KNOX SUFFERED FOR OVER THREE YEARS

My Lady Was Nervous And Had Severe Indigestion That Caused Intense Pain.

"It has been nearly two years since I took Tanlac, but I am more grateful to the medicine than ever for I have felt just fine to this very day," recently declared Mrs. Lena Knox, 51 Hill Street, St. John, N.B.

For three years, indigestion and nervousness caused me such agony it was almost a shadow. I was actually afraid to eat; at night I would lie awake nervous and sleepless for hours and finally became so weak and thin I was almost a shadow. "But Tanlac gave me a splendid appetite, calm nerves and a digestion that is simply perfect. I sleep the whole night through and have gained such weight, strength and energy that I really feel at my best."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Surnames and Their Origin

McKENNA

Variations — McKenna, MacKinney, McKinney, Kinney.
Racial Origin—Irish.
Source—Given names.

There are two forms of this name, or rather two separate names in Gaelic, from which the anglicized family names in this group have been derived. It is unfortunate that in so many family names the Irish and the English forms should be so different as to cause confusion in the translation of the name from one language into the other.

Here is another case where you'd have some genealogical record to make sure whether your ancestors were members of that clan known as the "MacDonagh," which played a vivid part in the wars of Irish rebellion in the early seventeenth century, or of the ancient "Clann Cionnotha."

The early records of this latter clan are clear. It was founded by a chief named Cionnoth (the meaning of the given name being "without servile work") about the year 250 A.D., thus establishing this family name as about twice as old as the majority of English family names. The stronghold of this clan was in Tirrowen.

The name "MacDonagh" is derived from the given name "Donach," which means a "dirk." It is not certain at just what period the clan was established, but it was a branch of the ancient clan of the O'Harts, and it was well established in Ardmore, County Waterford, as well as in Dundalk and in Trugh, County Monaghan.

ELLWOOD

Variation—Elwood.
Racial Origin—English.
Source—A locality.

This family name, of English origin and development, is one of those which have been derived from place names. There are many places to-day in England named Ellwood. All of them don't trace their history back to the medieval times, but, on the other hand, it is fair to assume that there were also places called Ellwood in the medieval ages which since have been called by other names.

So unless you can follow the individual family history definitely back to the first use of the name, you have little certainty from which particular Ellwood it has been derived. Ellwood was the sort of a place name which might be applied locally. It meant simply "Ellis' wood," "Ellis," "Elice" and "Helyas" being the medieval English spellings of the biblical name of "Elijah" or "Elias." This, of course, was a Hebrew given name, popular with the medieval populations not only of England, but of other Christian countries through its biblical associations. The name means "The Lord God," or "The Strong Lord."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ALWAYS KEPT ON HAND

Mrs. David Gagne, St. Godfroy, Que., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my three little ones and have found them such an excellent medicine that I always keep them on hand and would strongly advise all other mothers to do the same thing." The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which quickly relieve constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers and promote that healthful refreshing sleep which makes the baby thrive. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, O.

Rediscovered Port on Persian Gulf.

The site of Jerra, the mysterious port on the Persian Gulf mentioned 2,000 years ago by Ptolemy, geographer, and since lost sight of, has been rediscovered in ruins by Captain R. E. Cheeseman, former private secretary to Sir Percy Cox, British High Commissioner at Bagdad, who has just returned to civilization after a trip into unknown Arabia. He reached the oasis of Jabrin in the Great South Desert, the first European to penetrate there, and found it inhabited by a tribe living in Stone Age conditions. Captain Cheeseman's exploits were made possible by the relations of the British with Ibn Saud, Sultan of Nejd, whose guest he was.

Her Mistake.

A philanthropic woman was visiting lunatic asylum. There was one old in there who roused her special impression. "How long have you been here, my dear man?" she asked. "Twelve years." After several more questions she used on, and her guide informed her at the old man was the medical superintendent. "I'm so sorry, doctor," she cried, rrying back. "I'll never judge by appearances again."

Salt Springs Near Madrid Are Among Richest in World.

Probably one of the most characteristic landscapes in Spain is that of the central steppes. With the exception of Hungary's "puszta" there is nothing like the Spanish steppes in all Europe. They are vast tracts of territory with a soil that contains excessive quantities of clay and lime, and which will not give growth to vegetation of any kind. The air and under-soil are very dry. There are no trees, and bushes are scarce. If the soil contains salt, the steppes are called saline, and this name is applicable to most of the Spanish steppes territory.

Moisture is entirely lacking in the surface layer of the soil, but the under-soil often contains water, which, however, is not always drinkable. When calcium carbonate, plaster, clay and a white loam predominate in the soil the steppes are called "calveros," the bare lands. If red plasters, and clays and loams containing iron predominate, they are commonly called the reddish steppes. Either kind has a few typical plants, and if the same plant lives in both areas it is of different appearance.

