The following is a letter from the patriotic Archbishop of Cashel, to the Dublin Freeman's Journal, in reference to the contemplated departure of Michael Davitt from Ireland.

Fainting.

It is surprising how everybody rushes at a fainting person and strives to raise him up, and especially to keep his head erect. There must be an instinctive apprehension that if a person seized with a fainting or other fit fall into a recumbent position death is more imminent.

The Garden of Youth.

I have sometimes thought, when looking on a church full of children, there is nothing more beautiful in the sight of God. A beautiful garden full of roses, lilies and lovely flowers, is sweet and beautiful to the eye.

For Catholics to Imitate.

It can be admitted that, despite the growth and superior strength of Catholicity in America, our people have yet some things to learn from their separated brethren. Any Catholic who will observe the superior manner in which Protestants organize for their own purposes can but be impressed by this fact.

CARROLL & McALEER, Carriage Builders.

FORMERLY occupying the premises of Messrs. J. & E. Scott, lately destroyed by fire, beg leave to inform their patrons that they have engaged the premises of Mr. P. H. Trainor.

DEATH: The dry pedant, spares neither the rose nor the thistle, nor does he forget the solitary blade of grass in the distant waste. He destroys thoroughly and unmercifully. Everywhere we may see how he crushes to dust plants and beasts, men and their works.

Old Fashioned Mothers.

Thank God, some of us have old-fashioned mothers, says an exchange. Not a woman of the period, summoned and painted, with her great chignon, her curls and bustle, whose jeweled hands never felt the clasp of baby-fingers; but a dear, old-fashioned, sweet-voiced mother with eyes in whose clear depths the love-light shone, and brown hair just threaded with silver, lying smooth upon her faded cheek.

Brio-Brac.

Two hundred and fifty marines have been despatched from Port Said to Suakin.

News has just been received here that there was a violent earthquake on May 19th on the Island of Kishn, near the mouth of the Persian Gulf.

The set of pearls owned by the late lady Otto Fragerald has been privately brought by Queen Victoria for $40,000.

Bentley & Son will publish Charles Reade's last novel, "A Perilous Secret," in July.

Health of mind consists in the perception of law. Its dignity consists in being under the law. Nothing seems so excellent as a belief in the laws. It communicates nobility to the soul.

Nothing is holier than charity; nothing warmer than love; nothing richer than wisdom; nothing brighter than virtue; nothing more steadfast than courage.

Twelve years ago Henry Somerset was fatally stabbed in Ohio. Valentine Weiss was convicted of the crime, but after several trials the case was a noble protest.

In 1729 the first Catholic Church was built in Philadelphia. There are now in the city a magnificent Cathedral, besides 54 churches, 33 parochial, 12 convents, 22 hospitals and asylums.

A Christian man's life is laid in the Loom of Time to a pattern which he does not see.

We always suspect that man who is loud in his denunciations of those who have been guilty of comparatively trivial offences.

Death, the dry pedant, spares neither the rose nor the thistle, nor does he forget the solitary blade of grass in the distant waste.

Sparks are little things, but they are sources of large streams; a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of a ship; a bridle is but a little thing, but we know its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold the parts of large buildings together.

The Egg Industry.

FRAGILE ALIEN is made in the press of this and the sister Provinces to "big" eggs, but we purpose today to say something in reference to eggs in general. The material interests of our people are affected to a greater extent by the number of eggs which we export, than by the abnormal size attained by the few laid upon the tables of some of our daily contemporaries.

It appears to be beneath the attention of our farmer friends throughout the country, and were it not for the forethought and industrial habits of our annual export of eggs would be but a small sum compared with the figures of the past few years.

That the business done in exporting eggs could be doubled, or even trebled, without adding to any appreciable extent to the labor or cost of their production, admits of no doubt.

This no doubt, would read very well if it were true. We do not wish to accuse the editor of the Examiner of making a wilful misstatement, but perhaps he does not consider Nova Scotia a part of this world.

What does the Examiner mean by stating in one place that we have a daily mail and in another that we have not? But the fact is, the Examiner is incorrect in both instances.

Moreover, there is a mail from Halifax every day, except the days on which the steamer goes to Georgetown.

What does the Examiner mean by stating in one place that we have a daily mail and in another that we have not? But the fact is, the Examiner is incorrect in both instances.

The National Policy.

