"A GOLD LADEN DERELICT" OR The Impecunious Adventurers.

CHAPTER VII.
A WEALTHY HUMAN WRECK.

"Oh, hang it, you know," he said, as he took the cup, "after all this long time, can't we drop that sort of ceremony? Besides, you know, or I suppose you don't know, that I'm Sir Arthur Eversley now."

"Oh!"
The exclamation came at the same instant, but in different keys, from the lips of Mrs. Ashley and her aunt.

"Yes," he went on, with a slight drawl, which sounded rather curious after the announcement he had just made. "I thought perhaps you might have heard of it, though it only happened a week ago. Fact is, poor Frank's yacht got caught in a white squall off Corsica, turned turtle, and went down almost before you could say 'knife.' A boat was in sight, and when it was over, her people picked up what was left, and poor Frank's body was among the debris. It was an awful thing, and the news of it knocked me out of time, for I had just come home invalided from Somaliland, after a touch of sun, followed by fever, and it shook me up a good deal, I can assure you."

"Dear me, how very sad!" exclaimed Miss Gertrude Holroyd, in a tone which had more surprise than sympathy in it. "And your poor brother was unmarried, wasn't he?"

"My dear aunt," said Mrs. Ashley, with a softness which seemed very sweet to the man who had asked her to marry him when he was a poor lieutenant of lancers—that is to say poor, as lieutenants of crack cavalry regiments go—"how can you?"

Then, with a sudden change of tone, she continued: "Really, that is almost too terrible! Poor Sir Francis! To die like that, when he had all the world before him and almost everything that the world could give him. So now you are Sir Arthur?"

"Yes," he said, putting his teacup down with a rattle in the saucer, "Sir Arthur Eversley. One of the richest baronets in the kingdom, I believe, and more or less of a wreck, at that. Wounds, sunstroke, fever, invalided out of the army, Eversley Hall, house in Prince's Gate, forty thousand a year, and the remains of a constitution wrecked in his gracious majesty's service that no company in England would insure for a thousand pounds. Pretty rough—what do you call it? Oh, that's it—irony of fate, isn't it?"

It was impossible for either Lillias Ashley or her aunt not to notice the peculiar hesitation, the waiting for words which did not at once interpret the thoughts, and the general indecision of manner which, to the seeing eyes, are infallible symptoms of weakened intellect and will. Both women diagnosed the case with equal correctness, and they both drew the same conclusions from it.

"I am afraid, Sir Arthur," said Miss Holroyd, with the utmost grace and gentleness she could command, "that you are, well, a little run down—and, certainly, under the circumstances, it is no wonder that you are—and so you are taking a much too gloomy view. When you have had a few weeks in England, among your old friends, and got back to your old amusements and pursuits, I think you will be much better able to appreciate the blessings, however they may be at present disguised, which Providence has been pleased to bestow upon you. What is your opinion, Lillias?"

"I think you are perfectly right, aunt," replied Mrs. Ashley, with a glance which had more meaning in it than Sir Arthur could have had any idea of. Then, turning her lovely eyes upon him, she went on: "Really, serious as these things are, you must not take them too seriously. For the time being you have sacrificed your health in your country's service; but there is no reason why, with proper care and good medical advice, you should not regain it. Still, this is hardly the place to discuss one's private affairs in; and, besides, I think it is about time we were thinking about getting home, aunt."

The black-fringed eyelids fell as she turned to Miss Holroyd, and from under them shot a glance that was a command.

"I am afraid it is, Sir Arthur," she said, finishing her third cup of tea and beginning to get her impedimenta together. Then she looked up and said, in an impersonal sort of way: "I wonder if Sir Arthur has any particular engagement for this evening. Of course, he must have so many now."

"No, really, Miss Holroyd," he eagerly exclaimed. "I can assure you that I have nothing—absolutely nothing—er—on. I mean, of course, that I am completely disengaged."

The pansy eyes were looking into his as he spoke, and checked their wavering for a moment. He had looked into them with hopeless longing in other days, when he was a poorer and a better man, and they had sent him away to the outlands of the earth, to seek the fate which he had found. But now there seemed to be in them encouragement, which set his enfeebled pulses beating with renewed strength.

"Well, if that is so," said Miss Holroyd, still in the same impersonal tone, "perhaps Sir Arthur might like to renew an old acquaintance by dining with us to-night?"

"I should be pleased beyond measure—er—delighted, I can assure you. It is—er—most kind of you, and—er—if you will be good enough to tell me when and where I—er—mean your address and what time, I—er—"

"Aunt, I haven't a card with me, but I think you have," interrupted Mrs. Ashley, as he began to flounder in his speech again. "But we ought to tell you, Sir Arthur," she went on, turning to him again, "that you will have to be content with somewhat humble fare. The truth is, I have lost nearly all the little fortune that my husband left me, in those horrid, swindling Markham companies, and my aunt has suffered heavily, too, so that we are quite poor now."

There was an undertone of pathos in her voice as she said this, which went straight to his heart, a heart which, before disease and drink had done their deadly work upon him, had been instinct with all the chivalry of an English gentleman.

"My dear Lillias—I—er—really, I beg your pardon—you see, I—er—don't know your other name yet—"

"Lillias is Mrs. Ashley now," murmured Miss Holroyd.

"Oh—ah—yes—Mrs. Ashley. Thank you. How strange it seems to sound. I am awfully sorry to hear that. Swindling? I should think so. The scoundrel ought to have been hung before he died. Ah—that's rather Irish, I'm afraid; but, you know what I mean. It's all very well, this will that his son's put in the papers. It's only some dodge. I don't believe a word of it. And who knows how many more millions he's done the public out of."

"It is very sad and unfortunate," said Miss Holroyd, who had taken a card out of her bag; "but if we are going to talk about our troubles, perhaps we had better do that after dinner. This is our address, Sir Arthur, and we shall hope to see you a little after eight."

A quarter of an hour later he was lying back in one of the deep, cosy armchairs in the smoking room of the Army and Navy Club, with a brandy and soda on the little table beside him, and a long cigar between his teeth, thinking of many things, but mostly of the perfect face and the lovely eyes whose unattainable beauty had driven him mad five years before, and which, thanks to this strange chance meeting, had now inspired him with a dim, half-formed hope that, after all—gold-laden derelict on the sea of life as he was—that she, if she only would, might save him even now, save him both mentally and physically, and out of the magic of her womanhood give him back the manhood that he had lost through hopeless love of her.

CHAPTER VIII. HIS FATE DECIDED.

The address on the card which Miss Gertrude Holroyd had given to Captain Eversley was No. 13A Othello Mansions, Chiswick, and when he had got into his evening clothes and pulled himself together, by the usual means, he got into his limousine, and, as it rolled away smoothly and quietly on its rubber tires into what in the old days he had been accustomed to call the wilderness of the west, he settled himself down to do a certain amount of hard thinking, or, at least, as hard thinking as he could accomplish in his present condition.

The chance meeting outside Swan & Edgar's, and the subsequent conversation at the tea table in the Cabin, had in a certain sense given him what is commonly called a new lease of life. He had certain escapades, but he had only been in love once, and, therefore, the girl widow, who was now Lillias Ashley, was mistress of himself and his new-found fortunes. He had relations which he now called his brother's relations, two elderly sisters, unmarried and well provided for by jointure paid out of the estate; and a cousin, Mr. Arthur Ashley, the son of an uncle who had kept up the seedtime of wild oats until past middle age, and had reaped the harvest, in a combination of gout and apoplexy nearly ten years before, within a few days of his fifty-fifth birthday.

In the days when he wanted money badly, his aunts had given him to understand that he had forfeited all claim to their sympathy and help by his reckless manner of living. His cousin had traded upon his necessities, as he thought them then, and got him into the clutches of Henry Montagu to such an extent that only a sort of forced loan from his brother had saved him from bankruptcy, and the fatal alternative of resigning his commission.

Of course, their attitude toward him had very considerably changed now, but with that cunning which, with men in his condition, so often takes the place of cool reasoning, he had decided that they should now have from him what they had given him in the days when he wanted help—and that was nothing.

Only a few days before his cousin had almost gone down on his knees to ask him for a loan of five thousand pounds, an eighth of the annual rent roll which he was now incapable of spending with any real satisfaction or profit to himself. He had laughed at him, and told him to go to Montagu & Co. for a loan; and Mr. Arthur Ashley had departed, cursing him in his soul, if he had one, and trying to think out schemes of vengeance, one, at least, of which gave some reasonable promise of fulfillment.

But here the kindly fates had brought him face to face with the woman, or, as he chose to think of her, the widowed girl who five years before had been his first and only love. He had lost her through a freak of fortune; and now it seemed possible that fortune might give her back to him.

If so, what might not she give back to him—the old love renewed, the love of the man and the woman, instead of the unreasoning love of the boy and the girl. With such love, what more might not come—renewed manhood and the strength of will and self-respect that he had half lost; something to live for; an object in living to which he could devote himself heart and soul, and by such devotion win back the self-respecting manhood which had once been his birthright and heritage.

Yes, if there were for him anything left in life worth living for, it was incarnate in the perfect form and the lovely face which he had dreamed of, waking and sleeping, for the last five years of hunger and thirst and battle, tempered by wounds and disease, during which he had sought death as a release from the torture of his hopeless passion, and which, after all, had ended in such a commonplace fashion—a meeting in Regent Street, a handshake, afternoon tea, and an invitation to dinner with his long-worshipped goddess and her two maiden aunts.

What else in all the world was there to compare with her, with the possible realization of that boyish ideal of his? She was his one chance of renewed love, and life, and hope. What would this suddenly bestowed gift of fortune be to him, without her? Nothing, or something worse than nothing. Just an easy descent into the inferno on whose brink he has already standing, inferno of drink and drugs, dissipation and disease; then death, the ignoble end of a useless life, which he had risked again and again in his country's service, trying to find an honorable termination to an existence which his hopeless love had made worthless to him.

But with her, with Lillias as his wife, sharer of his new-found fortunes and mistress of his fate, how different the rest of his life might be. It was the difference between autumn and spring, and those lovely eyes of hers should be—

Illinois Ravaged by Tornado.

Scores of People Killed and Injured -- Millions of Dollars in Property Destroyed -- Poles Holding Bolsheviks in Check -- Ukrainians in Possession of Russian Black Sea Port--Disorders and Outrages Continue in Ireland.

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION.

CHICAGO, March 28.
A score of persons were killed and hundreds or more injured to-day in a tornado that swept the country and a number of towns north and west of Chicago and ravaged some of the city's north-western suburbs. The property damage runs into millions of dollars, including demolition of many buildings. Communication with regions was for a time cut off.

MORE KILLED.

