HEAVY FIGHTING GOING ON BETWEEN R.R. AND THE LIAO

Japanese Centre Moves and Kuruk Begins Attack on Russian Left— Oyama Wins All Along the Line.

Gunhu Pass, May 23.—Practically the entire Russian right army is engaging the Japanese west of the railway, between the Khanda and Kaak Rivers. The battle line extends beyond the old Mandarin road from Mukden to Harbin, taking in the Liao River district, and while the main forces are not in conflict it seems certain that the attack begun by General Linievich on last Friday must bring on a general engagement. Two brigades on Saturday swept the Japanese from the small villages in the Khanda River Valley, but at night the Japanese cavalry and infantry dislodged the Russian forces from the positions gained during the day.

General Martynoff, in command of the extreme Russian right, drove the Japanese forces from Tadu and routed their cavalry outposts across the Liao River at Waunau. Shortly after midnight on Sunday the Japanese estimated at two regiments of infantry, attacked with bayonets, and in a severe engagement lasting three hours forced the Russian lines northwest across the Khanda River. Reinforcements have come up on both sides, and this afternoon an armistice was proposed by the Japanese at the Shaho Valley. Many small skirmishes are in progress along the entire line southwest of this point, the Japanese attempting to force the right flank the Russian position.

Reinforced from Lia. A Russian detachment, two battalions strong, consisting of two companies of cavalry and five guns, were surprised on Saturday evening south of Chaho village in the vicinity of the railway running northeast from the Liao River. In a three-hour fight the Japanese were repulsed on two sides, and several squadrons of their cavalry appearing on the northeast, the Russian division, under General Kuroki, was compelled to retire, losing two guns and 30 men of the detachment. The Japanese seem to be bringing up considerable reinforcements west of the Liao River.

General Linievich has sent down the 2nd and 6th Siberian army corps, two Moscow regiments, the 3rd and 4th heavy cavalry and the 1st and 2nd of the Chanchun line. All the mountain ranges east and west of the railroad at the point selected by the commander-in-chief have been fortified, and it is believed that the position is as strong as that occupied by General Kuroki before the battle of Mukden.

Many Outpost Engagements. No serious fighting has occurred east of the main railway, but since Friday Japanese detachments have attacked several of the villages occupied by General Biderling's command. These were all outpost engagements. The Russian columns have steadily retired on the main positions, where the general battle undoubtedly will be fought in the next few days. It is understood among the general staff that the commander-in-chief has decided to give everything on the conflict that is now inevitable, and that he will meet the Japanese forces in his present position.

Mr. Aylesworth's Argument for the Bell Before the Telephone Committee Is Rebutted—Mayer Urquhart as a Witness.

Ottawa, May 23.—The telephone committee is working overtime these days. The numbers of witnesses yet to be heard, and the enormous mass of evidence to be sifted and digested by the members of this important body has made it necessary to sit practically night and day. It is the obvious intention of the government to introduce legislation this session dealing with the subject, and matters are now being rushed. To-day the committee started at 10 o'clock, and with a slight adjournment for lunch sat through the afternoon and is sitting to-night.

Before Mayor Urquhart of Toronto was placed in the box Mr. Aylesworth made a short examination, conducted chiefly by Mr. Maclean, who wished to know the reasons for the discrimination in rates in towns of about the same population. The president of the Bell explained that the value of the exchange in a town depended not so much on population as on the number of subscribers. Hamilton and Ottawa were given by Mr. Maclean as a type of discrimination. The rates for business phones were the same, but Hamilton was charged $30 for private phones, while Ottawa got off with $25.

Mr. Aylesworth made a matter of fact statement. Mr. Maclean then took up the question of interchange of business telephone lines, and Mr. Aylesworth stated that the Bell would not refuse if the lines were standardized and non-competitive. Mr. Maclean asked whether, however, that a large amount of evidence had been heard which would show that the Bell refused interchange of lines, and that delimitation of working territory of the independent systems was frequently a stumbling block placed in the way of such interchange by the Bell.

