Grand Alliance;

Love That Knew No Bounds.

CHAPTER XII.

"And why," exclaimed Mrs. Alwyn to Leonora, as soon as their informer was gone—"why should not I send something that will be useful? At such a time it must be accepted as a compliment. A son is all very well. Even a small squire like Mr. Massey wishes for one, I suppose. But they will have to save money for him to spend by and by, and they'll value money's worth now all the more."

The consequence of which happy inspiration was the packing off to Barnes of the deep-pointed breadth of costly gaiters that long ago had raised many a grand dame's envy when displayed upon some velvet-fronted dinner-dress, and with it went a cleverly worded note, making the offering to the "new, most precious boy," in terms that quite affected that unconscious little person's mother, drawing from her a tremulously pencilled acknowledgment of this gorgeous christening robe.

The immediate result of this little maneuver was precisely what Mrs. Alwyn had calculated on. The countess had called and been most affable. Then had Mrs. Alwyn let fall those somewhat premature words concerning her younger child which she intended to turn to more accounts than one. Ten days afterward a luncheon had followed at Oakleigh Place. Quite a family affair. No other strangers than Leonora and her mother, Sydney (for once, to Mrs. Alwyn's complete approval) being tied to an engagement in the parish; and Lady Comyngham had commented on Leonora's pink-and-white coloring, "apple blossom," she called it, adding "I was the very complexion gentleman admired. Her son Edward had spoken of it. He fancied he had particular reason to think it beautiful. Some day Mrs. Alwyn would see if he was right!"

In expectation of that day Mrs. Alwyn had to wait, hiding intense excitement under outward calm. But she drove her pair of plans along the daily course with the skill of a cool head and a firm hand. It was desirable—best—kindest—that Sydney should be detached from The Dale. This she never lost sight of for a moment. And the sooner the better. Then, if this other business lagged, she could invoke the aid of little diplomatic shifts, shadows of sham—that the younger daughter's honest-eyed presence made difficult. There fore, though the girl in her new-born elation was difficult to depress, Mrs.

Alwyn took pains to make her feel that she considered the partition of property a fresh partition of interests, pleasures, affections, and let her distinctly foresee that the Sydney of the future would be more isolated than her home than the Sydney of the past. So counter ran all this to the semi-hellish's deepest desires—she who had yearned for love that she ever wanted to buy it—that there is small wonder if it drove her straight on to the result intended; and if when Mr. Rupert Villiers came down armed—for this was to be his grand attack!—with the very rose she had been longing for, and the very most attractive manner he could don, she received him as heartily as thirsty leaves a shower!

And well the young man played the last round in his hand. Marriage, or some means of clearing up with his creditors, was imperative. That remembrance filled him with keenly nervous energy. By now those oft-repeated insinuations were unfolding their meaning to Sydney.

MAGICAL RESULTS!

The results obtained by modern methods of cleaning and dyeing can only be described as magical. Articles that are soiled, stained and crumpled till apparently past hope, can frequently be restored by the dry cleaning process, to the appearance of new garments, while others that are faded can be dyed fashionable shades, and thus enter on a new lease of life.

What did they mean to her? Was she glad or sorry? As yet she could tell nothing. She was dazzled, bewildered. But the new mood touched her with such peculiar grace that Mr. Villiers' pre-arranged attentions came very easy to him, and made the moment that should end this Act the First seem very alluring.

Beyond his second day with them the moment surely would not have been delayed, delightful as was the dallying on the verge of confident conquest; but once again accident played him an unkind trick.

A line from the Gate House called Sydney there, and sent her back in distress.

Mr. Villiers was on the lawn, watching for her, she felt, as she returned, and to him she confided the trouble.

"Mrs. Dacie went out for a holiday that was to do her so much good; now she is ill and longing to get home. But her sisters write that it is impossible for her to travel alone and ask if Mary can go for her. But of course she can not, for Dr. Dacie is just helpless without her. Oh, Mr. Villiers, I am so fond of Mrs. Dacie and so sorry about it all! And I do so want to ask mamma to let me go for her, but—I dare not!"

And the beautiful eyes looking up under their black fringe said, "Ask for me!" a petition that Mr. Villiers, seeing in it occasion out of which he could make capital, answered promptly: "Let me be your envoy to my aunt and make it smooth with her. I'll soon get her to say 'yes.'"

And this, by what seemed legerdemain to Sydney, he actually achieved, and noon saw her off on the hasty Samaritan journey.

Mr. Villiers drove her to Hedyngnam: Hills vis-a-vis taboing all but commonplace talk. But when Sydney was ensconced in the stuffy luxury of a first-class, her charioteer leaned on the window, reminding her, "You will be sure and return for Friday?"

"Before then, most likely," blushing at his anxious expression. "For I've something most particular I want to give you then."

"I shall be home."

"And I shall want to ask you something, too!"

"Yes?" nervous, and deeply crimsoning again.

"Do you think I deserve anything for helping to send you away when I wanted you at The Dale?"

"You deserve a great deal for getting me leave to go to poor Mrs. Dacie."

"A great deal? Then you are grateful to me?" The train was moving off, but he paced by it, looking under the brim of her brown hat at her downcast eyes.

"Grateful? Yes, very."

"Then, Sydney, when you come back I shall ask you for my reward."

CHAPTER XIII.

Despite her presumably regrettable mission, Sydney's journey through that long June afternoon was the very reverse of sad.

Mrs. Dacie was not reported so very ill. As likely as not, calculated Sydney, knowing her well, her new malady was only a great restless homesickness that could easily make prey of such a house-mother as she, for close on forty years, had been. If only this, then the magic of the gold stored away in Sydney's purse would soon furnish the medicine for a speedy return. If by ill-hap anything more serious impended, still the coming fullness of that same purse would surely be able to level some difficulties, smooth some cares away!

