CHAPTER XXVI.

"I don't know. Sometimes I think he will; at others I'm inclined to think he won't. He has a good deal in his favour. Look at him! But there's something fighting against us. His physique's magnificent, but that man's got something on his mind. Of course, you see, he's a gentleman."

Nurse Ruth nodded.

"Yes," mused the doctor. "It's no business of mine—of ours—but I often wonder what brought him here."

"Trouble of some sort," murmured the nurse, her eyes growing compassionate as she looked down at the flushed face and staring eyes.

"Oh, that, of course; a gentleman doesn't come and do navy work on Wrentham Island for his health, or as a pleasant way of passing the time. But what sort of trouble? I find it difficult to think that there's anything shady—I mean, anything up against himself. He doesn't look like a chap who had been forging a cheque or breaking into a bank."

"Doctor!" murmured the nurse, with respectful indignation.

"Well, I said so. No, it's something else on his mind, something that's worrying him and keeping him from making a good fight of it. A woman, I shouldn't wonder. You women are generally at the bottom of every kind of mischief."

"Oh, doctor," murmured Nurse Ruth again, and with a blush. "Poor young man; perhaps it is. Well, if it's a woman who has treated him badly, she ought to see him now."

"You think it would melt her heart?" said the doctor, with a cynical smile. He was young, and had all the young man's distrust of women. It is only in later life that one learns not to generalise, or to form one's opinion on what one gathers, from books. Don't you believe it. You women can be as cold as ice and as hard as nails when you've gone back on a man. But, as I said, this is no business of ours; we've just got to pull him through—if we can."

"Has the wretch who did it been found?" asked Nurse Ruth, after a pause, her usually gentle face hardening.

"No. There hasn't been much of a search after him at present. You see, we've kept it quiet. I don't want a parcel of bobbies coming round to worry my man by taking depositions and all that. Besides, the fellow had a good start, and has got clear off. But, of course, we can lay our hands on him if the case ends fatally."

At these words, cool and self-possessed as she was, Nurse Ruth was guilty of a little shudder as she bent down and renewed the ice bandages on the burning head.

Jack was delicious off and on for over a week, then the fever abated, and the usual weakness set in. It was at this juncture that Dr. Evans and Nurse Ruth fought Death inch by inch. At times they were disheartened, and felt as if they must be beaten; but they always rose to the occasion, and thrust back Death. They had an awful time. The doctor had engaged a locum tenens, and now devoted himself entirely to this patient, in whom he felt a strange interest, and he and the nurse watched in turn, snatching sleep when they could. Exhausted and nearly overcome by the strain as they were, they were quite cheerful, and made forced jokes with wry mouths and heavy eyes. The men, when they approached the hut, trod as softly as they could and lowered their voices. Of course, there were bets on the result of the contest which was being carried on in the sick room; but they kept up the odds in Bill's favour, and one man who had ventured to express his pessimism too plainly had been knocked down promptly by Walsh, who in his off-times was always lingering about the hut to get the latest bulletin.

One morning the heart of the half-stupefied nurse was made to leap in her bosom by the sound of a very weak, but rational, voice from the bed. She bent down, laying her hand soothingly on the sick man's ridiculously thin one, and Jack whispered again. With difficulty she caught the words:

"Is that you, Nora?"

"Yes," mused the doctor. "It's no business of mine—of ours—but I often wonder what brought him here."

"Trouble of some sort," murmured the nurse, her eyes growing compassionate as she looked down at the flushed face and staring eyes.

kind of feeling that if I go to sleep I shall sort of slip away."

"I know, I know," she murmured, and she sat down beside the bed and held the big hand in her soft cool one; and as she held Jack from "slipping back," Nurse Ruth's eyes grew wistful and she sighed, scarcely knowing why.

Jack slept pretty nearly round the clock. When he woke, the doctor, who was in waiting, nodded and threw back his head with an air of triumph and satisfaction.

"Well, young man," he said, as if he were a very, very old one, "you've made up your mind to pull round, have you? Feel pretty fit; any pain?"

"Yes," said Jack, promptly, in his hollow voice.

"Where?" demanded the doctor, while the nurse bent over him anxiously.

"In the stomach," replied Jack, gravely. "It feels as if it had been empty for the last twenty years."