THAT we are a supporter of the National Policy is, we presume, sufficiently well understood. Under it, as administered by the present Government during the last five years, this Dominion has made rapid strides in progress and prosperity.

It is true that the inducements offered by our markets for the natural products of the United States may not appear so great as their markets offer us, but our fisheries must be considered, and as was abundantly proved at the Halifax Commission, access to them is a necessity to the Americans.

It is not possible that such an important question as that of Reciprocity could be settled in a day, the positions of both countries are vastly different now to what they were when the Treaty of 1854 was adopted, or even when it was abrogated twelve years later.

MR. ARTHUR NEWBURY has returned with an experienced landscape gardener, selected in Halifax from a number of applicants. This man has had extensive practical acquaintance with the culture of fruit trees, ornamental trees, and also with the laying out and management of public parks, private grounds, &c., on both sides of the Atlantic. While in Halifax Mr. Newbury visited the Public Gardens there, and got himself in communication with Mr. Stephens, chairman of the Park Committee, who expressed great pleasure at the movement going on in Charlottetown, offered any assistance in his power to forward the good work, and promised that he would furnish as a free gift any suitable plants and shrubs that might be available, out of their surplus stock, which is often very considerable. It may probably be too late this spring to take much advantage of this kind offer, but it is open for the future, and the worthy chairman and his committee certainly deserve the hearty thanks of our citizens for it. The head gardener, Mr. Power, must not be forgotten in this connection, as his courtesy and kindness to Mr. Newbury, and his promise to select and plant the surplus plants, has materially facilitated matters. Work has been temporarily suspended on the flower beds &c., which, in view of the advanced season, have to be finished as quickly as possible.

The People's Advocate of the 24th May, published at County Monaghan, Ireland, contains a lengthy notice of the death of Rev. Peter Longhran, for the past ten years Parish Priest of Tempo, which occurred on the 20th May at Rosstravor, after a severe and protracted illness. His remains were interred at the Parish Church of Tempo, on the 23rd May. We quote as follows from the Advocate: "The Rev. deceased, who had scarcely completed his 60th year, was not less admired for his rare gifts of mind than for his love for his friendly and affectionate nature. His early career, both at school and at college, furnished a bright record of intellectual triumphs. Too soon, however, for the completion of his collegiate course, his health was suddenly undermined in Maynooth by a severe illness, from the sad ravages of which he never afterwards recovered. Though malarious, even beyond his physical powers, in discharge of his ministerial duties, yet he seemed habitually to turn his thoughts to the justification and glorification of the admission of St. Paul: 'Take heed to thyself and to thy doctrine.' Mysterious in their reality and in the ways in which God chooses to be glorified in His servants. Not less verified now than in the beginning of Christianity, are the words addressed by our Lord to His disciples: 'You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you.' It is devoutly to be hoped that, in the peace of a holy and happy death, and in the crowning glory to which such a death is the passage, the Rev. deceased has now received the reward of a life chastened by long suffering and sanctified by holy obediences."

The deceased clergyman had many relatives in this Province. The late Bernard Longhran, of Orwell, and Francis Longhran, of Port Augusta, were his uncles.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME.

In the West of Ireland, some fifty years ago, the spirit of emigration made rapid strides among the better order of the lower class...

At the early age of seventeen, according to the usual custom of Irish peasants, he had married a neighbor's daughter still younger than himself...

Thus far all went well. Dennis prospered and grew rich—his friend the priest paid his visits even oftener than of old—and the squire, who, by the way, was also the county member...

But Dennis grew more and more sad as the hours flew quickly by that now remained for him to spend with his beloved family, considering the step he was about to take as an imperative duty...

Then, cried Dennis, as he flung himself with tears of joy on his wife's neck, 'may I never see a ridge of potatoes, but though every acre of that same America was paved with gold as thick as I'll leave you my darling, or you, or you, ye little Jewels, as he kissed the drowsy child around him, who were looking on with astonishment at the domestic drama that their parents had been acting in the middle of the room.'

Having stripped, Dennis returned to bed, the happiest man in the parish; and when the neighbors called in the morning to console him, they found him whistling the 'Ould Irish Law' behind his long suggested plough.

enjoying his half hour's smoke—which, said all his cases, he had never omitted—he all at once formed the dreadful resolution of informing his wife of his wish, and decided intention to emigrate.

'Why, this,' rejoined Nancy, 'thank God, Dennis, we've no great reason to complain. We're as well off as our neighbors, and want for nothing.'

