News of the World

Was Rudyard Kipling sent to Vancouver by the Imperial Government to report upon the feeling of the people in British Columbia on the question of Asiatic and Hindoo immigration? This question is being asked in that city. Mr. Kipling while there asked countless questions on the subject, but never once indicated the object of his flying visit. Among the questions Mr. Kipling asked was how the people would receive a law which would permit Asiatic and Hindoo coolies to come into Canada for a stated period of years, work here and then be deported when the contracted time of service expired. This immigration plan has been used in some of Great Britain's colonies, notably South Africa. So far as can be learned, Mr. Kipling was told the people of British Columbia would never consent to such a scheme.

Canadian inland revenue returns for the month of September amounted to $1,335,837, an increase of $85,300 over the revenue accrued during September, 1906. The principal items of revenue during last month were: Spirits $552,267; malt, $114,139; tobacco, $282,191; cigars $102,552. The revenue from seizures was $338.

Henri Reyes, son of the President of the Central American Republic of Colombia, a student at Queens College, Kingston, was in the Police Court and was fined $10 and costs for misbehaving. A policeman found him throwing eggs on the walk in front of a restaurant. He was ordered to clean up the mess, but declined. He was arrested and fined.

An unusually well-informed correspondent, stationed in Madrid, who is in close touch with court news, and is not as a rule given to reckless statements, says that the greatest apprehensions are felt about the lungs of the King of Spain. Every effort, he says, has been made to conceal the truth, and, of course, the small formal official details will be used, although it is well known that they will convince no one. There can be no real reason for keeping the King's condition from the public. Fortunately, death is on the side of the young King and every possible care will be taken of him, so far as his own restless temperament will permit. But what leads special gravity to the King's case is, of course, the fact that it is inherited from a short-lived father. The small narrow chest, shallow complexion, and quick manner of the young King all tend to give physicians corroboratory impressions of the truth of what is now announced.

Alexander Dumas, who, eighteen months ago at Montreal attempted to take the life of Alphonse Desbordes by shooting him, is at last a free man. He was released from Longue Pointe Asylum on the order of the Attorney-General after being declared sane by two experts.

The long-waited criminal, Franz Kirsch whose daring and ingenuity render him the most remarkable thief and horse-breaker in Germany, has just been arrested at Hannover. Kirsch was notorious for the ambitious nature of his thefts and for the extraordinary skill of the coterie of accomplices whom he trained to assist in his raids, and whom he paid magnificently. He himself lived in the utmost luxury. So successful was he in simulating insanity when arrested that five times he was placed in a lunatic asylum, whence he always succeeded in escaping.

A sad accident occurred six miles north of Edmonston, when J. W. Cairney, farmer of this district, was kicked to death by a horse. Cairney was the owner of the stallion, and went into the stall to take the animal out. The horse bit him on the neck, throwing him down and standing on him until he was lifeless. Cairney came to this county about eighteen months ago from Fargo, N. D., and was engaged in farming in the district since that time. He leaves a wife and two small children, aged four and seven years respectively. The appointment of Messrs. Greenlee and Edward Esen, two Boers, to fill vacancies on the Transvaal Legislative Council, constitutes a deliberate violation of the constitution. The result is to give the Boers a majority on the Council, while the Labor element is not represented. The Transvaal Government now possesses absolute control of the destinies of this portion of British South Africa. The constitution was so drawn as apparently to safeguard British interests by placing them in the hands of the Legislative Council, but with the balance of power transferred to the Boers this advantage disappears.

A St. Petersburg telegram relates a terrible story of crimes which have just been discovered at Terekofski, in the government of Perm. For some years past a monk named Fedot has exercised a powerful attraction over the inhabitants of the neighborhood, especially women, by reason of his eloquent sermons. Women of all ages flocked to the hermitage which a rich merchant had built for Fedot in the midst of the forest near the town. A few days ago the wife of a young soldier who had gone to see the monk fell ill in her room, and the soldier proceeded to the hermitage, intending to force Fedot to disclose the woman's whereabouts. The monk was missing, and the soldier, who passed into the bedroom, saw a coffin lying upon the floor. Lifting the lid he was horrified to find in the dead body of his wife. In a cellar they found a number of other coffins lying side by side, and in each of them was the dead body of a woman. Up to the present all search for the missing monk has proven futile.

$100 Reward, $100. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh of the Bladder. It is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing her work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by all Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Saskatchewan Wheat Crop Short 8,000,000 Bushels. Montreal, Oct. 30.—Mr. Walter Osborne, who is engaged in the grain trade at Moosejaw and is here on his way through to England for the winter, says that as he came through Regina on the way east he had figures placed at his disposal by the government of Saskatchewan that indicated exactly what the position of the Province would be as compared with last year in the matter of grain production.

"There have been," he said in an interview at the Windsor, "nearly two million acres under cultivation and the government experts have calculated from the reports that have come in from over a thousand localities that the yield is 29,000,000 bushels. Last year the yield was 37,000,000 bushels, from 1,700,000 acres. The average crop is thus about fifteen bushels an acre instead of 22 bushels."

"On some of the fields the crop was so poor that the farmers did not think it worth the expense of harvesting. Yet when all is said more money will come into the pockets of the farmers than there did a year ago. For that reason I consider the condition of the Province satisfactory and business is sound. I cannot give you official figures for Manitoba and Alberta, but I think the Manitoba average will be pretty much the same as that of Saskatchewan. "That of Alberta, speaking generally will probably be found a little better."—Halifax Chronicle.

PULPWOOD AND ITS PROBLEMS. (J. S. Crute in Toronto Globe.)

Pulpwood cut on the Crown lands of Ontario, as previously explained, must be ground in this province. There is no restriction against the export of pulp, however, and United States mills may secure it, subject, of course, to the duties imposed by tariff of their own country. The idealist who claims that tariffs are unnatural things, a delusion and a snare, will find some interesting circumstances in support of his theories upon investigation of the pulpwood question.

At Fort Frances, for example, where has provided a mighty waterpower. An enormous expense, a plant is being installed and 50,000 horsepower will be generated there. The Rainy River, which actually provides a possible estimate of 100,000 horsepower, which will equip the amount of electrical energy to be placed in Western Ontario by the Hydro-Electric Commission. The damming of the falls at Fort Frances goes unmentioned largely by Minneapolis capitalists, who propose among other things to establish on the Canadian side of the river a pulp mill, and—note—the United States shore, a paper mill. In another sense, too, the restrictions here will operate peculiarly. The pulp manufactured in Canada will not be ground, dried and shipped to the United States in bundles, but will be forced across in liquid form by the hydraulic pressure to the United States paper mill, thus saving as the capitalists put it so plausibly, the cost of drying at the point of shipment and heavy freight charges. Would the economic conditions not be improved if the Canadian government said in so many words: "The pulp must not only be ground in Canada, but made into paper in this country!" Then would not the ingenious hydraulic pipe become unnecessary and both mills stand in their logical location—in the country which provides the material out of which the manufactured article is produced? No one thinks of depriving the United States of the pulp cut in this country. The only question at issue is, "Where are the mills to stand?"

On Wednesday the American news paper publishers will hold a special meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York city for the purpose of considering the scarcity of paper. Every member of the United Press Association has been urged to attend, as their interests are seriously menaced. This condition of affairs has been well known for some time among the Canadian publishers. It is the direct result of the tariff that taxing of the United States publishers may now sit down and contemplate the possibilities of devastation, "during which no thought was taken for the future."

