Lady Wyvernes' Daughter.

CHAPTER XIX.

Only once did she ever ask of the future, and then he told her that, when all need for secrecy was ended, he should go to Madame Monteleone, and claim his bride. It was easy for the skillful, accomplished man of the world, to deceive that innocent child, and make everything plausible to her.

Never in his life was the Count Rinaldo constant to any one so long as to his wife. Had she been rich, he would perhaps never have tired of her. As it was, when the first visitation began to wear off, and the future looked him in the face, he said to himself that he had done a rash and foolish deed; yet he never was anything but kind and gentle to her; he never relaxed in his visits, or spoke less tenderly to her.

But difficulties began to press upon him. In his first eager pursuit of Donna Maria he had involved himself largely in debt. While all his thoughts and energies were bent upon winning Inez, he had done the same, and now creditors began to press him on all sides. While he had continued his wooing of the heiress, they were not anxious; but now that rumor said he had ceased his attentions, they began to dread losing their money. It was not pleasant, whenever he returned from his beautiful young wife, to find his table strewn with bills and clamorous demands for payment.

One evening among his papers he found an invitation from the father of Donna Maria to a grand fete to be given at his house. Rightly conjecturing that the lady herself must have been the originator of the invitation, he accepted it. Donna Maria received him kindly, and told him this fete was given as a farewell to all their friends in Seville. They were going to live at Madrid; and it was possible, the lady added, that she might see the count there. Her manner was even flatteringly kind. With a low bow he declared that he should know no happiness again until he also was at Madrid.

Coated Tongue
Nature's Warning of Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant, not a medicine or laxative, so it causes no griping. Try it today.

Nujol
A LUBRICANT-NOT A LAXATIVE

Again that evening, despite the beautiful young face that haunted him, the count said to himself that he had done a rash and foolish action. It was evident Donna Maria meant him to understand that he had risen in her estimation and held a high place there. Perhaps his absence had piqued her; certainly her other suitors did not shine in the presence of the high bred, handsome count.

It is possible to repent even of the realization of our most ardent wishes. Count Rinaldo found it so, although he never showed it to his young wife; a thousand times he wished that she had the wealth of Donna Maria, then he need never repent, need never leave her; but affairs were growing desperate with him, and he resolved to take counsel with his devoted and intimate friend, Luigi Carnello. To him he confided all. His imprudent marriage was already known to him; but now he told him of his embarrassed circumstances and the changed manners of the heiress toward him.

"What a pity it is you have burdened yourself with a wife, Rinaldo," said his friend. "I always thought it a most foolish thing to do."

"But she is so beautiful, and I loved her so," returned the count.

"You have indulged in a very great luxury, let me tell you," said his friend; "it is seldom that people in your position or mine can afford to marry for love. I do not see what you can do. You might follow the heiress to Madrid and marry her, but for the wife you have here."

"A wife that no one knows anything about," said the count; "that is a secret only known to you."

Then the two men paused and looked at each other. In the counsels of the wise there is goodness and wisdom; in the counsels of the wicked sin abounds.

"The only thing I can see for you, the only way of escape is by freeing yourself, if such a thing be possible, from the tie you have contracted," said Carnello.

"I do not see how it could be done," was the reply of the man who, three months ago, had declared he must win his love, or die.

"Fortunately for you," said Luigi, "your wife seems to be a simple, unsuspecting child. It would be easy to deceive her, if you like to do so."

"I would not hurt her for the world," cried the count.

"There is no need for that," said his friend; "it can be managed; and she, far from suspecting you, will mourn over you as one of the best and truest of men—one whom the gods loved, and so died young."

"But I love her still," he said. "I do not like to leave her."

"In that case, why waste my time and yours," said Luigi. "The alternatives lie very plainly before you. If you remain here you will certainly be imprisoned for debt, and so lose everything. Even if you do remain, you cannot claim your wife. You have no means of supporting her. There is nothing but ruin before you in Seville. Free yourself; follow Donna Maria to Madrid; marry her, and you will be one of the richest men in Spain."

"You talk of freeing myself," said the count, impatiently, "as though it were easy to do so."

"So it is," interrupted Luigi. "If you will only follow my advice; but remember this—my brains are my capital; and, if our plot succeeds, I shall expect a very handsome acknowledgment of my skill."

Then, in a low voice, for the words had an ugly sound, the traitor unfolded his plan. At first the count listened impatiently; then the forcible style in which his companion spoke gained upon him. He sighed as he listened, and sat for some moments in perfect silence.

"It is a clever idea, certainly," he said. "But do not be impatient, Luigi. I do not like to think that I shall never see that beautiful face again. You think there is no fear of detection?"

"Not the least," replied Luigi. "That unsuspecting wife of yours will listen to me, and before she will make no inquiries; she will not dare to draw down the anger of her friends, when there will be no one to protect her."

Even his hardened heart softened as he uttered those few words. What had that innocent girl done, that she should be so cruelly deceived?

"Now, mind," were Luigi's parting words, "you begin this evening. We must have it all over in ten days, and you must go to Madrid."

CHAPTER XX.

While her husband plotted with his friend, Inez was wondering what made him late that evening above all others. She had something to give him—her first present to him—and she had spent many happy hours in preparing it. It was a simple, pretty gift, a woven chain of her own black shining hair. She pictured to herself how delighted he would be, how he would kiss her and thank her; "for he loves me so much, my poor Rinaldo," she thought.

At the appointed time she stood near the orange-trees, but for the first time he failed in meeting her. It was long past their usual hour when Rinaldo, with a strange look upon his face, stood before her.

"I was growing frightened," she said, springing forward to meet him. "Oh, Rinaldo, what should I do if anything happened to you?"

He looked at the beautiful young face and the love-lit eyes. Something manly and true awoke for one moment in his worldly heart, and he clasped her to him, saying that nothing could happen, and he would love her until he died.

She gave him the little chain, and listened in wondering delight to his praises at thanks.

"I shall never part with this, Inez," he said; "I shall wear it as a charm; it will keep your love always with me."

Yet he knew as he uttered these words that if his plan was carried out, he would never see his young wife again. He was a bad man, selfish, reckless, and unprincipled; yet not quite so lost as not to feel some remorse at the part he was playing. He looked pale and agitated, his eyes were dim and his smile forced.

"Tell me, Rinaldo," said Inez, suddenly, "what made you so late this evening?"

He did not look at her as he replied, that he was not well, that he had been suffering from a strange pain in his head.

"If you were to be ill," she said, in alarm, "could I not come to nurse you?"

Scientists Prepare to Observe Eclipse at Catalina Island.

Los Angeles, Calif.—When the shadow of the moon ends its diagonal dash across the Pacific September 10 next and strikes inland near Santa Catalina Island near here, pilgrims from all parts of the world will be on hand to watch the first total eclipse of the sun visible in the United States since 1913.

Regarded as the most important astronomical event of the year, the September eclipse will attract thousands of scientific men to southern California, and preparations have been made to facilitate the work of observers and to accommodate the various scientific organizations which will hold gatherings in this city in connection with the phenomenon.

While the total phase of the eclipse will be visible from Santa Catalina Island, several expeditions from American and European observatories will await the observation at Ensenada, Lower California, where the period of totality will last three minutes and 35 seconds, as against two minutes and 48 seconds at Santa Catalina.

Some of the scientists will photograph stars in the vicinity of the sun in an effort to substantiate the Einstein theory, according to which light rays, being matter and therefore subject to the pull of gravitation, are deflected from their course by the proximity of a heavenly body.

