RANDOM OBSERVATIONS IN THE BRITISH ISLES

LETTER 2.

Our tour started in Scotland and for several days we met the native Scot in his own home, and revelled in the secretary of his bonnie country. The Scottish folk are a strong race of people, and the lowland section where my time was spent is far north as Sterling, the final impression was that there are few places on the earth with greater evidences of vitality and industry, and with a more hopeful outlook for further progress, this, notwithstanding a heavy drain on the resources through immigration. "Scotland forever" seems to be quite in harmony with the trend of things. It took Scotland to make Britain great; every man north of the Solway and the Tweed is proud of that, and would like it to be better understood.

"Why is it your people call us English?" I was asked. There is no particular reason for that unless it is because we are in too much of a hurry to make the distinction in our speaking. It is true that we do often say "the English" when we include the Scotch. Let me remind my readers that the Scotchman does not like to be called an Englishman. The average Scotchman possesses more than the average amount of social pride. Travellers or tourists are, as a general thing, experts in diplomacy; and in Scotland it is quite common to hear people tell about their Scotch ancestry or how much Scotland has done for the world. That pleases the Scotchman as much as a wave of the average Canadian. "Yes, yes," he will say, "the Scotch have done well, and John Knox was a great man."

Education and religion are indispensable to a well equipped Scotchman. Woe into the man who interferes with the freedom of the people in this respect. Jennie Geddes was one of the people, and they still point out the spot from which she threw the stool at the head of an offending priest. The type remains fixed and well tempered.

But in England the diplomatic tourists are English of course. Personally, I have a remarkably accommodating ancestry. They came from the Border Lands, so I am quite at home on either side of the Tweed. They passed through Ireland. There I could be an Irishman. Report has it that they lived in the United States till Revolutionary times; so I can be a Yankee on occasion. Then they came to Nova Scotia, the old British America; so I claim the loyalty of a N. E. L., a kind often overlooked in the present generation and I belong to the New Canada. My forefathers were undoubtedly found on either side of politics, so I am quite equally at home among Conservatives or Reformers!

England presents some marked contrasts to her nearest neighbor. This is not altogether due to imagination. I am quite sure. These contrasts formerly were very real and it took a good many centuries to adjust the social traits in an amicable way. Even yet, some people are not quite sure whether you mean a Stuart or a Hanoverian, when you speak of Royalists of the 18th century. Having expressed myself quite clearly about the Scotchman, it will be in order to be as definite about the Englishman. I learned some time ago, and recent observations have tended to confirm that impression, that no people will give you more surprises than the English.

lish. That surprise may turn in an opposite direction; for example you may take him for a wise man, and get disappointed, or because he looks dull and non-committal you may think him stupid, but on a test you find he is a marvel of resourcefulness and capability. I defy any mind reader or hand reader to tell an Englishman by his looks. His appearances are a conundrum. Tap him on the shoulder and engage in a conversation, or better still if you are in a position, lay some responsibility on him and it will not be long before some surprise, one way or the other, will await you.

That suggests to me one or two characteristic in which I think the people of the Motherland excel. First in self-control. That registers itself everywhere. Even the immeasurable activities of London show marks of that. Things are well organized. The immense railway stations with their hurrying thousands of travellers are in charge of officials who never appear to be bothered about anything. Go where you will in England and you will note it. At the social functions where the party with which I have travelled has been entertained we always marked the easy composure of hosts and hostesses. One more point, and that is the public school life and among the young people. We were at Eton, where over one thousand youths were in residence. I do not think for a moment that they are paragons of perfection in manner or self-control, but generally speaking I think that they lead the average Canadian youth in that respect. Lord Morley has been complaining recently of the decay of manners. Perhaps this is a general tendency in which the more materialistic sections of our civilization take the lead. In a group of a thousand, or less, Canadian boys you would find some of them punching one another, pinching, tripping, grabbing caps, making remarks about people passing by and in a hundred other ingenious or infernal ways, letting off energies which they ought, in all conscience, learn to control and use in better ways. I use Eton for an illustration because I noted it there and elsewhere too; and let it be remembered that Wellington said "Eton was Waterloo." He who runs may read the lesson! Self-control is not something which Topsy-like just grows; at the basis of it is a spirit of reverence, and that linked to a high purpose that life itself is a thing worth while.

Your typical Englishman follows the dictates of conscience and reason rather than emotions of pleasure. A writer, whose gifts for discernment have been widely recognized, has diagnosed the English character and says something to this effect, "Get up early in the morning, and take a cold water bath the first thing. Those who survive the process, go out to conquer the earth." That is another way of paying a tribute to their love of discipline and courageous adherence to duty.

Again there is less individuality about the average Englishman as compared with the average Canadian. That has its history. The Englishman inherits customs and traditions quite different from us. Away back there was feudalism. The army discipline is always here. Slowly then he has learned to put his country or his cause before his own interest or life. He has learned to work with the hundreds or thousands by his side. In the new land there was little or no feudalism to make machines of us; men were thrown on their own responsibilities, had to work alone and there was no regular army where orders had to be literally carried out. That makes a great difference. The Englishman puts his cause first. The Colonial puts himself first. I was told at Portsmouth of an army officer who was sent out to train Colonials (not Canadians in this case). He complains bitterly because they won't obey him unquestionably and unhesitatingly. The young recruit think they are as good as the officer, and unless they see the "reason why" they have no idea of taking his word for it. That is a case of red tape vs. reason.

Individuality is a good thing, rightly understood, and sinking individuality behind cause and country is a good thing too. Where would our progress be without that? Every invention of importance has meant that. We visited Aldershot and saw the aeroplane making flights. The men take great risks, but it is a case of putting a cause before the individual. They know if they lose life, others will benefit by their experience and sacrifice. As between the two characteristics, I think the man who puts his cause first must have the preference. There is hope there for the success of great causes, and the enthronement of great principles. Col. Cody stands out as a striking example of this. All classes join now in his praises.

Some years ago I was asked by a school teacher who had the initiative, if not an enquiring mind, if I thought Great Britain would be here when the millennium came. That was a question, and had I known less than I did, I might have attempted to answer it. However, there is a good deal of significance in the question and many people are thinking about it. The optimist says, "Yes" and the pessimist says "No." Nowhere will you find people more divided upon the question than the question than in England itself. Some are sure the country is going to the dogs as fast as it can; some are sure it is not, but going at a reasonable pace the other way. England's severest critics are Englishmen, or perhaps just now Englishwomen. Criticism, like "the rod" seems to be a good thing for us and tends to keep the soul alive. Even some of the newspapers join in the cry, deprecating what they call national indifference. They even go as far as to say that the giants have all passed away; genius and character, affirm, have decayed. I am persuaded that a good deal of this lugubrious lament is, as in other countries, the expression of those whose favorite fads do not meet with favorite approval. It is not so much great principles that people are apathetic about as some peoples' pet notions. The mind of Old England is still set progressward. While the very matter here referred to, deprecating the "canker of indifference" in the nation, was running through a section of the press, the International Medical Congress was convening in London, and here is a sample of an editorial remark relating to that occasion: "A generation has elapsed since the last International Medical Congress met in London, and the advances of medical science in that period has been extraordinary. Perhaps the most fruitful achievement has been the discovery that disease can be controlled and prevented." We may safely say that in this advancement the British Medical profession has taken a first rank. Does that look like decay? A visit to the House of Commons gives one the impression that taking them all in all, no able body of men ever sat on the ministerial benches than today. The schools are improving, social conditions are being made better, slums are being cleaned up, democracy everywhere is dominating. The man who wants encouragement for his pessimism, better give Britain a wide berth. And yet as Kipling well reminded us "all our pomp of yesterday is one with Ninveh and Tyre." The people need to cultivate the spirit of humility. The lead in civilization is given only to those who deserve it.