ARTHUR G. BROWN PROPRIETOR

The situation in northern New England is little better, and United States enterprises have already bought up considerable areas of pulpwood lands in Canada. The present century, which has already revealed some of the possibilities of the great north, may speedily find its water powers driving the grinders and lighting the corridors of a hundred great pulp and paper mills.

A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers everywhere to give it without hesitation even to very young babies. The whole of some green leaves and tender stems of some green mountain shrub, furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It cures the cough, and heals the sore and sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Simply a restorative plant extract, that helps to heal soothing lungs. The Spaniards call this shrub which the Doctor uses, "The Sacred Herb." Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. Sold by all Dealers.

LORDS COVE.

The people of this place have been caused considerable inconvenience owing to the inefficiency of the Str. Viking. For some time after Mr. Owsie's death the Str. Viking was unable to carry passengers, on account of not being able to obtain a properly licensed engineer. After this difficulty was removed, she was unable to make regular trips owing to defects in the engine. On one occasion the engine refused to start, and the Henry F. Eaton while attempting to tow her to her destination, collided with her, and did her considerable damage. The Viking is at present undergoing repairs at St. Stephen and Capt. Guy Pennington is carrying the mail in the Beattie Archibald. The young people of Richardson, celebrated Halloween by having a cabbage supper. Some of the minors also had a party. There is a rumor that some of the fishermen had their boats seized for illegal fishing. Mr. Marvin Martin has sold his estate to Mr. Arch. Lambert, and will reside at Lebec in the future. Mr. Henry Bishop and family have returned home from Lebec, where they have been spending the summer. King Simpson arrived from St. Stephen Friday and returned home Monday. Some of the men are talking of leaving the place to seek their fortunes elsewhere. Bert Lambert has returned home on a short visit bringing her lady friend with her. The baptism of Beatie Lambert and Angus Hoffman took place last week.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidney curves go weak, then these organs always fail. Don't drag the stomach, and stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is simply makeshift. Get a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is prepared expressly for those weak inside nerves. Strengthen these nerves, build them up with Dr. Shoop's Restorative—tablets or liquid—and see how quickly relief will come. Free sample test sent on request by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Your health is surely worth this simple test. Sold by all Dealers.

Post Office With Receipts of 25c. Sometimes complaints are heard in and out of Parliament that the Post Office Department is not active enough in meeting the wants of the growing population of this country. The best answer to such charges is Canada where the receipts do not commence to pay the cost of maintenance has been long known, but that the Government maintained post offices at places where the revenue did not exceed half a dollar per annum, comes as a surprise to most people. Yet there are eight such cases noted in the annual report of the Postmaster General for 1907:

Table with 3 columns: Location, Revenue, Salary. Locations include Migusha West, Que., Second Westcock, N.B., Charlottetown, N.B., Becharie, Sask., Foxton, Man., Charlottetown, N.B., Reser Judique Chapel, Spring Point, Alberta.

Col. McLean's Reasons. Col. H. H. McLean, the nominee of the Liberals for the Counties of Queens, Sanbury, N. B., at the approaching election, gives among his reasons for entering politics the following: "The principles and policy of the Liberal party specially appeal to young men. They stand for progress, advancement of all interests that would be of benefit to Canada and the development of the natural resources of this great country."

"I have been asked why I should go into politics, that I have large business interests to look after and could I afford the necessary time that is required to carry out a successful campaign? I feel that the experience I have gained in connection with the large business interests that I have control of will be of great assistance to the people of Sanbury and Queens. I will trust this nomination as a retainer. You know when a lawyer takes a retainer he is bound in honor to do his utmost for his clients, consistent with honesty and fair dealing. "Another reason why I want to be in Parliament is that Canada is now taking a position among the nations of the world. Our country is larger in extent than any other in the world with the exception of Russia. Our population is growing in a marvellous manner, and the future of our country promises to place it in the front rank with the nations of the world. Canadians should be proud of the greatness of Canada, its extent of territory, its resources and its fitness for maintaining in comfort and prosperity a vast population. "Canada has enjoyed an almost miraculous growth, which is due not merely to its natural resources, with which God has endowed us as a people, but to the lofty spirit of statesmanship and a wise government given by the Liberal party under the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. I say and believe that Canada will be the greatest country in the world. It may be said that this is a dream, but it is a dream which is calculated to stimulate and inspire every one who cares for the future of the country. The policy of the Conservatives may be stated about as follows: "They do not know what they want and are bound to have it."

BLACKS HARBOR.

Daniel McQuade returned Friday, 25th from Jonsport, Me., where he has been employed by the Underwood Canning Co. Rev. J. F. Carson held the Mission here on Monday, Oct. 28th. Mrs. Dan Gillis has concluded a pleasant visit with her daughters, Mrs. Lewis Connors and Mrs. F. W. Connors and has returned to her home at Tignish, P. E. I. Rev. J. F. Carson baptised the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Connors on Monday. The little one received the name of Bernard Delmas. Miss May Connors who has for two years efficiently filled the position of Stenographer for Connors Bros. Ltd. has severed her connection with that firm and left Thursday for St. John followed by the best wishes of a host of friends. Messrs. Joshua Justason and Daniel McQuade drove to St. Andrews Thursday. E. W. Wallace Sr. has purchased a fine Jersey cow from Rev. J. F. Carson. Miss Beattie McLeod of Manassas, has accepted the position of Stenographer for Connors Bros. Ltd. Owing to the scarcity of airlines the price has reached $3.50 per hophead. Mr. J. Sutton Clarke of St. George, and Mr. McDonald of Deer Island were in the village Saturday on business. A number of the young folks attended the Halloween concert at Beaver Harbor. Messrs. Peter and John Hill visited George Saturday. Mr. D. Bassen was in the village Friday. Miss Laura Connors who has been visiting friends in Fredericton for the past two months returned home on Wednesday. Mr. Jas. Thompson will move into his new house this week. Bernard Connors went to Fredericton Monday and accompanied his sister Miss Laura home.

BACK BAY.

A very successful pie-social was held here on Saturday evening. The sum of fifteen dollars was realized, proceeds for the village church which is nearing completion. Miss Im McVicar of L'Etang, is visiting Mrs. Alice Kinney. James Kinney who has been visiting friends here returned to his home in Eastport, on Saturday last.

BONNEY RIVER.

Sydney Gillmor of Anoka, Minn., arrived on Saturday's train and will spend the winter here. He reports lots of work and good wages in the west. A farewell party was given Mrs. Charles Ames at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Goss last week. A large number were present and the evening passed all too quickly with games, music and dancing. Charles Ash of Miss., is the guest of his father Mr. James Ash. Mrs. Charles Ames and family left for their home in West. Co. after six months spent here. The Misses Frost have returned from St. Andrews where they have been employed during the past summer. Mr. McDougall and wife of Boston, Mass., are the guests of Mrs. Ronald Campbell. Mrs. Alex. Herron and children and Mr. James Campbell are the guests of Mrs. H. B. Goss. Mrs. Taylor has returned to the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. D. Gillmor after spending two months in different parts of Nova Scotia. William Condel has returned home after a week spent at Magaguadavic Lake. Miss Josephine Gillmor has returned to her home after a few days spent with Mrs. Frost.

MC2465 POOR DOCUMENT

Plate Glass.

The first plate glass was made in 1688 at St. Pizary, France, where the process was found out by accident.

The World's Water.

