The New Novel

By James Oliver Curwood.

Never has Mr. Curwood written a more virile, gripping and swiftly moving story than "The Country Beyond," in which he tells of the love of Jolly Roger, the outlaw, for Nada the "foster-girl" of Jed Hawkins and of their enforced separation through the tracking down of Jolly Roger by Cassidy of the Royal North West Mounted Police. "The Country Beyond" which is packed with thrills is one of the most spacious and fascinating stories that has yet come from the pen of this brilliant writer. Price $1.50.

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE; Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER IX.

Though the words amazed him, the friendly smile reassured him. She had never spoken to him in such a fashion before; none the less, however, was he charmed by the sweet voice, and by the smile that played round the lovely lips.

"Do you think," he said, "that I should do for the army, Lady Iris? You may consider me presumptuous; but those words of yours have remained in my memory—they have saved me from giving myself up to a life of idleness and folly. Now when I ask you to confirm them, do not turn from me with cold disdain and light cruel words. I may be very much beneath you, Lady Iris, but I have a heart which can suffer and a soul that may be worth saving. One word from you will influence my whole life."

"I cannot advise you; I do not know your tastes and habits."

"I can shape them," he said, "in any way. Let me tell you this much; there is something in this life I want to win—an object I want to attain. I would give anything to win it."

"What is it?" she asked wonderingly.

"The love of a woman," he replied—"of a woman who is far above me."

"Then why seek it, if you can never reach it?" she asked.

"I am determined to reach it; and I have vowed to make my life pursuits the ladder by which I shall reach it. Will you help me by telling me what career you think would suit me best?"

"Honestly speaking, I do not know," she replied. "You forget that we are almost strangers."

"Nay, I cannot admit that," he said. "I know that you feel kindly toward me, Lady Iris. Do you not?"

"Yes, most certainly I do," she answered; "but to feel kindly toward any one, and to be able to suggest a career, or even advise about one, are very different things. I should have thought you would have found enough to do upon your father's large estate without seeking anything outside your own home."

"It would not satisfy me!" he cried.

"I want more to do. I must have a superabundance of energy, for I find myself always longing for work. Do you think, Lady Iris, that I should find a suitable sphere for work in the army? What do you think?"

"I think," she replied slowly, "that no man can serve two interests. If you are to be a good landlord, you cannot at the same time be a hard working officer—the thing is impossible."

"Then the army is henceforth a sealed book to me," he said; but Lady Iris held up her hand with a warning gesture.

"You must not say that. Indeed I have neither the wish nor the intention to guide you in the least. I would not undertake such a responsibility with a brother of my own, if I had one."

"I hope," he said, bending forward eagerly, "that I shall be able to induce you to do for me what you would not do for a brother of your own, Lady Iris."

She drew back with a haughty gesture which he would not notice, and rejoined coldly and proudly—

"I do not know why you should say that, Mr. Bardon. I said once—and if you speak to me often about it, I shall repent having spoken the words—that I was interested in your career; but it is only the interest that one feels in all self-reliant characters, and, let me add, in all near neighbors."

"You certainly do the best you can, Lady Iris, to take all the kindness from your words." And there was something so pitiful and so pathetic in his voice that she hesitated, then smiled, and said—

"One hardly knows what to say to you."

"Say something kind!" he cried. "I am sure that kindness goes furthest!"

"I do not want to go far, as you express it," answered Lady Iris; "that is the very thing I wish to avoid."

His countenance fell and his eyes darkened.

"Is there any objection to your saying this, I wish you God-speed, John Bardon?"

"There is no particular objection," she replied. "At the same time I see no reason for saying it."

"At least say, 'I wish you well.' You cannot refuse to say that!"

"I wish you well, Mr. Bardon," she said; "and now our interview must end."

"Have you counted the list of wounded, Iris?" said the earl laughingly to his daughter. "I should imagine it to be a long one."

"I have not wounded any one intentionally, papa," she answered. "I cannot understand how it is that when a young girl really begins life the trouble of love and lovers begins with it."

"I was so happy in the thought of coming to London; but, although I have enjoyed myself very much, half my happiness has been marred by the pain I have given. I wish people would let love alone."

The earl smiled sadly. "Ah, my darling, you will fall in love some day—and I am not sure that it will be a happy day for you! The Faynes are not, as a rule, fortunate in love. Many of the marriages in our family have been like state marriages—love has had little to do with them. The love-matches have been few and far between, and they have not all been prosperous." His face clouded, as it did always when he spoke of love or marriage. "Some of our race," he continued, "have sacrificed everything for love. I remember the story of one member of our family who married a beautiful noble lady, who had a large fortune. He did not love her, although they lived happily enough after a fashion; but after her death, my dear, he met some one whom he loved with all his heart. She was not quite his equal, but he married her, took her away from the world, and lived with her for one year—a year of unspeakable bliss in a hidden paradise, and then she died. The happiness of his life was concentrated in that one year."

"And she died, papa?" said Lady Iris, mournfully.

"Yes, died, Iris—so I have read that for hours after her death he sat holding the hand of the only woman he ever loved, and refused to be parted from her, and that after she was buried those who had charge of him used sometimes to awake in the night and find him missing, and, on going to his wife's grave, would discover him lying on it with outstretched arms. Think, Iris, of the love that drew him out into the cold and darkness to be near to her whom he had lost."

He heaved a deep sigh; and she looked at him curiously.

"Papa, where did you read that? I should like to read it too."

"I will show you some day," he replied, "when we go to Fenton Woods. The whole of the family records are kept there; and we will go over them together."

"There is one thing that strikes me, papa," she said. "I have never heard of a Fayne who married beneath him, who brought a shadow on our name by marrying one not worthy to bear it."

"No," he replied; "but the question is, What makes a woman unworthy to bear it? King Copetus married a beggar-maid; but no one ever said she was not fit to be a queen."

"That was an exceptional case; besides, he was a king."

The earl looked anxiously at his daughter.

"I suppose, Iris, that nothing would induce you, for instance, to marry a man whom you considered beneath you?"

A flush spread over the lovely face and the beautiful eyes flashed.

"I marry beneath, papa? It would be far easier for me to die—you understand, to die!"

"I understand, my dear," he replied quickly.

"I should never love, papa, as you expressed it, beneath me; I could not. I have been trained to live according to the spirit of the words, 'Held with honor.' I should not hold my name in honor if I gave it to one who was unfitted by birth and training to bear it."

A YOUTHFUL STYLE.

4079. Here is a new and very unique version of the one piece dress. Belt portions over which the tab extensions on front and back are fastened, hold the fullness gracefully at the sides. Added width is given to the skirt portion by plaits that form a panel over back and front. This is a good model for gingham, and also for the new tub silks in check and stripe patterns. Organdy or linen may be selected for trimming. The sleeve is cool and pretty in the short length, and in wrist length it is the latest style feature.

The Pattern is cut in 3 Sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18 year size requires 5 yards of 32 inch material. The width of the dress at the foot with plaits extended is 2 1/2 yards.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A POPULAR ROMPER SUIT.

3885. Children usually look happiest when comfortably dressed for play, and surely the bloomer suit has the right lines for comfort and convenience. This model has a pretty pocket and is easy to develop. The rompers may be worn without the smock. Pongee with stitchery is here shown. One could have chambray, or pin checked gingham. The sleeve may be finished in wrist or elbow length.

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 4 year size requires 2 1/2 yards of 28 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

British Ultimatum to Kemalists.

Elastic Time Limit Set --- Crisis Developing in Greece --- Constantine Abdicates in Favor of Crown Prince --- Later Dispatch Says He Will Stick to Throne --- Turks Must Keep Out of Neutral Zone.

TURKS GET ULTIMATUM
LONDON, Sept. 26.
Anxiety has been renewed owing to the evident reluctance of the Kemalists to order the withdrawal of Turkish cavalry from the Chanak zone. Instead of withdrawing another detachment, numbering one thousand and has crossed the border from Bisha. General Harrington, the British commander of the Allied Forces in Constantinople, has stipulated a time limit of forty-eight hours for the withdrawal of the Turks, but considerably allows the period to date from the time of his dispatch. The ultimatum, therefore, is somewhat elastic. The British military authorities while doing their utmost to avoid precipitating trouble, do not conceal that the situation entails much danger.

CRISIS DEVELOPING
ATHENS, Sept. 27.
A crisis is rapidly developing. The King has proclaimed martial law. Eight thousand troops at Salonika have revolted, insisting on a change of Government. Sections of the army in the Aegean Islands have also revolted. They demand that the King abdicate in favor of the crown prince. There demand they join the army there.

MINISTRY RESIGNS
ATHENS, Sept. 27.
The Greek Ministry has resigned. Very important changes are impending but present indications are that a peaceful solution will be found.

CONSTANTINE ABDICATES
LONDON, Sept. 27.
King Constantine has abdicated in favor of the Crown Prince, according to a despatch to the Central News from Athens.

TINO SAYS HE WILL HOLD ON
ATHENS, Sept. 27.
King Constantine tonight told a correspondent of the Associated Press that he would stick to the Throne until the people told him that they no longer wanted him.

BRITISH PROCLAIM ZONE OF OPERATIONS
CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 27.
It is reported that Turkish Nationalists are entrenching in the neutral zone of the Dardanelles. The Turks refuse to recognize the neutral zone and declare they will hold their present position. The railway from Bisha to Yarin along the Anatolian railway has been proclaimed a zone of operations by the British. The civilian population of the villages within the zone have been ordered to

FRENCH SAY TURKS NOT RESPONSIBLE
PARIS, Sept. 27.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 26.

JEWS LODGE PROTEST
TORONTO, Sept. 26.
Hebrews of this city are strongly against allowing Paderewski to give a recital here on Nov. 2nd as planned and the editor of the Hebrew Daily Journal has written publicly through a local daily paper to that effect. The animosity arises because Pogroms alleged to have been committed against Jews in Poland when Paderewski was premier.

BERMUDA STORM SWEPT
HALIFAX, Sept. 27.
Damage variously estimated between two hundred and two hundred and fifty thousand pounds, was caused by a hurricane which swept Bermuda on the morning of Sept. 21st, according to advices to the Halifax and Bermuda Cable Company here. Hundreds of houses were wholly or partly unroofed, wharves were washed away and shore roads gutted by a phenomenal tide. In exposed places stone buildings collapsed like packs of cards. The tide covered the market square to a depth of three feet. St. George's Hotel roof was blown half off, two tugs, the Baldrick and the Racine, grounded in the harbor, and the Racine will probably be a total wreck. Many smaller craft were destroyed. There was no shipping at Hamilton when the hurricane struck but wide damage was done to small boats. The telephone and electric systems were completely deranged and wire communication beyond the environs of Hamilton is still impossible.