'Oh, this, if that's what you're for,' said Nancy, 'we certainly hear great talk of riches and all that with them that's going out, but we see no great signs of it on them that come back.'

'Well, well,' muttered her husband, 'at all events land isn't what it used to be—landlords are poor and want high rents, we can't pay high rents and ever look to be anything better than we are.'

'Blessings on his little heart,' cried the happy father, as a tear half started; 'sure 'tis to save you and him, Nancy, dear, the trouble of laboring from morning till night, just to keep the soul and body together, that I'll leave you at all at all.'

ere he left the scenes of his youth forever, he went, accompanied by his affectionate wife, to pay some visits to the graves of his parents in the neighboring churchyard. Kneeling reverently on the grassy mound, close by the ruin of the ancient church, the two offered up their orisons for the repose of the souls of those whose mortal remains reposed beneath it...

'Look you, Dennis Costello, when you first said you would leave us to go look for your fortune in that America which seemed so easy of access, and which promised so speedy an attainment of comfort and independence. But, on the other hand, his heart fluttered with many wild emotions which he considered that they could be but purchased by a long absence from all he loved, and at best but an uncertain prospect of return.'

'Nancy, however, still kept matters right within doors, and the more apparent the consequences of the husband's absence, the more she strove to succeed them. His children still clung to his knees—his heart still beat—and his days ended with the wife's regularity before him; yet he was no longer the happy man he had been. At length one evening as he sat by the fire

AGRICULTURAL.

As fowls are necessarily confined in small yards, we are obliged to supply them with all the essential kinds of food that they would eat if ranging at large. But previous to the past six months a full supply of shell-forming food has always been at times neglected, and soft shelled eggs, or eggs without any shells, have followed from the neglect.

The discussion on the mowing question usually takes the form of an inquiry as to the relative fitness of hay that was cut just before flowering or just after, and most of the evidence on either side is drawn from the chemical changes going on at the time which ought, according to certain scientific theories, make it more nutritious at that particular time than at another, and so on.

A writer upon more careful study of pure water and of drinks in general on the economy of animals. The privation of water tells more rapidly on health than abstinence from food. In every kind of beverage, the part efficacious for assuaging thirst is water.

The quantity of water required by an animal will vary with the air's temperature and humidity. A sheep requires least and a pig most water; horses and cattle come between. In the care of sheep much water is this the blood. They ought not to be deprived of water, as many shepherds practice, nor at the same time allowed to entirely slack their thirst.

A Maine correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph who has been fattening stock for thirty-five years, condemns the system of feeding the first half of the winter with less nutritive food than is given the second half for 'finishing up' for the market; and takes the rational ground which successful Canadian feeders like the Gorington, the staid and even the gain the better and more remunerative is the result of the feeding. Writing of particular foods he says:—'I value oats above any other food for colts and calves until the second winter. I can sell my oats for five cents per bushel. After the first winter, one-half the ration should be made of some kind of produce fat as well as growth. To obtain the best results in milk and butter from fresh cows, I find one feed a day of roots, with one quart cotton-seed meal, and one feed consisting of two quarts of barley meal and one quart of cotton-seed meal, with good early cut hay, is about right.'

The Western Rural suggests a doubt as to the soundness of the general opinion that it is more profitable to take the calf away from its mother at a few weeks old than to let it suck for several months. It says:—'There is no other food that can perfectly take the place of milk as food for the calf. It contains just what the system needs. Of course we recognize the fact that milk is the most expensive food, but, continues our contemporary, 'our practice is to let the calf run with the cow for about ten days, and then put it upon skimmed milk, which in a short time may be fed alternately with other suitable food. Crushed or ground oats are the best food next to milk, and if fed with the skimmed milk it will be excellent, and some oatmeal added, it will be scalded. And if the calf is taken from the cow at once give it a handful of salt—which acts as a purgative to cleanse the stomach, an office which the first milk of the cow performs—repeating the administration of salt for several days, and prepare the food by boiling a pint of fax seed in five quarts of water, weakening it with hay until it is nearly as thin as milk. Feed at the temperature of milk when first drawn from the udder. Indian meal, barley, rye, and oatmeal can be added as the calves become older. In all artificial feeding the effect upon the bowels must be carefully watched and any bad effects immediately counteracted. It should be allowed access to good, sweet short pasture as soon as it will eat it. It is important that in hand feeding it should have something besides skin milk. Such milk is not perfect, and consequently it is not a complete feed; and the calf should not be fed exclusively upon milk even directly from the cow, for milk alone does not properly distend the stomach.'

