To be brief now in the interest of the city, will Mr. Little please explain why he paid such an enormous sum as ten thousand dollars ($10,000) for three and fiths? Not being able to acquire the water the city having yet to settle with

This would appear to the average citizen as if there was an African in the The Redmond ponds, like the Griffiths property, has been under the consideration of the water commissioners, who have spent large sums of money in an imperfect test. They are still believed by experts to contain unlimited supplies of spring water. Mr Redmond offers, if the city pays $200 towards a thorough test, that he will bind himself to pay the balance. The test of the Pond Mills cost the city up in the thousands, with no satisfactory results. In the interest of our city I would favor the purchase of the property if it was proven to our satisfaction that it contained an unlimited supply of good water, at a reasonable price. Lacasse, of Plainfield, N. J., and it was mainly through the quick action of west true, going about 5 knots under her husband, who was alsomone of the reduced canvas. At 3 a.m. we heard passengers saved, that she is not among the missing. Mrs. Lacasse is a good-looking and good-natured lady, and she and her husband have been residing at Plainfield, N. J., about seven years. They were on their way to France to spend a few months with relatives, but Mr. Lacasse will give up the trip just now, after his recent experience.

AT FIVE IN THE MORNING. The collision occurred about 5 o'clock Monday morning, at which time Mrs. Lacasse was in her berth. The first she knew of the danger was when her husband rushed down into the cabin and steamer had run into a ship and was damaged. Mrs. Lacasse hastily threw on dress, and without waiting for hat or shoes and leaving all her belongings in her stateroom, rushed with her husband on deck where were a large number of other passengers in terror. A

A THICK FOG PREVAILED at the time they suddenly felt the steamer take a sort of lift, and within a few minutes it sank beneath them. Mr. and Mrs. Lacasse were thrown into the water fortunately near a raft, on to which Mr. Lacasse succeeded in getting both his wife and himself.

A TERRIBLE SCENE. The scene surrounding them was a terrible one. Hundreds of people swam and floated about the surface of the water, looking for chances to save themselves, but the majority of them later received on board the survivors of the awful tragedy which had befallen La Bourgogne's passengers. When the collision occurred two boats were lowered from La Bourgogne and life rafts thrown over-board. By this means the survivors managed to reach the Cromartyshire. CAPT. HENDERSON'S STORY. Capt. Oscar Henderson, of the Cromartyshire, which was 28 days from Dunkirk to Philadelphia, told the following story of the catastrophe: The position of the Cromartyshire on July 4 was 60 miles south of Sable Island, with the wind southwest and a dense fog. The ship was heading west north a steamer's whistle on our weather, or port beam.

we proceeded at once to tranship the passengers, and proceeded in tow of the Grecian towards Halifax, having put a sail over the bow to take part of the strain off the collision bulkhead.

There was then four feet of water in the forepeak. Our bows were entirely gone and WATER WASHED OVER THE BULKHEADS.

When all the survivors were gotten on board the ship it was found they numbered less than two hundred, including the purser and three engineers, the only officers. · FIFTY CHILDREN LOST.

They had about 50 children on board La Bourgogne, and not one of them was saved. Mr. Lacasse was on deck about 5 o'clock Monday morning, when the collision occurred, and had been there for a few hours. They had a good passage up to this time. He had hardly any warning of the collision until he saw another vessel loom up at the bow of the steamer; then there was a crash. A TERRIFIC SHOCK. The concussion, when the two vessels came together, was terrific. He was thrown off his feet. The steamer appeared to be going at a very rapid rate, and was soon lost to sight. All hands on the ship were soon on deck, as it was found she might sink. It was then not known how badly she was damaged. Soon the steamer's whistle was heard blowing in the distance, and it was thought she was whistling for the ship. The whistling soon ceased, and nothing further was known of the steamer until a boatload of the survivors reached the ship's Domestic Science as Part of the School Curriculum Tabled.

Public School Principals' Pay Increased -New School for the North End-Dr. Hotson's Successor and Other

The board of education at its regular neeting last night shelved the domestic science question for three months. Among the interesting reports received was that of the special committee appointed re scarlet fever in connection with the city schools. The report, which was passed on motion of Trustees Mc-Robert and Macpherson, is as follows: REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE RE SCARLET FEVER IN CON-NECTION WITH SCHOOLS. Your committee appointed to investigate the continuance of scarlet fever in connection with the Talbot street school, with a view of ascertaining if the law relating to the placarding of houses, reporting cases to the medical health officer and head masters, was complied with, found at the outset that where were other districts in which there had been apparent carelessness, and with a view of ascertaining all the facts, a report was asked from all the principals of the public schools. It was evident from the reports thus obtained that there existed in thirteen districts great carelessness, and an utter disregard of the Ontario statute re reporting and placarding of houses where contagious diseases were known to exist. Your committee are of opinion that a great deal of the sickness which subsequently existed among the pupils of Taxbot street school is traceable to the disregard on the part of both parents and the attending physicians of the rules of the health act, and the rules of your board, in the case of a pupil attending that school who was taken sick with scarlet fever early in the year. and whose brother was allowed to attend school during his illness.