VENICE PREPARING FOR CONFERENCE

Instructions have been sent to the authorities at Venice to resume preparations for the Near East conference, which it is expected will meet there in three weeks with probably five hundred people attending, made up of ten delegations.

POOR SPORTS
GLOUCESTER, Sept. 27.
On receipt of the telegraphed decision of the trustees of the International Fisherman's Championship trophy, maintaining the ineligibility of the Mayflower as a challenger, some members of the United States Race Committee are declared in favor of cancelling the race for the International Trophy. A meeting will be called Friday to decide further action.

Another Great Bill at The Nickel.
Blanche Sweet in "Help Wanted, Male."

She was young, she was pretty, and she was romantic. Furthermore, she had a thousand dollars, which, she figured, could best be invested in a search for a millionaire husband. Just what amusing situations her search led her into can be enjoyed by all at the Nickel Theatre to-day where Blanche Sweet is starring in "Help Wanted, Male," a romantic picture adapted from Edwina Lewis's story, "Leona Goes a Hunting."

Henry King not only directed this Jesse D. Hampton-Pathé feature, but he plays the leading male role, with Jay Belasco, Mayme Kelso, Thomas Jefferson, Jean Acker and others lending capable support.

On Friday the Nickel will screen Zane Grey's great story "The Man From The Forest." The story is one of love and adventure, with its locale in modern Arizona of prohibition days, still a wonderland of romance as it is interpreted by the colorful pen of Zane Grey and the producer's rare art. A splendid cast of the screen's most talented players enact characters of the story. Carl Ganroort, former matinee idol of the light opera stage, takes the title role. Opposite him is Claire Adams. The other major roles are powerfully and artistically interpreted by Robert McKim, Jean Hersholt, Eugenia Gilbert, Frank Haynes, Harry Lorraine, Charlotte Pierce, Fredrick Starr and Charles Murphy.

Harbor Grace Notes.
Mr. Archibald Noel of the South Side, passed away there on Friday, having been ill for some time. The funeral was held on Sunday at St. Peter's Church, Rev. W. E. R. Cracknell officiating. To the bereaved family and friends we offer condolences.

Miss Elizabeth Joy left St. John's by S.S. Silvia for New York on Saturday on a business visit of about a month's duration.

Miss Winnie Rogers who has been visiting friends at Wabana for the past three weeks, returned home again on Friday.

Schooner Minnie Maud, Capt. Day, arrived in port on Saturday after a good run of two days from Hoopling Harbor, having put in at Trinity on Friday.

Mrs. Frank Davis and child who had been in town for some weeks, left again this morning en route for Burgeo on a visit to her home.

The different day schools have been pretty fortunate this year in the C.H. Examinations. Master Francis R. Kennedy—a pupil of the R.C. Academy—was successful in winning one of the Preliminary Outpost Scholarships of $100. We tender our congratulations to the lucky candidates.

Miss Mary Jones arrived from St. John's Saturday night, after spending a short time there.

Mr. Fred Munn left town on Thursday for St. John's to connect with S.S. Manoa en route for Toronto. Mr. Munn is resuming his studies at College there, having spent the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Munn.

The death of Mr. Harvey Sheppard of the South Side, son of the late Alexander Sheppard, occurred at Bell Island on Friday last. Two weeks ago Mr. Sheppard met with an accident while at work in the mines, there being a cave-in, and he was injured fatally. He suffered considerably until death ensued. The body was brought here by the motor boat "Zelda B." on Friday afternoon, and interment took place on Saturday. The funeral was held at St. Peter's Church and was largely attended, the Rev. W. E. R. Cracknell performing the last sad rites. Much sympathy is expressed for the widow and children in their great sorrow.

Mr. L. A. O'Brien spent some days in St. John's during the week, and returned home on Saturday night.

Mrs. H. Hinton, wife of the Manager of the Imperial Cable Service Co., was a passenger by the S.S. Digby from England, and arrived in St. John's on Saturday. She was accompanied by her three children. Mrs. E. G. Furneaux, wife of another of the Co.'s staff also arrived by the same boat, and was accompanied by her daughter. They came to town by Saturday night's train.

Mr. A. B. Kelly, teller at the Bank of Nova Scotia, has received a transfer, and left town on Thursday for New Florenceville, N.B.—COR.

Episcopal Visitation.
ARCHBISHOP ROCHE AT ST. MARY'S.

On Sunday last His Grace the Archbishop, accompanied by Monsignor McDermott and Rev. Father Kelly, arrived at St. Joseph's on episcopal visitation. On Sunday after Last Mass Confirmation was administered to about eight candidates. There was a large congregation from all parts of the Parish present and an instructive sermon on the sacrament was delivered by the Archbishop. Towards the conclusion of his address, His Grace took occasion to make some general references to Parish matters in Salmonier. The episcopal visit had been availed of by the people to make the parish contribution to the fund for the rebuilding of the Palace in St. John's. The Archbishop cordially thanked the people for their interest in this matter which he pointed out, was a work that concerned the whole diocese. From many parishes he had received generous responses to his appeal for this object sent forth last Lent, and in many other parishes pastors were arranging to contribute before the end of the year. He felt the same interest shown by the pastor and people of Salmonier in this work would be manifested throughout the whole diocese as well. In the course of his remarks His Grace also referred to certain matters of local importance with regard to public service in Salmonier and St. Mary's Bay generally, which had been brought to his notice by a deputation of the people. He said that these matters came within the province of the authorities and he suggested that the matter in question be laid before them. He felt sure that the representations would receive the consideration which His Grace said they certainly deserved, and the grievances complained of would be remedied. He assured the people that he had their welfare, material as well as spiritual, at heart, and would use any influence he possessed to safeguard and protect their interests. His Grace concluded by complimenting the pastor and people of St. Joseph's on their splendid parochial organization, and on the evidences of Church progress that he noticed upon all sides. On Sunday evening the Episcopal Party left for St. Mary's, stopping at Riverhead en route, where Confirmation was administered to a large number of candidates at St. Mary's, led by the esteemed Father O'Driscoll, gave the Archbishop an enthusiastic welcome. On Monday a large number attended the parish Mass, celebrated by the Archbishop. His Grace spoke to the people at considerable length, referring to the traditions associated with the old parish of St. Mary's, and commending the strong faith and loyal spirit of the people. St. Mary's was one of the old Catholic centres of the Archdiocese and its people had been traditionally virtuous and God-fearing, loyal and devoted to their church. He exhorted the younger generation to be true to their traditions of their past and so to live as to be good citizens of their country and good members of their church. During the day Confirmation was administered also at Point in Halls and St. Vincent's, nearly 300 candidates being confirmed in the whole parish. In the evening the whole episcopal party returned to St. Joseph's and on Tuesday, Confirmation was administered at Mount Carmel where His Grace again thanked the people for their warm welcome and assured them that he would retain most pleasant memories of his visit to the parish of Salmonier.

Mystery of Sleep.
It is impossible to give any precise explanation of the phenomenon of sleep. Yet many theories have been advanced. Legendre has shown by fairly conclusive arguments that it is due neither to "brain pallor" nor to intoxication by carbonic acid, nor to the presence of narcotic substances in the blood—theories that have in turn been advanced. Legendre intimates his preference for the view that sleep is not the result of fatigue, but is an inherited instinct designed to protect the organism against the ill-effects of fatigue.

The Eye of Asia Minor

Smyrna, says a contemporary, is too often known only to Western people as the place from which rugs come. It is probably one of the most ancient cities of the world, its known history running back to a thousand years before Christ, and it may have flourished in the unrecorded ages even before that remote time. It was one of the seven cities of the Christian Church in Asia Minor, and was among the seven cities that laid claim to the birthplace of Homer, which may be recalled by the lines.

"Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead, Through which the living Homer begged his bread."

Smyrna, of which city the martyr Polycarp is said to have been the first Bishop has had a very tragic history. It was practically destroyed by an earthquake in A.D. 178, and rebuilt by Emperor Marcus Aurelius about the end of the 11th century. It was partially destroyed by the Byzantine fleet, and near the end of the 14th century was taken by the Turks in whose possession it remained until the recent war. In the days of the Roman conquest, Smyrna was the great world centre of art and learning. The Romans who cared a great deal for the city called it the "Philosopher's Grove" and also the "Oasis of the Muses and Graces."

For many generations Smyrna was the proudest Asiatic possession of the Byzantine Empire of the East. In the year 1402 it was destroyed by Tamerlane's Mongols, and many of its inhabitants butchered by the conquerors. After falling into the hands of the Turks the city was given another affectionate appellation, and called "The Eye of Asia Minor." In the year 1688 Smyrna was devastated by a terrible earthquake which overthrew a great number of houses. It is recorded of this cataclysmic occurrence that during one of the shocks the rocks, on which the castle stood, opened and swallowed up the structure and five thousand persons. In 1758 the city was plague stricken and almost desolated. Coming down to more modern times many other calamities overlook the city, one being the great fire of 1841 and another earthquake in 1846.

The city itself lies at the head of the Gulf of Smyrna, some two hundred miles southwest of Constantinople, with which it is now connected by rail. There is a population of 250,000, one half being Greek, one fourth Moslem—Armenians and Jews making up the greater portion of the remaining quarter. Before the war there resided in the city a large number of Europeans. Smyrna was divided into five quarters for the Turk, the Jew, the Greek, the Armenian and the European. Both Turkish and Jewish sections were overcrowded, squalid and forbidding. The Armenian and Greek sections were well built, with wide and clean streets, but the European quarter was the glory of the city, containing the finest thoroughfares, the most imposing buildings, a sharply contracting cleanliness and a lovely waterfront. The Christian and Jewish communities had separate elected city councils, presided over by their respective religious heads. Among the exports of Smyrna before the war were tobacco, figs, silk, raisins and carpets. Always cosmopolitan, it was referred to by Charles Dudley Warner, who wrote of it as "one of the most ancient cities on the globe, having no appearance of antiquity; containing all nationalities, yet with no nationality; an Asiatic city with a European face, it produces nothing but exchanges everything." Even the rugs known by the name of "Smyrna" are not made in the city but come from far interior districts. And now this most ancient city is in ruins. The unspeakable Turk has not changed anything since he overran Southern Europe and drove the Christians out of Constantinople, Barbarian and bloodthirsty as ever, massacre and rapine follow ever his career. But to the Church at Smyrna was written the great promise of the Apocalypse following the prescribed period of tribulation, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of Life." The fulfillment of that promise may be afar off, but it will yet come.