The surface of the sea is estimated at 1,328,000,000 square miles, taking the whole surface of the globe at 197,000,000, and its greatest depth supposedly equals the height of the highest mountain, or four miles.

Highest Average of Life.

Statistics show that the highest average of life is found among agricultural workers.

Fresh Lanes.

After the crusades a great many knights and their esquires found themselves out of employment. Wandering from state to state, selling their services to any lord who was willing to pay them their price, they were given the very appropriate name of "free lanes"—men who were at liberty to fight for any one who wanted them.

Lake Islands.

Lake Huron contains 3,000 islands. Loch Erne, in Ireland, has 365. The Lake of the Thousand Isles is only an expansion of the St. Lawrence river and has 1,700.

Air Cleaned Paintings.

In some of the European art galleries the dust is removed from the paintings and statuary by means of an air pump, a jet of air being thrown with great force against the article which needs dusting.

Origin of Fire.

So far as actual knowledge goes we find that the possession of fire and the art of making it by one method or another have belonged to the vast majority of mankind as far back as we can trace. A fireless race has never been found. The original method of making fire was undoubtedly by the simple friction of two pieces of wood rubbed together. With his "stick and groove" the present day Tibetan can produce fire in a few seconds.

Cromwell's Eyes.

In one of Cromwell's private letters found in London he says: "Oliver Cromwell had no squint, nor any defect of any kind in the eyes of him. One eye, probably the left, but I am not sure, was considered bigger than the other."

The Yeomen.

The first permanent military force in England was the king's guard of yeomen, established in 1485.

Whistling Cure for Stammering.

A most effective cure for stammering is the method adopted by the British army council, a half hour's whistling practice daily, regularly, with the cheeks inflated only. Numbers of soldiers have been cured by this method.

Preserving Turnips.

If there are turnips which bear raisins cause the seeds to slip off, a good and permanent remedy is to set common burberry bushes rather closely on the terrace. The roots will hold up the turnips and keep them safe from frost. The lawn will be beautiful the year around with the shrubs.

Brushing a Hat.

A hat should always be brushed in the direction opposite to the hands of a clock. Otherwise the pile of the felt is taken out and the hat given a cheap, poor appearance.

Brooms.

A heavy broom should always be selected in preference to a light one for thorough sweeping, as the weight aids in the process. In buying a broom, test it by pressing the edge against the floor. If the straw bristles out and bend, the broom is a poor one, for they should remain in a firm, solid mass.

Peruvian Silver Mines.

The old Caylloma silver mines in Peru are situated higher than any other in the world, being between 14,000 and 17,000 feet. It is believed that they were first worked by the Incas.

Channel Islands Dialect.

The old Norman dialect, or accretion of it, is still spoken in the Channel Islands.

Washing Decanters.

After washing decanters turn them upside down and allow water from the cold water tap to run over them. In about five minutes time they will be beautifully dry inside, and if the outside is carefully wiped and rubbed they will sparkle beautifully.

The Japanese Bath.

The Japanese bath is always heated to 110 degrees.

Norway's Wooden Churches.

Some of the wooden churches of Norway are fully 700 years old and are still in an excellent state of preservation. Their timbers have successfully resisted the frosty and almost arctic winters because they have been repeatedly coated with tar.

Freak Newspapers.

One of the most remarkable freak newspapers ever printed was the Luminator, published at Madrid. It was printed with ink containing phosphorus, so that the paper could be read in the dark. Another curiosity was called the Royal, printed with nonpoisonous ink on thin sheets of dough, which could be eaten, thus furnishing nourishment for body as well as mind. Le Eclair presented those who subscribed for forty years a pension and free burial.

AMAZING REVELATIONS.

How Government Money is Thrown Away by Bungling Officials.

The stupidity of officials, ranking from Cabinet Ministers to subalterns of the army, costs Great Britain a vast sum annually. It is very amusing to see the jobs and the most expensive pattern. The reports of the Committee of Public Accounts give particulars of these matters. That committee is a sort of watchdog of the spending departments, and its insistent bark draws attention to any irregularity or extravagance in the expenditure of public moneys. The report issued by the committee contains some incisive criticism of the War Office. It will be remembered that the gross expenditure on the Army Votes during the year 1924-25 fell short of the estimate by £1,254,128. The actual estimate on March 31, 1925, was about £1,250,000,000, and the amount actually expended by the War Office in a forecast submitted to the Treasury as late as nine days previously. To the committee's demand for an explanation the War Office made a very satisfactory reply was made that there had been a complete oversight of the War Office. Indeed, the change in personnel was so thorough that it can be best explained by quoting the words of a forecast submitted to the Army Finance. "All those who had had experience in dealing with the War Office were being displaced."

The committee recognizes the difficulty created by these circumstances and says they are glad to learn that there is the most extraordinary desire on the part of the Military Headquarters Staff to effect reductions. As regards the future, the committee are without assurance that a more satisfactory result may be expected. For, it has been explained to them that the military directors (who now frame estimates and control the progress of expenditure) are transient officers who come to their post with very expensive notions, and only get to know their work thoroughly by the time they have to go. The Committee of Public Accounts next turns its vigilant eye on South Africa. It appears that the general office commanding in South Africa was a contract with the municipality of Johannesburg in 1924 for a supply of water to the troops at the minimum of 30,000 gallons per diem, the contract to run for twenty years. As the price has been so much reduced, and the daily requirements of the troops are already much below the original estimate, the committee is surprised to learn that our dramatist has no original plots, that he has given to poetry no new rhythm or stanza and that the new set affect our property in the old rits. His "As You Like It" is taken from an old romance. The characters of his "Julius Caesar" are old Roman names taken from Plutarch. But what borrowing! Dry bones are turned into living men. The commonest materials are taken into the least fancy of his genius and transmuted into airy beauty.

Milton, too, is a free borrower. It is his fate, indeed, that makes his verse so rich in learned reminiscence and so gorgeous with "barbaric pearl and gold." He owes much to Shakespeare. Some critics think Milton's eye is borrowed from Shakespeare's Miranda, in the "Taming of the Shrew" occurs the line: "As morning roses newly washed in dew." While Milton in "L'Allegro" speaks of: "Fresh blown roses washed in dew." Milton is a very mine to many. Pope is his debtor. Milton's "Smoky St. Agnes" a woman to the waist and fair, but "ending food in many a scaly fold voluminous and vast"—is made to say, "They call me Agnes and for a sign portentious hold me; but, familiar grown, I pleased and with attractive grace won the most adverse." Pope says: "Vice is a monster of so frightful mien As to be hated needs but to be seen; Yet but behold that monster, and it is but what we first embrace, then pity, then embrace. Tenyson must have had in mind Milton's:

Changing in a golden chain This pendant world The whole world round is every day Being by gold chains about the feet of kings.

Tenyson, indeed, derives much of his exquisite imagery and felicitous phrasing from authors whose names, even many literary men do not know. Pope borrows his "Vital Spark" idea from an old poem by Thomas Flatman. Byron gets his "Eagle Feather" line from his "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers" from Aeschylus, who flourished in the fifth century before our era. Coleridge owes his "Ode to Mont Blanc" to a German poem by Friedrich Bruns. Bishop Keble is indebted for his thought in "The Evening Hymn" to Sir Thomas Browne in his "Colloquy With God."

In his own characteristic manner Rudyard Kipling has not the question of unaccountable thievery with a bit of verse which commences: "When 'Omer' smote 'a bloom' my 'Ed' 'ard me sing by land and sea, And 'wot' 'a' thought 'might' rout me, 'I' wot 'a' took the same as me."