Several physicians attended before your committee, and all, with one excaption, frankly admitted that the cases, about which the committee had Information as having been attended by them, respectively, were cases of contagious diseases, and those physicians who had not notified the medical health failure to observe the law that they had been requested by the parents not to notify, as they did not wish their houses placarded. one exception above noted was the physician who had attended the case of the above-mentioned pupil of Talbot street school, and other cases amongst pupils of that school, which appear to have been the most serious and the most numerous. This physician, so far from desiring to assist the committee in its investigation, refused to admit that those cases attended by him were scarlet fever, alhough at the same time he would not state that they were not. Your committee have no hesitation in finding that the case above mentioned was one of scarlet fever, and cannot find language too strong to condemn the conduct of parents and physicians who allowed a boy to go from that house to school during the progress of the disease, and your committee is further of the opinion that it was from the culpable negligence in this case that the subsequent fatal case is to be

In the cases which came before your committee it would appear that the law was totally disregarded, as the act is quite plain as to the proceedings to be taken in cases of contagion, it being clearly set forth that "no member of a household in which a contagious disease is known to exist shall attend school until a certificate has been obor a legally qualified practitioner, that infection no longer exists in the house, and that such sick person, house, clothing and other effects have been disinfected to his satisfaction, and it the household, and of the teacher, to use all possible efforts to prevent the ssociation of members of the said

Then, again, the rules of the board education were disregarded, as they ay down the rule that "twenty days" shall elapse from the time the placard is removed from the house before a pupil shall be allowed to return to school after an attack of scarlet fever, and "ten days" if the pupil has previously had the disease. Your committee deeply deplore the reckless disregard of the law by parents and physicians manifested in the cases that came under their notice, and would desire to draw particular attention to the liability of the parents in magistrate, for neglect. Your committee also find that the medical health officer failed to perform the duty cast upon him by the statute of not notifying the head master of the Talbot street school of the case of scarlet fever reported to him.

We would recommend that the rules of the board of education be so amended as to make it compulsory for a pupil returning to school from a house in which contagion has existed to produce a certificate from the public health officer before he is admitted. We would also recommend that the teachers be instructed to be firm in refusing to accept a doctor's certificate. unless it complies with the statute and the rules of the board of education in every particular.

Your committee would recommend that the board of health be requested to thoroughly disinfect the rooms of the Talbot street school immediately after the commencement of the holidays, and to see in future that the laws relating to the health of the community be stringently enforced. We would further recommend that a copy of this report, together with the health act, as given in the school regulations, be placed in the hands of parents who have children attending the city schools. DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

A communication was read from Joseph T. Marks, secretary of local directory, No. 7, Industrial Brotherhood of Canada, at the instance of that organization, expressing approval of the scheme to introduce domestic science in the curriculum of public school studies. A second letter to the same effect was received from the Trades and Labor Council. In connection with this matter, Mrs. Boomer made a lengthy statement on the working of the system in France and Germany, and in different cities of Ontario. After securing all the information on the subject the committee appointed to consider the matter had recommended that an experimental science class be established in one of the city schools. The necessary appliances, It was stated, would cost only a trifle compared to the incalculable benefit

Dr. English seconded the motion, and the chairman asked: "Any objec-Trustee McRobert then rose moved in amendment, seconded by Trustee Maopherson, "That the board, while not desirous of expressing an opinion for or against the introduction of the study of domestic science, in connection with the public schools, are of opinion that so long as the course of studies at present in force is continued, and until further and better provision is made for the teaching of drill and calisthenics in the schools, it would be impossible to recommend any addition to the already too heavy curriculum. Before the amendment was put the board proposed to hear Mrs. Hoodless upon the matter, and the chairman suggested that half an hour be given

Trustee McRobert again objected on the ground that there was too much pressing business. He thought fifteen minutes quite long enough, and in this opinion the majority concurred.

Mrs. Hoodless thanked the board for their kindness, but, producing a voluminous quantity of notes bearing on the matter, she said she doubted her ability to give even a brief synopsis of the subject in that time. She appeared before them as a mother-one who had studied the question of domestic science for nine years, had taught mission classes, and knew the value of knowledge of domestic affairs. Domestic science had as much to do with the building up of a nation as education in other branches. The commercial instruction-shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, etc .- had usurped the place of domestic science in our homes. She touched upon the successful operation of the system in France, Germany and London, England, and in Hamilton, Kingston and Montreal. The overcrowded condition of the curriculum, she said, had been the great obstacle met with in other places. The curriculum of the present system, like a man's meal, was not a question of how much he could eat, but how much he pould digest that would do him good. Many scholars would adapt themselves to domestic science who proved failures at many other subjects. Women spent 55 per cent of all moneys for home purposes, and should have a knowledge of how that money should be spent. Only one woman in a thousand had a knowledge of food, and only one in ten knew how to sew properly. God intended man to be the home provider and worker, tained from the medical health officer, and woman the home-maker. In France Germany and England domestic science had been placed next to grammar, arithmetic, history and geography. Prof. Robert, of Montreal, had expressed the opinion that domestic science was the shall be the duty of every member of foundation upon which character, the household, and of the teacher, to moral and physical, was built. The food people ate had all to do with their mental capacity and passions. Buckwheat pancakes and Frankfort sausages were not likely to make good teachers. The reason Irishmen were quick and flery was because potatoes, with starchy elements, were one of the common foods, and Scotchmen were made determined and resolute from eating oatmeal and herring. Mrs. Hoodless closed with the explanation of a recent test of the difence between nitrogenous foods, which produced a lethargic contentment in pigs, and the fuel, or starchy foods, which produced a cranky and selfish disposition. Mrs. Boomer said, "Since this question is only to have another minute and a half, I hope that Mr. Mc-Robert, although he is strong, will be " She could not believe that the board would refuse to place itself on record on this question. In her opinion the food question came first and calesthenics afterwards. If the board could not adopt the report she hoped it would recommend the scheme Trustee McRobert wished to know if this meant an amendment to the original motion, and said it was out of order. Mrs. Boomer wished to give notice to bring the matter up at the first or econd meeting of the board of 1899. Mr. Macpherson approved of what the ladies had said, but he thought the minister of education should be interviewed and changes recommended in the present system so as to permit of the placing of domestic science in the