"Oh, he's a bit off all right!" said the doctor, with delighted enthusiasm. "Give him some of that best-tee and about two inches of bread. No more, on your life, or rather his."

They fed him, Jack eyeing the bottom of the basin wistfully, and when both he turned over and went to sleep again.

The next time he woke he clamoured for food and Molly; and when both were brought to him his warmer welcome, hungry as he was, was for Molly, who was allowed to sit on the bed and give him one kiss—one only.

She eyed him rather aghast as she put her moist little lips on his, and remarked with awe:

"How thin and old you look, Bill! I'm 'fraid you've been very bad."

"Yes, I've been rather seedy," said Jack, feebly. "You see, I had an accident—slipped up on the stones—you know how sloshy they are sometimes—and hit my head. It isn't as thick as I thought, and so I punched a hole in it. But it's all mended up now, and we won't say any more about it."

This time Nurse Ruth did not rebuke his mendacity, and Molly was apparently satisfied. Strictly enjoined to remain silent, and not to allow Bill to talk, she snuggled up against him and lay quite content for a time, when, finding silence irksome, she remarked:

"Bill, you've got bones all sticking out like the old cow at the farm."

"True for you," said Jack. "It's because those two have been starving me. But don't you be afraid—for Molly had sat up with an indignant jerk—I'm going to get even with them now they've changed their mind. I'm going to see just how much I can eat without going off like a balloon."

"That's right, Bill," she assured him; then she bent down and whispered, "And I'll bring you some toffee."

"Do—heaps of it," said Jack. "It's just what I've been pinning after. It's my opinion that if I'd had plenty of toffee all this time, I should have been up and about long ago."

Molly, for a day or two, ran in frequently, and Jack was always delighted to see her; but presently the child's visits were stopped, by the order of the doctor, for Jack was not getting on as well as they had hoped and expected. There is a difficult time in early convalescence. Your patient appears to be progressing famously; there are promises of sitting up, not merely for an hour or two, but for a really long while, and then suddenly there comes a relapse. The old weakness returns, and the shadow of Death, not darkly, as yet, but greyly, falls again across the threshold.

"What is it, doctor?" asked Nurse Ruth, trying to keep her lips steady. "The pulse is lower, there is less vitality, he is going back."

"I know that without your telling me," he retorted with an impatient born of his disappointment. "I don't know what it is. He shrugged his shoulders irascibly. "There's something on the fellow's mind; he's not trying hard enough. I go in for curing people's bodies; I don't profess to heal their minds, confound them! If he has made up his mind to die, he must die, I suppose."

Nurse Ruth said nothing to this burst of irritation, but turned to Jack, who lay back on his pillow with a moody countenance and lack-lustre eyes.

Jack's relapse was all the more, let us say, annoying to Nurse Ruth, because she had arranged to leave him on the morrow. Indeed, she had over-stayed her time.

"It's very—disappointing of you,"

CLUETT, PEABODY & CO., INC. MAKERS

she said to Jack. "I thought you were getting well, or I wouldn't have made this next engagement; but here you are, quite the invalid still. It is extremely tiresome."

"Don't you worry about me, nurse," said Jack, earnestly. "I apologise for being such a poor creak, and I'll promise to do my best. I'm awfully sorry you're going; I couldn't tell you how sorry, if I tried; and certainly I'm not going to try to tell you how grateful I am to you for all you've done for me. Of course, I know how hard you and the doc. have worked to pull me through. Let it go at that. He took her hand and pressed it warmly. "I hope your next patient won't prove so troublesome."

"Oh, I'm not going to a patient," she said. "That is, I'm going to be a parish nurse. It's a place in the country, a very pretty place, I believe. I applied for the berth just before I came to you. I'm almost sorry I did not, for I should have liked to have stayed with you until you are quite strong."

"I shall be all right," said Jack. "But, I'm inclined to be a bit jealous of that parish. Wherever it is, it's a jolly lucky parish. Why, when they see you, they'll all fall ill, the whole blessed lot of 'em, for the pleasure of being nursed by you. I thought you were rather clever than otherwise, nurse, but you don't seem to have seen that I've been hanging back just to keep you hanging on; but now you're going to desert me, the game's played out, and I shall have to get well out of hand."