Let Shakespeare's lines close this paper: "I'll example you with thievery; The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction Kobs the vast sea; the moon's an arrant thief, And her pale fire she snatches from the sun; The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves To sink the bottom; the earth's a thief, That feeds and breeds by a complot of stoles From general movement; each thing's a thief."

Wouldn't Less Two Days.

A young man who dropped into the recorder's office for a marriage license, finding that a license had just been issued containing the name of another girl inserted. That was the document sought, purchased his license all the same with the name of another girl inserted. That was the day for getting ready to be married, and he didn't propose to let small matters bar the way.

THE GREAT WRITERS.

Ideas and Inspiration Taken by One Author From Another.

BUT GENIUS BORROWS NOBLY

The crude ore is refined and the raw material fashioned into a thing of Beauty—Shakespeare as a Most Brilliant Example.

Our great writers are not great robbers. Literature is not a repository of stolen goods. What seems like stealing by the steel pen is rather the output of the literary or a return of the mind or, better still, the borrowing from a bank repaid with interest. "It is wonderful," says Charles Reade, "how genius can borrow." "All literature," remarks Oliver Wendell Holmes, "is like borrowing the 'Purple Island,' and he adds, 'a good image is like a diamond, which may be set a hundred times in as many generations and still retain its beauty with every change.' This is not a question of originality. 'The lightning a candle at a neighbor's fire,' observes Dean Swift, 'is not a theft of property in the wick and flame.' 'Genius borrows nobly.' The transference is often a transmutation. For instance, Dante borrows from Virgil, and for sonnet, and for word, and for stanza, and for theme. The crude ore is refined and the raw material fashioned into a thing of beauty.

It has been pointed out by Mr. Huth in his "Life of Dante" that there is a certain parallelism in literature. Dante borrows his indebtedness to Virgil, as the latter himself was under obligations to Homer. Aristotle owes much to Virgil, and Spenser borrows frequently from Aristotle. Spenser's "Faerie Queene" gave birth to Milton's "Paradise Lost," and this in turn to Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe" and Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" like so many blossoms rising from the one stem. Shakespeare has been called "the great Warwickshire thief," so indebted to his borrowing habit. He borrowed like a Napoleon and brought back the richest art treasures to enrich his own treasury. One is surprised to learn that our dramatist has no original plots, that he has given to poetry no new rhythm or stanza and that the new set affect our property in the old rits. His "As You Like It" is taken from an old romance. The characters of his "Julius Caesar" are old Roman names taken from Plutarch. But what borrowing! Dry bones are turned into living men. A Verse From Solomon Told a Marriage Engagement.

When the left-hand home in the small town of New York to take up a special course of study her pet sister was fast reaching the crisis of a love affair. The pet sister was a most winsome young lady and had long kept a goodly train of suitors sighing. Was this affair to be the grand affair? The older sister hoped so, for she liked the young man cordially—though he was just the sort to make a proper brother-in-law.

But the weeks passed and not a bit of definite news about the progress of the affair did the older sister receive in her city boarding house. She became anxious. Louise, she thought, must not go on recklessly trifling in such important matters. Then one night about 10 o'clock, just as she was going to bed, came a telegram. The servant brought it up. "The affair did the older sister receive in her city boarding house. She became anxious. Louise, she thought, must not go on recklessly trifling in such important matters. Then one night about 10 o'clock, just as she was going to bed, came a telegram. The servant brought it up. "The affair did the older sister receive in her city boarding house. She became anxious. NEW YORK'S DIVES.

The Lookout Man's Trick When the Police Show Themselves.

Some of the dives about New York that are under the ban of the police have ingenious contrivances for warning occupants and patrons of the approach of a "bull" or any other suspected person. By the way, these places are never referred to in the vernacular as "dives" or "joints," for the vocabulary of the inventors of slang changes as quickly as a word comes into general use, so a suspected place is now always referred to as a "dive."

Warning of the approach of a policeman or detective is given by means of an electric buzzer. Formerly the push button connected with the buzzer was concealed under the edge of the bar in front or behind a water pipe. This device, however, was discovered by the police, who thereafter on entering a suspected place kept a close watch on the barkeeper and gave him no chance to press the button.

Then came the prong device. This consisted of two small metal prongs projecting from the edge of the wall. When a man suspected to be a limb of the law entered the door, the barkeeper carelessly placed a coin across the two prongs, thus making a circuit and causing the buzzer to sound in the rear.

This device was discovered, too, so now a lookout is stationed outside the door of a dive. He apparently is a lounge, but he acts closely by a quick glance the face of every person who enters. If a man doesn't look all right the lookout presses his foot, which has a copper plate nailed to the surface of the cellar doorway outside. This makes the circuit and causes the buzzer to get busy, so that by the time the "bull" throws open the door the occupants who are wanted by the police have had time to make their escape and, those who remain are seated at tables helplessly drinking beer or engaged in a friendly game of penicue or whist. Everything is apparently "on the level," and the "bull" is forced to withdraw without having been able to obtain any evidence.—New York Press.

The Ladybug.
 "For the farmer's Mother Goose has probably done as much as any of the agricultural scientists," was the remarkable statement made recently by Henry Grison Parsons, who, as professor of horticulture, is conducting a course in school gardening at the New York university summer school. "No," he replied, "I am not poking fun at or belittling the biochemic experts and their wonderful discoveries. But do you know the insect played in agriculture by the ladybug? The ladybug lives to eat the aphids, or plant louse, which is a destructive pest. And did you ever see a child kill one of these aphids eating friends of farming? I never did. If a ladybug lights on a child's hand, what does he do? Why, he says, 'Ladybug, ladybug, fly away home,' and gently starts the insect on its way. Mother Goose has taught the child to be kind to the ladybug, and as a result, instead of being killed, these little creatures are cherished and allowed to do their best work."

Slang in Business.
 Illustrations of the disadvantage of concealing in one's language are sometimes brought sharply home to business men, as was the case in a letter received the other day by a New York firm from one of their correspondents in the far east, which read in part as follows: "Will you kindly send us a modern dictionary of American language, as we are unable to understand some of the phrases in your letters? Writing on the 24th ultimo, you say, for instance: 'Do not let Messrs. — hand you a lemon in this deal. If they try it on pluck one for fair right over the plate to Mr. — and let the foolies cable for a solar plexus.' The terms used are foreign to us, and we entirely fail to comprehend their significance."—Shipping Illustrated.

Croker's Autobiography.
 Richard Croker writes to the Journal of Irish Society, correcting erroneous impressions which he finds current regarding himself. He denies that he was ever a professional pugilist or owned a gin palace, or that he was ever connected in any way with the liquor traffic.

Not was his father a blacksmith. He was Eyre Coote Croker of County Cork, who emigrated to America when a young man and through his knowledge of horses attained a position in the veterinary department of the United States army, which he held for many years.—New York Sun.

An Old Oak Jail.
 The Brown county (Iowa) jail was built in 1837. The walls are three feet thick and built of white oak timber. The outside and inside walls are built the same as any log house, the logs being hewed one foot square. The inside timbers are put up and down on end, one foot square, making a total thickness of three feet. No prisoner, no matter how serious the crime, has ever dug through these three foot walls. The building is two stories high. The doors are made of — are twelve inches thick with iron bolts nailed to timbers.