Mr. McRobert congratulated Mrs. Boomer on the able presentation of her cause, and the ingenious address Mrs. Hoodless had given. He agreed with much that had been said, but under existing circumstances it was an impossibility to place any other subjects in the ourriculum. The question was given a threenonths' hoist on motion of Mrs.

Trustee Bridle thought all the principals in the city received too much money by $200 per year. Trustee Macpherson moved that the four principals receive an increase sufficient to make the $1,000 to date from Dec. 1.

Trustee Martyn withdrew his motion, and Trustee Macpherson's carried. Trustee McRobert moved that the committee appointed to consider rules governing kindergartens be dismissed, as no report was forthcoming, and that Trustees McRobert, Ziegler, Logan and Gillean be substituted. This was

THE OIL FIELDS

Extensive Operations Now Being Carried On in the Dutton Section,

Petrolia Topic: Our reporter visited the oil wells in the vicinity of Dutton last week, and was surprised to see the operations so extensively carried on by under the management of James E. Austin, a former Petrolia man. The wells are situated on the Talbot road in Dunwich township, Elgin county, about six miles south of Dutton. Mr. Austin has two drilling rigs at work on the Smith and Backus farms. The Elginfield Company have four wells on the Smith farm, the latest one, finished last week, having a production of five, barrels per day from the lower sand, at a depth of 400 feet. Well No. 1, on the Smith farm, is a surface well, which pumps five barrels of oil per day. It sells for 18 cents a gallon at Dutton. Wells Nos. 2 and 3 pump eight and twelve barrels respectively from a top show, which is gradually decreasing, and it is the intention of the company to ease these shows off and shoot the lower sand, when it is expected they will make nice producers. The Elgin-field Company have drilled a good many dry holes, but now they have the territory defined, and it is their intention to go ahead. No doubt they will strike some wells which will exceed their most sanguine expectations.

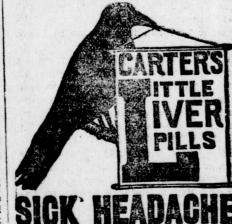

OIL NOTES. Natural gas is being struck at several points north of Chatham. E. E. Parker has made a good strike on his property near Wallaceburg.

Mr. J. W. McCutcheon started the drill last week on a deep well for Mr. O. W. Chamberlain. It is on the flats in the vicinity of a well put down 34 years ago, in which oil was found at 767 feet. The drillers will go down to a depth of 800 feet, and feel confident of striking the much sought after fluid in paying quantities.

United States Consul Taylor, Shanghai, in a report on the trade of North China, says: "We are struck by the astonishing progress made in the importation of kerosene oil, the total increase for all kinds amounting to over 32,000,000 gallons. American oil is finding vigorous rivals in Russian, and especially Sumatran oils."

Dr. Wm. Piper says that the Ontario Natural Gas and Oil Company struck a great gas well on his peach farm on the lake south of Ruthven. The enormous pressure hurled the drill from the well many feet into the air. It is estimated that the capacity of the well is 20,000,000 cubic feet a day. As soon as the connections can be made it will be hitched to the main gas line and assist in supply Detroit.-Windsor Record.

the non-arrival of the pump, but the oil has risen in it to the height of 260 feet. From the sample which has been procured from the well on Mr. Backus' farm, it is allowed to be the best well in Canada.

Nine People Killed by a Wind Storm at Hampton, N. H.

Number of Persons Perish During a Squall Off Beverley, Mass.

Hampton, N. H., July 5 .- A tornado struck a section of Hampton Beach yesterday, causing immense damage to property and great loss of life. Twenty cottages were torn down, and several small hotels completely wreck-

A yacht owned by Capt. Frank Mudd, of this place, was in the path of the storm. In it were nine persons, and of these five were drowned-Walter, Gertrude and Ralph Hodgson, Kensington, N. H.; Mrs. W. H. Parker, Kensington; Capt. Mudd, Hampton. .

