HER HONOR ATTACKED.

A VILLAGE MAIDEN UNDERTAKES TO AVENGE HERSELF.

A Pretty Scene Outside a Methodist Church—A Deacon to the Rescue—Four Men Warned.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 31.—Among those who attended service at a Methodist church in London yesterday were Wm. R. Warner, a respectable, well-to-do farmer, living in the neighborhood, his son Isaac and his daughter Friedella, aged between 17 and 18, and Robert Jackson, also a prominent farmer. At the close of the service Wm. Taylor waited outside until service was over, when he said in an off-hand way, "Friedella, when do you see you?"

She rounded the side of the carriage and, with a look of indignation, went to the shed as directed, and found to her sorrow that Friedella did not calculate on getting quite so warm a reception. No sooner did Warner meet the lady, who was waiting for him, than she turned round and belabored him back and slanted his face with a rawhide lash. Not waiting for her victim to recover from his surprise, she brought down upon his forehead a heavy wooden shoe. Warner tried to seize the lash, but not until she had inflicted several cuts on his face did he manage to wrest it from her. The congregation were attracted to the spot by the sound of the rawhide lash and the shouts of the excited but inactive spectators of the scene. Warner was wrestling with his assailant for possession of the whip, and being the younger would soon have been overpowered, but at this time the father and the brother of the girl rushed up and attacked Warner, who would not loosen his hold on the lash until he was completely overpowered. At this juncture Robert Jackson, a deacon of the church, rushed in between Warner and the girl and wrested the lash from her. Taylor, senior, who was going for Warner, called out to him, "seeing that the lash was given to you, I will give you the whip." Thereupon Taylor turned his attention to Jackson and struck him with his fist several times. The girl engaged in a lively scuffle, but Jackson soon overpowered her, and she was taken to the hospital. Taylor threatened he would put a bullet through her head if she did not stop. Jackson, however, retained possession of the lash and the unseemly exhibition was brought to a close. The alleged assault on the young woman's action is a gross violation of the law, and she has been the subject of a good deal of gossip, especially in the neighborhood. Taylor himself heard of the reports, the truth of which he and her father denied, and set to work to find out the origin of the story. A few days ago Taylor, senior, and his daughter, who were friendly neighbors, began talking about the village reports. Taylor junior asked him whether he thought his daughter was in the condition credited to her. Warner replied that he had no doubt as to the truth of the matter, and they parted apparently good friends. Previous to this Warner declares he knew nothing of the report, and he is now determined to clear the matter. He formed his own private opinion, however, and gave in to the friendly way in which he is alleged to have said regarding her, and she, feeling enraged, with the consent of her father, threatened in order to get even with somebody. Warner showed the reports, and she showed the marks of the lash down his face, and he swore that he would not be satisfied until he had seen the girl and Joseph Sifton drove into the city toward evening and drove to "Squire" Niles' information against the Taylor, father, son and daughter. Warner charged, and his son and daughter with assault, and his son charged the elder Taylor with assault and threatening to shoot. Warner was issued for the arrest of the father and the father for the woman. The case is now on for hearing this afternoon before Justice of the Peace.

REOPENING OF THE GRAND.

Baker and Farron in Their New Play, A Soap Bubble.

The audience that filled the Grand opera house last night must have been very gratified to Manager Sheppard. It was significant of the fact that his popularity as a theatrical caterer has not waned, but on the other hand is constantly on the increase; it was also prophetic of a good season's business.

Every part of the house was occupied; the boxes, the orchestra chairs, the parquette, the family circle and last but not least the gods' gallery.

The audience admitted the new decorations and improvements. From the street to the stage the work of the artist is to be seen. Everything is fresh and beautiful. In the Grand Mr. Sheppard has a theatre that he may well be proud of.

The opening piece was A Soap Bubble, produced by Baker and Farron, the well known comedians. The piece is devoid of plot. Author Pflister does not pretend to say there is any plot in his life, being rather to arrange an absurdity in which the stars would have full scope for their appetites.