There was a lively passage of arms at this juncture regarding the exclusive contracts with the railway companies. Mr. Maclean took the side of Mr. Aylesworth, and accused the member for the South of asking irrelevant questions on what was really a matter of law. Mr. Zimmermann of Hamilton, who was acting chairman, upheld Mr. Maclean, and said it was the general opinion that the widest possible scope should be given in eliciting facts.

Advocate of it. He favored the railway commission as a tribunal to solve a difficult question. Sir William Mulock: Suppose the Bell Company have today the power under their incorporation to take possession of the highways without municipal consent, and suppose the company exercised some of these rights and left others unexercised, what would you suggest in that instance?

Mr. Dewar: The rights acquired by not Sir ELEANOR'S FAULT.

Ottawa, May 23.—(Special.)—Colonel Hanbury Williams, secretary to the governor-general, announced that the commission to notify the senate of the house of commons last week that Sir Eleanore had been authorized to assent to bills was due to an error in the part of government house, for which the chief justice was in no way responsible.

TOLEDO, O., May 23.—(Special.)—Speaking of the proposed enforcement of the alien labor laws by the Canadian government, General Manager Russell Harding of the Pere Marquette said: "I do not see how the Canadian government can enforce these laws, as their enforcement would mean the deportation of a majority of the leading railroad officials in Canada, as most of them are Americans. Why, Charles M. Hays, the mainstay of the Grand Trunk, and perhaps the greatest railroad man in the world, would come under the ban, and would have to cross the border."

Charles Fitzpatrick in reference to the deportation of 15 employees of the Pere Marquette Railway as a result of Judge Winchester's report. ELEVATOR FOR MIDLAND

Montreal, May 23.—(Special.)—It was stated to-day in circles which are regarded as well and truly informed, that the Grand Trunk Railway have, after considerable investigation, finally decided on the erection of a million dollar steel grain elevator at Midland. Work will be commenced as soon as possible.

City, city collector of Ottawa, and A. W. Atwater, K.C., Montreal. Mr. Lighthall spoke of the intervention particularly in regard to the control of streets. Not only was the continual tearing up of the streets, owing to the putting down of conduits by telephone companies, a great inconvenience, but it also had an effect on the business of the street and establishments along the thoroughfares. It was imperative that if a municipality were to obtain a definite control of the streets it should stop a large company like the Bell on its borders and make a definite bargain on a commercial basis. The remedy was control by a bylaw voted on by the people, of the operations of all the companies in the streets of a city.

Sir William Mulock asked Mr. Lighthall what he would propose to solve the deadlock between any municipality and company. What tribunal could be called on?

Mr. Lighthall suggested any tribunal proposed by the government. The railway commission would not be objected to. The present system was chaotic. Mr. Maclean said there were companies with federal charters which controlled such as telephone and telegraph companies. The charters should be granted under conditions which the cities were parties. Mr. Lighthall said the multiplication of charters giving companies power to come into the streets was a great drawback.

Mr. Maclean instanced the case of Glasgow, which was in the superior position she held to-day because of her complete control of her streets and all companies desiring to exploit them. Hartley Dewar followed on behalf of Toronto. The telephone business was of a dual character. The present trouble was due to the trunk system being run by the same regulations applied to local systems. If the trunk system passed under the control of the government, the municipality should control the local system within its limits. He favored the railway commission as a tribunal to solve a difficult question.

SAYS HAYS WILL HAVE TO GO IF A NEW LAW IS ENFORCED. President of Pere Marquette Also Intimates That Canucks Don't Fill the Bill.

TOLEDO, O., May 23.—(Special.)—Speaking of the proposed enforcement of the alien labor laws by the Canadian government, General Manager Russell Harding of the Pere Marquette said: "I do not see how the Canadian government can enforce these laws, as their enforcement would mean the deportation of a majority of the leading railroad officials in Canada, as most of them are Americans. Why, Charles M. Hays, the mainstay of the Grand Trunk, and perhaps the greatest railroad man in the world, would come under the ban, and would have to cross the border."