ELGIN, Ill., March 28.
Six persons are reported killed in a tornado which struck this city to-day. A church, the opera house and a big store were destroyed.

HOLDING BOLSHEVIKS BACK.

WARSAW, March 28.
The Polish line is holding all along the front in Podolia, where the Bolsheviks have been centering the attacks of their big offensive in an effort to take the important fortified city of Kamenez Podolsk, according to a Polish headquarters communique. The army has been using gas shells, artillery, armored trains, armored river boats, airplanes, and cavalry in his attacks on various parts of the front, but he has made no headway either in Podolia or elsewhere, according to the statement, although fighting has been furious.

TOWN WIPED OUT.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., March 28.
It is reported that the town of Edgerton, Ind., 18 miles from here, has been completely wiped out by the storm. Two men were killed at Zulu, 16 miles from here, while several were injured and great property damage done at Ossian, 15 miles south of here.

A RIVER FIGHT.

WARSAW, March 28.
(By the A.P.)—Polish armored trains fought a pitched battle against Bolshevik monitors and other fighting craft on the Triplet river during the Bolshevik thrust which was designed to gain control of additional links of the railroad extending from Homel to Kalankowicz and Mozir. The Bolsheviks put down artillery preparation, which was followed by opening of a barrage from river boats and then infantry attacks.

PANAMA CANAL AGAIN OPEN.

PANAMA, March 27.
The obstructions in the Culebra cut district of the Panama Canal, were removed yesterday, and the great waterway is again open for traffic after a six day interruption.

THE CORONER'S VERDICT.

DUBLIN, March 28.
A formal verdict that death was due to bullet wounds caused by some persons unknown, was returned by the coroner's inquest which investigated the murder of Magistrate Bell. The members of the jury expressed their abhorrence at the crime, and tendered their sympathy to the widow.

APRIL 10TH SET FOR DISCUSSION.

WARSAW, March 28.
Poland has sent a wireless message to the Russian Bolshevik Government, proposing April 10th as the date for a meeting of delegates to discuss peace.

THE RED TERROR.

ROTTERDAM, March 27.
Hundreds of fugitives from the Ruhr district are nearing the Dutch frontier, according to the correspondent of the Courant. Some who have arrived at Steerburg bring stories of Red terror in the towns through which the Spartacists have driven armored cars.

FOUND LARGE QUANTITIES ARMS.

PARIS, March 27.
Great quantities of arms have been discovered in Germany by allied officers charged with supervising the execution of the Peace Treaty, according to advices received here.

REMOVED FROM JAIL TO HOSPITAL.

LONDON, March 27.
William O'Brien, Alderman of Dublin, who was arrested on March 23rd during a raid on Liberty Hall in that city, and who has since that time been conducting a hunger strike, was removed from jail to hospital last night, says a despatch to the Herald, the organ of Labor. The case of O'Brien, who is leader of the Irish transport workers, was discussed in the House of Commons when it was brought up by T. P. O'Connor, Nationalist leader.

WESEL RELIEVED.

WESEL, March 27.
(By the A.P.)—Government troops made a sortie southeast of this city yesterday, drove the besieging workers' forces from their posts, shelled their retreating columns and raised the siege of Wesel on both east and southeast. Dissensions seem to have broken out among the workers' troops. The staff at Hagen resigned Thursday, it was learned to-day, because the one at Essen which is directing operations on this front failed to observe the forty-eight hour truce effective Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. There is also some trouble among the Government forces, judging from the constant references to "cowards" in the calls for enlistment. Those issued to-day stipulated that "no cowards were wanted."

RUSSIAN OFFICERS ASSIST GERMAN REFS.

LONDON, March 27.
One hundred Russian officers, sent to Germany by Lenin, the Russian Bolshevik Premier, are assisting in the operations of the German workers army before Wesel, says a Copenhagen despatch to the London Times.

UKRAINIANS OCCUPY ODESSA.

PARIS, March 27.
Odessa, the great Russian port on the Black Sea, has been occupied by the Ukrainians under General Pawlenko, commander of the Ukrainian National Army, according to information received by the Ukrainian mission in Paris to-day.

CUTTING CABLES IN IRELAND.

PARIS, Mar. 27.
Several cables, some belonging to the Commercial Cable Co., passing through Ireland, have been cut, according to information received here.

GUILTY.

WINNIPEG, Mar. 27.
Alderman John Queen, William Irons, Wm. A. Fritchard, R. J. Johns, and George Armstrong, leaders in the Winnipeg general strike of last summer, on Saturday afternoon were convicted by the Assize Court Jury of seditious conspiracy on account of their actions in connection with the strike. They also were convicted of having committed a common nuisance. R. E. Bray was found not guilty of conspiracy, but guilty of committing a nuisance. Alderman A. A. Heaps was found not guilty on all counts.

THE INTER-VARSITY SPORTS.

LONDON, Mar. 27.
Oxford defeated Cambridge on Saturday afternoon in the first dual inter-Varsity track and field games to be held by the rival Universities since March, 1914. The final score was Oxford five and one-half events, Cambridge four and one-half events. H. S. White, formerly of Bowdoin College, won the running high jump for Oxford in easy fashion with a running leap of five feet seven inches, and immediately followed with an exhibition jump, in which he added two inches to his performance. L. J. Feather, an American Rhodes Scholar, won the hammer throw for the dark blue with a throw of 100 feet 11 inches. This was the one upset of the meet, for Oxford had expected to win the place with Noakes, who had been throwing the hammer better than a 110 feet in the preliminary trials. B. G. D. Rudd, from South Africa, was also a strong factor in the Oxford victory, winning the half mile run in one minute, fifty-seven and two-fifths seconds, and running a dead heat with Butcher of Cambridge in 440 yards dash in the excellent time of 49 3-5 seconds. Abrahams, of Cambridge, was the only double winner of the day, capturing both 100 yards sprint and the broad jump. There was no notable performance, considered from a record standpoint, except of Montague of Oxford, in the three mile race. His time of 14 minutes 45 3-4 seconds, cut 6.2-5 seconds from the previous track record.

NATIONALIST M. P. ARRESTED.

DUBLIN, Mar. 27.
Laurence Ginnell, Nationalist member of the House of Commons for the North Division of Westmeath, was arrested Saturday by the military and police.

LAND LINE CUT.

NEW YORK, Mar. 27.
The Commercial Cable Co. announced here on Saturday that a land line through Ireland supplementing its trans-Atlantic cables, was cut on Thursday and repaired within twenty-four hours.

CAMBRIDGE WINS.

LONDON, Mar. 27.
Cambridge to-day won the boat race, beating Oxford by four lengths. The time was twenty-one minutes eleven seconds.

FRENCH GOVT. SUSTAINED.

PARIS, Mar. 27.
The Chamber of Deputies on Saturday expressed its confidence in the Government by a vote of 518 to 70. The vote followed a debate on interpellations on the Government's foreign policy.

SEMI-FINALS.

LONDON, Mar. 27.
The semi-final round games for the English cup played to-day resulted as follows:—Aston Villa, 3; Chelsea, 1; Huddersfield, 2; Bristol City, 1.

FEARED STEAMERS LOST IN HURRICANE.

PARIS, Mar. 27.
Two French steamers, Lux and Vibuban, have been missing since the recent hurricane over the Mediterranean, and it is believed they were lost with all hands. There were one hundred and seventeen persons on board the Lux and twenty-five on the Vibuban.

WITHDRAWING FROM SIBERIA.

VLADIVOSTOCK, Mar. 27.
The withdrawal of the Czechoslovak troops is more than half completed, and it is expected the last of the force will have left for home by June 1st. The evacuation of Eastern Siberia by United States troops will be completed by April 1st.

Chicago Tribune: Military men are not responsible for the helplessness of the United States. They have to work with the policy the politicians and American public opinion will give them. That policy is murderous because it insists that men shall not know how to do the thing the nation from time to time requires them to do. A murderous policy hands them over to wars which they do not know how to fight. It provokes wars because it presents a rich nation in a helpless posture. We always proceed as if we were able to defend ourselves and other nations know that we are not able.

Personal Liberty.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In reply to a letter in the Daily News, signed T. F. Beresford (Liberty of the subject), as one of the many hundreds that attended the meeting, over the fifty year span of life, and a life-time abstainer from all kinds of liquor, would not tolerate any person, after such a short time here, to be a dictator to the intelligence of that meeting of all classes and creeds, and the direct insult to all. Did we not have at the meeting Capt. Leo Murphy and numbers of others, who fought for Liberty and Freedom in France and elsewhere, with Great Britain's famous 29th Division? The Commanding Officer gave the Newfoundlanders the title that they were "Better than the Best," and not gullibles, as Mr. Beresford stated that those who attended that meeting and bearing that famous name were gullibles, and they resent the insult.

Now I am in this for Freedom and Liberty of my countrymen and the masses of the people. As to prohibition, and the promoters, I firmly believe that many associated with it in different walks of life meant well, and their intentions were good for the betterment of their fellow man, and they did good by closing the saloons. There are many happy homes in this my native city, on account of prohibition, but out of that good came evil, in the manufacture of "moonshine," the "dope" habit, and the two former "moonshine" and "dope" will ruin the present and future generations, in many cases sending the users to an insane asylum and an early grave. From those unforeseen evils, all moderate prohibitionists should assist in having good come out of that evil, in this great national movement for a modification of the present Act or law, to a license to the individual, and the same should be made strict to the abuser, as both himself and his dependents must be protected. I say what right has anyone to coerce, and state that I must not have in my home at Cape Broyle or Trepassay, wine, rum, etc., for medical or hospitable purposes. I resent this; why, because it is not Liberty or Freedom, and what apply to me applies to my fellow countrymen all over the dominion.

With reference to "moonshine," "dope" and smuggling, I have reason to believe that "moonshine" is now being made in many outports, and on the increase, and sold at high prices; "dope" also, not to account for smuggling, in many places. "Moonshine" and "dope" to the users, in many cases, means insanity, new lunatic asylums, new wings to the present asylum, which will soon make a bi-plane and fly. I ask the question how many are in the asylum to-day, from "dope" and "moonshine," and how many forty years ago, when good rum sold here at a penny halfpenny per glass. The users, in many cases lived to the eighties and nineties, and only a few habitual drunkards, and lots of room in the asylum. The fishermen will join with me in demanding the right to have wine, rum, etc., in our homes, and in fishing schooners on bleak Labrador, for medical and hospitable purposes. The dominion is now losing hundreds of thousands of dollars for scripts, purchasing "moonshine" from 60 cents to $5 per bottle; "dope," smuggled rum from twenty to twenty-five dollars per gallon; whiskey, etc. Is not Great Britain serving rum to her navy; how many lives did rum save at the battle of Jutland, on the sea and in the trenches during the war, and hundreds of my countrymen would be to-day in unknown graves in France, Turkey and elsewhere, but for the judicious administration of spirits. I say save the present and future generations from the asylums and early graves, as that is what "moonshine" and "dope" will mean to the users. The British Flag stands, for Liberty and Freedom. Should you want a revolution in Great Britain, you will have it in less than twenty-four hours after you take beer and drink away from the masses. Prohibition has made a law for the classes, and not for the masses, in many cases. If you belong to the classes and stand in well with your friends and stand in well with all the scripts that you need; but, as a general rule, if you belong to the masses, you are refused. I do not blame the doctors, as they are in the game to get the dollars for their trouble, while it lasts. Who would not do the same?