So, resolutely refusing the situation any very seamy side, but rather painting it with colors off the palette of her own bright present, Sydney sped along by homestead, village field; past sleepy little towns, basking by river-sides in hollows of the landscape; effected, by aid of friendly porter, a most complicated change at such a junction of perplexing lines as would have driven the invalid, unescorted, clean demented swept by a grand cathedral, with up rising lantern so stern and solemn for the moment awed the buoyancy of her spirit into something akin to prayer; and glided into mid-England unwearied by miles or hours, having within her, plus recounted pleasures a something secret surpassing all—mixed mystery of hope and expectation that sufficed to annihilate space and time for that one exciting day.

Those last glances of Rupert Villiers! His last words! What had they meant?

Why, one thing. One only. That the message rarely heard unmoved.

All the journey's length his farewell entreaty for her quick return followed her, ringing like music in her ears. Such a heralding was her of summons from the unfettered fields of girlhood into the happy bondage of woman's royal domain that her whole nature trembled while it glowed at the prospect, and any attempt at calmly judging her own emotions was lost in the all but mystic new conditions that environed her.

The glow of the afternoon was melting into evening when Sydney was set down at her destination. Stranded at the small station of the very rural town that, with quite respectable hills in the background and stone-built dwellings in lieu of East Anglia's interminable brick and plaster, had half a foreign look, she found an arrival from St. Clair's as far unexpected that no one was a hand to meet her.

Cabs being luxuries unknown a Chaddeley, she had first to inquire her way to the abode of Miss Thorne and Mrs. Carew, spinster and widow sisters of Mrs. Dacie, and then make her way thither afoot, independently carrying her own light impediments.

The long street traversed, and the modestly well-to-do little house looking out on its own croft from windows framed in ivy and month-roses, discovered at last, Sydney's unannounced appearance on the trim pink-begirt lawn scared the good people at whose bidding she had come amazingly.

The trio were out-of-doors, rusticated in an arbor cut from a hedge of yew. Mrs. Carew, a plump, elderly likeness of Mrs. Dacie, ensconced in a garden-seat, was knitting flaming scarlet comforters for next winter's service. Miss Thorne, larger, longer, more determined of aspect, sat bolt upright on a three-legged stool, reading the poetical effusions of a local genius; the invalid sister peacefully dozed in her easy-chair, under the soporific influence of drowsy rhymes and the buzzing of gnats.

With the unlatching of the gate the two wakeful ladies were on the alert. At sight of Sydney both hastened forward, careful not to rouse their sister, and offered a welcome mingled with confused surprise.

"My dear," whispered Mrs. Carew, "how glad we are to see you! But we didn't expect you—I mean we never thought you could get here so soon. You see, your dear mother—but—" stopping short—"I—I beg your pardon! I must be mistaken. Is it Mary?—Mary Dacie?"

"Certainly not, Carry," interrupted Miss Thorne, in peremptory undertone. "How could you make such a blunder? Kindly excuse us. We were rather expecting a young relative my sister had not seen for many years. But may I inquire who—or to what we are indebted—"

"I am only Mary Dacie's friend, Sydney Alwyn," was the straightforward reply to this embarrassed questioning. "Perhaps you may have heard my name from Mrs. Dacie." Both sisters set up an affirmative murmur. "As Mary can not leave her father very well, I came instead of her, to take Mrs. Dacie back if she is able to go. But"—glancing towards the arbor—"she does not look worse. Is she? We were frightened about her when your letter came."

"Indeed, so were we when we sent it," returned Miss Thorne, emphatically, "but we never meant to upset them at St. Clair's. We are so vexed if we did. It is so good of you to come, Miss Alwyn. We do hope it has not inconvenienced you!"

"But we felt it our duty to write," said Mrs. Carew, "when poor Mary Ellen had those dizzy attacks."

"And seems to pine after her husband's doctoring so extraordinarily," out in the spinster.

"Which was only natural," added the widow; "but dizziness, Miss Alwyn, as our father, who was a physician, used to say—dizziness may mean anything from bile to apoplexy."

"And we felt the responsibility so great, we were forced to let them know the true state of the case."

"Not that poor Mary Ellen actually asked us to write for her daughter, you understand, Miss Alwyn, only—"

Well, "only," as Sydney could clearly gather from the explanatory letter they poured forth in lowered key, this timid feminine household had fussed itself into a violent state of alarm, and had evidently jumped at the idea of getting their guest safely back to her own home, though in the presence of this generous young stranger they felt a little bit ashamed of the course they had somewhat selfishly adopted. They were very voluble, though, in mutual exculpation, repeating how they would both "do anything for dear Mary Ellen, but—if anything were to happen!" and at that solemn juncture "Mary Ellen" woke up suddenly, and added her quota of astonishment to Sydney's reception. Once assured, however, that no horrible calamity at St. Clair's had sent her young neighbor to her side, the invalid was so genuinely delighted at the sight of her that she most readily condoned the exaggerated fears which had fetched her thither.

Molly Meets Some Celebrities.

By RUTH CAMERON.

The Author-Man and his wife were making their annual two months stay in the heart of the Big City.

The Lady who always knows somehow had received a letter from the Author-Man's wife and was reading it aloud to Molly.

Molly listened big-eyed. When the Lady had finished and folded up the letter, Molly sat staring thoughtfully into the fire, frowning a bit.

"There, that's just a sample or two," said the Lady, coming back to her chair, "of the stimulating people you can meet any time you want. You see Molly," she went on, "I used to feel the way you do about meeting real people and being afraid I'd stagnate if I didn't. Then I got to thinking about it and I realized that after all I could meet the best part of them. Don't you know that people who write almost always put the best of themselves into their books? The Author-Man says they seldom talk well and are usually disappointing to meet. What they write they have thought over and polished off. They haven't done that with what they say. So after all we get the best of them."

Molly picked up Thomson and turned to his spirited and amusing defense of his views. The Lady looked over her shoulder. "Do you imagine he ever said anything better than that to his friends?" she asked.

"Big Sister," said Molly enthusiastically, "I don't. And I don't believe even the greatest author was ever so wise and stimulating as you."

And the Lady laughed.

down and keeping. And, do you suppose the Author-Man has met anyone more interesting and stimulating than Thomson? Well here's some of the best of him too."

The Lady laid two volumes on the table and reached into the bookcase for a third, "The Poet."