Both were accorded a hearty reception, and were loudly applauded throughout the play. Theater goes can never forget the honors which Miss Gracie Emmet shared with them. She is a sprightly comedienne, and has a very tasty way. She was a favorite with the audience from the first. There is plenty of laughing and merriment in the play, which will hold the boards to-night, to-morrow matinee and to-morrow night.

A Case for the Police Commissioner.

Editor World: On Saturday night last an occurrence took place that shows the necessity of strict surveillance over the proceedings of the police.

Merchants and milliners visiting the fair, were attending the Opera at the Horticultural gardens. They were walking on the balcony that opens off the upper gallery, when a policeman ordered them off. They immediately left the balcony, but the number, not walking fast enough to suit the fiery zeal of the guardian of the peace, was seized by the arm and led down the stairs.

THAT VOLUNTEER SCRIP.

A LOT OF UNCERTAINTY ABOUT ITS VALUE AND ITS TRANSFER.

Captains Refusing to Sign Certificates—How the Scrip is Transferred—A Farmer's Plot on the Question.

There have been numerous enquiries during the past few weeks in regard to the value and sale of volunteer scrip, various brokers being engaged in handling it, and several popular advertisements having appeared in the papers about it.

The brokers seem to have very little idea as to the intrinsic value, at most of them aver that they are only buying as brokers, and not to hold.

What is being sold just now—the scrip itself not having been yet issued—is an assignment of the interest of the volunteer who has served in the Northwest field force, the modus operandi being the appointment of a purchaser as his attorney, making an affidavit as to his identity and his right to transfer, and finally obtaining a title from his commanding officer that he has been in service in the Northwest, and that he, the officer, has not previously signed a similar paper.

Some difficulty has arisen in the transfer of scrip, and some volunteers claim to have suffered hardship on account of it, owing to the action of certain officers who have taken upon themselves to refuse to sign the certificates, notably one who some days ago it is alleged suggested getting up a certificate himself for the purpose of dealing in scrip, but there seems to be so much penalty attaching here, as it is openly said by some of the men that their officers are purchasing it, and that they are for a captain of a company refusing to certify that men under his command had served in the Northwest, and that he had not signed any similar certificate. He is willing to certify that those men served in the Northwest, but not willing to certify that he has not signed any similar certificate, which amounts to a positive refusal as far as the volunteer is concerned, as he has not signed any similar certificate. In one case a disabled volunteer who had no money to pay his board over Sunday and was unable to work, begged of his captain to sign the necessary papers, but was refused.

It is also stated that this same captain refused yesterday to sign the certificate of a volunteer in his company, also disabled, giving as excuse the plea that it was against orders, and when closely pressed said he had taken upon himself to have nothing to do with it. As the man who asked him to sign was not to be shaken off in that way he urged the plea that "any officer who signs such a paper was a liar." He was quickly shown that he did not understand what the paper was. It was pointed out to the captain that the volunteer had to borrow money to leave town. At this point the broker told the captain that he supposed when he got to the office he would be able to get the scrip signed. The interview then closed.

The scrip has been sold all the way from $15 to $40, the latter price having been paid in a few instances; but there is a feeling of doubt as to its value, owing to the large amount issued, and also to the original and mounted paper, half-issued and supplementary issues—volunteers are to pay the Northwest scrip, and should the government refuse to take it, the scrip will be largely worthless.

It is estimated that all told the issue will reach $1,750,000 or thereabouts, so that there will be plenty for everybody. So far there is an amount of uncertainty, but it is estimated that it may be very pleasing to the broker who rather likes that kind of thing. It is extremely demoralizing to the men, and they usually try to sell it before putting up their money.

The low value of the scrip is $80, but it is not quite clear why it is so high. It is to be used hence the idea of its value, and the fluctuations in price.

A pamphlet is to appear in a day or two dealing with the scrip, and giving volunteers advice how to act in regard to their scrip.

FURDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 1 1885

Canada's Future. That the question of Canada's future is now in the ring is sufficiently proved by the articles in yesterday's Globe and Mail.