Now I will give my own case. I have been living at Cape Broyle over thirty years, and an only son, married two years ago, is seriously ill; doctor of the district stationed at Ferryland, nine miles distant. Other doctors not available. The mother of that son requests me to send her immediately two glasses of gin for him. On arrival here I applied to one of our medical men for a scrip, the first and last scrip that I ever applied for and refused. I wanted to have the gin mailed and registered to the mother. Where is my Liberty and Freedom? How many have paid the penalty in the outports with their lives for the want of wine, rum, etc., in their homes, and in many cases from ten to seventy miles distant from a doctor. A very small percentage of the fishermen in the outports are abusers of liquor; but they want a square deal, Liberty, Freedom and British Fair Play.

Now let Mr. Beresford call into the Lunatic Asylum and he will likely see some of my unfortunate countrymen, victims from "dope" and "moonshine" evils, chimney climbing; and I can tell him that as a descendant of our forefathers, good English, Irish and Scotch, the hardy pioneers and Empire builders, who came to colonize Newfoundland, three hundred years past, and who have proven themselves to take first place in many walks of life on land and sea, and considering that you have little or no experience after only a few months here—when you have spent twenty years or more you may be entitled to an opinion, as we consider that we have sufficient intelligence to look after any great issue like we now have in this movement for Liberty and Freedom. And what right have you to question us Newfoundlanders, as to what we must drink. You have seen more drunkenness in one day in your own country, than you would see here in a generation.

Yours for Liberty, Freedom, and a Square Deal,
M. E. CONDON.
St. John's, March 25, 1920.

Young Men's Meeting Discussed Prohibition.

A meeting of young men, for the purpose of discussing and passing resolutions on Prohibition, was held in Methodist College Hall last night after church. Not as many as might have been expected were present, but those that did turn up undoubtedly were enthusiastically in favor of the resolutions, which passed without one dissenting voice. Mr. Don C. Lewis was appointed chairman, and he, after a few introductory remarks, called on Mr. J. R. Smallwood, the Convenor, to speak. Mr. Smallwood spoke at some length, tracing the matter of Prohibition from 1914 up to the present day. Particular emphasis was laid on the overwhelming evidence of the world's medical fraternity against the use of alcohol, and the speaker contended that, as alcohol cannot be for medicine, its return is being asked for by and on behalf of those who wish to use it for beverage instead of medicinal purposes. Once the principle of modification begins there is no knowing the end and if the open saloon did not result, conditions equally as bad would ensue. Following the passing of the resolutions, which were accepted without any discussion, a committee was appointed to make preliminary arrangements for the organizing of a Young Men's League, the primary object of which shall be the support of Prohibition, as opposed to modification. Then, when the need for doing this had ceased, the League would continue and form branches in all the outports. The committee was composed of Messrs. W. T. Newhook, C. Bowden, Harold Pike, W. Learning, W. Sparkes, D. Lewis, J. R. Smallwood, M. Morgan, J. Osmond, J. Raines and Sellars. Power to add to the numbers of the committee was given by the word "limited." The resolutions were:—

WHEREAS, within the past few weeks the Prohibition Act has received considerable criticism which is unjustified.

AND WHEREAS, it is the carrying out of the law that is at fault;

AND WHEREAS, this meeting of young men views with displeasure the present agitation for modification.

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED, (1) that this meeting protest against any modification of the Act that will make it less prohibitive, and (2) this meeting hereby favors the bone-dry or alcohol-free state, and (3) that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the Government and the Press. The committee as above will meet on Wednesday night. The meeting closed at 9.45 with the National Anthem.

Destructive Fire at Lead Cove.

News of a destructive fire which occurred at Lead Cove, T.B., on March 22nd has come to hand. It appears that Mr. Ernest Button accompanied by his wife and family left their home about nine o'clock to visit some friends, who lived nearby. They were not long gone when the news that their home was on fire reached them. Arriving on the scene they found the place in flames and despite the efforts of neighbours, in a short while the house and its contents were totally destroyed. As no insurance was carried on either the house or furniture the loss to the owner is a very serious one.

Discounts on Needless Articles.

The ration-books recently issued entitling war veterans to a discount of 10 per cent on goods purchased from some of the stores up to the amount of $4.50 during the year, are not satisfactory to at least some of the men, who claim that many of the articles listed on which the reduction is allowed are such as they will perhaps never need to buy.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

BRINGING UP WIVES.

A letter friend (or perhaps I should call her a letter enemy, since the tone of her letter was more on that line) has given me an excellent hint. She says that I ought to supplement my reminder that women who are bringing up sons should remember that they are also bringing up husbands with the complementary viewpoint—namely, that women who are bringing up daughters ought to remember that they are bringing up wives.

The Mother Who Boasts of Her Daughter's Helplessness.

I spoke of how much work a husband, who has been brought up to have everything around for women folks to pick up, makes for his wife. My letter "enemy" tells me that she knows a type of mother who is always saying "how much work her girls make her as they won't do anything for her or even pick up their own things. Now what good will those girls be to any man? I guess he would be like lots of men, wishing their mother or someone had brought them up different."

There certainly is that about it.

The mother who allows her daughter to be untidy and lazy, and teaches her little or nothing about the profession which there are nine chances to one she will ultimately adopt, is not doing her duty by her daughter's future husband.

The Wife Must Learn in Self Defense

But I do think this. There is much more likelihood that the discipline of married life will force the daughter to become a wife out of these habits, than there is that the son, become a husband, will change. A woman has to pick up after herself when she gets married and leaves her mother, whereas the man has a wife to take the mother's place.

And if she does not learn how to make her home pleasant it is the wife who suffers most, because she has to be in this unpleasant home three hours to the one that the man will have to put up with it.

Of course there are women who go through life as wives without ever learning the profession of home-making. One pities them with all one's heart, and the husband as much. I know of no sadder sight than a man who works hard to get ahead and never can get anywhere because his wife is incapable of properly using the money he give her.

You Couldn't Blame Him for Blaming His Mother-in-Law.

One would not wonder if such a man felt bitterly toward his mother-in-law for not remembering that she was bringing up a wife as well as a daughter.

No mother wants to lay up future trouble and unhappiness and hardship for her daughter. Yet every mother who doesn't help her daughter to establish habits of order and system, and teach her at least the rudiments of the profession of home-making, is running a grave risk of doing exactly that.

A remarkable proposal for the reform of the calendar has been made by two distinguished French astronomers, with some support, it is said, from America, and with the suggestion that the League of Nations should be asked to investigate the matter. It is distinctly revolutionary in character, as befits the nations which adopted an entirely new calendar during its period of revolution. The scheme consists in dividing the year into thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, thus making 364 days, the remaining day being kept as the "Day of Liberty." The present arrangement of Leap Year would remain, but whether this extra day in every Leap Year would also be kept as a public holiday is not quite clear.

Essex,

THE CAR OF THE FUTURE.

Even though you may have never ridden in the ESSEX, you must have heard of its qualities that make it a favorite with both those who have owned light weight economical cars and those who use large costly automobiles. The reason is readily understood. It lies in the fact that ESSEX combines the advantages of both. It is light in weight, moderate in cost and economical in maintenance and operation. Those are the advantages of cars of its weight class. But it also is finely finished. Its endurance matches the costliest cars. In performance very few excel it in either speed, acceleration, nimbleness or hill climbing.

Why not get acquainted with the ESSEX now?

Items of Interest.

When a party of Maine fishermen, hoping to clean the pickerel out of Lake Annabessacook, finally broke a hole through some thirty inches of ice, there shot into the air such a column of water that they ran for their lives. The ice had been forced down several inches below its normal level by the weight of the snow.

Mill men in New England who were bothered because half their women workers stayed home Mondays to do the family washing have introduced the mill laundry, and now the women coming to work Monday morning drop a laundry slip in a box and forget it until their laundered things are delivered Thursday by a mill wagon at their homes.

A minister in London, G.B., preaching on the high cost of living, showed a basket with 48 eggs, and said: "This is what a predecessor of mine got for a shilling 75 years ago." Then he showed another basket, with two dozen eggs. "This," he said, "is what his successor bought for a shilling 35 years ago." Then he showed two eggs. "That," he said, "is what I get for my shilling." He got the increase in salary that he was asking for.

A veteran omnibus, which served with the army in France for four years, was driven to Buckingham Palace to be inspected by the King. B 34, her official designation, saw the war through from Antwerp, 1914, to the battle of Amiens, 1918. She bears two brass plates telling her story: 1914, Antwerp; 1915, Ypres; 1916, Ancre; 1917, Somme; 1918, Amiens; 1919, Home. "Lest we forget." She carried troops to the firing line, lost her windows through showers of shrapnel, took thousands of rounds of ammunition to the guns, carried tons of rations to hungry men, nearly came to grief a score of times in the mud of Flanders roads, and covered herself with bullet holes and glory in the task. Now "demobbed," she is back in London at her old job of carrying passengers on route 53 A from Charing Cross to Plumstead.

"Phorotone."

"PHOROTONE" is one of the very best preparations you can use for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, and various Lung Troubles. It is prepared by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, Wholesale Chemists and Druggists, St. John's, Nfld.

Thousands of bottles of this preparation are sold every year and the increasing demand is a positive proof as to its medicinal value. Phorotone can be purchased at STAFFORD'S DRUG STORE, Theatre Hill; J. J. St. John, Duckworth St.; J. Gosse, Hoylestown; James Wiseman, Top Carter's Hill; Mr. Halfyard, Hayward Avenue, for 35c. bottle. mar20,tf

 DON'T.

Folks are queer as they can be. Always sayin' "don't" to me. Don't do this an' don't do that. Don't annoy or tease the cat. Don't throw stones, or climb a tree. Seems like when I want to play Don't is all that they can say.

If I start to have some fun, Someone hollers, "Don't you run!" If I want to go an' play Mother says: "Don't go away." Seems my life is filled clear through With the things I mustn't do. All the time I'm shoutin' at: "No, no, Sonny, don't do that!"

Don't shout so an' make a noise, Don't play with those naughty boys, Don't eat candy, don't eat pie, Don't you laugh and don't you cry. Don't stand up and don't you fall, Don't do anything at all. Seems to me both night an' day Don't is all that they can say.

