POOR.

What! poor, you say? Why, save you, friend, I've more than half the world can show;
Such bliss as mine you cannot boast—
Such bliss as mine you cannot boast—I've more than keenest head can sum—Could ever dream of night or day; I've treasures hid from sordid hearts, No cunning thief can take away.

My riches never bring distrust Between me and my fellow-men;
No evil passion stirs my breast,
To yield me hate for late again.
But pleasure, peace and joy they bring;
They soothe my cares, they make me glad,
They give delight I cannot name, And buy me comfort when I'm sad.

Come here and open wide your eyes,
You see earth's glory at my feet,
You see the sky above my head,
The sunshine on my garden seat;
You see the love that lights my home,
The children round my cottage door—
The birds, the bees, the grass and flowers—And you have dared to call me poor!

Come here and open wide your ears, And hark the music morning makes,
When from the hills and from the woods Her high and holy anthem breaks.
Come here and catch the grand old song That Nature sings me evermore;
The whispering of a thousand things,
And tell me—tell me—am I poor?

Not rich is he, though wider far His acres stretch than eye can see,
Who has no sunshine in his mind,
No wealth of beauty in his soul.
Not poor is he, though never known His name in hall or city mart,
Who smiles content beneath his load,
Who smiles content beneath his load.

Miscellaneous.

THE SOLDIER AND THE THISTLE.

Little Willie, in her eagerness after flowers, had wounded her hand on a sharp prickly thistle.
This made her cry with pain at first, and pout with vexation afterward.

"I do wish there was no such thing as a thistle in the world," she said, pettishly.

"And yet the Scottish nation think so much of it they engrave it on the national arms," said mother.

"It is the last flower that I should pick out," said Minnie. "I am sure they might have found a great many nicer ones even among the weeds."

"But the thistle did them such good service once," said mother, "they learned to esteem it very highly. One time the Danes invaded Scotland, and they prepared to make a night attack on a sleeping garrison. So they crept along barefooted as still as possible until they were almost up to the spot. Just at that moment a harefooted soldier stepped on a great thistle, and the hurt made him utter a sharp shrill cry of pain. That sound awoke the sleepers, and each man sprang to his arms. They fought with great bravery, and the invaders were driven back with much loss. So, you see, the thistle saved Scotland; and ever since it has been placed on their seal as their national flower."

Well, I never suspected that so small a thing could save a nation," said Minnie, thoughtfully.

"God can make use of small things as well as great to accomplish his purpose; and it is said that very small circumstances often turn the tide of battle. In the war of 1812 the British fleet were sailing in the harbor of New London, and were asked afterward why they did not destroy the town when they could so easily have done it.

"I would," replied the commander, "if it had not been for that formidable long fort whose guns commanded the harbor." That long fort, he then learned, was an old rope-walk, and the many guns were the small windows in its side.
I presume the New-England people looked with new eyes on that old rope-walk after they had learned what a good service it had done.

TOMATOES.—Mr. Editor,—I notice an article in the Farmer on "Tomatoes for Cows." With that part of it recommending the tomato as a valuable food for milk cows I fully concur. I have used them for years. My mode of feeding them is to put the ripe food in a barrel and pour on an equal quantity of shorts or bran, and, with a wooden stamper, pound-them up together.
The tomato will furnish juice enough to thoroughly wet the shorts; and I have never used any feed that cows are so fond of, or produces so good a return of milk. I differ entirely, however, with the writer when he says: "The tomato is difficult to raise as a crop for cows. The plants have to be started in a hot-bed, and when set out, have to be carefully tended." I never start my plants in a hot-bed: I let the ripe fruit rot in the ground in the fall, and as late as possible, hoe and rake in the seed. From these I will get plants not as early, but fruit as early, as to start the plants in a hot-bed and transplant.

I think they lose more by transplanting than they gain in hot-bed sprouting.—Ohio Farmer.

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

The news received by mail during the past week regarding Dr. Livingstone leaves almost no room for doubt regarding his safety. The only material fact that tends to support the contrary opinion is, that no communication has been received from him.
Why did not the persons who now report that they saw him alive and well, bring a letter from him? But leaving this and other similar questions unanswered—and they all admit of obvious and satisfactory replies—we may state the leading points in the evidence just received, affirming that he is still alive and advancing upon his journey northward towards the sources of the Nile.

The report of Dr. Livingstone's safety rests entirely upon the statements of a few caravan people and native traders who reached the coast of Africa at Zanzibar and the neighborhood about the end of September last. A summary of the information obtained from these sources has been forwarded direct to Europe by Dr. Kirk, Mrs.
Kirk, and the British Consul at Zanzibar. The stories which come to us through the newspapers of India are contradictory and indefinite, and do not appear to be derived from any new sources.
Kirk as the most letters of Dr. Kirk and Mrs.
Kirk as the most complete, and apparently the most reliable accounts, it appears that Dr. Livingstone was seen by several of Dr. Kirk's informants in one of the villages of Marunga, or Umarunga as some style the country, about seven hundred miles due west of Zanzibar, and nearly one thousand miles from the exact date of this meeting. But the place at which it occurred; the description given of the Doctor's appearance; the recognition of his portrait by one of the traders when it was placed before him among others by Dr. Kirk; and all the other circumstances connected with the report, bear the plainest marks of truth. One man described the Doctor as a white man of moderate height, not stout, dressed in white, and with a cloth wrapped round his head. Another man says he wore a black cloth cap, round which he sometimes wrapped a white cloth. The first witness says that he declined to trade with the natives, and gave presents to the chief of the village and went on his way. The second witness states that he traded with him, and that he had a compass and other instruments which he used at night. Though he spoke Swahili (the dialect of the Zanzibar coast) he did so with the N'yassa accent, like Dr.
Kirk. He had a beard. Three of his men carried boxes, four had bags of beads; the rest had miscellaneous articles. He gave a letter to a trader named Banduki, the leader of another caravan, who is perfectly well known on the coast, and was expected to arrive there in a month; that is, about the end of September.

