Westminster Cathedral.

Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, says the London Graphic of July 2, were joyful days for the Catholic community of these islands. On Tuesday the Cathedral at Westminster was solemnly consecrated with the ancient ritual (identical with that with which Westminster Abbey was dedicated to the worship of God nine hundred years ago—in 1066), followed by a double Thanksgiving for the Consecration and for the Restoration of the Hierarchy, sang by the Archbishop in presence of the Bishops of the Province.

The celebrations were carried on with all the impressive ceremonial of the Church of Rome, and the unusual rarely presented a more striking spectacle—its vast interior packed from end to end with a devoted throng of worshippers—than when the splendid ritual of the Consecration and the Procession of the Relics were in progress beneath its immense arches, and soaring domes. It was necessary, according to the tenets of the Roman Catholic Faith, that the Cathedral should be entirely free of debt before its Consecration could take place. It was already known two months ago that the appeal made by the Archbishop had had that result. In his "Letter of Thanks," issued on May 1, the Archbishop stated that by the preceding day the whole sum of £7,000 needed to pay off the deficit on the Building Fund had been subscribed, and that the Cathedral stood free of any debt upon its structure, "a result," he said, "due to the generosity of Catholics of every position and degree scattered the world over."

The series of celebrations began in the Cathedral Hall on Monday afternoon with the Exposition of the Relics by the Archbishop, followed by Compline and the Matins and Lauds of St. Leo and of the Martyr.

At seven in the morning of Wednesday, after Prime in the Cathedral Hall, the ceremonial of the Consecration of the Cathedral began, and at half-past ten, after the Procession of Relics, the Archbishop consecrated the High Altar, and the thirteen other altars were each consecrated by a Bishop.

The Rite of Consecration used, as has been said, was that followed at the Abbey in the last year of the reign of King Edward the Confessor, and it is to be found in the Pontifical of Egbert, Archbishop of York, who died in 767. The main features of the Rite were as follows:

The Relics used in the ceremony were set apart overnight by the consecrating Prelate, who had fasted the day before; they were placed on an altar with lighted candles, while the choir chanted Matins and Lauds in honor of the Saints whose relics they are. On the day of Consecration twelve crosses were marked on the walls of the church with candles before them, which were lighted at the commencement of the ceremony. This symbolizes the Walls of the Heavenly Jerusalem. The Archbishop and Bishops then went in procession round the outside of the church three times, sprinkling the walls and boundaries with holy water, and the Archbishop then knelt with his pastoral staff at the entrance of the Cathedral, saying (in Latin): "Lift up your gates, ye princes, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in." The Deacon at the door asked, "Who is this King of Glory?" receiving for reply, "The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle." The door opened, and the Archbishop and assistants entered the choir. The Archbishop then described on the east-strewn floor of the nave a cross composed of the Letters of the Latin and Greek alphabets, symbolizing thus the union of the Latin and Greek Churches. Then followed the consecration of the altars; the consecrating priest marked five crosses on each altar with his thumb dipped in a compound of ashes, salt and wine, the choir chanting meanwhile the Antiphon, "I will go into the Altar of God." The Archbishop, Bishops and clergy then went in procession round the interior of the Cathedral three times, asperging and blessing the walls; the relics were then borne in and deposited in the "sepulchres," or hollows in the altar stones, which were closed and cemented; the altars were incensed on their five crosses, the consecration crosses on the walls were anointed, and, as a final act of the chanting of the choir, the sanctuary vessels and ornaments were consecrated and the Cathedral thus became a sacred habitation, one vast shrine for what all true Catholics believe to be the actual Body and Blood and soul and divinity of the Savior. It is only by realizing this, the main doctrine of the Roman Faith, that the grandeur which marked the ceremonial can be understood.

English Catholics Under Edward VII.

During the nine years in which the late King Edward occupied the throne, the progress of Catholicity proved itself one of the most marvellous phenomena of Church history in modern times, says Yves de la Briere, writing in Etudes (Paris). And not only did the Catholic Church flourish in Great Britain alone but also in the dependencies of the British Crown. If one were to seek any particular period within the last decade in which this startling change from old-time antipathy to an almost reverential attitude on the part of English Protestants, one would have to go back to the days when France—"the first jewel in Mary's crown," as it once was called—obeyed the religious Orders of the country and disestablished Catholicity in the State. At that time, less than ten years ago, says M. Briere, a small army of religious men and women, he took themselves to England and were received with an unbounded hospitality which the most sanguine among them did not expect.