"Of course you've heard about the famous circle of visits and authors and critics and actors that gathered about Johnson," she said. The Author-Man doesn't find anything like that even in the Big City. And here it is right in this room with all the original flavor preserved for you by a man who had a genius for doing just that."

The third volume was Boswell's Johnson.

"There, that's just a sample or two," said the Lady, coming back to her chair, "of the stimulating people you can meet any time you want. You see Molly," she went on, "I used to feel the way you do about meeting real people and being afraid I'd stagnate if I didn't. Then I got to thinking about it and I realized that after all I could meet the best part of them. Don't you know that people who write almost always put the best of themselves into their books? John Sullivan, Esq.,
Inspector General Constabulary and Chief Fire Department.

Dear Sir—At a meeting of the Directors of the St. John's Nail Manufacturing Co., Ltd., held to-day, the firemen were very much praised for the manner in which they acted at the recent fire in the Nail Factory Building, confining the fire to the inside of the building, slightly appreciating their work. Please find enclosed cheque for $100.00 to be donated by you in your usual way.

We are yours respectfully

My Dear Sir—Let me on behalf of the men of the Fire Department, and for myself, thank you and your Company for the kindly words of encouragement conveyed to us in your note of the 9th inst. in respect to what you consider good services rendered by the Department on the occasion of the fire at your factory which occurred on the 28th ultimo, and also let us thank you for your very generous gift of $100.00, which the men of the Department have requested me to hand over as a donation from them to the Treasurer of the Marine Disaster Fund.

I am, my dear sir,
Very truly yours,

Fresh Pain.

It keeps the beauty lover yielding to see a dainty, shabby dwelling, that shrieks aloud for paint; it jars his nerves and racks his spirit, and blasts his eyes, or pretty near it, and makes him sick and faint.

Some folks will wear such costly rainment, you wonder how they make the payment, or keep their stand-off good; and all the while the sparks they live in are bum and shabby past for getting old piles of dingy wood. I bid that painting be done at every man, a paint to beautify a debt that should be paid; he reads how high you may be flying, you'll crack up cheap if occupying a battered house and frayed. Then let us buy some oil and ochre, and clean up our old house and speak her with paint that hits the spot; and paint is best—it's rich and mellow—but you can use pea-green or yellow upon your humble cot. Some paints are bright and others duller, but any old three-cornered color will beat no paint at all; so let's go painting, put together, and brighten up our dwelling whether it's hut or stately hall.

Household Notes

For painted walls dissolve two ounces of borax in two quarts of water. Add one tablespoonful of ammonia. Use half this quantity to each bucket of water. Do not use soap. Rub with clean towels till dry.

If a garment become badly soiled with perspiration, put it in soft, lukewarm water and wash with Indian meal instead of soap. This will remove stains of long standing if the meal is well rubbed into the soiled places with your hands.

A delicious sandwich for the school lunch basket is made with hard-boiled egg minced fine, and having mixed into it a little butter, a little mustard, some cream, and salt to taste. This is laid on lettuce leaves between slices of bread and butter.

Raisins and currants will sink to the bottom of the cake. This is supposed to prevent it. Put the raisins or currants in a dish and get on the bottom of the stove, stir them and see that they do not burn. When thoroughly heated, add them to the batter.

The top of a child's stocking is usually the first place to show signs of wear. If the new stockings are lined down as far as the knee, the garter fastening will not tear it so quickly. Do not fasten the lining at the lower edge, as this would make an ugly seam.

To keep suet, remove the skin, put it in a sauceron and place on a warm fire. Let the suet melt gradually. When melted, pour into a pan of cold water. When hard, wipe it dry, wrap it in a piece of linen. Store in a cool place and when wanted it may be rubbed on a grater.

Every gardener will appreciate a kneeling board. It can be used when planting, weeding or cultivating the flowers. It is made from a piece of wood 12 x 24 inches, wider one long-edge of half-inch, with a support three or four inches high, to keep the board at a comfortable angle. The upper surface of the board should be padded. A solution which will remove stains from the hands, at the same time softening them, is the following: Put into a bottle two ounces of water, four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a few drops of carbolic acid. Shake well and after washing and wiping the hands, rub a little of this mixture into them.

Potato omelet is delicious. Take a large, freshly baked potato and scoop out the inside. Beat this until smooth and mix with it half a salt-spoonful of paprika or white pepper, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dessert-spoonful of lemon juice and the yolks of four eggs. A minute or two before the omelet is fried fold in the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth. Fry in a well-greased, very hot pan and serve in a hot dish.

Pots and pans should receive the most scrupulous care. For instance, a skillet which has been used for frying should have two washings, the last in boiling-hot soapwater. The saucepans and pots should undergo the same treatment, and when the vegetables or soups or cream sauces have been put into their respective dishes ready for the dining room, the pans should be filled at once with warm water; they will be much easier to wash.

The kitchen range can be managed in a way to save fuel. Upon rising in the morning, turn over the grate, open the draughts for a few minutes. When the coals begin to brighten the draught should be shut off. Then breakfast can be prepared and the fire used for an hour afterward without replenishing. This method can be repeated at each meal. The oven heats more easily if the fire is clean and the fire box not more than half full of coal.

Vigorol A SPRING TONIC.

It tones you at once. That tired, dragging, sleepy feeling is removed, and you become bright and cheerful. It is pleasing to note the thorough and exhaustive way in which the members of the different Societies and Unions have set to work to make a thorough collection of money from the people of the city.

A Lull in the Storm

There is a lull in the political storm on the other side of the water. This is due in part to the Easter holidays, but in the main, in all probability to the desire of all parties to find a way out of the trouble which they must take with honor to themselves and peace to their common country.

The Westminister Gazette urges the idea of the Ulster Irishmen settling the matter among themselves and looking over the past three months, it comes to the conclusion that parties could have sensibly approached each other and that the remaining gap could be bridged with patience and forbearance. So say we.

Newfoundland Disasters Enquiry.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

JACOB DALTON (Sworn).—I belong to Catalina and was at the ice in the Newfoundland this spring. This is my second spring to the seal fishery. I was one of the men who started for the Stephano on Tuesday, March 31st, having been informed that there were seals in the Stephano's neighbourhood. We left about seven o'clock.