The next morning, when she came to say good-bye, Jack, as he slipped his last ten-pound note into her hand, took up with his other one a bunch of flowers which he had commissioned Molly to pick for him, and offered them with a smile to Nurse Ruth, a smile that did not need any accompanying words. She took the flowers, but only nodded to him, for she seemed to be poor of speech that morning, and turned away hastily.

"Molly," said Jack, as he watched the nurse's cloak-clad figure going towards the quay, "the best thing on earth is a good woman, and there's one of the best."

The demonstration was the sequel of a meeting of independent socialists at which resolutions were passed demanding the establishment of a Socialist Republic. At a meeting of the Progressive parties at Munich, Prof. Quide, a deputy in the Landtag,

BANES WANT PEACE.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 2. German banking and commercial men after a meeting have sent the government a declaration in favor of the acceptance of the Entente's armistice conditions, according to the German papers. MONDAY, November 4, 1918.

The Week's War.

As was predicted in the article under the above heading last Monday, the past week has been prolific of events and a fit termination to the operations being carried on was the complete surrender of Turkey, which country on Thursday, October 31st, by her representatives, signed the armistice agreement transferring all her possessions in European Asia to the Allies, subject to the terms which will hereafter be imposed upon all countries capitulating by agreement.

With Bulgaria and Turkey out of the fight, and the collapse of Austria imminent, if not already brought about by revolution, the Hohenzollern will be left entirely alone to fight a losing battle. No word has been received from the German Government since President Wilson's final note was submitted through the diplomatic agency of Switzerland, but German press comment breathes defiance, and refusal to (with or without allies) submit to the terms offered, or to "allow their country to be handled as Bulgaria was handled." Whether or not Germany humbles herself to accept the offer made to her by the United States, makes but little difference to her ultimate fate. The German vision of a compromise peace has been dissipated, and the punishment which her military rulers have brought upon her is about to be inflicted. Inexorably and determinedly the Allies are drawing a cordon of steel around the German armies in France and Belgium, and slowly but surely expelling the unseemly Hun from his places of occupation. While armistice discussions have been proceeding, and exchanges of peace notes taking place, Foch the inflexible has been steadily pushing all his advantages, and on the Western and Italian fronts has been pursuing his strategical purpose to such good effect that he has pushed the Germans out of Western Belgium and to the Dutch border. Also they have been forced out of the greater part of Northern France, which for the past four years has been held by their armies. South they are out of St. Mihiel and are now being driven north of Verdun, and along both sides of the river Meuse. Their presence has been removed from a large part of the beautiful and fertile province of Champagne, and north of the Aisne they are being harassed and harried by the Allies who are surrounding and hemming them in on all sides. Eventually they will be cooped up in a corner of Belgium, away from their defences on the Upper Rhine in Alsace. In the event of their crossing the Meuse anywhere between Metz and Namur, the forest of Ardennes would cut them off from available communication. South of Metz the Americans hold the German lines of communication under their fire, and in consequence there can be no retreat by this avenue. Retirement north of Namur will probably be a forced one, and should this happen the enemy will have to make his way out of Belgium, if possible, through the narrow neck between Liege and the Dutch frontier. Valenciennes has not yet been wholly occupied, though the British surround that town, and the Germans are still desperately holding it, their object being to gain time for a withdrawal of their forces now in the Lys-Scheldt Valley, while in order to maintain their other lines of retreat they are stubbornly fighting to hold the ground between the Serre and Oise rivers, in an effort to protect themselves from being overpowered in Champagne and to the southeast. No time is being given them to rest or recuperate. The Allies hang on doggedly and everywhere press them heavily, daily gaining more ground and taking prisoners and material. We might expect, especially should disaffection and discontent spread among the German soldiers, as rapidly as it is spreading, or reported to be spreading in Germany, that any day the resistance of their armies will be broken and retreat merged into a disorderly rout.

The trouble in Austria, if the text of the cabled dispatches be accepted as a genuine statement, appears to be increasing, but there is so much of the Mephistophelian character in both the German and Austrian make-up, that the news may be inspired with a purpose. The phrase German-Austrian Government is not a happy one, and unintentionally gives away the game. In all the actions of both Governments the "cloven hoof" has been easily discernible, and insincerity has been stamped over all their peace offers, but with the High Council of the Allies now in session to define and declare the terms on which they will grant the Central Powers an armistice, no fear need be apprehended that such terms will be easy of acceptance. Nevertheless the moment is critical. Notwithstanding the withdrawal of Turkey as a beligerent, and the momentary defection of Austria from Germany, the latter country is by no means to be despised as a military factor, and presents as yet a problem of great difficulty, the solution of which may not be reached for a considerable period.

