Coal Fields in the North-West. The proof of the existence of coal, of various grades, in workable quantities, seems at last to be forthcoming. quantity, the coal, in one or other of its forms, from lignite to true coal, bitumi-nous and anthracite, appears to be practically inexhaustible. It is said that Mr. George Dawson's forthcoming report on the subject, will give the following estimate of quantities underlying each square mile of surface:

Tons. Main seam, in vicinity of Coal
Banks, Belly River, coal

9.000,000 The extension of the coal beds which occur on the Bow and Belly Rivers is great both to the north and north-west. Lignite is found on the North Saskatchewan. One seam is six feet thick, and there is an outcrop at Edmonton. Thirty miles higher up, there is a seam which miles higher up, there is a seam which reaches the enormous thickness of PLAINTS. I know of no article that gives greater eighteen feet. The quality is good and the composition as follows:

Outcrops exposing large seams are met with at other points. On the North Pembina, an eight feet seam occurs, and on the Athabaska lignite beds have been traced for several miles; and it is expected that near the mountains, coal of a better quality will be found. On the Peace River only thin veins, of doubtful economic value, have so far been found; but it is possible that further explanations may give better results. Coal from a two foot seam in the canon of the mountains, where they are pierced by the Peace River, yielded

The coal in the Cypress Hills and at Medicine Hat is a distinctly marked lignite, which is of course no the most valuable. On the Souris River, the lignite beds are capable of the following result:

tion of rings that might carry prices to an artificial height. The profits of inmartificial height. The profits of individuals and companies who acquire coal areas should be got out of the working, and not extracted from jobbing purchases and sales of coal lands. The regulations for the disposal of coal lands are in many respects, fair enough. After survey has been made, and this is to be done as soon as possible—the coal lands, within certain districts, will be periodically offered for sale by tender or public auction, at the option of the Government. Existing leases may be convertied into freeholds on certain conditions, including payment in cash of the price placed by the Minister of the Interior on other coal lands in the district where the beds are found. Forfeiture will follow where the conditions to commence active operations within one year, and to work the mine within two years, have not been complied with. The Minister of the Interior has conferred upon him the power to sell at the upset price to persons whom he may find have spent "considerable sums of money" in exploring for coal; a latitude of discretion which will take certain lands out of the general regulations, as to sale by tender or auction.

The want of some regulation which would prevent rings being formed to make the coal and the propose of sale sand for the said linearing the moneys secured by the mander in payment thereof, be sold at general regulations, which begins formed to make the coal said in the district where the conditions to commence active operations within one year, and to work the mine within two years, have not been complied with. The incident made a Cannibalism is a much discussed opic in English newspapers since the emperor is really ill and that even he realized that the final breaking up of his strength, which so long has been leared, is now inevitable and close at hand. The exercises ended dismally amid undisguised evidence of emotion on the part of both soldiers and spectators. The festivities that were to have been given last evening in honor of the emperor's visit were in definitely postponed.

For the cure of all the delicate disorders o which females are subject no remedy has been devised that can be compared with Hanington's Quinine Wine and Iron. It renovates the entire system, animates the despondent, restores the loom of health to the sallow cheek, and replace bloom of health to the sallow cheek, and replaces melancholy with vivociousness of youth. Ladies who feel that they are "growing old before their time" should use Hanington's Quinine Wine and Iron. Beware of imitations. See that you get Hanington's, the 'original' and 'penuine. The wide distribution of the beds of different kinds of coal is a most fortunate circumstance, reducing as it does the cost of carriage to the lowest limit, and bringing fuel, an article so much wanted in the North-west, near the homes of future settlers.

On the policy of the Government in dealing with these coal lands, much will in the future depend. The great thing to be guarded against will be the formation of rings that might carry prices to an artificial height. The want of some regulation which would prevent rings being formed to make coal artificially high, will, we fear, yet be felt. What form such regulations to be effective could take, is a point on which scarcely any one has, so far, ventured an opinion. — Monetary Times.