As a result of this arrival among the erstwhile anti-Catholic inhabitants of Britain, there has gradually sprung up over many a region in the country a disposition even among those who had previously been most hostile to our teachings, that expresses itself in a broader consideration of the outward manifestations of Catholicity, a greater reverence for what had hitherto been a mystery and an ambiguity, and a large accession of Catholic social vitality into the general public life of the Kingdom. This remarkable change, it is only fair to say, declares M. Briere, is to be attributed to the personality of the late monarch and his remarkable gift for impressing his own predispositions, characteristics and tastes upon the people he nominally governed. His sympathy towards the Catholic Church was well-known and among his closest friends was the most popular London priest of his day, namely, Father Vaughan, many of whose collateral ancestors, it may be noted, served the throne in ecclesiastical capacities for generations before the Reformation.

The British King had, says M. Briere, visited Pope Leo XIII in state in 1903, and then and often afterwards bore testimony to the deep impression this meeting with the Sovereign of Christendom had made upon him. His recollection and effect indeed changed his whole attitude from the man-of-the-world's easy and indifferent tolerance to one of personal and permanent interest. Thereafter his resentment against the official and officious protests of the Nonconformist bodies and such organizations as the Protestant Alliance declared itself on more than one occasion when these essentially anti-Catholic societies expressed their displeasure at his willingness to visit Catholic churches, as was the case at the memorial service held in London when King Charles of Portugal was slain in the streets of Lisbon.

Dealing with the question of the Oath of Declaration, M. Briere, in the course of the same article tells us that the Anglican prelates, including the Archbishop of Canterbury, are favorable to the passing of a law which shall eliminate from the Statute book a declaration so offensive to the Catholic body, "This Protestant formula," they say (declares M. Briere), "is not very much in accord with the Eucharistic doctrine held by many of them. Nevertheless they are agreed to the necessity of looking upon Parliament as a body that does not vote theological decrees, but political resolutions. That it will pass with few dissentients is the opinion expressed by the writer in Etudes."

The figures of the present infant mortality alarm Germany, where the fact that there is a notable increase is evident from the statistics just published. Out of 2,000,000 persons born alive last year in the empire, 251,000 died under the age of one year, a record exceeding 17 per cent. The highest mortality by kingdoms is in Bavaria, 22 per cent, the lowest, 16.8 per cent, is in Prussia. As compared with the British Isles, the infant mortality in Germany is very high. In the former the general percentage is 10.8, the rate of mortality varying from 11.8 per cent, in England and Wales, where it is highest, to 9.2 per cent, in Ireland, where it is lowest. A German statistician explaining these figures, says: "The simple solution seems to be the Irish woman is naturally the better mother of the two, and that in the nursery the power of organization and officialdom is strictly limited."

Moving Picture Shows in Germany.

Recent agitation here concerning the dangers growing out of indiscriminate exhibits in moving-picture shows will make the following, taken from the Allgemaine Rundschau, of interest to American readers:

"The Ministry of the Interior of Baden has recently published detailed police regulations to govern the action of municipal authorities in issuing permits to kinematographic exhibitions. The regulations urge upon those concerned the closest attention to exhibitions of this character and insist upon such supervision and discrimination as will eliminate the recognized evils frequently accompanying moving-picture shows. The impelling motive of the restrictive legislation is plainly declared to be the danger of moral corruption especially to the young, arising from the unwholesome food for the imagination suggested by these exhibits. The regulations forbid proprietors of these shows to permit children under fourteen years of age to enter their theatres unless accompanied by parents or guardians.

"A severe censorship is insisted upon before permission may be granted to exhibit pictures of any kind. This censorship eliminates at once all such numbers of the program as may appear from the titles used as dangerous to morals; in doubtful cases the presentation is allowed only after a private view of the pictures shall have assured the authorities of their harmlessness. In those towns in which there is a district commander of police, each new series of pictures is first to be viewed by a police commissary, who reports to his commanding officer on the character of the pictures. Should anything immoral or indecent be remarked in the series, the pictures are at once condemned; the same holds true of representations of crimes and of any other scenes so gross and unrefined as to produce an evil impression upon the onlooker. Under this heading there is specially noted a prohibition of detached scenes of dramas and plays whose rendition is for some or other reason forbidden in the theatres of the kingdom.