HENRY KELLOWAY (Sworn).—I belong to Perry's Cove. I am 23 years old. I was one of the crew of the Stephano on the 31st of March. We left our ship about 7 o'clock. It was a fine morning, warm, the sun was shining brightly.

by Capt. Kean. He told us to get out over the starboard side, and to follow on the line of carcasses until we came to a flag belonging to him and we would then be in a patch of white-coats. I got out over the starboard side of the Stephano. When our flags were thrown overboard, that is the flag we brought over to her, I heard Capt. Kean on the bridge say "Hurry on and pass her head."

FREDERICK YETMAN (Sworn).—I belong to Brookfield, Bonavista Bay. I have been going to the ice for thirty springs. I have been second hand with Capt. Abraham Kean for five or six springs. This year I have been second hand with Capt. A. Kean on the Stephano. On Tuesday morning, the 31st of March, the Newfoundland lay to the S. E. of us about four or five miles. Capt. A. Kean went up in the Stephano's barrel that morning just after dawn, as soon as he could see. He remained up there till all the men were put on the ice to kill seals.

A word to those who wear "Twenty-five cent Glasses." Do you realize that by so doing, you virtually admit that twenty-five cents is the value you place upon God's greatest gift to you? There is no law to prevent you from injuring your eyes by using such glasses excepting, perhaps, the law of common sense.

Romance Again

Marian lingered longer before the mirror in her little room as she dressed, than she had done in many a day. The trepidation of a rare excitement wove through her being. The unexpected presence in the city of Bert McDonald stimulated her with the wine of romance, inflaming her imagination.

Flocks of memories of former days trooped upon her. She felt again the thrilling sense of pleasure which had come over her every time she met the young law student on the college campus. Vivid recollections took form in her mind—of dances to which he had taken her, of rambles on warm spring days through the parks, of glances exchanged as they sat at stimes study in one of the libraries, or while listening to lectures in the classroom.

They are much alike—those romances of college days. They flourish after a fashion until the world widens between classmates on commencement day and they go forth on alien paths. If they marry happily, these earlier events fade into dim memories and are soon forgotten. But if marital tragedy rides into the home, the past is called upon to furnish its sentimental lodestars. Everywhere are women who seek comfort in dreams that no one sees, no one knows, no one guesses, in a pitiful effort to temper a bitter present with the details of a former past.

The law student, though Marian had regarded him as lost to her forever, when she married the other, had nevertheless remained the center of her deeper affections. At first she had striven resolutely against even thought of him. But his face and form had always hidden like a magic apparition into her musings.

When she had dressed, she ate the indifferent fare of the boarding house dining room without thought of the feeble consommé and without resentment against the boiled New England dinner. The hunger of her soul made her forget the demands of the body. And for once she felt no misgivings as to what her fellow boarders might be thinking or saying about her and her divorce.

Having eaten, she hurried back to her room for final preparations before the mirror. Her blood danced under the caress of the powder puff on her cheek. Deft touches of the satin surfaces of the eye-brow pencil added their final strokes. She viewed herself from many angles, and felt satisfied.

"You may be married and divorced," she said, addressing her reflection, "but you're still beautiful!"

She got out her hat, gloves, coat and furs and waited.

"She got out her hat, gloves, coat, and furs, and waited. The lash of excitement made her nerves tingle with uncanny, suppressed delight. A dozen times since Bert had telephoned, she had read a brief note which had come from him three years ago in congratulation upon her marriage, the last letter she had received from him. Here was a sentence in which she perceived words of significance: "If the time ever comes that I can serve you in any way, please do not hesitate to let me know. Don't forget that I am always yours sincerely."

A taxi cab stopped with a snort in front of the house, a man descended, and a moment later a maid rapped at Marian's door and announced her visitor.

In Memoriam.

On March the 9th, the little settlement of North Arm, Conception Bay, was cast into gloom when it became known that death had claimed for its victim a fair young girl, named Elizabeth O'Brien. It was made even more sad by the fact that it was only three short weeks before, she was among her companions in a social gathering, and little did they think then that her dear young life would be so soon cut short. She was a general favorite with all. She was one of a hearty, cheerful disposition, always a bright smile on her fresh young face. Her illness was only of a short period, and her death came as a shock to her many friends as it was thought it was only a cold from which she would soon recover, but fever set in and she rallied for a few days, and on Monday, March 9th, death relieved her from her suffering.

When it became known that death was drawing near, the priest was called and administered to her the last rites of the Holy Church. She leaves to mourn her a sorrowing father and mother, three sisters and six brothers, two of whom are working at Sydney and one sister at Revere, Mass., who are grief stricken over her death. Greatly indeed will she be missed in her home circle, as well as among her companions. Her funeral took place on the 11th and was the largest seen in Holyrood. The promoters of the League of the Sacred Heart, of which deceased was a member, walked before the hearse. Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Finn and the funeral procession wended its way to the cemetery where all that was mortal of a fresh young life was laid to rest.

Our home is dark without her; We miss her everywhere.

A FRIEND.

THE GREATER QUESTION

At this season of the year for Farmers with up-to-date ideas is, what are the best means to use to get the best returns from the land.

Fertilizers must be used liberally if large returns are looked for. There are several good chemical fertilizers which may be recommended, but Sulphate of Ammonia has been proved to give the best returns, and is the most valuable and economical source of Nitrogen for agricultural purposes.

For vegetable, grass, and all leafy crops, about one and a half cwt. per acre is the best quantity to use, and this should be applied when the plant is in its early stages, as well as before sowing the seed.

If a liquid manure is preferred, a ¼ oz. of Sulphate to one gallon of water should be used, and applied once a week for a month. This quantity should not be exceeded.

It is a good plan to reduce the Sulphate to a fine powder, and mix with four or more times its own bulk, for the purpose of diluting the manure, which is very powerful.

For potatoes the following mixture is strongly recommended:—
40 lbs. Superphosphate.
20 lbs. Fine bone meal.

10 lbs. Carbonate of Magnesia.
15 lbs. Sulphate of Potash.
21 lbs. SULPHATE OF AMMONIA.