Hanged Bound to a Chair.
 The agitation against capital punishment which was active in South Africa some time ago has been revived by details, published recently, of a scene at the recent execution of a Kaffir at Pretoria. When the executioner went to the condemned man's cell the prisoner made fierce resistance and struggled violently all the way to the scaffold. At the scaffold the executioner and his assistants cleverly forced the man into a chair, where he was bound so that he could not move. The man and the chair were then hanged together.

LEAN YEAR FOR ONTARIO.

Because of Scarcity and High Prices of Feed.

Under the caption, "A Lean Year for Ontario," the Weekly Sun says: "Roughly, we have nine million acres devoted to the various field crops grown in Ontario. Of this total, about three million acres are in hay, and two and three-quarter millions in oats. Thus well over sixty per cent. of the entire acreage given to field cultivation is in these two crops, and these two main crops are the poorest in many years. Hay will not give over two-thirds of the tonnage per acre this year that has been harvested in recent years—probably not over half. Oats are likely to be nearly 25 per cent. below the average yield, and this is equivalent to cutting off twenty-five million bushels on this one crop alone."

On the other hand, the hay which has been harvested has been exceptionally well saved, and corn, which can be largely substituted for hay, has of late been making splendid progress, while the area in this crop is larger than usual. There is only about one-sixth the acreage of corn that we have in hay, but the tonnage per acre is six times as great in one case as in the other. If we have an open fall, thus permitting of the full maturity of the corn, the increased yield in this crop may pretty well offset the shortage in the other coarse fodder.

Peas, which had been steadily declining in acreage up to 1904, have since shown a rapid increase, and the area in this crop in the present season will probably be one-fourth greater than that of three years ago. At present, the promise is for an excellent yield in peas. Barley again, of which we will probably have 800,000 acres this year, seems as if it will go somewhat above the average in yield per acre. If the season had been a normal one for all fall wheat we would probably have had eight hundred thousand acres in this crop, but a great deal of the land intended for the production of fall wheat has been drilled in with barley, and this, while it means a shortage in flour, will add considerably to the available supply of feedstuffs. But after all allowances are made, there will undoubtedly be a material shortage in feed in 1907, as compared with recent years.

So far as grain is concerned Ontario will, as our correspondent "Vim" said recently, have practically none for export this year. Our dependence in products for sale will have to be on butter and cheese, bacon and beef cattle, and the cost of making these will be higher than usual because of the high values which will undoubtedly be placed on feedstuffs.

On the whole, this will be a lean year for Ontario farmers.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 6, 1907

Every nation has contributed for better or for worse, its quota upon the history of the world and there is no reason why a strong young nation like Canada should be an exception. It is no exception, and we believe her contribution to be of an uplifting character.

What has Canada to offer? Natural resources, such as are not surpassed by any nation on the Globe. These are attracting people of other lands at the rate of 200,000 annually. To-day a young man is justly proud to be called a Canadian.

A system of government which can scarcely be improved upon, it comes to us as an inheritance, an evolution of that which is best in the English system. What lack there may be in our system of government is due, not to the system, but the fault of the people to make the best of it. In this system, the people count, and it is as the people become associated with their Parliament so shall it assume the more perfect proportions. It would be to Canada, as it is to other nations, a disastrous thing should her Parliament become distinctly separated from her people.

As an outgrowth of this we would have a pronounced indifference to the value of the ballot. Following this we would have corruption in politics.

We hear a great deal of this to-day, but it is said to our shame. The reason is that people undervalue the franchise. The change is made by one who speaks boldly and evidently not without authority, that $25,000 at the last Dominion election was sent to one of our New Brunswick counties for the purpose of defeating a Cabinet Minister. The supreme effort failed but the lesson is apparent and humiliating.

What a reflection on the character of the people of such a county! To steal a vote is a crime. To sell one is belittling to seller and buyer.

This instance, we would hope, is an isolated one. It does not reflect the character of our people as a whole. It would be strange should it be so, or the causes are far removed. Canada's parliament is not separated from the people, and they would necessarily feel deeply the disgrace of such a condition of things did they exist in any pronounced measure, and in so far as responsibility and capacity lies, would do their utmost to remove it. We believe the heart of our people to be true, and if corruption in any marked degree exists it is not because our people as a whole do not want it removed. They may be apathetic and indifferent but they are true to the fullest conceptions of perfect manhood.

The following quotation from the speech of Hon. Mr. Pugsley at the banquet tendered him at Sussex, will give us an idea as to the importance and growth of the portfolio to which he has been recently appointed. "It will also incidentally give us a fairly just estimate as to the growth of our country."

In my department I am called upon more especially to deal with and to promote, as far as possible, the material progress of the Dominion. The increasing work of this department affords from year to year, a very good index of the growth and development of the country. Let me give you a striking piece of evidence of that increasing work: When my present deputy entered the department, in the early years of Confederation he tells me that the departmental staff of clerks consisted of about 17, and the annual appropriation was about half a million dollars. At the present time there are about two hundred persons employed in the department, and the annual appropriations is in the vicinity of $12,000,000. This very large expenditure is closely identified with the promotion of the needs and conveniences of the people. The money is expended largely upon public buildings, such as post offices, custom houses, drill halls and armories, and the building of wharves and breakwaters and the dredging of harbors, and their approaches. The older cities and towns call for more or less expenditure either for new buildings or for repairs or enlargement of existing buildings, while as the villages increase in population and attain to the dignity and importance of towns, their claims for just treatment in the matter of public buildings cannot be ignored. With the marvellous development of the West, the demands in this line in the Western Provinces, of course, increase more rapidly than in the older sections.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ON FINANCIAL TROUBLES.

There has been trouble in the stock market, in the high financial world, during the last few months. The statement has frequently been made that the policies for which I stand, legislative and executive, are responsible for that trouble.

These policies of mine can be summed up in one brief sentence. They represent the effort to punish successful dishonesty.

I doubt if these policies have had any material effect in bringing about the present trouble, but if they have, it will not alter in the slightest degree my determination that for the remaining six-months of my term these policies shall be persevered in unswervingly.

All we have done has been to unscramble the wrongdoing. It was not the fact that it was unscrupulous that did the damage. All I did was to turn on the light. I am responsible for turning on the light, but I am not responsible for what the light showed.

It is impossible to cut out a cancer without making the patient feel for a few days rather, sicker than he felt before. From speech of President Roosevelt at Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. Geo. M. Byron was in town Wednesday attending the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Weir Owners' and Weir Fishermen's Union. Mr. Byron, who will be a candidate on the local government ticket at the next election, said the party had not completed organization, but would be ready when the elections were called. He thought the elections would be run on strict party lines, as this principle in local politics seemed to be growing. He was not worrying any over the activity of the opposition, and felt that the very strong ticket that would be nominated, in the government interests, in Charlotte would undoubtedly be elected.

FLO RAYNOR'S HUSBAND.

"This is no place for you. Remember the history I told you of the other day, and take my advice. Leave him!"

The speaker was Doctor Leavenworth, as he stood with Flo by the bedside of her husband, who, with rolling, blood-shot eyes and ceaselessly twitching hands, lay, constantly uttering piercing shrieks and screams of meaningless invectives.

Leavenworth was an intimate acquaintance of the Raynor family, and in the face of his black hereditary records, heid it possible for his present patient to make any effectual escape from the demon which held him in its grip.

"Leave him?" Flo echoed. "To what?"

The doctor looked away. "To himself and brandy," he replied slowly.

