Let me quote a few words from the little red book of instructions to Dominion Store managers. Right here on page 46 it says:

"The Dominion Stores policy is a full weight one, 16 ozs. to the pound, no more, no less. See that your scales are correct, verify them often and remember that if you give less than 16 ozs. to the pound you are cheating the customer. Violation of our accurate 16 ozs. to the pound regulation means immediate discharge.'

It seems to me that's plain enough for anybody. Not that the 300 Dominion Stores managers need such instructions, for they are a very carefully picked group of men, but it's a satisfaction to know you are buying your groceries at a store where strict control insures that you get full weight always.

Nor is full weight the only advantage that centralized Dominion Store control brings to the housewife. High quality and low prices result from centralized Dominion buying in great quantities, at low prices that are immediately passed on to the Dominion customer.

That's why steady buying at the red front Dominion Store means sure steady savings for you. There isn't an article on our shelves that doesn't show the cut cost due to Dominion

Toronto, Feb. 26 .- Supporting the declaration by the provincial treasurer that in 1923 Ontario had a deficit of $15,000,000, Hon. W. F. Nickle, at-British Labor M.P., and leader of the torney-general, today made his con- dock workers tribution to the budget debate in the ment in presenting the budget it had, was following closely the policy announced by the party when in opposition. He replied to the criticism by Harold Fisher (Liberal, West Ottawa) that the Legislature should vote on all expenditures by stating that Mr. Fisher overlooked the fact that the Legislature only met once a year and between times accounts were bound to come up needing expenditure. The government had the right to supplement moneys voted and to raise money by special warrant for unforeseen accounts.

Mr. Nickle said that Mr. Doherty

He defended the establishment of a secretaryship for Northern Ontario board and would make it pay its own way, although the cost of paying the commissioners would still fall on the government. He also defended the premier for taking the department of education on the ground of economy.

The provincial treasurer, Mr. Nickle said, had fulfilled his promise for the establishment of sound finance in the affairs of the province. He had promised to make the public accounts so simple that he who ran might read, and he had done so. The main point to consider is, have we a deficit of $15,000,000. I say we have. We have, first, because we have had inadequate revenue, and second, because we have a new system of bookkeeping which is we should have had a quarter of a board and would make it pay its own revenue, and we only got $34,000,000. For the fiscal year of 1922 the government of the day ran a month over and took thirteen months into their fiscal year for revenue purposes. Therefore, as we closed our books sharp on the end of the fiscal year 1923, or October 31, we had only eleven months' revenue, as the pre-vious November had gone into 1922.'

Then the late treasurer had esti-mated $2,765,000 from the federal subsidy, which was $125,000 more than the subsidy amounted to. The former treasurer had not based his estimate properly.

Items of revenue which had been placed in the 1922 budget, although properly belonging to 1923, were

The U. F. O. government, Mr. in speaking of statutory expenditures of the two parties while in power had made a relative error of $24,000,000 The U. F. O. government, Mr. Nickle said, had the greater expenditure.

Mr. Doherty would not admit being in error, and accepted a challenge to check up the figures with the attorney-general. Just before the House adjourned Mr. Nickle repeated that his figures were correct.

Mr. Doherty, that the Conservatives spent more in three and a half months than the Farmers did in eight and a half. "But Mr. Doherty did not tell the House that in education alone the U. F. O. government left this government a legrange of $1.250. to that system.

Mr. Nickle said that the government in presenting the budget it had, portion as the U. F. O. did."

He defended the establishment of a secretaryship for Northern Ontario on the ground that it would facilitate communication between the frontiers of the province and the seat of government.

The attorney-general continued that the government had cut out the $100,000 grant to the compensation board and would make it nay its own.

He would not say that Ontario could not recuperate itself. He was sure that the next few years would show a much stronger financial position than today.

of Successful Young Business

When a Man Marries, He Merely Annexes a Home, Wife and Children in Addition to His Work-But a Successful Business Woman Has to Choose Between a Well-Paid Career and a Non-Paying Housewife's Job.