Other observers will devote their attention to the corona, the golden emanation which extends outward from the sun past the border of the moon in every direction for hundreds of thousands of miles. With the spectroscopy they will watch for any chemical elements hitherto undetected in the solar atmosphere.

Still others will study the red prominences, supposed to be fiery matter projected from the sun's deep interior with enormous velocity and extending through the corona, and which change their form so rapidly that they are never precisely alike during two consecutive observing stations at the same eclipse.

The exact moment when the apparent edge of the moon touches that of the sun will be noted by still another group of astronomers for the purpose of procuring more precise data concerning the orbit of the moon and in the hope of solving a lunar problem of some years' standing—that is, the small but as yet unexplained acceleration of the moon's motion in its swing around the earth.

Probably the largest band of observers, however, will come from that section of the general public which, though not deeply versed or interested in astronomy, periodically displays a feverish desire to occupy the ringside seats at the best between the sun and moon.

Observers of this class get the thrill of a lifetime, according to astronomers, who say that the approach of the lunar shadow, if watched from the high hills of Santa Catalina Island, will be a truly spectacular sight.

Looking northward about 12.50 o'clock on the afternoon of the eclipse, watchers of these hills will see the great dark shadow of the moon, more than a hundred miles in diameter, rushing toward them with incredible rapidity and overwhelming them with an abruptness that is terrifying.

While the total eclipse will not be visible in Los Angeles, nineteenth-twentieths of the sun's disc will be hidden, leaving only a narrow, bright crescent and plunging the city into temporary gloom.

Wants Typists to Use All Ten Fingers.

YRENCH INVENTOR SAYS SCHEME INSURES NEATNESS.

PARIS, May 26.—If a machine invented here and submitted to the Academy of Science is adopted, the typists of France will have to be careful how they hit the keyboard.

While the gray-haired members of the academy, the majority of whom never have used a typewriter, gazed admirably at the machine invented to control the work of typists, they also had to listen to a long discourse by one of their colleagues who has just discovered what is known as a universal keyboard, not adaptable for French typists, inasmuch as the letters are so set as to assure rapidly in typing in English.

A complaint made against typists is that no two hit the keyboard alike and that very few are able to use ten fingers at their work. The inventor suggests that naturally the first thing about his machine that is not in favor is that it insures clean, neat typing. Another feature is that it compels typists to use all five fingers of each hand alternately, that is five fingers of one hand and one of the other are used for a few minutes and then vice versa. He says that this is the only way to make typists use all ten fingers correctly, just as does a pianist. His method, however, is not taken too seriously by the typists, who, when in strike if such measures are adopted.

Paris Police Boxer Terror of Apaches.

PARIS, May 26.—"Beware of France," is the warning being passed out among Apaches in the downtown districts of Paris nowadays. Francois is a policeman and the amateur light heavyweight boxing champion of France. His boxing skill, punch and stamina have sent scores of amateurs and even a few professionals into dreamland.

Serious-minded writers suggest that in order to add weight to the warning which the Apaches are giving each other Francois receive of bold recognition of his skill by the creation of a police boxing school where the champion might teach his colleagues the finer points of using the feet and hands in the discharge of their duty.

These writers say that Paris could then claim to have a brigade of boxers who might easily put an end to ## Kill That Fly, and Do it Now!!

The housewife's battle against the ever-dangerous moth has been carried on assiduously down the centuries of home-keeping with success according to her plan of attack, for unless the guard is constant the moth, and its sister pest the fly, will work incalculable damage to such of her possessions as are their prey.

Mischievous Moths. It is just now, when furs, blankets, woollens and fannels—which attract moths like a lithe candle—are being laid away for the summer, that special care should be taken to render them free from attack. As moths detest light, air, and cleanliness, and also camphor, naphthalene, bog myrtle and specially prepared "moth balls," one or more of these strong-smelling repellents should be placed among any woollens or furs. These preventives do not actually kill the moths or their eggs, but prevent their seeking a hiding place in the vicinity. The ideal way of preserving furs during the warmer weather is to send them to the furrier's where they are kept in cold storage at a temperature so low that neither the larvae nor the moths themselves can live. But this is naturally an expensive method, and the average housewife must trust to the means at hand.

When blankets and fannels are to be stored for the summer, these should be washed and very well aired first, and the trunk or receptacle for them must also be thoroughly fresh and clean. A chest of cedar wood is a splendid place for blanket storage, as moths dislike the odour of the cedar, but if, too, must be kept absolutely clean and perfectly air-tight. Furs are apt to be dusty and dirty after a hard winter's wear, and as moths love dirt, dust, and grease, the furs should be gently beaten on the wrong side with a cane, and then very carefully combed, before they are put away in company with a moth repellent.

Killing No Murder. Many excellent housewives who are almost fastidious about moths are prone to ignore the danger of the common house fly, which, with its disease-carrying propensities, may do much more damage to the health of the household than even the notorious moth. Of late attention has been given by the sanitary authorities to the menace of the fly plague, and the women are realizing how the germs may be multiplied and transmitted by milk and food being exposed to the attack of the fly, and how important it is to kill every possible fly when they start to make an appearance. It stands to reason that flies that have been resting on a rubbish heap outside, or even in an uncovered dustbin, before they enter our homes and settle on our tables cannot be other than a danger to health.

Cover All Food. All articles of food, when not actually in use, should be scrupulously covered, especially milk, which is so rapidly infected, and jars, out-houses and cellars kept as clean as possible. Flypapers, used lavishly, help to prevent their increase, as do disinfectants placed conveniently about the house and utter cleanliness not only in obvious places, but in out-of-the-way corners, in addition to the maxim "Kill at sight," is the best way of waging a successful battle against this household pest.

SPRING WEATHER. The spring is fairly with us now, the threat of cold is gone; I spend long mornings with my cow, a-playing on the lawn; and when I'm summoned to my chow, I eat much tripe and brawn. Cold weather makes me feel like one who's lived a hundred years, by countless ailments I'm undone, frostbitten are my ears; with joy I greet the springtime sun, when winter disappears, I claim to be a youth again, my years I'll get away, I will not herd with ancient men, whose years are plain snow, but up the brae and through the glen I gambol with my cow. I'll be too old for any use when, on a day of May, I fail to feel the vital juice through all my system play, and fall to sport, with cow or goose, athwart the glen and brae. When winter's here let us be old, and hug the glowing fire, and grumble at the frost and cold, and make ourselves lions dre, and be too feeble to uphold a timbal or a lyre. But there is no such thing as age when spring has made her bow, and every dotard should engage to smooth his furrowed brow; and through the gorge and purple sage I scamper with my cow.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