Some Leading Points in Lord Haldane's Address

At the Sessions of the American Bar Association in Montreal last week.

(Daily Witness.)

The United Kingdom, United States and Canada, with common traditions, language, and ideals, form a unique group in which there are relations possible that would not be possible with any other group.

Lawyers are urged to encourage nations of this group to develop and recognize a reliable character in the obligations they assume toward each other.

A foundation for international faith of a new kind in the history of the world might be developed as a result of the better relations between Great Britain, the United States and Canada.

Lawyers should help to relieve the conventional atmosphere of public life by always thinking rightly and helping to create a more hopeful and resolute kind of public opinion.

His Majesty King George sent a message, through Lord Haldane, noting that this convention would increase the esteem and good will which the people of the United States and of Canada and the United Kingdom have for each other.

Lord Haldane quoted President Wilson as saying: "The country must find lawyers of the right sort and the right spirit to advise it, or it must stumble through a very chaos of blind experiment. It never needed lawyers who are also statesmen more than it needs them now; needs them in the courts, in its legislatures, in its seats of executive authority; lawyers who can think in the terms of society itself."

The Lord Chancellor distinguished between law and the other rules of conduct in life, saying: "Law is the only rule which is not a mere social convention, but which is a part of the general will of a society, and which there could be no tolerable social life. It was the source of liberty and ease. This instinctive sense of obligation was the foundation of society."

The principle of this unwritten law or code of ethical rules, having behind it the general will of a society, should be extended so as to develop a full international ethical habit among nations. This could be begun better with nations having some special relation.

The century of peace between Great Britain and Canada and the United States had brought the peoples of these countries to a greater possession of the common ends and ideals natural to the Anglo-Saxon group. A large number of citizens in each of the nations would not today count it decent to violate obligations to the other members of the group.

The way in which the Powers worked together recently to preserve the peace of Europe as if forming one community showed the ethical possibilities of the group system.

Slaves of the Present Day

Under the above striking caption a forcible article on thrift appears in last week's "Journal of Commerce."

According to the author, "the man who works for a salary or wages and saves nothing is virtually a slave while that condition lasts. He is absolutely dependent upon his weekly wage for subsistence. His escape from servitude lies only in saving a part of each week's or each month's income." For those in this state of bondage our new Partial Payment Plan offers the greatest incentive to saving and the financial independence obtained from savings well invested.

Our explanatory booklet is free for the asking. Why not write for a copy some time—now for instance!

EVA MYLOTT, CONTRALTO

Eva Mylott, the Australian contralto, who is to sing in Bridgetown October 2nd, possesses a pure contralto voice of exceptional richness, with the lower register equal to that of Clara Butt. The greatest critics of the world have paid glowing tributes to her wonderful voice, artistic temperament and superb interpretation, while her diction has been described as the finest of any singer now before the public.

Miss Mylott inherited her musical gifts from both parents. At the age of seven her voice was already attracting attention, and yet while a mere child she was famous all over the continent. Mrs. Melba returning to the land of her birth, heard her and with the magnanimity of the truly great artist, recognized her unmistakable genius, and taking the warmest interest in the young singer personally introduced her to Mme. Marchesi in Paris.

Miss Mylott at the close of her studies under this great teacher, created a furor at the pupils' concert in the Salle Hoch, and Mme. Marchesi referred to her as a "favorite pupil," and said, "I have no hesitation in prophesying for Miss Mylott a great future in the artistic and musical world, from her great power and compass, artistic perception and temperament."

In London she studied Randegger and Henry Wood (Oratorio). Mme. Guyd Hardt (Ballads), Mme. Minna Fischer (German Lieder) and also received private tuition from Mme. Melba, who took the greatest pride and interest in her protegee. She was immediately engaged for the Albert Hall, Queen's Hall concerts, and by Philharmonic and Choral Societies toured with Melba, Trebelli and Albani, and was honored with the special patronage of Her Royal Highnesses, the Prince and Princess of Wales.

ASTOUNDED BY EVILS TURNS ON SUFFRAGE

Washington, Sept. 4.—Miss Annie Rock who was one of California's most active suffragists for more than a year, is astounded by the evils which she says she has found in equal suffrage in her own State. She has turned against the suffrage movement and has issued a notable statement through the headquarters of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage here.

"Votes for women," described by its advocates as the panacea for all political evils," says Miss Black, "is working havoc among those very women who have persuaded the men voters of their States to give them the suffrage. Women who have obtained the franchise are Frankenstein's creations of a political monster that has turned upon the sex with appalling results.

"It takes some fortitude to come out and acknowledge that one has been wrong. After due observation, study and deliberation I am willing to make such a confession. As secretary of the California Equality League, the largest suffrage organization in California, I gave without remuneration over a year of my life working for suffrage. And now all I would say is that if I had it to do over again I would work twice as hard, if that were possible, against it.

"CALLS RESULT DISASTROUS

"As a member of ten clubs and organizations also as registrar, precinct captain, worker at headquarters and at the polls, I have had more than ordinary opportunity to observe and watch the workings of suffrage, and I consider the result not only unsatisfactory and disappointing but disastrous. It is most unsatisfactory because what was surmised had been demonstrated that the majority of women not only do not care to vote but have no interest whatever in suffrage. The New York woman who came out to California and found that women did not turn out well at the polls—that suffrage is a failure—found out the truth. Just recently the California suffragists sent out workers to initiate the New York women into the California modus operandi.

"Suffragists assert that women will purify politics. On the contrary I have found that women in politics are no better than men. The women of Colorado have had suffrage nearly twenty years, but from what I have seen I do not believe the women of Colorado are any better off economically or in any other way than the women of the worst anti-suffrage State.

"The Rev. Anna Howard Shaw is quoted as saying that in all the sixty-five years of fighting there has never been a man or woman advocate of equal suffrage who had done any unlawful act or who had been other than a law abiding citizen. Where has the Rev. Anna been all these years—in her closet praying—that she dare calmly come and make this bold declaration?

ANSWERS DR. ANNA SHAW.

"I want to say to the Rev. Anna that there are hundreds of men and women who are advocating woman suffrage in this country alone who scorn the law, denounce the Bible, trample our flag and work to down our Constitution.

"I do not deny there are some lovely enthusiastic suffragists, but they know not what they do. The persistence of a few agitators, a small minority of their sex, should not put upon the great majority of women an obligation and a burden which they do not care to bear and which brings calamity to the nation. Men should not be impressed by the parades and demonstrations of a few thousand faddists picked up here and there over the country.

"Woman suffrage in California brought woman into too familiar contact with man. She has her rights now, she is equal to him—on his level. Where previously men were generally courteous, now they are rude. Women suffragists will almost make one believe suffrage has been a great success in California. But if you analyze what they say you will find all the success they talk about is mere assertion.

"Mary Foy was in Washington as a member of the Democratic National Committee. She stayed in the east do over again I would work twice as hard, if that were possible, against it. She made a speech. During her talk she told us that a woman from New York had been out to see how suffrage worked in California and had reported that women did not turn out well at the polls, and she urged us to vote, because," she said "it makes it so much harder for the women of other States to get suffrage if you don't vote."

"Now Mary is as good-hearted a woman as ever lived, but why should she urge the women of California to do something they do not wish to do in order that other women in other States, who do not wish to vote, may have a burden put upon them. Can you see the philosophy in that?"

LUNENBURG HIT BY LIGHTNING.