Every one of these statements is consistent with the rest of the story, and also with all the facts regarding Dr. Livingstone previously in our possession. So firmly convinced was Dr. Kirk of the truth of the reports he had received, that he sent a large parcel of guns, letters, and other articles to Ujiji to meet the great African traveller and his party. But as his own letters may be received in Great Britain within a few days, all guesses about his future course and all criticism of the last reports concerning him are uncalled for. Perhaps, however, it may not be out of place to express the hope that the latest reports are true in their details; and also to congratulate our readers upon the prospect of our illustrious countryman completing at an early date the passage through Africa from the Cape of Good Hope to the mouth of the Nile—an achievement of greater value to the world and more valuable to him who accomplishes it than would be the planting of flags upon both poles.—Scottish American Journal.

A FIGHT WITH WOLVES.—The Newmarket (Canada) Era says: As Mr. Addison Lawr, a teamster in the employ of some timber dealers, new shantying in the township of Essa, was passing through a cedar swamp, about five o'clock in the morning one day last week, he was attacked by a number of wolves. Stopping his horses, Mr. Lawr got off his sleigh with the view of scaring them; but the wolves, made savage by the recent cold and hunger, at once showed fight. The only weapon of defence Mr. Lawr had was an axe, and with this in his hand the battle commenced. In the tussle that ensued the horses became frightened and started off at full speed—leaving Lawr to make the best of his circumstances. As he had started some twenty minutes or half an hour ahead of the other teamsters, the only prospect of his life was in keeping off the monsters till the others drove up. The jumping, snapping, howling and teasing of the wolves taxed his whole energies; but being a strong, muscular man he was able to stand it till his companions drove up. So intent were the animals upon making Mr. Lawr their prey, that the other teamsters came up within four or five rods before being noticed.
—The wolves then made off with howls.
For some distance Lawr's comrades saw the fight, and they say he was using his feet and the axe, as if he was at a day's work. He was very nearly exhausted, however, when the other teams came up. He says he has fought in crowds previously, but he never tried his hand with wolves before. Lawr thinks the wolves were too lazy to run after anything that was smart, and hence thought that they would try a lump of a Dutchman, for a bellyful, but they were slipped up on it that time.

WAR!

What a monster! How the very mention of the word thrills us. What a dark catalogue of sins and crimes the past history of our world presents: many of which were either the originators and promoters, or the awful consequence of this dire game. Ever since erring Cain stretched forth his wicked hand and treacherously slew his younger brother down to the present hour the world has, to a large extent, been filled with violence. Even sacred history furnishes us with the accounts of numerous bloody battles, and that too at a period in the world's history, concerning which we have little or no other and poetic record.

But when we turn from sacred to profane history we find almost every page dyed with the crimson stains of war. The whole world presents one vast battle reddened with human gore!
From every quarter of the globe comes the dark shriek and dying groan of the victims of this horrid demon! The bones of the slaughtered lay thick around, and the living tread thoughtlessly and securely over the mingled ashes of thousands who fell in mortal combat.

It is true we may, by numbers almost infinite, compute the vast hosts that have miserably perished on the tented field; but no imagination is sufficiently powerful to form a just conception thereof. The most of us have a pretty accurate notion of a single hundred or perhaps of hundreds. Some strong mind, long used to large numbers, may grasp a thousand, or even thousands, with a pretty clear conception; but the largest number of us would, I fear, be staggered here. Go we thence to millions, and the strongest intellect trembles at the task. But when we climb to the region of billions the most titanic mind flounders and wallows lost in the stretch almost infinite.

In taking the briefest possible review of the past history of our race we find that in the three centuries, which conjointly lasted for 45 years; in the Roman wars, both aggressive and defensive; in the Grecian wars, and in those connected with the Crusades, there perished in the millions of the most noble City of the Lord, even Jerusalem, their perished of Jews alone, 1,100,000, and that too in the most wretched and awful manner. The Romans who had set down before the devoted city continued to crucify the struggling Jews, who stealthily crept beyond their walls in search of a morsel of food, whether it should be green herb or dead carcass, until there was no wood left with which to make crosses, nor ground on which to plant them.

A popular and careful writer, after a lengthened examination, estimated that about one-tenth of the population of the entire globe has been destroyed by war and its attendant ravages. If this estimate be admitted it will follow that more than fourteen billions (14,000,000,000) have been slaughtered in war since the beginning of the world—which is about twelve times its present population.

