CHAPTER XV.

"Glad! Why?" he asked, moodily.

"Oh, because it must be so pleasant for you," she said.

"Pleasant!" he said, grimly.

"Isn't it?" she said. "I should think it must be to meet new and nice people. And it was so dull for you at the Hall—all alone, and seeing no one."

"It was not dull," he said, trying to speak more cheerfully; "and if you think that a course of dinner-parties is provocative of pleasure—Ah, well!"

He looked round. "Is everything going on alright?" he asked, as he walked beside her.

Decima nodded brightly. She had been pale and sad a moment or two ago—he was sure of it. Was she pleased to see him?

"Oh, yes; we have gone on just as if you were here. Mr. Bright wanted to ask you about things; but I begged him not to worry you, but to let you go on enjoying yourself."

"Thanks!" he said, through his closed teeth. "That was very kind of you."

Enjoying himself!

"Yes, Mr. Bright agreed with me. He is so delighted at your going out so much."

"Oh, he is?"

"And did you hear from Bobby?"

"Yes," he said.

"He wrote me such a long letter. And he told me about your rooms. They are beautiful, he says, only much too handsome and rich for him. And he is so proud of being a member of that fashionable club, and I was to try and thank you, because he never could. He says that he is working hard, but having 'such a good time.'"

"I am pleased to hear it," he said. There was a silence.

His heart was beating with the joy of being near her, the delight of hearing her voice again. They reached the bridge which spanned the narrow, rippling river, and they stopped and leaned on the rail, looking at the stream.

"I am going to give a big dinner," he said. "I have to feed those who have fed me, not wisely but too well. I want you to come."

Decima shook her head and smiled.

"Oh, I don't think so," she said. "Bobby's not here, you know, and father—and father would be lost in a big party. He never goes anywhere."

"I must go!" she said. "It is late, and—Good-bye!" and she left him suddenly, her whole being quivering. He had not seen her face—he had been engaged with the lilies—and he suspected nothing of the emotions which had swept over her young heart.

That afternoon Bobby walked into the Orient—walked in with that sense of proud possession which the young man feels in his first club. He made his way through the imposing hall, with its solemn porter and stately footmen, into the handsome smoking-room, and lighting a cigarette, took up a paper; not to read, but as a screen from which he could look at the other members who were present; for Bobby was a stranger, and every one who belonged to the Orient was of interest to him. He knew some by sight, or from their photographs displayed in the shop windows—for there are some famous men in the club—and he was wondering whether he should get to know any of them personally, when two men entered through the great glass doors.

Bobby looked at them curiously. One was a tall, fair, very fair man with a clean-shaven face, handsome, frank-looking blue eyes, and lips wearing a peculiarly pleasant and winning smile. The other was a younger man—of Bobby's age—with red hair and a pale face. He was plain, but there was something of suppressed force in the rather sullen-looking face which was noticeable. His eyes were somewhat bloodshot, and, as he looked from side to side, they had a suggestion of ferocity, of savageness held in check by their owner which made them still more remarkable.

Bobby took a second glance at him; then, with an exclamation, rose to his feet. For he had suddenly recognized the young man as a fellow school-fellow.

"Halloo, Trevor!" he said, holding out his hand.

The young fellow eyed him with a frown for a moment, then he said, without any great display of joy:

"Halloo, Deane! Didn't know you were in town."

"No," said Bobby in his bright way. "It is a long time since we met."

"Not since we left that beastly Rugby," said Trevor, gloomily.

"Are you staying up for any time?"

"For a month or two," said Bobby. The fair man stood looking at them with a pleasant smile in his blue eyes and on his well-cut lips.

"A meeting of old friends, Trevor?" he said in a soft and musical voice.

"Will you introduce me, my dear fellow?"

Trevor glowered for a moment at the thick Turkey carpet as if he had a grudge against it; then he said, sullenly:

"It's an old school-fellow of mine, Mr. Deane. This is a friend, Deane—Mr. Thorpe, Morgan Thorpe."

Mr. Morgan Thorpe held out his hand with a winning smile.

"Delighted to know any friend of Trevor's," he said. "And very glad to find you are a member of the old club, Mr. Deane."

There was something flattering in the speech and its manner which made Bobby flush with pleasure.

"And what are you doing—just on a pleasant visit to the little village?" asked Mr. Thorpe. "Shall we sit down, Trevor? Mr. Deane, you will join us in a drink?"

Bobby said he would have coffee, and it was brought in in company with the soda and whiskies of the other men.

"I'm grinding for Sandhurst," said Bobby.

"Ah, I envy you!" said Mr. Thorpe in the same flattering way. "Nothing like the service. I was in it for some years."

"What regiment?" asked Bobby, who of course knew his Army List by heart.

"Not an English one, alas!" said Mr. Thorpe, blandly. "I was in foreign service. A free lance, Mr. Deane, a free lance! I have my brevet colonelcy—but of course I don't use it here. I am a civilian in England; but over there—"

He smiled and shrugged his shoulders. Bobby would have asked where "over there" was, but didn't like to.

"Deane—Deane! Let me see, are you one of the Deanes of Learnington?" continued Mr. Thorpe.

"No," said Bobby; "I live at a place called Leafmore."

"Ah, I know the Deanes of Learnington very well. Leafmore?" He shot a swift glance from his blue eyes at Bobby. "Leafmore in Downshire? I've heard of it. Now, what shall we do? What do you say to a game of pool?"

Bobby had to confess that he didn't know billiards.

"Never too late to learn, my dear fellow!" said Mr. Thorpe. "I'm a dandy had player myself or I'd offer to teach you; but Trevor is a first-class performer with the stick and the spheres. Come on, Trevor, and give us both a lesson."

Trevor got up with a kind of reluctance, and they went into the billiard-room. Trevor and Thorpe played, and Bobby took his first lesson; in marking, Thorpe played, as he had said, indifferently; and appeared to take more interest in chatting with Bobby than in the game. He talked—well, Bobby thought he had never met a more charming man, or one more frank and candid, and—really, almost child-like—in his genial simplicity. In the course of an hour Bobby left as if he had known Mr. Morgan Thorpe for years. Trevor said little, but played with a kind of moody absorption, and made some splendid breaks.

Presently Mr. Morgan Thorpe glanced at his watch.

PEACE PACT RATIFIED.

LONDON, Oct. 26. Ratification of the preliminary peace treaty between Poland and Bolshevik Russia was voted by the All Russian Soviet yesterday, according to a wireless despatch from Moscow. The Bolshevik Foreign Minister explained the pact and declared Poland had refused assistance to General Baron Wrangel, head of the anti-Bolshevik Government of South Russia. He also asserted Poland had agreed not to lend aid to the forces of reaction in Russia. These agreements on the part of Poland, he said, were compromise measures which had been gained at the price of territorial concessions to the Polish Government.

Has Never Felt

Words Can't Express Her Gratitude To Tanlac, States London Woman.

T. G. Maitland, of 147 Adelaide Street, London, Ont., is but one of many well known people in this city who after testing the merits of Tanlac, have come forward with unqualified endorsements of the medicine. Mr. Maitland has been in the employ of E. Leonard & Sons in London for the past twenty-eight years, and in telling of the benefits he has derived from the use of Tanlac said: "It was about five years ago that my troubles first started, and since that time they have simply given me no end of worry. My appetite left me so completely that I didn't relish a thing to eat, my digestion was very bad, and I would bloat all up with sour gas."

"I suffered a great deal from constipation, at times had such splitting headaches and such terrible dizzy spells that I could hardly see. I had rheumatism in my knees and joints, and often just ached all over. I was so nervous that every thing seemed to worry me, and at night I could scarcely sleep at all."

"I'll tell you I'm mighty thankful to Tanlac for the way it has fixed me up, for it has given me a splendid appetite, and has put an end to that indigestion and bloating. I never have an ache or pain of any kind, sleep good and sound every night, and am feeling fine in every way. In fact, I never felt better in my life than I do now, and words simply can't express my gratitude to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gustave, in Millertown by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freahe.—adv.

Pastor Believes in Old-Fashioned Cure.

While Rev. Keene Ryan, pastor of the Garfield Boulevard Presbyterian Church, Chicago, was delivering a sermon on the text, "Thou shalt not steal," to his congregation last Sunday night, his son, Addison H. Ryan, aged sixteen, and a student in high school, stole the pastor's new automobile which he had parked in front of the church and left with a party of boy friends for parts unknown. The minister has sworn out a warrant for the arrest of his son and also for Daniel McCormack, one of his son's chums, who is known to be in the party.

"I propose to teach my boy a lesson he'll never forget," said the pastor. "He has never done anything like this before and I intend it shall be the last. I shall prosecute him in court and in addition I will see that he gets the old-fashioned woodshed treatment when he arrives home."

Husband and Wife
Parted on Juries.

The British Government does not intend to allow the new jury system to become the jest of the humorist by allowing the possibility of family jars in the jury box.

They have issued a set of rules for the guidance of the court officials, among which is the following: "Husband and wife shall not both be summoned to serve on a jury on the same occasion."

Another rule provides that the women on any panel of jurors shall be in the same proportion to the men as the total number of women on the jurors' books is to the total number of men.

A woman may apply to the summoning officer for exemption from attendance on account of illness within three days of the receipt of the summons.

Unveiling of Dickinson Memorial.

Lady Harris Performs Ceremony—Thousands Attend to Do Honor to Memory of Heroic Nurse.

Yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a very large gathering of citizens, the ceremony of unveiling the Ethel Dickinson Memorial at Cavendish Square took place. Among the notable people present were Lady Harris, Miss Armorer Harris, His Excellency Sir Charles Harris and suite, Mr. G. H. Dickinson, father of the deceased nurse, and Mr. H. Dickinson, brother, Chief Justice Sir William Horwood and Lady Horwood, Mr. Justice Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, Hon. W. J. Ellis, Hon. John Anderson, Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., Hon. Dr. Campbell, Hon. Judge F. J. Morris, Mayor Gosling and Mrs. Gosling, the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, Rev. Canon Bolt, Rev. Dr. Carter, Rev. Dr. Fenwick, and Mrs. E. L. Pineson, sister of the late Miss Dickinson. There was also a large gathering of school children, nurses, and representatives of city bodies. The ceremony opened with the rendition of Chopin's Funeral March by the C.C.C. Band, all the men present standing with heads bared, and for the time all traffic ceased. Mr. Justice Johnson, as Chairman of the Citizens' Committee, through whose efforts the monument was erected, on behalf of the Committee presented the site and Memorial to His Excellency for unveiling and dedication. In making the presentation Justice Johnson said:—He highly appreciated his privilege as Chairman of the public committee to present this memorial for unveiling and dedication. He acknowledged the courtesy of Their Excellencies in this connection from the time when he first asked them to give the projected willingness to dedicate the memorial on its completion. He acknowledged the attendance on this occasion, of the dignitaries of church and state, and the gift of the present site by the Municipal Council. No sooner had Miss Dickinson's death been made known than it was obvious that a suitable public memorial must be set up. In due course a committee was appointed, who elected him chairman. Subscriptions followed, practically unhesitatingly, from rich and poor. The present memorial was chosen from several designs submitted.

Reviewing the deceased lady's career, Justice Johnson said that Miss Dickinson was by profession an educationist, and from her studies in hygiene and dietetics, became qualified for the duties attending upon nursing. After nursing in England, she came home in August, 1918 for a rest. Pestilence fell upon the city and she volunteered to serve in the wards at the Grenfell Institute, where despite the terrible scenes of delirium and death, she persisted at her post of self-imposed duty till death took her. The Judge had been informed by the chief medical officer in attendance that more nerve-wrecking scenes were enacted in that temporary hospital than he had seen during the many years of his general practice. Through all these scenes Miss Dickinson and her fellow nurses remained faithful to their trying task. Enough could not be said in their praise. He referred to the inscription on the east side of the memorial "In honour also of those who nursed with her in the imminent shadow of death."