"Over and above this initial regulation of kinematographic shows by district police officers, the town and village authorities are ordered to exercise supervision over the subsequent exhibition of pictures once approved, by unannounced visits to the shows in order that no impropriety may be allowed to creep in. The entire legislation governing moving pictures is made applicable as well to stereopticons, lanterns and penny-in-the-slot machines, since experience proves that these, too, frequently carry immodest and immoral pictures. Finally the side-shows that are usually so attractive a feature of fairs and market days are to be carefully censured lest they prove a source of corruption and depravity among the young."

A man who had had wide and varied experience in entertaining the public, summed up his impressions of the credulity of human nature in the statement that "the people dearly loved to be fooled." They do not exactly like to be fooled, but they like to persuade themselves that they are not being fooled, when their better judgment tells them they are, and so enjoy sensational things without being obliged to open their eyes. The people of Berlin have lately been indulging in a good deal of so-called "spiritualism." A certain Frau Anna Abend was the favorite agent, or medium, in putting people in communication with the other world. Now, the German police are extremely matter-of-fact, as we have always heard; and, without regard for the dangers of meddling with the supernatural, they managed to lay hands on one of the supposed "spirits," who proved to be Anna herself. So Anna's little cake is dough; and Berlin silliness will have to find some other humbug to amuse itself with, for Anna is a place that has little enough of the supernatural about it, namely, a German prison.—Cassell.

Deception Continued.

The Patriot has abandoned its unique method of computing the Provincial debt; but from time to time sneaks into its columns equally preposterous and misleading statements of the public revenue, collected by the respective parties while holding office. In a recent issue, it undertakes, in a half-hearted manner, to show that the Conservatives collected more money directly from the people than the Liberals in a period of twelve years, respectively. But the way it goes about this is quite in keeping with its record; it is unfair, misleading, false. It tabulates what purports to be a correct statement of receipts by the Conservatives for twelve years, and then divides by twelve, giving a yearly average. But when it comes to present the Liberal side of the case it gives no twelve years statement—no average yearly amount; but simply takes one year, when the receipts from the sources named were at their lowest, and puts this against the average struck in case of the Conservatives. Anyone with a spark of honesty would say at once that that is a most contemptible and misleading method of argument. But that is not the only dishonest and misleading feature of the Patriot's method of argument, as we shall presently show.

The Patriot undertakes to construct its specious fabric in this fashion: It first sets down the item of $82,193.72 collected by the Conservatives, during their twelve years in office. The item is not disputed, and surely no one will say that this was not extremely light taxation for a period of twelve years. The next revenue contribution charged by the Patriot to the Conservatives is the amount of money received from the Land Office, $528,900.00. If the Conservatives received this amount from the Land Office, it was not in the form of taxation. It was only in fulfillment of the bargain entered into by the people for the purchase of their lands. When the people finished paying their yearly instalments they had the possession and title of their free farms. Twenty-five or thirty years ago the receipts from the Land Office, by whatever Government was in power, were large; because the people were, as it were, in the middle of their term of purchase from the Government. But for some years past the Land Office has been closed as a separate department, and the trifling receipts coming in are accepted in the Registry Office, where whatever business there is in connection with public lands is transacted. In view of this amalgamation and the small amount of land business now transacted, the Patriot certainly shows the cloven foot in its comparison, as we shall demonstrate.

The next amount charged to the Conservatives, as an item of revenue is extraordinary to be sure and the bringing of it into the calculation shows beyond cavil the sore straits to which the Patriot is reduced in order to make a point against its opponents. It is nothing else than the statute labor. The Patriot estimates this to have been worth $30,000 a year, or $360,000 for the twelve years the Conservatives were in power. It certainly places a high value on the statute labor, as compared with the road tax under the Liberal Government. The Patriot says only $14,875.21 were received from this source last year. Is that the reason we had so much better roads under the Conservatives? The statute labor brought no revenue into the Provincial Treasury; but anyone had the option of commuting his labor by the payment of a certain amount of money. It was altogether voluntary, and it does not seem to us it should be brought into any calculation of Provincial revenue. However, as the Patriot has thought proper to do so, we will offset it in this way: During the Conservative administration only $82,000, in round figures, of taxes were collected. Had they continued to collect at the rate of the Davies Government the Conservatives would have collected $360,000 more than they did. The people had this money saved to them by the remission of the taxes; they were that much better off. If, as the Patriot says, they gave $360,000 worth of work to the Government on the public roads, the Government gave them $360,000 in remission of taxes. Let the one go against the other and the item will drop out of the calculation altogether.