Late official despatches, received last night, announce that Austria has agreed to and signed the armistice terms presented to her by the Allies. By this collapse of her chief ally Germany is left alone to continue the war or surrender at the Allies pleasure. The capture of Valenciennes by the British, must necessarily compel the German commander in that section to withdraw his forces or run the risk of having them surrounded and captured. In either case the Germans are not in a happy position, and later news may contain the pleasing intelligence that a wholesale capitulation of the German Army has been made, as it is obvious that with Valenciennes taken, the German, should he attempt a retreat, will be badly mauled by the British forces in that vicinity.

Deputation of Catholic Citizens

Some weeks ago a number of Catholic gentlemen called at the Palace to interview His Grace the Archbishop with reference to a certain rumour that had obtained widespread circulation concerning the Rev. Father Nangle, Chaplain with the British Forces. The object of their waiting upon His Grace was to draw his attention to the report and ask whether he had any statement to make on the matter. The Archbishop stated that some months previously he had heard the rumour referred to, but had disregarded it as being unworthy of serious consideration. Of late, however, he said, the rumour had become so persistent and so many inquiries had been directed to him about the matter that he had deemed it expedient to take measures to have an investigation made through the Militia Department in order that he might be able to give an authoritative denial to the absurd report. He intimated that inquiries were then being prosecuted through official channels, and that as soon as they were concluded he would communicate to them the result.

Accordingly, at His Grace's request, the gentlemen interested again called at the Palace yesterday. His Grace informed them that he was then in a position to state that the investigation conducted through the Militia Department here and the Pay and Record Office in London had elicited a statement from the Army Chaplains Department that Father Nangle was on duty with his Regiment, and that there was no truth whatever in the allegation made concerning him. His Grace requested the deputation to take steps to give the widest possible publicity to this official denial. He went on to say that he could not too strongly condemn the circulation of such a report calculated to reflect seriously on the character of a Reverend gentleman who at that very time was doing his sacred work faithfully amongst the soldiers at the front.

The Archbishop assured the deputation that he deeply deplored the necessity which compelled him to make public reference to this matter, so painful to all concerned; but in justice to Father Nangle, a worthy Priest who had been so devoted to the interests of our Newfoundland soldier boys, and in justice to his friends, he felt it incumbent upon him to issue this unequivocal and categorical contradiction of the report.

Woman Knocked Down.

Near about six o'clock Saturday evening, an old woman who was intending to board the street car at the bottom of Patrick Street, on Water Street, was knocked down by the wheel of a long cart bound west, a young man named S. Baker, driving. The driver, feeling the impact, stopped the horse, and with the assistance of another, picked the old woman up, and carried her into a nearby shop. There it was ascertained that she was only rather shaken up, that no serious injuries had been sustained, and that her name was Mrs. Hanson, of Holloway Street. The teamster then sent for a cab, and accompanied by Constables Kelly and Wade, the old lady was taken to her home, where a doctor soon after visited her. The young man is to be commended on his action in stopping to attend to the woman, as others might have gone off, leaving her on the ground. The lights at this section of Water Street were not on, and it was very dark there, hence the accident.

The Woman Who Hated Housework.

By RUTH CAMERON.

I heard the other day of the brack-day of a young married woman. Before her marriage she was a successful private secretary. She loved the work and turned it off her employer; said, more swiftly and easily than any girl he ever had. When she was married she left her position and went to keeping house. She was a reasonably good housekeeper but she did not like the work. On the contrary she hated it. It came very hard to her. It took her twice as long to do simple things, as would take a natural housekeeper. She detested almost every detail of her day and, as a result, the monotonous reiteration became unbearable.

She Lacked the Mother Instinct. Then the babies came, and here again it was the same story. She took good care of them. But it did not come easy to her. She wore herself out over things that, to a natural born mother, would have been very simple.

A few weeks ago, she broke down and had to be taken to a sanitarium. And the doctor said that it was chiefly because she had been forcing her energy into such a resistant channel.

I imagine that is a far commoner tragedy than we realize. Perhaps You Know Some of These Women.