Fads and Fashions.

A new brilliantly colored woolen ribbon is seen on some hats. The broad girdle which reaches to the hips is fashionable. One semi-sports suit of wool boasts a cretonne waistcoat. Dyed lace is used to tone in with very brilliantly colored silks.

A great many varieties of apron fronts are shown in dresses. Breakfast coats are almost taking the place of other negligees.

Black and white printed chiffon is used over flesh-colored crepe. Women of distinction generally prefer the moderate décolletage.

Blouses are made of polka dotted linen—the dots, of course, in colors. Rust color, beige and castor are among the favorite shades for spring. Straight lines and low belts characterize many of the newest frocks.

Cerise satin shines through the openwork of silver cloth evening sandals.

Much favored is the use of fine organ-die vests, blouses, collars and cuffs.

Jade green and black straw are used on an Egyptian blue chiffon smock.

The cellophane hat is more charming when veiled with maline or chiffon.

FACTS AND THINGS.

Our treasured landmarks disappear in a surprising way; the thing that was a truth last year is but a fake to-day. When I was young the village doc said ailments like the flu, which give the system such a shock, to causes plain were due. We sat in draughts, or wet our feet, and went to beds of pain, and called upon the name of Pete, and that of Mike, in vain. But now the doc, in sounding terms, another platform springs, and all our ills are due to germs, the doggone measy things. In fifteen years, or maybe less, that graft will look forlorn, and doctors then—I make the guess—will laugh our germs to scorn. The rules of health of yesteryear look now like silly fads, and scientists sit up to jeer the wisdom of our dads. The doctor of the olden time had whiskers long and black; he couldn't hope to earn a dime unless he had a stack. But now the doctor with a beard in deep privation squirms; the man with lambskins is feared, for they are full of germs. It is a world of piffle, friends, yet let's retain our grins; for when one streak of wisdom ends, another one begins.

Gloomy Outlook.

Sealing messages from the fleet are by no means cheerful, and the prospects can only be estimated at a minimum voyage—if even that can be expected. There is nothing, so far, to indicate a ray of hope that the Spring will be saved. Since the first few days subsequent to the sailing of the ships, all their advices to owners have continued with monotonous sameness, discouraging and gloomy. The fleet missed the main patch. That was obvious after the first week out. Ice conditions were apparently more difficult than in preceding years, and the ships became jammed early, thus precluding them from taking the northern cut and getting to the main whelping ice, the young harps being believed to be well north, this year. Anyway the encouragement to carry on in the hope of effecting a saving trip is small, and little hope can be entertained of any loads. It is all too late to expect a pull up.

From a financial point of view, nothing can be more calculated to depress trade than the failure of the sealfishery. The whole commercial outlook depends upon the result, and suppliers make their dispositions for the issuance of credit for the Shore and Labrador codfishery upon the returns and value of the sealing catch. With a very small number of ships prosecuting, and the corresponding decrease in crews, it was confidently expressed at the beginning that a good voyage would be secured, thus improving future arrangements for a greater exploitation of the codfishery. Such hope has failed, and while it is quite possible that outfitters may not curtail supplies, yet they will of necessity be obliged to proceed cautiously, not having the anticipated revenue from the sealing venture to finance their current expenditure on needed fishing requisites. Thus it will become more difficult for non-independent planters to secure outfits, while those who are able to outfit themselves will doubtless hasten slowly, especially under the present uncertain conditions abroad. However, as the darkest hour is ever before the dawn, all will hope and trust that there yet may be time in which to save the situation.

GOOD FRIDAY.

Colonel and Mrs. Martin, Territorial Commanders for Newfoundland, will conduct a "Day at the Cross" on Good Friday, April 2nd, in the morning at 11 o'clock and also at 3 p.m. These services will be held in the No. 2 Citadel, Adelaide Street, and at night at 7 o'clock in the No. 1 Citadel, New Gower Street. This is a new thing under the sun and all are invited to attend, especially the Christians.

Young Woman Became Insane.

A young woman employed as a cook in one of the Government Institutions became violently insane on Saturday and caused considerable damage to the place, as well as injuring one of the female attendants. The matron and a carpenter who were present went to the rescue of the attendant. The unfortunate woman was removed to the Police Station and was sent to the Insane Asylum this morning.

Cochrane Street Church.

Divine Service will be held in Cochrane Street Methodist Church every night this week, with the exception of Saturday, commencing at 7.45.
Monday evening.—Rev. D. B. Hemmeon.
Tuesday evening.—Rev. G. Dickie.
Wednesday evening.—Rev. T. B. Darby.
Thursday evening.—Rev. E. W. Forbes.
Good Friday morning at 11 a.m. Preacher, Rev. Dr. Bond. Collection in aid of supernumerary and other Conference Funds. These services are free to all.

Union Lenten Services Begin.

The first of a series of religious Union Lenten Services was held in the Board of Trade Building this noonday, Rev. Dr. Jones being the preacher. A fairly large number of people turned up to-day. Each meeting will be conducted by a clergyman of each of the following churches: Anglican, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian, who will give an address of 10 minutes suitable to the occasion; the order of worship will be uniform and the meetings will not be more than half an hour long. It is hoped that these meetings will be utilized by the people, and prove our fraternity and unity in the bonds of a common faith. The meetings begin at twenty minutes to one daily.

Government to Prohibit Dopes.

Everyone will be pleased to hear that the Government intends to prohibit the importation, sale and manufacture of all substances used as dopes. Hon. R. A. Squires, the Premier, queried this morning by a Telegram reporter, told of the Government's decision.
"The judgement of the Supreme Court in setting aside that of the Magistrate's Court," he said, "puts the obligation on the Government. For that reason, therefore, a proclamation is now being drafted and will be brought before the Executive Council as quickly as possible. This proclamation will cause the importation, manufacture and sale of substances used as dopes to be illegal. In other words," he went on, "the Government will do everything in its power to prevent the consumption of dope, and must now act in accordance with the Prohibition Act."

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, March 29.
This is the Season when Spring Tonics are in order. One of the best of these—one that you can rely upon for prompt action and lasting results, is McMurdo's Nutritive Hypophosphites. This admirable preparation is of great value to all who are run down, convalescent, or languid after the winter. Price 50c. and $1 a bottle.
Tepeco Tooth Paste is one of the class of Chlorate of Potash Dentifrices which are becoming increasingly popular. And our customers say it is quite as good as any in its class. Price 50c. a tube.

Police Had Busy Time.

Saturday night was the busiest the police have had in many years, and before 11.30 no less than twelve "drunks" and "drunk and disorderlies" were behind the bars. Most of the arrests were made in New Gower St. and the majority of those brought in were affected with dope.

Weather and Ice Conditions.

Wesleyville.—N.E. wind, strong, clear and cold; no ice in sight.
Lafayette.—Moderate west wind, fair and cold.
Red Cove.—Wind N.W. fine and colder; ice moving off.
Greenpond.—Wind N.N.E., strong breeze, fine; no ice in sight.

Winds of March.

An hour before the frosty dawn I heard across the snow From spaces filled with flying cloud The wild wind buds blow The rattle for seeds and roots Entombed in white below.

They sounded the assembly to The squirrel in the tree, The dorkly confined butterfly, The hibernating bee, The caterpillar in his shroud Of silken tapestry.

They called the robin back to build In maple, elm and larch, The wild goose to the viewless track Across the azure arch, And played upon the farmer's door "Ho! Ploughman, forward, March."—Minna Irving in the New York Sun.

Police Court.

A drunk who resisted arrest was let go on payment of costs.
Another, for a similar offence, was let off.
A man, charged with drunkenness by his wife, was discharged.
Another was discharged with costs.
Two men were charged with being drunk and breaking 3 panes of glass in their cell, valued at $5 each, had to pay $7.50 cash.
A drunk who was disorderly was discharged.
A drunk and his wife, who had been disorderly, used abusive and lewd language, resisted arrest and drew a large crowd, were fined $2 each.
A drunk, who had to be handcuffed, was let go.
Another was let go.

This Morning's Fire.

At 11.50 o'clock this morning a still alarm brought the West End fire apparatus to No. 40 Hutchings Street. The house is occupied by two families, the upper portion by a family named Madden. The woman Madden discovered the fire in the kitchen situated on the top flat, and sent an alarm to the West End fire hall nearby. After some twenty minutes work the fire was extinguished but not before the top flat was gutted and the under storer, occupied by the other family was flooded with water. Mr. Madden lost practically all his belongings having no insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Spontaneous Combustion.

A story is going the rounds to-day, and is given much credence by the police and others interested in such matters. It appears that one of the prisoners who was run in on Saturday night last told the police that he got drunk on what is known as canned heat. Taking the solid stuff he dissolved it in a jug of hot water, afterwards drinking it. Subsequently he began to swell, and thinking a smoke would do him good, he took out a T. B. pipe or rather the stump of one (it had become broken in his pocket), he proceeded to light it when without warning the air seemed to take fire, and in the man's own words "he had to close his mouth to keep his stomach from glowing." The principal in the affair showed his face which was all red as evidence of the truth of his statement.

MISS STELLA MOORE.
"And Oh for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still."
Only a day or two ago and there was life. The sufferings of a long illness had been patiently borne, and recovery was looked forward to in the course of a few days. To-day the vital spark has flown, and the soul of Stella Moore now stands in the presence of its Creator. Thus, in the bloom of youth and beauty, at an age when life held forth every promise, she passed away, and it is only those who knew her true character who can fully realize the great loss which has been sustained by her death.
For a long period Stella had been sick, but by the fortitude which she displayed during her illness, and the spirits which she possessed at all times, nothing but a hopeful outlook could be entertained. Only on Thursday, when the writer saw her for the last time in the flesh, she had made such rapid strides towards recovery that it was confidently hoped she would be able to leave her bed in the course of a week or two. But God saw fit to will it otherwise. He called her, and she was ready, and on Saturday morning, at her residence, 90 LeMarchant Road, she passed peacefully away to her eternal reward for a life well spent.
All who knew Stella Moore could not but love her, and by her demise they have lost a great and true friend. She possessed a wonderful disposition and rare spirits, and her influence and memory will remain with all who know her as long as life itself. No more will be seen her familiar form, and no more will her hearty laughter be heard. Only a fond remembrance of a true friend remains, and a life so lived which it behoves one to strive to emulate.
Her suffering ended with the day. Yet lived she at its close, And breather the long, long night away In statue-like repose.
But when the sun in all its state Illumed the eastern skies, She passed through Glory's morning gate And walked in Paradise."

EMBARGO REMOVED.

WASHINGTON, March 28. The British Board of Trade has removed the export embargo on wool, according to advices received from London.

