Through the Mist. What is life? A little grief, A little joy, a little pain, a smile, a sigh, a sweet refrain flower, a sadiy withered leaf—

What avalls this little stay Amid the toil, amid the strife, Amid the busy walks of life, This working on from day to day-and then—what then?

What is life? A twice told tale,

An hour of joy, a year of pain,
A litter loss, a little gain,
With none to care if we should fail,
And then—what then? A little climbing up the height

A little gazing at the skies

While smiling, and with tearful eyes,

Tatil the beauty fades from sight,

And then—what then? A little sunlight thro' the mist, A friend to love perhaps a day Of hope, so soon to pass away, An angel's voice—Oh, list, oh list! And then—what then?

In which to look, in which to wait The will of some remorseless Fate, Another boundary line to trace, And then—what then?