With the elimination of the statute labor in the manner described we have this statement, according to the Patriot: Taxes collected by the Conservatives $82,193.72 Land Office receipts 528,900.00 $611,093.72 Dividing this by twelve, the number of years the Conservatives were in power, we have $50,925 as the average annual income directly from the people; not $80,924 as the Patriot would like to make it. This calculation must appear correct to all right thinking men.

Now let us see how the Patriot deals with the question from the point of view of the Liberal Government. The Patriot was very particular to place against the Conservatives the operations of their twelve years of office and then strike an average. One would suppose that for argument sake, it would make some semblance of treating the Liberal side of the question in the same way. But it does nothing of the sort; it absolutely and palpably shows its dishonesty and its purpose to deceive by simply taking the statement for the year 1909 and placing it in contrast with an average year of the Conservative's twelve. So far as the Land Office receipts are concerned, as a matter of computation they are almost reduced to nothing; for as we said, the Land Office is now closed as a separate department, as its business is practically completed. The receipts at the Registry Office, on account of public lands, for 1909 amounts to only $2,672.85, and this is what the Patriot takes, instead of an average year of twelve, to put against an average year of the Conservative administration. Could anything be more bare-faced, misleading or dishonest. It treats the other items of revenue in the same way. Here is a sample of the Patriot's everlasting desire to mislead and deceive the public.

Were the Patriot actuated by a disposition to be fair or honest with its readers, it would give the whole Land Office receipts under the Liberals for twelve years, and the full taxation for twelve years, and from the total of these strike an average year. That would be something like fair argument; but the Patriot abhors fair argument.

The true statement of revenue receipts, from the Land Office and taxation, during twelve years of Liberal Government is as follows:

Land Office receipts $277,803.36 Taxes collected 835,489.25 $1,113,292.61

Dividing this by twelve we find that the average annual receipts were $92,774.38 instead of $49,947.73, as set down by the Patriot. These figures are compiled from the returns in the Government blue books. Will the Patriot undertake to refute them? What do the electors of the Cardigan district, or any other electors, think of this last attempt of the Patriot to deceive the people?

In this calculation we have said nothing about the manner in which the Liberal Government squandered the resources of the Land Office by granting slashing discounts to their favorites. In this way thousands upon thousands of dollars were wasted and squandered. The more the matter is probed the worse it gets.

Look Very Much Alike.

The Summerside Journal of July 27th has, sandwiched in here and there, in its editorial columns five distinct paragraphs relating to our Provincial finances, that look very much like parts of an editorial article which appeared in THE HERALD on July 20th. With the exception of a few verbal changes and some slight transpositions, necessary in introducing separate paragraphs, one would be inclined to say that they had been carved from the HERALD's article. It is, of course, much more convenient to find what you want already prepared for you than to have the trouble of searching and compiling for yourself. However, as the Journal is in this way, assisting to spread useful information we are not disposed to find much fault. But when the Examiner copies some of these editorials and gives credit to the Journal, we are inclined to demur. In order to put the matter in its proper light we will insert one of the paragraphs in question and let our readers judge. In our article in the HERALD of July 20th, we were discussing the condition of our Provincial affairs when the Liberals took office in 1891 and we said: "When they came into power, there were no taxes, the Provincial debt was only $128,000, and the annual interest charge was only $2,697. Now we have a debt, according to the Government's own showing, of $863,205; an annual interest charge of $34,155 and a million dollars have been collected in taxes."

In the Journal of the 27th the paragraph appeared as follows: "There were no taxes when the Liberals came into power" in this Province while the public debt was only $128,000 and the annual interest charge $2,687. The debt today, according to the Provincial Auditor's report, is $869,009, the annual interest has climbed to $33,155, and taxes amounted to about $1,000,000 have been collected. This is lively moving, isn't it?"