Labrador Fish. SHOWING LOW QUOTATIONS.

Although four dollars is generally regarded as the current price of Labrador fish, it is not easy to make sales at that figure. There are quite a number of schooners in port with Labrador cure, but so far very little is being sold. It is stated that the quotations given by local shippers to New York buyers have been dropped to $7.50 per cask of five quintals. As the cost of shipment amounts to nearly $7.50 per cask, the net price would be four dollars per quintal.

Manoa Continues Service.

MAILED AWAY MAY ALSO BE PUT ON. Messrs. Harvey & Co., agents of the Canada Steamships, Ltd., have been advised that S.S. Manoa will continue on the Montreal-Charlottetown route until close of navigation in the St. Lawrence. During the next six or eight weeks the fall importations will be coming in, and if sufficient freight offers the Company will be putting on the Mailedaway to run in conjunction with the Manoa.

C. L. A. Card Party.

The Columbus Ladies' Association, assisted by the Executive of the K. of C., together with the House Committee are using every effort to make to-night's card tournament and dance one of the most enjoyable times in the history of Institution. Nothing has been left undone and all who attend will enjoy a good good game of auction, forty-fives, trip the light fantastic and partake of the hospitality of Mrs. McGrath, the genial President of the Association, and those ladies who are at all times ready to make sacrifices to promote the aims of Terra Nova Council.

Meeting of Can Manufacturers.

HAD A SUCCESSFUL YEAR. At the annual meeting of the United Can Manufacturing Company, held yesterday afternoon in the Board of Trade rooms, the report submitted showed that the year past had been a very successful one, although no dividend was declared. A substantial amount, however, was placed to the credit of the Rest Fund. The output of the Company for the year increased by over 50 per cent. The old executive comprising the following were re-elected—G. J. Carter, President; H. R. Brooks, Arch Munn, Hon. F. Steer, C. P. Ayre, J. C. Pratt and R. A. Templeman.

The Veteran

The September number of the Veteran, official organ of the G.W.V.A., is an excellent production and contains many interesting sketches, articles and illustrations. The piece de resistance is a well written article, "French Songs" contributed by our soldier poet, Lieut. Jack Turner, M.C. He quotes the song of the war as being: "I want to go home, I want to go home, The bullets they whistle—the cannon they roar I don't want to go up the line any more. Take me away the sea, Where the Alleyman can't get at me, Oh my, I don't want to die— I want to go home." The Veteran should be in the hands of the whole reading public.

Sale of Work and Concert.

ATTRACTION AT CANON WOOD HALL. A sale of work in aid of the Rev. Henry Gordon's Labrador Public School is being held this afternoon at Canon Wood Hall by the ladies of St. Thomas's Parish. Afternoon and meat teas will be served, and during the evening a concert will also be given. At the concert Mr. and Mrs. Gordon will speak and some new lantern slides illustrating the work of the school in Labrador will be shown.

Bring in Produce.

COOPERS LUMBER AND BIRCH JUNKS. Quite a number of vessels with produce, mostly coopers lumber and junk, have arrived in port within the past few days. The sale of coopers stuff is not brisk, but the prices are maintaining the firm side during the early summer. Birch junk of good size are selling at 70 cents per hundred from the schooner's side.

McMurdo's Store News.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 27. Among goods recently arrived from New York and just opened we note a consignment of Water Glass, or Egg Preserver. This preparation comes in (American) pint tins, and one tin diluted with the proper quantity of water is sufficient to put away 5 or 6 dozen of eggs. Properly managed eggs immersed in this solution will keep perfectly good for several months, thus enabling you to have eggs through the winter at a moderate price. Water Glass sells at 25c. a tin. Also in the same shipment, Powdered Turmeric, an invaluable ingredient in home made pickles. Price 5c. an ounce.

Fish Plentiful.

Fish continues plentiful on the local grounds, although many of the boats have given up the voyage. The weather is getting stormy and the men cannot stay on the fishing banks long enough to get paying trips. Handliners are getting from a half to one quintal per boat, with two men.

Dance and Card Tournament.

Members of Terra Nova Council, Knights of Columbus and the Columbus Ladies' Association are holding a Card Tournament and Dance in Columbus Hall this evening. Great preparations have been made for the event and an enjoyable time is assured all who attend. sept17.11

Harmony's Cargo Auctioned.

FEW BIDDERS PRESENT. The auction sale of fish, salmon and trout brought from the Moravian settlements by S.S. Harmony, which was held at C. F. Bennett's premises to-day, was not very well attended, and consequently the prices realized were not very good. A quantity of Labrador fish of last year's catch, but of good quality, was bought in by A. E. Hickman for $3 per quintal. Skin boots fetched better prices than last year, and a lot of 110 pairs was knocked down by Mr. Roberts at $4.50 per pair. The balance was purchased by a Water Street department store for $4.00 per pair. A small lot of mixed trout from Makovik station sold for $3 per barrel, and 25 barrels of reds from Port Burwell brought $5.10 per barrel. As the price was very low the residue of lots was re-auctioned. A quantity of pieces of salmon were auctioned for $14 per tierces. This was the only product that brought spirited bidding.

Father Matthew Anniversary.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE SOCIETY WILL CELEBRATE. A committee of the T.A. and B. Society are making preparations to revive the annual Father Matthew celebration. The anniversary falls on Tuesday, October 3rd, and will be celebrated by a dance and supper in addition to a pyrotechnic display.

Shooting Notes.

SPORTSMEN RETURN WITH GOOD BAGS. Hon. S. Foote and party who were shooting over Tickle Harbour Barrens, have returned to town in the Government Engineer's car, with a bag of about 100 birds.

Lived With Rats.

AGED SAILOR FOUND IN DISUSED HULK. An old man afflicted with the palsy, without relatives or home, who has been sleeping in a rat-infested and leaky hulk all this summer has been provided with decent shelter through the efforts of L.S.P.U. Delegate Michael Coady. For 40 years the old man sailed out of this port, but eventually, through illness, he found himself stranded. Some friends tried to get him in the Fog House but without avail, and he was offered the shelter of a disused hulk anchored in Barr's Cove. Last night Delegate Coady visited the place, and the old man was discovered, eating a crust of bread, out of one hand, whilst in the other he held a stick with which to drive off the rats, which were swarming around him, attracted by the scent of food. According to Mr. Coady the old man goes to bed when the tide is low and he has either to get up before it rises, or else wait until its ebb as the water flows in and out of the vessel. The Minister of Agriculture and Mines was brought to the scene this morning by Mr. Coady and shows the habitation. Arrangements were at once made to transfer the old sailor to the Salvation Army Home until there is room for him at the Poor House.

Shipping Notes.

S. S. Rosalind left Halifax at 3 p.m. yesterday for this port. S. S. Thoroufer, an Icelandic trawler, has arrived in port for coal and supplies. S. S. Faustina is loading 1500 qts. codfish at Burgeo from H. Clement for Oporto. The under bulk of cargo was laden by Penny & Sons, Ramea.

Brazil's Centenary.

Brazil is celebrating the 100th anniversary of its separation from Portugal and the establishment of its own government and representative of many other states, including H.C. Charles E. Hughes as a representative of the United States, are joining in the centennial ceremonies. Brazil is not very much smaller than Europe in area, has a population of about 25,000,000 people, possesses the most wonderful iron resources, does an annual trade of upwards of three quarters of a billion dollars, and has a yearly revenue of $300,000,000 or more. It has made amazing progress in the hundred years since it broke away from Portugal and made Don Pedro, son of the Portuguese king of that day, its ruler and to-day, the Republic of Brazil, for the form of government was changed from monarchical to republican in 1889—is one of the most prosperous of the secondary states of the world.

HIS DIARY. Sept. 26th—To the railway office where I did smoke a pipe with Mr. Morgan, the General Manager, and did have discourse with him of many things. He tells me how there have been no trains derailed in two months. This might, strange, and is the first time I did hear such a thing in many years. Meeting Hon. Dr. Campbell, he tells me how he knows nothing of any railway transfer, nor does he think that there is anything to be learned of such a happening. Home and to sit me down with a book of J. Farnol's, when Povy enters, he might not add in great excitement. He tells me how being at the Majestic playhouse, the house adjoining did catch a fire so Mr. O'Neil, the manager, did quickly and in good order. And all this done in but two minutes. Povy did then have much discourse of politics and did make good use of a bottle of whiskey which I did this day get me from the Controller for my oold.

Arrested for Fraud.

PICTURE COMPANY CHARGES FRAUD. Harry Theriault, alias Terry, was arrested this morning under warrant on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He appeared before the Magistrate during the day and was remanded to the Penitentiary for 8 days, but will be released on bail if securities can be obtained. The complaint, which led to Theriault's arrest was lodged by the Mutual Theatres, Ltd., of Nova Scotia, who stated that the man was a former agent of their company, and had sold $600 of their shares, on the West Coast without making any refunds. W. J. Higgins, K.C., appeared for the prosecution.

Railway Improvements.

HOW DERAILMENTS ARE PREVENTED. There have been no trains derailed for two months according to a statement made by an official of the railway to the Telegram to-day. This is a record which has not been equalled during the past two years. The frequent derailments, which occurred in the early part of the present year were found to be due to a variety of causes. These were lack of speed restrictions, lack of slow orders on both tracks, and the absence of sidebearings from the front trucks of the tenders. Two months ago, all these were remedied and there have been no derailments since. Engine drivers have now been instructed to keep within a maximum speed limit of 30 miles per hour for passenger trains and 20 miles for freight. On certain sections of the line a lower speed must be maintained where track conditions require it, and the necessary bearings have been placed on the trucks of the tenders. A large amount of work has recently been done on the track which is now in as good a state as it is possible to make it with the means at the disposal of the management. For some time past, two steam shovels and four lifting gangs have been ballasting the track. Further improvements include the providing of a water supply at Argentea for steamers and trains. Work has been started on this, and some fifty men will be employed. A new station is under construction at Holyrood and the new wharf at Humbermouth has been completed. A large number of culverts have been built, and the entire line has been cleaned up. The stock of coal required for the winter operation of the railway has been ordered, and will be stored to be used as needed.