Not far from Madrid are the most typical spots of the central steppes. Tarancon is perhaps the most interesting place in this area from the point of view of its flora, its climate and its soil. The barren hills near Tarancon on the road to Belluchon should be included in a national park, for there are no other hills like them in the entire world.

The vegetation of these hills consists of grasses, lilies, orchids, sunflowers and crucifers. They make excellent pasture for goats and sheep. Trees have been planted here, and if the soil is carefully tilled it loses its desolate character.

Most remarkable, however, are the salt beds in this district. They are shallow patches or sheets of clayish soil, extending over wide areas. Water is conducted through the pits and by a simple process of evaporation the salt is obtained. It is mixed with small quantities of sulphates and magnesias.

The salt springs of Belluchon are among the richest in the world. There are 200 grains of salt in each quart of water and about 30,000 quarts run through the springs every hour.

How Plants Are Pollinated.

There are seven main agencies by which plants are pollinated, namely: Wind and gravity, water, insects, man, special devices and self-pollinating agencies or cleistogamous flowers.

The wind carries the pollen and at length, it falls, due to gravity. Water, in the case of water plants, carries the pollen from plant to plant. Insects are great pollen carriers. They pass from flower to flower in search of nectar, and carry away pollen upon their bodies. When they visit the next flower, some of the pollen is accidentally rubbed off, and thus the flower is pollinated. Man may bring about pollination by artificial means. He merely transfers the pollen from the plant where it is born to the plant where it is wanted. This is done, usually, in the greenhouses of upon special plants. In some plants there are special devices for the explosion of the pollen containers which throw the pollen out to other flowers. Self-pollinating or cleistogamous flowers are those that never open and must be self-pollinated. That is, the flower can fertilize itself and does not need pollen from another flower.

GREEN TEA IN GREAT DEMAND.

Twenty-five years ago, Green Tea was more popular than Black, but due to the heavy importation of poor quality Japan and China Green Teas, the demand fell off. Ceylon and India started producing Green Tea on a large scale only in recent years. They were of such fine quality and delicious flavor that Green Tea drinkers immediately recognized their superiority and demanded them in ever increasing quantities. Salada Tea Company is practically the sole importer of Ceylon and India Green Teas in Canada.

Saving Her Memory.

"How is it that you have such a good memory, Norah?" her mistress inquired.

"Well, mum, I'll tell ye. Since me childhood never a lie have I told, and when ye don't have to taxin' yer memory to be rememberin' what ye told this one or that, or how ye explained this or that, shure ye don't overwork it an' it lasts ye, good as new, till ye die."

Swat the Adam and Eve Flies.

The time to swat flies is right now, while they are still in their garden of Eden, and have not started out to devastate the nations. Flies are the greatest little progenitors of evil in all the world. Science says, "If each egg of the common house-fly should develop, and each of the larvae should find the food and temperature it needed, with no less and no destruction, the people would suffocate under the plague of flies."

A fly lays 150 eggs in a batch and is equal to six batches. It only takes ten days from egg to adult. Begin with two flies May 1 and let them continue their merry game right along through September, and mathematicians can only express the figures in terms of German marks. It runs something like 1,096,181,249,510,720,000,000,000,000 and since no one can comprehend such figures it makes little difference what ciphers you add from that time forth.

Swat the fly early and swat her thoroughly. We say "her" because the female is more deadly than the male but swat all kinds without bothering about sex determination.

Now that the automobile has supplanted horse in cities and towns, and the manure box is no longer a familiar object in every alley, it is a comparatively easy thing to keep the town home free from flies. The country home needs equal immunity and it can be given. Look to your screens, both doors and windows. Make sure that no garbage is allowed to accumulate near the house. Keep the stables clean, and locate the manure piles as far from the house as possible.

The most efficient chemical to apply to manure piles to check the breeding of flies is borax, which does not injure the fertilizing properties of the manure. As soon as the manure is removed from the barn sprinkle the borax over it, using a fine sieve such as a flour sifter. Apply it around the outer edges of the pile as the maggot seems to prefer that location. Then throw a few gallons of water over the mass.

TOO WEAK TO WALK

The Sad Condition of a Brandon Lady—How Relief Came.

"I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," says Mrs. Annie Treherne, Brandon, Man., who tells of her new found health as follows: "Some years ago I had an attack of pneumonia and it left me in a terribly weakened and run-down state. I was unable to walk for a long time as I had practically lost the use of my legs, and had to be carried upstairs, for I had not the strength to go myself. I became dependent over my condition for I had tried many remedies, which failed to help me. While in this wretched condition a lady friend urged me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and I procured a supply. After taking the pills for a while I could see that I was growing stronger, and I gladly continued their use until I had fully regained my old-time health and strength. Now if I feel at all run down at any time I at once take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never fail me. I can therefore warmly recommend them to others who may be run down."

