly calculated to present. But, he it remembered, that a Tract Society would fall very far short of producing those beneficial effects, which should attend its establishment, were we to do no more than fill the shelves of its depository with Tracts, and then leave them to find their way thence as casual demand might call them forth. Much, very much, of the good which such a Society is calculated, under God, to effect, is to be done among those, who have not the inclination, or the means to purchase for themselves; and who must, therefore, not only be supplied gratuitously, but must be sought out, & even solicited, to a perusal of the pages thus brought to their doors. It is in this, one of the most useful branches of its operations, that the Society makes the largest demands upon its funds, and upon the personal exertions of its members. The Tracts of the Society must be dispersed abroad, among the poor, the ignorant, and the profane: and as those who stand most in need of the wholesome instruction conveyed in these Tracts, are, at the same time, those who are least likely voluntarily to seek them, a most important object of the Society must be lost, unless active measures be taken to put its works in the way of those whom they may so essentially benefit. This view of the objects of our Society is strongly recommended to the consideration of its supporters. And your Committee merely throw out the suggestion, which they trust will be improved upon, and illustrated by others in the course of the evening; that the most charitable, and Evangelical part of this Society's designs (for to the poor the Gospel is preached) can only be effected by the active personal interest, and trouble taken by its friends, in periodically visiting different districts, and giving, or lending such Tracts, as appear most calculated to awaken the indifferent, and alarm the profiigate. It is stated in the Report of the London Tract Society for the year ending March, 1881, that from the Reports of several Societies in agricultural districts, it appeared, "that in those places where Sunday-Schools existed, and Loan Tract Societies were in active operation, very few scenes of lawless outrage were witnessed during the preceding winter;" in the course of which, it will be remembered, that the most flagrant, and desperate violations of social order were perpetrated, in different parts of the United Kingdom.

Whilst, however, your Committee thus dwell upon the advantages of this Society to the ignorant, to the careless, and to the dissolute; it is, by no means, to be supposed that its publications are exclusively suited to such characters: on the contrary, it abounds in works, adapted to every gradation of religious advancement, as well as deficiency: on its catalogue are to be found, not only warnings and denunciations against 'those that forget God;' but also encouragement to the penitent, assistance to the weak, comfort to the distressed, confirmation to the strong, and triumphant views of glory for the ripe expectant of immortality; and all derived from, and conformable to those grand fundamentals of our most Holy Faith, in which "all those who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity," have ever agreed.

Your Committee will only add that these are days in which extraordinary efforts are required from those who are on the Lord's side, to counteract, and resist the powers of darkness. Infidelity in all its shapes, and guises, is making vast efforts to undermine the principles of Christianity: and though we are not immediately exposed to these attacks, the enemy of souls is too vigilant, and too malignant long to suffer any corner of the globe to be exempt from his, and his agent's machinations. We have, however, the highest encouragement to withstand these attempts; it is the assurance of inspiration that if we'resist the devil he will flee from us.' It is ours then to be ever on the watch, to throw up every kind of entrenchment, and defence which may serve to protect us against the assaults of the evil one; and to be anxious, and active in furnishing both ourselves and all around us with such weapons both of offence, and defence, as will alone enable us ultimately to discomfit the enemies of our salvation.

NOTE.—In justification of what some complained of as an error in the calculation of the Sun's rising and setting, in the Almanac, it may be here noted, as it was omitted to be done in the Almanac itself, that the time by which the calculation is made, is mean and not apparent time. On this subject J. Pond, Esq. the Astronomer Royal, has the following Note in the Nautical Almanac for 1833:—