To be sure, not all the women who are its victims go to sanitariums. Many go on about their daily tasks, holding themselves together by sheer force of will—unhappy, and making others unhappy because they aren't in a condition to enjoy life or to deal with it sanely and cheerfully.

And now that I have propounded the problem, what is the answer? God knows, I don't.

I know a man who thinks we shall gradually develop three sexes, like the bees.

And then I know people who believe in co-operative housekeeping, and co-operative nurseries for the tables, freeing such women for the sort of work they really like.

One Big Objection to the Co-operative Nursery.

I am strong for the co-operative

King Albert's Return.

(From the Brockville Recorder.)

The world will follow with natural interest the story of King Albert's return to his own. He stands out to-day like a romantic ideal of an old-time King, who was the protector and the shepherd of his people. Within a few days, it will be recalled, in August and September of 1914, he lost his kingdom, all but a tiny little fringe away on its northwest boundaries. He possessed a kingdom without a capital until, through the friendliness of a foreign power, he obtained a seat for his government on foreign soil, because he could have purchased peace at the price of ignoble submission and refused. To-day he finds himself the hero of monarchist and republican alike. His scattered soldiers were gathered together and armed by friendly powers. Armies have been placed under his command and to-day, as commander-in-chief of armies representing three or four great powers, he is marching back toward the capital of the kingdom which he seemingly had lost. PEACE.
"Oh we were weary," say the dead. "We saw the feet of vandals tread Upon our sacred soils, and heard The shrieks by which our souls were stirred. As those we loved were trampled down. We gazed on many a ruined town. And knew our homes stood in the path Of Prussian host and Prussian wrath And yet we made no cry for peace Nor prayed to have the cannon cease."

"Hunger had left us weak and faint. And yet we uttered no complaint. Our eyes had looked on filthy scenes: All that a Prussian warfare means. We'd witnessed, and we understood How low this demon, if he could, Would sink to win his foul desire. We'd seen our temples set on fire And yet through all our agonized cries There rose no plea for compromise."

"We are your dead! We gave our youth To build a lasting peace on truth. We saw our little homes laid low. Our mothers bear a Prussian blow. Our children maimed by gray-clad hosts. And yet unmoved we kept our posts And gave our lives that time should bring Destruction to so base a thing. They dangled peace before our eyes And we refused to compromise."

"Oh we were weary, sick and sore. Death's mark had signalled every door. And desolation threatened then. Yet we were true to God, and men. Behold us now, as we are here. Who might have lived by compromise. If strong for battle they remain. We shall have given our lives in vain. If peace you make with them, be sure, It is the peace which shall endure."

THE GERMAN HOME.

Gretchen can't meet Otto by the garden gate; mother says she's got to stay at home and hate; Gretchen stands corrected; mother says, dejected, "Duty's been neglected in this house of late. What would be our rating should the Kaiser know that we've done no hating since two weeks ago? We have all been spinning; busy with our spinning, we have had no hating, hating Prussia's foe. Now, then, dinner-wetter, duty must be done; we must all do better, till the war is won; 'tis no time for jesting, laboring or resting we must be detesting all that isn't Hun. No, my little Helme, you can't go and skate, so cut out the hating—you must stay and hate; little boys must cherish hopes that Britons bearish and the French may perish at an early date. No, no Fritzle, darling, you can't jump and run, and there's no use snarling—hating must be done; till our Bill quits kaising, and new thrills are raising, we must be despising all that isn't Hun. Father will be coming from his labor soon, and you'll hear him humming some good Deutschland tune; and he will be stating sentiments stating if he finds us hating all beneath the moon."

BEAUTY'S HAIR BRUSH.

How many times we have seen our friends use brushes and combs that we ourselves would loathe to use, and yet, a close inspection of our own brushes might reveal a state of neglect.

Now, the "proper manner" means that the hair should be brushed out with a good comb, which has large smooth teeth, with blunt tips set wide apart. Then the hair brush should be applied after the combing out process. Never use a brush with metal "bristles" because it is injurious. The brush should have genuine bristles, quite stiff, and set in rows rather apart. The proper brushing of the hair doesn't seem to brush it over until it is smooth and then stop, but to continue brushing it vigorously fifteen minutes night and morning. Be sure that both the comb and brush touch the scalp at the beginning stroke until your entire scalp has been massaged, as it were.