Fire Menaces Theatre. MAJESTIC QUICKLY CLEARED WHEN BLAZE OCCURS NEXT DOOR.

Within the space of two minutes and without the slightest semblance of disorder or panic, the Majestic Theatre was completely cleared of its large audience, when at 9 o'clock last night a fire broke out in the adjoining house. The fire occurred in the house of Mr. J. R. Fildes, and was caused by the upsetting of a lamp, the house was badly gutted and its contents were completely destroyed. Only part insurance was carried. The efforts of the firemen prevented the theatre from suffering any damage.

FIGHTING THE FLAMES. When the fire engines arrived on the scene, the flames were breaking through the side windows and roof of Fildes' house, and several streams of water were quickly brought to play on the other streams applied to the theatre prevented the fire from spreading. The work of the firemen under Capt. Dunn, was ably supported by the police under Supt. O'Neill, and within a short while the blaze was placed under control and all danger had passed.

Wedding Bells. RICHARDS-SPENCER.

On Thursday, September 21st, at 8 p.m., the No. 1 Citadel was the scene of a pretty wedding when Miss Frances Richards was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. Herbert Spencer, both of this city. The ceremony was performed by Staff-Capt. Tilley, assisted by Adjt. Hurd. The bride was beautifully attired in gown of white Canton Crepe, and carried a bouquet of white asters, snapdragons and fern. She was attended by Miss May Spencer, sister of the groom, as maid of honor, who wore a bouquet of multi-colored asters. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Albert Richards, brother of the bride, as best man. Following the ceremony supper was served at the residence of the happy couple, Mt. Royal Ave. and attended by immediate relatives only. The presents were many and varied, including a Dinner Set from the employees of Ayre & Sons, Ltd. (New Bldg.) co-workers of the bride, and a Wicker Chair from the S.A. No. 1 Band, of which the groom is a member. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer wish them every happiness for the future.

MOSS-SMITH.

St. Michael's Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding, on Saturday, September 23rd, when Mr. Arthur Smith of this city, was united in the holy bonds to Miss Daisy Moss, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Moss, of Princeton. The bride looked charming in a gown of silk crepe-de-chene and net trimmed with pearls. Her veil and wreath of orange blossoms were very becoming. Her bouquet was of asters and maiden hair fern. The bride was given away by Mr. Richard Cook, the bridesmaids being Miss Marion Moss, sister of the bride, and Miss Louise Smith, sister of the groom. The bridesmaids wore Messrs. Cook and Rees. The Rector, Rev. Nibholm, performed the ceremony, after which, amid showers of rice, the bridal party motored around Bowling Park, thence to the home of the groom, where tea was served to the intimate friends of the bride and groom. The groom's present to the bride was a cheque to the bridesmaids, Labradorite rings to the bridesmaids, cuff links. The presents received were useful and costly. The many friends of the bride and groom wish them a long life of happiness.

Relinquishes Lucrative Pension.

Lord Strathclyde has relinquished the official world by voluntarily relinquishing the pension of £2,750 a year that was granted him seven years ago when he retired from the office of Lord Advocate for Scotland, where he was getting £5,000 a year. He is 69 years old and declares his reason for giving up the pension is that he is unable, owing to weak health, to take part in the judicial work of the House of Lords. That has only increased the surprise his action has occasioned. Such an exhibition of public spirit is rare indeed. The British government makes generous provision for the future welfare of its best-paid office holders when they join the ranks of those who have retired. The Speaker of the House of Commons has a salary of £5,000 a year; he may retire whenever he wants to and enjoy a life pension of £4,000 a year. The Lord Chancellor, who fills a role in the House of Lords analogous to the Speaker of the House of Commons, receives a salary of £10,000 a year and retired pay of £5,000.

Brazilian Exposition. WILL NOT CLOSE TILL MARCH 1923

RIO DE JANEIRO.—Although the Brazilian officials are not disposed to postpone any part of the Centennial Celebration program, which opened, according to schedule on September 7, a considerable part of the big exposition will not get into its stride until six weeks, or two months after that date. Many of the exposition buildings, including the American pavilion, will not be ready for occupancy before October. Work has proceeded, however, to the point where it is obvious that the exposition will be well worth seeing. Organized, arranged and constructed with the art characteristic of the Brazilians, the groups of buildings will do credit to the far famed beauty of Rio de Janeiro. The various edifices which will house and portray the principal industries, and scientific and artistic developments of the country, reflect to a remarkable extent the spirit and character of the Brazilian people. All the great nations will be represented, and their buildings, most of which are of permanent construction, will form what will be one of the most charming sections of the capital. Each of these buildings will contain exhibits of its country's arts and industries.

HUGE PROGRAMME CARRIED OUT.

The Centennial program includes the largest military review ever held in South America. Chosen troops of the reserve from every Brazilian state will march. There will be operas and symphony concerts; national and international conventions; free motion picture shows; a naval review; civil parades; Olympic games, official and unofficial entertainments and receptions; a carnival, and fireworks displays. Fortunes are being spent for special and spectacular illumination effects. The decorations and congresses range from the International Railway Convention to the Canary Birds Fanatics annual meeting. Extraordinary interest centers around the livestock show which is expected to draw exhibits from every cattle-raising country in the world. The Good Roads Convention, Agricultural Congress, and Engineering are among the important events on the program. The importance which foreign countries attach to the Brazilian celebration is indicated by the men they have chosen to head their delegations to the official ceremonies. Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes heads the American mission; Admiral Thon de Reval that from Italy, and Marshal Joffre from France. It is anticipated that there will be a constant attendance of from 75,000 to 100,000 people during the entire exposition, which will not close until March 31, 1923.

George Returns to Belgrade. AND WORRIES ALEXANDER.

BELGRADE, Jugo Slavia.—Prince George has come back to Belgrade from Paris, and there are some people here who wish that his idyllic, care-free life in the French capital of recent years had proved sufficiently attractive to keep him there. George is the eldest son of the late King Peter. As for the throne, he has renounced it, and his brother Alexander is sitting there with his new queen, Marie of Roumania, at his side. Together they are busy with the formalities of court life. George had said in substance, "Here is my son, I, George, son of Peter. I would like to have the status of my relationship to this government definitely fixed. I have not the means to live properly, either here or abroad. My brother the king has denied me my legitimate allowance. In the meantime, I would like a commission in the army. How about that?" And of course George has friends some of whom have interpellated parliament as to why George is not granted the position to which his birth entitles him. George presents a knotty problem. King Alexander is credited with wishing that he would go to the United States, or some other distant land, and refrain from embarrassing the Government.

Radiograms.

The following items were heard by Mr. J. J. Collins from Newark, N.J., last night. Fox Trot, "Just because You're You"; Waltz, "Love sends a gift of Roses"; Arlington Time, Baseball Score, Weather-Report; Selections by Singers Orchestra; "Stump-tin"; "Who'll take my place when I'm gone"; "Let the rest of the world go by"; "An old fashioned girl." All these items came as clear as a bell. Pittsburg, Pa., and Schenectady, N. Y., were heard by Mr. Collins last night again. Both were very clear. Another concert was held at the Marconi Company's office last evening. Messrs. Stansfield, Holmes, T. H. O'Neill, Jones, Trapnell, and rabbits rendered pleasing tones which were received clearly by the radio fans in the city and suburbs.

Mr. Collins will soon have the C. L. B. annex fitted up for broadcasting and then Newfoundland will be heard in America and Canada.

UNCONFIRMED. LONDON, Sept. 27. British official circles to-day expressed disinclination to believe the report of Constantine's abdication, as latest reports from Athens make no mention of this. The Greek Minister here declared he would have been informed.

A THREAT FROM ANGORA. PARIS, Sept. 27.

The Angora Govt. has decided to send a note to the Powers, demanding the immediate evacuation of Thrace, according to a statement attributed by the Figaro, to Ferid Bey, Turkish representative in France. This step, he said, is due to a report that the Greeks are preparing for a systematic destruction of the country, and that they already have arrested prominent Turks, and sent them to Greece to be held as hostages.

BRITISH ARE CONFIDENT. LONDON, Sept. 27.

Turkish Nationalists continue to menace Straits, and are, entrenching on the neutral zone. A conflict between them and the British was avoided at the last minute by a wireless from General Harrington to Col. Shuttleworth, commanding troops at Chank, received by letter just as he was about to move against the Turks. This was followed by an attempt to bring about Turkish retirement by peaceful methods, and then by the forty-eight hours ultimatum. The British are confident they can keep the Turks from crossing the Straits or from capturing Constantinople.

GONE WITH REVOLUTIONISTS. LONDON, Sept. 27.

The Greek fleet has gone over to the Revolutionists, and the revolution is gaining headway in all directions, but is bloodless so far. A number of Greek warships and transports, manned by revolutionists from the island of Mytilene, of Smyrna, are proceeding towards Athens, (Piræus).

BRITISH CARRY ON. CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 27.

Mustapha Pasha now has nearly twenty thousand troops concentrated against Neutral Zone, and it is evident that a grand coup is intended for September 30, as that date has been for the time limit permitting the evacuation of the remaining Christians in Smyrna. The British are heedless and are busy strengthening their lines. The Sea of Marmora is dotted with the most modern war craft in such an array as to rival the fateful days of the Gallipoli campaign.

The Dog Family.

The dog—which in the wild state never barks—is one of the few animals that have accompanied man, in friendship, during the long march out of barbarism, says a contemporary. Originally dogs, jackals, foxes and wolves belonged to the same family.

The origin of domestic or tame dogs is lost in the mists that surround the period of the cave man. Professor Shaler's researches in dogology led him to believe that dogs were first domesticated to provide an emergency food during famines.

A more plausible guess is that dogs were tamed to help "gratify" man's craving for subservient affection; also to tickle his vanity. Our primitive ancestors, no doubt, felt very much pleased with themselves when they contemplated the dogs they had subdued from the wild state.

Nevertheless the dog has accompanied man into so-called civilization and in return has been rewarded with a mass of legislation concerning his legal status, rights, ownership, and conduct.

The oldest monuments of India and Egypt show that ancient man revelled in ownership of Pido, Towser and Bob. To-day we have his magazine stories and the news, which correspond to the carvings on monuments of long ago.

How the dog has survived man's passion for exterminating animal life is a riddle, despite the affection with which he rewards kindness to him. That's why the study of dogs is inseparable from the study of human nature.