Lunenburg, Sept. 8.—This town was visited by a severe thunder storm this afternoon from three to six o'clock, and the lightning was terrific. At four o'clock the barn of R. C. S. and in a few minutes it was on fire. Head, about a mile from town, and Kaulbach was struck by lightning. The barn is situated on Kaulbach's although raining hard the flames had full sway. The fire bell rang and a number of firemen with fire fighting machinery drove over to the scene, but the fire had got too much headway, and burned its way out.

There were forty tons of hay and a quantity of farming implements in the barn. There was no person near at the time, and all of which were destroyed, and nothing was saved. The loss will probably amount to $1500. There are two other buildings adjacent, a house and cook house, and had it not been for the heavy rain they both would have been destroyed. The firemen turned a stream upon these houses and assisted the downpour in preventing the fire from spreading. All the live stock was saved, excepting three pigs and a calf, which perished.

EDUCATIONISTS FAVOR FREE TEXT BOOKS.

Ottawa, Aug. 29.—Free textbooks and uniform ones—all over Canada, reciprocity between Provinces in the matter of teachers, and the question whether the new Montessori method of teaching shall be introduced into Canadian schools formed the subjects for several pithy discussions at the opening general meeting of the Dominion Educational Association, held here today.

Technical education was also before the meeting in the form of a brief outline of the report of the Royal Commission on this question by Dr. J. W. Robertson, its chairman, and President also of the Association.

The passing of teachers from one Province to another was referred to by Dr. A. H. Mackay, Superintendent of Education in Nova Scotia. The formation of a Central Bureau of Education would tend to this end. Such a bureau would be for the purpose of gathering statistics, not for coercive purposes. The speaker also suggested that representatives from the various Provinces might meet once a year as a board to discuss a number of subjects not properly for the Dominion Educational Association's meetings.

Dr. W. S. Carter of New Brunswick, who followed, advocated free text books to solve the problems of which Dr. Mackay had spoken. He also favored the gathering together yearly of Provincial educational representatives.

GEOGRAPHIES GOOD ONLY FIVE YEARS.

Returning to the question of text books, he stated that no geography should last longer than five years. Unfortunately, in New Brunswick, the limit was thirty years.

Mr. Jos. H. Smith, of Westworth County, gave his experience in California, which had introduced free text books, which he considered an inferior class.

Dr. A. Robinson, Superintendent of Education in British Columbia, however, defended the free text books system as practised in that Province. He recommended co-ordination between different Provinces in such forms of education as that of the blind, the deaf and the dumb. Each Province could specialize in one of these things.

Deputy Minister of Education R. Fletcher of Manitoba, stated that in that Province each child was given his own text book.

Dr. A. M. Scott, of Calgary, in regard to the co-ordination of teachers between one Province and another, stated that Alberta issued a booklet of information as to the respective standing of teachers in the various Provinces.

THE ARAB HORSE

(By Col. Spencer Borlen.)

It was the fashion a few years ago to claim that the Arab horse did not exist, excepting as a figment of the imagination. Scientists, later, were compelled to acknowledge that there was such a horse, and that he differed from all others even in his anatomy. Then a claim was put forward that what was called an Arab was really an African horse, originating in Lybia, the country lying between Egypt and Tripoli, on the shores of the Mediterranean.

These wise people even asserted that the horses we had always called Arabians, were never in Arabia until after the beginning of the Christian era, some going from Egypt, others sent from Cappadocia, north of the Taurus mountains, on the Black Sea. The fact that no such horses remain either in Lybia or in Cappadocia, although they are numerous in Arabia, caused no embarrassment to these pundits.

Had such special pleaders gotten their Xenophon or Herodotus from the upper shelves of their book-cases, certain embarrassing facts might have caused them to modify their contention.

They would have learned that Semiramis, who succeeded her husband, Nimrod—builder of Nineveh—had an army in which were 300,000 cavalry, with which she invaded India, before she started to build Babylon. Nineveh is perpetuated by the present town of Mosul, built on its site, in the north-eastern part of Arabia, on the Tigris river; and the ruins of Babylon are near Bagdad on the Euphrates, both these points being in the heart of Arabia.

We are forced to believe, therefore, that there were some horses in Arabia at least 3500 years B. C. Not only is this certain from the written records, their representation is preserved by bas-reliefs in stone uncovered by Layard, when he explored the ruins of Nineveh, in the middle of the nineteenth century. These show horses of the Arabian horse size and type, ridden by men making use of them in a manner such as no horse but an Arab was ever known to stand up to. The riders are hunting lions, with spears and arrows. It is notorious to this day that no horse but an Arab has the courage to face a lion or a wild boar.

If these would-be scientists still claim the proofs insufficient to establish our contention, we turn to the history of Cyrus the Great, as written by Xenophon. When Cyrus fought Croesus, King of Lydia, it is plainly stated that part of his cavalry were Arabians. In arranging his forces to meet the enemy, Harpagus suggested that he put the camels he used for transport animals, in front of his cavalry. And when they came up to the contest, the Lydian horses, terrified by the sight and smell of the camels, became unmanageable; while the horses of Cyrus' army, having been brought up with camels, and partly nourished on camels' milk, were not afraid, but dashed after the Lydians and completely routed them.

Later, when Cyrus captured Babylon—the night of Belshazzar's feast—celebrated the event by a grand review of all his army. This was 500 B.C., 3000 years before Christ. In that review Xenophon tells us Cyrus paraded 120,000 cavalry (more than all the cavalry in Europe today) besides his chariots drawn by four horses each.

This parade was in the heart of Arabia; and the empire ruled by Cyrus extended from the Indus river on the east, to the Red Sea, the Mediterranean, and Aegean on the west; from the Black and Caspian Seas on the north, to the Indian Ocean on the south.

In the days of Darius the Younger, the Medo-Persian empire had an enormous horse-breeding establishment in the plain near Mt. Corone. From this source alone Darius drew one hundred thousand horses to oppose the Macedonian invasion, and still left fifty thousand in the pastures which Alexander saw in his march through the country.

It would appear safe to claim therefore that there were horses in Arabia before they were sent from Lybia. It is not more probable that the horses of Lybia were some left in that country by Camyses, son of Cyrus, who conquered Egypt and Lybia and Ethiopia to add to the possessions left him by Cyrus?

The Egyptians had no cavalry, any more than had the Persians until the time of Cyrus. Horses in Egypt came after the time when the Shepherd Kings were driven out. Four hundred years after the days of Joseph, when Pharaoh pursued the Hebrews who went out with Moses through the Red Sea, we are told that he followed with six hundred chariots—"all the chariots of Egypt"—according to the Bible statement. Horses were so scarce even then that each Egyptian chariot had but two horses; and all these were destroyed in the Red Sea.

And now in our day and country, certain "progressive" Americans suggest that though there may have been Arab horses, and they may have been good enough a long time ago, they are not such as would be suited to our modern conditions and American climate. The greater part of such people probably never saw an Arab horse.

In other lands the Arabian horse is sought after and valued at his true worth. The Hungarian Government has a stud of Arab horses at Babolna established in 1790. In their official account of this stud, the Hungarian Department of Agriculture tells us,—"The original purpose for which the stud at Babolna was established, was that it might breed foundation stock (animaux reproducteurs) that could contribute a progressive element in raising the quality of its horses."

In France the government also uses Arab blood for "raising the quality of its horses." In 1906 the Republic had 579 such animals, pure bred or half bred, in its government studs.