If you have a tendency to dandruff, this vigorous massage with brush and comb will loosen it, and bring it out, and at the same time stimulate the circulation of the scalp and a good circulation of the scalp means the end of dandruff.

All this, however, will not be of any value in beautifying your hair unless you keep brush and comb absolutely clean. Now I know most women would become indignant if they were told that they did not keep their brush and comb clean, but it is doubtful if the average woman ever sterilizes her brush and comb or gives them a thorough washing more than once in a very few months.

Dust and many other things injurious to the hair will collect in the brush and comb and then instead of benefitting the hair they will injure it by carrying this foreign matter to the roots. Sterilize your brush and comb once a week.

Must Not be Returned.

Foreign Secretary Balfour, before leaving a day or two ago to attend the Supreme Allied Council in Versailles, gave out a statement in which he declared to the Allies must hold the German colonies. This is the second time that Mr. Balfour, with great clearness of vision, has made it plain to the world that Britain will never consent to any terms of peace involving the return to Germany of her overseas possessions. His assurance is highly encouraging and nowhere will it be received with greater satisfaction than among the troops in the firing line.

Germany has contended that she must have her colonies back in order to care for her surplus population. This argument is shattered at once by the explanation of observers who point out that German emigration before the war had declined to less than 20,000 out of a population of 70,000,000, and of these only a few hundred sought these brutally governed "places in the sun." Von Hindenburg went further. He declared that Germany needed the colonies in order to secure a supply of raw material. His contention also was exploded by students of economy who pointed out that the colonial exports were almost negligible in the sum of imports demanded by home industries.

Naval writers have been able to put their finger immediately on the German pulse. They explain that Germany wants her colonies for naval bases from which her submarines could terrorize the world and carry on a campaign of frightfulness which would make anything she has done in this war seem small indeed. But this will not be permitted, if Mr. Balfour expresses the feelings of his colleagues in London. It would be a crime of the first magnitude for any peace agreement to include the surrender of the German colonies, and the sooner this is made plain to the Hun the better for all concerned.—St. John Telegraph.

Luxburg in League With French Traitor.

New York, Oct. 28.—Startling disclosures regarding the alleged negotiations of Joseph Callaux, one time premier of France, and Count Von Luxburg, former German minister of Argentina, intending to re-establish Callaux in power in Paris in 1915 and bring about a separate peace with Germany have been made to Deputy State Attorney-General Becker by Count James Minotto, an interned enemy alien, the state officials announced here late to-day.

The deposition of Minotto, who is a son-in-law of Louis Swift of Chicago, has been forwarded to the French ambassador at Washington, Mr. Becker said, and a summary of it has been cabled to France for use in the trial of Callaux for high treason, which opens to-morrow. The full text also is on its way to Paris by a fast steamship.

Napoleon the Less.

Napoleon III, who died at Camden Place, Chislehurst, on January 9, 1873, had a life full of vicissitudes. He was born when the Empire was at its height. When yet a child, he was exiled to the island of St. Helena, and remained until mid-life an exile constantly plotting, and uniformly successful. Then the revolution of 1848 opened to him the path to power. He was elected President, and, aided by the Army and a handful of shrewd schemers, of whom his half-brother, De Morny, was chief, used the post to make himself emperor. He was credited with vast energy and deep craft, and at first unquestionably showed vigour; but the roads of the complaint to which he was destined to succumb caused hesitation and irresolution to become habitual. On their heels followed failure, the meddled and muddled in Mexico, he declined to co-operate with England when Austria and Prussia attacked Denmark, and in consequence Schleswig-Holstein fell into the hands of the latter predatory Power. Nor did he seize the chance when the robbers quarrelled over the spoil, and Obituary.

FRANK SMYTH.
A promising young man in the person of Frank Smyth, second son of George and Ellen Smyth, 11 Bond St., was called to his reward yesterday afternoon after a long illness. Last Fall he developed tuberculosis which claimed him as its victim despite all that loving hands and the best medical skill could do to nurse him back to health. Deceased who was only 16 years of age, was an ex-pupil of St. Bon's College and when taken ill was in the employ of Messrs. Ayre & Sons, Ltd. His only brother, Private Tom, a Blue Puttee man, has been a prisoner of war in Germany a long time. To the sorrowing parents and relatives the Telegram extends sympathy.