The committee had deposited a wreath on Miss Dickinson's grave on this anniversary of her death. He noticed that the inscription at the grave contained the words, "In life as in death, she lived for others." Also the text "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Both these inscriptions were eminently applicable to Miss Dickinson. He went on to say that the committee proposes as far as may be to perpetuate this devoted nurse's memory by laying on each anniversary of her death at this memorial and at her grave, floral wreaths, of which girl pupils from the city schools would be the most appropriate bearers. He then tendered the memorial to Their Excellencies for unveiling and dedication.

His Excellency in reply spoke very feelingly and said:

"It is appropriate to remember that this is a more special occasion in St. John's than in many cities in the Empire. There are few public monuments in St. John, partly I suspect because of the rigour of winter. So far as I am informed there is only one other monument erected for a like heroic sacrifice, and that is the one that stands on the south side of Government House to the memory of Weston Carter. It commemorates a sacrifice of life which is perhaps easier to appreciate than that of Miss Dickinson, but we do that to applaud the thought of Judge Johnson and his committee that now, after a lapse of more than 50 years, a similar monument to a more conspicuous place should be set up to the memory of Ethel Dickinson.

I may recall to you that Miss Dickinson was not exercising the calling for which she had trained when she gave up her life in October, 1918. She had been brought up at the Methodist College, in which she became a teacher, and thence she passed to study domestic science at the College in Guelph, Ontario, afterwards deciding to settle here as a teacher of Domestic Science. In 1915 she went to England, and for nearly three years worked at Ascot Hospital as a nurse, giving much of her spare time to Wandsworth No. 3 General Hospital, helping with the sick of the Newfoundland Regiment. She had returned in 1918 much in need of rest and resumed her work as a teacher of Domestic Science when, in the autumn of that year that terrible scourge of influenza broke out in St. John's, she was one of the first to volunteer as a nurse at the emergency hospital, and hard work pushed to its extreme when she was not in her usual strength, brought upon her the extreme penalty.

Such a death is rightly appealed to as a sacrifice of self in no degree smaller than that which was made by the men and women who lost their lives during the recent war, and Miss Dickinson's friends have justly felt that such a sacrifice deserved to be commemorated for all time. Here near the spot where she was born and brought up, facing the street which looks towards the school where she spent her earlier days, we shall now unveil a monument, which not only will add to the grace of this corner, but will for all time be a witness to the men and women who are coming after her that a daughter of Newfoundland so well knew herself and had so learned the lesson of life that she was prepared to give up her life in the endeavour to save the lives of others. I myself am inclined to think at times that the real question that would be put to us when we have to answer the roll in another sphere of existence is "How far in our lives we have made a sacrifice" and it may be, though we cannot dogmatise about such things, that those who have made a real sacrifice even in a small degree and in a degree slightly understood here, will receive a greater reward than those from whom such self-denial has never been exacted.

Therefore I now dedicate this monument, an affectionate token from a few of those friends who knew and loved Ethel Dickinson, to the memory not only of a fine Newfoundland woman, but also as a perpetual reminder to those who knew her in her life, and to those boys and girls who in the days to come will pass this way and pause and ask, "What mean ye by these stones"—learning thereby something of their own duty to follow in the path of self-sacrifice which Miss Dickinson, by the grace of God, was enabled to tread."

At the conclusion His Excellency asked Lady Harris to unveil the monument, which was covered with the British Ensign, and as she did so, the men present again uncovered, and as the Ensign dropped to the ground, the C.L.B. Band rendered the Dead March in Saul. A pathetic scene then followed when His Excellency brought forward the aged father to view the monument, while all remained silent. Beautiful floral wreaths were then placed on the monument by loving friends of Nurse Dickinson, after which the C.L.B. Band played the National Anthem as a close to the ceremony.

The monument is of Aberdeen granite, with native granite sub-base highly polished. Mounted on the base is an octagonal shaft, 13ft. 6in. high, which is surmounted by a Celtic cross. The design is very graceful and the monument is well displayed on the site chosen. The work of erecting the stone was superintended by Mr. P. F. Whittle, foreman mason with Hon. W. J. Ellis, and has been most creditably carried out.

The inscriptions on the base are: On the West side, "This shaft surmounted by the World Emblem of 'Sacrifice,' is set up by a grateful public in memory of Ethel Dickinson, Volunteer Nurse, who in the great epidemic of 1918, gave her life while tending patients at King George Fifth Institute, St. John's." On the East side:—"In honor also of those who nursed with her in the imminent shadow of death." On the South:—"And I will give thee a Crown of Life." On the North side:—"Be Thou Faithful Unto Death."

Westminster Abbey.

(From Life, New York.) It is disclosed in the paper that Westminster Abbey is in bad repair, and there is a call out for a million and a quarter dollars for a repair fund. Money will be accepted even from the United States. To keep up Westminster Abbey, or any other abbey or cathedral church in England, is an excellent investment for American loose change. These old churches in Great Britain are as much behind that part of the population of the United States which is of British descent as they are behind the British at home. Nobody much came to this hemisphere from the British Isles before the seventeenth century, and in the seventeenth century the English cathedrals and abbeys were already old churches. Physically they belong to England; spiritually they belong to anybody that derives from England. Americans of English descent may well help to keep them standing and in repair, if only for the sake of their own descendants. Nothing is so interesting to American travellers, not even Montmartre, as the English cathedrals. When the hat is passed for Westminster Abbey, drop something substantial in it, not at all as charity, but as an investment and an inherited duty.

The Prince and the Pilot.

Here is an amusing story of the Prince of Wales:—"One of our youthful pilots in Northern France came dashing down a road on a motor bicycle. A staff car was pulled up by the roadside. While the driver was making the necessary adjustments a young red-tab stretched his legs. The young pilot threw himself from his machine, and addressing the staff officer, said:—"Can I be of any assistance?" "No, thanks!" said the youthful red-tab. "It's only a minor trouble." "Right-o," said the pilot. "I seem to know your face old chap! Who are you?" "I'm the Prince of Wales! And you?" The pilot grinned unbelievably, and then answered with his eyes twinkling, "Oh, I'm your pater, the King!"

Three days later the Prince visited a certain famous flying squadron. On entering the mess-room the first person to catch his eye was the pilot he had met on the road. Instantly the Prince's face broke into a smile of greeting, and he advanced with outstretched hand.

"Halloo, dad!" he said.

Electric Cable to Guide Ships.

The French Ministry of Marine has decided as soon as possible to lay down in all the French ports and across the Channel, in collaboration with the British Admiralty, electric cables which will enable ships to steer safely into port in the densest fogs. The invention which is to be used is that of the French engineer, Loth, which, it appears from the account given at the Academy of Sciences by Admiral Fournier, resembles in its general principles that recently experimented with in America. An electric cable along which a current of alternative frequency is passed is submerged in the fairway. Secondary currents which such a cable induces at a distance are picked up by ship's instruments and, according to the distance of the sound, the pilot can judge whether he is in the middle or at the outskirts of the fairway. Even an airplane fitted with receiving instruments can follow the submerged cable, and the proposal is made that the sea cable should have an overland connection to the aerodromes, enabling pilots to steer through fog.

Old Joke Dead.

A good old joke is dead, killed by hard facts. For years everyone has chaffed the grocer about weighing the paper bag with the sugar, and thus snatching a little extra profit. Of late, however, the grocer's paper bag has cost as much as and sometimes more than its weight in sugar, and the "Grocer," a trade journal, in the current issue solemnly suggests that if customers will take their own vessels and be content with a pound of sugar instead of a pound of sugar and paper the tradesman will be very well pleased. Try it.

Stockings of Human Hair.

All the hair combs in a Chinese household are saved as carefully as if they were nuggets. In course of time they are spun into long threads and woven into stockings. The popular belief is that stockings of human hair keep out the wet better than any others. At one time the Japanese made use of human hair in church erecting. It was the custom for church-going people to give some of their hair as a free-will offering when a temple was being built. Such a structure at Tokio had the beams and rafters held in place by one of these human hair cables. Placed on end, this human hair rope measured 4.528ft. long, was 7in. in diameter, and weighed 8.847lb., no fewer than 350,000 persons contributing before a sufficient quantity was obtained.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

ONE WAY TO MAKE MARRIAGES LAST.

"He never talks me over, even with his mother," she declares a letter-friend in praise of her husband.

It is praise, isn't it? And praise worth having.

I wonder how many homes that are broken up would still be intact if the wife could have said that of the husband, and vice versa. Especially vice versa. For women, think, are a shade more prone to this form of disloyalty than men.

Women Mull Things Over.

When they get angry with their husbands, they are apt to mull over their indignation at their housework which so often bustles the feet and hands while it leaves the mind idle, and Satan has even more use for idle minds than idle hands. Until they can stand it no longer. Then they review their feelings into the nearest sympathetic ear they can find (and sympathetic ears are very easy to find when matrimonial troubles are to be told). The final step of this process is a reconciliation with their husbands, after which they shun the sympathetic ear because it knows too much—until the next time they have need of it.

The man, on the other hand, goes out into the fresher air of the world of men and gets absorbed in business.

The Woman Who Encourages the Male Complainer.

His temptation to talk usually comes in the form of some feminine friend who thinks, or pretends to think that his wife is not good enough for him, and subtly implants or encourages this feeling in him and gradually gets him into the habit of bringing his grievances to her for sympathy.

I think this is one of the meanest things a woman can do. Of course, it is sometimes done thoughtlessly and other times in the sincere belief that the man is a martyr and has all the wrongs on his side (which 99 times out of 100 is not true). But when a woman does it deliberately, she is about as mean as they make them. My suggestion to the gods who arrange our purgatories on earth would be that she get married and then have some other woman do the same thing to her.

As for talking over one's running-mate with one's family—who might be thought the best confidante, since they will have family reasons for not repeating everything that is said to them—that course has disadvantages of its own which scarcely need to be mentioned.

Not Many Such Mothers-in-Law.

I once heard of a mother-in-law who said she made it a rule always to side with her son-in-law against her daughter, no matter what the cause of disagreement. But that was ten years ago, and I haven't heard of any similar case since. Even when a mother-in-law really approves and is fond of her daughter-in-law so long as the son is satisfied, will she continue to do so when the son is dissatisfied? How many mothers would not see with their son's eyes, rather than with the eyes of justice, if any disagreement arose?

A grievance bolstered up by sympathy is a grievance twice as hard to get rid of.

True, if one could talk these matters over with someone who would not give sympathy unless it were deserved, who would temper it even then by reminding one of the other person's point of view, who would suggest some compromise in the difficulties, and who would "keep mum" forever after, that would be wonderful. But where can most of us find such a paragon?

NIGHT COMETH.

The night is coming on apace, when I shall quit the road, and seek my final resting place, my daisy-strewn a b o d e ; and so the little flits of life don't fret my ancient heart; night cometh, with the end of strife, and every sting and smart. It isn't worth my while to weep or sing a doleful tune; for all life's troubles end in sleep, and sleeps the greatest boon. It isn't worth my while to hate the man who does me wrong; far better keep my smile on straight, and chirp my cheer-up song. It isn't worth my while to swear the man who punches me; far better keep my timbre hot beneath the sunset tree. My autumn day will quickly pass, the sun's low down the sky, and stormy passions cut no grass when it is time to die. And hates and grudges look so cheap, when night is drawing on, and it is time to think of sleep, of dark without a dawn. I haven't time to mope and brood o'er some small passing woe, and in a glad and cheerful mood I watch the bright days go. Why taste the wormwood when the prunes are wholesome, sweet and cheap? The night is coming on, when I lie down to sleep.