Said a young woman to me the other day: "I am, as you know, the private secretary of the head of a very big business concern. I get a generous salary, My hours are easy. My employer, who is an elderly man, is one of the finest men in the world and treats me with every courtesy kindness and consideration. I fee It a privilege to be in daily conta with such a brilliant mind as h

"I love my work. I have what they call in men a business head. To me there is no other romance so fascinating as the romance of commerce; no game so absorbing as the business game. And it thrills me to the finger tips to know that I have a part, even if it is a small one, in this great adventure that sends men and ships to the uttermost parts of the earth and that gambles for for-bottom to my present fine position, and it pleases my ambition to know that I can climb still higher, and that every year will be more efficient and more valuable to my employer. "I enjoy the money I make, and the luxuries it brings to me, as only a woman can who comes of a poor family, and whose girlhood has been barren of all the pretty things that girls crave. I find a lot of solid satisfaction in watching my bank account grow, knowing that, if I keep on with my job for a few years, I will have put by enough to safeguard my

"So far, so good. If I were going to remain perpetually on the sunny side of forty, I would ask no life better than that of the successful business woman. But the dread hour will strike for me, as it does for all other women, and I am wondering if, when it does, I will not find myself a lonely old woman, and wish that I had married and had children.

"I am thirty now, and I have got to decide the question in the next year or two. Shall I give up my mahogany desk for a gas range? Shall I forfeit my fat pay envelope for a job where I shall have to toil ten times as hard for only my board and clothes? Shall I give up the occupation for which I spent years in preparing myself, for which I have talent and which is a joy for me to perform, for domestic service, which I loath, for which I have no aptitude and in which I am utterly unskilled?

When I see my sister shabby, bedraggled, overworked, with her crying babies and grouchy husband I feel like clinging to my good, soft, easy office position with both hands. Then rises that spectre of the future in my pathway, and I wonder if in staying single I will miss the best that Iffe has to give to a woman, and if I will regret it if I refuse to follow the traditional career of my sex.

"Of course, I know that there are women who try to have their cake and cat it, too; who grab matrimony with one hand, and hold on to their jobs with the other, but my observation is that they always fall between the stools. They are failures both as business women and as wives and mothers, for to succeed in anything you have to give everything that is in you to it.

"No woman is of much use in an office when nine-tenths of her brain and all of her interest are back home in a cradle and she is worrying over whether a hired nurse is giving the baby its milk. Nor can any woman who comes back home at night with a wornout body and frazzled nerves be anybody's ideal of a wife and

"So as far as I am concerned I have to decide the question which I am going to be, a business woman or a domestic woman, before I take the fatal step, and for the life of me I can't make up my mind which to do. To marry or not to marry, that is the problem that I am acquiring gray hairs

"Of course if a fairy prince should come along and say, 'Come and be my queen, and ride beside me in my limousine and tour the world with me on my yacht,' I should doff my Cinderella working suit and put on my glass slippers, and step out with him.

"But it is only in novels that millionaires espouse poor working girls. The men who come a-courting me are just ordinary young chaps on small salaries, whose wives will have to do their own cooking, and wear hand me-downs.

"Nor would there be any difficulty in settling the question if I had an overwhelming passion for some man. Then I would cry, 'All for love and my job well lost!' and a two-by-four flat would look better to me than to be sident of the Steel Trust. But I am not really in love. I have merely an affection for a certain chap that I might possibly cultivate into a warmer emotion if I decided that it was better, after all, to marry.

"But it is cruel, isn't it, that a woman has to choose between marriage and her career? When a man marries he merely annexes a home and wife and children to the pleasure and interests of his work, but a woman has to sacrifice one or the other. And I don't know which one to choose.

"And whichever way you decide you will be apt to regret it," I replied solingly.

SCARCELY a day passes, but that we have several new patrons tell us that they have come to us on the recommendation of our old ones. This pleases us immensely, as it tends to crystallize in our minds the feeling that we are rendering a brimming measure of optical service. In fact, we largely attribute the growth of our business to the good will and word-of-mouth advertising of our satisfied patrons. Naturally, their fullest interests are ever uppermost in our minds.