1 cwt. Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to 42 square yards.

The use of Carbonate of Magnesia, in conjunction with Sulphate of ammonia, is of great importance in potato culture.

For turnips use the following:—
60 lbs. Superphosphate.
13 lbs. Fine bone meal.
13 lbs. Sulphate of Potash.
20 lbs. Sulphate of Ammonia.

1 cwt. Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to square yards.

Sulphate of Ammonia of excellent quality is now made by the St. John's Gas Light Company, and may be obtained on very reasonable terms.

Full particulars may be obtained at the Gas Works, or at the Board of Trade Building. Ask for special booklet on the use of Sulphate, it will be found of great value in securing the heaviest crops.

The New Dances.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slivash." As the indoor season gallops briskly to its close, numbers of new dances are being introduced by the enterprising teachers who have taught all America how to Tango this winter, and must now teach them something else or go out of business.

This has been the greatest year on record for new dances. Hundreds of them have been copyrighted and in ten thousand parlors eager young scientists are sketching out the ground plans for further improvements in the art of intermingling the feet of the sexes.

The Tango and the Turkey Trot are now so old-fashioned that only the aged indulge in them. One of the most fascinating new dances is the Rude Rabbit. In this dance the couple leap lightly there leaps at a time through or over the neighboring dancers, and then pause to munch lettuce sandwiches.

Another late favorite is the Chimpanzee Trot. In this dance the couple hang from the chandelier by one hand, keeping time to the music with their feet.

Another very popular innovation is the Pyramid Special. In this very fine step the dancers stand perfectly still in the middle of the floor while the other dancers climb over them.

PITTSBURGH, April 14.—Forty-five thousand miners are idle to-day, voting on a proposition to approve or disapprove of a wage agreement, entered into between the district officers and the coal operators. DUBLIN, April 14.—A good many Liberals have been discussing exactly what is going to happen when a Home Rule Parliament is actually sitting in College Green, in the course of next year. By these circles Prince Arthur of Connaught, it is thought, will be the first Viceroy under the new order of things. There has not been a member of the Royal Family at the head of the Government of Ireland, since Henry, Duke of York, afterwards Henry VIII was appointed Lord Lieutenant and Lord Deputy in 1494.

LONDON, April 14.—Premier Asquith was greeted with an inspiring ovation on his return to the House of Commons to-day. During question time, Mr. Ackland, Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs gave the House official information as to the events in Tampico as recorded in the despatches. He told that Secretary Bryan, at the request of the British Ambassador at Washington had taken steps to impress the commandant that a most serious situation would be created by wanton destruction of the oil fields.

Mr. Ackland described the followers of Carranza as rebels to which Josiah Wedgwood, a Liberal M.P. took exception. Ackland replied "I think the word describes them well enough in the absence of their being conquerors."

Special to Evening Telegram.

ABERDEEN, April 14.—The Scotch express train, Northern Britain, was wrecked near Burnt Island station to-day. The engineer and fireman were killed. Five passengers were injured and will probably die. While en route to this city, travelling at the rate of sixty miles an hour, the express dived into a freight and passenger engine and was thrown from the rails upon the golf links, that lies parallel to the tracks at that point, dragging two coaches after it. Two express cars tumbled over. Other cars piled up against this wreckage. Fire broke out in the debris. The injured are badly burned.

Special to Evening Telegram.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Wilson, to-day, ordered practically the entire Atlantic fleet to Mexican waters to force a public salute to the American flag from the Huerta Government, as an apology for the arrest of some American marines at Tampico on Thursday last. No ultimatum has been issued—that is no specified time has been set within which the Huerta Government must comply—but the naval demonstration has been ordered as a concrete evidence of the fixed determination of the United States to back up Rear-Admiral Mayo's demand for a salute. Up to to-night Huerta had not made any satisfactory response to the demand. "Future developments depend upon Huerta himself," was the way a high administrative official, close to the President, summarized the situation to-night.

Special to Evening Telegram.

Those who have lost a large percentage of their underpinning have been sadly neglected by the dance composers. A new dance for over-looked people remedies this. It is called the Stork Schottische.

The Railroad Rag is filling the hospitals of our leading cities with wounded. This fascinating dance, in which the dancers all move in opposite directions and refuse to turn out for each other.

The "Shoulder Skate" is a combination of the Doty Dip and the Slide for Life. In the "Shoulder Skat" banana positions are scattered over the floor and the dancers go through the first four counts on the feet and the next eight on their shoulder blades.

Science is so busy with the new dances that it looks at present as if acrobatic building and other trivial pursuits would have to be abandoned.

THE DIAMOND—emblem of innocence—is the birthstone for April, and the warding of the old lines—

She who from April dates her years, Diamonds should wear, lest bitter tears For vain repentance flow; this stone, Emblem of innocence is known—quaintly expresses the popular belief in the happiness and good-luck that follow the wearing of this birthstone.

Set in a Ring—alone or in combination with other gems—the diamond lends itself with charming effect to dainty designs in distinctly personal Jewellery. For bride, mother, sister, friend, or as a token of regard upon the one day in the year that is all her own—the diamond is pre-eminently appropriate in April.

"PEPITA."

Pepita was played again last night to a pretty large audience and the production was an improvement on the first night. Amateurs generally do better work on the second night—the case of Pepita is no exception. As far as possible the exits were enlarged and the male voices in the chorus were more pronounced than they were the night before. If the players had settled down to their work, the audience had settled down to a better understanding of the piece, for the appreciation was more continuous and the applause more earnest and at more frequent intervals. The piece has now reached the place where the galleries are catching on to the music, and some of the lighter airs are being hummed and whistled all over the city. From this fact and other indications it looks as if full-houses will be in order all through the week. Whether by accident or design the chorus seemed to get nearer to the front of the stage last night and as a consequence the vocal volume was stronger and clearer than the night before. The management will no doubt appreciate the fact during the run of the piece. Every player reached his or her standard of the night before, some thought even better, both in singing and acting. Particular mention must be made to the orchestra. Considering the number of players and variety of instruments, the harmony and time were splendid, and Mr. Allen and the players deserve the highest commendation for their work. Credit too must again be given to Messrs. Anderson, Patten and O'Neill for their management. We understand that a great many tickets have already been sold for the rest of the week, but there are still some good places available.