TAKING DOWN THE STOVE. In the good old days with their different ways. The days that have gone before. When they started to sing of the passing spring. And the cold winds blew no more. "It is time," said Dad, "to get busy, lad." Now summer has come to town And the fire is out, so hustle about. And we'll take the old stove down. Now the pipe was long, and was jointed strong. It ran through an upper hall. It was filled with rust and a season's dust. And your face would catch it all. Then you'd have to stop when a length would drop. 'Til your sight grew clear again And mother fussed as she saw the dust. And the words dad used were plain. But the stove itself, with each door and shelf. Was a task for the stoutest heart. Dad would shout: "Don't lose those bolts and screws. When you're taking the thing apart." Then foot by foot, spilling ash and soot. All over the parlor floor. We'd drag it back to a cupboard black. And the stove was down once more. Oh, it's little you know of the long ago. Who live in the present day. For there's many a chore of the days of yore. That never shall come your way. But the old know well, it is truth I tell. We were dust from foot to crown. And like things forlorn we were bruised and torn. When we took the old stove down. Wedding Cake Wonders. Muste Produced by Bride's Touch. In point of size and cost, the wedding cake made for the Duke of York and his bride has been eclipsed many times. The largest wedding cake ever made figured among the presents given to Queen Victoria at her Jubilee. It was a duplicate, except in the matter of size, of the cake which graced the wedding breakfast when the Queen was married to the Prince Consort. The jubilee cake, which weighed nearly two hundredweight, was fifteen feet in height. It cost £200, and was decorated with real flowers and silk flags. Although many years have elapsed since it was made, this magnificent example of the confectioner's art has never been equalled. Adorned With Ostrich Feathers. Incidentally, the smallest wedding cake was made a few years later to the order of an eccentric peeress, whose only son was about to be married. It was three inches high, and weighed a quarter of a pound--a perfect wedding cake in miniature costing twenty guineas. A titled woman gave a West-end firm an order for a cake weighing 130lb. and standing 13ft. in height, its three tiers being adorned with festoons of real ostrich feathers. The cake cost £350. Another remarkable cake was made for the wedding of a noted Master of Foxhounds. It was decorated with silver hunting trophies in miniature, while around the base was arranged a sugar representation of a fox hunt, with hounds in full cry. The wedding consisted of a confectioner's copy of his greatest work, a well-known art gallery, while a celebrated musician's design for his wedding cake took the form of a grand piano, successively reproduced in sugar and other ingredients, even to the keys, which sounded when touched.

Our Montreal Letter.

"No Accident Week" was indeed a very sad one. Six dead and twenty hurt was the toll. Despite public warnings and appeals to abide by the rules laid down in order to avoid accidents, twenty-six persons in Montreal were injured, six of whom never recovered. Three children lost their lives beneath the wheels of automobiles, two men were asphyxiated, while another was fatally crushed at the wharf when loading his wagon. Automobiles injured ten persons, four were injured by falls, one injured by a tram car, one by a train, two injured while at work through different causes, one injured by a fire cracker, and one by a fall from a motor cycle.

Seven year old Frank Forbes, of Torrance Street, may lose the sight of both eyes as the result of setting off fire crackers near his home. The boy was bending over a huge fire cracker which he had just lighted, when the cracker exploded. Unable to see and shouting with pain, the child was taken to the Western Hospital where the doctors state he may become totally blind.

May has certainly played many pranks and changed like a lightning artist. Rain played the star part in the programme, cold days with little snow flurries and frosty nights filled in the balance, with the result that not one fine week was experienced during the month. Vegetation has been considerably retarded and, from present indications, a short and cool summer is expected, with an increased price for vegetables.

Destruction from fires to both lives and property marks another sad page in the annals of the city, especially during "Empire" Week. A triple alarm, which resulted in the death of three men, one a factory foreman, one a night watchman and a fireman, and which completely destroyed a big factory and seven houses, rendering twenty-six families homeless, and destroyed property to the amount of $120,000, was the latest and most disastrous big fire in the city. The scenes during the progress of the fire and the explosion which followed, were spectacular and pathetic. When the firemen arrived only a few sparks could be seen coming from the chimney of the factory, but a few minutes afterwards an explosion took place, and then fire, death, misery and hardship followed. Directly after the explosion an intense heat spread out from the bags of powdered sawdust which were stored in the building and within a few minutes the backs of the houses on Frachere Street were on fire. Of wooden construction, they offered easy fuel to the flames and the occupants of them hurriedly sought to get out their furniture and escape. Beds, sideboards, tables, chairs, clothing and every kind of household goods were bundled together and carried to the vacant lot between them and the McCready shoe factory on the other side. Some had time to get out even their gas stoves and gramophones, but others saved just a box and a bed and a table. The houses were mostly occupied by Roumanians, Poles, and a few French-Canadians, and there was a regular babel of tongues on the vacant lot as the families congregated in groups and watched their homes destroyed.

The homeless spent the night in a vacant lot near the scene of the disaster. In addition to the several thousand feet of hose, three motor and four steam pumps were kept in continuous action throughout the fire. The flames at times shot fifty feet into the air. The heat was intense and made the work of the firemen, in the miniature "inferno," very difficult. Several of the plucky firefighters were badly burned or injured from falling debris, and had to be removed to a vacant lot which was used as a field hospital. The firemen were in charge of Chief Chevalier and six sub-chiefs, with about twenty captains.

The crowds of spectators numbered thousands and one hundred policemen handled them well. The funerals of the victims were all largely attended. The fireman's funeral was a very imposing one. It took place on Saturday morning.

The chief mourners were his father, Eugene Roussin, his mother, brothers Donat, Hector, and Wilfred, and sister Antoinette. Among those present were Chief Chevalier. Previous to the big fire in the evening, the fireman had battled with another for four hours, which took place at the Harbor Front. Five men were burned or injured and damage estimated at over $100,000 was caused as the result of a fire which wiped out the machine shop, blacksmith's shop, repair department, pattern shops, and shops where vessels are laid up for repair, on the eastern extremity of the Mackay (Guard) pier at the Montreal harbor, and which raged for several hours from 4:30 o'clock last evening. The damage is fully covered by insurance. Fighting the fire from a fleet of tugs placed at their disposal by the Montreal Harbor Commission and aided by the harbor's fire tugs, Montreal firemen battled until after 9 o'clock to prevent the flames from spreading. Several floating grain elevators caught alight, but were saved from serious damage by the efforts of the combined fire fighters.

All the men burned or injured were trapped by the flames in the carpenter's shop on the second floor of the large building housing the several important harbor departments. They leaped from the windows—when the rapidity with which the flames spread out of their escape, and were slightly injured when they dropped over twenty feet to the ground.

May 26th. The services at the church were very impressive. The Firemen's and Policemen's Chorus sang the "Messe de Requiem" feelingly. Probably there is no city on the American Continent that can boast of two such efficient organizations as theirs similar to the ones which the Police and Firemen of Montreal possess, and it's on the occasion of the funeral of one of their members that their powerful, well-trained and pleasing voices are heard to good advantage. A local paper describing the funeral says:—

While the day shifts of the 45 local fire stations awaited the call of duty at their posts, the night shifts represented by 324 men and their officers, with officers and men of the police force, mounted and foot, followed the remains of their lost comrade Paul Roussin to his interment from No. 26 Fire Station to the church of St. Louis de France, thence to Isle Bizard this morning.

Paul Roussin lost his life last Wednesday night in the third alarm fire of the Canadian Saw Dust Company. His many friends stood in the corridors of the station when the casket was borne from the building and placed on the draped hose wagon. The heavy ladder car carrying the large number of wreaths, the tokens of friends, stations, associations and the city, moved slowly away from the scene. As though a command had been given, the firemen's band stepped forward, then came the mounted police followed by a foot force of constables, setting the measured pace for the men of the brigade. Members of the city administration, members of the families rendered homeless by the fire and others brought up the rear.

The long line of mourners moved westward along Mount Royal avenue to St. Denis south to Roy Street and west again to the church. After the ceremony the remains were carried to a point of transport to Isle Bizard. From No. 26 Station, the headquarters of the deceased, six pall bearers were chosen from the little band of men, while ten others guided the hose wagon and the ladders covered with flowers.

The chief mourners were his father, Eugene Roussin, his mother, brothers Donat, Hector, and Wilfred, and sister Antoinette. Among those present were Chief Chevalier.

Previous to the big fire in the evening, the fireman had battled with another for four hours, which took place at the Harbor Front.