Canadian Corps Smashes Through Canal Du Nord.

Audacious Plan of Sir Arthur Currie Described by Lord Byng as Most Difficult Manoeuvre Attempted of West Front.

(Written for the Canadian Press.)

Lord Byng of Vimy described the plan of attack by the Canadian Corps on the Canal du Nord, successfully carried out on the morning of Friday, Sept. 27, 1918, as the most difficult manoeuvre yet attempted on any battlefield in the war to date. He talked the plan over with the Corps Commander, Sir Arthur Currie, during a visit he paid to Corps Headquarters at Neuville Vitasse a few days before the battle opened. Byng knew the difficulties of the ground, for in the previous November he led his Third Army in his assault on Cambrai from the South, without previous artillery preparation, the way for the infantry being opened by a rolling barrage and heavy tanks. That attack was a fine success in its initial stages and would have been carried far into the enemy lines had Byng behind him the fresh reserves required. These unfortunately were being used up in Flanders before Passchendaele, and included the Canadian Corps, but it remains a fact that the tactics introduced by Byng in November, 1917, remained the model for attack both for ourselves and the enemy during the rest of the war. The crossing of the Canal du Nord marked the opening of the last stages of the Battle of Cambrai. The battle began on Aug. 26 with the Canadian Corps' attack east of Arras, this first stage culminating in the smashing of the Hindenburg Line, here known as the Drocourt-Queant Switch, by the Corps on Sept. 2. Thereafter the Corps lay for three weeks in the desolation of No Man's Land confronting the Canal du Nord. The enemy held the high land on the east bank and commanded the whole Corps area with their artillery. They also held the high land north of the Scarpe and the Sensee and poured in an incessant flanking fire on our communications. Weather was abominable. Heavy rains converted the clay land into a quagmire. The men lived in the elaborate system of dug-outs captured from the Boches and there was every appearance that they must stay there through the winter. The Canal du Nord appeared impregnable.

COVERED WITH ENEMY TRENCH SYSTEMS.

During these three weeks considerable advances had been made further south by the British Third and Fourth Armies and the French. But no definite breach had been won thru the enemy fortified lines. On the immediate front of the Canadian Corps was the formidable Canal du Nord, an unfinished work at the opening of the war, but filled with water except at one narrow point in front of Inchy en Artois. Back of the Canal—that is to say, east towards Cambrai—the ground sloped sharply up, crowned by the famous Bourlon Wood, captured by Byng in 1917, but subsequently lost. These heights and the plain beyond immediately north of Cambrai were covered with trench systems, fortified by concrete machine gun posts. Even if the canal were successfully breached, very heavy fighting lay beyond. September was wearing on. Weather conditions in October might bring the advance to a halt, with another winter in the trenches. It became vitally important that a breach be made right through the enemy's prepared positions, with the object of rolling up his line north and south. And one again the Canadian Corps was selected for the task. The Corps Commander was instructed to attack on his immediate front. He demurred. He pointed out that the Corps lay in the water triangle bounded by the Canal du Nord on the East and the Sensee with its marshes, on the north. To attack there was to invite defeat and a slaughter worse than Passchendaele, where at least there was a definite and attainable military objective. He made counter proposals and these finally were accepted, leading to the last stage of the Battle of Cambrai, Sept. 27-Oct. 2, to the fall of Cambrai on Oct. 9, and what was infinitely more important, the complete breach of the enemy's fortified area, forcing him to fall back rapidly on to the lines of the Scheldt.

ATTACK IN FORM OF SPEARHEAD.

During September the Corps area roughly comprised the ground bounded on the south by the Arras-Cambrai Road, on the east by the Canal du Nord, and on the north by the Sensee. The enemy's line stretched in a wide sweep north of the Scarpe from well to the north of the west, and behind the left of the Corps east to the flooded areas of the Sensee and thence sharply south along the Canal du Nord. On the defensive, therefore the Corps had two fronts. In attack easterly, that is to say, across the canal and up the opposing slopes, it was essential that a left flank be built up as the battle progressed. Our right flank would rest naturally on the Scheldt canal. The 2nd, and 3rd Canadian Infantry Divisions were in the line. What Sir Arthur Currie proposed to do was to side-slip south from this area to south of the Arras-Cambrai road, and then attack in the form of a spearhead across the dry area of the Canal du Nord on a front of not more than a mile and a half. The Canal once crossed at Inchy-en-Artois, which lies midway between the flooded areas north and south of Sains les Marquion and Moenvres, respectively, the Corps was then to fan out on a front of 15,000 yards, its left wing enveloping from the enemy's rear the force with which he held the canal, while the right and centre pushed on to the assault on Bourlon Wood and Marquion. This operation, fraught with peril as it was, became more difficult still by reason of the enemy still holding Inchy and Moenvres on the left or west bank of the canal, whence troops of the Third Army had failed to dispossess them. Conditions of success depended on the concentration of a tremendous barrage of artillery, great and small, on a narrow front, with provision that so soon as the canal was crossed our field artillery should gallop forward to support the infantry in the final assault on Bourlon Wood. A very wonderful barrage, concentric in its action was devised by the Canadian Royal Artillery, Maj-Gen. E. W. B. Morrison G. O. C., designed not only to smash the enemy's front position, but by laying down a barrier of fire behind his troops north of Inchy, to hem them in against the canal until our advancing left wings enveloped them. All this was successfully carried out and the battle in its upshot was a triumph for the technical skill, the daring and the resource of the Canadian gunner. Not less important was the work of the Canadian engineers, Maj-Gen. W. B. Lindsay, G.O.C. The attack presented many unusual features," says the Corps Commander in his narrative.

In the first place the Canal du Nord was passable on the Corps sector on a front of 2,500 yards only. This meant that four divisions had to be got through this narrow 'defile,' and in addition there were engineers, artillery, machine gunners and all the supply trains of various descriptions. To add to these difficulties the canal had to be bridged in many places, especially to permit the passage of guns and limber.

DEVOLVED UPON ENGINEERS.

"At the outset, therefore, the success of the battle devolved upon the engineers. While the infantry, under cover of the artillery barrage, might carry the canal in the first rush, it was essential that guns and ammunition be brought forward across the canal as soon as possible. To do this bridges were necessary. The task set the Engineers was of vital importance. For the purpose of the attack the 11th British Division, which had been transferred to the Canadian Corps from the attack on the Drocourt-Queant Switch, again took part in the attack, forming the left flank of the Corps, and being entrusted, after the breach was made, with mopping up the east bank of the canal as far north as the Sensee. The frontal attack was entrusted to the 4th and 1st Canadian Divisions, with the 3rd Canadian Division in support on the right. It was vital that the enemy should have no warning of the impending onslaught. In fact he felt himself secure behind the almost impregnable line of the Canal du Nord, and once again was caught napping. The side-slip of the Corps south to the new area was therefore made at night, Sept. 26-27. It was dark and stormy with a heavy artillery duel in progress throughout. "Zero" hour was set for 5.20 a.m., and long before that every man and every gun were in position, with a battery trained pointblank on the unsuspecting enemy in the village of Inchy. By almost incredible exertions a great supply of munitions, bridging material, including provision for a number of steel bridges, and everything requisite for the attack, had been gathered together, while during the night railroad was pushed up by our engineers almost to our jumping-off line. The scene was thus set for the opening of the last battle on the great scale to be fought by the Canadian Corps, a battle which, with its swaying fortunes, its desperate fight for the plateau northeast of Cambrai, did not come to a definite decision, was not crowned with victory, until six days later, and then only at a cost heavier than anything before paid by the Canadian Corps. But in its complete success it broke

Is a Vacation "Bosh"?

The man who, every year, says he can't afford a vacation until he gets more time, has been heard from. He is now in a hospital, where he has been for several months, a broken down wreck. His physicians say that it will be six months before he will be able to resume his business.

A little while before he was taken to the hospital, he sorrowfully declared that this idea of frequent vacations was all bosh, that it wasn't at all necessary to stop work and lose a lot of time each year gadding around doing nothing. He said he hadn't had a vacation of any kind for five years; that he never went away for week-ends, and that it was a rare thing for him to be away from his business under any circumstances.

Lying flat on his back in a hospital where he will be obliged to remain six months or more, this man is beginning to wonder if there isn't more than he thought in this vacation idea after all. He has an enormous bill for physical repairs, which the physicians and surgeons say could have been saved if he had taken rational care of his health; but that instead of doing that he had absolutely worked himself to a frazzle; that he had been for a long time working on his will power, and that his constitution was absolutely undermined, so that he will never again be able to do the amount of work he has done for so many years in the past.

Does such everlasting driving as that pay, my business friend? Is it commensurate for any man to wear out his physical machinery in that way? Wouldn't it have been better to have taken twice as many vacations as you absolutely needed rather than in the end make such a botch of yourself and your affairs? Won't you think this over and let us hear from you again?

"The THREE MUSKETEERS"

Here is presented to you the greatest action picture ever made—a marvelous, magnificent photoplay that is a torrent of power without a single dull moment throughout its entire course. Never before in film history has there been such a gloriously entertaining blend of humor and pathos, of love and jealousy, of happiness and sorrow, because never has there been a story comparable in scope and in appeal, to "THE THREE MUSKETEERS!"

PRICES: Balcony, 50c. Main Floor, 30c. It's a 3 HOURS SHOW 12 HUGE ACTS Thurs., Fri. & Sat. Mary Pickford Will be in town. Show her a royal welcome back.

Owing to a fire next door to the Theatre the Majestic was compelled to discontinue its performance. Any patron who was present last night and who is anxious to see the balance of the picture, is invited to attend to-night FREE, as this evening will be the last time the "THREE MUSKETEERS" will be screened in this city.

Free State Backed by 99 Per Cent in Ireland, Says Bishop Turner.

Irregulars Broken, Especially Since Collins' Death, He Declares--Says England, Far From Losing, Has Won Ireland.

New York, Sept. 16.—Ninety-nine per cent of the Irish people are heartily in accord with the Irish Free State Government and its position is becoming stronger all the time, according to Bishop William Turner of Buffalo, when interviewed as he came off the steamship Adriatic after a two months' stay in Ireland.

Bishop Turner stated that the few hundred remaining Irish irregulars are trying to prevent orderly government. He, therefore, advised all Irish-Americans that it is wicked and useless to support the rebels, and admonished them to keep their dollars at home.