In Austria, the famous Lipizzan horses, the oldest established breed next to the Arab, near Trieste (from which place the breed takes its name, since that stud was established in 1585. As Austria and Hungary, however, are joined under a common ruler, Emperor Francis Joseph, most of their cavalry horses come from Hungary. Baron Slatin—brother of the famous Slatin Pasha—told the writer of these lines, in 1911: "We believe the horses bred in Hungary are the best cavalry mounts in the world. They are not too large, and have a great proportion of Arab blood in them."

In the great Russian Imperial Strelski stud, devoted to horses of Eastern blood, they had four hundred and eight breeding animals, eighty-five of them pure Arabs, in 1889.

Italy, since the days of Giovanni de la Branle Nere, the greatest of the Medician generals, has never missed an opportunity to secure Arabian blood. Christopher Hare, in his "Romance of a Medici Warrior" tells us that Giovanni, writing to his agent Fortunati, from his camp at Pesaro, under date of April 14, 1517, says: "And besides, I am badly mounted. You must send me the best and finest Arab horses that you can get in Florence, for mine are all out of condition."

Of him Hare tells us: "In this war he would replace the heavy cavalry, the cumbersome armor, the slow massive horses which it required, by light, active Arab horses, easily managed and full of spirit, ridden by agile men lightly equipped."

We also learn that, at Vaprio, "He was riding that splendid white Arab horse, Sultan—who was to survive him and never suffer another rider—and he turned his head toward the rushing torrent; the noble animal leaped into the river and swam across, his master sitting firmly on the saddle with his lance at rest."

So today also, the Italian Government secures every pure Arab they can lay hands on, having agents in the east at all times to procure them. In 1903 they had fifty-five pure Arab stallions in the Italian royal stud.

Turkey had, in 1900, four studs of horses, for producing cavalry horses, one at Schitteler (where were fifty-five pure-bred Arabs, eleven half-breds, thirteen Hungarians, and eleven Russian stallions, with six hundred brood mares), another at Sultan Lou, in the province of Harpoot, one at Tchou Korova, province of Adana, one at Vezirle, near Bagdad. The raison d'etre of the last, especially, is plainly asserted: "The object of this stud is to promote the breeding of the best Arab strains."

Can it be that all these peoples are mistaken, and only those Americans are correct who assert that in these days Arabs are not good horses, they lack in endurance? Many great soldiers would differ with them, some in bygone days, some in our own times.

Washington rode a son of the Lindsey Arabian through our own war of Independence. Bonaparte pinned his faith to the white Arab, Marengo, that carried him through his campaigns in Egypt, and the freezing retreat from Russia. His stuffed skin is still preserved in Paris. Wellington would trust himself to nothing but an Arab horse. Kitchener and "Little Bobs," Field-Marshal Lord Roberts, will ride no others. Lord Roberts rode an Arab horse named Vonolel at the head of Queen Victoria's jubilee procession, and wore on his breast two medals presented to the horse by Her Majesty, one for the Afghan wars, another for his service in Africa. He carried Lord Roberts for twenty-two consecutive years through all his campaigns in Afghanistan, India, Burmah, South Africa, had covered in his campaigns 50,000 miles and never once been lame or sick. We are told that Sysobay is the greatest of all thoroughbred horses. His skeleton stands beside that of the Arab horse Nimr in the Museum of the American Society of Natural History, in New York. Sysobay is said to have won $170,000 for his owner, the late James R. Keene, and to have died an unseaten race horse. Yet secondly reached the end of his career when four years old. In winning $170,000 the total distance he ran, in all his races added one to the end of the other, was twelve and one-half miles. How does this great race horse 16.1 high, compare with Vonolel the Arab, 14.1!

The history of the XIXth Dragoons (English) who went with Kitchener to Kartoum, is familiar to all modern soldiers. They had to abandon their big English horses at Cairo, were mounted on Syrian Arabs averaging 14.1, and these carried them nine months through the desert, sometimes for seventy hours without water, with an average loss of but twelve per cent of the horses.

Col. Gore of the Innisshillen Dragoons, rode a pure Arab through the whole South African campaign. It is reported that "this horse was never sick nor sorry, lasting our four picked horses which his master brought with him from Ireland."

Many other instances proving the sagacity, endurance and soundness of these wonderful horses must be omitted that this paper go not too far beyond the limits set for its length. A single one near at home may interest readers of Our Dumb Animals.

Capt. Frank Tompkins, of the Eleventh Cavalry, U. S. A., Superintendent of Military Instruction at Norwich University, Northfield, Vermont, tried a little Arab he has, on the thirtieth of October, 1912, over the hills of Vermont.

Having occasion to go to Fort Ethan Allen, Burlington, Capt. Tompkins rode the five-year-old Arab horse Razzia fifty miles in the morning, attended to his business at Fort Ethan Allen, and rode him back to Northfield the same day. The horse carried one hundred and seventy-five pounds on his back, the entire time on the road was fifteen hours, thirty minutes, and he was never distressed. The next morning he was in condition to repeat his feat. As he had no special preparation for the test, and several showers during the day made the road slippery, it would surely be to the breed of American horses that might contribute something useful to the breed of American horses.

He would appear to measure up to the description Capt. W. A. Kerr, V. C., gives to Arab horses, as animals "whose blood (no matter in what channel directed, or with what plebeian puddle mingled) has ever brought improvement in some shape or other, but mainly in respect of quality, stamina, nervous energy, ivory-like bone, tough hoof, and hereditary soundness."—From "Our Dumb Animals."

MATE BRAM HAS BEEN RELEASED.

Boston, August, 28—Faultless behavior for seventeen years in the federal prison at Atlantic, during which he has been a great force for good, according to Warden Moyer has convinced the government authorities that Thomas M. C. Bram, convicted of a triple murder on the high seas, is an innocent man, and as a result he was set free today on the parole system. The government acted under the new law which extends terms of parole to life men.

Bram was tried in the United States district court in Boston twice and both times was found guilty.

He was a mate of the Maine barkentine Herbert Fuller which in 1896 left Boston laden with lumber for South America. One night Captain Nash, his wife and the first mate had been killed.

A sailor, Charles Brown, and Bram were both under suspicion and were taken from Halifax, N. S., to Boston for trial. Brown declared that Bram was the guilty man. Friends enlisted in Bram's behalf, and a few days ago his application for parole was favorably acted upon. Everybody liked him and the warden was glad to aid in getting him his freedom.

Brown accused me falsely, said Bram solemnly today. I do not know who committed the crime, but I hope to know some day. I know only that I did not do it.

ADVANTAGE OF SHADE

The deleterious effect of sunlight are all too often lost sight of, and it is a common occurrence in a Canadian city to see eggs, meat and other comestibles exposed in store windows to the rays of the sun. Eggs in particular will deteriorate very rapidly in quality when exposed to the sunlight, although the same thing holds good of canned goods, meats and ripe fruits.

In spite of the fact that the advantage of shade have frequently been clearly pointed out and are generally recognized, many shopkeepers do not seem to consider this matter worthy of attention.

The erection of an awning is a simple matter, and one which is in the highest degree advantageous where food stuffs are concerned.—W. L. C.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 10, 1913.

The Scientific American, a little time since, presented to its readers for their solution the problem of overcome the wind pressure upon the portion of one of the great Atlantic liners above the water, when the vessel is facing an ordinary gale.
Many answers were received but generally they were from fifty to seventy percent below the correct estimate.
The paper of the 30th ult. says that "the question is of serious economic importance will be understood when we state that our investigation of the problem shows that in a trans-Atlantic liner of the largest size, say,
of one hundred feet beam, nine hundred and fifty feet length, and let us say sixty thousand horsepower, no less than twenty per cent of the horse power, or about twelve thousand,
would be consumed in overcoming lead wind resistance when the ship was steaming at fifteen knots against a sixty-five mile gale,—and we believe this estimate is, if anything, rather below than above the actual amount."