"But I am his wife—his wife, and you his friend, tell me to leave him?"

"Follow my advice and you'll soon be his widow," he retorted, evading the latter part of her speech. "Stay with him, and he'll kill you first."

"I shall never leave him," she returned passionately.

"So be it," he interrupted. "I knew you wouldn't, but it was my duty to warn you."

Flo made no reply, but knelt down by the bedside. Leavenworth felt she was praying. He was not a religious man, but from the bottom of his heart he believed that, if there was a God, the prayers of the kneeling woman would reach Him. Silenced and awed, he bent his head, and, when she arose, earnestly, though inaudibly, he whispered "Amen."

For many following nights Raynor raved on, until at last the fever having burnt itself out, the invectives and ghastly threats became fewer and less violent, and as he lay, faint and white, but conscious, Flo bent over him to catch his first words. To her great joy, they were words of penitence, followed by promises of reformation. With eyes full of grateful tears she looked up at Leavenworth.

"How can we ever thank you?" she whispered brokenly.

He made no answer. He had done his work, and he had been successful, but there was no triumph written on his face. He had saved Raynor only that he might fall again; he had brought him back to health and sanity only for him to sink still deeper in the slough of drink and dissipation. This he firmly believed and the belief took away all the joys of victory. Further, he had restored Raynor to Flo, and struggle hard as he would with his weakness, the thought was agony to him. Never by word, look or deed had he betrayed it, but he loved Flo—loved her with all the strength of his nature, and she was Harry Raynor's wife.

Weeks passed by, and Raynor's return to health was marred by no renewal of his drunken fury. Flo hoped that a turning point had been reached, and the look of happiness once more appeared in her eyes. Wiseacres shook their heads and wondered how long the spell would last, sighing with a ghoul-like kind of pity which was half triumph when returning husband or son related how Raynor had drunk a bottle of brandy straight off the reel, and it had had no visible effect on him.

Flo's cup of joy seemed filled, only to be very quickly emptied again. With unerring instinct she could tell when the first downward step was taken.

Leavenworth had been away in Paris, and now, on his return, was horrified, but not surprised at the state of affairs. He again warned her, telling her that she would forfeit her life if her husband in a drunken paroxysm turned upon her.

"Why do you tempt me?" she cried bitterly one afternoon. "I shall never leave him. I am the only check he has. Why—oh! why do you tempt me?"

His face turned deadly pale. Suddenly he seized her hands.

"Flo," he muttered thickly; "can't you see, they say a woman always knows when a man loves her; can't you see that I worship you? My darling, to think of you in the power of that brute is maddening. Leave him—come to me. Let me care for you."

There was more sorrow than anger in Flo's eyes as she drew her hands away, but before she could make any reply the door opened and her husband entered. With a lurch that was half a fall, he threw himself into a chair.

"Here again, Leavenworth?" he snarled rudely. "Why don't you stick a plate on the door and open shop?"

Leavenworth made some conciliatory reply and tried to engage him in conversation, but he turned sullenly away.

"Where's the brandy, Flo?" he demanded harshly.

"Have some tea," she replied. "Mary is just bringing it."

"Tea," he replied contemptuously. "Do you hear?" he stormed as the maid entered, "I want brandy."

The startled girl stood irresolute, looking at her mistress.

"Do you hear?" yelled Raynor, springing to his feet. "Am I not master?" Then raising his clenched fist, he dashed the things out of her hand.

Before Leavenworth had time to interpose, the tea-pot, with its contents, had fallen upon Flo, scalding her hand and arm severely.

His passion cooled, Harry looked at his wife with sodden eyes.

Then with incredible quickness his mood changed and handiwork trickled down his cheeks.

"I've killed the best wife that ever lived," he lamented loudly; then with the bravery which turns men into sham heroes, he exclaimed: "I'll give myself up. I'll die with her."

"Harry, come back," Flo sobbed; "I'm not killed. It was an accident. Come back. Go after him, Dr. Leavenworth. Never mind me," she concluded, as the sickening pain of the scald seemed to take the strength from her limbs when she attempted to rise.

Leavenworth, reading the earnest desire in her eyes, left her, and hurried after Raynor.

"Don't be a fool," he said sternly; your wife is only scalded; come back at once."

Raynor struggled, but he, in his present condition, was no match for the strong athletic hands which held him, and was forced to allow himself to be taken back.

Soon a drunken sleep came over him which checked his gaped rambling words of penitence, and with head sunk on his breast, he slept, oblivious of the misery he had caused.

Flo and Leavenworth sat silently watching. With a look of mute anguish on her face she glanced from one to the other. She was singularly alone, an orphan, her guardian dead. The only helper a man who but a few minutes before had insulted her.

Dr. Leavenworth broke the silence.

"Mrs. Raynor," he began, as if in answer to her thoughts, "can you forgive me? I can never forgive myself; I will never offend again." Then he paused.

Flo looked at him, and saw that he might be trusted; then she broke down.

"What can I do?" she sobbed. "Is there nothing, nothing I can do?"

"Is there no lady—no relative or friend who could come and stay with you?" he inquired.

"No," she replied; "I am quite alone. There seems to be no one to whom I can turn."

Leavenworth knitted his brows, then drew his chair nearer to her.

"Mrs. Raynor," he began in impressive tones; "would you be willing to try an experiment?"

"An experiment?" she echoed without interest. "This is hardly the time."

"You misunderstand me," he interrupted. "I mean an experiment which might—I say 'might'—result in your husband's cure."

"I would do anything—anything to cure him."

"You have heard of drugs being administered to cure a drunkard's craving?"

"Yes, but Harry refuses to take any kind of medicine."

"I know; but this drug is not an ordinary medicine. It would be given to him in his food without his knowing anything about it."

"That seems too easy."

"Yes, but there are rules to be observed. A dose too much might—"

"Is it a poison?" asked Flo quickly.

"Yes," returned Leavenworth, "a powerful poison, but properly administered it is said to be an antidote to the drink mania." "Give it to me and I will try it," said Flo quietly.

"I haven't it," replied Leavenworth. "It is an almost unknown drug, of eastern origin, and the only man I know who is in the possession of the secret is a French physician with whom I studied in Paris. To get it I should have to see him, and even then he might refuse to help me. I heard of it just now when staying there. It is only just beginning to be known."

"But you will ask him!" said Flo, rising and clapping her hands supplicatingly.

"I will ask him. I hate the man, and the thought of soliciting a favor is very repulsive. But for your sake, for your sake, I will do it."

Little more was said, but after he had left, Flo sat far on into the night, too excited, too miserable and too full of anxious hope to think of sleep.

The future seemed dark. She was only a girl of 20, and life long and dreary. Every refined instinct in her nature rebelled at the thought of the coming years with her husband. She loved him; he had been her first love. Dashing suddenly into her quiet life in the distant Cornish village, where he had seemed a veritable knight-errant, and before the golden story had had time to fade, she married him. No tender mother had inquired into his antecedents. He was rich, able to provide for her without requiring anything from the grumpy anti-quarian, who had acted as her guardian; so everything had come to pass. Then, with all his faults, Harry Raynor had his virtues to correspond. Had not the demon of drink made him his slave, Harry Raynor would have been lovable, happy-natured, kind, a gentleman. That was the pity of it all!

Days passed, and as yet no communication had come from Leavenworth. Harry drank just enough to keep him in a state of chronic irritation, and to feed the sullen jealous idea which was rapidly germinating in his brain. He watched Flo ever with a dark watchfulness, refusing to allow her out of his sight, and violently forbidding her to mention the doctor's name.