Startling truth—awful fact—the inhabitants of twelve worlds such as we now inhabit, slaughtered, butchered, hatched, and scattered, broke upon the world, from limb limb upon the fond invented rack, and in a hundred different ways put to frightful deaths by their fellows, and that, alas! by beings like themselves made originally in the image of God.
May we not well exclaim, "Wo unto us, for that we have sinned, the crown has fallen from our heads. How is the gold become dim—how is the most fine gold changed!"

But when we add to this enormous shedding of blood this frightful catalogue of human destruction, the horrible atrocities, the most appalling barbarities, the savage and brutal treatment of women, the ravaging of lovely maidens, despite their shrieks and piteous cries for mercy and compassion, the cold-blooded butchering of helpless children and tender babes, and the numerous other horrors often connected with wars, we have a picture black enough to have been drawn with a demon's pencil, and dashed with the same of hell—revolting enough to have been sketched with satanic skill and hate, and painted with the darkest dyes of the Stygian pit. We have a picture before us at once reeking with the blood of slain billions of our race, and steeped in the dyes of the infernal regions!

Alas! that man who was once a pure and holy being, so noble, so exalted, so godlike, should have fallen so far; should have stooped so low to assume the demon's character, and perpetrate such diabolical outrages and cruelties.
Let us thank God that better days have come to us—that we enjoy peace and prosperity.

But while we contemplate the ravages of war the misery, wretchedness, and suffering it has occasioned, let us not forget that, after all, we owe much to war. Many of the useful arts owe their origin to the necessities occasioned thereby. It has, I think I may safely affirm, invariably led to the development of talent, genius and skill, which has, in unnumbered ways, been of great service to mankind. It has led to the development of human resources, and is largely a fosterer of home produce and manufacturer. It has served at times to rouse the slumbering energies of a lethargic people, waking them into new life and activity. It has been the means employed, in many instances, to advance civilization with its numerous train of blessings—to break down the walls of prejudice existing between different tribes and nations—to establish the right—to set free the oppressed—and even, in numerous instances, to diffuse the glorious light of the gospel, and spread the knowledge of the Truth as it is in Jesus. This, however, has not been because those engaged in these bloody contests desired such an issue, but because "the Lord maketh even the wrath of man to praise him, restraining the remainder thereof." More anon.

Select Tale.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

Four o'clock, and no Helen yet?
What can detain her? She is usually more punctual than the clock itself.

It was scarcely a room in which Laura Avery was sitting—rather a magnificent bay window with draperies of embroidered lace.

Poor Helen, she murmured, how differently our lots have been orded in this world. Her parents dead—their wealth irretrievably lost, and she too proud to accept a cent she has not laboriously earned. Oh, dear, and Laura sighed again, just as the clock's liquid voice chimed the half hour.

She doesn't come, soliloquized the puzzled little damsel. There's something the matter. Perhaps she's sick. I'll send James to enquire—no, I'll go myself.

Before the words were out of her lips she was up in the room adjusting a soft gray shawl over her black dress, and the strings of a quiet little brown velvet bonnet, whose own crimson rose, among its own trimming of enameled moss was not unlike the bloom of her cheeks.

I don't think it's going to snow, she pondered, looking out at the gray, threatening sky, as she drew on her perfectly fitting gloves.

As she came through the softly carpeted vestibule a servant approached her.

Ah! The rose was several shades in the background now; she broke a scented seal and glanced over the delicate, cream-colored sheet, with a bright suppressed smile dimpling the corners of her mouth. Yet the note was a very simple one after all, and we shall read it.

MY DEAR MISS AVERY.—May I promise myself the pleasure of accompanied you to hear the new opera to-night? Unless I receive a message to forbid me, I will call for you at half-past seven.—Your most devoted slave and devoted,
FLORIAN RICHLEY.

Laura instinctively slipped the note into her bosom, as if fearful lest the very picture on the wall should catch sight of the chicography, and, pursuing her way down the gloomy street, Meantime the grey light of October was fast fading away from a dreary room in the third story of a house situated on one of the streets where decent respectability strives hand to hand with the grim assaillant, want.

Singularly out of keeping with the shabby and poverty stricken aspect of the room, was a newly finished dress of lustrous purple silk, bright as the dyes of Tyre; that lay folded on the table beside the window, in such a manner that you could see the costly trimmings—a wide border of purple velvet edged on another side with a fluting of white point lace.
For poor Ellen Waynall was nothing more important than a poorly paid dressmaker.

She lay on the little white bed in the corner with her flushed face pressed close against the pillow, and her slender figure partially covered by a coarse plaided scarlet shawl; while the involuntary contraction of her forehead bore witness to the pain she was meekly suffering.

As one or two tears escaped from her closed eyelids and crept softly down her cheek, a light step sounded on the landing outside, and a knock came gently to the panels of the door.

Come in, said Ellen, hurriedly dashing away the tears. Laura it possible that it is you, dear?

Ellen tried to smile faintly.

