

The Polling on Thursday.

Of the six elections held on Thursday, the Liberals have gained South Bruce, which elected Mr. Blake by an immense majority—the largest yet recorded for any member during this election. West York is retained by the Reformers, and East Middlesex and South Norfolk have gone Conservative, as they did at the election of 1867.

West Middlesex.

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie having been elected to the Dominion Parliament has resigned his seat in the Ontario Assembly. The nomination of a member to fill his place will take place at the village of Mount Brydges, on Tuesday, the 10th September, and the polling, should there be a contest, on the 17th.

ELECTION NEWS.

Sir Francis Hincks is reported to have lately said, in rather a public manner, to a certain M. P. of undeniable distinction, that he believed Sir John would not live more than two years longer, and that in the event of his death, he knew of no more likely or better fitted to take the Premiership than himself (Sir Francis.)

Mr. L. A. Jette, member elect for Montreal East, is a true prophet. On the eve of his election, speaking of his opponent, he said Sir George Cartier had lost his popularity, according to his best friends and canvassers. He did not reckon on his popularity to get elected this time, but on two methods—one was by help of money, and the other by pressure, causing tenants to be evicted when they would not vote for him. He believed from what he learned from the canvassers, that he (Mr. Jette) would have a majority of 1,200 on the day of the election.

The Government organs resent the idea that British Columbia and Manitoba can be looked upon as bought up Provinces. Yet before any elections have been held in those Provinces, they count their whole ten members on Sir John's side as confidently as if they had them in hand. It does not speak much for the independence of a people when their political action can be thus catalogued and appraised in advance.

The correct returns of the North Wentworth election are as follows:—Dundas town, Bain 140, McKechnie 209; East Flamboro, Bain 229, McKechnie 337; West Flamboro, Bain 270, McKechnie 253; Beverley, Bain 506, McKechnie 241; Bain's majority 105. At the general election in 1867, the vote stood Brown 1094, McMonies 1153; majority for McMonies 61.

The Reformers of Huron and Perth intend to hold a grand demonstration in Seaforth on or about the 17th of September. The demonstration is intended to celebrate the victories gained by Mr. M. C. Cameron in South Huron, and Mr. Trow in South Perth, particularly also that of Mr. Horton in Centre Huron.

Its a little strange that nearly all the members of the "Chancery Brigade" of whom we have heard and seen so much in Ministerial papers during the last five years, are elected to Parliament. They are as follows:—Hon. E. Blake, M. P., Premier of Ontario; Hon. A. Crooks, M. P. P., Attorney General; Jas. D. Edgar, M. P. for Monck; Jas. Bethune, M. P. P. for Stormont; Thos. Hodgins, M. P. P. for West Elgin; and D. Blain, elected M. P. for West York.

Mr. Young held a mass meeting in Montreal the night before his election, when one of the speakers affirmed that a telegram had been received from Guelph, the name of the sender not being given, stating that Mr. Witton favoured Mr. Young as the workingman's candidate. A large poster containing the following was extensively got up:—

GUELPH, Aug. 27th, 1872.

"To Dunbar Brown. Saw Mr. Witton, member of Parliament for Hamilton to-day. Said he declined being made a cat's-paw of by Drummond to address the workingmen of Montreal. He recommended Mr. Young as a true friend of the workingman. Make what use of this you like."

The statement was contradicted next morning on the strength of the following telegram received from Mr. Witton himself:—

HAMILTON, Aug. 28.

"The statement referred to in your telegram to Mr. McCulloch is false—entirely false; not a shadow of truth in it. I am heart and soul in favour of the election of Mr. Drummond." It is said that Sir Geo. E. Cartier has declared his intention not to run for another constituency.

The Reform electors of Tara and vicinity in North Bruce held a meeting on Wednesday evening to congratulate each other over the result of the election in that Riding. Mr. Gillies, the member elect, spoke. He assured them of his conviction that the interests of the country demanded a change in the Administration, and his settled purpose to do all in his power to bring about that event.

We regret to say that Mr. John Hilliard Cameron has been elected for Cardwell. Speaking of his election there the Globe says:—"Mr. Cameron has succeeded in bribing himself into Cardwell. Take the amounts paid to Harris and Ferguson and the enormous sum lavished upon the electors on Thursday, and add them to the amount already expended by Mr. Cameron in Peel, and he is unquestionably the most expensive member of the New House. Cardwell is a Conservative county, and Mr. Bolton has every reason to congratulate himself on the good run he has made. Nothing but money defeated him."

The total Reform gains in Ontario up to the present are 20. The list now stands:—Opposition 49, Government 32, Independent 3.

CHAPTER XV.

"Do you know that red-haired man inside?" inquired George, with sudden abruptness.

"Not a bit on me, sir."

"No! why, you seemed so struck all of a heap, seeing him at the inn door that I fancied you knew him."

"I saw him once afore—only once—and that is nigh twenty years ago; but his figure had in such an one isn't likely to forget, and I remember him in a moment. And you say true, sir—I was brought up all of a heap. 'Twas in reason that I should, for the business that brought him to my sight the first time was of a kind that causes a man not to be forgotten."

"Ah, indeed; and may I ask what that business was?"

"Well, sir, I'll tell you. I hadn't got no call to hide it now. The business, sir, was kidnapping."

"Kidnapping!" echoed George, very much astonished.

"Aye, sir, kidnapping. At that time I sailed aboard a ship that traded between Aberdeen and the colonies, and you may have heard, sir, that sometimes boys and girls were secretly put on board ship, and carried away abroad, where they were sold as slaves to the planters."