At last a note informed Flo that Leavenworth had been successful, and asking her to fix a time when he might call on her.

Raynor usually fell into a heavy sleep as the evening drew on, so Flo, not without a guilty qualm, wrote and asked the doctor to see her at nine the next night.

According to her arrangement, the appointed hour found her watching, and when Leavenworth's figure came in sight, she quietly admitted him herself and took him into her own private sanctum.

Safe there, Flo listened breathlessly to his directions, holding the tiny packet he handed to her as reverently as if it had been some sacred relic.

"And it will cure him?" she questioned breathlessly.

"Daimier says so," he replied briefly. "Yes, if you do your part, he will be cured."

Flo's eyes filled with tears.

"How shall we ever reward you?" she asked in a choking voice.

He looked away, and there was a moment's silence. Then suddenly he spoke again.

"I am going away, possibly forever."

Flo knew it was best, but her lips quivered. Something, though not all the anguish which was in his heart was known to her.

She looked fair and pure as an angel, as she stood with clasped hands and dainty white dress. Leavenworth mentally photographed her, and was filled with a dumb anger that henceforth the dearest thing life held for him must be only a memory.

"Good-bye!" he whispered at last. "God keep you safe!" Then reverently and gently he drew her slightly forward, and, for the first time pressed his hot lips to her brow.

Flo did not resist him. The said renunciatory kiss had nothing of passion in it; it was a good-bye to earthly hopes and happiness, an eternal farewell to love.

Suddenly without the slightest warning a dark, sinister shadow fell upon them. It was Harry. With brain on fire, and possessed by all the demons of jealousy, he stood convulsed with rage, and before Leavenworth or Flo had time to speak, a pistol shot rang out, and with a shriek Flo fell. Another shot quickly followed aimed at Leavenworth, but missing him, for he forgetting himself, had bent over Flo. Then, thirdly and last, the murderous weapon was levelled at its owner, and through the shades of night Harry Raynor's soul floated—whither?

Flo did not die. The bullet had missed any vital part and weeks of careful nursing restored her. No scandal rested upon her. Leavenworth fortunately had not been wounded, and was able to account for his presence without incriminating her.

Once more he pressed his suit, but she turned away.

"Wait awhile, two, five years. I love you, yes, but wait. Come again, and then—and then I may not say, 'No!'"

THEY MET AGAIN.

Why the Sporty Looking Chap Cut His Vacation Short.

After the sporty looking chap had had breakfast at the little hotel in the Catskills, where he had come for a few weeks' vacation, the old farmer who ran the place called him aside and said:

"I understand ye gave my boy a big roll of money an' some jewelry to put in the safe."

"Yes, I thought that was the best place for them. You don't mind keepin' the stuff for me, do you?"

"Great smiles, no!" replied the farmer as he rubbed his hands and chuckled. "The boy says ye brung three purty heavy trunks with ye."

"Yes, I always travel with plenty of clothes, tennis racket, fishing line, etc. You've no objection to so much baggage, have you?"

"Not a bit of it, sir—not a bit of it! I wish ye had brung 'leven or twelve with ye. It's kinder funny ye ain't recognized me yet."

"No, I don't remember to have ever seen your face before," said the new arrival.

"Well, maybe my whiskers be a little longer or sunnier, but ye orter know my name. We had quite a talk one day in New York."

"In New York?" stammered the sporty looking chap as he turned pale.

"Yep. Don't ye recollect 'bout me handin' ye $100 for that gold brick? I knowed ye the minute I seen ye on the wagon last night. Raikes, but that was a most bewilderin' swindle ye worked on me, son."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Oh, nothing. I never raise no fuss unless there's a good occasion fer it. The boy says ye jest went wild over the scenery comin' up on the wagon, an' maybe ye'd like to walk down to the depot an' git some more views on the way. The next train to the city passes there at 'leven thirty, an' if ye start now, while I'm lookin' for the constable, ye'll jest about catch it. An' don't do no worryin' 'bout that cash of yours, son, as I'll take the best of care of it."

It was a ten mile walk to the depot, but when the 11:30 for New York came about it carried away a footsore and dusty looking individual, who scowled and muttered and shook his fist through the car window as the train started off again.—A. B. Lewis in Judge.

A Compromise.
In a jury trial in a small town not many miles from civilization the rural population into whose hands the fate of the plaintiff was placed were so stubbornly divided that they were some twenty odd hours in reaching a verdict. As they left the court, after returning their verdict, one of them was asked by a friend what the trouble was.

"Well," he said, "six of 'em wanted to give the plaintiff $4,000, and six of 'em wanted to give him $3,000, so we split the difference and gave him $3,500."—Woman's Home Companion.

LITERARY LOG ROLLING.

How Some Famous Authors Bought to Advertise Themselves.

The examples cited by Francis Gribble in his article on "The Comedy of Literary Log Rolling" in the Strand Magazine arouse some suspicion as to their absolute authenticity, but are amusing enough whether true or not.

Salute-Beuve increased the circulation of his books by insisting upon fighting a duel in the rain with an umbrella over his head. Gerard de Nerval used to be seen in the streets of Paris leading a lobster by a string. Mme. Krudener, the author of "Valerie" and the friend of Alexander L. of Russia, made the fortune of her novel by calling at all the Paris shops and asking for various articles of dress "a la Valerie."

Of Victor Hugo and Alexandre Dumas the elder the following stories are told:

Not was the great poet ashamed to roll his log even at a funeral. He seized the opportunity at the obsequies of one of his own sons. It happened that on the way to the cemetery the procession passed a traveling manager, and the lines, for whatever reason, stopped routine just as Victor Hugo was in front of their cage. His companion, a minor poet named Pelletier, drew his attention to the fact. "Master," he whispered, "the lions recognize you and hush their voices. The king of beasts is silent in the presence of the king of men." Victor Hugo bowed and turned the matter over in his mind.

Then, after meditation, he said: "Pelletier, that was a happy thought of yours. Couldn't you write something about it?" And Pelletier wrote a sonnet about it, and the fame of the master stood on a higher pinnacle than ever.

And finally there was the case of Dumas, of whom it may almost be said that his whole life was an advertisement. Some one once said of him that his vanity was such that he was capable of getting up behind his own carriage in order to demonstrate that he had a negro footman in his service.

He certainly did many things almost as absurd as that in his restless pursuit of acclaim. One of his delights was to clothe his noble porportions in a uniform and to embellish the uniform with decorations to which he was not entitled. He even went so far as himself to design the uniform in which he fought—or, rather, did not fight, for he arrived after the fighting was all over—in Garibaldi's army, and he achieved a tremendous advertisement by conducting a well known actress to a room in which she had been invited. He got another advertisement by allowing himself to be used for modeldressing of a feathered, He was utterly in the wrong, and he lost his case, but he kept the court in roars of laughter while he explained his literary methods and the nature of the distinctions which he had interfered with the fulfillment of his contract. But the best of all his advertisements was attained when the monument was erected that M. Alexandre Dumas would write the last chapter of a forthcoming romance sitting in a shop with down, for all the time he was writing was done. One can understand that that sort of advertisement would suit the authors who are also interested in the sale of hair restorers.

In these days husbands were often surprised at the great amount of money that went for pins; hence the term "pin money."

Not so many years ago the frugal American housewife was wont to teach pin economy by teaching her children that many couples, "See pin and pick it up, all the day you'll have good luck."