Five men were burned or injured and damage estimated at over $100,000 was caused as the result of a fire which wiped out the machine shop, blacksmith's shop, repair department, pattern shops, and shops where vessels are laid up for repair, on the eastern extremity of the Mackay (Guard) pier at the Montreal harbor, and which raged for several hours from 4:30 o'clock last evening. The damage is fully covered by insurance. Fighting the fire from a fleet of tugs placed at their disposal by the Montreal Harbor Commission and aided by the harbor's fire tugs, Montreal firemen battled until after 9 o'clock to prevent the flames from spreading. Several floating grain elevators caught alight, but were saved from serious damage by the efforts of the combined fire fighters.

All the men burned or injured were trapped by the flames in the carpenter's shop on the second floor of the large building housing the several important harbor departments. They leaped from the windows—when the rapidity with which the flames spread out of their escape, and were slightly injured when they dropped over twenty feet to the ground.

Sneak thieves are busy all over the city. The season for their harvest has begun. Persons who take a trip to the country at the week end, or who spend a few hours at the theatres or the movies, on their return find that they have lost some valuable things, either in goods or cash. Several valuable furs and articles of jewellery, including a diamond ring worth $1,000, were taken from a house on Park Lafontaine a few evenings ago.

The Corporation of McGill University had to work overtime to settle the standing of 400 final year students. The Convocation takes place about June 20th.

The Montreal Herald speaking of the city fire-fighters says:— Montreal's Fire Department, of which the city is justly proud, is one of the most efficient and yet one of the busiest on the continent. Its great growth has been remarkable, and it has not yet reached its limit. The number of alarms answered in one year has increased more than seventeen times in the last half century, and the number of men and equipment has increased proportionately.

Practically no person, from high to low degree, can resist the temptation to stop and look at the shining fire engine as it dashes down the street, bell clanging, firemen hanging on with all their might, as it rushes to succor lives or property. True, some of the alarm departed with the horses which used to enjoy their runs so much, but the romance of a fireman's life still clings.

Montreal firemen, of whom there are at present 815 of all ranks, enjoy an unusual amount of prestige among the taxpayers. They are so prompt in answering alarms, so efficient in their work, and save so much property in the course of their duty that they are looked up to as the proper kind of civil employees. The ordinary fireman, that is of the rank and file, receives a minimum of $1,500 per year, gradually increasing with service to a maximum of $1,700—and he earns it. Out all times of the day and night in all kinds of weather, endangering his life constantly, he labors to save lives and property at the risk of his own.

A Montreal fireman does not sleep in the station houses, but lives at his home. He reports at certain hours and continues on duty for twelve hours. One week is at night, the next week days, and so on. This system gives every man the same privileges, and makes for good feeling in the force.

A total of 45 fire stations are at present in operation, placed at advantageous points in various parts of the city, and these are bound to be increased in number as the city continues to grow. At the beginning of the year there were 93 pieces of horse-drawn apparatus in use, with 47 pieces of equipment driven by motor. In addition there were 44 pieces of spare apparatus, making a total of 184. There were 120,775 feet of hose in use, 198 chemical extinguishers, and 263 horses.

An important department of the fire fighting service is the salvage corps, which answers alarms and assists in combating the flames. Its principal duties however are protecting property, removing goods from burning buildings, and generally acting in a salvaging capacity.

There is also the bureau of fire prevention, which inspects buildings, recharges extinguishers, issues instructions, and performs other duties.

The motto of the bureau is the old adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and it acts accordingly. The fire alarm system is very effective and it is by means of this service that the apparatus can be summoned so quickly. It is understood to be installed so that any number of alarms, sent in at the same moment, will ring one after the other. It has been suggested that a fire alarm box be placed at every corner, but it is not likely such a big proposition will be undertaken for some time.

Montreal firemen answered 3,822 calls last year, as against 221 in the year 1873, fifty years ago. Of this high total 2,299 were for fires, in which seven persons lost their lives.

Montreal is fortunate in the high state of efficiency of its fire fighting force. The fire department is behind the present Cleanup Week movement, and the citizens generally are doing all in their power to assist in making this city the cleanest in Canada.

Household Notes

Old sheets make excellent for furniture in the house that be closed for the summer. Test dumplings with a straw the straw comes out clean, the strings are sufficiently cooked. Save the water in which eggs are cooked and use instead of water when making soup. Hot cornstarch sauce can be served with currant or grape jelly.

To indiscriminately "bury" child's plate with food that is for him is apt to hurt his appetite. Boil coarse hominy directly with the fire for fifteen minutes, steam in a double boiler for hours.

Caramel fudge can be made by boiling together for 13 minutes 2 1/2 cups of brown sugar and three-quarter cup of milk. When nearly done add one teaspoonful of vanilla and 3 tablespoonful of butter, and beat until of a consistency to spread.

Germany's New Reparations Entirely Unacceptable to France

Many Casualties in Leipzig Disturbances:

GERMANY'S NEW PROPOSAL.
BERLIN, June 7.
 Germany's amendatory reparations note, handed to the Entente and United States Governments this afternoon, proposes a system of annuities estimated to total one billion two hundred million marks annually, if an international loan is not available for immediate capital payments. The annuities would become effective in 1927 and their number and amount would depend wholly on the degree of Germany's economic recovery. The memorandum declares that a prerequisite of a practical solution of the reparations problem is an early meeting of a general conference to which Germany would be admitted on equal basis. The text of the note says that after full and careful consideration, Germany has stated a sincere belief in her inability to make payment of reparations, nevertheless the question of Germany's capacity to pay is one on which different opinions can be held, and the German Government admits difficulty in arriving at any secure estimate under present conditions. For this reason it has already offered to accept the decision of an international body as to the amount and method of payment. Germany can give no security other than her determination to discharge the reparations.

UNSATISFACTORY TO FRANCE.

PARIS, June 6.
 To-day's German Reparations offer remains entirely unacceptable to France. It is declared in Government circles to-night. The note is characterized as unsatisfactory in four regards:—First, it makes no mention of abandoning passive resistance; second, Germany offers no definite sum as total reparations; third, in suggesting an impartial International Commission to fix the Reparations total Germany ignores and seeks to violate the Versailles Treaty which created a Reparations Commission for exactly that purpose; fourth, suggestions for guarantees might be open to discussion if Germany proposed their administration by the Allies, but if the German administrator them the French would expect no satisfactory result. The French are unconvinced, they say, when Germany pleads inability to pay. They declare they have seen her living sumptuously and know she can meet her obligations.

SERIOUS DISTURBANCES AT LEIPZIG.

DUBLIN, June 7.
 Seven persons were killed and more than a hundred wounded, of whom thirty-seven are dangerously injured and dying, in yesterday's disturbances at Leipzig. It is announced in official despatches from that city to-day. Among the dead is one policeman and of the wounded fifteen are police. The trouble followed a demonstration in protest against the Ruhr occupation and the insufficiency of the unemployment dole. Twenty thousand persons composed the mob which was finally dispersed at nine o'clock last night. As a culmination of parades and open air meetings the demonstration took position in five important squares of the city and the trouble began first among themselves when some youthful members and Communists began provoking the Trades Union leaders who were endeavoring to quieten the mob. First sticks and stones began to fall and then the enraged men began to set upon one another with clubs and knives. After vainly trying to disperse the mob by shooting in the air the police finally took drastic action, discharging their rifles point blank into the mass of humanity. The mounted police and reinforcements finally succeeded in chasing the rioters off the streets.

Municipal Council.