Fishery on Western Banks.

Bankers do Well—Ice Hammering Operations. The Board of Trade have received these reports of the fishery on the Western banking grounds:—"From T. Soper, April 4th.—(Channel to Port aux Basques).—The total catch is 2837 qts. of codfish and for last week 214. Five boats and 22 dories and skiffs are fishing. No bankers but the following schooners have arrived from the grounds, Belle of Burgeo, Beatrice K., Louisa A. W., Grace Otis, Soucis Viguette and Condor. Those have done very well considering ice conditions and they have among them approximately 1000 qts. Prospects are very good and there is sufficient frozen herring for bait at present. The ice hangs on the shore being driven in and out by high winds and fishermen have been very much hampered in their operations. Better results could not possibly have been accomplished under the present circumstances. It is a pity just now, with such a fine show of fish, that the ice should be scattered all over the fishing grounds."—"From M. Fuzeeaux, April 4th. (Rose Blanche to Petites).—The total catch is 8520 and for last week 630. Eight boats and 58 dories and skiffs are fishing. Thirty-three schooners have arrived from the grounds. There is a great improvement over last week, but the bait supply of frozen herrings is almost used up. The weather has been stormy and boats and schooners were fishing only part of 2 days. Had the weather been favorable the catch would have been the largest for the season. Both skiffs and schooners found fish more plentiful than in any week past but could set only a small quantity of gear each, on account of unfavourable weather."

George St. Y.M.A.

At the regular weekly meeting of the above Association last night, Captain Saunders favoured them with his farewell address previous to his departure for the States. He took as his topic: "The Benefits of a Technical Education" and the members and visitors listened with profit and attention as he graphically and from life pictured the advantages that have come to many through taking the opportunity of continuation schools in their young manhood days. The splendid advice and kind interest manifested by Capt. Saunders in the young life of our city cannot be estimated, only the lapse of years will reveal the great harvest of good which is bound to come forth. Mr. P. Mew, Vice President, occupied the chair during the address with grace and dignity; on motion by the President seconded by Mr. W. F. Kellogg, a hearty and sincere vote of thanks was accorded the speaker, and kind wishes for his safe return home, also trusting we shall have at no distant date the pleasure of welcoming him again to St. John's. The banquet to be held on April the 22nd was postponed as our guests for that occasion the members of the M. I. A., owing to the disaster, and one of their members, Mr. Parsons, being on the S. S. Southern Cross, had to out of respect respectfully decline the invitation. Next Tuesday the Camp Committee will report, and an excellent program provided. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem, and Benediction by Capt. Saunders.—Com.

The Newfoundland Disaster Enquiry Before Judge Knight.

There was no session yesterday morning the hearing being resumed at 3 p.m.