Just Folks

NEXT TIME.
"Times when he's been bad," they say. "You must punish him to-day! What's he going to be, if you let him go his way and do things like this, and don't correct him?"
Surely then you can't expect him to grow up the way he should. "Yep," I say, "I'll make him good; Send him in to me and I'll fix him up in proper style, And I'll tell him now that I'm going to punish him—next time."

Then his mother sends him in. And he comes in with a grin, And I try to look as though I was mad at him, but oh. Comes the thought that such a lad Couldn't be so very bad! But I know I've got to scold That mischievous eight-year-old. So I take him on my knee, And I tell him what will be Done to him for such a crime, As his punishment—next time.

Hope I'll never live to see That next time when I must be Forced to carry out my threat, Just because he may forget All his promises and fall Into trouble. He's so small And so full of life that he Can't forever perfect be. Yet if there should come the day I must punish him, I'll say: "I'll forgive you now, but I'm going to whip you sure—next time."

Fashions and Fads.

The newest fall sweaters are in large plaids. Fur coats are now designed to resemble suits. Buckskin gloves are correct for outdoor wear. Elaborate tuckings adorn the long spring gloves. There is a vogue for high colors in draped velvets. For trimming, self-embroidery in blue is popular. Dressy coats sometimes have the flare or bell sleeve. The newest sweater-substitute is a satin ribbon coat. The dominating colors for wraps are blue and brown. Figured satins are the newest fad for overblouses. Cape collars on coats are shorter and fit more snugly. The vogue for elaborate trimmings is on the decline. The stock with a flowing jabot will be worn this winter. The choker collar of fur is widely used on the new coats. Brilliant brocaded sashes are worn with dark costumes. There is a growing tendency toward gray for street wear. Straight lines and the low waistline continue to be popular. A puff of batiste and lace finishes the sleeve of a tricot dress. Most of the newest umbrellas have either seven or eight ribs. The suit loses prestige in favor of the costume of dress and coat. Overblouses of duvetyne and Georgette are still very popular. Tiny black satin rosebuds are being used on dresses of black lace. Long slim feathers rise from a bandeau of jet worn around the head. A very smart combination is of black velvet with black embroidered net.

Gray waxed braid and soutache trim a tailored dress in gray broadcloth. The newer coat is more elaborately embroidered than the earlier model.

Esperanto Heads Eastward

TO GIVE NOVA SCOTIANS "A RACE THEY WILL NEVER FORGET."
GLOUCESTER, Oct. 21. — Parkhurst's railway was the Mecca of every one in Gloucester to-day. Captains, fishermen and people in all walks of life crowded around to secure a glimpse of the Esperanto, while twenty-five men were rushing work, cleaning the underbody and otherwise fitting the Pride of Gloucester for the great race.

With scrapers and sand-paper the wood was being smoothed, while on deck rigging was being overhauled and the headstalls bent.

The hull is to be painted with green copper; and arguments are being used that it should be black led, as well; but it is doubtful if this suggestion will be followed out.

While the Esperanto is on the ways a portion of the stores will be put aboard, and when she slides off on Saturday she will be nearly ready to head to the eastward. Present plans call for the final fitting-out on Saturday, a trial spin on Sunday; and Captain "Marty" Welch intends to head away for the starting line on Monday.

Enthusiasm is growing every hour and Boston and even New York, where Captain Welch lands many mackerel, at Fulton market in the spring, is working up a big interest. The New Yorkers, it is reported, intend to send a nice "roll" to back up the chances of the Esperanto, holding strong to the fact that "Marty" will bring back the cup.

Announcement was made to-day that Massachusetts State Inspector of Fish, Arthur L. Millet, of this city, and a member of the Gloucester committee, had been selected to represent Gloucester on the race committee and also to represent the Gorton-Few Fisheries Company, the owners of the Esperanto. The comparative sailing merits of the Delawana and the Esperanto is a continual subject for discussion, but Gloucester feels assured that, give the latter a snorting breeze, with curling, tumbling green water rolling in under her nose, every strip of canvas set, and Captain "Marty" squinting his weather eye a low and aloft, and there will be no doubt but what our Lunenburg friends will have a splendid opportunity to read the name of Gloucester's Pride on the stern.

The good old Esperanto is being groomed as she was never groomed before. Many a time she has been on the ways, but the attention she is receiving this time will eclipse all previous efforts combined; and when she is ready for her flight over the forty-mile course off the shores of Nova Scotia, she will glisten like an international cup racer, primed to the minute. Lunenburg is to be given a race that they will never forget, is the assurance of all Gloucester.

Eight tons of pig iron and chain have been stored in the Esperanto's bilges and over this a platform has been laid to carry two tons of sand in bags. The sand-bags will be shifted on the trip to Halifax to give the schooner the proper trim, but in the race, according to the rules, the ballast cannot be shifted.

Appendicitis Treated by Wireless.

The Anchor-Donaldson liner Cassandra, which docked at Montreal on October 12, reported that while in mid-ocean a wireless message was received from the freighter Cabotia of the same company, stating that one of her sailors was seriously ill with appendicitis. The man was treated by Dr. Alexander, of the Cassandra, by wireless, until a message from the freighter reported that the man was well on the way to recovery.

Are They Coming Down?

Strikes are being reported from nearly every country under the sun, but we have yet to hear of a general strike of the consumer against High Prices. Day after day he is content to go on paying whatever amount is demanded for the articles he requires, without murmur and without protest, and every time there is a strike adjustment carrying with it an increased wages rate, up go prices a few more notches, and Mr. Consumer has to dig further down into his jeans and come across with the increase. Recent newspapers from the neighboring continent, however, tell us that something different is now on: that the consumer is at last aroused and is putting up a fight against the high cost of living, and what is more to the purpose, it is remarked, with undisguised satisfaction, that he is winning. Everyone talked about high prices but nothing was done, no concerted action was taken. Discontent prevailed, but there was lack of unanimity. Now, it is said, the buying public are rebelling. The actual purchasing value of the dollar has diminished to too low a point for them further to refuse to take notice, and immediately the signs were visible, retail merchants began cutting prices, imitating the example of one of the big department stores of Philadelphia, the management of which was wise enough to see farther ahead than its contemporaries. And from these began a slide down of war and post war prices which latter had reached a dizzy height.

Here in Newfoundland, we have not been so fortunate and the dollar thermometer has not yet begun to rise perceptibly, though there are indications that it cannot be much longer kept down. One bright sign of the times is the number of special sales being advertised, particularly in wearables, and dry goods. The alluring attractions offered in the way of reduced prices have had an effect, and patrons of such sales have come away from them pleased alike with purchase and with price. There is a long road to travel yet ere conditions can become as they were in 1914, but with a slashing in manufacturing centres, caused by the reductions that are being made in general stores, wholesale and retail, because the public are beginning to protest, there is hope that all the commodities made use of in this colony will ere long be bought at a much less rate than has been paid, and will therefore be sold at a correspondingly less rate to the buyer. But all this will take time and must be by gradual process. Prices cannot come down with a jump. Economic conditions forbid that. Still there are signs on the commercial horizon that tell of the beginning of a new era in prices. Newfoundland's benefit in this, however, depends much on the power of the people in manufacturing and producing countries, to keep up their rebellion against soaring costs. Their success means our relief, but we are so situated that we can be of very little assistance to them.

Notes and Comments.

F.C.B. "should be smothered in sugar." Brown or white would make no difference.

The looking glass does more work and shows less wear than anything else in the world.

While dressing a bullock recently, at Bridport, Great Britain, a butcher discovered a gold watch chain in its stomach.

Aged eighty-one years, Mr. William Hider, of Birling, Kent, England, just married his third wife—a Mrs. Gladish, seventy-two.

A contemporary says that in all the libel suits, but a couple, during the past half dozen years, Mr. Coaker has been either the plaintiff or defendant. Quite a monopoly, eh?

A married woman, living at Edmonton, told the magistrate that her husband had not spoken to her for eight months. The husband, evidently, did not realize that it was his turn.

Sugar is being sold at eleven dollars per hundred pounds in the United States, but that makes no difference to Newfoundland. The F.C.B. decree has gone forth that the consumer must pay through the nose for the bangles and blunders of that incapable body.

Twillingate Sun: The Advocate used to say, years ago was it, that "the price of fish is what Coaker makes it." It repeated that so often that lots of people believed it, and wonder now why Mr. Coaker doesn't make shore fish $12 and Labrador $10 at the very least.

A girl from the city was visiting a friend in the country, who is trying to run a model chicken farm. The girl was much interested in all that was shown her, particularly a line of incubators, in front of which she made this observation: "So you have incubators? Very nice, indeed; but I am afraid that artificial chickens can never taste like natural ones."

"The captain and officers of the 'Sniff'" says the Twillingate Sun, "hardly know their own rooms as they are continually giving them up to passengers, especially women who cannot stay below in her suffocating 'saloon.' The officers say they can not stand by and see women perish on deck, and it speaks volumes for their kindness, but copper fastens the callous neglect and indifference of the Government."

This modern liner is one of the Admiralty tugs purchased by the Government for Coastal Service. Her registry papers contain the name "Senef" localised to Sniff. We trust Mr. Coaker won't get "sniffy" over this.

The Harbor Grace Standard wants to know why it is that if so many local fish carriers are tied up in the port of St. John's, how comes it that numerous foreign vessels are taking away cargoes from Labrador. Our Bay contemporary should not be too hard on the Scandinavians. They come cheaper, don't you know? And freights are freights these days. But notwithstanding, Newfoundland foreign going vessels are waiting at anchorage for charters that do not arrive.

At the Casino.

Last night another bumper house attended the reproduction of "A Tailor Made Man" by the Kiark-Urban Company, and one and all voted this serio-comedy one of the best. All the players showed to great advantage, and their elocution and acting evoked rounds of continuous applause. To-night that laughable play "Nothing but the Truth," being a dramatisation of Frederick Isham's novel of the same name will be staged. This play ran a whole year in a N.Y. theatre, and has the highest endorsement of both press and public. For a fit of the blues there can be no cure equal to seeing "Nothing but the Truth," so don't miss it to-night and to-morrow night. The C.C.C. band is another attraction for new, as always, "music bath charms."

Missionary Service.

Trade Commissioner's Office Closing Up.

The office of the Canadian Trade Commissioner in this Dominion will be closed at the end of the present year, so we have been informed. The office was established here in 1904, the first Commissioner being the late E. D. Arnaud, who three years later was transferred to Bristol, England. Mr. Arnaud was succeeded by Mr. J. E. Ray, who came to St. John's in 1908 and remained about two years. Mr. Ray, in turn, was transferred to Birmingham, England, and with the closing of that office removed to Manchester, where, we think, he is at present located. The present Commissioner at St. John's is Mr. W. B. Nicholson, who has been with us nearly ten years, and has consequently occupied the post for a longer and more trying period than his predecessors. We have reason to know that Mr. Nicholson has given good and useful service, which, we doubt not, is fully appreciated by the head office at Ottawa. The primary purpose of a Trade Commissioner is to foster and further as far as is possible the business between Canada and the locality to which the Commissioner is appointed. This naturally requires activity and intelligence properly directed in order that the Dominion represented may have correct information as to the commodities needed, on the one hand; and the purchasers be safeguarded by having a responsible authority to appeal to if occasion requires. We may not interfere with the intention of Canadian authority in its decision to close the office here, but we feel at liberty to express our regrets, as also those of the trade, at Mr. Nicholson's retirement from our midst. During his somewhat lengthy tenure of office he has earned the good-will and respect of all who knew and had dealing, business or social, with him. He has been uniformly courteous and obliging to all and if he has leaned at times rather strenuously to the Canadian viewpoint, who of us shall upbraid him? Certainly not now. Presumably Mr. Nicholson will remain in St. John's until the close of this year, and we wish it were longer, but in any case he will take with him the best wishes of those of our citizens whose good fortune it has been to deal with and know him.