WEEKLY MEETING.
 The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Outerbridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present. The Deputy Minister of Public Works asked information as to the Council's intention with regard to extension of water main to Normal School. The main is already in Parade Street and the Engineer is to prepare the required information which will be forwarded the Department.

Communication was read from the Newfoundland Board of Fire Underwriters re the appointment of an Inspector of Electric Wiring Equipment for the City of St. John's, which is now being given consideration by that Board. They stated their willingness to meet a committee of Council to discuss the matter, and it was decided that the Mayor will take it up with them at an early date.
 Mr. T. B. Clift called attention to the necessity of having a light placed on LeMarchant Road. Same was referred to the Lighting Committee.
 J. Holden and Ed. Ryan, Southside Road, offered gravel for road repairs. If the material is suitable the Council will avail of their offer.
 Mr. E. Willis, on behalf of the residents of Duckworth Street East, again called attention to street sprinkling service in this locality. This matter has already been referred to the Sanitary Supervisor, who reported that during the past week two motor sprinklers were continually in use on the principal traffic thoroughfares, and that the Department is doing all possible to relieve the cause of complaint.
 The following plans were passed, subject to the approval of the City Engineer, conditional upon the applicants conforming to the Municipal Act:—Dwellings: A. Samuelson, Mill Bridge, W. LeDrew, Circular Road, R. Bastow, Bonaventure Avenue, C. Bishop, Mundy Pond Road; Extensions, J. Mitchell, Beaumont St., Imperial Tobacco Company, Flavin Street; Outhouses: A. Stewart, Watford Bridge Road. Permits were withheld from the following: J. V. Butler, Cabot Street; proper plans must be submitted; W. H. Christian, Garage, corner Bannerman and Governor Streets, to be referred to the Inspector General, as it is considered the close proximity to dwellings in this locality would constitute a fire hazard.
 Application of Murdoch and Gillard for permission to install electric motor at their building, Convent Square, was deferred, pending investigation by the City Engineer.
 Chas. Ryall must submit location plan of proposed garage, Circular Road, for approval of the Council, before permit can be issued.
 Permit will be given the Churchill Marine & Automobile Engineering Works to erect machine shop and garage, near the Curling Rink, Fort William grounds, in accordance with plans submitted.
 It was ordered that repairs to the Water Street pavement be proceeded with; also that a dam be placed at the Mundy Pond River, where it is hoped will be of benefit to the Fire Department in the event of a conflagration in this section of the city.
 Specification of new fishmarket,

 Specification of new fishmarket,

Steer's Cove, was tabled by the City Engineer and approved. It was ordered that tenders be called for same.

CITY WATER SUPPLY.

Citizens will remember that at the last regular meeting the Government Analyst, Mr. Davies, reported on his examination of the city water supply. At yesterday's meeting a further report was received from him, as follows:—"Windsor Lake water and Reservoir give exactly the same results. The improvement during the past week has been very marked. The water is now within the required standard of purity, and is fit for drinking purposes."
 The City Health Officer reported 3 new cases of diphtheria, & Scarlet Fever and 1 Typhoid during the week.

BOWLING PARK.

It was rumored during the past week that it was the intention of the Council to charge an entrance fee to this park. For the information of citizens it may be stated this rumor is without foundation, as the Council, even if they desired to do so, have no power to make any such charge, and the donor handed over same to the City as a public recreation ground.
 In this connection, the Superintendent complained that the flower beds (had been uprooted and plants destroyed). The park police have been instructed to keep a sharp lookout, and any persons guilty of such acts of vandalism, or any other misconduct, will be severely dealt with.

TRAFFIC REGULATIONS.

For some time past, the Council has had under consideration the readjustment of the traffic regulations, particularly with regard to Water St., which being the main thoroughfare is the most congested and dangerous. With that end in view cabstands were constructed some time ago, and will be occupied within the next week or two by city cabmen.
 In connection with the above matter, the parking of motor vehicles for hire was the subject of considerable discussion, and it is intended that the following places be set apart for that purpose, namely:—
 West End—Queen Street.
 Central—Northern portion of Duckworth Street, situated between Church Hill and Cathedral Street.
 East End—Southern portion of Duckworth Street, fronting the vacant lot known as Clapp's property.
 The Sanitary Supervisor called attention to the fact that a number of houses on Charlton Street and Mundy Pond Road were without sanitary appliances, and in most cases the owners could well afford the installation. The Plumbing Inspector was instructed to send these people the required notice.

Following the reports of the City Engineer and Plumbing Inspector, and granting of requisitions for the several departments, payment of accounts was authorized, and the meeting adjourned.

British Boxers Send Challenges to Three Champs.

New York.—England is beginning to get jealous of America's place in the pugilistic spotlight, and three challenges seeped through the cables from old John Bull.
 One was directed against Benny Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, on behalf of Harry Mason, lightweight champion of Europe, in which our Benny was invited to do battle at 135 pounds ringside; another called upon Johnny Dundee to battle Mason at 133 pounds ringside, and the third dared Mike McTigue, light heavyweight champion, to meet Joe Beckell, English heavyweight champion, at Dublin on August 18 in a 20-round bout for the much kicked about and almost universally claimed "European heavyweight title."
 McTigue would be guaranteed $20,000 pounds for his end, according to the challenge, which was sent by Dr. T. MacCartan, a Dublin sportsman.
 The Mason challenge was sent in care of the sporting editor of the New York World and signed by Goodman, 1 Madetra Road, Brighton, England.

When Young Corbett Put Terrible Terry in Land of Dreams.

New York.—There has been many famous upsets in the realm of fistiana since "Gentleman Jim" Corbett tipped over the old dope pail by grabbing the world's heavyweight championship from John L. Sullivan over thirty years ago.

But it is extremely doubtful, however, if a more striking and unexpected surprise was ever handed followers of the ring than the defeat of Terry McGovern by Young Corbett in their featherweight titular battle at Hartford, Conn., Nov. 28, 1901. Not only in the outcome of the bout is this true but in the quick and precise manner in which it terminated as well.

The dethroning of the Brooklyn boy on that memorable occasion will never be forgotten. It created a sensation which shocked the entire pugilistic world. It came almost like a great catastrophe for "Terrible Terry" had been dropping ambitious opponents in reckless fashion ever since he won the title from that gallant fighter George Dixon. Terry had waded through the field in easy manner leaving a trail of beaten foes in his wake. His followers, and they included folk in all walks of life, thought him well nigh invincible—unbeatable.

But out of the west came one Young Corbett practically unknown, save for a few bouts he had participated in out on the coast. A good boy in his class, ventured the wise ones, but out of place with a lad like McGovern. Consequently, Young Corbett was a rank outsider as the two boys squared away in the Hartford arena. Just another "set up" for the champion, was the general opinion.

What the clean-cut Denver youth did to McGovern, however, is history. For Corbett, undismayed and unafraid of the savage-like attack of the redoubtable Terry, went right at the title holder, and ere that first round was over had the crowd "sitin' up." The end came in the second round, when the challenger sent the great McGovern to the canvas for the fatal count. And thus was another ring champion deprived of his much cherished crown. And by a boy who hadn't hardly been heard of east of the Rocky Mountains.

A couple of years later Corbett showed that his victory was not a fluke, knocking out McGovern again. This second whipping practically sounded the knell of Terry in the roped arena, though he took part in a few battles after that, but mostly with second-raters. But as champion fighter, Terry McGovern, the "pugilistic idol of America," was through when he was handed that unexpected, unthought of beating at Hartford.

England's Money.

The coinage occupies a vital position in the social structure of civilized States. Offenses against it are always heavily punishable, says "Answers."