WM. H. CHARLES.
Every person acquainted with Mr. William H. Charles felt a pang of regret, when the announcement of his death was made on Saturday night. Though ill of the prevailing disease no fatal results were anticipated, as Mr. Charles was of a particularly robust physique, and it was thought that he would quickly throw off the malady. This was not to be, however, and about 10 o'clock in the evening the last summons came, and the soul of Will Charles passed behind the veil. He will be mourned by a large circle of friends. In life he was amiable, cheerful and obliging. Everybody knew him; everybody liked him; everybody called him friend. Possessing the complete confidence of his employer, Mr. Geo. Neal, with whom he had worked for nearly twenty years, he also enjoyed the respect and esteem of his associates in that business. Being very keenly interested in the fraternity of masonry, the late Mr. Charles held the office of Past Senior Warden of St. John's Lodge and would have gone to the East, had he consented to accept the chair, but with his usual retiring disposition he waived the honor. Left to mourn are a wife, four children, mother, two sisters, Mrs. A. C. Sellars and Mrs. J. D. Rendell, both of this city; two brothers, John, manufacturing jeweller in Boston, and Otto, engineer in the U.S. naval dockyard at New York, to all of whom every sympathy is offered. The funeral which took place yesterday afternoon at the C. of E. Cemetery, was attended by a large number of people, and a guard of honor from the Masonic Lodges was present. The Burial Service was read by Rev. (Capt.) C. A. Clayton of St. Thomas's.

CAPT. F. H. AXFORD.
The sad news went around the city yesterday that Capt. F. H. Axford had passed away at his home, 55 Southside Road. Deceased, who was one of the best known marine masters here, at one time commanded the Church ship Lavrock, and later the Government cruising steamer Fiona. Later, however, he has been employed as a Customs officer at the Dry Dock. Capt. Axford was a Past Master of Avalon Masonic Lodge, and to the end, he retained his interest in that body. He was 71 years of age. A widow and one daughter, Mrs. Capt. Falk, survive, and to them we extend sincere sympathy.

MARY MURPHY.
With regret we record the passing of Miss Mary Murphy, which occurred at her residence, George St., yesterday. Deceased was a daughter of Mrs. and Lewis Murphy, wheelwright, and niece of Undertaker N. J. Murphy. A father, mother, one sister, and five brothers are left to mourn their sad loss. To them we offer sympathy.

MRS. ROBERTS.
A message from Regina yesterday, announced the death of Mrs. (Dr.) Chesley Roberts, from influenza. Deceased lady was formerly Miss Allport, of Orillia, Ont., and became the wife of Dr. Roberts two years ago. To him and his many friends we extend sympathy.

ERNEST G. GRANT.
On Oct. 22nd there passed away at New Glasgow, N.S., after an attack of influenza followed by pneumonia, Sergt. Ernest Gladstone Grant, son of Mrs. and the late J. W. Grant. Deceased was 22 years of age and his death seems particularly sad in view of the fact that he had survived the horrors of the battlefields of the Western front, having been wounded while on duty with his battalion of Engineers, a bomb which struck one of the wagons sending a flying splinter which entered his body. He was gassed also about the same time, the latter being more serious than the wound. After his return home every hope was experienced that recovery from both wound and shock would take place, but the fatal illness mentioned superseded and his young life surrendered. The funeral, says the New Glasgow Evening News, took place on Wednesday at the home of his uncle, Cyrus F. Ross, Bridgeville and interment was made in the Bridgeville Cemetery. There was a large number in attendance, many from New Glasgow, to pay the last tribute of respect to one for whom they entertained the highest regard and whose death they deeply deplored. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. James W. Grant, West Side, and by two sisters, and one brother, viz., Mrs. Charles Archibald, Wabana, Nfld., Miss Jean at home, and David, also at home. We tender deepest sympathy to the bereaved. His death is directly traceable to his injuries in France and he gave his young life to the cause of Empire just as surely as if he had been cut down by a German bullet. He did his bit, he gave his life. Who could do more?

No License.