Aunt Sally will give you a hearty welcome next Thursday in C. L. B. Armoury.—oct23,25,27

Just a Reminder.

"St. John's—the city of fifth," so spoke the visitor and much as I repeated this statement, I could not but admit it's truth. This city, the capital of our island, is actually a disgrace to us.

Go along New Gower Street, Middle Street, Duckworth Street, even on the Water Street cobblestones and what do you find? Nothing but mud,—thick, filthy mud! Go into many of the side streets, you have to hold your nose owing to the dreadful stench coming from the drains—breeders of disease. Who is responsible for this state of affairs? Is it the Government, the Municipal Commission or the people themselves? All of these are to some extent responsible for the disgraceful state our city is in.

The Government is certainly greatly responsible for not granting to the city sufficient money to allow it to be kept in proper condition. But, you may ask, what has the Government to do with the city? This, that it is to their advantage that the capital city, the seat of Government, should be kept in a fit condition to permit visitors to leave it with a good impression.

The Civic Commission is perhaps not so much to blame, as it is handicapped by lack of funds. But, the city funds could be made to go a great deal further if there were proper superintendence of road work. Go to any part of the town where city workmen are digging up the streets. What do you see? Here are two workmen leaning up against the side of the hole smoking, here are two more, in a corner, gossiping; one man is perhaps plying a pick half-heartedly. Surely the Commission is not getting its money's worth in this way.

Lastly we come to the people. The trouble with them is that they do not take enough interest in their city to try and better it. This apathy should not exist. Every householder, the instant he can afford it, should install a proper sewerage system in his house. Slops should not be thrown in the drains to create a stench and breed disease. Furthermore, all taxes should be paid regularly. All this and more could they do to help out the Civic Commissioners in their efforts to make this city fit to live in. Let the Government, the Civic Commission and the people combine for the purpose of doing their utmost to make St. John's, a city to be proud of and let them not allow it to remain in its present state.

HOLOFERNES.

An Offence to Our Heroic Dead.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—May I be permitted space to add a few remarks to those contained in your article appearing in Monday night's issue under the heading of "Neglected War Trophies."

These trophies, which have so long been left to rust on the side of the road opposite the Furness Withy premises, include several German guns. In the British army it has always been considered an honourable thing to gain possession of an enemy gun intact. It means that his outer defences have been penetrated and that his inner system of defence has been reached by our men. It is not incorrect to state that every German gun in our hands to-day represents the sacrifice of hundreds of British lives.

Conversely, in the British army it has always been considered a dishonourable thing to allow a British gun to fall into enemy hands intact, and in this war, as in the past, there are many known instances of our men falling by the side of their guns having first rendered them useless to the enemy.

When rightly considered, therefore, in the ownership of these German guns, we, Newfoundlanders, are the proud possessors of trophies which should be very dear to us.

The proper authorities should delay no longer in having these trophies removed and mounted in conspicuous places, and in having appropriate inscriptions affixed so that present and future generations of young and old shall point to them with pride and with a true understanding of sacrifice involved in their capture or surrender, a sacrifice in which Newfoundland and nobly shared in common with the other nations in the Empire.

The present treatment of these trophies displays a lack of sympathy and understanding of the deeds of our men, so recently performed; and tempts one to put the question to those responsible for this neglect—"What did you do in the Great War?"

Yours very truly,

A Gruff Reply.

From passengers arriving by Prospero from the Northward, we learn of an act of alleged discourtesy on the part of Capt. Field, while the ship was at the wharf in Harbor Grace. It appears from our informant, who was a passenger by this steamer, that with some few others, he desired to go ashore for several minutes at that port, and upon asking the Captain, very civilly if they would have time to run ashore and go up the street, the officer turned on them and said, "You can go to Car-bonear if you like, you won't delay me." Passengers naturally resent such treatment, and expect to be used with better grace by Government steamship officers, either Masters or Mates.

VISITING SCENE OF DEATH.

LONDON, Oct. 26. The police guard at Brixton prison was again increased to-day. The total number of guards there is unknown, but there is a considerable garrison inside the gates. Sinn Fein men who arrived from Cork and other parts of Ireland for the obsequies of the late Lord Mayor MacSwiney, went to Brixton prison in little parties throughout the day to see where the Lord Mayor had died. They were all wearing Sinn Fein colors draped with mourning.

LONDON, Oct. 26. The House of Commons to-night was occupied in rushing an emergency bill through all its stages after the second reading. This bill provides for all contingencies arising in United Kingdom, should miners strike involve Railway and Transport Workers.

COAL FROM CHINA.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27. "Carrying coals to Newcastle" is no longer a mere figure of speech, according to J. W. Forde of that city. Forde says that already one shipload has been sent to Newcastle from China. He also says the supply amassed against strike will last only six weeks.

MAY BE ABANDONED.

LONDON, Oct. 27. Deputy Lord Mayor Callaghan of Cork expressed his personal view to the Associated Press that hunger striking would be abandoned after present experiments by strikers are completed. "The United States could obtain

Cathedral Parish Bazaar

C.L.B. ARMORY A FAIRY GARDEN.

The Cathedral Parish Bazaar, under the patronage of H. E. the Governor and the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, opens in the C.L.B. Armory at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Lady Harris will make the opening announcement. The armory has been attractively decorated with bunting and the C.L.B. colors. Stalls are arranged around the sides of the building, and in the centre is one which of itself in an extra attraction. On the back of this, which is called "Toyland," is an orange grove. A vegetable stall well stocked with choice produce, takes up the spaces at the rear of the building. The fancy work and other tables are well stocked with articles both useful and ornamental. Tea tables have been set in the gymnasium, where patrons will receive every consideration from the ladies in charge. The whole get up of the Bazaar reflects creditably on those responsible, and the public in general would do well to pay a visit to the place.

New Ore Deposits.

We understand that 3 bands of ore of great promise has been opened up on the North Shore of Conception Bay, inside, and 2 miles north of Bay de Verde. The new claim is about 4 miles east of where operations were conducted some years ago by the Worthington Co. of England. One of the seams in particular, 12 feet wide, shows a vein of 10 feet of solid iron, and has been traced for a distance of two miles. Analysis has shown that this ore is equal to the famous Bilbao iron of Spain. The property is owned by Messrs. J. J. St. John, Wm. Campbell, T. J. Freeman and Andrew Colford. Should the ore be found in quantity the property will be very valuable. Prospecting work is progressing.

Expected to Return.

It is rumored that Mr. Hill, of the Corcoran Coal & Coke Co., who was here last week in connection with our coal areas, will return in May next. Enquiry at the office of the St. George's Coal Fields, Ltd., and the Crown Lands Office did not confirm this report though we were given to understand that Mr. Hill expected to return in the spring, subject to the report of the borings now going on at Howley. Nothing definite as to the outcome of his recent visit could be obtained however.

Whole Family Destitute.

A CASE FOR THE CHARITABLE. A case of destitution which calls for immediate attention was reported to Sergeant Long to-day from Carter's Hill. On visiting the place he found a family of six practically on the verge of starvation. The mother is suffering from blood poison and the father is so ill that he cannot do anything. Sergeant Long when he saw the condition of the family procured some temporary relief, the neighbours also assisting. Medical treatment, food, clothing and firing is needed at once and any charitable persons communicating with Sergeant Long, will be rendering assistance to a deserving case.

It is not known yet whether the Little Princess will go to Harbor Grace for repairs or go on the dry dock.

What Would Canada Do?

A grim warning for Canadians lurks in the British Government's prohibition of the export of coal as the result of a domestic industrial crisis. The event happens across the ocean, but the lesson comes right to our doors. What has occurred in Great Britain might easily occur in the United States the main source of Canada's winter coal supply. The American coal industry is not on a dependable basis as regards labor. With cold weather approaching and a fuel shortage assured by labor troubles, no administration at Washington, however good-natured, could fail to do as the British Government has done. It would suddenly prohibit the export of coal.
What would Canada do? The country would be gripped by an emergency involving nation-wide panic.
Here is a prospect brought before our eyes which demands consideration by those in authority who are responsible for national safety. The actual present danger is beyond all scoff or ridicule. We exist to-day in its presence. We live in its shadow at this moment.
Canada depends for her life upon the uncertainties of an industrial situation over which she has no possible means of exercising control. Each year that we gamble thus with Winter, we dice with Calamity.
All of which amazing conduct is the more ridiculous because it is totally unnecessary. The huge coal deposits of this Dominion, utilized by energy and foresight, would build a thick wall against the peril now held back by a sheet of tissue paper.
Winter will come every year, winter, with its freezing blasts by day and night, when our people cannot survive without coal. Winter will come; will the coal come? Until Canada is as sure to have the coal as she is to have the cold, the situation of the Dominion will reflect most gravely upon our political and industrial capacity, reducing our status to that of an industrial adjunct to the United States.—Montreal Daily Star.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES DISTEMPERS.

Official.

His Excellency the Governor has received a brief telegram from the Secretary of State, intimating that the Railway Strike notices have been postponed pending the result of conversations between the Government, the Owners and the Miners. A formal conference has not yet been called.

West Coast Notes.

Fish, for the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, do not pay for the catching. About Channel and vicinity the only firm buying is James Baird, Ltd., paying two dollars per hundred and twelve pounds from the knife, to be taken up in trade. No cash whatever is being paid for either green or dry fish, the price offered for the latter being $8 per quintal barter. This is the advent of the new prosperity promised by Premier Squires last fall.
Work is being continued on the enlargement of the Reid premises at Port aux Basques, but it is not expected that the terminal warehouse will be finished this year, though every endeavour is being made to have it ready for the accommodation of freight. The dredge Priestman is operating along the waterfront, but the bottom is so hard and rocky that it is difficult to do much deepening work. A steam shovel is plugging away at the bank on the other side of the yard, widening the area for tracks and repair houses.
Fishermen are now beginning to see that the change for which they voted last fall has not been a profitable one for them, and damn Squires, Coaker and the Fish Regulations with unsparring and vigorous fluency, not forgetting the Food Control Board.
The newly established firm of Keating and Batisse is evidently making good, and a fifty ton schooner has been chartered to freight produce and fruit from Cape Breton.
Down the coast conditions are most alarming. At LaPointe there is no coal and no flour. People are borrowing one from the other to keep going, but when domestic stocks are exhausted there is no telling what will happen. At Rose Blanche and other places this is being duplicated. There is nothing doing in fish catching, the one industry of this coast being in a state of paralysis, and with winter so near, the outlook is far from cheerful.

Obituary.

A well known and much respected citizen, Mr. George Gillingham, of the West End, passed away to the heavenly rest last night. Mr. Gillingham in early manhood lived at Lower Island Cove, and was a first class mechanic. He built the large Methodist Church there and several other churches and residences in different parts of Conception Bay. Coming to St. John's over thirty years ago he continued his work as a builder under contract with many who were erecting houses, and his name soon became well known as a faithful, honest workman. He then erected on his own account a number of houses on Leslie Street, Springdale Street and LeMarchant Road West, which have been sold or rented. Being a kindly, retiring man, Mr. Gillingham was not prominent in public matters, but was a member of Gower Street Methodist Church, a sincere Christian, strong in faith in his Saviour, and died fully trusting in His merits. He leaves four daughters: Mrs. B. Street of Epworth, Mrs. J. Tizzard, Mrs. J. Curtis and Mrs. Fred Chislet of this city, and three sons: William and George, carpenters, Golf Avenue, and Thomas of Montreal. "Mark the just man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." Funeral takes place to-morrow.