JAPAN NEXT.

SEATTLE, March 28. Predictions that Japan eventually will go "dry" were made Saturday by three Japanese delegates to the International W.C.T.U. Convention to open in London from April 18th to 25th.

REPLY TO-DAY.

LONDON, March 28. Premier Lloyd George summoned a special cabinet meeting for this evening to consider the Government's answer to the demands of the Miners' Federation. The Miners' Federation will receive a reply at a conference at Downing Street at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

PLOT AND COUNTER-PLOT.

PARIS, March 28. Charges that the military party in Germany has been secretly working on a new organization plan for Germany, are made by Le Journal, and investigation has revealed this, it declares, and has shown that the list of men, who can be mobilized at first call, totals 300,000 in Bavaria alone. The Petit Parisien says it learns that the Government has proposed to the Allies that immediate action be taken to prevent the neutral zone along the German border being constantly entered by Reichswehr forces, contrary to the Peace Treaty stipulations.

OTTAWAS MEET DEFEAT.

OTTAWA, March 28. The Metropolitan, of Seattle, Saturday night, decisively defeated the Ottawas, champions of N.H.L., by 3 goals to 1, and thereby prolonged the series, next game of which will be played on Toronto ice on Tuesday next. Should the Westerners win the next game, the fifth will be played in Toronto on Thursday night. Ottawas has won two matches and Seattle one.

ANARCHY AND DISORDER.

LONDON, March 28. The gravest crisis in the whole Irish history is the description applied to the present situation by the Dublin correspondent of the London Times, in reiterating that the country is fast drifting into anarchy. The Irish public views current events with profound dismay and sickness of heart, he says, and is amazed and frightened at the Government's failure to recognize the facts of the situation. Murder societies are completely organized and are aware of the movements of all officials, who on their part, are equally cognizant of their dangers, knowing that the sympathy of the telegraphers in the State service are largely with the conspirators and they dare not use the wires to transmit official information.

ANOTHER TOWN DESTROYED.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 28. Four or five persons were killed, and the northwestern part of the town of West Point, Ga., was destroyed by a tornado late to-day.

BREAKING THE PACT.

PARIS, Mar. 28. Absolute confirmation of the entrance of regular German Army troops in Ruhr district, on the end of the Allied zone of occupation, without any permission from the Allies, has been received by the French Foreign Office, it was declared to-day.

MACCREADY FOR DUBLIN.

LONDON, Mar. 28. (Can. Associated Press.)—The Daily Express says that the Govt. is making a dramatic change in the military control in Ireland, by sending over General MacCreedy, Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, in place of General Shaw. General MacCreedy is known as a strong "pacemaker" and has vastly increased powers in Ireland. The general expectancy is that there will be majority in the Commons for a second reading of the Home Rule Bill, which begins to-day.

LUDENDORFF'S DENIAL.

BERLIN, March 28. General Ludendorff yesterday placed himself at the disposal of examining Judge Oehlschlaeger, and denied charges that he was implicated in the reactionary revolution of March 13th, according to a News Agency report. The General also made, through his attorney, a statement explaining his relations with leaders of the abortive revolution.

SITUATION MORE GRAVE.

LONDON, Mar. 28. The London Times to-day devotes a three column editorial to the Irish situation, besides printing long letters from the Earl of Dunraven, President of the Irish Reform Association, and Sir Horace Plunkett, Chairman of the Dublin Convention, all of which lay stress on the serious situation and make suggestions for changes in the Irish Bill, which is to come up before Parliament to-day, which writers believe will help in the settlement of

New Overland Four

The IDEAL Five Passenger Car.

It has required only a few weeks for our new five-passenger Overland to establish itself as one of the most popular cars on the Newfoundland market.

The Overland is a tremendous success—there can be no doubt about that. It has won its way into the hearts and minds of the Motoring World almost over night.

It has made more real friends, in a shorter space of time, than any other model ever produced by this Company. If you are at all familiar with Overland history, you will appreciate the significance of this statement.

There is, of course, a very definite reason for such universal endorsement of our new car. You will find it in the single word, Performance, as expressed through a strictly modern power plant and chassis.

The Overland is not a racing car, though it is easily capable of fifty miles per hour. What is vastly more important, it is an utterly dependable car—one of the most thoroughly satisfactory motor vehicles that has ever been developed for the road.

By "Satisfactory," we mean that it possesses all the power and speed that a sane man could possibly desire. We mean that it offers the true luxuries of exquisite design, ample room, soft upholstery and velvety spring suspension—all these without the burden of excessive upkeep.

It is, in a phrase, the Ideal 5-passenger motor car—an incomparable investment in four-cylinder transportation. The logical recognition of this fact has resulted in a permanent demand that is World Wide.

We predict that you are going to hear the Overland referred to as the greatest dollar-for-dollar value on the market. It possesses such obvious advantages over the usual type of five-passenger car that this conclusion would seem to be inevitable.

However, you alone must be the judge of comparative values. We merely ask you to take one ride in the Overland and form your own opinion. On this basis we are content to rest our case because we know that three years of experimental work and testing have, indeed, produced the finest of all light cars.

A Wonderful Test of Strength.

At the Denver Horse and Stock Show recently, the New Overland Four five-passenger Touring Car leaped a 5 ft. hurdle. The Car was called the "Gasoline Horse" and performed after the jumping horses had cleared the 4 ft. hurdle. To clear the 5 ft. hurdle the Car leaped 18 ft. in the air and sustained a blow calculated to be 40,000 foot lbs., without breaking or showing the slightest evidence of coming through this terrible leap.

The car used was chosen haphazardly from the lot of regular stock cars, and was not especially prepared in any way. This should convince anyone of the reliability of the New Overland to stand up to any strain required of it on the Newfoundland roads.

For the out-of-town man it is an especially good car, a load of 700 cwt. of any material may be carried in the rear seat, after the upholstery has been removed, which can be done in a few seconds, and after the load is removed the upholstery is snapped back into place and the car is again ready for passengers.

The new three-point Cantilever Spring System, which gives the 100-inch wheel base an additional 30 inches of Spring Base and easy riding qualities, is a new departure in Motor construction, and is without doubt the greatest invention yet.

Drop into our Showrooms any day and examine this car. We will be pleased to take you for a trial run any day.

THE DISMAL DWELLING.

I come back again to the subject of the past two weeks. My promise that I would give the inside view of the Poor Asylum, calls for fulfilment. Furthermore, I wish to acknowledge the letter which appeared in the News last week and which kindly and favourably referred to my first talk on the subject of the "Dismal Dwelling." It is something of a comfort to know that someone else besides myself, has some sense of righteous indignation on account of a fact, which is a crime and a shame, the fact of Newfoundland's treatment of the Official Poor in our midst. We desire to forfeit the blessing found in Holy Writ in the words: "Blessed is he that considereth the Poor, the Lord will deliver him in times of trouble;" we shall forfeit it unless something is done worthwhile for these poor inmates.

One thing gives me considerable thought and wonderment and that is that there is not a general outcry against the existence of such a blot on our modern life. How people can daily pass that site, daily know of the conditions which prevail there, daily see some of the inmates about the streets, and not cry out, passes my comprehension.

This is not the first time that the attention of the public has been drawn to the institution, it will not be the last, if I can raise a fuss.

There are certain elements which are absolutely necessary to the health and happiness of people in connection with any building, in which people are compelled to live. We will deal with a few of these:—

LIGHT.

The source of all light in the sun. The results of light are cheerfulness, health, carefreeness. The sun is always ready as a strong man to run a race. He plays behind the mist-cloud in the morning until by his own heat he has evaporated the mist, then from the clear sky he breaks forth in glorious and shining majesty. First the birds awaken with their songs, then the cattle low, and laugh, as they rise from their beds to greet good old King Sol; then, last but not least, man rises from his bed to feel new life in his blood and strength in his body by which to face all the world, and to successfully meet all the demands of his life. The children crowd the streets and lanes to play and frolic in the sun. And he plays and dances in the morning, to meridian and past it, he scatters a shower of jewels everywhere, with a ray here and flash there; all various—all full of life and light, and tender as the dew of the morning.

"It is morning—and in the light of that morning, thousands of eyes dash with renewed brightness for they have longed for the coming of the day. And to the light of the morning, thousands of eyes open, things that nestle in dust and darkness cover and fly away. Morning for the toll-worn artisan—for oppression and avarice, and gaunt famine and poverty are gone, and there is social light no more. Morning for the meek-eyed student—for scowling doubt has fled, and sophistry is silenced, and the clouds of error are lifted from the fair face of truth for aye, and there is intellectual wrongs are redressed, and contradictions harmonized, and problems solved, and men summer in perpetual brotherhood, and there is moral light no more. . . .

Morning;—Hark how the sympathetic heavens reply; "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw herself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended."

It is morning!!—"The planet new doth like a garment wear the beauty of the morning." An the light climbeth, onward and upward, for there is a sacred noon beyond. That noon is Heaven.—"And there shall be no night there."

The earth was all chaos and void until the Creator made two great lights, one to shine in the day which He called the sun, one to shine in the night which He called the moon. Since then man has depended on sunshine for every material gift worthwhile. There is only one condition ever mentioned where man would not need the light of the sun, but there is no need of the sun there, because the sun is superseded by a still greater light. Man cannot live without light, and fully realize all his potential joys and powers. Even animals grov blind and become thin and sickly and die, when they are confined to dark habitations.

Carlyle in Sartar Resartus wrote: "But it is with man's soul as it was with nature: The beginning of creation is light. 'Till the eye have vision, the whole members are in bonds. Divine moment, when over the tempest-tossed soul, as once over the wild weltering chaos, it is spoken: Let there be light! Ever to the greatest that has felt such moment, is it not miraculous and God-announcing; even as, under simple figures, to the simplest and least. The mad primeval discord is hushed; the rudely-jumbled conflicting elements bind themselves into separate firmaments: deep silent rock foundations are built beneath; and the skye vault with its everlasting luminaries above; instead of a dark wasteful chaos, we have a blooming, fertile, heaven-encompassed world."

Permit me to indulge in flowers once more. As we think of Heaven with its vast and eternal lights, ruled by the two kings of lights, the Sun and Moon, the latter but reflecting the rays of the former, other words come to us. "Music is here; but it is the deep solemn harmony of the spheres. Poverty is here; but it must be read in characters of light, written on the sable garment of night. Architecture is here; but it is the colossal structure of the sun and system, and of cluster and of universe. Eloquence is here; but there is neither speech nor language, its voice is not heard." Yet it restless sweeps, comes over us in the mighty period of revolving worlds.