With regard to the complaint in the Star of Saturday, that the Telegram in its Thursday issue said certain uncomplimentary things about a young soldier, we desire to say that being a Blue Puttee does not carry a license to make use of language such as the soldier referred to was guilty of. If he had considered the honor conferred upon him by being a Blue Puttee, coupled with the additional honor of wearing His Majesty's decorations for bravery, his remarks would have been more in keeping with those which must be expected from a soldier and a gentleman, likewise his conduct. There was no young lady in evidence at the time this disgraceful exhibition took place, which was as well for it is an open question if she would have appreciated the words and actions of her gallant defender, had she been present. We could say that we believe there "isn't no such person." If there were and she was about at the hour when the howl took place, the defendant of her honor must have felt particularly pleased with himself. Should the gallant champion of a damsel in distress desire to have it out with her insulter, with whom (vide Star) he has not yet done, we recommend that the Alice counter be transferred to some other than Wednesday night's scene, and we hope that no killing will take place, as threatened, and the language accompanying the future Homicide Combat, less lurid.

Progressiveness.
To prove the progressiveness of the new American Boot and Shoe Store, we have only to mention that they have obtained a harmonium, which they played in a open window Saturday night. The result was that a large crowd was attracted, which extended to the opposite side of the street. The music had to be stopped to avoid further obstructions of the street. This is a rather novel means of attracting attention.

Oporto Prices.
The Dept. of Marine and Fisheries had the following fish prices on Saturday from the Consul at Oporto:—Large cod, 94 to 96 shillings; small cod, 90 to 92, and old fish, 80 to 84 shillings.

THE KING'S CONGRATULATIONS.

HANDS OVER GERMAN LOCALITIES.
AMSTERDAM, Nov. 2.

Praise for Americans.

Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, Commander in Chief of the British armies in France, has sent the following letter to the General commanding the American troops:
"I wish to express to you personally, and to all officers and soldiers serving under you, my warm appreciation of the very valuable assistance and gallant services rendered throughout the operations of the Fourth British Army.
"Called upon to attack positions of the greatest strength held by a determined enemy, all ranks of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions under your command have displayed an energy, courage and determination in attack which has proved irresistible.
"It does not need me to tell you that under heavy fighting of the last three weeks you have earned the lasting esteem and admiration of your British comrades in the army whose successes you have no nobly shared."

Bad Roads.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—To whom or what Public Department can we appeal regarding the despicable condition of our public roads, bridges and wharves? Are the men holding seats as representatives for this district clear of responsibility since the term of four years elapsed for which we elected them? I am not surprised that a member of the present Executive should say that Sir Robert Bond must have had to look after the whole affairs of this District during his time of representing us. It is to be hoped that something will be done as to repairs, before any new public work is started.
Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

Rotten Law.

There is rumor in the air that a new political party has been formed up in St. John's. We trust that the party will put one plank in their platform and that to have the present rotten prohibition law altered, so that the fishermen and laboring classes of the outports will be treated fair, not for one half the people to have all and the other half get none. Equal rights is what the nations are fighting for, and we want a share. "Anything is not good enough for the Baymen." And we will couldn't afford to build concrete cellars to store our puncheon of liquor in. The party that comes to the field with their guarantee to have the present rotten system changed, will have the elections of every outport in the country behind them. We know it, we hear it every day. Now, then, gentlemen, if you want to be elected at the next general election, tell us what you are going to do about it.—Trinity Enterprise.

An Explanation.

With reference to the item re-published by us, wherein mention was made of a person being buried with- out religious ceremony, we would state that it was a woman who was buried last Saturday night, little more than a week ago. This lady was a Gentile, who had been married to a Jewish gentleman, and the custom in the Jewish Church, in such cases, is to perform the ceremony seven days after burial. Consequently this ceremony was gone through yesterday morning, a large number of Jewish people being present. The Hebrew cemetery is adjoining that of the Salvation Army.

College Football.

In the presence of a fairly large gathering of private admirers, a footer game between the Old and Young Fellidians was played Saturday afternoon, in St. George's Field. A light westerly wind served to keep the players "cool," and some very good play resulted. Richards, Gardner and Snow, of the young boys, put up a good exhibition of shooting, and continually kept the ball in their opponents' territory. Bishop, of the same side, also played a good game, and scored one for them. White and Ewing of the Old Boys, played well, and were well up to their usual good form. House, of the oldsters, got in some good head work, and continually kept the leather rebounding from that organ of the anatomy. Lehr and Payne, the youngsters backs, used their weight to good advantage, and some serious collisions were barely averted. The score was 4 to 2. Another game in which the same contestants will participate, will be played next Saturday afternoon.