In England the crime of coinage was formerly held to be treason, but it is now a felony punishable with penal servitude for life. It is an offence punishable with the same penalty to make, sell, possess, or even merely repair a machine used for coining.

To lighten gold and silver coin by scraping or other illegal means is a crime punishable with 14 years' penal servitude.

Offenses against the copper coinage do not earn such drastic penalties. But coining copper is not very remunerative and is rarely attempted.

The laws of coinage have been greatly affected by the war. In the old days the sovereign was simply a piece of gold worth £1 and the owner could do what he liked with it. He could melt it down to make ornaments or export it. But to-day no one can export gold or silver coin or use it other than as currency.

But for this restriction people would have exercised their legal right and changed their notes into gold at the Bank of England.

Some would then have sold the metal at its market price (on Feb. 8th, 1920, the intrinsic value of the sovereign was just over 80s.), while others would have exported it to countries where the paper pound was at a discount.

So our gold reserve would have vanished.

Household Notes.

Put aside your most attractive little pots and glass jars to be filled with preserves as Christmas gifts.

If cucumbers are to be used in combination with tomatoes in a salad slice them in long, length-wise strips.

If you wish to keep your silver for the summer, Canton tinplate cases bound with tape are very satisfactory.

Whaling Prospects Bright.

Victoria, B.C.—Seldom within recent years has the whaling season opened under more promising conditions than surround the inauguration of the deep sea hunt this spring. Whales are reported early and plentiful on the grounds, the whale-oil market is on the climb and the demand for canned whale meat has become so pronounced that the prospective pack of the Victorian whalers is already disposed of. With all these encouraging facts behind them, the Consolidated Whaling Corporation has made preparations for an extremely active season. All eight vessels of the fleet are going to sea, all three of the company's stations will operate, and, in addition, the canning factory at Kyquoot, built at heavy cost several years ago to prove itself a financial failure owing to the difficulty of selling the canned by-product of the industry, will be opened as well and will work at top speed during the summer. Some difficulty was experienced in disposing of the Kyquoot pack last year, two or three years ago. During the war when the market was very favorable, but at the end of the war the demand died. The development work of that period, however, is now bringing results. The canned whale meat packed this year will be shipped to England to the distributing market, whence it may go anywhere.

The First Postage Stamp.

Adhesive postage stamps were first issued with the introduction of inland penny post in Great Britain in 1840. The first stamp was the 1d. black, still considered by many the most beautiful stamp in existence. These black stamps were cancelled by means of a red postmark, the ink for which had to be made on the premises, the necessary instructions for its manufacture being issued to the various post offices along with the cancelling hand-stamps. Dishonest folk soon found that these red cancellation marks were easily removed, and the postage stamps could be cleaned and used again. Consequently the 1d. black stamp was soon displaced by the 1d. red, which was easily cancelled by a red postmark which could not be easily removed by the dishonest. It is interesting to recall that we owed the penny post to Rowland Hill, a native of Kidderminster, who stated life as a school-master. He it was who prevailed upon the Government to adopt inland penny postage, which remained in existence till the price was raised to 1 1/4d. as a war-time measure.

Ingenuity of the Chinese.

The ingenuity of the Chinese was illustrated at the International Police Chiefs' Convention in New York recently when Wang Gu Pang explained a new method of communication consisting of movements of the eyebrows, eyes, mouth and hands which form a code that will enable detectives to communicate with each other when examining a prisoner under difficult circumstances.

In La Nouvelle Revue de Paris, Georges Dubarrier shows that in many cases the Chinese were the real originators of inventions regarded frequently as European. Everybody knows that the Chinese understood the art of the sea compass and of printing long before Europeans. In 1823 there appeared in Europe for the first time a bridge suspended on steel cables, but the Chinese have used suspension bridges from time immemorial. M. Dubarrier thinks it probable that Madam Tenev's inspiration for stone road surfaces from a report made by the Secretary of the Macartney Mission to China. Chinese farmers do not wait for European chemical discoveries to increase the yield of their fields by fertilization. German silver is merely an imitation of Chinese white steel. The Chinese were the first to dye at an early period. The saffron flower, which gives a fine red color, was imported during the Han dynasty, 115 B.C. In the weaving of fabrics, the use of illuminating gas, the manufacture of gunpowder, the use of anaesthetics, the Chinese led the world.

Findings That Aren't Keepings.

Treasure Trove Belongs to the Crown
Treasure trove was the dream of our childhood. What a delight it was to pretend that thousands of golden ducats, of jingling doubloons, of ingots of Peru lay hidden in some corner of the garden, if only we could light on the exact spot, and dig, and dig, until all the wondrous wealth was finally exposed to view!

Treasure trove belongs to the Crown, if the real owner cannot be discovered, and the finder has no right to retain it. Indeed, he is guilty of a criminal offence, which, at one time punishable with death, if he wilfully hinders the King's officers from gaining a knowledge of his discovery.

Only sixty years ago two men were convicted for concealing a discovery of old gold rings to the value of over £500, which another had turned up while ploughing.

Burying Their Treasures.
At different periods of our history many persons have deemed it wise to place their gold and silver where it might lie secure from marauders until more settled times appeared. Often the owners failed to unearth their treasures, and the secret of the hiding-places died with them.

In many cases the treasure had been concealed to avoid confiscation by the authorities, and the Crown consequently regarded the treasure as forfeit, whenever discovered.

In course of time the idea naturally developed that all treasure found hidden in the earth or private place should be regarded as having been concealed in order to defraud the King, and the law is now well established that it belongs, not to the finder, but to His Majesty.

Finder Suitably Rewarded.

In practice, the finder is either suitably rewarded by the Crown or allowed to retain his find, but there is no right to such reward, and the finder should not assume that it will be granted.

Treasure, or valuables found on the surface of the earth or sea, belong to the finder, unless the owner can be discovered.

The fortunate finder should not, however, forget to take reasonable steps to publish his find so that the true owner may be enabled to reclaim them. If this is not done, the finder may render himself liable to a charge, "larceny by finding," and, in addition to forfeiting any chance of reward, may be sentenced to a term of imprisonment.

Minerals Usually Belong to the Landowner.

The minerals in the land usually belong to the landowner. If you should discover a rich seam of coal in your freehold garden, you would be entitled to all the material benefit to be derived from its presence there.

On the other hand, if you should stumble on a vein of gold or silver when digging your potato pit, the law requires you to notify your discovery to the King, who is supposed to need the metal for his coinage, and you would have no legal claim to be compensated in any way. Whether, in fact, His Majesty would take advantage of his legal rights is quite another matter.

Shipping.

S. S. Maljka has left Aquathuna for Humblermouth, where a part cargo of coal will be landed.

Real Humour.

An elderly churchwarden in shaving himself one Sunday before church time made a slight cut with the razor on the extreme end of his nose. Quickly calling his wife, he asked her if she had any court plaster in the house. "You will find some in my sewing basket," she said. The warden soon had the cut covered.

At the church, in assisting with the collection, he noticed everyone smile as he passed the plate, and some of the younger people laughed outright. Very much annoyed, he asked a friend if there was anything wrong with his appearance.

"Well, I should think there is," was the answer. "What is that on your nose?"
"Court plaster."

"No," said his friend; "it is the label of a reel of cotton." It says, "Warranted 200 yards long."

Left-over meat can be chopped, lightly seasoned and used in a jellied meat loaf garnished with slices of hard-boiled egg.

Some medicines lose their strength and others grow stronger; therefore it is best to purchase them in small quantities.