I am not very sick, I assure you, at least I have not suffered much until to-night,—no—Laura do—draw your purse, she added with a slight perceptible sparkle in her eyes, and a proud quiver on her lips, I am not quite so low as to accept charity. Don't look so hurt and grieved, dearest. You know how sensitive I cannot help being on such points. It is only for a little while.
When I am well enough to take the dress home and get the money for it, I shall be enabled to purchase what ever I may require.

Laura Avery knelt down at her friend's bedside with soft, pleading eyes.

Dear Ellen you will not refuse to accept a temporary loan from me?

I can wait, Laura.

Laura looked from the dress to Ellen with a face painted with perplexity. Suddenly a bright inspiration seemed to strike her.

Let me take the dress home, Ellen, she exclaimed. The walk will be just what I need. You will never be stronger unless you nurse yourself up a little. You will let me Nell?

But Laura—

No butts in the matter, if you please, Nell, laughed Laura, gleefully beginning to fold the rich dress into a basket that stood beside the bed.

Where is it to go?

To Mrs. Richley's on River Street. Why Laura, what is the matter?

It is nothing, I am folding the dress returned Laura, in a low voice. It was that Ellen did not see the scarlet bluish that rose to her friend's lovely cheek, as she stood with her back to the bed, smoothing the lustrous breathes of purple silk. Mrs. Richley's Laura was almost sorry she had volunteered to go, but it was too late to retreat now.

What a selfish little creature I am she mused.
Poor Nell needs the money so and can't go for it herself, and it isn't at all likely that I shall see Florian, and I will go—there's an end of it.

Thank you, dear Laura, it is so kind of you, said Ellen fervently, as Miss Avery came to the bedside with a basket on her arm, and her black veil drawn closely over her bonnet.

She owes me three dollars on this dress and there are seven dollars on the old account she has never paid me.

Five dollars! I'll collect it, never fear said Laura, grimly as she disappeared, while to poor Ellen it seemed as if the sunbeams had all fled out without the presence of her beautiful friend.

It was dusk when Laura arrived at the Richley mansion. She rang the bell, and a servant answered the summons. Is Mrs. Richley at home? enquired Laura.

Yes, said the servant gruffly.

I have called to bring home a dress that was finished for her, said she in a low tone of quite dignity.

Oh—yes; I suppose you had better walk in.

The servant conducted her up stairs to a sort of sitting room or boudoir, where Mrs. Richley, a partly done of about fifty, gorgeously dressed in crimson silk, was sitting in her easy chair, in front of a glowing fire. Laura was inwardly grateful that the gas had not been lighted, particularly when she observed Mr. Florian Richley was lounging on a velvet sofa in one of the recesses. Mrs. Richley looked up as the servant entered in the new comr.

Well, young woman, what do you want?
Laura's cheek tinged at the tone of casual indifferance in which she was addressed; but she commanded herself to reply meekly.

I have brought home your dress, Mrs. Richley.

Where is Miss Waynall?
She is ill.

Very well, lay down the dress, it's all right.
But Laura stood her ground valiantly.

Miss Waynall would like her money to-night, madam—seven dollars on the old account and three for this dress.

It is not convenient to-night.
But, Mrs. Richley, Miss Waynall is ill, and needs the money, persisted Laura.

There, Florian, said Mrs. Richley, addressing the young man in the Turkish dressing gown and elaborately arranged hair, I told you how it would be.

What the deuce is the matter now? snappishly asked Florian, for the first time condescending to evince any interest in what was going on.

Why, these impudent dress-making people are always clamoring after money, just when you have drained me of my last cent.

Let her clamor, then, that's my advice? said Florian, not taking the trouble to move his head.

Just give me back the $10 bill, Florian, urged his mother. You can't want it to-night?

But I do want it, it happens, said Florian. You're going to fritter it away in some of those gambling houses, or to drink yourself stupid again, fretted Mrs. Richley.

It's too bad, giving my money away just to indulge you in those horrible habits. Why don't you earn money, and not rob me of mine?

Easy, ma, easy, said the dutiful one, dragging himself into position. Don't lose your temper, for it ain't worth while. This $10 bill is going to make my fortune. It shall take lovely Laura to the opera to-night.

Nonsense, this fine scheme will flash in the pan, just like all the rest of your castles in the air. She won't have you.

Oh yes, she will, my incredulous mamma; wait and see. Then I'll pay you back the money with interest out of my lady's bag of shiners.

And will you leave off your gambling habits? Oh Florian, they will be the ruin of you yet.

Perhaps—perhaps not, returned the young man, insolently. That will be just as I please.

Both the mother and the son had forgotten the presence of the young girl, who was standing in the dusky shadow near the window until this moment, when Mrs. Richley turning sharply round, saw her.

Why are you waiting? she asked, irritably. I have already told you that it was not convenient to pay the money to-night—why don't you go about your business?

Her cheeks were flushed even beneath their artificial bloom of rouge, and her chill gray eyes sparkled with the rising anger. Laura composedly advanced forward. She took one of the wax tapers from the china shell, and lighted the gas with a steady hand, whose flash of rings filled Mrs. Richley with astonishment.

I am sorry that you cannot pay your debts, madam, said Laura, quietly looking the amazed mother and son in the face, but I am not sorry for any occurrence that has opened my eyes to the true character of Florian Richley. I will take the $10 to my sick friend, as you will find it entirely unnecessary to go to the opera to-night.

