and its crushing effect upon his father's plans. Then, too, his father's grief was cutting him to the heart. & It touched him to the quick; it gripped his conscience with a burning vise. He had come north on his father's business, although not primarily for this deep water harbor scheme, of which he had known little or nothing, and now he was masquerading under a false name and title for his own pleasure. He must perforce be a helpless onlooker while enemies forged a shaft out of parental love and with it pierced the heart and brought about the ruin of his dear old dad. It was unbearable, impossible, yet what could

What would happen when Bill Williams arrived? He, the hapless son, seemed to be in some way responsible for the whole wretched tangle, yet honor barred him from interposing a hand to prevent the catastrophe. Seek it where he would, there seemed no loophole of escape to be found. Perhaps if he could see Mr. Corrigan he could get advice; but, no, that gentleman had already declined to help him, telling him he must brazen it out on his own account. Brazen it out? Yes, but how? Brass counted for nothing now, for Mr. Renwyck held all the cards. Reason did point to one possible course -to bedge on the winning side and save what he could for his father out of the wreck, and at this po sibility the young man grasped as a drowning

The financier started. "Well," he parleyed, "that is rather a larger amount than I had thought of handling for you. Still, a promise is a promise. Write me your check, Croyland, and I'll bring out your stock certificates tomorrow evening."

The name "Croyland" came to Richard like a blow between the eyes. In his intense excitement he had almost forgotten that he was another man. He could not use the earl's name for this) purpose, of course, yet to sign Richard Williams to a check payable to Jacob Renwyck would be to confess all / As well wave a red flag in the factor of a furious buil. He opened a desk drawer and produced a pad of blank forms. "These are foreign drafts. Draw on your bankers at sight, and I will negotiate the paper through my own account and let you know the amount of exchange. You see," he laughed. "I am forcing you into a fortune, as it were. Really, I ought to charge you a commission."

"Do you mean that?" a-ked Richard, rising to his feet.

"Mr. Renwyck," he said in a clear, level tone which was now free from any deception, a brilliant idea coming to him, the more acceptable in that it was strictly true, "you are right. There are several reasons which we need not discuss. I shall mention one which is sufficient, and that is this: You are about to take advantage of a father's love for his son, which has removed an antagonist from the field. His eigar went out and was held unheeded between his silent lips till at last he dropped it into a silver ash tray and, rising, sighed. "Something surprising there. I don't guite understand. Who would have thought he would have taken it that way? I wonder if that was his real reason. I don't see that I'm to blame. I didn't run over the boy. Well, I'd be a fool not to take advantage of his father's absence. Besides, what difference does it make? He was a goner anyway. It's a life and death struggle between us. We used to be good friends. Is the Englishman right? 1 wish that-here, here, this won't do! I must go to bed at once. I can't make out that Lord Croyland. Seems as if I'd met him-er-what could be the matter?"

The millionaire paced the floor of his library for a quarter of an hour, then set his burglar alarms and went to

Richard was equally uneasy. He looked at the little pile of Croyland mail that had accumulated, including several telegrams, which of course be had not opened, and decided to take it to the hospital the first thing tomorrow. It was criminal for him to have neglected it and his friend as well. And there were other things he would do on the morrow.

CHAPTER XV. HE following day was an eventful one for the various members of the Renwyck household. Mr. Renwyck went earlier than usual to the city and in spite of a somewhat uneasy conscience worked ceaselessly to the furtherance of his harbor scheme. His triggers were set, and he only waited now for the trap to spring and catch Bill Williams in its fall and incidentally the Peace and Good Will gullibility-no. Realty company. Mr. Michael Corrigan was also quite busy during the leave of absence had expired or beday, though his occupation was a cause he was angry at the residents or much in demand and gives satisfacpleasant one. "Fruit-a-tives" Promptly Cured Him After Doctors Had Failed To Give Relief.

CHARLES BARRETT, Esc.

Harbor au Bouche, Antigonish Co., N.S., March 24, 1909. "I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the great benefit I received from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered from Biliousness and Dyspepsia for fifteen years and I consulted physicians and took many kinds of ordinary medicine, but got no relief. I was in miserable health all the time and nothing did me any good. I read the testimonial of Archibald McKechnie, of Ottawa, and I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives." I have taken a number of boxes of "Fruit-atives," but before I had taken one box

I felt better and now am entirely well. "I am thankful to be well after fifteen years suffering, and I am willing to have this statement published for the sake of other sufferers, and to them I strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives."

The number of her charges increased so rapidly that the police authorities decided to allow her 500 francs vearly. A few years more and it was decided to put all young prisoners in her charge. The result of this was the establishing of a refuge with Mother Ernestine at the head.

Here for a number of years she had 38 sisters working under her, and often the inmates in the refuge have numbered more than 500. These wo men are taught dressmaking, tailor ing, housewifery and gardening.

Miss Gertrude Bacon, of London, and Miss Spencer, of Highgate, are said to be the most accomplished women aeronauts in England. Woman Superintendent of Chicago Schools

Only a woman can make a successful school superintendent. This is the opinion, expressed modestly, of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools of Chicago, the second city of the country, and the first woman school superintendent in the world.

Sweet-faced at 64, and showing a marvellous amount of energy, this little gray-haired woman is an enthusiast. She would be remarkable as a woman alone aside from her ability

Mrs. Young does not see much difference between running the schools of Chicago and running the schools of Halifax. In both places conditions are a great deal the same.

Two Million Persons Watch Big Parade

Through streets ablaze with bunting and lined with the greatest crowd ever gathered in New York's thoroughfares, a parade of 20,000 men and fifty-four floats passed before the envoys of twenty-one nations participating in the Hudson-Fulton celebration. And in its passing, which occupied two hours, the epoch-making scenes of three centuries, in gigantic figures of wood, plaster, paint and tinsel, were reviewed.

From 110th street, along Central Park West, 59th street, and down Fifth avenue to Washington square, in the lower part of the city-the route of the parade and a distance of over five miles-it is estimated that more than two million people gathered. On roofs, towers, poles, at windows and from grand stands erected for almost the entire length of the route, the more fortunate thousands viewed the spectacle, while an enormous crowd surged against the police lines drawn at the carb.

As a parade it was as democratic as it was historic; as cosmopolitan as it was democrate, Mayor George B. McClellan and Herman Ridder. vice-president of the Hudson-Fulton celebration, headed the line and covered the entire distance afoot. There was no military show; no distinguished personages rode in vehicles; all with the exception of the platoons of policemen mounted on their shiny coated bay horses, were afoot.

A bit of confusion at the start of the parade put a number of the floats out of their order, so that in some instances the historical sequence was considerably upset, but the goodnatured crowd did not mind this. A number of the patriotic scenes were wildly cheered. Among them were where her train whirls her back to "Pulling down the Statue of George Englewood for a 7 o'clock dinner III."; "Publishing the Constitution;" "Storming of Stony Point:" "Capture of Andre;" and "Washington Taking the Oath of Office."