Finely chopped nasturtium seeds are attractive sprinkled over a pale-colored salad, and they add a decided piquancy of flavor.

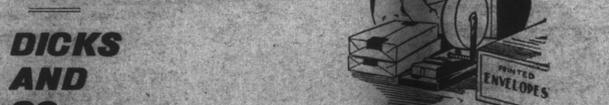

A very nice sauce to serve with fried fish is made by adding one half cupful of chopped sour pickles to one cupful thick mayonnaise.

Sliced green olives and pecan nuts, moistened with French dressing and mixed with finely chopped celery, make a delicious salad.

Where do Elephants go to Die?

Where do elephants go to die is one of the great mysteries of the natural history world. Curiously enough, the body of the greatest mysteries of the natural causes has never been discovered, either in India or Africa.

Among native races there is a widespread belief that, when the great beasts feel the end approaching, they make their way to some secret hiding place in which to die.

The whole question is just as big a mystery as ever, in spite of the fact that many attempts have been made to solve the problem. The districts where elephants occur in a wild state have been secured in all directions in the hope of discovering the best resting-places of the huge animals but without any result.

Quite recently another determined attempt has been made to penetrate the mystery, but up to the present nothing of any value has been discovered. As a matter of fact, the problem has more than a scientific interest to it. Any individual who is so fortunate as to find the elephant's graveyard, will certainly have made a fortune.

On this spot there must be a huge accumulation of ivory, a commodity which is continually increasing in value.

Chopped walnuts and grated cheese moistened with mayonnaise and seasoned with salt, mustard and paprika, make a nice sandwich filling.

"REMEMBER:--Our Store is on the other side of the street."

I assented. I always seem to be assenting to some suggestion of Jimmie's. And since I'm not very expert at rowing, my feathering-leaving much to be desired, he calmly takes it for granted that I wish to seize every opportunity for practice. Accordingly, it fell to me to take up the baby blue oars, and I set a swaying course for Hill Island, a rocky peak some four hundred feet in height which rises abruptly from the water about a mile off-shore.

Now there are various methods and devices for capturing the wily rock-cod and we were well equipped with all of them. You can go out into deep water, off some steep rocky bank, and "dig" for red cod. Your jigger, or bait, is a leaden fish, about six inches long and weighing ostensibly a few ounces. When you have lowered it down--down--down--on about a hundred feet of good strong line and then the flinging commences. This consists in giving it a violent up-and-down motion, by imitating with your arm the action of a pump-handle. After several moments of this these few ounces of weight become a few pounds. By a tacit understanding, Jimmie and I were not out after red cod on this occasion.

The next way is by slow trolling, with a heavy sinker. If fortune favors, you may be rewarded with a line cod. But this method demands rowing, while the third--the lazy method--requires only a few clams and a hook and sinker. And on this particular Sunday we had the clams probably it was the remembrance of a half-pail of them in the boat-house that underlay Jimmie's fishing suggestion. Accordingly, as he began to open a few of them I ceased my pursuit of "feathering" and turned in under the lee of Hill Island.

Its slopes, as I said before, are very rocky, coming down steeply to the water's edge and running out in rocky points and reefs. Cod-fishing, as we were about to practice it, requires quite shallow water, about ten to fifteen feet deep, to be interesting. The water up here is crystal clear, and you can lean over the side of the boat and lower your bait right down in front of the rock-cod's nose as he lies on the bottom among the rocks and star-fish.

Turning the boat into a little cove behind a point which ran out in a long reef, I rested on the oars and let her drift. No sooner did the water calm than we saw the first cod--a short dark object, swimming lazily across our path about ten feet below. The bottom here was very rough, covered with small boulders overgrown with a sort of green and brown sea-moss. At intervals we could see huge purple star-fish, sea-cucumbers, and occasionally the white steam of an old clam-shell.

Jimmie, of course, was all attention now. Carefully he lowered a tempting morsel of clam in front of the languidly moving cod. It awakened not the slightest interest. Mr. Cod had evidently just dined for with the very smallest possible deviation from his course he avoided Jim's bait and continued on his languid way.

By this time I had discovered another cod, on the other side of the boat, and set out to test my skill and the attractiveness of my bait. I had no better success. The cod was not interested, but moved restlessly away. "Queerest thing out, isn't it?" said Jim. "They're usually so crazy for clams. Give a pull on your left oar, will you? I want to follow up this fellow ahead of us."

I went back to my place at the oars. With my back towards Jim and for the next few minutes my attention was concentrated on--just a little more ahead--steady! or "A bit more with the left oar"--etc. So I ceased, perforce, to scan the bottom. Only from Jim's exclamations could

I judge that "here's a big one"--"there, he's gone!" and so forth.

Suddenly an excited exclamation called me to turn round. "Look at that bunch!" cried Jim. "All gathered in a ring round that lump of rock. What's the big idea, I wonder?"

I moved up to the bow and together we gazed over the side. About fifteen feet below us some six or seven black rock-cod lay in a circle, as Jim had said, around a large flat mass of greenish-brown rock. But even as we looked one of the fish made a sudden, and surprisingly quick dart forward--and from the supposed rock came out a tentacle, and then another, until the whole thing was in motion and resolved itself into a greenish-brown devil-fish about seven feet across from tip to tip.

It was the first one I had seen, although they are no novelty to Jim, and in great excitement I watched. It seems that cod are very fond of devil-fish, and the watching circle were there intent upon the movements of this old fellow, who on his part, was peacefully minding his own business. As we looked he began moving slowly away over the rocks, his attendant fish scattering in front and closing in from behind. Every moment some one of them would dart forward--a tentacle would shoot out--and back would turn the cod to resume his place in the body-guard.

We both watched the proceedings with interest but after a few minutes they began to pall. It was no use trying for cod, for with that devilish in sight no one had the slightest use for the most tempting morsel of clam that we could offer. So finally Jim, who is an inquisitive, and acquisitive, turn of mind, suggested, "Let's try to spear him."

I assented--as I explained before, I usually do. Luckily, we almost always carry our old boat-hook, for our prying among the rocks and seaweed. Jim took this up, while I steadied the boat, and together we looked down at the devilish, which was moving rather quickly towards the shelter of a large rock. Hardly daring to dip in the oars, for fear of disturbing the water, I sent the boat slowly ahead. At last we were just above him, and Jim stood up, balancing himself for the stroke.

"Hurry up!" I said impatiently. "I can't hold her steady all day." And no sooner were the words out of my mouth than down went the boat-hook and missed!

Quick as a flash Jim had it up again and made another stab at the now alarmed devilish. This time I felt the dull impact as the blunt hook struck the grisly mass so, dropping the oars, I scrambled to the bow to be in on the fun--and give advice!

Jim had caught the devil-fish squarely in the middle with the hook and as I looked he pulled to raise it from the bottom. Up came the body, and one by one the long tentacles followed, waving wildly around until we could see the white cups on the under side. Then they began to wrap themselves around the shaft of the boat-hook.

The last tentacle came free, and the prize seemed within our grasp. I was just setting ready to move even nearer the bow, and leave the stern entirely free for our expected guest, when suddenly the agitated mass below us was hidden from sight in a cloud of black ink. And at that instant the boat-hook came up, so suddenly that Jim almost fell over backwards--empty!

From the dark-stained water beneath us shot out a long green-brown comet--the body mass first, the long tentacles trailing behind like a tail. At a speed of about forty miles an hour it made for the open sea.

"I'm looked at me with a disgusted expression. "Just our usual luck," he said--Rod and Gun.

Millions of Medals.