"I have, indeed, heard that at one time such an infamous traffic was carried on, but"—and here George pointed downward—"you don't mean to say that this man was engaged in it?"

"I am not going to say that he was a regular hand at it, but, as sure as my name is Tom Steivright, he did once ship off a gal in that there way."

"A gal!" said George, more and more amazed.

"Ay, sir, a young negro girl of 18 or so. I said it was nigh twenty years ago, but now that I come to think on it, it isn't so much by two or three years. Our ship was at Aberdeen at the time, and we were just about to sail for the West Indies. The night before when we had got everything ready to sail with the morning tide, there comes a land craft of a wagon alongside the wharf, and a voice hallooed out for the captain. I was on deck at the time, and, in answer to the hail, went to the side and looked at the wagon. It had a covered deck like a ship's awning, only round and taut. The man that hailed was sitting up aloft and when I went forward he snatched again for the captain. It was the summer time, and nothing like dark, so I was able to have a good look of him. The word was passed for the captain to come up, and when he came he stepped on to the wharf, and he and the man talked together for more than five minutes. At the end of the confab, the captain called on me, and by the time I crossed the ship's side the man had come down and was busy opening a hatch in the rear, out of which he took a black negro gal, which the captain ordered me to take and put below in the after-store-room. I knew then that the business was kidnapping, though I could not think how it was a nigger he was shipping off. Poor thing she lay quiet, and never said a word, but her eyes were full of grief and terror; and as I carried her down the companion-way she began to sob, and her sobs grew worse and worse till I left her lying on the floor of the store-room, crying as if her heart would break. By the time I got back to the deck, the captain was below again, and the man and the wagon were away."

"And are you perfectly certain that the man who brought the girl is the man below us?" asked George.

"I'm dead sure on't, sir. No doubt he is well on for twenty year older, and I have never seen him since, but when I clapped eyes on him at the door of the inn, I knowed him again in a moment."

"And the girl?" said George eagerly.

"Did you learn anything about her, or what became of her?"

"When we got clear out to sea she was let out o' the store-room, and had the run o' the ship. She was as clever and handy a gal as could be; and afters that, when she had got over the worst of her grief, she became quite merry, and made herself so useful that when the cook took ill she did his work better nor he could do himself. I was the one as she took most, on account, it may be, o' the kind words I spoke to her at times, for I felt for her, and had a notion that she had been done wrong to by the man who shipped her."

"And did she tell you how she came into his hands, and why he got rid of her in that way?" inquired George, who felt a strong interest in the sailor's narrative.

"Well," replied the sailor, "she and I talked a good deal first and last; but I could not make much of her broken lingo, and this and the number of years that's come and gone since, has made me forget what she told me. But I made out, at any rate, that she had come from Jamaica in search of her former mistress, and had not found her; for just as she got to the house where she was, she came into the hands of that man, who had been her master's overseer in Jamaica, and he had carried her off once and was sending her back to bondage."

"Then, according to that account," observed George, "this man was once the overseer on a Jamaica plantation?"

"I haven't a bit o' doubt of it," returned the sailor. "Millie didn't look like a gal that fibbed. I could believe every word she said."

"I wonder who he is, and what he is now," was George's audible murmur.

"Ay, sir; but that is more nor I can tell you, seeing as how I never saw or heard of him since. As for the gal, she had better luck nor he meant, for she made herself so useful afore the end o' the voyage that the captain got a berth for her as under stewardess on board a South American clipper; and last time I came across her, which was eight years ago, she was full stewardess in a big steamer on the Hudson. The sight o' me a'most made her crazy with delight, and she gave me the best glass o' grog ever I tasted. A good-looking gal she had grown to be too; and her broken lingo was mended a good piece. Had she talked about her former history then, I could have made it out better, but that wasn't brought up—only the things that happened on the voyage ten years afore."

Long and deeply did George muse on the sailor's narrative, and the more he mused on it the more he was puzzled and perplexed in his ideas about the red-haired man with the hook nose. The cross lights cast upon him by the sailor and by Dr. Manby were partly confusing and partly illuminating. His interest for George lay in his connection with the maniac, as shown by his periodic visits to the asylum. What could these visits mean? What could be his purpose? If George's impression was correct, this child of a coming was to learn what prospect there was of Waller's reason being restored, and yet that was a result which he did not seem to wish for.

The Largest of any Company in the World.
This Society has led the van in the Insurance world for many years; it has introduced more improvements and given greater impetus to the business than any Life Company in the United States, and is deserving in this respect of the praise and gratitude of the community.

There are many reasons for selecting the Equitable Life Assurance Society.
1st—No company has such large annual transactions, thereby infusing into its business a constant accession of fresh and selected lives which is one of the greatest elements of strength.
2nd—Liberality in dealing with all claims: observing at the same time, a due regard to the interests of its present large body of policy-holders by a firm resistance to any attempt at imposition.
3rd—Perfect organization in every department, which renders official information easily attainable and secures a complete administration of its affairs.
4th—Being one of the most progressive in situations of its kind in the world, it is ever prepared to seize at once upon all the improvements in the business that science can suggest.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society issues every recognized form of policy, and especially the WOMEN'S SAVINGS FUND INSURANCE which the Company introduced. This new plan has become very popular, and is obtaining among all who are insured under its advantages which arise from the profits of the business, without in any respect infringing upon the normal results for which Life Insurance was first instituted.

The EQUITABLE feels that it has the strongest claims upon public confidence. Under the management that distinguishes it and the principles by which it is guided, perfect security is given for the future, than which no greater inducement can be held out to all who wish to insure their lives.

Further information regarding the different kinds of Policies issued by the Society can readily be obtained at