Professional Trades Unions. The professional trades unionism of the doctors and the lawyers is much more powerful and aggressive than the trades unionism of the mechanics and the laborers.

College Confederation. The most striking feature of college and university development in the United States at the present time is the extraordinary increase in the endowments of institutions devoted to higher education.

It is to be regretted that the controversy in our columns as to the comparative expense of living here and in England should threaten to degenerate into a literary faction fight between native born and adopted Canadians.

The Baptists have set the larger denominations an excellent example in the matter of consolidation. They have closed up their Manitoba college and a much older theological hall in Nova Scotia, and have concentrated all their theological instruction in MacMaster hall in this city.

The whole community is deeply interested in professional, almost as much as in general higher education. We cannot afford to send our young men abroad for the completion of their training for the active business of life.

A Boston paper has started an inquiry as to the identity of the Yankee. It wants to know who he really is and where he actually lives. Abroad every citizen of the United States is called a Yankee, for want of a better name, perhaps.

It is customary with the stalwart organ, of the old party to characterize every independent journal that ventures to criticize the present party management as a "tory sheet."

Our Hamilton contemporary says that "the liberal party (so-called) is not shown itself sufficiently radical."

More advice for the young liberals. The Montreal Times belongs to the rest-and-stand-still school, and assures the young men of Ontario that there are plenty of practical issues at stake already without endangering the solidarity of the party by raising new ones.

The popular mind does not willingly let its heroes die. In many countries the lighter traditions of great warriors who are not dead, but only asleep, who shall some day awaken to lead their countrymen to conquest and glory.

Known by These Signs. Dyspepsia may be known by heartburn, sour eructations of food, wind belching, weight at the stomach, variable appetite, costive bowels, etc.

It is too continental, and implies too much. A German might as well arrogate exclusively to himself the appellation of European. Down south the northerners are Yankees. Out west it is only the New Englanders who come under that head.

A kindred but wider query is: Who is the Anglo-Saxon? We have heard a grand deal of him, particularly in post prandial orations; but we have never met a well defined specimen of the class.

The Norman conquest of England is the chief whose Celtic forbears went down from the Highlands of Scotland to gather gear in England under the Stuarts.

"Miss Howard a friend was his first question." "I have known her some years admit her? Although I must ask," I added, bitterly.

"Admire her! I should have seen some of the best women in the world, but I dreamed more, she was not addressed, of course, but she had her's business."

"So he talked on and on as at the end of the road, and within me some of the best which had led him to visit me to press him to prolong spoke of nothing but you, his eyes in various directions a sort of moody side answered his eloquent remarks. Probably he noticed in a manner, as on reaching home

"You are awfully tired, I so I will be merciful to-night you up for another sleep." "When we met the next in the same thing again; your 'was before his eyes. Although really of the latter you I knew that more than just laughing exterior; that she had made was no expression of his eyes, but he was looking inquisitive, but said while. After breakfast, as coming out plain the day, as I hid my feelings and to assure remarks in the like vein, I were of little use. I felt the desire of something to builders an absolutely storm-proof roof.

"I stand behind the trade and guarantee to builders an absolutely storm-proof roof. Without any exception the best in the world. Ready and ready to put on. I call me truly, Philip—there anything like love two?"

"Even then I might have been too proud to say I love in return. Too proud to tell his mercy, as it seemed to me, I felt Gordon free to say I was in love with you. I was in love with you, and my jealous eyes of blue and brown crossed for you, you were a-bash an my coming alone had us forth.

"I admit her for her friend is all." "And even as I told the believed what he wished to know that my fate was sealed." "Then let us go," he said moved his hands from my arm. We rode over to your you, and my jealous eyes of blue and brown crossed for you, you were a-bash an my coming alone had us forth.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "CALLED BACK," "DARK DAYS," ETC.