The question is one of great practical importance, not only in relation to shipping, but, also in relation to the building of bridges, skyscrapers, and all structures, inasmuch as all are exposed more or less to the weight and pressure of the air.

The construction of the Panama Canal has occupied such general attention as to have kept out of sight
a very important engineering work near home, which in some respects outweighs the former. We refer to the widening and deepening of the Ambrose Channel at the entrance of the harbor of New York. This Channel is only about one-third the size of the Panama Canal, but twenty-seven millions of tons of shipping, not including the coastwise traffic, pass through it annually, while it is estimated that not more than ten millions of tons will pass through the Canal annually for many years to come.

The work at Panama has been much less difficult because it has been done upon the surface, while the work at the Channel has been done under water. The mud and even stones of considerable size have been sucked up from the bottom into immense dredges which have been conveyed to the ocean, and their contents deposited in the deep water. Each of these dredges has carried a load, which would have required upon the land a train of cars a mile long to hold it.

The width of this excavated Channel is two thousand feet, the depth below the mean low water mark forty feet, and the length seven miles.

The army engineers have reported the work as completed, excepting a few minor details.

The Salvation Army of the United States is about to enter upon a new undertaking. It is about to establish a "University of Humanity," with branches in New York and Chicago.
The intention is to select from the ranks persons who give evidence of special aptitude for special departments of the work and give them a special training for their particular duties. This undertaking represents another development in the work of the Army. A gentleman in New York who was invited by Mr. Roosevelt to make a careful investigation in the case is reported in the Outlook as saying, "There is no question as to the value of the Salvation Army. It works among the people and the classes which no one else touches. It comes in contact with and helps large masses of humanity that the churches are estranged from or do not reach.

A committee of one hundred has been formed of men and women in this town of all creeds, who approve of this scheme. This committee wishes to raise funds necessary for the building and endowment of the proposed University of Humanity. I have talked with officers of the Salvation Army and with members of this committee of one hundred and heartily approve of the plan."

It was supposed by a good number of persons that with the death of General William Booth there would be a decadence of the organization of which he was the originator and the leading spirit. But, fears are giving place to hopes and expectations that the work of the Army will expand and strengthen and become a more powerful agency than ever for the uplifting of humanity.

Strike Troubles in British Columbia

The following extracts from a letter just received from a friend who has a son and a son-in-law connected with the management of the mines at Extension, B. C., furnish a better idea of some of the results of the recent strikes than can be gathered from the papers.

In these extracts H. represents the son, and C. the son-in-law.

"You perhaps have not heard of what we have been passing through since the middle of August, because of the awful riots in British Columbia by the U. M. W. . . . H. thought he had matters under control at Extension and seemed quite hopeful, as his men were gradually coming back, and the output of the mine was gradually increasing. On the tenth of August, L. (C's wife) had most encouraging letters from her husband, and was to meet at Truro a gentleman, friend of her husband, and start on her journey across the Continent under his care, on the early morning train, when we read of the serious state of affairs at Extension, as well as other collieries. But, on Saturday morning there came a telegram from C., telling her not to leave as matters were most serious.
The mob, a thousand strong, made the raid with hardly any warning. No military protection came until next morning. In the meantime they demanded H. and the Chief of Police, but the men refused and got H. off to the bush. C. went with him but they got separated. C. reached Nanaimo at eleven o'clock after tramping
through the bush from four o'clock.
He immediately got in touch with the Military and the Police, but, in the meantime everything was in ruins.
His lovely house and C's, that had just been fitted up for his wife, were ransacked and burned. They lost everything excepting what they stood in. H's wife left with some others when the warning first came. She saved only her jewelry and a few toilet articles she took with her, and the clothing she wore, and to reach Victoria she was obliged to go from plate to plate, friends meeting her on the way. Six or seven days passed before she knew of H's whereabouts.
You can imagine her anxiety and distress during these days. She did not expect to see him again, but God spared him and he is recovering from his fatigue. He had a guide, a rifle and provisions with him. But he has not yet told us what his experiences were. He and his wife were so happy in their new home and had taken so much pleasure in fitting up the grounds. His last letter told us of a hedge of sweet peas he had planted to hide an unsightly fence. What horrible things these strikes are, bred and born in the United States. Would you think such a state of things could be possible in Canada?" —Ed.
Monitor.

Much to the indignation of fellow passengers Mr. Wyatt was made to strip off his clothing and undergo a probing process at the hands of the medical officer.

Such is the statement of a Montreal correspondent to the Toronto Globe. If it be correct the officer cannot be dismissed too quickly.

FALL EXCURSIONS TO MONTREAL

Montreal is always a city of interest and especially so in early autumn when the weather is enjoyable, the many stores crowded with seasonable novelties, and the places of amusement in full swing. A visit there at this time of year cannot be otherwise than enjoyable, and with the very low fares prevailing on the Intercolonial Railway in connection with the annual Fall Excursions, the round trip can be made more cheaply than at any other time. On September 11, 12 and 13, the round trip fare from Truro will be $14.50, tickets good for return September 29. On September 25, 26 and 27 the same rates will prevail with the return limit October 13. Travellers from the Maritime Provinces have the choice of two of the finest trains on the con-

GRANVILLE.

SHOULD BE DISMISSED.

A. C. Wyatt, the distinguished British painter who is settling in the Annapolis Valley, was subjected to inexcusable indignities by the customs authorities at Quebec. In vain he assured the medical officers at Quebec that he was not a pauper, that he came to Canada on the invitation of the representative of the Nova Scotia government in London, that he had with him a sufficient amount of money to complete the payment upon a farm he had purchased and that his paintings are being exhibited at the fairs in both Toronto and Halifax.

Much to the indignation of fellow
passengers Mr. Wyatt was made to strip off his clothing and undergo a
probing process at the hands of the
medical officer.

Ottawa, Aug. 23.—After negotiations which have extended over a lengthy period an agreement has been reached between the Canadian and British governments approving the latest draft of the proposed bill creating a uniform imperial naturalization.

It will be passed by the British house next session and in all probability concurrent legislation whereby Canada will adhere to it, will be passed by the Canadian house.

There will thus be removed an anomaly of long standing. The subject was discussed with the British authorities when the cabinet ministers were in London last summer and there was considerable subsequent correspondence, various drafts were submitted and finally one to which the Canadian government is agreeable has been drawn. The most important provision is that which prescribes five years' residence in the empire and the last year of the five in the United Kingdom as the qualifying conditions to naturalization.

A similar act will doubtless be passed at Ottawa and also in the other dominions, but a point not to be lost sight of is that the adoption of such measures designed to attain an imperial end will in no way affect the operation of the Canadian naturalization and any specific limitations it may impose. What it will do however, is to overcome the much discussed and oftentimes embarrassing condition of things whereby neither a Canadian naturalized subject going to Canada can acquire by reason of such naturalization the full status and rights of citizenship.

The subject has been discussed for many years at imperial conferences and elsewhere and not infrequently has been debated in the house here. The basis of agreement reached is thus the cause of much satisfaction.

THE WESTERN FINANCIAL CONDITIONS NOT WORSE THAN ELSEWHERE.

Winnipeg, August 22.—The financial situation in western Canada has never been any more acute than in the older countries of the world, according to an opinion expressed this morning by H. V. Meredith, vice-president and general manager of the Bank of Montreal. Mr. Meredith is making a tour of inspection of western Canada, accompanied by Mrs. Meredith, J. B. Allan, K. C., and L. Meredith, of London, Ont.