To say that we need light is one thing, to demand that we be understood as meaning sufficient light is another. If a man lives, or "bides," in a shack 8 feet by 10 feet, which has only one window and that 4 inches square, built in the North side of his shack, and covered with dust and dirt, it cannot be denied that he has light, but it must be emphatically denied that he has sufficient light.

Our first charge against the inside view of the Poor Asylum is that there is not sufficient light; and when light means so much and is so necessary for health and happiness, then we affirm that inside conditions there at present tend to sickness, unhappiness and all kindred ills.

Just imagine if you can a large building, the general outline of which is oblong. It has several flats or stories. We have never seen the basement, so cannot write of it. I imagine however, that it is a case of (to quote the Nigger yarn) it being de-basement. No I am only concerned with the place where the poor poor are compelled to spend most of their days and nights. Here is a flat, say 100 feet by 50 feet. Lengthwise it is divided into three parts; a long row of rooms; a long hall; another long row of rooms. The rooms are bed-rooms. I have seen as many as seven beds in one room which was only large enough for one person. The bed-rooms have windows for the most part, but the inmates should not be expected to spend their days in the same room in which they spend their nights. What other place remains? Why the long hall. The hall is about 100 feet by 10 feet. Two windows only, one at each end, light the hall. Rarely does the sun shine through those windows. The poor poor huddle together pitifully in winter, and almost so in summer, in these dark halls. Passing down the halls it is necessary to keep in the centre, and to keep your eyes open, lest you stumble over some poor sufferer, by the way.

The only place beside where any decent quantity of light is allowed to shine through the day, is in the so-called Hospital; and to go there, would almost make you pray that the light might no shine. I say again, I do not blame the Superintendent and his assistants, they should not be blamed, but notwithstanding, whoever is to blame, the conditions are blameworthy. If God could be heard to speak with regard to the Poor Asylum, He would say: "Let there be light." I have a feeling that fire-light is better than the present dismal apologies for the genuine thing.

FOOD.

Another necessity to human existence is food. Man cannot live by bread alone, even if the bread is made from first grade flour and in a first rate manner; which it is not in the Poor House. Man needs a variety in his food. It is economy to eat much and to eat variety of food, it saves drug bills. No one can say that the food at the Poor Asylum is either enough to satisfy hunger, or to keep up physical strength. I have tasted soup, which is a common dish there, and for dinner, the main meal of the day, the only dish sometimes, excepting for a thick junk of bread. I have tasted such soup and could not tell it apart from viscous salted water. The poor inmates dare not complain, but the truth gets out somehow. One would be tempted to think that the halls, where the food is served to the well folks there, is purposely darkened, so that the poor shall not see what it is, which is called food. Blindness may even be a blessing. Sometimes years ago, when I read for the first time the story Oliver Twist by Dickens, I thought that Bumble was dead and that Oliver did not need to ask for more; but Bumble is not dead, the Government is Bumble, and Oliver Twist, the poor poor, is still asking for more. The report is still going to Bumble that Oliver is asking for more. The official reply still is: "What asking for more. I know that boy, (meaning Oliver) will be hung." Times have changed since Bumbles time of Dickens fame, standards are higher. I am prepared to swear that not one member of the Government; nor one member of the Government-appointed-Commission which officially visits the institution once or twice a year, nor any one who knows the deceptions of life. I say not one of them would, after seeing the meals that cook the food; the range on which it is cooked, and the food when cooked, attempt to live on that food without first of all preparing for a stomach sick life and an early death. Yet our relatives and friends are there, and the public is mum. The poor poor need food and more food, and better food. Times have changed but has Bumble? Has Oliver Twist? Has the officialdom?

HOME.

"Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

"Dulce Domum — Home Sweet Home." What sound vibrates upon the heart more delightfully? The world itself is beautiful, but who shall describe its realities? Napoleon amidst all the triumphs of his greatest days declared that he would rather be home with his Josephine. Admiral Collingwood as he paced the deck of his victorious ship was sighing for home. Home-life, with all its discipline and associations, will be the material for many a future meditation; and the principles of those who are dead and gone will be respected and coveted, not only because of their intrinsic worth, but because they are tinged with the bright colours of earliest memory. Looking back, it will seem to them as if:—

"The air of Paradise did fan the house, And angels offic'd it."

Relationship, freedom, care, love, these things and similar make home. A nation's strength lies in its home-life. Men and women need home. When boy and girl are settling down to the most joyous and the same time the most solemn and serious phase of life, "tis said, "They are making a home for themselves." For self-realization and fulfilment such is absolutely necessary; i.e., on general lines.

The poor poor in the Poor Asylum have no home. They bide in an institution. They are cursed with officialdom; they are limited and barred and bound. They need light, they get gloom; they need love, they get only mental service; they need to be clear, but are not. Strangers give them food, and look after them; an ungrateful public forgets them; they live, they die; they are buried; none know; none care; no one attends the funeral save the official undertaker, and the official clergyman. No tears, no flowers. The corpse is lifted out of the bed into the official black box and is borne away. No tears, no flowers. Another poor miserable soul takes the same place in the identical bed; ad infinitum and nauseum. Pity the poor poor in the "Dismal Dwelling."

"Double Cause to Be Thankful," States Wolfe

Both Himself and Wife Are Restored to Splendid Health By Tanlac.

"I guess we have a double cause to be thankful to Tanlac, for it has not only done my wife so much good that she is looking better than she has for years, but has also relieved me entirely of my stomach trouble so that now I feel just fine." This was the statement of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wolfe, of Grand Desert, Nova Scotia, who were in Halifax recently on a shopping trip, and called at Kinley's Drug Store for two bottles of Tanlac. For many years past Mr. Wolfe has been in the blacksmith's business in Grand Desert, and he and his wife have lived there all their lives and are very highly respected.

"I hadn't been well for over three years," said Mrs. Wolfe, "and was really in a very weak and run-down condition. I had indigestion and bad; my food used to sour and I had pain after every meal. I was so nervous and excitable that the least unusual noise made me start, and at night my rest was so disturbed that I always felt too tired to do my housework. I had no energy or strength and was rapidly getting worse. When I found out that I had fallen off in weight from a hundred and forty to a hundred and fourteen pounds I became alarmed at my condition."

"There was something so convincing about the Tanlac statements in the papers that I decided to try it. That was two months ago, and to-day I'm a different woman. I never have a touch of indigestion now. My appetite is splendid and my food seems to do me good. All signs of nervousness are gone and I am feeling stronger and better in every respect. I have gained exactly eighteen pounds in weight, and Mr. Wolfe here can tell you how much I have improved in health."

"Yes, it's a fact all right," said Mr. Wolfe when appealed to, "it has certainly done the wife more good than any other medicine she ever took. I had suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble for years myself, too, and when I saw the way it helped her, I started taking Tanlac also. I've only taken two bottles but it has relieved me entirely of my trouble. My food agrees with me perfectly now, and I never felt better in my life, and I've gained ten pounds in weight. We both think Tanlac is the greatest medicine in the world."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—adv

Busy Antwerp.

GREAT BELGIAN PORT HAS MANY NATURAL ADVANTAGES.

Belgium is working at its reconstruction with a most laudable energy—which contrasts strongly with the social unrest and agitation reigning in England and in France. The Belgian Government, rightly proud of what has already been achieved, recently invited three French ministers to Belgium on a tour of observation so that they might realize for themselves the progress accomplished in the domain of social reconstruction. Their journey ended by a visit to the port of Antwerp, which is about to become a French base for the transport of German coal.

Although Rotterdam is a dangerous rival, the great Belgian port, nevertheless, possesses considerable superiority on account of the facility of access and its labor conditions. The Belgian Chamber of Commerce recently published a communication concerning the characteristic features of Antwerp, of which the following are worth noting:—

The port is accessible for vessels 230 metres long, drawing 10 metres of water, and possessing docks 5,000 metres long, provided with hydraulic cranes housed in metallic sheds which extend over an area of more than 200,000 square metres.

The work of enlargement of the port, which is actually being carried on in the north, will allow of steamers up to 350 metres long to enter, whilst the depth of the port will be 13 metres at low or high tide. These new docks will also be provided with hydraulic cranes, with numerous railway tracks, allowing freight to be directly transferred from car to steamer and vice versa, whilst 12 pneumatic elevators can discharge 150 tons an hour. In 1914 Antwerp was the centre of 100 or more navigation services for all parts of the world. Already 60 of these lines have resumed work. Before the war the movement of transports was about 11,000,000 tons of imports and 8,000,000 tons of exports. When navigation on the Rhine is once more free, extremely low freight rates will allow of a considerable traffic by way of the Rhine, to the particular advantage of Strassburg.

Against these advantages of Antwerp, no French port can adequately compete.

AN INCOMING EXPRESS.—An incoming express from Millertown Junction left Bishop's Falls at 5 o'clock this morning.

Love Stories of the Footlights

A Fight for Name and Honour.

A cheering, roaring crowd. From hundreds of throats came the cry, "Bravo, Belle!" while hundreds of hands were stretched out in an endeavour to touch the beautiful, smiling girl who emerged from the Law Courts and slowly made her way through the surging crowd of admirers to her carriage.

It was the final scene of a woman's fight for name and honour--the closing of a poignant chapter in a drama of love, romance, secret marriage, family hatred, and intrigue, which could not have been excelled by the most fertile imagination of our novelists.

That day, Belle Bilton, the pride of the London music-halls, the toast of the West-end, had vindicated her right to a place in the peerage. She had completely refuted the charges against her honour, brought by an embittered father-in-law, a peer of the realm, who had sought to besmirch her character and thus free his son from a marriage which he hated because this girl was "a common music-hall artiste."

That, in fact, was the main reason why the fourth Earl of Clancarty left no stone unturned to separate his son, Viscount Dunlo, from the woman he had secretly married at the Hampstead Registry Office exactly thirty years ago, after three months' courtship. He was aghast when he was first made aware of the marriage by a newspaper paragraph. Raging with wrath, he sent for his son, poured torrents of reproach and denunciation on his head, and finally demanded that the bridegroom should separate immediately from his wife and go abroad. If not, the Earl washed his hands of him--disowned him entirely.

It was a powerful weapon he used, for at that time the Viscount was entirely dependent on his father. He was only twenty--a few months younger than his wife--and possessed no private means whatever. In fact he had not finished his education, his father, at the time of the marriage, having arranged to send him for a tour abroad with a tutor.

His plight was painful and pitiful. The few days' honeymoon was simply a prolonged, bitter struggle between the Viscount's feeling of love and duty towards the girl he had married and his father's rigid demands.

Belle Bilton, who was still fulfilling her engagements, implored her husband not to leave her. But the Viscount was forced to bow to the family storm, and nine days after the wedding he started for the other side of the world.

It was a terrible blow to the new Lady Dunlo. The story of her romantic marriage into the peerage had been the sensation of London for days, and then came this compulsory desertion by her husband.