Dr. Lloyd.—When Capt. Wes. Kean used the expression "thank God" he did not convey to me the idea that it was an expression of relief that his men were on board my ship clear of the storm. On Tuesday morning I saw no sun bounds about the sun. A sun bound generally means rain and foul weather, not a storm. I was not watching the sun specially as my work lay in another direction. The signal I sent the Newfoundland on Monday meant that I was in the seals. If there had been no seals nearer her than those my crew and the Florizel's were working I should have kept the Newfoundland's crew on board and divided them up with the Florizel and probably the Bonaventure, but knowing of this patch within 3 or 4 miles of the Newfoundland and hoping she would get in through the thick ice soon. I deemed it best to put her crew near that patch. It was fair inference for Capt. Wes to draw from the signal I gave him that I was in a good patch of seals with room for all our crews to work. I thought he would get his ship to us, but his ship being jammed, and the other crews being seen at work it was reasonable for him to send his crew to us, and when he saw his crew boarding the Stephano, I would not think I would put his men where mine were working and expect them back that night but that they would be on one of the three ships. Knowing that the other crews had gone to the N. N. W. I saw it was impossible for the Newfoundland's crew to do anything that day where the others were working, then, knowing of the small patch which I had left the evening before, which was 3 or 4 miles from the Newfoundland, I took her crew on board and then took them to the seals nearest their own ship, expecting, of course, that they would have the seals in time to reach her before dark. The heavy ice I referred to had been in contact with the land and had ratted, the low broken sheet was what we term whirling ice. The men from the Newfoundland, although travelling over heavy ice, did not appear in the least fatigued when they came on my ship, and when they left my ship to go for seals, were as cheerful as I ever saw a crew of men under similar circumstances. I presume the men had bread and tea, which is the usual food supplied and which men generally prefer. The vessels used by Yelman, my barrellman, on Tuesday at 9 a.m. were: "The Newfoundland's crew are just leaving their ship." I saw the Newfoundland all the morning from the bridge. Yelman was in the barrel from 8 o'clock until the crew came on board. When I said I was proud to see George Tuff, it was because I knew him to be a man of experience and a good leader. I had no knowledge of the ability of his master watches, and it was not because I anticipated any storm. The statement that Tuff objected to leave the Stephano is utterly unfounded, nor had I any knowledge that any man wanted to stay on board, but thought them all as willing to get out at the seals as any men I ever saw in my life. So far as risks go, no man who goes to the sealfishery can avoid them. It is risky from start to finish, and if a man expects to take no risks, the only safe way is to stay at home. A man may be heedless, and thus increase unnecessary risk, and I have always when sending my men from the ship, say 5 or 6 miles, said to them, "Now, boys, look after yourselves. I cannot tell you what to do when you are out of my hearing; always do what your best judgment tells you, but always go by the advice of your master watches and no blame can attach to you. If the ship gets jammed a long ways from you, leave your work in time to get on board before dark. If thick weather comes and I can't get near you, I will keep the whistle blowing at intervals, and if I get close to you, near dinner time, all come aboard to dinner." Then at times when they are out of hearing I give instructions how to be governed by flags. A flag hoisted on the mainmast means "all hands aboard"; if on the foremast, "all hands go ahead"; if on the mizzen or ensign staff, "all hands go astern"; if on the starboard side, a flag points in that direction; if on the port side, in that direction. These are generally my orders. The qualifications of a master watch should be first of all, 4 or 5 years' experience of the seal fishery but the ability of the man counts; some are more apt to learn, and are possessed of more intelligence, natural ability, and can learn in 4 years what others could not in 10. It does not always depend on the length of time they have been at the seal fishery. He should be expert with the compass, have a commanding appearance and manner, and a leader among men, always careful, with good judgment, with determination, pluck, and energy. As to the Toronto Forecast my experience in the coastal service from May to January, I would set very little value upon them at the seal fishery, unless an extraordinary storm, for the season, that while they are often right, they are also often wrong, and masters and crews were from 4 to 10 miles from the seals, they would rather go and find out for themselves rather than remain on board on a fine day because a storm had been predicted the night before. Is it practical or common sense to imagine that if we were in the seals 3 or 4 miles from another steel ship with equal power and number of men, and she were jammed while my men were killing seals, from sending out his men to work, because on the previous night he had a wireless that a storm was due next day? I don't think it is, and I don't think that because this accident has happened under the peculiar circumstances, that our sympathy should go the better of our judgment, though we should have everything practical for preservation of life and property and employ every measure to minimize the risks which have to be taken and the most practical thing I know of is the Marconis, next to that is a thorough survey of all ships, and a report from Lloyd's surveyor which should be presented to the Government, and that substantial boats sufficient to carry every member of the crew in case of accident, without overloading, and two or three very large boats not used for general work, but for life saving. The carrying of sleeping bags and tents is not to my mind practical, for even if the men were secured from the wind by calico tents, they would have wet clothes and wanting rest require something warm to lie down on, and the lying on ice would be likely to cause injury and death. As to sleeping bags, any man in any circumstances will board his ship if possible, and they will throw away the ice flag or hauling rope, and their oil skins have been left behind in order to remove any weight that would impede their progress. As to food supply, I am not sure what every man carries. Have known them to carry oatmeal, sugar, raisins and Radways. When I was a man on ice I always carried hard bread and butter, while as master I have ordered my cooks to give men whatever food they want; some prefer pork and bread, others bread and butter. One remark I would like to make, viz., that the courage and valor of some of the Newfoundland's men should not be overlooked. One, a Collins, from New Harbor, displayed courage in preserving life. One man reported to the captain that in his opinion 20 men would have died in one night, but for Collins; and another said, "I am alive, captain, but I do not thank myself. I should have been dead long ago, but for Jesse Collins." George Tuff also deserves great credit for taking the post of hindmost man, and when the first man took sick remarked, "if there's going to be two men on the ice I will be one of them." The services of such men should be recognized in some substantial way. As to panning seals, if panning were done away with, and a ship were jammed, her crew would have to go 5 or 6 miles to drag on board a tow of seals, which would entail increased labor, and if night came on and a storm came up, fatigued men with their ship jammed, would almost surely be visited with accident. In the case of the Newfoundland it was known that seals were 3 or 4 miles from the ship. It was a fine day with fair barometer; had the men walked to haul seals, their case would not be much better than the way it turned out, except that they might have slipped their seals, but that would not in my opinion have bettered their condition or position, while the labor of dragging their seals would have rendered them less fitted for the ordeal they had to go through. If panning were prevented, ships would try to reach the centre of the patch, and for convenience and labor saving, the men would be sent in all directions, and in the event of a storm, and the ice easily reached, the men could not be so easily reached, and their situation would be serious, as if the ship went in one direction for them, she would be going from the others. I am of opinion that there would be more loss of life in, say 20 years, if panning were prohibited than if it continues. Before panning, many a man lost his life dragging seals to his ship. Panning has only existed since steamers were employed, in a general way. Panning means the dragging of seals a few hundred yards, and the steamers can go and pick them up, thus minimizing the labor of the men, and keeping the seals in good condition. My opinion is that the Toronto weather report might be useful, taken in conjunction with the barometer, but would not be a complete guide. I have not found it of such use in the coastal service. Under all the circumstances I do not think I erred in my judgment in not going to the Newfoundland to ascertain if her crew were on board on Tuesday or after. The reason I did not go was because when I reached the big ice after I got my crew from the Florizel the ice had gone together so tight that it became impossible to penetrate it. To invite other ships to the rescue would have been impracticable, as none could come, and I had no doubt but that the Newfoundland's crew had reached the ship, as when they did not come to me, I was sure they had left in time to reach their own ship. I did not go on Wednesday morning because I felt certain the crew was on board, and I do not think it possible that we could have penetrated that big ice at any time on Wednesday. Although the Bellaventure, south of us was moving about, she was in the low ice, and there is nothing to show she could have got through the big ice, for on Thursday she was all day in it trying to rescue the dying, covering a distance of 2 or 3 miles; and I did the hardest butting of my life in forcing the Stephano through 5 or 6 miles of ice, and did not reach the Newfoundland until Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

To the Judge.—Flare-ups and fires could not have been seen that Tuesday night, the only thing that might have been useful was rockets, though

I don't know that we could have seen them. Once in the Aurora, 65 of my men were out and I was anxious. I fired rockets, which the crew, next day, told me they saw distinctly, but I got no reply because the ice, on which my men were, had no rockets. Proper legal regulations should be made preventing the use of rockets except in emergency and with special significance, otherwise if used carelessly, great inconvenience and loss might follow.

The hearing adjourned at 6.30 until 10 this morning.

Durango's Rough Trip.

The Furness Liner Durango, Capt. Chambers, arrived from Liverpool at 7.30 last evening, after a passage of 14 days. The trip was the roughest in the experience of Capt. Chambers. Boisterous weather was encountered all the way across the Atlantic, north-westerly and north easterly gales accompanied by huge seas being continuous. The ship kept well south and avoided ice.

This is the second rough time that the Durango has had during the present winter. On her second last trip she was nineteen days coming from Liverpool.

McMurdo's Store News.