"There has been no greater stringency here," Mr. Meredith said, "than there has been in Berlin, Vienna and London. It is a worldwide condition. At all times there have been spells when money has been tight, and there is no particular significance in this one."

Mr. Meredith is highly gratified to hear reports from all sides that the crop conditions are so favorable in western Canada.

The implicit confidence that many people have in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is founded on their experience in the use of that remedy and their knowledge of the many remarkable cures of colic diarrhoea and dysentery that it has effected. For sale by all dealers.

THE BOY

"The boy, the devil, and you," is the rather sensational title of an article by J. Manners Howe, in the "Pall Mall Magazine." Mr. Howe draws a grim picture indeed of "the progress from school to the industrial scrap heap," which is the lot of a vast proportion of the boy population of the United Kingdom. Every year more than 200,000 boys pass out of the elementary schools of England and Wales. The system of education to which the boy has been subjected has had no practical relation to his after life. One kind of job seems to him as good as another, and he becomes a van boy, errand boy, or newspaper seller, the majority of these occupations closing automatically with boyhood's years. Even more hapless is the fate of the slum boy whose parents are too poverty stricken to feed or clothe him properly. He cannot even attain the rank of errand boy, but shrouds his half-penny papers or betting sheets, the latter especially drawing him in to deeper and deeper degradation. There is a creature of prey who haunts the streets of Old Country cities known as "the copper bookie," who takes the boys' pennies in bets. The newsboy often acts as "pilot fish" to this shark, and so suffers both as a victim and a minor partner in the dirty business. Another and related rascal is the "gutter usurer," who follows in the track of the betting man, and lends sixpences and shillings at exorbitant interest to boys who have become involved in betting troubles.

When the boys become old enough for adult employment they have lost the adaptability of youth and have no experience of any trade. Some have the courage and initiative to overcome this disability, but of the seventy or eighty per cent of boys who, on leaving school, enter unskilled or blind alley occupations, a very large proportion join in the ominous and ceaseless flow toward the low skilled and casual labor market, and there are very many who do not even qualify for casual laboring. They join the idle bands of defiant and masterless youths, who, while doing no visible work, yet seem able to supply themselves with the cheap cigarette and entrance money to places of amusement, cheap picture palaces, music halls, and football matches, which, with racing topics, form their sole apparent interest. So they almost inevitably drift into the hopeless army of the unemployable, and become, in turn, the fathers or the instructors of others who follow them upon the highway of degradation. When, however, one of these lads commits a regular criminal offence and falls into the hands of the police, society becomes interested in him, teaches him a trade, looks after his mental and physical development, and under the Borstal system, upon his release, assists him in obtaining employment and sees that he keeps in work and good company.

MILK WILL KEEP SWEET LONGER IN BOTTLES MADE OF RED GLASS.

That light is detrimental to the conservation of milk is well known; lately, however, it has been discovered that the violet rays are the most detrimental, while the red rays are beneficial. Sterilized and unsterilized milk, if in plain glass bottles, "turn" equally quick when exposed to sunlight.

The claim that the use of red glass or red paper wrappings is of advantage is being investigated by Canadian dairy companies, experimental farms and agricultural colleges. If true it may be found desirable to deliver milk in the coloured bottles which are now generally used for butter-milk. Investigation along these lines would be neither difficult nor expensive to carry on and might prove of advantage.—W. L. C. in Conservation.

DANCING TURKEY TROT.

Considered Disorderly in Germany.
Munich, Aug. 30.—That dancing the turkey trot constitutes disorderly conduct is the decision of one of the high German Courts at Teplitz, a summer health resort, twenty-six miles from Munich, a Berlin merchant and a young woman were arrested for dancing the turkey trot in a public dance hall. The lower court acquitted the prisoners, but the prosecuting attorney, appealed to the District Attorney which found them guilty and sentenced them to pay a fine.

The defendants then appealed to the High Courts of Bavaria, pointing out that no Bavarian law forbids turkey trotting. The High Courts, however, confirmed the ruling of the district court, declaring the question to be not whether the turkey trot is forbidden, but whether the couple were guilty of disorderly conduct.

Few, if any, medicines, have met with the uniform success that has attended the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The remarkable cures of colic and diarrhoea which it has effected in almost every neighborhood have given it a wide reputation. For sale by all dealers.

Prominent People Proud To Testify For "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. TIMOTHY MCGRATH

130 ATLANTIC AVE., MONTREAL, MARCH 1st, 1912.

"For years, I suffered from Rheumatism, being unable to work for weeks at a time and spent hundreds of dollars on doctor's medicines, besides receiving treatment at Notre Dame Hospital where I was informed that I was incurable. I was discouraged when a friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. After using three packages, I felt relieved and continued until I had used five packages when a complete cure was the result after years of doctoring failed. I consider 'Fruit-a-tives' a wonderful remedy. You are at liberty to use this testimonial to prove to others the good that 'Fruit-a-tives' has done me."

COPPERS IN CALGARY.

Copper coinage has found a home in Calgary, and the coppers have come to stay, says the Albertan. That marks an epoch in our commercial life. They have been introduced from time to time but were not very successful.

The truth is that we despised coppers because we rather scorned small economies. We preferred to pay the extra four cents rather than carry a piece of brown metal about with us. We thought in real estate sub-divisions and were wasteful. We have changed somewhat. We are learning that to economize is not to make ourselves happiness, but to act with some sort of reason and common sense.

For instance, our householders are learning that they can save money by patronizing the Calgary market, and are beginning to take some interest in economies, both small and large.

Flunping up and down stairs, sweeping and bending over making beds will not make a woman healthy or beautiful. She must get out of doors, walk a mile or two every day and take Chamberlain's Tablets to improve her digestion and regulate her bowels. For sale by all dealers.

THE SPAN OF LIFE.

In the middle ages the average span of human life was about thirty years. The startling prophecy that man would some time only begin to understand life at one hundred does not seem so unreasonable, perhaps, when we consider the span of life allotted to vegetables and to animals. There exists at the present time in the Island of Cyprus a tree which was planted two hundred and eighty years before Christ. In the suburbs of Athens travellers are shown the olive tree of Plato, which is two thousand years old. The plantain tree of Hippocrates, the father of medicine, is 2,300 years old, while the giant redwood trees of California are estimated to have lived at least twenty centuries. Tourists in Hildesheim, Germany, are never allowed to pass the famous so-called "1,000 year rose bush" in the cathedral.

The list of legendary trees might be indefinitely extended and world trees include the chestnuts of Etra, the walnut trees of St. Nicholas in Lorena, the olives of Jerusalem, the yew trees of Yorkhire, England, which are 1,000, 2,000 and 2,500 years old and the cypress of Mexico, which are considered the oldest trees in the world.

These figures are taken from the data of Dr. Legend, a well-known French naturalist. He also points out singular differences in the longevity of animals of varying species. The crocodile and the carp live, he says, three hundred years, the elephant and the whale two hundred, the falcon one hundred and fifty, the parrot and the eagle one hundred, the lion and the rhinoceros sixty, the goose, common pike and pelican fifty, the ass, bull and camel thirty, the pig, cow, pigeon, cat, dog, deer, wolf and the fresh-water lobster twenty, the duck, nightingale, lark, fox and pheasant fifteen, the canary and the cricket average ten, the rabbit lives eight, the squirrel and hare seven.

Insects which undergo metamorphosis live usually from one to two years and there are flies whose span of life is one day. Nature, it will be seen, shows man no special favor or disfavour among the animals. The great epidemics which have disappeared at the edict of science together with intelligence in the matter of living, are the chief causes which are favoring and will in the future favor man's longevity.