There is no better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to improve the blood and bring back strength after acute diseases such as fevers, pneumonia, influenza, etc. Given a fair trial they will not disappoint you. You can get the pills from your druggist, or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Vita Nuova.

Now is the time once more,
Dear and desired of old,
Spring at the sill at the door,
Slender and young and cold,
Scarcely the heart can hold
The joy long waited for,
Now the magical word is told,
And the young Spring's at the door.

When all the folk are asleep,
Save only the feathered folk,
She goes by the hills of sheep,
By the lambs and the grazing flock,
Flowers in the fold of her cloak,
And the grey dawn at the peep,
The trumpeter Daffodil woke
The thrush and blackbird asleep.

Now in the East and the dark
The heart trembles and sings,
Sings with the linnets and lark
New songs of immortal things.
It wakes, it quivers, it springs,
O heart, that was Winter-stark
It rises it beats it has wings
When the Spring calls in the dark.

What People Call Success.

Deny yourself the pleasures youth would claim,
Count every moment precious, never rest;
Let profit-getting be your only game;
Be sure to banish pity from your breast;
Choose eagerness for money as a goal
To drive you daily to new enterprise;
Don't pause to gather flowers beside the road,
Be quick to see where your advantage lies.

Break briskly through whatever bars your way;

If sentiment assails you, fling it back;
Be sure to be some richer every day,
Let greed be not among the things you lack;
If you can get refinement as you rush
It may not hurt your chance to be refined,
But never hesitate to crowd or crush;
Have one intention always in your mind.

Let love, if you must love, be nothing more Than incidental to the end in view,
Or use it as a key to Fortune's door,
Adjust it to the purpose you pursue;
Beware lest golden hours be vainly spent
In setting tender loveliness to rhyme;
See beauty only where a charm is lent
By wealth enough to make it seem sublime.

Be selfish when you must; be friendless, cold;
Let nothing keep you from the goal you seek,
Where boldness offers dividends, be bold,
And miss no chance to pounce upon the weak;
Become a driving power, a mighty force,
Be firm, be strong, be keen, be pitiless;

You'll miss the finer things of life of course,
But you may win what people call success.

ITCHY RASH IN SPOTS ON HANDS

Could Not Put Hands in Water, Cuticura Heals.

"A red rash broke out in spots on my hands. I did not pay much attention to it at first, but later the eruptions grew larger and caused so much itching and burning that I could not put my hands in water. The irritation caused me to scratch the affected parts. As soon as I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment the trouble began to get better. I continued the treatment and now I am completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. H. W. Day, Hillside Farm, Wesley, Me., Aug. 31, 1923.

HELP FOR YOUNG WOMEN

Mrs. Holmberg Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Viking, Alta. — "From the time I was 15 years old I would get such sick feelings in the lower part of my body followed by cramps and vomiting. I kept me from my work (I help on the farm) as I usually had to go to bed for the rest of the day. One time I would have to walk the floor. I suffered in this way until a friend induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very satisfactory results so far and am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends. I surely am glad I tried it for I feel like a different person now that I don't have these troubles." — ODELIA HOLMBERG, Box 83, Viking, Alta.

Letters like this establish the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They tell of the relief from such pains and ailments after taking it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills in this country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials prove this fact.

If you doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario, for Mrs. Pinkham's private text-book and learn more about it.

SEARCH FOR "MOONSHINE"
OUTFIT AT LOCKERBY

On Friday morning last, about 8.30 o'clock officers made a visit to a farm at Lockerby in search of a swamp whiskey factory and its products. They found a barrel in which was a small quantity of mashy looking material, and a sample of this was taken for analysis. Another keg considered suspicious had salt in the bottom, but what else it may have been a container for could not be judged.

One of the owners of the property visited informs The Advocate that they never made any liquor or set any wash. He makes a straight denial of having had any connection with such illicit booze business whatever,
and, furthermore, claims that the barrel from which the sample was taken was "planted" on the premises.
We are told that a hired man on the place saw a man with an auto leave the barrel there on Thursday night
while the farm owners were in bed asleep, also that they knew nothing whatever about this until after the search was made.

We have not learned when the case
is to be heard, or whether prosecution is to be made. However, the public will await with interest for further proceedings.

There is a deep conviction in the minds of a great many people that there is considerable more wet goods
coming out of the Lockerby area than flows over the dam there.—

LAKELET

A very large crowd of men, women and children attended Mrs. Ortman's sale last Thursday afternoon. It was one of the largest crowds seen at a sale in this vicinity in many a day.
The nice warm weather and warm showers which preceded, put the farmers in good humor and they were very generous with their bids. The result was very fair prices for everything offered. People were there from Mildmay, Ayrton, Neustadt, Clifford, Harriston, Fordwich and Gorrie.