Leaflets Won the War.
"If the Entente knew what poison these leaflets were working in the minds of the German soldiers they would give up lead and bombard only with paper." This tribute was paid by a German newspaper during the war to the effectiveness of our propaganda campaign, which is so graphically described by Sir Campbell Stuart in "Secrets of Crewe House." At one time we were dropping 100,000 leaflets daily among the enemy, destroying their moral by revealing the real facts.
Sir Campbell was Deputy Director of the campaign which "poisoned" the German army with truth. A Canadian by birth, he recruited the Duchess of Connaught's Irish-Canadian Rangers and distinguished himself as a propagandist and diplomat in the United States. Ultimately he came to London, where he helped in the great paper bombardment.

A German Who Tells the Truth.

Not every German leader is committed to a policy of systematic evasion of the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles. At yesterday's session of the Socialist Congress, held in the city of Cassel, a delegate by the name of Cghen had the courage to voice public criticism of the anti-French campaign which appears to be in full swing through a large part of Germany. Nor was the Socialist deputy Cohen content merely to denounce the semi-official propaganda against France. In his same speech of yesterday, he appealed for a loyal and unhesitating acceptance of the requirements of the Treaty of Versailles, and emphasized the necessity for a close understanding between France and Germany as a basis for future peace in Europe.—Boston Transcript.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—
"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself has said,
This is my own, my native land."

The above lines, Mr. Editor, are applicable to the present situation, if ever a man had the interests of his native land at heart and desired to see poor down trodden Terra Nova rising out of the ruin and desolation in which she is at the present time placed by the uncrowned King of this Dominion, whose despotic rule is crushing the life blood out of the country that gave him birth.

It is only necessary to go to the out-ports to-day to see the result of Coaker's rule. Business stagnant, and fishermen in despair over the gloomy outlook for the coming winter. At this time last season Bay de Verde was a veritable hive of industry, schooners arriving every other day loaded with provisions and other commodities, but this fall schooners are arriving from St. John's practically empty, because no merchant or trader can afford to longer supply when we have such iniquitous fish regulations which are strangling trade and crushing outport merchant and fishermen down in the dust. Squires, the greatest political deceiver the country has ever known, said in England: "There are no poor people in Newfoundland." No poor people? Visit the North shore of this district and there will be found ample proof that Squires lied when he made such a ridiculous statement.

Coaker's regulations will entail much poverty and distress during the winter months, and the coming Christmas will be a sad one for many because of the same. Independent men from here were forced to store fish in St. John's, which if there had been no regulations, could have been sold at ten dollars a quintal to United States buyers. Where is Cave in our darkest hour? Those who called on him in St. John's got little or no satisfaction, because he is forced to cater to Mr. Coaker or forfeit the fruits of office. It was left to the noble hearted Sir J. C. Crosbie to assist the people and right nobly he responded.

Oh! Cave, if you have any independence or if you are interested in the welfare of your constituents, you would be conferring a great benefit on them if you would resign your seat and make room for a man who can do something for the fishermen. Bay de Verde, your district is suffering as it never suffered before, because Coaker has control of our chief industry despite the clamour of the entire populace opposed to such. Are you going to allow Coaker to ruin your constituents and drive them to Starvation? If not then, then resign your seat. We want men like Sir J. C. Crosbie in the government to-day, men who can assist the fishermen. Thanking you for space.

Yours truly,
FISHERMAN.

GARLAND—WILLIAMS.
The wedding was solemnized on Monday, Oct. 18th, at Weston, Ont., by the Rev. Dr. J. Wallace Stewart, of Hazel Winnifred, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams of St. John's, Newfoundland, to Mr. John Garland, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. After the ceremony luncheon was partaken of at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hampton, after which the young couple left for Grimsby and Niagara Falls. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

Result of Garden Competition, 1920.

Dear Girls and Boys:—
You will be interested to know who won this year's prizes. All the gardens showed a remarkable improvement over last year's efforts. Many were nicely arranged and free from weeds. The window-boxes were a disappointment. Competitors must understand that boxes cannot be judged unless they are on Windows. Next year have the boxes made to fit the window-sill and attached.

The vegetables were splendid. We congratulate the prize winners whose names are given below.

We hope that all those who were interested in the Bulb Competition last year and many others will plant some bulbs for spring blooming in the house or garden.

Superstitious Sense.

Ask the average man if he is superstitious, and he will give a snort of negative contempt, but—well, he protests too much. He has his little superstitions all right.

We all have, and the more we have the wiser we are! Superstitions hold sense. The superstitions will not walk under a ladder. That's excellent wisdom, really, for thereby they escape the brick that might have dropped on their head, or the spots of paint that would have ruined their clothes, or the bit of lime that could have fallen into their eye and caused them half a day's agony, or worse.

The superstitious will not sit down with thirteen at the table. Excellent wisdom again. Thirteen is an odd number. When conversation develops on pair lines, as it generally does, then someone has to be left out—or brought in as a third. Further, if thirteen at table means that one is to die before the year is out, isn't it wiser to live? The cost of dying is as much up as the cost of living.

Then there's the salt-spilling superstition. It's unlucky to spill salt, but the ill-luck is cancelled if you throw a handful over your left shoulder. Sound wisdom again. The carpet will have to be swept, for one thing. It probably needs it. Servants are not what they were.

And, as all "Home Hints" books put on record, there is nothing like salt to prevent moths getting into a carpet. Then there's the horse-shoe superstition. Sound sense again! If you pick up a horse-shoe a child cannot fall over it. Nor a cyclist be thrown by it. Nor a tyre be punctured with it. And cast horse-shoes, in a good state, are worth threepence each. All superstitions rest on sense. The above are just instances. Test the bulk, and you will find them up to sample.

Heart Revived by Massage.

A curious case of resuscitation is reported from Buenos Ayres, where a surgeon, after making an abdominal incision, found that the patient was pulseless, and inserted his hand and squeezed the heart with both hands, which at first did not respond. All at once a powerful contraction was felt, followed by others. The massage was stopped, but had to be resumed at once. The contractions reappeared, but the massage was continued and inhalations of oxygen were given. At last the patient was out of danger. She remained unconscious for a long time, and when she recovered had no idea how close she had been to passing out. Her recovery was very slow, being complicated by violent delirium, but she got well at last.

Real "Treasure Islands."

Situated in the Pacific Ocean, nearly midway between America and Asia, is Nauru, a barren bit of rock only twelve miles in circumference.

Thirty or forty years ago almost anybody could have had it for the asking. To-day it is worth untold millions, owing to the belated discovery that the whole island is neither more nor less than a mass of phosphate rock, the most wonderful soil fertilizer known to agriculturists.

In Conception Bay, Newfoundland, is Bell Island, sold by its original owner many years ago for one hundred dollars. Soon afterwards it changed hands again, for two million dollars.

This enormous rise in value was due to the accidental discovery that the island is composed almost entirely of iron ore.

For years previously shipmasters had been in the habit of taking the heavy, easily-handled rock for ballast, dumping it overboard with the utmost unconcern when they loaded up with cargo.

Then, one day, a captain, more curious than the others, had the strange-looking "rock" assayed, and his fortune was made.

Not very far away, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, is Anticosti Island, bought in 1895 from the Dominion Government by M. Henry Menier, the French "Chocoléte King," for $25,000. At the time he was laughed at.

But it proved a good investment for him, nevertheless; for the thick brush-wood with which the greater part of the island was covered proved to be swarming with black and silver foxes the most valuable fur-bearing animals in the world.

The concrete ship Permanencia, which was built at North Sydney, N. S. W., was towed to Sydney on Wednesday. The vessel lies at Ingraham's wharf and will be ready to make her maiden voyage in 15 days time. All of the equipment, with the exception of the stoves, has been installed. The vessel presents a neat appearance and is well fitted up. Accommodation is provided for a crew of five men and four passengers. The ship is electrically heated, and the motive power will be supplied by a 240-horse-power Bolinder crude oil engine. This engine is of the latest type and is capable of driving the Permanencia at a speed of nine and a half knots an hour. This engine cost the owners about $40,000.

Mr. MacDonald, who is the leading shareholder in the Permanencia, when interviewed by the Record on Wednesday, stated that the vessel would be placed on the Cape Breton island route. It is probable that the first voyage will be to Newfoundland. It is also very likely that her first cargo will be the product of Cape Breton's greatest industry, black diamonds.

The Permanencia is the first concrete ship to be constructed in the maritime provinces, and will make her maiden voyage from this port.

Mr. MacConnell, an expert engineer, has been brought here from St. John's, Newfoundland, and he will be in charge of the engine room. Mr. MacConnell, who has had considerable experience with crude oil engines, speaks highly of the type of engine that has been installed in the Permanencia. The captain and the rest of the crew will be signed on in the near future.—Sydney Record.

An Irish Leader.

Countess Markievicz, who is member of parliament for the St. Patrick's division of Dublin, and who was one of the commanders in Dublin during the Easter rising of 1916, has just been captured by the authorities, after being a long time on the run, writes Seumas McManus, in an Upper Canadian paper. She spent 18 months in jail after the Easter rising, and between that time and now has been in jail again once or twice. She is a daughter of Sir Evelyn Gore Booth, of County Sligo—a Unionist family, of course—although she is a Nationalist. Her husband, Count Markievicz, is a Polish gentleman and well known artist. Her sister, Eva Gore Booth, is a poet of some mark. For 12 years past the countess has devoted her life entirely to the Nationalist movement—practically taking the place in that movement that has been occupied by Maud Gonne, the Irish Joan of Arc, as she is named. All Fat People

Easily Reduce

The world owes a debt of gratitude to the author of the now famous Marmola Prescription, and is still more indebted for the reduction of this harmless, effective obesity remedy to tablet form. They are so convenient to take, and as pleasant as candy. One after each meal and at bedtime will quickly reduce your weight, two, three or four pounds a week, and leave no evil effects such as loose, flabby skin and unsightly wrinkles. Just go on eating what you like—eat, exercise to the utmost—take your little tablet as directed and soon you will be your natural self, cloaked in firm flesh and trim muscles. Marmola Prescription Tablets may now be obtained at all drug stores, or by writing direct to the Marmola Co., 92 Garfield Building, Detroit, Mich., and their reasonable price—one dollar for a good size box—leaves no excuse for dieting or violent exercise for the reduction of the overfat body to normal proportions.

the way, young Sean Gonne McBride, was captured at the same time as the countess. His father, the husband of Maud Gonne, was Major John McBride, who formed and led the Irish brigade that fought for the Boers. Major McBride finally led a command that fought in Dublin Easter week of 1916—and was one of the 16 executed after the rising. Maud Gonne, after she quitted Irish Nationalist politics, took to art and sculpture in Paris, where she spends most of the year.

Are Animals Brainsy?

Of course, all animals and insects have a certain amount of brain-power, but some are actually brainsy. Take, for example, a certain kind of ant which build their nest by the sewing together of a number of leaves. If a rent occurs in this flimsy home they soon set about repairing it in the following manner: The ants form a line one side of the tear, and reach across until they are able to seize the other side in their mouths. Then altogether they pull with one gigantic heave till one edge overlaps the other. Even now the work is by no means finished. The females scurry away, to return with their infants, which possess splinterets, though the adults do not. Holding their little ones securely, the ants pinch them, till, in self-defence, they start spinning. They are then moved from side to side of the rent, the minute threads attaching themselves in the process, and finally making an almost invisible mending of the torn edges.

Then there is the ape, who when gathering nuts is not deterred by the hard shell. He overcomes the difficulty with a couple of large stones, between which he will crush the nut with just the necessary force to crack the shell without crushing the kernel inside. When a desirable banana is out of his reach, he will also fetch a stick with which to knock it down.

The Lute of Thoth.