The next day, with little regret, I tested my books aside and did all in my power to make my guests visit a pleasant one to him. We shot, drove and rode together, and the short wintry day, seemed even shorter with my light-hearted friend at my side. I took him to visit all my friends, save one; I need scarcely say the reason for that omission. Too well I knew that, had I been a girl, Gerald Gordon was the man who might have won my heart had he chosen. Too well I knew that if the eyes of love enchanted, they did not imagine your charms, and that his interest, at least, could scarcely fail to be aroused. So I dreaded to bring about a meeting between him and you. I came gathering could I have found a decent pretext, but the whole country-side were bidden to that ball and my absence from it would have been remarked. Besides, Gerald would have gone any way. He was very merry as we drove over, at the expense of the imaginary persons we should meet; but I said nothing. The moment we entered the room I saw his eyes fall upon you. I saw his look of surprise, of admiration, as he comprehended your regal beauty at one glance, and before the evening was over I felt that what I dreaded was stook and that my friend would probably be my rival, his attentions to you that evening were no more than man might properly pay to the most attractive woman in the assembly, they were sufficient to lead me to the worst. Even as I write this I can see his tall figure bending over you and hear him whispering words which, spoken with the easy, self-confident manner of a man of the world, I knew intuitively must have been sweet to any young girl's ears.

At last, that night, gay and enjoyable to all save me, ended. You had departed, and after that it needed little persuasion on my part to draw Gerald from the scene. We started on our drive home, with the stars shining pure and clear through the frosty skies. I was silent and unhappy; my companion however, with a courtesy to hear all I could tell him concerning his late partner.

"Is Miss Howard a friend of yours?" was his first question.

"I have known her some years. Do you admire her? Although I need scarcely say, I added, bitterly.

ing and winning the affection of man, woman and child—no different from me; I even hated him because I knew you would be happy with him, for he had all the qualities to make some happy; I hated him as Cain hated Abel, and for the same reason. Had not his offering been accepted and mine rejected? And seven days passed by. Each day the tortures I endured seemed greater; each day my hatred grew more intense. In a feverish sort of way I forced myself to laugh, to jest, and to converse with a lover's selfishness, never noticed how unnatural my manner was, or guessed how, by this time, I hated the sound of his voice, the clearing of his throat or even his very voice.

"One thing pleases me more than I can say, he pleasantly remarked one evening. "It is that what I once believed to be a fact was only a creation of my own brain. I was afraid I might be the level of my friend; but I am happier knowing you will dance at my wedding with a light heart."

Gertrude, my wife, there is one day in every year which is solemn and sad to both of us. It is the day when the choicest flowers are laid on a tomb, now growing grey with time. A day, many of which you spend alone, holding a lock and gazing at a miniature. And yet, if the love you bore another man is strong in your heart, those days may have ever seemed to draw closer to me than at other times. As your eyes, and with forgotten sorrow, meet mine, you think, "our grief is from the same source—mine for love, his for loss."

The styles in Fall Footwear.

There will be but slight changes in styles next fall. The toes will be round, not so pointed as this season. Tips will be fashionable, heels low and broad. Looped shoes will be worn largely, but buttoned boots are likely to be popular, as they are rapidly growing in favor. Ladies' shoes will be round-toed, Calfskin is much called for. A heavier boot than sold last year is destined to have a good market.

Just the Thing.—W. J. Guppy, druggist of Newbury, writes: "Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry is just the thing for summer sickness. I sold out my stock three times last summer. There was a good demand for it." Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is infallible for dysentery, colic, sick stomach and bowel complaint.

To Dyspeptics.

The most common signs of Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, are an oppression at the stomach, nausea, flatulency, water-brash, heart-burn, vomiting, loss of appetite, and constipation. Dyspeptic patients suffer untold miseries, bodily and mental. They should stimulate the digestion, and secure regular daily action of the bowels, by the use of moderate doses of Ayer's Pills. After the bowels are regulated, one of these Pills, taken each day after dinner, is usually all that is required to complete the cure. AYER'S PILLS are sugar-coated and purely vegetable—pleasant, entirely safe, and reliable medicine for the cure of all disorders of the stomach and bowels. They are the best of all purgatives for family use.