Florian's handsome cheek had grown pale—his knees quivered beneath him as he mechanically took the bill from his pocket book and placed in the hands of the imperative beauty, while Mrs. Richley sank back aghast into the cushioned arm-chair.

Florian made one desperate effort to retrieve his lost fortune even in the moment of sure defeat and discomfiture.

I am very sorry—awkward mistake, I hope you will afford me an explanation, he stammered.

I require no explanation, sir, was Laura's cold reply, as she withdrew from the apartment, haughtily and unapproachable as a statue of ice.

She hurried home through the twilight streets with a burning cheek and a beating heart, and it was dark when once more she entered Miss Wagnall's room, lighted only by the faint glow of a low fire.

Back so soon Laura? said Ellen somewhat surprised.

Here is the money, Nell, she said, thankful that the dim twilight could not betray her tell tale features. And now you must get well as fast as you can.

Oh, Laura, I am so much obliged to you. Laura stopped to kiss her friend's pale cheek, inwardly reflecting how much she had to thank Ellen's indisposition for.

But she never told Ellen of the discovery she had unwittingly made while fulfilling the gentle mission of friendship, and no one ever knew the precise manner in which the contemplated match between Florian Richley and Laura was broken off.

There are some things that bring their own reward in this world, and one act of kindness had saved Laura from unconsciously taking the step that would have plunged her into a lifetime of misery.

HOME.

Home of a winter's night, when the wind blew chill, the sky is overcast, and the ground is wet and freezing, is the pleasantest place on earth.

No matter how homely the room—how scant of furniture—how cramped—how old—its "home" where the heart is, is a good fire—a pleasant book—with two or three dear ones to listen and work while they listen, is both sensible and comfortable.

There are heart comfort—real soul reaching enjoyments, which no other condition affords. Let the wind howl—stir up the fire and read the louder. The world outside is of little consequence compared with the world inside.

One is a world of self, the other a world of affection. Who cares for the wind. Draw round the little stand, and amid the sewing on one side and knitting on the other, continue to stir up with the development. When reading pills, try conversation, and if that gives out bring on the apples and hickory nuts.

Put yourselves with good cheer, and keep the fire in your stove and in your heart blazing in unison. You will be delighted with the development. When reading pills, try conversation, and if that gives out bring on the apples and hickory nuts.

The Mirror AND Colchester County Advertiser. SATURDAY, JANUARY 13, 1868.

Is there never going to be an end to this world? Perhaps it is folly to ask the question, because almost every one will be ready to say: Yes; but when shall it be? If we could answer for certain we should feel inclined to answer that the time is at hand. The "Book" tells us that the signs shall be—wars and rumors of wars, famines, &c. Surely the present period is full of the shadows of great coming events, which, if not the end of this system, must be a warning to the keepers of the watch towers.

Although the world at present is pretty free from war, we cannot say so with regard to rumors. Europe is arming or armed to the teeth. Nation is rising against nation; kingdom against kingdom; and surely famine prevails. Earthquakes shake the earth, and give some vent at the month of Mount Vesuvius to the feelings of burning wrath within. What matters it to man, the mighty creature of a day? what matters it although the elements soon melt with fervent heat? So long as man is human nature, unrenewed he shall be human nature still, and rest not satisfied unless he can trample on his brother man, whom he hates because of some real or imaginary evil.

Why is it that we cannot sit down and count the days of the few years we can only remain here, doing our best, go quietly onward, and not imagine ourselves equal to Him who looks on a thousand years as a day, and on a world as an atom. Discontentment is one of the great evils of the people. They will leave enough alone, but seeking for new things, even if finding a treasure, prize it not, but lose it seeking for another, which, when discovered, turns out to be a curse.

Should a discontented section so agitate the minds of a sufficient number of the people as to make them place themselves under the protection of any foreign power whatever. If a deluded crowd should be so blinded by imaginary wrongs as to forget their loyalty and their own welfare, and place themselves (as they threaten to do in case of a failure in obtaining a repeal of the Union Act) under the protection of the United States, they shall know by fearful experience something of the horrors of war. The wild woods shall resound to the sharp crack of the rifle, or the deafening sound of artillery. Our fields shall be ploughed by the cannon ball, or trampled by the hoofs of the war horse; tens of thousands of human beings shall be sacrificed on the altar of discontent, and our plains shall reek with the blood of the slain, and England shall resign her right to the name of the Mistress of the Seas before she shall give up Nova Scotia to the tender mercies of the United States.

TRURO YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

On Tuesday evening last a lecture was delivered in Dr. McCulloch's church by the Rev. Mr. Cumming under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. From the well known talent of the reverend lecturer it is unnecessary to say, almost, that it was very good indeed, and must have given entire satisfaction to the large audience. We have not time or space fully to review the lecture, because every part of it was so interesting as to deserve a word of comment. The subject was "The Brotherhood of Humanity," and was ably dealt with. How plainly he pointed out the relationship which ought to, and really does, exist between man and man, although differences are found peculiar to each country or nation; but not as Voltaire would have it, making man, the monkey, the ape, or the orang-outang, of one and the same species, but human beings into whose nostrils has been breathed eternal existence of the soul. Such only are capable of, and ought to form one family, where each and all would simply, as brothers, do unto others precisely as they would be done by.