At last the sink hole is conquered
for a time at least and is now open to traffic. There were over 500 rods of rails dumped into the hole and now there are three teams and seven or eight men at work gravelling.
There does not appear to be any doubt that the piece into which the rails were dumped will hold and keep above the water, but it may break out and over the road at the south end, if there is not some repair there. It would be a wise thing to let the men make a job of it now, and no doubt they will.

The people of the neighboring section, No. 1, are preparing for a great re-union of the old boys and girls, teachers, etc., who at any time lived in that section. The date is July 3rd and strong committees have been appointed to look after everything.
They are going to have a band and sports of all kinds.

Dundalk, June 15.—This past week
there has been a continual bom-

was the big week of the Badjeros than 2,216 groundhogs' tails were counted at a banquet last night, when David Macklem's team won. David shot 515, and as captain of the winning team was presented by the ladies with a handsome shaving outfit. Dundalk Citizens' Band was also present at the function and supplied music. Last year the Hunt Club bagged 1,555 in the groundhog week.

PROTON TWP. GIRL KILLED
WHEN AUTO CRASHES OVER
BANK

An unfortunate and much regretted accident occurred opposite the farm of Mr. Earl Matthews near the Base line on the 20th of Egremont

last Friday evening about half-past six o'clock, by which Miss Annie Hay, 15 years of age, daughter of
Mr. and Mrs. James Hay of Swinton Park, in Proton Township, lost her life.

Miss Hay, her parents, and sister, Mrs. Murray Wells and babe, had spent the afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barber, in Normanby and, with Miss Winnifred Barber, were returning to their homes in Egremont and Proton when the accident occurred.

Though the whole history of the unfortunate accident will never be known, owing to the fact that the unfortunate girl was the driver of the car, it is thought that in the attempt to make the hill leading off
the Base Line near Mr. Earl Matthews' farm on "high" the engine was stalled, and Miss Hay, who was short in stature was unable, quickly enough, to reach the brakes to keep the car from backing down the hill and going into the twelve-foot ditch
at that point.

The hill at which the accident occurred is not a particularly bad one,
but it is presumed that in the excitement of the engine stalling, and the car backing down the hill, Miss Hay failed to make a slight turn in the road at that place, and the car plunged backwards down a very steep bank about twelve feet deep.
The car apparently kept on the wheels until quite near the bottom,
when it upset, pinning the occupants underneath, with the sole exception of Mr. Hay, who, when he saw the engine stall, had jumped out in a futile attempt to hold the car from going backward.

While all were more or less severely shaken up, Miss Hay was the only one seriously hurt, and it is thought that she was instantly killed when the car turned over. It was found that her head was caught between the back of the seat and one of the bows in the top that had been broken, and that she also was more or less disfigured by being pinned under the car on top of a pile of stones alongside the fence. The fact that Miss Barber, who was on the front seat with her, escaped without injury is thought to have been due to her making an attempt to put on the emergency brake. To do this she had reached past Miss Hay, who was busy at the wheel, and when the car upset she was protected.

KEEP THIS PLAGUE OUT

It is estimated by Dr. Hoffman of the Prudential Insurance Company that not fewer than 10,000 persons were murdered in the United States last year, "an appalling indication of the growth of lawlessness and crime without a parallel in the social history of nations." Were Ontario an average State of the Union, there would have been about 290 homicides in the Province during 1923. There is as yet no complete return dealing with last year's crimes of violence in the Province, but the report of the making allowance for the

in population, and more than three as many in Chicago as in Boston.
The carrying of weapons in the South and West has much to do with the greater total of homicides. In communities where men go about armed and ready to settle their arguments with revolvers or stilllets the murder rate is bound to be high. If we would keep out this frightful crime of man-killing which is spreading rapidly across the border our police authorities must display the most vigilance in preventing the carrying of revolvers and knives, and in sending them to jail, without the option of a fine, all persons who break the law in this respect.

HOW I MADE IRONING EASIER.

When my iron was dragging one day, a good friend, trying to cheer me, explained that there was no way to make this work easy. I meditated over her words a long time. Finally, I drew a conclusion of my own, one which is a little more cheerful. It is: Ironing can be made easier in most households.

I have found five ways to reduce the toll connected with this weekly task. The work is simplified:

1. By purchasing clothing for the family and house which may be ironed quickly.
2. By avoiding unnecessary wrinkles.
3. By considering it proper to use sheets, tea towels, and crepe garments folded from the line without being ironed, or with a light pressing.
4. By using the best up-to-date methods and equipment.
5. By planning the housework so the ironing will not fall on the day when baking and many other duties must receive attention.

I'll have to admit that I sit on a stool when ironing. It was rather awkward for me at first, for I learned to iron while standing. Now I am exhausted if I spend Wednesday, my ironing day, without my high chair. The height of the ironing board also is of importance. There is no definite rule to be given about it. If the surface is too high, the worker will feel pains between her shoulders; if it is too low, the small of the back receives the strain. I like an ironing board that is firm, and one which is covered either with several layers of a soft old blanket or one thickness of quilted table padding. I use muslin for the outside covering. This is fastened on with thumb tacks. These may be removed with less effort than pins, and they are efficient in holding the cover in place.