The list of dead on shore includes: Mora, the actress, of New York, who was playing in a piece entitled "The Blowing up of the Maine"; Miss Mae Prescott, Exeter; Samuel Cammett, Exeter; Wm. E. Of those on board the large majority are believed to have been rescued by boats from both shores. It appears likely that the list of dead may reach a score. The following bodies were recovered from the wreck: Miss Catharine D. Webber, aged 25, of Beverly; Miss Grace Snell, aged 13, of Beverly; 3-year-old son of John Kenny, of Beverly; Miss Myra Belle Fagan, aged 16, of Beverly; Miss Lillie Irene Conant, aged 16, of Danvers; Herbert R. Toronto, July 6 .- The council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario opened its annual meeting here yesterday afternoon. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Dr. L. Aikins, Toronto. After the appointment of the various standing committees, the special committee on prosecutions presented its report. It stated that a number of anonymous letters had been received, to which no attention was paid.

Dr. Armour, of St. Catharines, has given notice of the following motion: "That this council hereby place on record its willingness to co-operate with the medical organizations of the several provinces and territories to establish an office of Dominion registration. whereby provincial practitioners may secure the right to pursue their call ing in all parts of Canada on the fol-lowing basis: The several provinces shall require a course of professional study of not less than four years, and shall have a central examination board, before whom all students and applicants must pass before receiving provincial registration, when all provincial licentiates of five years' standing shall be entitled to Dominion re-

Mr. Ross on Senate Reform.

Hon. G. W. Ross, like almost every other Canadian parliamentarian or publicist of note, believes in the retown, not the abolition, of the Senate. In a Globe interview he gives his opinhis usual clearness and cond outlines a plan of reform, says, would leave the Senate a co-ordinate branch of Parliament, while correcting the present inabuses. It was never intended by the British North America act, he asserts, that the senate should be merely an honorary civil service. Under an amended system he would have ability, experience and aptitude for public business, the chief considerations in making appointments to the second chamber. The successful banker or merchant, or financier, or manager of a lange loan or insurance company, or farmer, could find ample scope for his talents in dealing with many of the questions that occupy the attention of Parliament. Why should the nation not have the benefit of this experience in its fullest vigor? asks Mr. Ross. He suggests also that the Senate might within certain limitations be made the political training school of rising young men of first-class education and unquestioned ability and integrity. It was unfortunate in Canada that so few young men were able to find seats in the popular chamber at an age when their minds were susceptible of that training which experience shows gives the best results. Mr. Ross points out that business of a non-political character, in fact any measures not distinctively included in the party programme, might as a matter of practice be relegated to the Senate, leaving to the members of the House of Commons more time to give to the consideration of the larger questions, usually embodying the policy of the party in power. The work of the committees of the House of Commons would be greatly hightened and the members would, on that account, have more leisure to give The Senate, he thinks, would be transformed from a chamber of gilded vacuity to a scene of activity, where the higher qualities of statesmanship could be exercised, and through which public opinion could be educated. While The Advertiser is not disposed to jump off-hand into indorsation of the foregoing views, it considers them well worthy of consideration. The main point, for the moment, is that Mr. Ross ranges himself in live with those who favor, not the abolition, but the reform of the Senate.

Some Advantages of the War. A United States contemporary re cently figured out the influence of the war as an educator. It had started people studying geography, to find out where Jupiter Inlet is, wherein the "Oregon" tarried awhile; where Martinique is; where Manila; in what part of Cuba the harbor of Santiago is situate; where the Carolines: and so on Public interest in history, international law, and European politics, it is pointed out, has been quickened, and plain people now discuss questions of national rights and responsibility to which, half a year ago, they gave no atten-

Lyman Abbott, always an optimist, truly says that even peace is not without its peculiar perils. The shock of war awakens the nation from its lethargy, summonses it to heroic self-sacrifice, and sets its pulses beating with a new if not an altogether higher life.

The most outside observer can see that the war has wiped out all remaining traces of the old cleavage between North and South, and the same is true as to the new cleavage some seemed to think they detected as between West and East. The fires of patriotism have fused all together.

For the time, at all events, and probably for all time, the political issues of a year ago have been swept aside. The currency question has had to take a back seat. Every phase of the trade and taxation questions stands in a new

We shall allow the Outlook to predict as to the broadening effect of the war on what it calls America's provincialism. Says our contemporary:

"Scarcely less important is the effect of the war in giving to America's provincialism a rude and effective shock. For that America is provincial can hardly be doubted by any one who has traveled abroad or studied the comments of the best foreign observers of American life and manners. Such provincialism was to be expected, was. indeed, inevitable. Separated by three thousand miles of ocean from the near-equal, our isolation has tended to self-conceit. We have looked upon our Southern neighbors—Mexico and Central and South America-with ill-disguised contempt, as hardly civilized communities; we have looked upon out northern neighbor, Canada, with complacent patronage, because in wealth and population it does not come up to the standard of an age and nation which measure all communities far too much by dollars and numbers, albeit in her civilization and government there is much which we might well study to advantage. Doubtless in this onrushing of the nation toward an imperial Tupper. policy, which will give us henceforth a place among the nations of the world, there is much boyish exhilaration; for America is as yet but a boy among the nations of the world. But he is blind who does not also see that America is waking up to a perception that the world is greater than the United States, and is beginning rapidly to mature under the sobering influence of world-re-

But most momentous of all advantages of the war is the bringing together in bonds of growing friendliness of the English-speaking world. When, thirty-five years ago, official Britain sided to a certain extent with the South in the great Civil War, the position taken was one of egregious folly. But this time the natural sympathies of the great, free English-speaking people were allowed to have free course, with the result that a hundred indirect services of incalculable value have been rendered to the United States by Great Britain since the declaration of war

This era of good feeling created by the war will have wide-reaching results for good in the years to come. The time Turkey undertakes to slaughter the Armenians she may wake up to find a combined British and American fleet in front of Constantinople.