What did it mean? the public were asking. Ugly stories and rumours began to get afloat, fostered by the grim, unrelenting attitude of the Earl. He had made his plans. He should not only never be admitted into the Clancarty family, but that, by hook or by crook, she should be legally and irrevocably separated from his son, who, he asserted, had been tricked into the marriage by a scheming adventuress with the sole idea of exploiting him and milking him of his money.

In this, however, Lord Clancarty, as we shall see, did Belle Bilton a rank injustice.

To understand his bitter attitude, however, we must lift the veil a little from Belle Bilton's early life. His lordship might have forgiven, as he is reported to have said at the time, her lowly origin. He would have overlooked the fact that from childhood she had appeared, with her sister Florence, in the choruses of plays and pantomimes, and that she and her sister ultimately became the toast of the young "bloods" of the sporting and music-hall world through their beauty and talents as singers and dancers.

But he contended that there was a scandalous chapter in her life. It was a chapter, he alleged, in which a man, on whom Belle Bilton had first bestowed her love and affection, proved a scoundrel and a deceiver.

It was said that the look of sadness, which added so much to the distracting beauty of Belle Bilton--beauty which made level-headed, sober-minded men rave about her charms--was not natural, but the haunting look of tragedy caused by the man who deceived her.

Be that as it may, Belle Bilton tried to put him out of her life. She sought consolation in the society of her friends, and particularly that of a noted financier, who, later, was cited as co-respondent in the divorce case which the Earl forced his son to bring against his wife. This man wanted to marry Belle when she discovered the treachery of the man who had abused her love. But she refused. She told him frankly that she did not love him and preferred him to be, as he undoubtedly was, her sincere and true friend.

The fact, however, that she accepted certain gifts and monetary aid from the financier led to scandalous gossip, and her private affairs got much undesirable publicity when a case of forgery came to light, brought about by her endeavours to help her former lover. Having employed him on several occasions to cash cheques made payable to her by her friends, he became familiar with the handwriting of both parties. Getting into low water, he forged a couple of cheques for £500 and £800, purporting to be drawn by the financier and endorsed by Belle Bilton, and the subsequent criminal proceedings revealed the unconventional relationship between the two.

It was a painful chapter in the life of the beautiful artiste, and afforded the Earl of Clancarty an excuse for the vindictiveness with which he ultimately pursued her. And it explains, although one doubts the wisdom of the step, why Belle, after Lord Dunlo had deserted her, turned to the financier for help and advice. It was unwise, because no sooner had the Earl got rid of his son than he began to have Belle Bilton shadowed, hoping to get sufficient evidence to bring about a divorce. His methods were thorough, so thorough, indeed, that Belle for forced to leave her lodgings because of her notoriety and the fact that other lodgers objected to living in a house so constantly shadowed.

To add to her troubles, the man who had already blackened her life, returned to persecute her, and at last she took refuge in a house in St. John's Wood, which the financier placed at her disposal.

It was indiscreet, but natural under the circumstances. For it must be remembered that her husband could not make provision for her, and she was dependent entirely upon her profession, which at that time brought her in about £10 or £15 a week. She had no home of her own, and so lived with her sister in the house at St. John's Wood, making no secret of her friendship with the financier, and dining and supping with him in public.

The arrangement, however, gave the Earl of Clancarty his opportunity. His son heard rumours which led him to write:

"Don't go too much about with W. People will talk; not that I care, for I trust you with all my heart and soul." "All bosh," he replied, when he heard that steps were being taken to get the marriage annulled. Such pressure, however, was brought to bear on Lord Dunlo that ultimately he signed the petition for divorce. Tremendous influences must have been at work to induce him to take this step, for his letters showed how much he was in love with his wife.

"Now, Belle," he once wrote, "I don't believe one word of it. You know how every person talks whenever they get the chance. Belle, I love you dearly."

Queen Alexandra's Belief. When the case came before the Court, he frankly acknowledged that he did not believe the charges against his wife, and made it evident that he had signed the petition against his will. And the result was a triumphant vindication of the honour of the woman whom he had sworn to cherish. She was judged guiltless of the charges brought against her. The methods of Lord Clancarty were condemned, and the curtain fell on the triumphant fight for the name and title in the peerage to which the daughter of the Woolwich recruiting sergeant, and the pantomime chorus girl, was justly entitled.

The sequel proves that Belle Bilton was actuated in what she did, not by greed but by love for the Viscount she had secretly married. Her whole life might have been wrecked--but she forgave. The fourth Earl never forgave her, and he died, less than twelve months after the momentous trial, still embittered against the beautiful artiste who had married his son. She was appearing at Plymouth when the news was brought to her of his death, on May 20th, 1891. Tired of theatrical life, she left the stage, and joined her husband and almost immediately took up her residence at Garbally Park, Ballinasloe, the family seat in County Galway, where her beauty and charm endeared her to the hearts of her husband's tenantry.

For thirteen years Belle Bilton lived a happy and contented life with her husband proving herself a model wife and endearing herself to all with whom she came into contact. Then disease brought about a final separation. Cancer killed the fortunate who had suffered such slings of fortune. But she died happy in the fact that, among hundreds of other people, Queen Alexandra always believed in the honour of the "Pride of the London Hall."

Up to Tucker's.

A VISITOR FROM LOWER ISLAND COVE ARRIVES.

Sarah Jane Shaw, an old friend of Mrs. Tucker's, from Lower Island Cove, paid us a visit Friday night. All the gang were present when Sarah Jane came in and gave her a hearty welcome. Mrs. Tucker put on the kettle and dispatched the Cate Man to purchase Soda Biscuits and Jam. Mrs. Tucker believes that Soda Biscuits and Jam should always adorn the table when a visitor arrives. In less than no time Mrs. Tucker had a snoring cup of tea made, and the table when decorated, would remind you of Sergeant Smith's in its palmy days. We all hauled in to the feed—The "Cute Man," Delaney, Tucker—and myself, not forgetting Sarah Jane. The "Cute Man" paid great attention to Sarah Jane, who by the way is on the look out, and is one of those women known to possess a snug bank account. She is a great talker and in that respect differs from most of her sex. As she munged the Soda crackers, she praised the hospitality of Mrs. Tucker, and asked her how she managed to be ever and always in such good humour.

Mrs. Tucker said that that was easily explained. I am contented with my lot says Mrs. Tucker, and the reason why so many people in the world are discontented and unhappy is, they are always reaching out to grasp things that will never come within their reach. They are, says Mrs. Tucker, continually asking those who can buy and sell them. They get away from life long friends and get nowhere. Sarah Jane said there was a great deal of sound philosophy in what Mrs. Tucker said. She noticed people in the city who came from her place who were happy as larks in Lower Island Cove, but now, since their migration were undergoing miseries brought on in trying to be grand. Sarah Jane says nothing is more nonsensical than that, for we have only a short time to live, and 'tis no use spending that time trying to be what you are not. You don't impress any sensible people with your importance by acting the fool, on the contrary you only succeed in making a laughing-stock of yourself.

Most people, says Sarah Jane, come to the city from the outports thinking that the city folks are living in a Paradise. They arrive and spend the remainder of their days deploring the false step that they made. In the outports they have their own house, their hens and their goat, while here they live on the mercy of a landlord, pay a dollar and twenty for a dozen eggs, and drink condensed milk, if they are fortunate enough to scrape up money enough to buy it.

Delaney changed the tune of the conversation by asking Sarah Jane what they were going to do in Lower Island Cove this summer as regards the curing of fish. Sarah Jane said she didn't know, but she supposed 'twould be the same old ding dong. You know, says Sarah Jane, there is not sufficient encouragement for the man who pays attention to the making his fish. He sees the careless fisherman get as much for his fish as the careful one, loses heart and becomes careless too in the end. Of course, says Sarah Jane, we will wake up some rainy morning to find that our markets are gone and then we will all blame it on the Government.

Tucker suggested to Sarah Jane that when she'd go home that she call a public meeting and explain to the fishermen what they are up against. To tell them that now the war is over we are going to have great competition in the markets of the world, and if our fish is not put up in first class condition we cannot expect to hold our own. Tucker says every class of food to-day requires to be put up more attractively than heretofore. In our own country this is plumb evident to a man with half an eye. We would not think of eating what we ate years ago. Improvements can be noticed on all sides, and if we want to hold our place in the procession we have to step out lively.

The discussion became so interesting that Sarah Jane swallowed five cups of tea without knowing it, and Mrs. Tucker smiled when Sarah Jane passed her cup and said, "I think I'll try another cup if you don't mind."

TIM SHANNAHAN.

The World's Press.

New York Commercial: Our manners should begin and end with the office boy. They should extend to telephone conversation as well as written communications. Politeness to the boss is a foregone conclusion—to the porter it is the genuine mark of the bred-in-the-bone gentleman.

Minneapolis Daily News: Not much can be expected of Germany or any other nation that has the armed revolution habit. When it involves civil war it is a bad habit that means nothing but delay in achieving satisfactory government. Germany is no stronger because its reactionaries, junkers and pan-Germans have grabbed control at the point of the gun.

Liverpool Post: Mlle. Marie Prodhon, who has been appointed director of the Bank of Geneva, will sign the notes and scrip issued by that bank. She is only twenty-eight years of age. She proved herself an excellent financier during the war, and is the first woman in Europe to hold such an important position. There are now two judges, nine barristers, three engineers and a number of university professors and doctors of the fair sex in Switzerland.

London Daily Express: Those were good days when the system of parliamentary "franking" of letters, to which I alluded the other day, flourished. An M.P. of the eighteenth century franked a pack of hounds from Yorkshire to Sussex, and in the United States they did fairly well out of the system before the parcel post was introduced there. In one year, according to an American Postmaster-General, £4,000,000 worth of postage was lost to the Exchequer through this privilege of Congressmen; and not so very long ago a Southern representative in Congress, charged by an opponent with franking the family washing to his home town—where the laundry charges were lower than in Washington—had to admit the soft impeachment.

London Morning Post: Some names seem predestined. The trouble between the United States and Mexico over the ill-treatment of a Mr. Jenkins recalls how an outrage—real or alleged—on an English merchant captain of that name, led, in 1733, to a war between that country and Spain. The Spanish authorities in South America were said to have boarded Jenkins's ship and led, in 1733, to a war between that country and Spain. The Spanish authorities in South America were said to have boarded Jenkins's ship and led, in 1733, to a war between that country and Spain. The Spanish authorities in South America were said to have boarded Jenkins's ship and led, in 1733, to a war between that country and Spain.