HOW YOU MAY REALLY ENJOY FIRST OF OUTDOOR HOLIDAYS

Victoria Day is really the opening of what might be called the out-of-doors season, and with the bright skies and the weather, Toronto's citizens, their wives and families may be depended upon to enter with zest into the holiday spirit. Many will leave the city by boat and rail, but more will content themselves with visits to the parks or to the island. It is expected by the steamboat men that at least 6000 or 7000 people will seek old Lake Ontario breezes. There are two large excursions booked for to-day, one by the Argyle to Okaville, and another by the Lakeside and Garden City to Niagara Falls. The Argyle will carry the headquarters staff of the Salvation Army with their friends, and it is anticipated that on the two trips leaving at 7.30 and 11 a.m., 1500 people will be carried. Winchester Lodge, I.O.O.F., supplies the only other excursion of the day, and will probably number several hundred.

The management of the Ferry Co. have made abundant preparations for the rush to the island that is bound to come. Last year over 25,000 people crossed the bay on the holiday, and it is thought that 30,000 will be attracted to-day, when the vaudeville season opens with an entertainment presenting novel features, while other popular attractions have been provided.

The Street Railway Company are making ready for an unexampled traffic for Victoria Day, the steady growth during the past year having prepared the officials for a record to-day that will go one better than the previous year. The entertainment season swings into line at Munro Park to-day, and that popular resort will see a rush of people to its recreation grounds. High Park, the zoo, the reservoir, Queen's Park—all these will draw their family groups, and the picnic basket will be ushered in for another year.

For the sport lover there are the Woodbine races, the ball games, morning and afternoon, and the lacrosse match at the island. Probably from 20,000 to 25,000 people will visit the haunts of the bookmakers, and the good showing of this year's bunch of ball tossers assures bumper crowds. Lacrosse has a solid foothold in Toronto, and the rivalry between Chipewas and Tecumseh assures a host of spectators when the straggled stick artists line up.

Big Time in Queen's Park When Toronto Junior Honored the Heroes of the Past.

Sunny skies, martial music and the steady tramp, tramp, of 2000 of the youth of the city marching with all discipline of trained soldiers served yesterday to bring home to the mind of the citizen the near approach of our national holiday. The sight was inspiring, and the presence of veterans happily added to the occasion.

At the Armories, where, at 1 o'clock, all was apparent confusion, at 2, the marshals had evolved perfect order, and from that time the parade of the cadets was marked by perfect regularity. The route led by way of University-avenue to Queen, to Yonge and along Grenville to the Queen's Park.

Order of march was: No. 1 battalion (following after the flower girls) high school cadets, No. 2 battalion (under command of Mr. Mcintosh) composed of Jesse Ketchum, Dovercourt, Huron, Palmerston and Borden.

No. 3 battalion (under command of Mr. Smith), comprising Dufferin, two companies, Ross, Winchester, Victoria, and Ryerson.

No. 5 battalion (under command of Mr. Blaney), Victoria, Industrial Band, Bolton, Park, Morse and Clinton schools.

No. 6 battalion (commanded by Mr. Ward), Ryerson, two companies, Phoebe, Langdowne and King Edward.

No. 7 battalion (under command of Mr. Rogers), Glens, two companies, Devon, Main and St. George's.

No. 8 battalion (under command of Mr. Carr), Parkdale, Queen Victoria, Gladstone, Fern and Brock.

At the Park. On arrival at the parliament buildings, an adjournment was made to review before his excellency and staff, and later were drawn in line to the north of the parliament buildings, when Earl Grey, accompanied by Col. Hansbury Williams, Lord Bury, Inspector Col. Byrson and J. H. Hughes, passed thru the ranks. His excellency briefly commented on the soldierly appearance of the corps, and the excellence of the marching. The commanders of the several battalions were presented to Earl Grey.