During the past week the weather was intensely cold at sea. The Durango had a lot of her deck gear frozen and last night had to get winches and pipes thawed out to allow her to anchor in the stream. This morning she berthed at the Furness Withy pier. The ship brought nine packages of mail matter, 800 tons of cargo and two passengers in transit.

How about your garden this year? If you go in for raising anything from seeds, it will be well to get Sutton's at once, as the experience of over a century on the other side of the water and of some years during which they have been exposed to some pretty severe tests on this side, have proven them to be the best. We keep no low grade and consequently cheap seeds. We believe that the time is fast approaching when the public of this country will not "stand" for cheap seed stuffs, but only the best—Sutton's; and the highest grades of American Cabbage Seeds. Sutton's Seeds have been extensively used by the Agricultural Department, which speaks very well of them, and their use has been a revelation to many who have seen what they can do. So come to us and get Sutton's Seeds.

Attractively-priced MUNICIPALS

St. John's, April 15th, 1914.

During the past quarter Canadian investment demand has particularly concentrated on the securities of the larger Ontario municipalities with the result that their debentures cannot now be obtained to yield more than 4 1/2 p.c. to 5 p.c., and indications are for further appreciation in price.

The debentures of the Province of Quebec and the West-ern Provinces have shared in this advance, though not to the same extent, and for this reason we have added eight of the most desirable of these to our April list.

These carefully chosen municipalities yield from 5 p.c. to 6 p.c., and should show material increase in value during the next few months.

The One to Own if You Can Own But One

"That is what a critical user of a 'Globe-Warwick' cabinet says of his equipment. Another says 'It leaves nothing to be desired.' Another says 'So complete yet so concise.' Another 'Perfectly arranged for all arrangements.' Another 'It is really indispensable.' Another 'A surprising advance in handling records.' Another 'A welcome improvement in the handling of records.' and so on. The extensive sale of 'Globe' filing cabinets in St. John's is by no means as remarkable as the abundant evidence that it is on merit alone that these devices have earned such general appreciation. For certain when you become a user you will be well contented with your adaptable and reliable outfit. Mr. Percie Johnson has your catalogue ready for the asking as well as other necessary details.

The Terra Nova's Bill.

The Terra Nova's crew who were paid off on Thursday last with $79,500, have been paid an additional $423 because of the increase in the price of fat effected on Saturday last. The sealers of the Terra Nova received altogether $82,730 which is the largest bill for this season.

Attractively-priced MUNICIPALS

St. John's, April 15th, 1914.

During the past quarter Canadian investment demand has particularly concentrated on the securities of the larger Ontario municipalities with the result that their debentures cannot now be obtained to yield more than 4 1/2 p.c. to 5 p.c., and indications are for further appreciation in price.

The debentures of the Province of Quebec and the West-ern Provinces have shared in this advance, though not to the same extent, and for this reason we have added eight of the most desirable of these to our April list.

These carefully chosen municipalities yield from 5 p.c. to 6 p.c., and should show material increase in value during the next few months.

The Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society are holding a small concert in Victoria Street School on tomorrow evening, the whole proceeds to be donated to the Sealers' Disaster Fund.

On Wednesday night, the local company who so successfully played that Irish Drama on St. Patrick's Night, will repeat it also for the benefit of the Disaster Fund. No doubt our people fully appreciate the efforts of those kind people to help the widows and orphans, and their efforts will be rewarded by large audiences.

Horrid Fatalities.

Miss Lillian Bayer Had Her Head Severed From Her Body by a Train at Rockingham Last Night—She Was to Graduate From Dalhousie Shortly.

One of the most horrible fatalities that ever occurred at Rockingham took place last night, when Miss Lillian Bayer was instantly killed by a train after she had alighted from a car on its arrival at that station shortly before nine o'clock, when her head was entirely severed from her body.

A particularly sad feature of the terrible happening is that the headless body of the young woman was discovered by her aunt at an early hour this morning.

Miss Lillian Bayer was a young lady of 22 years, and she has been for the past four years a student at Dalhousie University, where she was noted as one of the most clever pupils, having some years ago won a bursary. She was to have graduated this Spring, and another sad part of the catastrophe is that when she lost her life Miss Bayer was carrying home her graduating dress.

Just how the accident occurred is not definitely known, as there were no eye-witnesses of the distressing event. It is believed, however, that while getting off the train she was in some way thrown under a car, and the wheels passing over her neck caused instant death.

Miss Bayer, who has been living with her aunt, Miss Annie Bayer, Rockingham, was in the city yesterday in connection with her coming graduation and intended to leave by an early evening train for home. She, however, was delayed and did not leave Halifax until 8.45 o'clock on No. 9 train, the St. John Express.

The train was quite lengthy and the cars were well filled with passengers. It is thought that when Rockingham was called out by the conductor she started to leave the car, carrying her graduating dress and her bag. She left on the east side, and in getting off must have been swung around and falling between two cars, her head was amputated.

When Miss Bayer did not reach home her aunt became alarmed and made enquiries at the railway station, but nobody had recalled seeing her. The aunt then thought her niece might be delayed and still in the city; she walked to Halifax, and on finding no trace of her she returned to Rockingham, thinking that perhaps she had gone home. Not finding her there Miss Annie Bayer, who is a teacher at the Quinpool Road School, and very fond of walking started again for Halifax, carrying a lighted lantern. On her return to Rockingham she went by the railroad and the shock she received was terrific when she discovered the remains of her niece. She ran to the nearest house, occupied by Thomas Curran, and notified him of the death, and he with Rufus O. Bayer, carried the body from the spot where it laid. The sight was a horrible one to witness, and those who were notified were deeply affected.

The remains when found were lying face down, and her body, arms and limbs were not much bruised, but one side of the head was somewhat crushed in and otherwise mutilated.

—Halifax Recorder, April 9.

is a wonderful product, it makes old woodwork look like new, and is a money-saver for every family. It is made in clear and seven popular colors, dries hard with durable, glossy finish, can be easily cleaned, and is very sanitary.

was especially made to stand hard usage—on floors and street cars; but it is the best finish ever made for all interior woodwork—chairs, bookcases, desks and all kinds of furniture.

You can use it yourself with wonderful results.