London Daily Telegraph: Nothing could be more mischievous than to indulge in futile and angry scolding of the Conference because it has not accomplished more. The only occasion in history when Allied Conferences have been expeditious in drawing up terms of peace have been when one or other of the Allies was in a position—and had the will—to impose his terms upon the rest by reason of the number of bayonets at his command. Is that what these ill-tempered critics of the Conference would have wished to see, either in Paris or London? Of course it is not. Those who are so eager to censure the British Government talk as if the settlement rested in their hands alone. But it is an Allied settlement, and opinions differ. Facts are read differently. Even when conclusions have been reached, some of the parties have desired revision.

Prison for Profiteers.

Greed Dealers Are Summarily Dealt With in Great Britain.

That profiteering is meeting with its just deserts in Great Britain is evident from reports that have just come to light regarding the punishment that has been meted out to those who have been making unwarranted profits of the poor, long-suffering public. Prison terms and heavy fines follow the conviction of dealers who seek to fatten off the people. It has just been disclosed that 7,350 offenders have been prosecuted throughout the British Isles and of those 1,320 have been convicted. Fines aggregating $35,000 have been imposed upon the guilty ones. Local tribunals to which complaints against dealers are submitted have been established, also appeal tribunals in specified areas in England, Scotland and Wales. In addition central committees have been formed to investigate supposed trusts or monopolies, which may be manipulating wholesale prices. This has been done under the Profiteering Act.

Membership of the local tribunals is fixed at from 7 to 25, two of whom must be women. All complaints are heard in public, except in special cases, when, under authority of the Board of Trade, proceedings may be in private. Books or documents, produced at private hearings are to be treated as confidential if the persons producing them so desire. Labor is represented on the local tribunals and on the central committees.

Local tribunals have been empowered to investigate all claims brought before them and, if the allegations of excessive charges are established, to institute proceedings against the seller before a court of summary jurisdiction where upon conviction, fines of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for terms not to exceed three months, or both, may be imposed.

Questions before local tribunals are decided by a majority of the members present and voting. Any local tribunal, other than a decision to take proceedings before a court of summary jurisdiction, may appeal to the appeal tribunal for the area in which the local tribunal is operating. The institution of court proceedings is not the only function of the local tribunals—they may dismiss the complaint entirely, declare the price which would yield a reasonable profit on the article in question, or require the seller to repay to the complainant any amount paid

Local tribunals all over England have lists of complaints for investigation. The articles range from snuffboxes at 36 cents a yard to boot-laces at 25 cents a pair; from enamelled saucepans at $1.45 to spoons of cotton at 14 cents; a Westminster committee has been called on to investigate a charge of $125 for a woman's hat, another of $30 for a coat and skirt, and a charge of 3 cents for a breakfast roll.

Produce and Provisions.

(From the Trade Review.)

CODFISH.—The total shipments from St. John's this week were very small and amounted to only 8,442 quintals. From outports four vessels with cargoes totalling 12,546 qtls. are reported to have sailed, making a grand total of 20,988 qtls. Stocks are getting low in the city and added to that 1919 fish in the outports will total up to about 360,000 qtls. for the whole of the Dominion. This is only an average holding for this time of the year and with Brazil in such good condition, will easily be all cleaned out by the month of June. We have nothing in the way of a report from Oporto since March 1st. Cables are not working. Local prices are unchanged and there is very little buying No. 1 hard cured shore $11.50. Labrador $8.50 to $9.00. Merchants state they are going to curtail on supplies for the fishery.

COD OIL.—St. John's shipments to the foreign market this week were 5,655 gallons. The price, $305.00 per ton, in the local market is keeping firm and the demand is good, because oil is getting scarce and there will be no 1920 oil available in large quantities before July. The West coast fishery, owing to ice hanging about in March, did not prove the success that was expected, and there will be therefore a big shortage of common refined oil in that quarter.

COD LIVER OIL.—There were very few local transactions this week. The price holds at from two to two and a half cents, which will be about the opening rate for new East Coast oil. The shipments to foreign markets this week were only 4,125 gallons. What is here in the hands of two or three exporters, and they need be in no hurry to sell, as there is every reason to believe that the price of Cod Liver Oil will be well sustained the coming year. Oil is now right up to the reputation of the Norwegian.

HERRING.—The Notre Dame total pack to come forward in May, according to Mr. Coyell, who was engaged in Herring inspection there the past winter, and who returned to St. John's the first of February, is 11,000 barrels. There are 3,000 barrels of Scotch Pack Springdale and vicinity. Of the total of 11,000 barrels all over the bay, 1,400 are split herring and 9,600 are Scotch pack. The fishermen were paid $2.00 to $3.50 from this. The price of Scotch pack here today is $12.00 to $14.00 and splits $10.00 to $5.00.

BEEF.—There is a general disinclination on the part of importers to bring in large stocks of beef just now present prices. Owing to the uncertainty of the future of the markets in the United States, beef has been selling off for some time and dealers think that this process will go on to still further decline. To-day's quotations show beef in some grades to be $10.00 lower per barrel than the highest point reached last season. There are some dealers who believe that beef cannot go much lower this season in view of the sustained prices of all other food products, cost of production and general high wages. Prices here to-day run from $30.00 to $40.00 according to quality.

PORK.—During this week quotations on pork appeared to indicate a steadiness in New York and Chicago that would suggest the likelihood of a stop in the decline in prices for the spring months. Local demand is extremely quiet. Necessity purchases, however, are being made by dealers to fill urgent demands for the spring trade only. Importers are not disposed to buy beyond these requirements till there is well-grounded evidence that the decline going on the past four months has reached its limit. For the present the wholesale price of Mess and Fat Back is $51.00, Short Mess, $59.00, Family, $56.50 per barrel. There is no Ham Butt.

FLOUR.—There is no appreciable change in the flour market this week. The reports of the growing winter wheat crop in the United States are poor, and it is almost certain now that the crop will be short. The St. John's prices are $17.00 per barrel for leading brands, and $15.50 to 16.50 for other grades. These prices are considerably lower than the present cost of importation, and as conditions look to-day flour will be from one to one and a half dollars dearer in May.

SUGAR.—The market is very strong this week in New York, but the local price still holds at 20c. for white American granulated. Yellow sugar is 17c. to 18c. per pound. The stocks in the city are again running low, but from this time forward the improved freighting facilities will give a more ample supply. It is the opinion of those who make sugar a special line, that prices will keep high all the spring and summer, and that we may see 25c. sugar next fall.

MOLASSES.—A cable from Barbados Tuesday last to a large importer of Molasses in the city was to the effect that an advance of 14c. a gallon had taken place there. This will make new molasses price here about $1.70 per gallon for Fancy, and $1.55 for Choice, when a new crop arrives here next month. There is a very small stock held in town and what there is is held by two or three firms.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—In Friday's issue of your paper I noticed an announcement that Irwin's Farm was in the market. As every East Ender knows, this delightful property is situated on the south bank of Long Pond and adjoins the demesne of Shannon Munn Orphanage. My object in craving space in your columns is to point out the opportunity that now presents itself for some benefactor to follow the lead set by Sir Edgar Bowring, and present the Irwin Farm as a Park to the East End residents of our City.

For years and years past, thanks to the generosity of Mr. Irwin, his property was always open to the public, and a grateful public availed themselves of his generosity, and every holiday, half holiday, and every fine afternoon, hundreds of East End people picnicked in the spacious woods at Irwin's farm. Without any artificial addition Irwin's Farm is already a Park of great beauty. The woods may be said to be primeval and as they cover about twenty acres, it will readily be seen that there is sufficient room for picnics and parties of all kinds. The Farm is bounded for really its whole length by Long Pond, and some of the choicest bathing spots on that beautiful lake are available from it.

Trout, varying in size from one half to seven pounds, abound in this pond, and many a pleasurable afternoon has been spent on its banks by devoted followers of the gentle Isaac.

How the East Enders will miss the privilege of picnicking in these woods, in the event of the next owner not being so generous as Mr. Irwin.

The hour they say always produces the man, and let us hope that Sir Edgar Bowring's example will be followed by some of our successful business men, who will earn the undying regard of his native city, by presenting them for all time with the Irwin Property as an East End Park.

On this property is also situated a very valuable sand deposit that contractors and builders consider much superior to the imported article. From this source a sufficient income could be annually raised, which would defray the expenses of its upkeep as a Park.

I have written at length, Mr. Editor, and I bespeak your patience. Since boyhood days I have wandered at will through Irwin's Grove, and to be denied that privilege is a thought not to be dwelt upon. Like the writer thousands of others are in the same frame of mind, and its on behalf of these people as well as of myself that I send these lines forth.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, in anticipation,

I am,
Yours sincerely,
WALTONIAN.

Young-Adams Company

Given Flattering Reception at Queen Square Theatre—"Little Peggy O'Moore" the Offering.

(St. John, N.B. Paper.)

The Queen Square Theatre was filled to capacity last evening when "Little Peggy O'Moore" was again presented by the Young-Adams Company. The performance proved a delightful one and was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. Mr. Young and Miss Adams seem to have lost none of their old popularity and their appearance was greeted by hearty applause.

The play is circled around the forthcoming mayoralty election, the present mayor being supposed to hold office through the efforts of a machine which controls the vote in the poorer section of the city and unscrupulous methods are used to oust him from office. He is defeated at the polls but it is shown later that the attacks of the opposition were dishonest and he is finally appointed to the senate.

Mr. Young, as Daniel Murphy, the mayor, played the role splendidly, and he was ably supported by the other members of the cast.

Miss Marjorie Adams, as his Irish ward, was a general favorite and was well received.

Laid to Rest.

Ex-Bugler Patrick Wakeham of the C. C. C. was laid to rest yesterday at Mt. Carmel. A guard of honor from the Corps, under Sgt. Major Clancey, attended. Majors O'Grady and Murphy and Capt. Clare and McGrath, also paraded. At the Cathedral the services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Greene.

The funeral of the late Thomas Thorburn took place yesterday afternoon and was attended by a large number of citizens including the Knights of Columbus of which body deceased was a member. At the Cathedral the Prayers for the Dead were recited by Rev. Dr. Green and interment was at Belvidere Cemetery.

When the conductor of a car stalled and left overnight on the Shrewsbury (Mass.) line returned to it in the morning he found that the car had been run up and down on the stretch of track that was open, by using wrenches on the controllers, so that the motors were burned out, and that 1,200 fares had been rung up on the conductor's list.

Strength of the East.

Francis Yeats-Brown, the British cavalry officer who was "caught by the Turks" and who has written a most interesting book under that title descriptive of his adventures, is not enamored of the Turkish capital, in the pursuit of which he lurked for some time in the guise of an out-of-work Hungarian artisan. "Constantinople," he says, "or at least that portion of it which lies outside the fashionable shopping area affected by tourists, is unkempt and filthy to an unbelievable degree.

"See Naples and die," says the Neapolitans. I say, "Smell Constantinople—same result."