Stimulating Literature in Quebec.

A recent number of the Gazette Officielle de Quebec contains the announcement that the Provincial Government has set apart $1,300 as prizes for the purpose of encouraging literary work. to be divided as follows: (1) For the best history of Canada from 1841 until the federation of the provinces, $400. (2) For the best volume in prose of a purely literary character, $300. (3) For Province of Quebec, $300. (4) For the best manual for the Canadian farmer,

Intending competitors are informed that the geography must also contain historical notes on places of interest from the historic, legendary or picturesque point of view; while the writer of the farmer's manual will do well to intersperse his more practical statements with anecdotes and quotations which have a tendency to increase the love of agriculture.

With regard to this scheme we may say that no harm, but rather good, is likely to result from the effort of the Government to encourage a healthy literary activity, and in this scheme there is a serious attempt to unite and harmonize the ideal and practical interest of life. It can hardly be said that devoting the modest sum of $1,300 to such a worthy purpose is an act of extravagance. The only fear that is expressed is that the history may be written too much from the party standpoint. This fear is expressed by the Courier du Canada, to which Le Soliel makes the reply, more pertinent, perhaps, than polite, that the Courier is not so much afraid of partiality in the jury, and party spirit in the writer, as of seeing deeds discreditable to the Conservative party brought to the light of day; and that it would certainly be a rare thing to find a Conservative capable of divesting himself of the spirit of party. Let us hope that in spite of these small squabbles the cause of good literature may prosper among our French neighbors.

Courage and War.

The days of chivalry and knighterrantry may be gone, but recent events prove that personal courage has not been refined out of mankind by modern civilization. The charges of the Highlanders in India and Egypt, the attack and defense of Santiago, and Cervera's rush into the jaws of death were feats of valor as desperate as any age can show. Thanks be it needs no Spartan training or military despotism to instil heroism in the human heart. It can flourish among the "soft civilities" of nineteenth century life, even though the sword is seldom drawn.

Eddie Bald, the cyclist, will appear on the stage next season, and his press agent writes asking us to give the young gentleman a favorable advance often called "The Garden of Spain." notice. A three-line paragraph announces hat a British cruiser has annexed eighteen islands in the Pacific Ocean. There is an infinite compassion in the way the mother country gathers under her wing myriads of these lone unprotected chickens of the sea. The wonder is that these stray eighteen escaped her watchful tenderness so long.

Gen. Foster, former secretary of the reasury in President Harrison's cabinet, says that China's present distress will probably prove her salvation. It has brought about a concurrence of interests between the United States and Great Britain, and if they can by a common policy give security to the government of China, bring about a better and purer system of administration, and break down the spirit of conservatism, there may come to the ancient empire an era of power and prosperity unequaled in the past. Gen. Foster is talking sound sense. Germany consciously furthered the Anglo-Saxon alliance—a thing that both are now anxious to prevent. Their seizure and threatened closing of Chinese ports led to Great Britain's proclamation of the "open door," and it would be sweet revenge if through that same door John and Jonathan walked arm in arm.

The issue of the Outlook which appears in Fourth of July week is an illustrated, patriotic number. Its contents are very largely of a character to correspond with this designation. A particularly interesting article is Brigadier-Gen. Fred D. Grant's "With Grant at Vicksburg." This tells in an extremely readable way the present Gen. Grant's experiences when, as a boy, he was with his father, the more famous Gen. Grant, before Vicksburg.

Ev'ry Month for July maintains its standard of excellence as to illustration and literature, and is further improved this month by a new dress of type, much clearer and more readable than the previous issues. "Men of the Month" are well represented by Gen. Merritt, military governor of the Philippines; Lieut. Bagley, the first officer killed in the Spanish-American war, at Cardenas; Lieut. Hobson, of Merrimac fame; Don Carlos, the pretender to the Spanish throne; Admiral Cervera, of the Spanish Santiago squadron; Capt. Evans, "Fighting Bob," of the Iowa: and Admiral Sicard, of the Naval Strategy Board. In addition to the admirable pictures of these men there is a sufficient and interesting biographical note of each one. Clara Barton, Minnie Maddern Fiske, and other celebrities are also among the contri-