At a sale of medals and tradesmen's tokens, a copper Sawbridge, worth 1d. taken, dated 1801, of which only four others are known, realized the record price of £145.

It is doubtful if any of the medals and decorations issued in connection with the Great War will ever attain as great a scarcity and consequent high price.

Since issues began early in 1919 more than 360,000 1914 Stars, 145,000 1914-15 Stars, 4,700,000 British War Medals, and 4,500,000 Victory Medals have been engraved and issued to officers and auras and to the various record offices for rank and file.

To the Dominions have been sent in bulk 220,000 1914-15 Stars, 600,000 British War Medals, and 450,000 Victory Medals, whilst 110,000 bronze British War Medals have been bestowed on native labor corps.

Vast Virgin Areas Sacrificed Yearly by Lumbermen.

WASHINGTON, May 30.--Nearly one-half of the land area of the United States, or 523,900,000 acres, was originally forested, but to-day there are less than 470,000,000 acres of timber, including interior celled and second growth and millions of acres of unproductive land. Of this amount only 133,000,000 acres are of virgin timberland.

"Mining" of timber instead of cultivation of this natural wealth as a crop, is held responsible for depletion of the country's timber resources in a review published in the yearbook of the Department of Agriculture for 1922. The amount at present being taken out of forests is estimated at four times the replacement by growth. More than 8,000,000 acres were destroyed in a recent year by 23,400 forest fires, and 75 per cent. of all lumber is still being cut from virgin stands.

While clearing forested land originally was undertaken to aid agriculture, the demands for timber soon out-tripped the farm land demands, until now there are millions of cleared acres idle. In Michigan, at the average rate of settlement for the last 20 years, it would take 360 years to settle the present area of cut-over lands and the remaining timber land that soon will be cut. In the southern part of the Lower Michigan Peninsula it would take 1,700 years.

"The tradition that all cut of burned-over forest land, or even the greater part of it, is being taken by agriculture is not borne out by facts," the yearbook says. "The total area of forest lands already cut or burned over, exclusive of farm wood lots, that has not been taken for agricultural use, has already grown to 181,000,000 acres. Furthermore, our forest land is being cut over at the rate of about 10,000,000 acres yearly, and probably more than half this area is in virgin forest."

Idle cut-over forest lands mean a great expense to the community and to the state. Consumption of timber resources means removal of sawmills and wood working factories, with consequent loss of population, money and investment. Finding business too light, many branch railroads in worked-out timber sections have been forced to discontinue, and the abandonment of adjacent farms and other property has followed.

The Agriculture Department experts do not believe, however, that the age of wood has been left behind. Chemical research is revealing uses for wood heretofore undreamed of, such as the manufacture of artificial silk, rope, and carpets. The next few years, some say, may see the use of wood on a large scale for the production of fuel alcohol to replace gasoline and, in addition, it is believed possible that the abandonment of poor farms and the trend to permit low-producing lands to return to forest may in time reverse the present run-away reduction of forest acreage.

Complete Scotch Village

IS BUILT FOR PHOTOPLAY "SENTIMENTAL TOMMY."

A complete Scotch village was built by Paramount at great expense for the John S. Robertson's production of Sir James M. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy," which has been announced as the bill at the Majestic Theatre to-day. Since most of the exteriors of the picture took place in Thrums, the settlement same Barrie adopted for his native town of Kilmuir, and it is impossible in present-day picture-making to actually transport a company abroad for every change of locale, the Art Department, under the direction of Robert M. Hass, said they would construct a little bit of Scotland in Long Island.

The spot selected was near Elmhurst, and with the aid of photographs of Barrie's Thrums, obtained in a library, the village was made with such amazing realism that it attracted widespread interest from passersby. Every detail was put in the quaint cottages--thatched roofs were there, cleanliness with the washing out them, and the smoke actually poured out of the curious chimneys. The crooked, dirty streets with the shabby (and in many cases)

"Dr. Jack" Will Be Shown Monday.

BIG SHOW AT THE NICKEL NEXT WEEK.

The Nickel Theatre announces the screen's greatest comedian, Harold Lloyd in his biggest comedy success to date, "Dr. Jack," which will be shown next week, commencing Monday. It's a scream from start to finish. There will be a big laugh when Lloyd starting out on an emergency call in his Ford, changes to a motor-cycle, thence to a bicycle and arrives at the patient's house on foot only to find that it is a little girl's doll who has fallen into the family cistern and needs to be resuscitated. Another big laugh is where Dr. Jack in falling out of a window lands backward on a cow and is carried over the fields at full speed by the surprised female of the bovine species. Another very amusing situation is where Dr. Jack who is examining the eyes of Mildred Davis slips off the stool and ends up with his lips pressed to hers.

The picture is produced in five thousand feet and there is a sensation and a laugh in every foot. Charlie Chaplin has nothing on this spectacular youth for real comedy. A great big mammoth programme has been prepared for Monday, so it is here suggested that patrons attend early to avoid the rush.

In Memoriam.

MRS. JAMES O'BRIEN, HOLYROOD.
It is with very sincere regret we record the death of Mrs. James O'Brien, of Holyrood, who died May 12th, 1923, in the 94th year of her age. Deceased was a native of Holyrood where she had lived all her life and was highly respected and will be deeply mourned by all her many friends. During the last few years her age had begun to tell on her, and although confined to her home she was always cheerful and bright. The last Sacraments of Holy Church were administered by Rev. Fr. Finn. The funeral was very largely attended and the remains were laid to rest in the Southside Cemetery. She leaves to mourn her two sons, William, now residing at Boston, and Bartholomew, living in the old homestead; also two daughters, Sister Mary Clarus, of Indiana, and Mrs. R. Cunningham, Holyrood, to each and all of whom we extend our sincere sympathy. May the Lord have mercy on her soul.—Com. Holyrood, June 5, 1923.

What Others are Saying.

Does This Apply Here?
According to statistics issued by United States insurance companies, window cleaning is a more dangerous profession than coal mining.—Monroff Times.
Halifax-New York Air Mail.
An experimental trip to show the practicability of an air mail service between London and New York by way of the Azores and Halifax is projected now. What has become of the Sanpeio-Correa, by the way?—Boston Globe.

The Motor Fuel.

Dr. Warren K. Lewis, Professor of Chemical Engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, holds that available supplies of gasoline alone, are sufficient warrant against a gas famine and mounting prices. He says: "Let us assume that the motor industry will pour during the next 15 years at the rate it has maintained in the past ten. If so, there might be 35,000,000 automobiles in use in 1957, against 12,500,000 registered to-day. This might mean a possible consumption of 230,000,000 barrels of gasoline per annum, as against the present consumption of 100,000,000 barrels. Has the United States sufficient petroleum reserves to meet this demand?" He replies that it has, pointing out that the production of crude oil in the United States now amounts to 2,000,000 barrels a day, of which 88 per cent is refined into gasoline. He calculates that in 1937 there will be available 5,000,000,000 barrels of gasoline as against an estimated requirement of 280,000,000 barrels. The assumption that the Standard Oil Company controls the situation he points out in contrary to the facts of the case. There are some 30,000 producers and 450 refiners, and from a production of 20,000,000 barrels of gasoline in 1913 the supply was raised to 120,000,000 barrels in 1922.—Montreal Herald.

HUSBANDS' UNION.

A Chicago husband who got 50 cents spending money out of his wages wants to form a union of husbands against the oppression of their wives. The average man will wonder what he's making all the row about—50 cents being a reasonably liberal allowance. They do things different in some other countries where the men have achieved equal rights with the fair sex.—Montreal Gazette.