English statistics show that women born of large families live to the greatest age. The United States census in 1890 showed seventy-seven women and thirty-four men over ninety years of age.—Exchange.

POTATO SALAD.

The potatoes used may be either boiled or baked and the salad should be mixed while the potatoes are warm as the flavors of the ingredients of the dish blend better than when mixed cold. Peel four baked potatoes while warm and cut in small cubes. Add one small cucumber, half an onion and one stalk of celery or a little radish chopped fine. A quarter of a cup of nut meats may be used also if liked. Cover with salad dressing, mix well together and set away in a cool place until needed.

A ROYAL TESTOTALLER.

The Berlin despatches of Aug. 22nd proclaim the fact that the Emperor of Germany has joined the ranks of the testotallers, and that his favorite drink is now lemonade, with a dash of orange juice.

It is reported that the Kaiser did not touch any alcoholic beverages throughout his northern cruise. Persons who are in close contact with him say that this is the result of the Emperor's conviction that alcohol lessens the working capacity of a man. He often expresses the opinion to members of his entourage that immoderate drinking is one of the greatest factors in retarding the development of nations.

Some time ago the Kaiser demanded the latest alcoholic statistics which resulted from immoderate drinking, accidents, and crimes, drinking. After a study of these statistics he experimented on himself, and found that even small quantities of liquor lessened his energies and capacity for work, whereupon, with characteristic impulsiveness, he cut alcohol entirely. He never misses an opportunity to descant on the value of temperance, and the result is that the members of his suite who like their wine, touch it lightly when dining in his presence.

While he was swearing in the naval recruits at Wilhelmshaven recently, the Emperor took occasion to deliver a lecture on temperance and drank a toast to water. He also recently told army officers who asked if there would be any objections if his health were drunk in water, that, on the contrary, he would be well pleased.—Westlyan.

A friend of Mark Twain once asked him if he remembered the first money he earned.

"Yes," he said, "it was at school, and a very painful recollection it is, too. There was a rule in our school that any boy marking his desk, either with pencil or knife, would be chastised publicly before the whole school or pay a fine of $5. Besides the rule there was a ruler; I knew it because I had felt it; it was a hard one, too."

"One day I had to tell my father that I had broken the rule and had to pay a fine or take a public whipping, and he said: 'Sam, it would be too bad to have the name of Clemens disgraced before the whole school, so I'll pay the fine. But I don't want you to lose anything, so come upstairs.' 'A few minutes later I came down with a bad feeling and the $5, and I decided that as I had been punished once, and got used to it, I would not mind getting the other linc at school. So I did and kept the $5.'"

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. T. at such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best for coughs, colds and croup and is my best seller." For sale by all dealers.

BUTTERMILK PIE.

Beat together a heaping cup of sugar and four eggs, add half a cup of butter, beat very well, then add one and a half pints of fresh butter-milk, line the pie tins with pastry, slice an apple thin and lay in each pie, fill the crust with the mixture and bake with no upper crust.

PACKING EGGS IN SALT.

To preserve eggs, an old way was to take nice, fresh eggs, some white-wash and a brush, and paint the egg all over, giving them a good thick coating of the wash. After they are dry, pack them in salt, with the small end down, covering with salt each layer and putting in layer after layer until the box is full. Cover with several inches of salt on top. When you wish to use, take them out of the box, wash off and wipe dry with a soft towel. The lime fills the pores of the shell and preserves the contents. Some advise that dipping the egg in the white wash serves the same purpose as brushing it.

KEEP AIR TIGHT.

Many housekeepers have trouble with keeping airtight anything that is put up in jars. If, however, after a bottle or jar is corked it is sealed with a mixture of beeswax and rosin there is no danger of air getting at it. To make this sealing mixture put two ounces of rosin in a small tin can, which is then set in a larger pan of hot water. Stir constantly until the wax and rosin are well blended. Apply while still liquid to the outside of the corked jar or bottle.

Summer drinks are often too sweet for the masculine taste, but a lime-ade made with juice of limes, three of the latter to one large glass, and sugar to suit, can be tart as desired. Fill the glass half full of shaved ice, then with water or carbonated water and serve with a straw.

ABOUT THE HOUSE.

If you desire to obtain a beautiful lustre on cut glass, try washing it in two quart of fairly hot water to which one tablespoonful of turpentine has been added and you will find the results are very satisfactory.

When greasing a cake pan use sweet lard rather than butter. The cake will not be so likely to stick to the pan.

When beating the whites of eggs be careful that there is no grease on the beater, as it will prevent the eggs from frothing.

For those who use many herbs in cooking it will be found a good plan to make up many tiny bags of cheese-cloth. Fill these with herbs, tie securely and keep in a covered can or jar. When making soup or sauces a bag of the mixed herbs is convenient to use.

Where dishes are washed in the sink stretch a piece of white rubber tubing about two inches long, over the ends of the faucets, letting it extend about two inches below. This will prevent the breaking and nicking of china that is caused by striking them against the faucets.

Paint marks can be removed by soaking them a short time in benzine and turpentine, then rubbing them with emery paper or a little pulverized pumice stone.

If dumplings are kept boiling steadily from the time they are in the pot until they are taken out they will be much lighter. Do not take the lid off oftener than necessary.

To remove rust from steel, cover it with sweet oil and let it remain covered for a day, then rub it with a lump of fresh lime and it will then polish in the ordinary way.

To prevent an iron sink getting rusty, wipe it dry and rub it with a cloth dampened with kerosene.

Wipe out the laundry tubs after each wash day with a cloth, using either kerosene or a good cleansing powder.

If a square piece of board measuring a foot across is fitted with casters at each corner it will be found of the greatest convenience when scrubbing the floor or the piazza. The scrubbing pail may be moved along instead of having to be lifted.

A novel idea for hat hangers is the following: screw up hooks to the ceiling of your clothes closets. Then fasten strong cord to them, the length to be measured by the space allowed to hang the hats. Then to the end of the cord fasten a safety pin, to use in pinning to whichever part of the hat it is most convenient so it can hang loose and free, to save the hat and trimmings from getting muddled and broken.

To soften brushes which become dry and hard, heat some vinegar to boiling point, immerse the brushes and allow them to simmer for ten minutes then wash in strong soapuds.

POORLY PRINTED.

"My wife is learning to cook by cook book."
"How are things coming out?"
"The book must be full of typographical errors, judging by the way things turn out."

Young Lawyer (having passed his exams.)—"Well, I'm glad its over. I've been working to death the last few years trying to get my legal education."

Old Lawyer—"Well, cheer up, my boy; it'll be a long time before you have any more work to do."

The old family physician being away on a much-needed vacation his practice was intrusted to his son, a recent medical graduate. When the old man returned the youngster told him, among other things, that he had cured Miss Ferguson, an aged and wealthy spinster, of her chronic indigestion.

"My boy," said the old doctor, "I'm proud of you; but Miss Ferguson's indigestion is what put you through college."

WHAT A PAIR!

John D. Rockefeller tells this story of himself.

"Golfing one bright winter day I had for caddie a boy who didn't know me.

"An unfortunate stroke landed me in a clump of high grass.

"My, my," I said, "what am I to do now?"

"See that tree?" said the boy, pointing to a tall tree a mile away. "Well, drive straight for that."

"I lofted vigorously, and, fortunately, my ball soared up into the air; it landed, and it rolled right on to the putting green.

"How's that, my boy?" I cried.

"The caddie started at me with envious eyes.