Such lectures are surely calculated to promote the interests of the Association, which we wish every success, and long for the time when we shall be in a position to become one of its members. We may refer more particularly to this lecture in our next.

OLD FRIENDS ARE BEST.—REV. D. R. CLENDENIN, Chicago, Ill., says in a letter: "I can add my testimony to the efficacy of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer and Zylolalissimum, and say that I have great confidence in them, and would recommend them to my friends and the public." Sold by all druggists. Depot, 193 Greenwich st., N. Y.

For the Mirror.

MR. EDITOR,—You doubtless expect from me some notice of the entertainment held in Cobeguid Hall on Thursday evening, the 16th inst., styled PENNY READINGS, the proceeds of which were donated to the poor fishermen of the western shore, and I have to acknowledge myself very nearly in the position of the "Needy Knife Grinder" "God bless you gentlemen I've no story to tell." If you have been favored with a programme of the entertainment on the evening in question you will observe that it consisted of first a Song, then Reading, again a Song; then Reading throughout the whole entertainment.

Of the music I cannot speak in too high terms, although not a musical genius, or laying claims to any fitness to judge of a musical performance, yet I think I may say that the way in which the various songs, duets, &c., were received by the audience were a sufficient guarantee that they were rendered in the highest styles of the art. For myself I confess I have seldom listened to anything that pleased like the song "Pass under the Rod." Of the Readings perhaps it would be better not to say much; the gentlemen who kindly gave the entertainment for a benevolent purpose deserve great credit for their praiseworthy efforts to accomplish that object by giving the public Readings rendered in a style evidencing some preparation, but justice compels me to say that if New York has been lately enjoying the priceless boon of listening to Dickens reading his matchless delineations of character, we in Truro have been permitted to hear, I think, almost the extreme in the other direction, and I could not but think that the poor fishermen little knows at what cost to our feelings the money from this entertainment was extracted.

CAUSTIC.

To the Editor of the Mirror.—You will please insert the accompanying note in your next issue. It is highly creditable to the young gentlemen in the Railway Engineer Department, who have instituted these entertainments for so laudable a purpose, and I shall have much pleasure in forwarding the sum raised.

I am yours, &c., CHARLES BLANCHARD. Truro, Jan. 17th, 1868.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY OFFICE.

Truro, January 17, 1868.

SIR,—Allow me to place in your hands the sum of $22.25, the proceeds of the entertainment last night at Cobeguid Hall, for the relief of the distressed fishermen; also $2.09 received from Rev. Doctor McCulloch, making $24.25 in all, which I beg you will forward to the proper quarter for distribution.

I am Sir, yours faithfully, E. W. JARVIS, Hon. Sec'y.

Mr. Sheriff Blanchard.

M. I. S. Entertainment.

On Thursday evening the members of the Mutual Improvement Society gave a complimentary entertainment to their friends in Temperance Hall. At a very early hour the place got filled up with a highly respectable audience, anxious to hear the progress which the members have made during the short two months of the existence of the Society.

The programme for the evening consisted of readings from Tennyson, Willis, Longfellow, &c., by ladies and gentlemen perfectly capable of sustaining the name which they have won as good readers. Recitations, comic and sentimental, also amused the assembly, interspersed with choice pieces of vocal music sung by voices brought to a high state of perfection by careful culture added to natural talent.

It must have been very gratifying to the members of the Society the large attendance of respectable people who patronized their exhibition of literary science and powers of vocalists, and the manifested tokens of pleasure expressed by the crowd.

We cannot help feeling grateful to the Society for their earnest desires to advance the cause they advocate—the improvement of the rational mind. No more praiseworthy object can be encouraged as moral amusement for the young of our village, and compliments in abundance have been heaped upon the Society and its originators since Thursday evening.

The Committee of Management regret that their Olio had to come off on the same evening that the Penny Readings in aid of Distressed Fishermen took place in Cobeguid Hall; but, having their notices published and arrangements completed previous to the announcement of the other entertainment, they could not act otherwise; but they are pleased to hear that a very large audience also was present at the Readings in Cobeguid Hall. Numerous applications have already reached the Mutual Improvement Society, asking for a repetition of their entertainment; and we think it probable that in a few weeks again we shall be favored with another treat.

Local and Other Items.

Don't forget the grand vocal and instrumental Concert at the Cobeguid Hall, on Tuesday evening next. Give them a bumper.

We have been requested to state that the Rev. George M. Grant, of St. Matthew's Church, Halifax, will lecture before the Young Men's Christian Association in Cobeguid Hall, on Monday evening, 20th inst., at 7 o'clock. Subject: "The Paris Exhibition of 1867." Admission free 12 1-2 cents. Money to assist Association's Reading Room.

We are indebted to Miss Katzman of the Provincial Bookstore, Halifax, for files of late English papers. The latest periodicals can always be had at Miss Katzman's.