As to the iron, the self-heating kinds are step-savers. In homes where electricity is available, of course, the electrically heated ones are fine. However, I have tried many other types of these irons and have found them quite satisfactory.

Ironing machines also are helpful, especially for use in large families.

I know of one farm woman who has one of these appliances; she rents it by the hour to her neighbors after her own ironing is done. I have used two kinds of ironers—those operated by hand in which the cold rolls remove the wrinkles by pressure, and the electric ones with heated rollers.

There are several rules or practices that I follow carefully in ironing, all of which make for good results and the comfort of the worker. They have helped me so much that I have decided to tell you about them.

Every surface is ironed dry before another one is given attention. Wrinkles form in materials that are not ironed dry. I iron as large a surface as possible at a time. This makes for speed.

The sleeves and other parts of a garment that hang off the board are given first consideration.

Aprons hang the best when they are ironed lengthwise, instead of crosswise, from the hem upward to the gathers. I iron the bibs and strings first.

Hems, bands, tucks, folds, and every double thickness of material require extra pressing to remove the moisture and to prevent a rough-dry appearance. When ironing tucks, I pull them taut and iron them lengthwise and downward from the upper part of the tuck to the bottom.

Colored clothes are ironed on the wrong side. I find that this prevents the shine which otherwise makes its appearance on the seams and hems. It is well to remember that too hot an iron has a tendency to fade dyes.

Woolens are covered with cheesecloth when being ironed. I prefer to have the wool fabric half-dry, so the cheesecloth need not be moistened. An iron hot enough to scorch the delicate fibres is not to be used.

To present a shine on silks I iron them on the wrong side with a warm but not hot iron. I work with taffetas and crepes when they are quite damp; to the first type of silk this treatment gives the desired finish and it keeps the latter from shrinkage. If a silk is too wet when ironed, it will be papery.

Table linens are ironed partly dry on the wrong side, then the ironing is completed on the right side.

Ruffles are ironed straight on the hem edge, and then the iron is worked up into the gathers. I like to use a small pointed iron for this purpose.

Embroideries and laces are ironed on the wrong side over a soft padding of Turkish toweling. I pin a Turkish towel over one end of the board when I start ironing, so it will be ready for use when needed.

The garments which need mending are arranged in a pile as ironed. I do this to avoid sorting them out afterward.

Folding is given careful attention; in fact, I consider it of great importance. No matter how beautifully ironed a garment is, it may be wrinkled by improper folding.

I fold rectangular and square table covers with three or four lengthwise folds, pressing them in; if crosswise folds are necessary for storage, they are made without the use of the iron. Sheets are folded in the same way. Round table covers are a little more difficult to handle. I fold them in half lengthwise, and in half crosswise, and then roll them. Pillow cases are folded in thirds lengthwise.

A way to avoid wrinkles is to hang the clothing carefully on the line, and to fold it neatly in the basket when taking it down. Of course, I allow the clothes to dry thoroughly before putting them away.

LILY WHITE CAKE.

One cupful of sugar, 1 cupful of flour, 1 cupful of sweet milk, 3 level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pinch of salt, whites of 2 eggs, 1 teaspoonful of vanilla. Sift all the ingredients together four or five times. Boil the milk and pour over dry ingredients and stir. Do not beat it. Then add the whites of two eggs beaten stiffly and a teaspoonful of vanilla. A small pinch of cream of tartar is good but not necessary. Put in an ungreased pan. Place in cool oven and increase heat for about thirty minutes till done.

For the icing use one cupful of sugar, seven tablespoonfuls of water and one egg white beaten stiff.

Boil sugar and water till it hairs from the spoon. Then pour white boiling hot into the egg white beaten stiff. Continue beating until ready to spread the icing on the cake.

Red-hot cinnamon candies placed on top make this cake pretty and tasteful.

SAVING WITH TRAYS.

Trays are a great help to me in saving handling of dishes and silver. As I dry the dishes I put the silver that will be needed for the next meal on a small tray and set it in the cupboard between the kitchen and dining room. I do the same with the plates, water glasses and other dishes. Then when I'm ready to set the table I lift the trays to the serving table in the dining room and quickly set the articles in place.

In the evening I put the cereal dishes and a pitcher for the cream on their tray and the coffee cups and saucers likewise. Small things to think of, but they make the difference between a hurried breakfast and a pleasant, unhurried meal.

With desserts the serving dishes, with spoons or forks and sugar and cream, may be assembled on a tray on the kitchen table while one is preparing dinner. Then it takes but a moment to serve the pudding, fruit or ice cream, after the other dishes have been taken from the table. —M. J. M.

"When Hearts Command"

By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

"When hearts command,
From minds the eager counsellors depart."

