R E P O R T.

YOUR Committee, in submitting to you a statement of the affairs and an account of the operations of the TORONTO BIBLE SOCIETY for the last year, are glad to have it again in their power to congratulate you upon the additional prosperity of the society. Persuaded that the same Divine Providence which has hitherto protected it, will protect it still against whatever prejudices and passions may assail it, and that the general experience of its beneficial effects will not only disarm opposition but bring over to its side the assistance of all good men who have any respect for our common faith, they have no apprehension whatever regarding its future prosperity. It is evident that the more generally the truth in Christ is promulgated and received, so will the duty be more commonly acknowledged of extending to others the words of eternal life, and your committee have yet to learn a more unexceptionable, a safer, and a more efficacious method of making known the truth in Christ, than that of publishing far and wide the word of God. While your committee therefore express their unfeigned thankfulness to God for mercies past, they have to invite the friends of this Society to take encouragement for the future, and to cherish with satisfaction the pleasant hope that He who has been with us in times past, and so far prospered our humble endeavours in his service, will bless us still, rendering our labours subservient to his glory, in supplying the wants of the destitute.

Your Committee have great pleasure in representing to you, the splendid success that still follows the exertions of the Parent Society. No weapon formed against her has yet been rewarded with the slightest prosperity. She still triumphs over the scorn of the infidel and the hatred of the fanatic, the apathy of the world and the violent opposition of the ignorant and deluded heathen. She owes it to that divine protection which is never wanting to give efficacy to divine truth, and to the many great and good men into whose hearts God has put the desire of maintaining his cause among mankind, that she spreads forth her boughs unto every sea, and her branches over almost every river of the habitable globe. Had it been but the excitement of novelty or any other cause dependent upon human passions, that gave birth and enlargement to the vast design contemplated by the parent Society, long ere this time, her resources would have been dried up, and the design would have been abandoned as impracticable; but it is a circumstance, the most hopeful for the destinies of man, that the truth in Christ is yet so appreciated that the means of her usefulness grow with her growth, and that her strength is renewed, as it were, day by day, insomuch that she is carrying the word of God, swiftly and certainly, into every dark corner of ignorance and superstition. The British dominions in the East Indies have long been the theatre of her strenuous exertions. She has sent the revealed will of God even into the fields of China, jealous and inhospitable as that region is. The Africans have received by her instrumentality the law and the testimony, and every nation in Europe is drinking from her fountain, not excepting Rome, Naples, and the Italian states, where, alas, bibles are but rarely seen.

That the members of the Society may have a clear and correct view of the Funds committed to their trust, and the objects to which they have been appropriated, the Committee beg leave to submit to you the following statement:

Such are the present circumstances of the Society. It is pleasant to know that it not only continues to exist, but that it maintains, amidst the excitement of eventful times, so large a degree of strength and activity. And although, in various parts of the country that have been recently visited by Mr. Black, the Agent of the Society, whose labours deserve to be mentioned with great approbation, and whose report is given with much precision and accuracy, many of the branch Societies are rather in a languishing state, there are some in which the cause has received an additional impetus. Notwithstanding the objections with which, on so many occasions, the object of Mr. Black's mission seems to have been assailed, individuals have never been wanting in every station which he visited, to express their concurrence with it, and their readiness to use their influence to revive it, and instances are recorded by him that promise a vigorous and successful effort for the circulation of the Scriptures.

Of Mr. Barclay's Mission, your Committee have just received the report: they learn with pleasure that his exertions at Peterboro have not been fruitless, and that the Branch Society instituted there gives good promise of a prosperous result; the names of many of the most influential and respectable members of that flourishing community, being to be found among the officers and supporters of it.

Your Committee have to state in regard to the Ladies' Society of Toronto, that the fund collected this season is considerably less than that collected last year, amounting to not more than £25 17s 8d. They have at the same time to express their regret that this Society has not been so active as formerly, and that some have even been disposed to give it up. They trust, however, that their recommendation to revive it will have the effect of inducing its members to resume the business of it with increased vigour and diligence.

Your Committee have great pleasure in representing to you that the Indian translation, which so long has been an object of great anxiety and interest to the Society, has, in part, been accomplished. The gospels of Matthew and John are already in circulation. The book of Genesis has also been printed in the Indian language, and is ready for distribution. 150 copies of it have been distributed among the native Indians. Your Committee have further to state, that the translation of the Scriptures into the Indian tongue, would have been yet farther advanced, had they been able to procure the co-operation of the only persons who are competent to lend them effective assistance.

Upon a review of the whole circumstances of the Society, your Committee have to say, that if the revenue of the Society has not increased to such a degree as they could desire, yet they have the comfort to know that there are many members of it who still take a deep interest in its prosperity; they have the satisfaction of being assured that there are many who understand too well, and feel too strongly, the vast importance of the object intended to be advanced, to suffer it to decline, but who, on the contrary, are resolved to increase the means of its usefulness, and give it an efficiency proportioned to the circumstances of the country.

To this description of persons we must still address our urgent application. We must still press upon them the high duty of an active compassion for the ignorance, the miseries, and moral degradation of their companions of the human species. We must still represent to them the mighty honour of being permitted to take a part in the work of dispensing the blessings of our holy religion. We must still admonish them not to despair of success, but to remember how dear to the heart of God is the redemption of men, and how he has promised to establish the kingdom of Christ in every latitude of the habitable earth. Nor must we neglect to remind them, and that with earnestness and constancy, of the reward that will certainly follow these good and blessed labours of love; for if they who turn many to righteousness shall shine like the stars for ever and ever, it need not be feared that God will be offended, if they, who, differing in other matters of opinion and persuasion, yet cordially uniting in one in order to concentrate their endeavours and to collect their means, that the larger multitude may be fed with the bread of life, should take to themselves the pleasure of a great hope, that herein they may receive the approbation of God, and the recompense of a reward. And truly if they would but give themselves the trouble to reflect, and if God would but give them the heart to feel, what a vast mercy it is, if they have been found of him that sought him not, and if Christ has made their cause his own, by making himself a sacrifice for them, they would discover sufficient reason for making his cause their's, and might be the better disposed to imitate his grace, by reaching a merciful hand to raise up some human souls sunk under the load of ignorance and sin.