We have received from B. H. Gray, Esq., Assistant Secretary Nova Scotia Provincial Industrial Exhibition, Halifax, N. S., a number of copies of the List of Prizes offered for competition at the Great Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition of the Province of Nova Scotia to be held in the city of Halifax in October 1868. Copies can be obtained at this office, or on application to the office in Halifax.

Proceedings of Court crowded out this week. Several communications laid over until next week.

A number of the young ladies of Truro have decided to hold a Tea Meeting in Cobeguid Hall on Tuesday, the 28th inst., the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the relief of the destitute fishermen on the west shore of Cape Breton. In the evening an entertainment will be provided, to consist of a number of readings and recitations, interspersed by music from the Volunteer Band of Truro. We beg to direct attention to the advertisement in another column, and we take this opportunity to bespeak the kind patronage of this community in the above behalf. Contributions are solicited and will be thankfully received and duly acknowledged.

Our devil begs to give notice that as he intends to get married on 1st day of February, 1868, (30 years hence) he will give a liberal discount on all wedding presents handed in immediately—no matter whether they are caps or coats, pants or paraphrases, rings or robes—seven money he will not refuse on the same terms.

Owing to the Olio of the Mutual Improvement Society in Temperance Hall, and also the Penny Readings of the gentlemen amateurs in Cobeguid Hall, coming off on the same evening of the annual meeting of the "Colchester County Rifle Association," the meeting was adjourned to Thursday evening, the 23rd inst.

Just while we are going to press a great commotion arose around the Common. The shout "Fire!" was everywhere to be heard, and the question asked: Why has the reflections of the Mirror not been attended to with regard to a fire-engine. Only when fire wreathes his burning tongue round some devoted dwelling house can our people realize the necessity of a safeguard against the devouring element. Fortunately we find only the chimney of Mr. William Birrell's house gave cause for the consternation, but let it be a warning to the people of Truro.

Owing to the non-arrival of our paper from Halifax in time we were compelled to delay the issuing of our paper until this evening.

We have been asked several times why we do not publish the police reports.—We will answer at a future time.

PERSONAL.—Hon. Messrs. Kenney, Tupper, and Archibald will, we understand, take passage in the R. M. S. Etna for New York, en route to Ottawa, on the arrival of that vessel, now hourly expected.

REV. OLIPHANT CURRIE.—To-day we regret to record the demise of a most amiable and excellent young man, in the prime of life, and after being engaged in preaching the Gospel but two short years. He was a native of Truro and son of Mr. Robert O. Christie. As a student Mr. Christie showed exemplary diligence, and his attainments were of a high order. As a preacher Mr. Christie was earnest, faithful and acceptable. The diligence with which he prosecuted his studies interfered with his health. He was for a year in Bermuda where notwithstanding the delicate state of his health he laboured very diligently. He returned to this Province last summer worse than when he left, and it was manifest to himself and his friends that his life and labours would soon close. He bore up under his afflictions with a cheerful heart and with patient resignation to the Divine Will. His death is a serious loss to the church of which he was a probationer. His fellow students, and all who had the pleasure of intercourse with him will long cherish his memory with the warmest affection.—Dres. Witness.

NOBLE SENTIMENTS.—Condemn no man for not thinking as you think. Let every man use his own judgment, since every man must give an account of himself to God. Abhor every approach in any kind of degree to the spirit of persecution. If you cannot reason or persuade a man into it, never attempt to force him into it. If love will not compel him to come, leave him to God, the judge of all.

LATE EUROPEAN NEWS.

The R. M. S. Etna arrived at Halifax yesterday at eleven o'clock, bringing dates to the 4th inst.

The papers are still largely taken up with reports of the Fenian outrages. On the evening of the 26th ult. the Martello Tower at Fota, near Queenstown, was attacked by an armed band with lucifered faces, who surprised the three gunners in charge and seized a quantity of arms and ammunition. It is supposed that the party landed on the strand near the tower. They were not caught, nor has any clue yet been found as to who they were. This affair was quickly followed by a daring robbery of arms in the same neighborhood. On the morning of the 30th, in broad daylight, and when the streets must have been as busy as at noonday, several men entered the shop of Messrs. Allport, gunmakers, Cork, and the leader of the party selected, pistol in hand, sixty revolvers and about 1500 round of cartridges, which were conveyed to a vehicle at hand, and the party disappeared, leaving no trace behind which the police have yet been able to discover. These occurrences naturally caused a profound sensation in Cork, and the local magistrates have asked Lord Stratham for an additional body of troops to guard the principal banking and mercantile establishments.

The gunboat Ferret, stationed at Bristol, was hurriedly despatched to sea on the night of the 23th, with scaled orders. Her destination was supposed to be in search of a supposed Fenian privateer, which was reported off the Irish coast. The inquiry before the Magistrates respecting the five prisoners charged with wilful murder, as participants in the late outrage at Clonkewell prison, has continued, and another remand has been granted. On the 31st, eight persons were arrested at Merthyr Tydfil, reported to include one centre and two captains,—most of whom are engaged in the Downais Iron Works—and, after examination by the local Magistrates, were remanded to Cardiff goal. It is reported that the authorities at Dublin are in possession of particulars of a conspiracy to destroy the Atlantic Cable, and are taking precautions accordingly. Naturally, these various rumours have stimulated the swearing in of special constables throughout the country, and the utmost determination is evinced everywhere to maintain law and order. In the South West of Ireland disquieting rumours prevail of another rising being contemplated, but the Government is on the alert and the garrisons in the chief towns are being reinforced.