"And how could Hugo have blackmailed Mrs. Egan?" Gaunt demanded. "Perhaps she's afraid that he's still mad and might do her an injury if she refused," Jean said. "You see, he killed her husband. Probably Mrs. Egan, more than anybody else in the world realizes what Hugo is capable of."

Gaunt pursed his lips. "That's not altogether likely. No doubt the money was owing to him, as he said. It's the simplest explanation, and in my experience one need not search for the obscure."

"You think you can use it—honestly?"

"Of course you can, my dear. But there's one thing—" Gaunt bent over and knocked the bowl of his pipe against his boot. "This matter of a dowry for Alice. —hang it all!—am I to do nothing, give nothing? Am I a mere nobody, while Hugo is allowed to strut and—"

"Oh, Hector—Hector! Please don't make it difficult."

"It's you who made it difficult in the first place, my wife."

"Hector, you mustn't say such things."

"Did we not stand in church together and pledge ourselves to be man and wife?"

"Hector, you know how things were; that I wasn't really your wife."

He went on as though he had not heard. "And I loved you then; I love you now. Perhaps you think it's easy for me to stand aside always. I've a good mind to reach out my hand and take you. You belong to me. Why shouldn't I?"

"Oh, please—please don't say any more."

Hugo's head popped out of the dining room door. He might have heard every word they said.

"I'm ready," he piped.

CHAPTER XXII.

Mrs. Carnay was decidedly upset by Gaunt's outburst. She had not expected such a thing and was caught unawares. And she thought she had been strolling quite placidly down a country lane towards the sunset, a little saddened because the day drew to its close, a little pensive for things that might have happened differently, when suddenly from behind a familiar tree there dashed a highwayman demanding the treasure in her purse. She had not been thinking of the highwayman—she had been thinking of home and the sunset. And, oh, there was so very little in her purse, and she needed it all, every bit. This small gold piece for Contentment—if the fates were kind and would sell so cheaply; that big silver dollar, he represented the price of Portulaca, the possession of which was so necessary for a lonely woman; and the little coins, the sixpences, and threepenny bits, they represented the cigarettes and chocolates of life, Patience, Good Humor, Smiles. Well, the highwayman had snatched her purse and all that was in it.

In effect he had said: "Having used up these things myself, I will refresh my empty heart at your expense."

As Hugo and Gaunt drove away crowded into the cart with Carlo, she looked back and saw Gaunt standing on his mountain-top, a tall, strange figure, silhouetted black against the sunset, every line distinct—the point of his beard, the bulge of his shirt, the wind caught and blew out its loosely tucked folds, his arms up-raised waving the old panama, his negligently graceful body—all etched against the hot sun.

The dear familiarity of him brought a lump to her throat and tears to her eyes. She waved back, and Hugo—twisting about so that he nearly dislodged her from the crowded seat—must needs wave too.

"I don't know when I've had such a good time," Hugo said, with a happy sigh. "Not for years. Old Hector hasn't changed as much as you'd think. Only he doesn't seem to care for adventure any more. I tried to talk him into a voyage somewhere, but he didn't enthuse a bit. With my money we could easily fit out a small boat. Of course, there isn't much left in the world to discover, but it would be fun. You could have come, too, Jean. You'd have loved roughing it."

"Just the three of us, with quite a small crew," Hugo went on. "But, no—old Hector won't do it. He says he's anchored on Monte Nero and there he means to stay. He might almost be in That Place for all the change he gets. I'm afraid such a life wouldn't suit me. All very well for awhile, but a fellow must do something or stagnate. I shall be doing something, soon."

Jean's heart sank with a sickening sense of helplessness.

"Hugo, surely, surely you won't mind living quietly just—just at first," she said anxiously.

"Oh, well, just at first," he conceded. "That's what I am doing. Been doing it for—"

"Not quite a month," Jean reminded him.

He looked peevish. "A month's a long time, and I've lost so much time already. Fifteen years, Jean. I'm not growing any younger, you know."

"But what do you want to do?"

"Perhaps I'll go into business. Twenty thousand won't last for ever."

"Hugo, you know you're not a bit of good in business. Do, please, for my sake, leave it alone. We shall be rich on what you already have. Really quite rich."

Hugo relapsed into one of his sulky silences. She knew how stubborn he could be if he wanted to.

She began to wish that he had not been successful with his claim upon Mrs. Egan. But, oh, how they needed that money, or even a small fraction of it.

Carlo drove them straight to the Italian bank and Hugo made his arrangements and sent his telegram. On the strength of it, they allowed him to draw 10,000 lire.

Here, again, Jean was faced with worry. Suppose something happened and the money didn't come through? Shouldn't he have waited? Suppose Mrs. Egan changed her mind?

Hugo stared at her haughtily. She had shown her apprehension before the bank officials a little too plainly for his taste. He reproved her coldly, begged her to assume that he was not a fool and disliked being made to look like one.