This looks very much like the HERALD's paragraph, quoted above. One line is added at the end and a few slight changes are made in the body of the paragraph. The Examiner copied the Journal's paragraph and gave the Journal credit for it. The Examiner need not have waited until the matter went round by Summerside. It might have copied the original paragraph and given the HERALD credit instead of the Journal. But even under these circumstances we are pleased to see our contemporary assisting in the dissemination of useful information.

Wireless Traps Criminal.

Dr. H. H. Crippen, wanted in London, for the murder of his wife, formerly Belle Elmore, and his companion, Miss LeNeve, passengers to Canada on the steamer Montrose, were placed under arrest when the Steamer reached Father Point, Quebec, on Sunday last. The identity and prompt arrest of the fugitives from justice is another triumph of wireless telegraphy.

As far as can be established, Dr. Crippen is thought to have murdered his wife, about the last of January or the first of February last. He reported she had gone to America and after some time had become ill of pneumonia and finally died. Shortly after these reports he appeared with Miss Ethel Le Neve, who had been his stenographer, as his wife. Suspicions were aroused and about July 6th, Scotland Yard, the London detective headquarters, began investigations when remains of the missing woman was found in the basement of the house occupied by the Dr. The Dr. and his companion became uneasy and are said to have left London on July 9th. On July 16th, search for the fugitives began. All vessels for American Atlantic ports were searched.

The Steamer Montrose for Montreal, was thought to have the fugitives on board, under the names of Rev. John Robinson and son. Another Steamer, the Laurentic, left England a little later having on board Inspector Dew, of Scotland Yard. While on the Atlantic, Inspector Dew got into wireless communication with the Captain of the Montrose, and the identity of Dr. Crippen, under the name of Rev. M. Robinson, was quite established. Dr. Crippen had no knowledge that all this wireless communication was going between the ships.

The Laurentic arrived at Father Point, where pilots are taken aboard, Friday morning, and Inspector Dew went ashore on the Government tug Eureka, on board of which was Chief McCarthy of Provincial police force. Here he remained the guest of Chief McCarthy until the Montrose arrived Sunday when he boarded her, and the Dr. and his companion got the surprise of their lives. They were immediately placed under arrest, and taken to Quebec.

St. John Fair's British Features.

Patriotic Items on the Great Programme of Specialities.

Several important features at the Dominion Exhibition, to be held in St. John, N. B., September 5th to 15th next, will stir the loyalty of visitors to a high pitch. The visit of the Royal Canadian Dragoons from Quebec will be an innovation truly; and in the Musical Ride which these military equestrians execute with such wonderful spirit and grace, a series of rhythmic evolutions will astonish watchers. These manoeuvres will be gone through with to the music of massed bands, and during the two engagements of the Royal Dragoons at the Toronto Exhibition tens of thousands of spectators cheered them to the echo. British brass bands belonging to St. John regiments and other Maritime Provincial militia will give continuous concerts in various sections of the grounds and buildings, and in the fireworks programme each night a Battle of Dreadnoughts (British versus German) will be shown. These features in themselves, which are only a small section of an enormous programme, will give Union Jack lovers lots to cheer over.

The Telewriter.

London has beaten New York in one feature of up-to-dateness. It has the first "telewriter" exchange in the world, which was recently opened. The "telewriter," which should be explained, is a device for writing by wire. One subscriber to the service calls the number of another through a telephone attachment on the new machine and then sits down and writes what he wants to say, the message appearing on a roll of paper at the other end of the line. So far London has only 40 subscribers to the new system, confined to a small section of the business center, but before long it is hoped to extend the wires all over the city and to make the service as general as the telephone.

The Duke's Coin.

(Lippincotts.) The Duke of Norfolk was once making a long journey by rail. At each station he would get out to stretch his legs and on several of these occasions other passengers stopped him and asked questions, which the duke courteously answered.

When the destination was reached a tired old lady who had noticed this, but who didn't know the duke from Keir Hardie, or Jack Burns, caught him by his ducal sleeve and said:

"Now, my good man, I've noticed you at all the stations loafing about. Just make yourself useful for once in your life. Pick up these bags and rugs, please, and hurry out and get me a cab."

The duke mildly shouldered the bags and rugs, and after the old lady had got safely in her cab with them, she gave him sixpence.

He bowed and said: "Thank you, madam, I shall never part with this coin. It is the first money I ever earned in my life."