Bishop Turner said: "The conviction which I bring with me from Ireland is that, in spite of all that has happened during my two months' stay there, the soul of Ireland is still right, and, if we are only patient a little while longer, we shall see realized all our hopes for a free, peaceful and prosperous Ireland. I say that the soul of Ireland is right, because, amid all the disturbance, and notwithstanding the fact that, since the middle of June there is no system of police control throughout the rural districts, there is a complete absence of crime, in the ordinary sense of the word. Whatever outrages are committed are political, or rather military. The vast civil body of orderly, sober and respectful of law and property rights.

Collins Death Arouses People.

"What of the political future? The provisional government obtained a four to one majority in the June elections. To-day, their position is still stronger. The military system of the irregulars is completely broken, the government troops are in possession of every important town and city throughout the whole territory of the Free State and the irregulars are broken up into little bands who, with rifle and bomb and machine gun, are doing all they can to annoy the civil population and make the government of the country impossible.

"If a vote were taken to-day it would be shown that not merely 99 but 99 per cent of the people are with the government, especially since the death of Michael Collins. The whole population, with few exceptions, approve the drastic measures of repression which the government is now determined to pursue.

"What do the irregulars hope to accomplish? They have declared that a few hundred of them (and there are hardly more than that under arms) can prevent orderly government. Some say they have in addition, the deliberate intention of bringing the British back. However this may be, they are destroying the wealth and the sources of wealth to such an extent that the bill of damages which the Government will have to pay is already very great and the new Ireland, contrary to all expectation, will have to face a considerable national debt. This is not only senseless, but immoral. It cannot be justified by any code of political ethics or Christian morality. But please make it clear that the rank and file of the irregulars, and I met and talked with many of them, are fine young fellows, without any of the usual vices of the soldier by profession. They are misled by a few leaders, who put their own ambitions, jealousies, hatreds, and resentments before their love for Ireland.

England Has Won Ireland.

"Who are these leaders? I had rather not name them. One was my friend while he was in America, though I do not know what to think of him now. Others are fanatical idealists or ferocious women politicians, who fan the embers of some of the young men by appeals to sentiment and hatred of England. England, by the way, far from having lost Ireland, has won it, and is less hated than ever in the whole history of her relations to it. Ireland means to carry out the treaty, and England, with admirable courage and forbearance, is willing to wait and to deal fairly with Ireland to the end.

"Did I see much fighting? I saw enough of it, but I do not care to speak of my own personal experiences.

"What do Irish-Americans think? That I don't know, as I left home in May to go to Rome, and since the middle of June could receive neither letters nor newspapers from home until a few days ago. But I can say this much. We resolved in America to let Ireland choose for herself. In that resolution I still stand. I was neither pro-treaty nor anti-treaty then; and now I merely recede the sentiment I found in Ireland to be pro-treaty. One thing, however, is clear. To send money from America to support the irregulars is both useless and sinful. Useless because the cause of the irregulars is nothing but looting, wanton destruction, and, if reports are true, deliberate murder. The looting and destruction I saw. And I am thankful that I was in Ireland this summer, so that from what I saw myself, I can speak with authority, if need be, to my fellow-citizens of Irish blood, and advise them, if they need advice, to keep their dollars at home, and cultivate, if they can, an optimism like my own as to the future of Ireland, be it Free State or Republican."—From the Catholic Register.

Flages You May Fly.

WHITE ENSIGN CAN BE FLOWN ON LAND.

Some not very good natured gossip has been going around because the Prime Minister, when in residence in Brynawel, his Welsh seat, flies a flag bearing the red dragon of Wales on a green and white ground; and some people have even gone to the length of saying that he has not acted legally.

This, of course, is nonsense. Anybody is at liberty to fly any flag, if it be his own design or not, with the one exception of the Royal Standard, which is the Sovereign's personal possession, and may be flown over a building inside which he is at the time.

A few years ago, the Royal Standard—its proper designation, by the way, is the Royal Banner of Arms—was hoisted over a well known Dover hotel at which the Duchess of Albany was temporarily staying. Whereupon an Admiralty official called on the manager and ordered it to be hauled down and the Union Jack substituted.

A CASE IN POINT.

Many people think that it is illegal for a civilian to display the Naval White Ensign on a flag pole in his garden or over the house.

This is not so. The law which prohibits the unauthorized display of the White Ensign applies to ships and boats only. Anyone is at liberty to fly it on shore.

Some years back a resident of Dartmouth hoisted a White Ensign on the flagstaff of his house. The captain of a naval vessel that was there at the time sent one of his officers to the house to haul down the flag, and had it conveyed on board that vessel.

The owner took action against the captain in the civil court, won his case, and defendant was fined for trespass and costs.

FAMILIES HAVE THEIR OWN FLAGS.

At many of the great country houses a "family flag," bearing the coat-of-arms of the owner of the said house, is flown from a flagstaff when the owner is in residence.

One of the most elaborate of these is that belonging to the Duke of Norfolk, Earl-Marshal of England and Premier Peer. This is always flown from Arundel Castle when the Duke is staying there.

Another very beautiful family flag is that which floats over Blenheim Palace where the Duke of Marlborough is in residence there.

A duplicate is also displayed above the bust of the great Duke of Marlborough in the guardroom of Windsor Castle, a new flag being deposited yearly, and the old one removed, on the anniversary of the Battle of Blenheim.—Pearson's Weekly.

How Do You Wake?

ALL ABOUT THE LITTLE DOOR IN YOUR MIND.

How quickly can you wake up! Some of us can wake instantly, but nearly all of us do nothing of the sort, but have to lie for some time before we are really awake.

It has nothing to do with being a hero or a strong man, neither has it anything to do with laziness or being tired the night before.

It all depends on our minds.

Every one of us has got two distinct minds, the front mind with which we do our ordinary daytime thinking, and the back mind which comes into action only in the hours of sleep.

Between the two minds lies a door. When you go to sleep you pass into your night mind; when you wake up you step through the door into your day mind, and close the door behind you.

But with a great many of us this door between our two minds has worked a little loose.

The hinges of that door work slowly; it doesn't slam, and through it float out the broken remnants of your dream in hopeless confusion with the real life of the new day's work.

Then gradually, with an effort, you manage to pull yourself out of the fog and push the dream things back through the door. Then at last you are awake.

This difficulty of waking varies with your circumstances. If something pleasant is going to happen to you in the coming day you can wake up comparatively easily. Your real self is anxious to be finished with the dream world, to shut the door, and to wake to your good fortune.

But when you are troubled, or expecting worry, your dream self invests your sleeping hours with a kindly mantle of romance to make up for the worries of the day. You are loath to leave that pleasant land of dreams, and consequently wake slowly.

THE FOOL.

This is the tale of a foolish man, one of the countless throng. His home was happy and filled with peace, till a stranger came along. And the fool invited him to tea, and the stranger sat him down. And looked at the joys which the fool possessed and viewed them with a frown.

"There ought to be windows over there," the stranger said unto him.

"The dining room is much too small, and the light is much too dim. You should change the style of the furniture and build the house anew.

You and your wife would be happier here if you'd do what I tell you too!"

Now under that roof the fool had lived and gladly the years were spent. But under the spell of the stranger's words he brooded in discontent. And the love of his home was turned to hate and his smile became a frown.

And cursing the roof which had sheltered him, in anger he burned it down.

The fool could have altered the house he owned, but the stranger said "destroy."

So his foolish hand applied the torch to all that had brought him joy.

And though you smile at this madman's deed, take heed as you go your way.

That let no stranger in your house who shall lead your mind astray.

THE GREATER MARVEL.

The number of people who are killed or injured in automobile accidents is a subject that people like to talk about.

And the number of people who are killed each year because of these engines that run the public highways with a speed of a locomotive and controlled sometimes by 15 year old children, or octogenarians, is surely appalling. Though when you come to study the statistics you find there are fewer killed in automobile accidents than by simply falling in one way or another, down the stairs, or off a wall, or from a scaffolding.

Why Aren't They?

But I think there is one thing even more astonishing than the number of people who are killed in automobile accidents. And that is, the number of people who are not killed.

I do not refer so much to pedestrians, though that, too, is a marvel, as to the occupants of automobiles.

When you consider the intricacies of city traffic, the constant hazard of the other man's reckless driving, and the ever present chance of something going wrong with the mechanism of the machine, how marvellous it is that so few accidents, compared to the number of machines, occur!

But even more remarkable than that is the marvel that when accidents do occur the people in the car so often escape serious injury.

His Steering Gear Breaks.

I have a friend who has driven tens of thousands of miles in the last ten years. He has had his steering wheel break on a hill, has had a wheel drop off his machine and twice has been run into by other machines, and he never has been injured except for a slight scratch.

The other day when I was driving in wet weather, I saw at the foot of a hill, on a sharp curve, a sedan turned upside down with the top unshattered and the glass splintered. Evidently it was some time after the accident for there was no one by the scene of the wreck. Later I inquired with the horror one feels when one Consulting by Wireless.

A Ship's Doctor can be Called by a Boat Hundreds of Miles Away.

There are very few vessels that do not nowadays carry at least one man who can render first aid, and on the large passenger boats a fully qualified doctor is part and parcel of the equipment.

It is usually enough for a small ship to have on board one man who can render first aid, for, thanks to wireless, advice from a qualified doctor can nearly always be obtained on demand.

Should a bad accident or severe illness occur on a small ship, the wireless operator gets in touch with any ships in the neighbourhood that can supply him with the proper medical advice. In most cases the medical man prescribes by wireless, and sometimes he actually attends the case in person.

Not long ago an Atlantic liner, on her way to Plymouth, received a wireless call from another vessel. A pump explosion had occurred and a seaman had been terribly injured. First aid was rendered, but skilled advice was necessary, so distress calls were circulated in the hope that a ship might pick them up and give assistance. In all, seven steamers answered, but one liner altered her course and steamed at full speed to answer the call for help.

When she reached her objective, the liner's doctor went aboard the other vessel, and the injured man received attention which probably saved his life, although to do this the liner had sailed 150 miles out of her course, and in consequence arrived in port 12 hours late.

You see, the captain of a ship has full power to alter the course of his vessel if he thinks a case serious enough. No consideration whatever is allowed to stand in the way if a human life is in danger.

What would you think of any sensible person who would do without medicalogy in his or her home to tell its thousands secrets for battling disease, meeting emergencies, preserving life and health and saving worry and money?