The wild dog, uninfluenced at all by association with man, is typical of nothing but the wolf, and in the circumpolar ice he is found in numbers roving over the fields of snow and ice, frequently in company with the The Esquimaux have taken wolves. these wild creatures, and by a rude process of selection and training, they have developed the "huskie," a colloquial abbreviation of the word Esquimaux. These animals represent a type of the dog but little removed from the wolf-hardy, vicious, swift of foot and keen of eye. They have been trained to haul sledge-loads of goods across the snow and ice, and this comes as natural to them now as for a pointer to point. They possess the blood of the wolf, however, in their veins—the taint of the jackal. At the first opportunity they will run away and join the wild dogs and deteriorate rapidly in their company. Throughout the great Northwest it is hard work to make up a full team of strictly pure huskies. The leader of the team is invariably a trustworthy huskie, but harnessed behind him will be one or more wild creatures that are kept in harness only through the moral influence of the others.-From of the Dog," by George E. Gen.Garcia was unable to furnish sufficient opposition with the few hundred men he had at his command. These reinforcements put great heart into the Spaniards inside of the beleaguered city, and this morning they were proud and haughty. They know that we had met with tremendous losses, and they felt confident that our troops had not yet mastered the true inwardness of Spanish bushwhacking, guerilla warfare, etc. Therefore, when General Shafter, in the morning, sent in a demand for a surrender, there was not very much hesitation in sending out a reply that they would die in the last ditch if necessary, but that they would never haul down their flag. NOT SO HAUGHTY.

But this haughty feeling soon vanished. Cervera made his great dash for liberty, and the Spaniards on land felt for a time that he would succeed. Lookouts had been placed, who flashed the news of the progress of the naval engagement from time to time straight to the military headquarters in the city of Santiago. The besieged Spaniards knew of the fate of Cervera's fleet even before the intelligence had reached the American forces on the land. Immediately a hasty conference of Spanish generals convened, and at this time they are in conference, and it ts beieved that they will at once reopen negotiations for the surrender of the city and will communicate their decision to General Wheeler. Their surrender is deemed possible tomorrow. This information comes from Colonel Astor, of General Shafter's staff. He has just passed a courier, who gave him the Opening of the Dominion Campaign on the Plebiscite.

The Action of the Dominion Government Indorsed

After Rather a Warm Debate-A Cam paign Fund Started-Encourage-cers Elected.

Toronto, July 6.-The Dominion campaign on the plebiscite was formally pened yesterday, when the Ontario oranch of the Dominion Alliance met in the Pavilion to arrange plans for the conduct of the contest. The meeting was a representative one, and while the attendance at the morning session was not large, there were about 700 present in the afternoon.

THE EXECUTIVE. A business committee was appointed, then the chairman presented the annual report of the executive. Reviewing the work of the year, it stated that petitions from 453 churches, 243 temperance organizations, and 76 munidirect is the tug New England. She cipal councils had been presented to polling sub-division, against which a At Dutch Harbor a great many river majority of the municipal electors electors should be able to limit the hour for selling liquor. It was regretted that no response had been received from the legislature. Ontario was organized for the coming vote more thoroughly than it had been on any former occasion. The receipts for the year had totalled $2,472 74, and there was now a deficit and a great need of further funds. There was some discussion whether a majority of the whole electorate was needed for prohibition. Many thought the plebiscite would apply, as was now being urged by the enemy, to sweet ported by Capt. Robert Pocock, as cider and sweet wine. The chairman having been lost on the trail between intimated that it was foolish to think of $5,000 for the year's work would be required. The report was adopted, and envelopes were passed around for subscriptions. Mr. W. H. Orr, of Toronto, gave $100. Another gentleman offered $100 if the subscription reached $10,-000. Oxford county gave $50.

INDORSING THE PLEBISCITE. Hon. S. C. Biggs presented the report of the committee on legislation and electoral action. After some introductory material, the report stated: "Your committee desire to express its ap-preciation of the course of the Doninion Government in submitting the plebiscite untrammeled by any other question.

Immediately Rev. Dr. McKay, Woodstock, asserted that in view of grand success. After partaking of a past experience the temperance people hearty repast, which had been preshould avoid any such indorsation of a pared by the ladies of the congregation, political expedient. He thought the government should be thanked for not trammeling the vote with other questions, and he moved in amendment that the convention expressed its appreciation of the course of the government in refusing to trammel the plebiscite with any other issue.

The members of the committee claimed that that was all the clause Then Dr. McKay wanted them to make it clear, but they one and all objected to any alteration. A lady in the back part of the hall said earnestly that she thought it would be only graceful for them to thank the government That God had used them to give this opportunity to

Rev. Dr. Williamson insisted that the country had asked for the plebiscite. When the premier was in opposition he was asked his opinior and honestly said that he was not a prohibitionist, but that if his party was elected to power he would give the people a ple biscite, and let them say whether they wanted prohibition. With that pledge he went from end to end of the country, and the country, by voting for Laurier, said, "We want a plebiscite," (Cries of "No!')

Dr. Williamson—That was a plank in his platform and they elected him on that platform. (Cheers; and a voice, "That is a mistake.") The previous question was then put and carried, and on a vote Mr. McKay's amendment was defeated and clause in the report adopted by a

Rev. B. H. Spence, of Manitoba; Rev. B. E. Green and Rev. J. C. Speer, of British Columbia, spoke briefly. The British Columbia delegates stated that that province needed aid from Ontario. Hon. G. W. Ross was heartily applauded. In reply to the argument that prohibition would cost eight millions in increased revenue, he said the traffic was estimated to cost in Canada forty millions a year. If it were only thirty millions, and that sum were expended in other and more useful ways, he thought that with a tariff that taxed everything, as Canada did today, the seven millions would be made up. Anyway he preferred to make up the revenue by some other means than the liquor traffic.

MUSIC IN WAR

It Inspires the Men To Be Brave and to Endure.