Coronation Oath.

The King's accession declaration bill, in an amended form, passed its second reading in the house of commons on July 27th, by a vote of 410 to 84. The bill as it now stands provides that the pronouncement against Catholicism shall be eliminated and the clause, "and declare that I am a faithful Protestant" shall be substituted. The non-conformists showed a strong opposition to the original substituting clause, which read: "And declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant church as by law established in England," and the premier finally accepted their amendment. It is believed that all difficulties have now been removed and that the bill will survive the committee stage, and be accepted by the house of lords without further trouble. During the discussion in the commons several anti Catholic societies gathered near the parliament, and a number of "no popery" placards were displayed. (The bill has since passed its second reading in the Lords without division.)

Grand Trunk Railway System.—District Passenger Agent's Office.

G. T. R. LONDON, ENG., OFFICE

A very neat and handsome publication has just been issued from the Grand Trunk Offices. This is a strictly European publication. The front cover has a splendid picture of the imposing new Grand Trunk Building in Coopers Street, London. Scattered through the booklet are a number of interior views in addition to being the chief traffic office in Great Britain, the new London building provides also a temporary London home for the Canadian and American visitor. Here, travellers may have their mail sent, and here they can find reading and waiting room. There is also provision for business meetings and busy men when in London. There is an information bureau where business men may obtain all information regarding shipping and the cost transportation of goods from all parts of Europe to Canada and the United States.

In the windows there can be seen products of Canada's paintings of mountain scenery, industrial scenes and an illuminated map of North America showing the Grand Trunk Railroad System and its connecting lines leading to the Pacific Coast. Also visitors may register their address for the information of friends who may wish to look them up. The site occupied by the Grand Trunk Bldg., at Coopers Street is one of the most central in London. The Piccadilly (Cross Station) the Metropolitan and Hampstead Tubes (Charing Cross Station) are all found within two or three minutes walk of the building. Motorbuses stop at the door, carrying passengers north, south, east or west of London, following the Haymarket, Pall Mall, Piccadilly, Strand and Whitehall routes.

James Park, with the historical Horse Guards and the new Admiralty Building one side, Buckingham Palace in the distance, while to the southward lies the palace of Westminster.

Far-Sightedness

Near-Sightedness

Uncorrected by glasses, imposes a severe tax on the eyes, which are needlessly weakened by the strain involved in trying to misuse them. Defects in vision grow, like weeds, without cultivation, and it's dangerous to overlook them. Whatever may be thought of a tax on income, a tax on the sight will never do, as it is apt to leave taxpayers out of sight.

Should you need glasses, better have your eyes tested and fitted at once. You will find our prices quite reasonable.

To Be Well Dressed at a Reasonable Cost

Let Us Make Your Suit!

Have you been giving your money away to a poor tailor for clothes that did not satisfy you? or worse still have you, thinking you were saving two or three dollars on your suit, paid your good money for a "Ready-Made"—a suit that stays good only until you wear it, and instead of adding to your appearance, will by its bad fitting qualities make you appear poorly dressed. Have you ever thought that a "Ready-Made" was the most expensive Suit you could buy. Do you know that one good Tailor-Made Suit at $20.00 to $25.00 will outwear any two Ready-Made at $15.00, and that the made-to-order suit will hold its shape and its good looks until the cloth is worn out, while a Ready Made will only look good for a short time. Isn't it cheaper for you to invest $25.00 for a good suit once a year, than to invest $15.00 for a poor one, twice in that period? You will agree with us in that, won't you? Then our proposition is this: We keep a stock of all the best cloths made—we have Worsteds, we have Tweeds, in all the leading shades; we have Serges and Vecunias in blue and black—in fact we have everything that's made for men's clothes. We have expert cutters, men who have spent years in studying the art of designing men's clothes, and we have a staff of workmen trained in every branch of the trade, men who put into a job work of the highest order.

You can select a suit at any price from $18.00 to $30.00. We will make it to your individual measure, we will put the best of trimmings into it, and we give you good style and the best of workmanship. In short, your money is not ours until you are satisfied with the suit in every particular.

Don't you think it will pay you to leave your order with us?

A beautiful fringe of timber. The natives were astonished to see white men, but no hostile demonstrations were made. It is likely that few, if any, of these Indians had ever seen a European before.