"'Gee, boss,' he said, 'if I had your strength and you had my brains what a pair we'd make!'"

IT COUNTED WITH HER.

Paderewski arrived in a small western town about noon one day and decided to take a walk in the afternoon. While strolling along he heard a piano, and, following the sound, came to a house on which was a sign reading:

"Miss Jones. Piano lessons 25 cents an hour."

Pausing to listen he heard the young woman trying to play one of Chopin's nocturnes, and not succeeding very well.

Paderewski walked up to the house and knocked. Miss Jones came to the door and recognized him at once. Delighted, she invited him in and he sat down and played the nocturne as only Paderewski can, afterward spending an hour in correcting her mistakes. Miss Jones thanked him and he departed.

Some months afterward he returned to the looking at the sign, he read:

"Miss Jones. Piano lessons $1.00 an hour. (Pupil of Paderewski.)"

WHEN NYE HELPED RILEY.

Bill Nye and James Whitcomb Riley, when they were giving readings together, were on a train one day when Nye abstracted Riley's ticket stuck in the hand being laid on the seat between them.

"They'll want our tickets here, Jim," said Nye casually, and Riley began an exhaustive search for his missing ticket. When he had searched everywhere at least ten times over, and looked on seat and floor again and again, but in vain, he exclaimed: "Say, Nye, I have lost my ticket! They'll make me pay over again."

"Pay over again!" said Nye. "I wouldn't. I'd see them hanged first. You get under the seat, Jim, and it will be all right."

So Riley got under the seat and lay there gasping with nervousness as the ticket collector came to the compartment.

"Tickets, please," said the conductor. Nye handed the man two tickets.

"Two tickets here, sir! Where's the other gentleman?"

"Oh," replied Nye nonchalantly, "the other gentleman prefers to travel under the seat."

And from under the seat came poor Riley ignominiously and as mad as a wet hen.

THE END OF THE WAY.

My life is a wearisome journey, I'm sick of the dust and the heat, The rays of the sun beat upon me, The briars are wounding my feet. But the city to which I am hastening Will more than my trials repay; All the toils of the road will be nothing When I get to the end of the way.

There are so many hills to climb upward, I often am longing for rest. But He who appoints me my pathway Knows just what is needed and best. I know in His Word He has promised That my strength shall be as my day And the toils of the road will seem nothing When I get to the end of the way.

He loves me too well to forsake me, Or give me one trial too much; All His people have been dearly purchased, And Satan can never claim such. By and by I shall see Him and praise Him In the city of unending day. And the toils of the road will seem nothing When I get to the end of the way.

When the last feeble step has been taken, And the gates of the City appear, And the beautiful song of the angels Floats out on my listening ear, When all that now seems so mysterious Will be plain and clear as the day, Yes, the toils of the road will seem nothing When I get to the end of the way.

Though now I am footsore and weary I shall rest when I'm safely at home. I know I'll receive a glad welcome For the Saviour Himself has said "Come."

So when I am weary in body And sinking in spirit, I say, All the toils of the road will seem nothing When I get to the end of the way.

Cooling fountains are there for the thirsty, There are cordials for those who are faint, There are robes that are whiter and purer Than any that fancy can paint. Then I'll try to press hopefully onward, Thinking often through each weary day All the toils of the road will seem nothing When I get to the end of the way.

It earns twice over every dollar it receives, and it is second to no enterprise in contributing to the upbuilding of the community. Its patrons reap far more benefit from its pages than its publishers, and, calling for the support of the community in which it is published it asks for no more than what in all fairness belongs to its, though generally it receives less. Patronize and help your local paper as you would any other enterprise, because it helps you, and not as an act of charity.

QUEBEC'S WONDERFUL PAPER INDUSTRY.

Some remarkable figures relating to the growth of the paper industry in the Province of Quebec have just been published by Mr. A. G. McIntyre, the late secretary of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association. He states that Canada is now producing 1,300 tons of new print paper per day. Of this the Province of Quebec is producing no fewer than 685 tons, while Ontario turns out 485, and British Columbia 150. Last year the increase in tonnage in the production of news print in Canada was 430 tons per day. So far this year an additional 235 tons has come on the market and this will be increased by another 390 tons per day by the end of the present year. These figures compare with an increased production in the United States for 1912 of only 235 tons per day, and for the present year an increase of 110 tons. At the present time Canada is exporting to the United States at the rate of six hundred tons of news print a day, which is ninety-eight per cent of the total export of pulpwood from Crown lands—a policy quickly appreciated and adopted by the other provinces of the Dominion. Here is an industry which is native to the soil—one which means the development of some of the greatest natural resources which we have. The Province of Quebec with its magnificent profusion of water powers, its satisfactory labor market, and its great forest reserves should be the greatest manufacturing centre on this continent in time. No other province is so rich in all that goes to the making of a great industrial future. There has been not a little pressure by interested parties on both sides of the international boundary with a view to get this embargo lifted. Recently the matter came to a head when there was a threat of retaliation duties by the United States. Sir Lomer Gouin has made it known, however, that under no circumstances will he consent to the raising of the embargo on the export of Crown Lands pulpwood. His firmness in this matter will give satisfaction to all interested in the welfare of the provinces. It resulted in the bottom being knocked out of the bluff that was put up in Washington, and now there is every prospect that the new tariff in the United States will continue the policy of allowing the importation of news print free. The United States must have the paper, and as Canada, and not the States, has the reserves to draw upon, that paper must come from increasing quantities from Canada. As soon as the American tariff is settled, the paper industry in this province will enter upon a new era of expansion. The increase in output of six hundred tons of news print a day in one year as compared with an increased output of only 235 tons in the United States is significant of the future in this direction. Let us hope that not only will our Provincial Government continue to conserve our raw supplies from exploitation, but that they will carry forward their policy of conservation even more vigorously in other directions.—Montreal Daily Telegraph.

Dear Sirs,—I had a bleeding tumor on my face for a long time and tried a number of remedies without any good results. PLEASED OVER CROP OUTLOOK.

Winnipeg, Sept. 3.—George H. Shaw General Traffic Manager; R. Creelman, General Passenger Agent, and George Stephens, General Freight Agent, of the Canadian Northern Railway, returned yesterday from a personal tour of the West to obtain at first hand, information as to conditions in the wheat fields. "I have seen thirty harvests in this country, and this year's will be the equal to any of them," said Mr. Shaw this morning. "We travelled by easy stage along the Canadian Northern Lines to Garman, Wawamesa, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon to Alberta, then returning through Carleton Place, Alberta, and through the Southern, Central and Northern portions of Saskatchewan and Alberta. "At the present time I am of the opinion that fully eighty per cent of the wheat of the two Provinces is in stock, that the average for the two Provinces will be twenty bushels to the acre, and that by the middle of this month, weather permitting, there will be no wheat left standing, and new grain will be pouring in to the elevators as fast as it can be handled. There has been no frost, and the wheat will be the earliest possible to handle. "We were particularly struck with the fact that in Northern Manitoba and Alberta great strides are being made in mixed farming." GREAT JEROME ARRESTED ON GAMBLING CHARGE. Coaticook, Que., Sept. 5.—William Travers Jerome was arrested here today, charged with gambling. The complaint was made by Milford Aldridge, a citizen of Coaticook, who swore that he had seen Jerome playing poker in public yesterday. Jerome was taken to the jail where Thaw was confined when brought here two weeks ago. Thaw's lawyers disclaimed any knowledge of the arrest. The belief prevailed that it was due solely to ill feeling among the townspeople, who resented Jerome's presence. Thaw was withdrawn almost immediately and the board adjourned suddenly. It was reported that a decision had been reached.