A communication from Kerry states that alarming rumours are in circulation with regard to the safety of the Atlantic cable. It is reported that the authorities have been informed of the existence of a conspiracy to destroy the cable, with what view it is difficult to divine, but that such a design exists we all here feel assured the Government has been satisfied.

FROM EUROPE. LONDON, Jan. 16th.—Considerable excitement was occasioned in this city by an announcement that Fenian Deasy, who, with Kelly, was rescued from the custody of the police at Manchester some weeks ago, had been captured. The police 1 to yesterday afternoon overhauled a man near Waterford, Ireland, who answers completely the description of Deasy. There are other strong circumstances with these which warrant the belief that the authorities have not been mistaken. The prisoner, under a strong guard, started for Manchester this morning, where he will be confined with the fellow-prisoners of Deasey for recognition. The Government officials are very vigilant. Yesterday p. m. two Americans named Barrett and O'Neil, were arrested at Glasgow and imprisoned. Papers found on their person indicate beyond doubt that they belong to the Fenian organization. The motion recently made in the Court of Queen's Bench for a change in the place of the trials of the Fenians Burke, Casey, Shaw, and Mulloney from Warwick to London is likely to be granted.

LONDON, Jan. 17th.—Information has been received here that a very violent hurricane recently prevailed at Tenerife and vicinity. Ships were driven to sea, houses unroofed and blown down, and damage very great, though no mention of loss of life.

LONDON, Jan. 15, noon.—The Levant Herald, published at Constantinople, in a recent issue contained a long and able article in regard to the influence of the United States on the Eastern question. The writer denied that the influence of the United States has been weakened in Turkey by the late exchange of good offices between Russia and America, notwithstanding even the resolution passed by the American Congress expressing sympathy for the Cretans. The confidence in the authority of the United States, the Herald contiques, was never higher than now.

TURIN, Jan. 15.—A delegation of Italians, with Gen. Mezzoreppo at its head, has gone to Trieste, to be present at the landing of the remains of Maximilian.

FLORENCE, Jan. 15.—A large class of the Catholic population of Italy, which, since the consolidation of the kingdom under Victor Emmanuel, has steadily refused to recognize his government by voting, has resolved to abandon its policy of inaction, and will take an active part in the next Parliamentary election. Marquis Guelfredo has been appointed Minister of the Royal Household and General Superintendent of the Civil List.

LILBON, Jan. 15.—The Lower Chamber of the Cortes has been dissolved by the King, and orders have gone out for the election of Deputies for a new Chamber which is to meet at the end of April next.

PLAIN TRUTH.—Every man has in his life follies enough; in his own mind troubles enough; in the performance of his duties deficiency enough; in his fortunes evils enough—without minding other people's business.

There are many remedies that remove one pain only by substituting others worse than the first. Blood's Rheumatic Compound is not one of those; it does not injure or destroy the constitution.

A CLERGYMAN (Rev. J. McMurphy), writing from Halifax, N. S., says: "Having suffered several years with throat affection, to which clergymen are especially subject, and having used various remedies, I have pleasure in giving my testimony as to the relief I have had in the discharge of my Sabbath labors from the use of 'Brown's Bronchial Troches.' They have been a great comfort. Others to whom I have recommended them have used them with advantage." For Coughs and Colds the Troches are equally efficacious.

PIANOS! PIANOS!

M. R. E. C. SAFFERY, professor of Music, offers his services professionally, in the purchase and selection of new and second-hand Instruments. There is so great a difference even in New Pianos, in point of tone and touch, that parties would be consulting their own interest in availing themselves of his professional experience remembering, judgment, you often pay more for a worthless instrument than a superior one would amount to, verifying the old adage, "That you have paid too dear for your whistle," therefore the fee of $4.00 is absolutely money saved. Communications post paid directed Mr. Saffery, Dartmouth, Halifax, will be attended to. nov 30 3m

MRS. WINSLOW, An experienced Nurse and Female Physician presents to the attention of mothers, her Soothing Syrup, FOR CHILDREN TEETHING, which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is Sure to Regulate the Bowels. Depend upon it mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and Relief and Health to your Infants

We have put up and sold this article for over 30 years and can say in confidence and truth of it, what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—SEVERAL HUNDREDS PAID BY A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and moral virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after 30 years experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfillment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered. This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERIENCED and SKILLFUL NURSES in New England, and has been used with never failing success in THOUSANDS OF CASES. It not only eases the child from pain but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve Griping in the Bowels, and Wind Colic, and overcome convulsion, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it is the best and surest remedy in the world, in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhoea in children, whether it arises from teething or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints—do not let your prejudices nor the prejudices of others, stand between your suffering child and the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of this medicine. If timely used, full directions for giving will accompany every cash bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, on the outside wrapper. Sold by Druggists throughout the world. Principal Office, No. 48 Bay Street, N. Y. Price only 35 Cents per bottle. Sept 15