The place of music in the life of the ancients may be gathered from the writings of history. At the time of the founding of the first Egyptian dynasty, about 5,000 B.C. (?) we are told that the teachers who were sent among the people to instruct them in the arts of peace were accompanied everywhere by troops of musicians. What instruments these musicians played we are not informed, but we may imagine they played the oldest of the Egyptian stringed instruments—the lute of Thoth—the only instrument which appears in the hieroglyphics in the tombs of these ancients. It was a little lute, shaped like the ace of spades, with an elongated neck, and fitted with three strings.

Then came Moses, "the strong man," and with him came Egypt's oppression. The people got their civilization and lost their music. Now that they adopted settled habits, and left their wandering life, their tents and leaf huts, they began to pass into permanent stone houses, and so did the portable lute of Thoth evolve into the non-portable harp. Its form was slightly bent so as to admit of greater tension being applied to the strings by the benefit of the curve, which would partially remove the pressure from the pegs on to the body of the wood.

The report has created quite a sensation in this city. Ex-Kaiser Writing a "Political Testament."

The former Kaiser in his Holland retreat is writing a "political testament," the central idea of which is a justification of his course as ruler of Germany in the eyes of the world. The "testament" is not to be published until after his death. Professor Theodore Schiedemann, the aged historian and personal friend of the former Kaiser, is assisting him in the assembling of data and is also aiding in the editing. Prices Falling in Britain Except Bread.

Heavy slumps in the prices of nearly all staple commodities are reported in the English wholesale markets. Bread is higher, but cotton, lead, spelter, plate, sugar, rubber, copper, oils, and turpentine are all lower. Many failures of mushroom traders who sprang up during the war are feared, and an immediate reduction of the high cost of living is expected. The prices of manufactured goods, such as clothing, gloves, and boots, also are falling. Even the price of pints of whiskey is promised to fall soon. Boots, $12 two months ago, now are $9.

Official announcement was made by the French Foreign Minister recently that in the event of King Alexander of Greece, now seriously ill as the result of a monkey bite, should die, the candidate favored for the throne would probably be Prince Arthur of Connaught. The Iron Duke's Ill-Fated Wooing.

(John O'London's Weekly.)

In the latter years of the eighteenth century there was no more beautiful girl in all Ireland than Catherine Pakenham, third daughter of the second Lord Longford, who had left her home in Westmeath to queen it at the Vice-regal Court.

"Divinely tall and divinely fair," she was dowered, to quote an enthusiastic chronicler of the time, "with a figure of singular grace and dignity, and with luxurious hair, black and glossy as a raven's wing. Her features were small and exquisitely cut; her face, a perfect oval, was illuminated by large grey eyes, dancing with the joy of life; and laughter played hide-and-seek in the most fascinating dimples at each corner of a dainty mouth."

The Fun of The Fair.

It is small wonder that a girl of such charms and allurements should soon have the entire Court at her feet, and that every gallant should be eager to swell the retinue of her admirers. And how she revelled in her conquests is shown by the following letter written to her sister:—

You can't imagine the fun I am having here. All the men seem to have gone crazy over poor little me! And, of course, I am leading them all a merry dance, as becomes the daughter of my mother! The most loveliest of them all is Arthur Wellesley, son of Lord Mornington, and a captain of Light Dragoons—a shy boy, who is always shadowing me and making eyes at me in the most ludicrous way.

When he can summon up sufficient courage he pays me shamefaced compliments which I affect either not to understand or to be indignant at, until he retires crestfallen, unable to stand my teasing and laughter. Some day, mark my words, Mistress Betty, he will be bold or desperate enough to propose to me, and then we shall see some fun!"

An Object of Ridicule.

Certainly at this time there was little in Lord Mornington's son to attract the favour of women. "He was a shy, awkward young man," we are told, "whose blushing and stammering made him an object of ridicule to the ladies of the Court."

But if young Wellesley lacked coolness and courage under the battery of Catherine's coquetries and teasing, he at least showed no lack of tenacity. He had set his heart on winning her, and determined to give her no peace until he had conquered her.

Thus it was that, by slow degrees, Catherine found herself beginning to admire her lover's pertinacity, his indifference alike to her coldness and caprices. And it was not long before admiration gave place to respect and finally to love. And before a year had passed she was glad to surrender to the man whose wooing she had begun by ridiculing.

But although Arthur Wellesley had conquered, he was soon to discover that he was as far as ever from possessing the prize he had won. For, when he journeyed to Westmeath to ask Lord Longford's permission to marry his daughter, he received a very decided "No" for answer.

Thus it was with sad hearts and mutual vows of lifelong fidelity that the young lovers parted—Catherine to spend long years in weary, almost hopeless waiting; Wellesley to sail with his regiment to Calcutta, to begin his brilliant climb to the loftiest pinnacle of fame.

"Better Death a Thousand Times."

But for Catherine there was also a heavy cross to bear. Her lover had been gone some years when a terrible tragedy fell on her. Smallpox became rampant in Dublin, and among its many victims was Lord Longford's daughter. For weeks she hovered on the brink of the grave; and when at last she struggled back to life it was to make the horrible discovery that the pitiless disease had swept away every trace of her beauty.

When she first caught a glimpse of her face in a mirror "she gasped in horror at what she saw, and fell back on her pillow moaning, 'Better death a thousand times than this!'"

Happily the curtain is drawn over the meeting when at last Wellesley returned to Ireland, a national hero, and a Knight Commander of the Bath—a meeting for both full of poignant tragedy. We know, however, that though he realized that romance had received its death-blow, he refused to listen to her pleadings that he should leave her and seek happiness elsewhere. And thus it was that one April day in 1806 the vows that had been exchanged under such different conditions so many years earlier were repeated at the altar.

A Devoted Father.

She was proud of his fame, and grateful to him for his chivalry. She knew that his love for her was death, and was thankful for every crumb of kindness and sympathy that fell from the table at which, in happier years, she had hoped one day to sit as his queen.

That he was a dutiful husband, however hard and lacking in feeling, no one has ever denied. But at least it must be said for him that, although he had little affection to lavish on his wife, he was a devoted father to the children she bore him.

While his first-born child was still in his cradle he was called away to Spain; and during the years that followed, his wife, waiting patiently at home, watched from afar her husband's dazzling career.

For sixteen years more Catherine Pakenham, now Duchess of Wellington and Princess of Waterloo, lived her loveless life, devoted to her husband, grateful for the least attention, and expecting no love. Then came the last day, probably the happiest of her twenty-five years of wedded life, when her hand clasped in his, his name, tenderly whispered, on her lips, she passed behind the veil.

Eugenic Courtships in England.

Eugenic courtships are being conducted at the Herne Bay Beach, near London, where crowds are swarming to witness the spectacle of sweethearts, certified as physically fit, enjoying the happy interlude between engagement and marriage.

The couples are enrolled as students of the school of eugenics and civics, whose numbers are limited to ninety-nine. The official reason given for this odd figure is that "experience shows that such a number is neither unwieldy nor non-social."

In every case the engagement has been preceded by the exchange of detailed medical certificates, and it is held the study of eugenics of healthy matched men and girls under conditions prevailing at Herne Bay gives the students an ideal opportunity to discover whether they are mated as well temperamentally as physically.

Spectators are disappointed at the course pursued by eugenic love. They say it lacks the abandon of the un-certified spooning of sweethearts who splash together in the sea and sprawl about on the sands. The students are extremely self-conscious. "If this sad, scientific romancing grows, we shall soon hear no more of saying that all the world loves a pair of lovers," is the verdict of one eugenic observer.

The students deny that they are making a solemn ritual of health. "Our principles will stand by us and bring their due reward long after the love intoxication of the scoffers will have cooled," they declare.—Philadelphia North American.

Prince Brings Menagerie Home.

The return to London of the Prince of Wales has created a perplexing problem. The Prince brought back to London with him a good-sized menagerie, and the question has arisen as to what is to be done with the Prince's pets.

It seems that every tribe in his father's dominions insisted upon presenting him with a living token of its souvenirs of his hunting exploits, with the result that the good ship Renown returned with a cargo that would do justice to the London Zoo. As a matter of fact the collection of young emus and Australian bears brought back by the Prince are to be the only specimens of their kind in Europe. Besides several tons of live stock the Prince returns with carloads of presents, mostly consisting of carved sticks, carved pipes, bark canoes, Maori carpets and door mats and silk pyjamas. The Maori tribes gave him an elaborately carved flagpole, which they asked the Prince to hoist over his royal "hut."

Hymns Suitable to the Occasion.

At most church services there is a serious attempt to choose hymns that will harmonize with the minister's sermon. Sometimes, however, in spite of this, a real humorous choice creeps in, either from apparent aptness or from the opposite. At one time a clergyman named Sparkes requested a "brother minister to officiate at the baptism of his twelfth child. Unthinkingly, the visiting preacher asked the congregation to join in the fifth paraphrase commencing with "As sparks in close succession rise." After church the preacher asked why it was that a general titter went all over the assembly. He was Scotch.

A clergyman just assigned to a new parish was about to read, as was customary, the Thirty-nine Articles to his flock. Being a well-intentioned man and desiring to relieve the monotony of such lengthy proceedings, he decided to intersperse the reading of the articles with various hymns. "Oh for a faith that will not shrink." After he had read the first thirteen Articles he gave out the second hymn, "Art thou weary, art thou languid?" Thirteen more Articles followed, and then came the hymn, "Christian, seek not yet repose." At the close of the thirty-ninth Article came the concluding hymn, "Now the laborer's task is o'er." Probably some of the congregation thought the selection very suitable.

The Romance of Modern Steamships.

Just think of it, the first man who suggested that steam might be used to propel a vessel was confined by the French Government to a mad-house. His name was Solomon de Gens and he believed so much in his idea that although he was first called a fool and then a madman, he persisted to harass the government until they put him in a lunatic asylum in order to get rid of him. This was in 1640. In 1698 the idea of steam driven paddle wheels was suggested by Thomas Savary, an Englishman. He made no practical effort to carry out his purpose, but Denis Papin, a Frenchman, built a small steamboat which he used in 1707. Contrary to the predictions of many it was a complete success, but the boatmen of France, fearing that it would take away their livelihood, smashed it to pieces, and any attempt to rebuild it was met with determined opposition.

After Watt's invention of the steam engine the attention of many was again turned to the idea of steamships and scores of experiments were made, most of which were not very successful. Still every new invention had some idea which was an improvement on what had gone before.

Robert Fulton had all this time been quietly studying the subject and he made his first model in 1802. He tried his first large boat on the Seine in 1804 but it lacked speed. Coming to America shortly afterwards he began the construction of the Clermont which was launched in 1807 and made his first trip in August of that year. There was great excitement over the success of Fulton's experiment, and from that time on steam navigation made rapid progress.

If we consider Robert Fulton's little boat Clermont the first steamboat, then in little more than one hundred years we have had developments which almost seem to be miraculous. The Clermont started down the Hudson in the presence of thousands of astonished spectators. It sputtered as it made its way down the river with a speed we would consider painfully slow, but which at that time made it a wonder.

In 1819 a steamship, the Savannah, crossed the Atlantic in twenty-six days. It was not, however, until 1833 that regular steamship communication was established across the Atlantic. When in 1841, the Britannia steamed from Liverpool to cross the Atlantic, she was hailed as one of the wonders of the world. Charles Dickens was one of the eighty-seven passengers on board the Britannia, and he was in no mood to be very much impressed by the far-famed American steamboat. He said this "leviathan," as she was then considered, almost rolled her funnel out. The world was impressively told at the time that the Britannia was a vessel of 412 tons and had cost $125,000.