Having said good-bye to Carlo with a generous present, their progress back through the village was marked by the wildest extravagance. A jeweller's window first arrested Hugo's attention and he remembered that he had to buy a wedding gift for Alice.

Also a present for Jean.

Jean tried very hard not to be a drag on this freely-rolled wheel, but it was difficult. If only he actually had the money safe in his possession she would not have said a word. Of course the lawyer's letter seemed genuine enough; the bank officials—none too arduous as a rule—had accepted it as such, and so did the jeweller to whom Hugo gave a cheque for his expensive purchase. That 25,000 cash would not last long if he went on at this rate, even assuming that everything was all right. A pearl necklace for Alice, nothing wonderful, but real pearls are never cheap, and an immense solitaire diamond ring for Jean.

Shop after shop they visited all along the Rue Vittorio Emanuele, and they returned with silk shawls and stockings, embroideries, laces, fine lingerie, and half a pound of navy cut—the latter being Hugo's present to him.

During the climb up to the foot of the Old Town he told his wife what he thought of her. It had been so difficult, on occasions impossible, to get her to enter into his game, the only purchase for which she had shown the slightest enthusiasm being half a dozen yards of glass towelling and some kitchen cloths.

But when they reached the Villa Charmi Alice made up amply for her mother's shortcomings.

"Oh, mumsey, how wonderful of him to buy us all these lovely things! Isn't it just like a fairy tale. Think, mumsey dear—look back. Why, two months ago we were still in Florence for our poor little splurge, feeling like a pair of conspirators—no, adventures, we called ourselves. And now I'm going to be married to the best man in all the world—don't laugh, mumsey, because he is—and Uncle John has come into a fortune and is being so kind to us! Pearls, mumsey—real pearls! Oh, aren't they just too sweet! And your ring's a perfect treasure. You ought to have heaps of rings, mumsey. Your hands are just made for them—"

A great light gleamed in Hugo's eyes—Rings for Jean; heaps of them! That was true. Jean's hands were just made for rings.

Jean hastily choked off the flow of mad suggestion.

"We mustn't let Uncle John spend another penny," she said crossly. "He won't have anything left if he goes on like this."

Hugo glared and thrust his hands into his pockets. "Your mother!" he spat out, in sheer, awful disgust.

But Alice finally restored him to good humor. They went off together to her room and spread everything out on the bed, deciding which was for Jean and which was for the little bride. Most of it turned out to be for the bride, since Jean had behaved so badly and Hugo thought it just as well to teach her a lesson.

They got to talking about Jean in the privileged way assumed by close relatives. Alice stood up for her mother, but at the same time there were little holes here and there which one admitted could be picked in even so fine a fabric. For instance, mumsey did worry a lot and was apt to cross bridges before they were actually in sight; and of late this tendency seemed to have grown worse instead of better.

"She's getting old," grumbled Hugo. "That's what it is. Old and set." He was determined to insult Jean in every way he could think of.

Alice laughed.

"Mumsey old! Why, Uncle John, she's only thirty-eight or nine. But I'll admit I never noticed how young she was until we came to Bordighera. Uncle John, do you think mumsey will ever marry again?"

Hugo started so violently that his eyeglasses tumbled off. "I never thought about it at all," he replied as he stooped to retrieve them.

Auto Crashed into Pole.

A badly wrecked car was the result of a motor accident, which occurred on Sunday evening in Walkerton when William Vogt was driving down the highway leading into town. He lost control of his car, which dashed over the curb and crashed into an electric light pole opposite Judge Klein's residence. The pole was completely broken off about ten feet from the ground. The car was a sorry looking sight, two wheels broken off, windshield gone, and otherwise battered up. Fortunately, the driver was not injured. The breaking off of the pole was the cause of there being no lights for an hour or two.

BRUCE COUNTY COUNCIL

For the first time in twenty-seven years the Bruce County Council held its summer session at the County capital last week, and the period was unique for the marked strain of economy that entered the entire proceedings.

The Govt. grant of 10c per day for each inmate in the House of Refuge, and which has only been in force a few years, is to be discontinued, and as Bruce last year received $1680 from this source, the Bruce Council accepted Wentworth County's invitation to join in an united kick against the cutting off of this coin.

The question of granting a retiring allowance or yearly pension to former Treasurer N. Robertson, who resigned last January after 37 years' efficient service, and to ex-Gaoler D. McKechnie and former Turnkey, Geo. Lolsinger, who were retired under the age limit by the late Provincial Govt., and which was laid over from the January session for definite settlement at this sittings, resulted in several largely-signed petitions from ratepayers of the county being presented to the Council against the scheme.

Dealing with the matter, Reeves McLean and Jamieson moved that the requests for superannuation, or retiring allowance, to retiring county officials be not granted as it would establish a precedent which the ratepayers of the county cannot afford to maintain.