Marquette was well enough acquainted with the language of the Illinois tribe of Indians to converse with the villagers. When he had explained who they were, the object of their visit and the pleasure it afforded them to meet some of the inhabitants of that delightful country, the Indians gave the explorers a very cordial welcome.

They were invited to a feast which the squaws had prepared, and which Marquette describes as follows:

"It consisted of four courses. First, there was a large bowl filled with a preparation of corn meal boiled in water and seasoned with oil. The Indian conducting the ceremonies had a large wooden spoon which he dipped into the mixture, called by them Tagemoty, and passed it in turn into the mouths of the different members of the party.

Marquette and Joliet were delighted with the beautiful country. The fish and game were plentiful, and the friendly reception by the Indians, all conspired to give the explorers a lofty conception of both the country and its inhabitants. This was Iowa as seen by the first white man.

SHARP KNIFE-LIKE PAINS

Would Go Through Heart

Thousands of people go about their daily work on the verge of death and yet don't know it.

Every once in a while a pain will seem to shoot through the heart but little attention is paid to it at the time, and it is only when a violent shock comes that the weakness of the heart is apparent.

There is only one cure and that is MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS. Mrs. J. E. Nixon, Riverview, Ont. writes: "Two years ago I suffered with a bad pain around my heart. At times it would almost stop beating and then, a sharp knife-like pain would seem to pierce the heart. I sent and got two boxes of them, and when I had only used a box and a half I was entirely free from pain."

Her Baby Nearly Died.

WAS TAKEN SICK WITH Dysentery.

Mrs. Chas. Farrell, Oakland, Man., writes: "My dear baby was taken sick last fall, and we got the doctor and he said she had dysentery. She nearly died with it, but two or three doses of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry completely cured her."

"My two little boys got a bad case of diarrhoea and two doses made a wonderful change and they were completely cured also. I would not be without such a grand medicine as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry if it were twice the price, as I consider it a wonderful medicine, and I cannot recommend it too highly."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for over sixty-five years, so you are not experimenting when you use this old and tried remedy.

Do not accept any of the many substitutes for this sterling medicine, but ask for Dr. Fowler's and insist on getting what you ask for. Price 35 cents.

The Cliff Haven Dramatic Co., under the direction of Mr. Bernard Sullivan, gave the third performance of the season on Saturday evening. In honor of the officers of the 6th U. S. Infantry who graced the occasion with their presence, the cast presented a double bill.

New York Cottage 1, under the supervision of Mr. F. Ounnon, gave a masked ball and barn dance on Friday evening at the Champlain Club. The occasion was one of the most unique and pleasant of the season.

The Ladies' Alumnae Auxiliary Association held a meeting on Tuesday and decided upon August 12th as the date for the annual bazaar for the benefit of the Chapel of Our Lady of the Lake.

The boys of the College Camp, the liveliest place on the assembly grounds, gave good evidence of what the American lad can do at his camp fire Tuesday evening. The programme consisted of minstrel, vaudeville, burlesque, songs, dances and quartette numbers.

The lecture programme for next week includes the course in Education by the Rev. William Turner, D. D., and the series on "The Church the bulwark of the Republic" by Rev. John H. O'Rourke, S. J. The evening periods will be taken by Thomas F. Wilkinson, LL. B., of Albany, N. Y., and song recitals by Miss Bertha Clary, of New York.

Wire Wounds. My mare, a very valuable one, was badly bruised and cut by being caught in a wire fence. Some of the wounds would not heal, although I tried many different medicines. Dr. Bell advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT, diluted at first, then stronger as the sores have healed, and best of all, the hair is growing well, and is NOT WHITE as is most always the case in horse wounds. "Better take a hardwood table ma'am. It is the fashionable thing," the dealer said.

"No," said the young woman; "baby will soon be old enough to hammer, and he never could drive a nail into hard wood. I'll take a plain pine table."

"Who is that man you were just talking with?"

"That's my brother-in-law."

"He looks enough like you to be your own brother."

"He is my own brother. We are twins."

"Twins? Then why did you say he was your brother-in-law?"

"Because he is, I have three brothers—one in law, one in medicine and one in the army."

Minard's Liniment cures Diphtheria

"The last time I saw him was thirty years ago, when he was a baby."

"Well, I saw him yesterday, and he hasn't changed a bit."