The dimensions of the modern liner have increased to an extent undreamed of by shipbuilding even of a generation ago. The ill-fated Lusitania had a length of 785 feet and a tonnage of 32,500, with a speed of twenty-five knots. She was four times as long as the Britannia and her tonnage twenty-eight times as great. She had accommodation for 2,150 persons, and her funnels soared higher than a fourteen-story "skyscraper." Yet even this colossal vessel had a tonnage little more than half that of the Olympic, and the Olympic has been eclipsed by the Aquitania.

The vast dimension of these great liners are not the most impressive feature. A simple voyage of the Olympic across the Atlantic means an outlay of over sixty thousand dollars for food alone. The Olympic requires for one voyage 50,000 pounds of fresh meat, 50,000 pounds of potatoes, 10,000 pounds of canned meat, 30,000 pints of milk, and 30,000 eggs. Approximately, poultry to the number of 7,500 are required. Two tons of fresh fish, and nearly the same amount of salt fish, and at least seven tons of canned fish are required.

Charles Dickens complained of the "impossible box," dignified by the name of state-cabin. He would have no room for complaint to-day. The luxury of equipment on a modern liner would rival the finest hotel. More than seven hundred persons can dine in the first-class saloon of the Aquitania, while the restaurant of the Titanic had furnishings which seemed to reach the high-water mark of elegance and luxury.

When Real Sailors Meet.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

A battle royal on the seas is ensured when the schooner Esperanto, representing the deep sea fishermen of Gloucester, meets the schooner Delawana of Halifax, to determine the championship of the fishing fleet which makes its headquarters on the Banks of Newfoundland. The race will be fair and square; and those who are chosen to man the schooners Esperanto and Delawana will be men who win their daily living by exposing themselves to the perils and the toils of the Atlantic Ocean. No handicap is to be given, nor will one be asked for. In such a contest, a time allowance is a thing without meaning, and without value. The sole issue is between the ships of Halifax and Gloucester, and between the seafaring qualities of the men who man those ships. When Gloucester meets Halifax, the contest becomes an international one. It is Canada against the United States, and Canadian seamanship pitted against the seamanship of the foremost fishing sort in the United States. The coming race loses none of its interest from the fact that no elaborate preparations are needed for it, nor is there anything to require the preliminary expenditure of vast sums of money. No wizard in yacht designing has been called in, neither is any effort being made to invent a new type of sail or a new detail in rigging, to give either schooner the necessary edge over its rival to assure the palm of victory. The fishermen of Gloucester and Halifax are satisfied with the materials which they find daily ready to their hand in the schooners that comprise the fishing fleet of the Banks. First principles of ocean racing, in short, will feature this latest international contest of the sea; and because the proposed race will get down to the bed-rock fundamentals of racing, it will be followed with interest by many thousands of Americans and Canadians to whom conventional yacht racing is still more or less a mystery.

Lecturer Howled Down for British Sympathies.

Angered by a rumor that he had said the American revolution against England was not justified, 500 persons hissed and howled down Major George Haven Putnam at Brooklyn on October 11, and prevented him from delivering a lecture on "The Relations Between American and England." It was learned afterwards that the report was circulated that Major Putnam had said in a lecture in Canada that George Washington was wrong in fighting against the "Mother Country," and that the American revolution should never have taken place, and that America should apologize to the Mother Country. The turmoil at the meeting became so great that police reserves were sent from the nearby Snyder avenue station to preserve order. No arrests were made, and all but a few persons of the audience left the hall, singing "The Star-spangled Banner," headed by a man carrying the American flag. One man attempted to create a diversion in favor of Major Putnam by crying: "The Irish want fair play and are willing to give fair play." This was the only indication that Irish sympathizers were at the bottom of the demonstration. The attempt failed, however, and the audience formed in haphazard marching order and left the hall singing, headed by the flag.

185 audiences tried it this way

MOST people know that the musical enjoyment which they get out of a phonograph depends upon one thing. That thing is the phonograph's realism.

This picture shows the best way to test a phonograph's realism. Miss Betsy Lane Shepherd, the famous soprano, is standing beside the New Edison, and singing in direct comparison with the New Edison's RE-CREATION of her voice.

185 audiences, aggregating more than 100,000 people, have actually heard this comparison. None could distinguish between her living voice and its RE-CREATION.

This is one of the phenomenal records of realism. The New Edison holds all other records of realism, too, because no other phonograph attempts this comparison-test—or could sustain it.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

You try it this way

—the way we use in our store!—the Realism Test! Test the New Edison's Realism against the pleasure you know music can bring.

Tell us what kind of voice or instrument gives you truest musical enjoyment. Listen while we play your favorite on the New Edison. The Realism Test will enable you to gauge whether the New Edison's RE-CREATION gives you all of this enjoyment.

This is your test! It will help you determine what the New Edison's Realism means, in terms of your own musical enjoyment.

Ask for it! The "Personal Favorites" Realism Test.

Another thing to ask about is our Budget Plan. It disposes of the money question, in a way that will appeal to your common-sense and to your pocketbook.

Obituary.

There passed peacefully away, on August 31st, in Brooklyn, New York, Catherine, relict of the late Daniel McCarthy and Michael Scanton, Riverhead, Harbor Grace. She had been very ill for quite awhile previous to her death, suffering from some inward trouble, from which she sought relief, but to no avail. Her sufferings, which at times were very intense, she bore bravely and with resignation, as befitting the Christian, God-fearing woman she was. Death came as a release on the above-mentioned date and ushered her gentle spirit into the realm beyond the grave.

The subject of this obituary was born in Carbonear about 78 years ago. She was the fourth daughter of Felix and Mary McCarthy of that town. Some twenty years ago she emigrated to Boston, U.S.A., and there made her home, living the life of a good and industrious woman, setting an example to her sex of the virtues that adorn and ennoble true womanhood, and leaving after her the aroma of kindly deeds and virtuous living.

Her children, left to mourn, consist of four daughters and one son. The names of these are as follows: Hannah and Maud living in Ohio, U.S., Annie and Margaret with whom she lived previous to her death. The latter is married to Patrick Doherty, formerly one of Harbor Grace's most respected citizens, but for the past 28 years, a resident of Brooklyn, New York. Another daughter, Minnie, married to James Barry of H. Graces, predeceased her. The other daughters are also comfortably married. The son, Denis, is now a very respected citizen of Boston. To one and all of these and other relatives the sympathy of their many friends is extended in this, the time of their affliction. Hers was the consolation of being surrounded in her dying moments by their presence and kindly filial attentions to soothe and comfort their good mother, whose spirit was about to depart into that bourne from which no traveller returns.

Her remains were conveyed to Boston for burial, accompanied by all her relations. On Friday, September 3rd, all that was mortal of Catherine Scanton was consigned to mother earth, there to await in trust and faith the great call of the Archangel "Arise ye dead and come to judgment." May her soul rest in peace.—Com.

Accident to Little Princess.

The schooner reported in our issue of yesterday as meeting with an accident while going on the floating dock, is the Little Princess, owned by Capt. A. Kean. It seems that after the schooner had been placed into position the work of pumping out the dock was begun and was almost completed when the pumps in No. 1 section got out of order causing the western part of the dock to gradually sink. This caused the vessel's keel to fall off the stocks and throw her out on her beam ends. There was sufficient warning given to the dock employees and the crew when the schooner started to fall over and no one was injured. The dock was not damaged and the disabled pumps were soon put into working order, the dock upright and the Princess got back on an even keel. On examination it was found that the vessel was leaking very badly her pumps being unable to keep her free. The D. P. Ingraham was called and the schooner towed to Bowring's upper Southside premises where she was beached in Mudge's cove. The Little Princess is amongst the best of our local fleet.

Motorists Responding.

It is good news to learn that a great number of motorists who first refused to pay the additional tax, have reconsidered the matter and are now paying up. We understand that the Road Commission has postponed taking action for this reason as they wish to collect the tax by conciliatory means and would only resort to legal action against those whose taxes are not paid within a certain specified period. The facility of any attempt to evade payment of tax is apparent from the fact that no license will be issued next spring to any person whose tax for 1920 has not been paid to the Newfoundland Road Commission.

School Football.

The St. Bon's second eleven met the Feildian second eleven on St. Bon's field yesterday afternoon. Both sides put up a good showing, and quite a number of the youngsters promise to make fine players later on. The game ended in a draw, both sides scoring 2 goals.

Avalon Drug Store Open for Business.

The store on New Gower Street, near the junction with Waldegrave Street, formerly owned by the late J. Channing, druggist, has been recently fitted up and is now open to the public with a full supply of drugs and toilet preparations. The business is operated by the Avalon Drug Co. Ltd., with Mr. W. Taaffe as manager. A complete line of druggist sundries and general articles, in addition to the regular stock is due to arrive in a few days. The store will be open every night for the convenience of patrons. Mr. Taaffe has had 27 years' experience with the old firm of McMurdo & Co., having during that time passed through all branches of the calling, from retail, wholesale, dispensing, and travelling. With such long experience customers can rely on him for the careful filling of prescriptions or any other orders entrusted to the store. We bespeak for the new firm a liberal share of the public patronage. The interior of the store has been completely renovated, and with new and up-to-date fittings and display cases presents a very attractive and bright appearance. Service and courtesy will be the motto of the new company and its capable manager.

Motor Car Upsets.

TWO MEN INJURED.

Two residents of Petty Harbor named Stack and Kiely met with a painful accident a couple of days ago while driving on a motor truck from the Goules. On the way home one of the wheels of the car hitting a boulder, upset the machine pinning one of the occupants beneath it. While trying to extricate the injured man, the other severely strained himself and has since been confined to his home. Some people eventually happening along, the car was uprighted and the injured men taken to their homes. The roads in this section are in a terrible condition and should be looked after.

Personal.

Mr. Mark Chaplin is, we learn, still at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston, Mass., where he is steadily if slowly improving.

Messrs. Chas. Peddie, Dr. Lynch, Wm. Billingsley and Wm. Cahill, who were attending a convention of the K. of C., returned to Bell Island yesterday.

Mr. H. McNeil, of the Customs' service, North Sydney, is at present visiting the city and is registered at the Crosbie. "Mac" is well known to the Nfld. travelling public who are glad to see him looking so well. Mr. McNeil reached the city to attend Monday night's K. of C. Convention and leaves for home by to-morrow's express.

Mr. J. P. Burke, Chairman of the Wabana County Council, who spent the last few days in St. John's in connection with matters relating to the further improvement of the Bell Island roads, returned to Bell Island yesterday. Mr. Burke opens his campaign for re-election to the Wabana Council on his return to the island.

Mr. J. M. Greene, of the D.I.S. Co. staff, Bell Island, who was visiting Grand Falls, is at present in the city en route to the Iron Isle. While at the paper town Mr. Greene attended conventions of the Knights of Columbus and also the Elks, and he speaks in glowing terms of the hospitality and kindness of the Grand Falls folks.

Capt. Wm. A. Evans recently received the Military Cross. His brother, Capt. T. J. Carey Evans, has also won the M.C. Both are the sons of Dr. R. D. Evans, J.P., Lily Meddyg. The gallant soldiers referred to in the above clipping from the North Wales' Chronicle, are brothers of Mrs. P. H. Knowling, this city.

Mrs. (Capt.) Davidson, who left here the last week in July en route to Japan, has arrived at her destination, according to letters received in town last week. Mrs. Davidson says she had a most pleasant voyage from Victoria, B.C. to Yokohama, and enjoyed the long sea trip immensely. She speaks in the highest terms of the kindness received from all nationalities she came in contact with. Mrs. Davidson is now settled in her Japanese home and although strange at first, at the time of writing, Sept. 21st, she was getting used to the surroundings. It is a most beautiful climate, and at the time of writing was at its best.

Promotion by Pull.