ARMED.

For years I never owned a gun; I never thought of wearing one, for I'm a man of peace; I chased around the marketplace with kindly smiles upon my face, and tracts in my valise. And no one ever did me harm; on city streets and on the farm, secure.

I went my way; if strong arm people were abroad to touch the voter for his wad, they sought some other jar. But murderers were growing thick and every night some butchered hick cashed in and journeyed hence; and so my aunts declared that I some sort of arsenal should buy as measure of defense. Suspending then my lifelong rules, I bought a lot of lethal tools, that weighed about a ton; I had a bowie in my boot, in every pocket of my suit there was a modern gun. And all the murderers seemed wise; they shot me up, to my surprise, wherever I might roam; they maimed an arm and broke a stat, and sent a bullet through my hat, that creased my bulging dome. And then I dumped my guns and swords, and through the market's surging herds again I safely trot; I face the old world with a smile that's free from all aggressive gulle, and I am seldom shot. To load yourself with snickernees, with warlike banners in the breeze, is to invite your doom; some toughs will see you swagger by, and say, "There goes a hard-boiled guy—We'll send him to the tomb!"

Rural Route No. 1, Mascouche, Quebec. The Minard's Liniment People.

Sirs—I feel that I should be doing a wrong if I neglected to write you. I have had four tumors growing on my head for years. I had them cut off by a surgeon about fifteen years ago but they grew again till about three months ago I had one as large and shaped like a lady's thumb, on the very place where my hair should be parted, and it was getting so embarrassing in public that it was a constant worry to me. About three months ago I got a bottle of your Liniment for another purpose and saw on the label good for tumors. Well I tried it and kept it for exactly two months, with the result that it has entirely removed all trace of the tumor, and were it not that they had been cut fifteen years ago, no mark would have been seen. I have not been asked for this testimonial and you can use it as you see fit.

Grand Excursion at Barhaven.

WHOLE POPULATION EN FEETE—MANY GUESTS ENJOY HAPPY HOLIDAY.

Special to Evening Telegram.

BARHAVEN, To-day.

The grand annual excursion of the children of St. Francis Xavier school, Barhaven, was held on Tuesday. The boys and girls, accompanied by their good teacher, Miss Molly O'Keefe, and a large body of parish-ers and invited guests left Barhaven at 10.30 in the morning on the magnificent yacht "Pastime," which was placed at the disposal of Rev. Fr. Cacciola by Mr. D. Murray of Messrs. Murray and Co. of St. John's. Mr. Murray instructed Capt. Walter Beck, who was in command of the gallant crew of the "Pastime" to leave nothing undone to foster the interest of the children, teacher and people of Barhaven on their excursion. Mr. Murray also placed his beautiful bungalow at Birch Island at the disposal of the party. The island numerous games were introduced by Mr. Ned Davis of Hr. Grace, who was one of the invited guests. Mr. Davis also conducted the games and gave money prizes to the successful candidates, boys and girls, who entered the games. All were loud in their praises of the beautiful scenery. Enroute to Birch Island, going and returning, all the objective points of interest were noted. Before leaving the grove a grand banquet was served under the very capable direction of Madam Shea, who left nothing undone to cater to the tastes of the children, people and invited guests. The party returned to Barhaven at 3 p.m. when the general pronouncement was made that it was one of the best excursions enjoyed for a long time.

CL.B. Cadets.

There was quite a large turn out of all ranks at last night's parade and a considerable amount of work was done. Company marching under Major Tait, took up the greater part of the night, and the Battalion is rapidly becoming proficient in the various evolutions. Last night's Orders contained the official announcement that Dr. F. W. Burdick had been appointed chief Medical Officer with the rank of Surgeon-Captain. The new C.M.O. will conduct first aid classes throughout the winter. Sergt. Major Andrews has been appointed C.S.M. of A. Co. in place of C.S.M. Colton, reserve.

The work of painting the Armoury has now been completed, and the exterior of the building now presents a most pleasing appearance. The wall on the North end of the Armoury has also been completed.

Vice-President of Skiffington of the Old Comrades leaves Sunday for Bishop Falls and will assist the local doctor in looking after the employees of the Paper Mills there. He will be a great loss to the Old Comrades.

Promenade Concert and Dance.

PROCEEDS FOR ORPHANOID CLUB.

The promenade concert and dance by the C.C.C. and Mount Cashel Bands at the Prince's Rink takes place on Friday night, beginning at 8.30 o'clock. A specially prepared programme has been prepared by this musical aggregation and it is expected that the attendance will be very large. The admission fee costing only ten cents entitled the holder to a chance of winning the new Studebaker car which is being lottered by the Orphanoid Club. The car will be on exhibition at the rink and the drawing takes place on Monday next at the C.L.B. Armoury.

Russian Famine is Over.

Moscow, Russia.—One of the surest indications that the famine has been stamped out in Russia, according to the American Relief Administration, is the rate at which letters of gratitude and expressions of thanks have been pouring into the Moscow office of the administration during the last few weeks. Communications by wire had just continued to come from every district signed by village committees, parents, district and local governmental heads. Figures just compiled at Moscow headquarters of the A.R.A. show that in all the districts American food is now reaching nearly 16,500,000 people—the highest point yet reached in the famine operation.

Gains 15 Pounds on Only Two Bottles.

"I took two bottles of Taniae a year ago and gained fully fifteen pounds, and I have been in fine health ever since," declared Mrs. Robert Clayton, of 25 Hanover Street, St. John, N.B., a few days ago.

"My appearance has changed wonderfully, too, and many people have been giving pains in my stomach. At times I had a dreadful choking sensation and such shortness of breath that I would actually have to go out doors so I could breathe easier. I had such bilious spells, dizziness and headaches that I was miserable and half-sick all the time and I was so weak and run down that my housework was a big burden to me.

"It was not long after I started on Taniae until I was entirely rid of my troubles, eating heartily and easily doing all my housework. Taniae is one medicine that will give you lasting relief."

Taniae is sold by all good druggists.

London's Chinatown Loses Its Glamour.

LONDON.—London's Chinatown is fast disappearing. Four years ago 2,000 Chinese seamen were living within a stone's throw of the West India Dock gates. Now it is doubtful whether there are 700, says the Daily News. During the war London's Chinatown had its most prosperous days, for quite a number of British ships were manned by Chinese crews. But when the war ended the edict went forth "British crews for British ships," and the Chinese were paid off by either being sent back to China or to some other country where their labor was in demand. The result was that Chinese traders in Chinatown began to suffer, and one after another had to put up their shutters. Then suddenly there came a boom. A beautiful actress died while attending an opium smoking party. Stories were printed about the thrills to be experienced in Chinese opium dens and public attention was focussed on the sinister alleys and by-ways of Chinatown. Restaurants in which Chinese dishes could be obtained opened here and there in Chinatown. Many Americans visited there to see how they compared with similar places in their own country. Chinatown and curiosity led a number of English folk and various European visitors to do likewise. At night they were often filled to overflowing. Commercially minded Orientals invested their money in the exploitation of what was a new craze and for a time they prospered exceedingly. But gradually the novelty wore off, the glamour faded, and people came to the conclusion that there was all sorts of cooking that was really much nicer than Chinese cooking. Visitors became fewer and fewer, and now there are only one or two shabby restaurants left in London's Chinatown. What remains of it is but a shadow of its former self.

Birds at School.

HOW THEIR PARENTS TEACH THEM TO FLY AND SING.

Your birds have their lessons to learn, just as young children do. Most of them have very little notion of flying until their parents give them some lessons in the art. Watch, say, a young thrush which has just come out of the nest. He holds tightly to her perch or twig, the while his mother flutters about him, ever and anon giving him a push to make him venture farther. Until he has gained confidence in himself he has to be carried from branch to branch.

Go into the garden when the fledglings are beginning to move out of their nests, and hear the singing lessons that are going on.

Listen to the same few notes being sounded over and over again. Then, if your patience is not exhausted, you will hear a weak imitation piped out. The old birds may be seen sitting near the youngsters patiently repeating the notes, until, a few at a time, the babies pick them up.

Later on you may hear the song being practised. If you know anything about birds' notes you can easily tell the difference between the halting song of the learner and the finished trills of the parent bird.

Because a bird is a thrush or a linnet, it need not necessarily sing the same melody to these birds. Have the eggs hatched by another bird, in a place where the babies will not hear their natural song, and the foster-mother will soon teach them a passable imitation of her own song.

Ship Smokestacks Obsolete.

The average landlubber still continues to measure the speed of an ocean liner and its general excellence by the number of its funnels. The ship with two or three great funnels seems to inspire confidence, that nothing else can give it. The number of stacks on modern liners has no more to do with their qualities than the old figure heads, but it probably will take a generation or more to educate the public to this fact.

The curious prejudice in favor of a row of funnels is deeply seated. When the first steamships appeared some eighty years ago the novel appearance of their smokestacks naturally attracted great attention. The presence of the funnel, at first tall and of small diameter, was naturally associated with speed much greater than that of sailing craft. The first steamer to appear with two stacks was the Scotia, a side-wheeler, which entered New York harbor in 1862. The two stacks attracted great attention, and the idea became firmly established that a boat with two

Some Famous Compliments.

"What is the prettiest compliment on record?" Some may be inclined to give the preference to Dr. Johnson's compliment to Mrs. Siddons, when there happened to be no chair ready for her when she came into his room. "Madam," said the doctor, smiling, "you who so often occasion a want of seats to other people will the more easily excuse the want of one yourself." And certainly the effect of such a witty, pretty speech from the great doctor has all the piquancy of contrast; it is a blossom growing on a rock.

But there is also fatality in full perfection in a certain speech of Henry Erskine, who, when in London, asked the Duchess of Gordon when she meant to visit Edinburgh again. "Oh," cried she, "Edinburgh is a vile, dull place—I hate it!" "Madam," replied Erskine, "the sun might as well say, 'Here's a vile, dark morning—I won't rise to-day.'" Pretty as this was, the following of Dr. Young's is worthy to compare with it.

Dr. Young's Verse.

He was one day walking in his garden at Welwyn with two ladies, one of whom was then the lady of his heart, and afterwards his wife, when a servant came to tell him that a person wished to see him. As he refused to go, one lady took him by the right arm and the other by the left, and led him to the garden gate, where, finding resistance useless, he bowed, laid his hand upon his breast, and spoke the following impromptu:—

Thus Adam looked when from the garden driven, And thus disputed orders sent from Heaven. Like him I go, and yet to go am loth; Like him I go, for angels drove us both. Hard was his fate, but mine is more unkind; His Eve went with him, but mine stays behind.