Cattle should have salt given them every week. If they had a lump of rock salt they can go to it every day and lick as much as they please, it will be even better for them. Milch cows should have at least a table spoonful of ground bone every week. Prof. Johnstone, in his agricultural chemistry, says that a cow giving 750 gallons of milk in a year and raising one calf whose bones will weigh twenty pounds, will also pass off in her milk as much phosphate as is contained in thirty pounds of bone dust, and in her urine as much as much as in seventeen pounds, making a total of sixty-seven pounds of bone material which are needed by a healthy cow each year. Of course some portion of this is supplied by her food especially if she is fed with wheat bran, which contains a larger percentage of phosphate of lime than any other substance usually given as food for cattle, exceeding even cotton seed in that element, though not so rich in nitrogen.

Random Notes.

Why are planes the noblest of ungrateful animals? Because they are ungrateful, grand, and square. An American editor says that only reason why his dwelling was not blown away by a late storm was that there was a heavy mortgage on it.

Whistlers are always good-natured, it's a philosopher every body knew that 'the folks who have to listen to the whistling that get ugly. They killed a book agent at Creston two weeks ago, but they had to run over him with nine freight cars to do it. People who can't afford to keep a fast freight train in the house are still at the book-agent's mercy.

The vigilantes out in America hung a man the other day because he was a confirmed drunkard. Good gracious! If it gets to be the rule to hang here some of us—that is to say, there are a great many men who will be in danger. In the examination of an Irish case for assault and battery, counsel on cross-examination one of the witnesses asked him why they had at the first place they stopped. He answered: 'Four glasses of ale.' What next? 'Two glasses of wine.' What next? 'A fight of course.'

Parsons, the lawyer, was lame—one leg being shorter than the other. Limping up to Curran, he inquired for a brother barrister who was similarly affected. 'Curran did you see M'Nally going this way?' 'Why,' replied Curran, 'never saw him going any other way.' Not long since, a contemporary tells us, a gentleman was watching the process of packing some hundreds of wooden legs for the future benefit of the gallant soldiers of the Sultan. 'Ah,' thought the moraliser, 'these pieces of timber are but so many wretched prolegs against the horrors of war!'

The story comes from Paris that a lady, who visited four churches in one day, missed her umbrella on returning home. She immediately revisited all the four churches, and found her umbrella in the last one. When the umbrella was handed to her she thanked said to the sexton, 'The people at this church are much more honest than those at the others.'

'There is a fine specimen of a bulldog,' remarked Smith to Jones at the dog show. 'Yes, he's a beauty.' 'You ought to have a dog like that, Jones. Living in the suburbs as you do, a watch dog is almost a necessity.'

'No, it isn't,' replied Jones, wearily. 'A man who has seven daughters, all over 22, and unmarried, stands in his own light if he keeps a dog.'

Where are the Gordons?—An old woman of the name of Gordon, in the North of Scotland, was listening to the account given in Scripture of Solomon's glory, which was read to her by a little female grandchild. When the little girl came to tell of the thousand camels, which formed part of the Jewish sovereign's live stock, 'Bh, lassie,' cried the old woman, 'a thousand Campbell's, say ye? The Campbell's are an auld clan, sure enough; but look an ye dinna see the Gordons, too.'

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so common in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs, such as cough, croup, and whooping cough, or even the beginning of a fatal disease. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty year's fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured. In 1861 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctor gave me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced cough, and afforded me the most effectual relief for the recovery of my strength. By the use of this medicine, I was enabled to get on my feet in a few days. I am now 62 years of age, and have never since had a cough or cold. I can testify to the efficacy of this medicine. JOHN W. GIBNEY, 100 West 12th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

Group - A Mother's Tribute. 'While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup, it seemed as if he would die, and I was very much distressed. I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and gave it to him, and he was cured in a few days. I can testify to the efficacy of this medicine. MRS. E. M. GIBNEY, 100 West 12th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882. 'I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I can testify to the efficacy of this medicine. JOHN W. GIBNEY, 100 West 12th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

By the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I have cured my little boy of croup, and I can testify to the efficacy of this medicine. MRS. E. M. GIBNEY, 100 West 12th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.