Much dissatisfaction exists amongst Post Office employees, because of influence in promotions, junior men being placed over the heads of seniors, because the former have a pull with members of the Government who are relatives. One prominent employee in a Newfoundland office at a Canadian steamship and railway terminus, makes bitter complaint of the treatment he has received after being twenty-eight years in the service. This official deserves promotion not only by seniority, but because he has been ever constant in performing the duties of his office, and has made a reputation for himself second to none. But promotion is not now being made for ability and long service. Pull and family influence appear to be all that is necessary, and departmental heads fall for this to the detriment, not only of the deserving official, but of the service.

For The Hair and Complexion So Refreshing and Healthful

KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP

Golden Transparent

JUST imagine feeling wonderfully rested and refreshed after shampooing your own hair. Try to imagine such a shampoo with no wearisome rubbing and rubbing to raise even a thin lather, and no rinsing and rinsing over and over till your back is nearly broken and your hair still stringy and sticky from the undissolved soap.

You can easily realize such an imagination if you use JAP ROSE soap. Just dip the big, golden-transparent cake in any kind of water—cold or hard. A few light rubs on your moistened hair, and presto—almost like magic come flock upon flock of the prettiest little elfish, pearly bubbles. How they do go after the dust and oil in the hair, and right down to the skin pores of the scalp. And then the rinsing—how easy it is. A dash or two of water or a brief swish of the spray—and all the bubbles are gone, everyone, while the hair and scalp are thoroughly clean—of soap as well as grime.

So pure are the oils in JAP ROSE soap, and so scientifically blended with c. p. glycerine are they, that besides its wonderful cleansing powers, JAP ROSE is the most healthful, hygienic soap that it's possible to make. It not only cleanses but leaves a smooth, tender glow to the complexion, and the hair soft and fluffy.

Roses in the cheeks, fluffiness in the hair, fragrant cleanliness everywhere—that's JAP ROSE.

Sensational Cricket Finishes.

The present cricket season has given us one of the most exciting finishes to a cricket match on record, when Middlesex beat Surrey during the fight for the championship. This takes rank with other great games, such as the finish of the fifth Test Match, played at the Oval during the Australian tour in this country in the summer of 1902.

If anything could beat the latter, it would be the finish at Manchester in the fourth match of the same tour, when Lockwood, the famous old Surrey bowler, took five wickets for eight runs, and Australia won by the narrowest run margin on record in Test Matches--three. But that was a disappointment, and a disappointment is depressing, and it needs exhilaration and triumph to raise a finish to that point we call sensational.

So I give the palm to the finish of the sixty-first Test Match, against Darling's famous team, when England won by one wicket after being set to make 263 to win, and losing half the side for something short of fifty runs! The Test Matches had been disastrous for England. The first two, at Birmingham and Lord's respectively, had been drawn, the third and fourth, at Sheffield and Manchester, lost, and now it appeared to be a million sterling to a hay-seed that the fifth would be lost also, and Australia would take home not only the ashes, but the fire-grate and fire-irons to boot!

Curiously enough, the Australians

had been reported since the previous match to have expressed their opinion that, however Jessop succeeded against county bowling, he was useless against bowlers of Test Match quality, and there had been talk of dropping him.

A kindly Providence ruled otherwise. Coming in when England's chances of winning were at the lowest, he hit up a century in seventy-five minutes, and put even victory within the range of possibility.

I had the great good fortune to see that innings, and the sensational finish to which it was the necessary prelude. I was sitting on the turf to square leg of the pavilion stumps, and the number of times the Croucher moved the ball round to various spots in my vicinity, with many boundaries amongst them, raised the enthusiasm of the vast crowd to fever pitch. (But Jessop was not the only hero of that wonderful and ever-memorable finish. There were others--Jackson, Lillie, Hirst, Rhodes. It is strange but true that even Jessop's lightning innings lives less in the memory than the nerve-straining, last-wicket stand of Hirst and Rhodes, when every ball bowled was watched with an intensity of hope and fear I never saw equalled or approached on the cricket field.

Of course, the trouble was that Rhodes in 1902 was little more regarded as a batsman than Cook, say, is to-day. He was much nearer being a Rusby than a Woolley. I forget how many runs were required when he came out to bat on the fall of the ninth wicket, about forty, I think. If he could survive half a dozen overs from the Colonial bowlers it would be a minor miracle!

For forty-five minutes twenty thousand people gasped, sighed, and yelled, when they were not holding their breath. The gasps came when Rhodes was beaten but not bowled, when he just escaped being run out from a short one to give Hirst the bowling; the sigh when he had succeeded in crediting the Australian trundler with a "maiden" by virtue of his absolute refusal to hit; the yell when stout-hearted Hirst spanked one suddenly to the boundary and reduced the adverse balance by four.

An enthusiastic parson was seated on the turf close to me, and with the run that made the game a tie he thought it was a win. Waving his hat in one hand and his umbrella in the other, he leapt to his feet, and raced for the crease, never looking behind him. A roar of laughter, relieving strained nerves, brought him up short. He looked round.

He was alone on a wide, wide sea of green, when he had imagined himself the first of a stampeding crowd. He joined in the laugh against himself as he came back. But he got his chance a minute later, when the feat winning hit was made. Then not the parson only, but the whole multitude "pelted" for the pavilion. Rhodes, Hirst, and the Australians running like rabbits for their burrows.

For an hour or more thereafter ten thousand enthusiasts stood in front of the pavilion calling for the actors who had made history that afternoon. They got all but Hirst. That stalwart was shy. Then a band of young fellows started to say in chorus: "We--want--HIRST!" and this they said a hundred times till the famous all-rounder was dragged to the balcony by his comrades, and the crowd went home satisfied.--Answers.

Jealousy.

"A gentleman who performed great deeds of heroism during some floods in Boston, U.S.A., in the fullness of time went to Heaven, where, after a favourable reception by St. Peter, he was told to go up into the city and make himself known. He saw a very aged man who was being listened to with great respect by a crowd.

"The hero joined this crowd, and seizing on a pause in the remarks of the aged one, he said:--

"Pardon me, sir, but I am the hero of the Boston floods!"

"The aged one took no notice whatever of this interruption, but continued his remarks as though nothing had occurred.

"Poor old boy! he must be deaf," thought the hero, and patiently waited a second opportunity. . . .

"I, sir, am the hero of the Boston floods," said he, in a loud and distinct voice. Again the aged one ignored the interruption and proceeded with his observation. The hero found himself unable to withstand this cavalier treatment.

with a malevolent eye. "Confound the Boston floods," he said, with great heartiness. The hero walked away from the group in high dudgeon. Later he met an archangel, who, observing the melancholy of his countenance, stopped him and asked what was wrong. "Cheer up, my boy!" he said. . . . "That's merely professional jealousy! That's Noah!"

"Don't Care."

The kingdom of Don't Care is filled with Mills. Their product is "Don't Care" flour.

It's an excellent flour for those who don't care, and for don't care buyers with a don't care trade.

If you are one of them, we don't care.

BUT IF YOU REALLY DO CARE

There is something in

"Windsor Patent" FOR YOU.

Sensational Cricket Finishes.

The present cricket season has given us one of the most exciting finishes to a cricket match on record, when Middlesex beat Surrey during the fight for the championship. This takes rank with other great games, such as the finish of the fifth Test Match, played at the Oval during the Australian tour in this country in the summer of 1902.

If anything could beat the latter, it would be the finish at Manchester in the fourth match of the same tour, when Lockwood, the famous old Surrey bowler, took five wickets for eight runs, and Australia won by the narrowest run margin on record in Test Matches--three. But that was a disappointment, and disappointment is depressing, and it needs exhilaration and triumph to raise a finish to that point we call sensational.

So I give the palm to the finish of the sixty-first Test Match, against Darling's famous team, when England won by one wicket after being set to make 263 to win, and losing half the side for something short of fifty runs!

The Test Matches had been disastrous for England. The first two, at Birmingham and Lord's respectively, had been drawn, the third and fourth, at Sheffield and Manchester, lost, and now it appeared to be a million sterling to a hay-seed that the fifth would be lost also, and Australia would take home not only the Ashes, but the aggregate and fire-irons to boot!

Curiously enough, the Australians

had been reported since the previous match to have expressed their opinion that, however Jessop succeeded against county bowling, he was useless against bowlers of Test Match quality, and there had been talk of dropping him.

A kindly Providence ruled otherwise. Coming in when England's chances of winning were at the lowest, he hit up a century in seventy-five minutes, and put even victory within the range of possibility.

I had the great good fortune to see that innings, and the sensational finish to which it was the necessary prelude. I was sitting on the turf to square leg of the pavilion stumps, and the number of times the Croucher moved the ball round to various spots in my vicinity, with many boundaries amongst them, raised the enthusiasm of the vast crowd to fever pitch.

But Jessop was not the only hero of that wonderful and ever-memorable finish. There were others--Jackson, Lilley, Hirst, Rhodes. It is strange but true that even Jessop's lightning innings lives less in the memory than the nerve-straining last-wicket stand of Hirst and Rhodes, when every ball bowled was watched with an intensity of hope and fear I never saw equalled or approached on the cricket field.

Of course, the trouble was that Rhodes in 1902 was little more regarded as a batsman than Cook, say, is to-day. He was much nearer being a Rusby than a Woolley. I forget how many runs were required when he came out to bat on the fall of the ninth wicket, about forty, I think. If he could survive half a dozen overs from the Colonial bowlers it would be a minor miracle!

For forty-five minutes twenty thousand people gasped, sighed, and yelled, when they were not holding their breath. The gasps came when Rhodes was beaten but not bowled, when he just escaped being run out from a short one to give Hirst the bowling; the sigh when he had succeeded in crediting the Australian trundler with a "maiden" by virtue of his absolute refusal to hit; the yell when stout-hearted Hirst spanked one suddenly to the boundary and reduced the adverse balance by four!

An enthusiastic person was seated on the turf close to me, and with the run that made the game a tie he thought it was a win. Waving his hat in one hand and his umbrella in the other, he leapt to his feet, and raced for the crease, never looking behind him. A roar of laughter, relieving strained nerves, brought him up short. He looked round.

He was alone on a wide, wide sea of green, when he had imagined himself the first of a stampeding crowd. He joined in the laugh against himself as he came back. But he got his chance a minute later, when the feat winning hit was made. Then not the person only, but the whole multitude "pelted" for the pavilion. Rhodes, Hirst, and the Australians running like rabbits for their burrows.

For an hour or more thereafter ten thousand enthusiasts stood in front of the pavilion calling for the actors who had made history that afternoon. They got all but Hirst. That stalwart was shy. Then a band of young fellows started to say in chorus: "We want--HIRST!" and this they said a hundred times till the famous all-rounder was dragged to the balcony by his comrades, and the crowd went home satisfied.--Answers.

Jealousy.

"A gentleman who performed great deeds of heroism during some floods in Boston, U.S.A., in the fullness of time went to Heaven, where, after a favourable reception by St. Peter, he was told to go up into the city and make himself known. He saw a very aged man who was being listened to with great respect by a crowd.

"The hero joined this crowd, and seizing on a pause in the remarks of the aged one, he said:--

"Pardon me, sir, but I am the hero of the Boston floods!"

"The aged one took no notice whatever of this interruption, but continued his remarks as though nothing had occurred.

"Poor old boy! he must be deaf," thought the hero, and patiently waited a second opportunity.

"I, sir, am the hero of the Boston floods," said he, in a loud and distinct voice. Again the aged one ignored the interruption and proceeded with his observation. The hero found himself unable to withstand this cavalier treatment.

with a malevolent eye. "Confound the Boston floods," he said, with great heartiness. The hero walked away from the group in high dudgeon. Later he met an archangel, who, observing the melancholy of his countenance, stopped him and asked what was wrong. "Cheer up, my boy!" he said. "That's merely professional jealousy! That's Noah!"