Who would not rather have said anything so charming than have been the author of "Night Thoughts"?

Sydney Smith's Gem.

Then there is that compliment of compliments which, familiar though it is, can no more be omitted from such a list than a king from his coronation. "Oh, Mr. Smith," cried a pretty girl in a flower garden, "I shall never bring that rose to perfection!" "Then," said Mr. Smith—need we add that his Christian name was Sydney?—taking her by the hand and leading her forward, "permit me to bring perfection to the rose."

For ourselves, we should be much inclined to rank it as the "best on record" unless that place of honour be assigned to a compliment belonging to Leigh Hunt. On a pretty girl observing to him, "I am very sad, you see," he answered, "No, no; you belong to the other Jewish sect. You are very fair, I see." But it is difficult to judge this fairly; the mind is dazzled by its double merit. It is not only an extremely pretty speech, but it is one of the very best of puns.

Stacks was speedier than one with a single stack.

Some years later, when vessels appeared with three stacks, the public drew the conclusion that they were entitled to one-third more respect. The four stack steamer, which made its appearance only a few years ago, was a trifle faster than any with two or three stacks, but the increased power and speed was by no means proportional to the increase in the number of stacks as the popular mind had concluded. Once established, however, this method of estimating the importance of a ship was not to be shaken.

With the introduction of the oil-burning ships the number of funnels has lost all significance. The developments of the modern engine has rendered the extra stacks unnecessary. So firmly established is the popular prejudice, however, that the builders of great modern steamships have not the courage to eliminate the extra funnels. Several liners were recently built with but three funnels, but one of these is used merely for ventilating purposes. It is believed that a generation must pass before the old prejudice in favor of several funnels has disappeared.

Breeding of the Super-Cow.

GIVES ENOUGH MILK TO FEED 80 CHILDREN A DAY.

Breeding a dairy cow that will give enough milk to feed 80 children a day, more than six times the capacity of the ordinary cow, is one of the feats of the industry which has been accomplished by the United States department of agriculture, and which can be done by proper feeding and selective breeding, says an Associated Press dispatch from Washington. On the experimental farm near Beltsville, Md., the department has a herd of six cows, the result of breeding work, that have produced an average of more than 22,000 pounds of milk in 305 days. This little herd yields enough milk to provide a quart a day to 170 children.

An ordinary cow or scrub produces only about milk to feed five children a quart a day, while a good cow yields enough to give 20 children a quart a day. The supercow, as the department calls her, and there are more and more of them in this class every year, gives enough milk so that a small herd might easily supply this quantity to all the small children in a small town.

The improvement of dairy cows means more than increased profits to the dairyman, the department declares. It means cheaper and more milk, the best bone and muscle maker for children. Good breeding and good feeding have made the difference. What this means is brought out forcibly in a poster prepared by the department which is available to all those interested in the subject.

In the same connection, the department shows that culling the poultry flock to get rid of all birds except the vigorous, prolific layers, results in noticeable improvement in the progeny, as well as in an increase of eggs.

Experiments with the poultry at the Beltsville farm showed that the late moulting birds selected from a flock of 100 Rhode Island Reds in the fall of 1920 laid seven more eggs per bird during their second year than the original flock of pullets. They were used as breeders the following spring and the first red pullets to commence laying in the fall of 1921 were found to be the offspring of these late-moulting hens. Their pullets in a period of seven months have already averaged about two dozen eggs per bird more than the original flock.

15TH LEAGUE MATCH.
I.S. vs. K.A.C.—Result: I.S. 3 Goals; K.A.C. 0. Played on Dwyer Grounds, August 28, 1922.

In cool, brizily weather, this match was played off last evening in presence of a goodly number of spectators. The following were the players:

I.S.—Tom O'Neill; Halley, O'Hara; Donnelly, Connolly, Crotty; McKay, W. J. Higgins, O'Driscoll, Jordan, Tobin.

K.A.C.—Soper, Boone, W. Stranger; G. Knowling, P. Knowling, J. White; F. Williams, Moore, W. Knowling, Frost, J. Robinson.

The K's defended the western goal for the first half, thus having the advantage of the slope. For the first few minutes the game was pretty evenly contested, only relieved by a solitary fruitless corner for the I.S. and an offside goal for the K's.

Then the I.S. began to press and had the best of the exchange for the next 10 minutes, when the K's bestirred themselves a bit, and had a look in at O'Neill, who put in some good saving work, clearing splendidly. The Irishmen then made a rush for the other end, and eventually, some 25 minutes from the start, from a corner nicely placed, the ball was shot past Soper, Jordan and Tobin, between them, having the first goal of the match to their credit. The game for the balance of this half was fairly even, but no further scoring took place, and the teams crossed. I.S. 1 goal; K.A.C. 0.

Resuming the Irishmen at once pressed, but the K's put up a stiff defence, and for some 10 minutes kept their goal intact. Then the I.S. after some ineffectual tries, in a hustle in front of Soper, banged the ball into the net and stood 2 up. This roused the K's and they made an inroad into Irish territory, securing a free kick from a foul by Donnelly, and just missing a nice chance of scoring. Then a run up the left wing by Williams and Moore looked dangerous, and one or two tries by the K's were nicely stopped by O'Neill.

For the remainder of time both sides exerted themselves to the utmost, the balance of play being in favour of the Irishmen, and just almost on time Jordan added a third goal, the match ending I.S. 3 goals; K.A.C. 0.

Referee—F. Maynard.
Linesmen—F. Donnelly (C.C.C.), J. L. Noonan (C.E.L.)

NOTES ON THE GAME.

The Irishmen completely outplayed their opponents last night, and are certainly a very much improved side. All the forwards did well, notably the wing men, and Jordan was also conspicuous. The backs were also good, in fact, there was not a weak man on the team. Tom O'Neill resumed his position as goalkeeper and proved very effective.

What's the matter with Knowling's at all? The entire team seemed out of joint last night, and their display was a long way off colour. We have been sadly disappointed with this team in their League matches, as we expected, from the form they displayed early in the season, some good exhibitions. They possess all the material for a good combination, but don't seem to get together somehow or other.

A Safety Match.

Murphy had gone hunting for a gas leak with a match.

When he came to his senses some hours later in the hospital, he found several nurses and a doctor bending anxiously over his bed.

"Good gracious, man," said the doctor, "I should have thought you'd have had more sense than to look for an escape of gas with a lighted match!"

"Faith," retorted the sufferer, "twas a safety match!"

Queen Mary Receives Degree.

Queen Mary has added three more initials to the twenty or more which she is already entitled to write after her name for honors and degrees when she received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from Aberdeen University on September 12. Queen Mary now holds two such degrees, the other being from the University of Glasgow and one of doctor of the sick from London University. She was the first reigning queen to accept scholastic honors, but she established the precedent when she was still Princess of Wales.

Literary Snapshots.

The Pope has written a book. It is an essay on Alpine climbing, and will be published in English by Mr. Fisher Uxwin. It may perhaps be suggested that Mr. Uxwin received the manuscript through the good offices of Cardinal Gasquet, whose publisher he is.

The first military band was heard in England in 1785. The Duke of York, son of George III, imported a band of twelve German musicians with three serenos, and established them as the band of the Coldstream Guards. Other regiments then formed bands on similar lines. The negroes continued to form part of the bands until the year 1838.

The newspaper story that women are cutting off their little toes in order to be able to wear narrow shoes has moved a correspondent to the following:

"Let Eve, or whosoever foot offends, Discard superfluous little toes, but still, 'Tis Heav'n's Divinity which shapes our ends."

Rough new them how we will! The new thing is often the old thing re-bund. Even the political equality of the sexes was anticipated centuries ago. It has just been discovered that in the year 2400 B.C. a city in Asia Minor was ruled by a prince and princess with a male and female prefect, and that the women had precisely the same power as their colleagues.

Once when the late Sir Walter Raleigh was travelling in America, he was met at the railway station of a provincial town by the mayor, corporation, and educational officials. Of course, he was introduced as Sir Walter Raleigh. The mayor thought that this was a practical joke and with much readiness at once remarked: "And how did you leave that old devil, Queen Elizabeth?"

From the Morning Post—The superintendent of a Sunday-school in the Rhonda Valley gave the scholars an address on "Doing Good Turns." "Remember, boys and girls," said he, "if you do a good turn to anybody a reward will always follow." "That's right, sir," said a good girl; "I know it's true, 'cos I gave a penny to a blind man on Friday, and on Saturday I won a swagstake."

Meant so Much.

The phenomenal bulk of Mr. W.H. Taft, a former President of the United States and its present Chief Justice, who is now on a visit to this country, is one of the stock jokes of American newspaper writers.

It is also afforded Lord Reading an opportunity of firing off a very pretty epithet at a dinner given in his (Lord Reading's) honor, and at which Mr. Taft was present.

The latter, in proposing the health of the guest of the evening, took occasion to remark that he had been a student and admirer of English jurisprudence all his life, and added that he was simply saturated with English common law.

In reply, Lord Reading dwelt upon the gratification with which Mr. Taft's tribute filled him, and then slyly admitted: "Because, you know, when Mr. Taft says he is saturated, it means, so much."

Fads and Fashions.

Insertions of narrow braid in combination with hand embroidery might solve the trimming problem for the fall frock.

Very smart and almost universally becoming is the small felt hat with a neatly-rolled brim and a jaunty wing at the side.

The Bulgarian influence is noted in picturesque panels, embroidered in blue tones or in blending shades of brown, red and tan.

THE COY GLOW!
(With apologies to Homer K. Am.)
Oh! It's fine to get up in morning,
When the sun begins to shine,
At four, or five, or six o'clock,
In the good old Summer Time.
But when the snow is snowing,
And outside the north winds blow,
Oh! It's grand to get up in the morning

Have You Seen the JEWETT CAR? THE JEWETT IS PAIGE BUILT.

The new Jewett is of Paige conception, designed and built by Paige engineers and mechanics in the Paige shops. From its Paige origin the Jewett inherits those unmistakable marks of Quality, characterizing the work of a group of men, who for ten years past, have been building the fine six-cylinder cars, bearing the Paige monogram.

Let us demonstrate to you its remarkable power and quality—5 passenger touring—$2200; Sedan $2850.