The Indirect Method.
Homemade ice cream was a regular item on the bill of fare at Willie's house, and while he liked the cream and then melted it around, growing fat at it and making a great fuss. Then he put his hand in and throws the pill high in the air, letting it fall with his paws as it comes down. If this does not have the desired effect he picks up the pill by the handle and makes it into the bars, where the noise is increased by far owing to the wooden floor. This performance is given whenever the horse is petted or when strangers come to the house.

Greenwich Observatory.
In the year 1675 King Charles II. of England founded the royal observatory at Greenwich in order that astronomical observations might be made for the assistance of sailors. The history of the observatory has been the history of chronology and of this practical side of astronomy. Its work and its standards have become distinctly international. The meridian of Greenwich now determines the longitude of the world.—Exchange.

She Had a Substitute.
Influential Member—I am glad to notice, doctor, that your wife never turns her head to see who comes into church on Sunday morning. The Rev. Dr. Goodman—No, but she makes me tell her all about them after we go home.—Chicago Tribune.

WHAT TRAIN DO YOU TAKE?

In Writing Give Its Number, Name of Road and Time of Arrival.

When you telegraph a friend the next time you are going to visit him and that you'd be delighted to have him meet you at the train the next day, for your own sake telegraph him intelligently.

If the money, irritations and disappointments of the year were aggregated for the United States in hopelessly unintelligible telegrams of this kind, the average political economist would leave it at that. When the average person in the small city or town decides on the jump to go to see a friend in the city and decides to telegraph that friend what train to meet, he becomes an unconscious imbecile.

Will leave for Chicago tonight on 8:30 train. Meet me.

This is the text of a tea word message which I received the other night from a friend in an Ohio city. He had started for Chicago before the telegram was received by me, and while I waited immensely to meet him at the station instead of making the least effort to do so I took it out in swearing.

In a message telegraphing an arrival the name of the road and the train number are the two absolute essentials. It will be a help to the recipient of the message in most cases if the time of the arrival of the train be given also. Frequently, as between the two stations involved in such a message, a difference of one hour in standard time otherwise might confuse. But as between the number of the train and the number of the message, the number of the telegram has a chance of error, and in writing the message these two sets of numerals should be separated by the name of the road.

Taking the ten word message as the standard of length, then, any person going anywhere from any station on a railway may use the one set for telegraphic announcement of arrival.

Arrive No. 5, Lake Shore, due 8 o'clock Monday morning.

Ordinarily no possible further information is necessary in the greatest emergency in America. The train number is unchangeable on its own system. Any railway employee anywhere will identify the train in a moment if he is asked for the number. He wishes to know whether the train is on time before he starts to the station, he can learn in a moment over the telephone by asking about No. 5, and in the query he will have the reader responsible for the reason that his information will be grateful for the fragmentary, succinct knowledge of train operations.

A PAPER OF PINS.
Pins were introduced in the sixteenth century.

Then they were costly and highly prized as gifts.

A paper of pins was more acceptable than a bouquet.

An act was passed in 1543 making it illegal to charge more than eightpence a thousand for metal pins.

Persons of quality often used pins made of boxwood, bone and silver, while the poor put up with wooden shavers.

In these days husbands were often surprised at the great amount of money that went for pins; hence the term "pin money."

Not so many years ago the frugal American housewife was wont to teach pin economy by teaching her children that many couples, "See pin and pick it up, all the day you'll have good luck."

The Peaceful Dove.
In spite of the fact that the dove is the emblem of peace a couple of cock birds of this deceitful species can give a very good account of themselves in a fight. The weapons they employ are their wings, which they use with terrific force.

The Yellowstone Park.
The Yellowstone National park is sixty-five miles from north to south and fifty-five from east to west.

Rabbits.
While not fond of the water, rabbits can swim if they are forced to. They take a swimming position all their own and look queer enough in the water. They keep the head and tail high and dry, while the front part of the body sinks deep in the water.

Wives by Purchase.
Wives are still obtained by purchase in some parts of Russia. In the district of Kamshin, on the Volga, for example, this is practically the only way in which marriages are brought about. The price of a pretty girl is well to do family ranges from $100 to $200, and in special cases a much higher sum is obtained. In the villages the lowest price is about $25.

Fire Killed Wood.
Government tests of the killed timber have demonstrated that this wood is good and should be considered as thoroughly seasoned timber so far as it use is concerned.

A Gunning Oriskany.
A hunter in tropical regions tells of seeing a cricket pursued around the trunk of a tree by a lizard. Suddenly the insect settled itself in a small depression in the bark, spread out its wings slightly and flattened itself so that the lizard actually crawled over it and went away without ever knowing what had become of it.

Ocean Drift.
A box thrown overboard by the steamer Itasca was picked up twenty months and twenty-six days later, having drifted in that time a distance of 4,791 miles.

Trees and Lightning.
Some trees are much more liable to be struck by lightning than others. Thus the oak and the elm are often struck and destroyed, but the ash is rarely struck, and the beech, it is said, never.

Spider's Web.
A web two and a quarter miles long has been drawn from the body of a single spider.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, early point to weak Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the stomach, and their weakness, not in the organs itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach those controlling nerves—to doctor the nerves in the brain. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine smells, or if dark and strong, if you have nervousness or other disturbing or dangerous symptoms, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is a waste of time, and of money as well. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

Forests.
Russia leads the world in planting forests, America in devastating them.

Persian Clothes.
Persians are fond of fine clothes. The usual costume for men includes a collarless shirt of light, pretty material cut low at the neck and with long, loose sleeves and a vest that fits closely to the figure, also with wide, flowing sleeves.

Wedding Rings.
Wedding rings were worn by both Jews and Romans at dates long prior to the Christian era.

Flower Essences.
To extract the essence of any flower put the petals in layers in an earthen jar, agitating each layer with one of salt. Do this until jar is full. Cover closely and put in a cool place. Leave for a month. Strain the essence by means of a press. Put essence in a bottle and add a few drops to every pint of water. It will impart a most delicate fragrance.

Posters.
Posters were originally stuck on posts; hence their name.

Plain Food.
The man who enjoys plain food, says the Lancet, is a man who is physically and physiologically speaking, of the man who would leave his meal untouched if it were not that every item of it was calculated to "tickle the palate."

The Largest Serpent.
The largest serpent ever measured was an anaconda which Dr. Gardner found dead in Mexico. It was thirty-seven feet long, and it took two horses to drag it.

Washington.
Washington made a Mason in 1753 and attained a higher dignity in the order than any of the other presidents, though Andrew Jackson was grand master of Tennessee.

The Peaceful Dove.
In spite of the fact that the dove is the emblem of peace a couple of cock birds of this deceitful species can give a very good account of themselves in a fight. The weapons they employ are their wings, which they use with terrific force.

SYNOPSIS OF Canadian North-West Homestead Regulations.

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres or less.

Application for entry must be made in person or by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at an Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

The homesteader is required to perform the homestead duties under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of a homesteader has permanent residence on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of the homestead, or upon a homestead entered for by him in the vicinity, such homesteader may perform his own residence duties by living with the father (or mother).

(4) The term "vicinity" in the two preceding paragraphs is defined as meaning not more than nine miles in a direct line, exclusive of the width of road allowances crossed in the measurement.

(5) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Six months' notice in writing must be given to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, or intention to apply for patent. W. W. CORY, Deputy of the Minister of the Interior, N.B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.