This resolution carried without a division at the Council, and an affair which looked like a most contentious subject, was disposed of without a vote. That Bruce doesn't believe in pensioning her officials after retiring from office, no matter how faithful and efficient they may have been, is manifest in the outcome of this affair.

There being some dissatisfaction over the cost and efficiency of the administration of Justice in Bruce, a Special Committee composed of Reeves Heiserman of Chesley, Johnston of Lucknow, McVittie of Southampton and the Warden will go as a deputation to Toronto and consult the Attorney-General with a view to having a change made in the Crown Attorneyship of Bruce.

The customary grant of $3000 each to the Bruce County Hospital at Walkerton and the Kincaid General hospital was recommended by the Finance Committee, but was rejected in open council and the amount to each institution reduced to $2000 by a vote of 17 to 13.

The Council took action in the case of Mrs. George Kay, widow of the Kincaid man shot dead a year ago last winter, by granting her $15 a month, from the Bruce Preparedness League fund as long as she is incapacitated from the deplorable shooting affray which lost her an eye and left her a practically helpless invalid. The balance in the League fund totals over $1300 and as there have been no special calls upon it, the treasurer of the fund, C. Mickle, was instructed to invest $1000 of it in Government bonds. Reeve McVittie of Southampton commented upon the fact that the town of Kincaid had taken no action as a municipality to assist Mrs. Kay.

County Engineer Stephenson in his report stated that the County Highways' Committee had decided to complete the Elora Road from Dunkeld to Burgin, with the exception of the Durblane Hill and a mile north of Paisley. This work will cost $11,000. North of Warton they are expending $6000 on construction work. Between Warton and Hepworth $4000 is being expended putting a top or finish on the road. On 30th Eideroad Eiderslie, they are doing away with the jez in the road. The 'link' in a hill is also to be graded at a cost of about $200.

A By-law was passed assuming Irvine's bridge on the boundary of Elksie and Brant Tps. and Dow's bridge on the boundary between Grey and Bruce counties. These will be added to the County Highways' system, and will cost $12000. As this is an extra that had not been provided for, it was decided to raise the Highway Rate 1/2 mill to take care of this item, making the present rate 2 1/2 mills for Good Roads purposes.

Any prospect of lowering the tax rate of the County faded into thin air when the Council decided to defray out of this year's funds the $35,000 due the Province from last year's highway operations. The County, it seems, is obliged to pay 20 per cent towards the construction of the Provincial Highway running through the County from Mildmay to Kincaid, and on this road Bruce owed the Province $26,000 from 1922 operations, which it paid at the last January session. Instead of leaving the $35,000 due for 1923 work on this roadway over for next year's Council to finance, Bruce last week decided to wipe the entire debt out, and as a consequence $61,000 will have been raised from this year's taxes to meet this deficit. Hence the 2 mills required for this purpose explain what shot the County rate to the 10 mill figure, or one-tenth of a mill higher than last year. With a rate of 1c on every dollar of the assessable property of the County one might be apt to think this a record for Bruce, but in looking over the past we find in 1921 decreased with 12 1-3 mills and 1922 with a 10 1/2 mill touch, so the growing tax-payers can take comfort from the fact that things have been worse in this neck of the woods.

The sweep of the H. & E. Furniture company's plant at Milverton last week and the loss is estimated at $100,000. The building was a three-story brick construction.

... company, bring out
the truest and tenderest affections of the heart.
It is painful to turn from a picture
so beautiful, so hopeful, so exhilarating, to contemplate the narrowed, grovelling sphere in which so many city residents are obliged to pass their days. At their work, they are looked upon as something a little better than machines. Dr. Brownson used to say that employers looked upon their work-people as necessary appendages to the spinning jenny. I have in mind a woman, seventy or more, who for nearly forty years in a large city institution has stood daily before the same tap to wash all the dishes used at three meals by some two hundred inmates. What exercise of intelligence has her occupation afforded? Could any experience be more stultifying?

city residents. Let us not be too hard on them. People spending their lives amid such conditions, children of people spending their lives among such conditions, can give no great promise for the future. If they never rise to any distinction, if they are never competent to fill responsible positions, if they are never heard from, if they disappear and are no more, why should we be surprised?
Your boys and girls, dear farmer
friend, are being educated every day,
their capacity to see and do things being constantly developed, they will be capable men and women by the time they have reached the years of majority. After so many years of valuable formation, would you have them play the part of something a little better than a machine?

any part.

LEGGETT & PLATT
SPRING BED CO.,
LIMITED
Windsor, Ont., Can.

This is the spring with the hinge top that conforms so readily to every movement of the body insuring absolute comfort—and healthy sleep.

Each coil works separately, thus insuring that every part of the body will receive support in proportion to its weight.

To every spring is attached our guarantee which insures the purchaser for ten years, against all defects.

Call and see these springs for yourself—you will then be in a good position to judge them on their merits.