[The Forum.]

To the present day, in all the armies of the world, musical war signals are ve." considered not only musical, but absolutely indispensable. The infantry drill regulations of the United States army give the music and significance of more than 60 trumpet signals-calls with powerful fixed white lights, of warning or of assembly, of alarm, of service, with such names as "guard mounting," "drill," "stable," "to mounting," tian Workers went to the park to spend the day.

fog whistles are attached to each. The phi w pur ssens unw persons st purest tigue," "forward," "forward," peas sustaining by its spontaneous production about 500 wild horses and many cattle. The fisheries in its viall of which must be known to the soldiers, to whom they are a definite language, in the sense of Wagnerian Leit-motive. Everyone is familiar with such expressions as "drumming up re-"drumming out deserters," cruits." and so on.

Besides its importance for signaling purposes, there are no fewer than five other for music in the army. A few words about each of these must suffice. Zoller, the African traveler, says that "among all savage and half-civilized races song and dance are considered as indispensable aids to military training, as drilling and drumming in our armies.'

The marvelous precision with which these primitive races execute their war songs and dances has been commented upon by many admiring explorers, and as the value of perfect drill and cooperation is well understood, music, which supplies the regularity of rhythm, is seen to be of paramount importance. When our armies parade they always do so to the measured beat of military band or drum and fife.

Another very curious use of music in war is suggested by the word "panthat "all panic is derivable from asked one of them. "There's one thing trumpet-like sound, if we may trust sure about what liver Dewey has-it is the derivation of the word, which refers the first panic to the time when His appreciation of the kindness the great god Pan put to flight an army by a sudden shout." Many savages use wild songs and shouts, or drums and horns, to inspire terror and to create a panic in the enemy's ranks. So horrible is the sound of this music, both in itself and by its bloody associations, that it is said the Spanish settlers in some parts of South America to this day cannot hear the awful trumpet of the Indians without being frightened.

represents the Trojans as going to battle with howling war cries, while the Greeks are silent and that Thucydides makes Brasidas say: "They are cowards by thinking they can frighten us by their loud shouting." thus indicating that the more civilized Greeks did not resort to this method of creating a panic. It is believed that one cause of the defeat of the Chinese in their last war was that they at first relied too much on the effect of their war songs to frighten away the Japanese A military writer says that the drum in the army is used "especially for inspiring the soldiers under the fatigue of march or battle." This function of military music reminds one of the primitive customs of singing in order to facilitate work. It is recognized by the greatest authorities. Field Marshal Lord Wolseley, for instance, wrote not long ago in the preface to the "Soldier's Song Book" that:

"Troops that sing as they march will not only reach their destination more quickly and in better fighting condition than those who march in silence, but, inspired by the music and words of national songs, will feel that self-confidence, which is the mother of should buy victory."

The German army includes more than 10,000 military musicians, ablehodied men who might as well he soldiers. We may feel sure that the German army would not employ in times of war such an enormous number of musicians, unless they believed that in this way these players could do more good than an equal number of fighting men. In other words, the generals fully appreciate and indorse the utility of music. Even in times of peace there is a use for these musi cians, for they make excellent bands, which, at their daily parades and weekly concerts, do not only edify the military men, but entertain the populace. Anti-German feeling runs so high who thus get some return for the taxes Czech | they have to pay to support the army. Summing up the evolution of war was gradually abandoned, while its

HE ALWAYS SPOKE UP. Bishop Wilberforce, whose powers of repartee were among his most conspicuous gifts, was always ready to use them where retaliation was possible-not in the safe inclosure of the

At the great meeting in St. James' Hall in the summer of 1868 to protest against the disestablishment of the Irish Church, some Orange enthusiast, in the hope of disturbing the bishop, kept interrupting his honeyed eloquence with inopportune shouts of "Speak up, my lord!" "I am already speaking up," replied the bishop, in his most dulcet tones; "I always speak up, and I decline to speak down to the level of the ill-mannered person in the

It has been said of him that the creases of his trousers are ever as well defined as his views on naval warfare—just a bit of a dandy, this well-seasoned beau, who has taught the enemy to quit walking Spanish and march to Yankee Doodle. A seriouslooking man, not up to the average height, built broadly, with strong set shoulders: a man of determined expression, with keen dark eyes, gray hair and mustache. His manner, ever civil and considerate to strangers,, to friends genial, earnest; a jolly good companion. Commodore Dewey's friendship with Admiral Walker extends over the per-iod of years beginning with their careers as midshipmen. He boasted a "fine voice" in those days, if the prejudiced testimony of Admiral Walker can be taken, and "sang in the choir." commanding the Juniata, under orders to join the Asiatic squadron, Commodore Dewey was stricken with illness that compelled him to stop at Malta. It was while here that, through a very delicate surgical operation, by which a part of his liver was removed, he bravely earned the nickname of "the ar is suggested by the word "pan-man without a liver." by telling a secret; and it is a very good way, since one confidence naturally draws another. It opens the heart, being an appeal to the generosity. Moreover, the person so speaking, having given an hostage, is supposed to be safe. Emulation is excited, too. Who likes to be outdone in story-telling? Miss Cromo tried this expedient. She disclosed the most piquant secrets regarding her friends, and showed in the darkest colors several persons sup-posed to be respectable. But the effect was not what she had hoped for. It suggested to her listener's mind that she had just foolishly added a new story to the lady's repertory of scandal, without herself having received any benefit; and, moreover, that the details which she had not given, and did not mean to give, would very likely be added by her triend's imagination.

Finding her first step ineffectual, Miss Cromo went still further. She includ-ed some of her own nearest relatives in the holocaust, and did not leave even her own dead father's name umblack-

"Oh, why have I told this story to a woman who holds nothing sacred?" Valeria said to herself in terror.
She evaded the conversation, and rose to go. "And pray, don't forget your promise not to mention what I have told you," she said. "I would do no good to either of us."

"Of course I shall never mention it," was the reply. "But, then," Miss Cromo added irritably, "you have really not told me anything definite." Another complication had already shown itself in Valeria's position; for, in searching out the meaning of the persecution she suffered, she had learned that others were employed in the same search. She had, in fact, come across one or two men posted by Count Belvedere to watch the Villa. This put her between two fires; for while Bruno and his company knew nothing could save them from exposure if Valeria should choose to communicate with the count, the count himself hight suspect that she was in communication with his wife. That she would he have taken either side in an affair which, on the one hand, would have given her safety and friends, and, on the other, would have punished the persons who had annoyed her, she could not hope would even be imagined by person's whose lives, barren of every no-ble pleasure or duty, were passed in an apparent lassitude and monotony which barely covered the wildest games

It did not occur to her that there is no publicity so great as that to be feared from the tongues of a few malicious and tattling women. Looking out into the street the day after her interview with Miss Cromo, the was startled to perceive a person whom she supposed to be young Mr Burton, the portrait painter, who was unmistakably engaged in watching the Villa. He walked about with pretended carelessness, smoking a cigar and observing everything. "I have to I him to walk about this neighborhood is little and see what wonderful thing was going on," Miss Cromo said boldly "But I do not see how he could have come so early. WILL H. SALLMON ON THE WAR. The Wanganui Collegian, published at Wanganui, New Zealand, says: "A particularly interesting lecture was given at the school, on April 25, by Mr. W. H. Sallmon, of Yale University, U. S. A., concerning the war between the Americans and Spanish. Beginning with a short sketch of the theater of war the lecturer proceeded to give some of the views expressed by Captain Mahan in a lecture he had heard him deliver before leaving America." Mr. Sallmon's remarks are given at some length, and in closing the report states: "He concluded his all too short address amid heartiest applause. short address amid heartiest applause. Three cheers were then given for him followed by three for America, which country has evidently some warm supporters in the school." Mr. Sallmon is a former Londoner, and is in New Zealand in the interest of the Students' Missionary Movement.

HOMEOPATHIC MEDICINE It will be interesting to those who favor the homeopathic mode of medical treatment to learn that a move has been made toward the establishment of a homeopathic medical college in this province. At the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Homeopathy, which has just closed its session in Toronto, it was decided that the time was now ripe for the undertaking, and a fund has already been started to meet the financial responsibility involved. Heretofore students of homeopathy have been obliged to obtain any collegiate training by their school out-

Arthur Carron's Body Found in the First Cove.

Had Been Missing for Two Days-Was Despondent and Out of Work-Body Found With the Underclothes On.

After the discovery of a man's clothes on the banks of the first cove just north of the Pipe Line road, yesterday afternoon, a search for the body was instituted. George Abel and Charles Mc-Millan obtained a scow and plied about among the weeds and rank growth of the stagnant water of the cove for a short time, when their search was rewarded. The appearance of P.C.s Kelly and Boyd on the scene was the signal for the gathering of a considerable crowd, and the dead man was at once identified as Arthur Carron, of No. 3

York street. Carron had not been home since Sunday, and his three sisters, with whom he resided, were greatly alarmed by his disappearance. The news of his death was broken to those at home by

Rev. Father Tiernan. The facts indicate that the unfortunate man committed suicide. The place where the body was found was not suitable for bathing, and the man had not taken off his shirt, underclothing, nor stockings. He was out of work, and had told some of his friends that he was unable to sleep. Of late, he had been very attentive to his church. He was 44 years of age and unmarried. By trade deceased was a cooper, and was familiarly known as "Shorty." He was a good mechanic, and had worked at Petrolia during the winter season for the past few years, spending his sum-mers in London with his sisters, to whom he was much devoted.

One brother, William, car inspector on the B. and O.R.R., Philadelphia, and four sisters, Misses Mary, Prudence and Alice, at home, and Mrs. John Lowe, of West London, survive.

The coroner, Dr. Ferguson, viewed the remains when they were brought to the morgue at Hinton & Rumball's, and an inquest was ordered. The jury comprises Messrs. M. Scarrow (foreman), J. Wilkie, W. Stein, A. E. Ladell, W. M. Evans, W. Waldock, A. J. Jarvis, W. Morrison, R. Meek, H. Brenton, A. McCoulbrey, C. E. A. Carr,

R. Mountjoy and S. Turner. The inquest was begun last night, and after the body had been identified by Mr. John G. Orchard, the jury adjourned to Thursday night at 7:30. Carron's relatives say he had a
