THE SUIT QUESTION?

FIRST—You must have good material.
SECOND—You must have it well trimmed.
THIRD—You must have a good fit.
LAST BUT NOT LEAST—It must be well made, well lined on the inside so as to hold its shape. This can only be achieved by a workman. Perhaps you have tried a cheap suit and expecting to save a few dollars, but found after wearing it a short time it was all out of shape. You might expect to find it so if you understood the cheap way they are rushed through. Passing through so many different hands, they lose this individual appearance. A garment to be well made, must be made entirely by one man: then you know you are getting the best value that is to be got anywhere for your money.

ANGLICAN S. S. CONVENTION

The Anglican S.S. Conference of the Deanery of Leeds, held here on Wed January 25th, was an eminently successful one. There were 69 delegates from surrounding parishes including clergy, S.S. teachers and officers. There were besides, a large number of parents and visitors. Excellent lunches were served by the ladies of the parish at 12.30 and at 6.00 in the schoolroom. The sessions were held in the church, which was filled with an interested and attentive audience at each of the three hours. Rev R. A. Hiltz, the Secretary of the Commission, at 11 o'clock, showed the method of dealing with an actual lesson and illustrated it in application to the next S.S. lesson. At 2 o'clock Mr Carroll of Gananoque dwelt on the importance of teacher training and qualification for the work. At 3 o'clock, Mr Hiltz emphasized the importance of the primary class work, considerable and profitable discussion was elicited.

At the largely attended evening service short addresses were given by Revs Bedford Jones, Hilyard Smith and R. A. Hiltz on the relation of parent, scholar and teacher to the S.S. respectively.

A WIN FOR ATHENS

It takes lots of pluck and perseverance to play the position of tail-end in a league hockey series, and the manner in which Philippsville team has stayed in the game in Leeds League is worthy of all praise. With the championship almost out of sight, they drove here on Saturday last to obtain their 4th defeat, and it was served up in the form of 21 to 4.

The game was not over-strenuous, so there was little rough play and no penalties. At half time the score stood 11 to 2 in Athens favor, and in the last half the home team had it all own way, increasing their score to 21 while the visitors were adding one more goal.

League Standing

Following is the standing of the various teams composing Leeds County Hockey League:—

	Won	Lost	Draws	Goal For	Goal Against
Westport	3	1	1	1	1
Athens	3	2	1	1	1
Newboro	3	1	1	1	1
Philippsville	0	5	1	1	1
Portland	4	1	1	1	1
Elgin	3	1	1	1	1

SEED DISTRIBUTION

By instruction of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture a distribution is being made this season of samples of superior sorts of grain and potatoes to Canadian farmers for the improvement of seed. The quantity of oats sent is 5 lbs., and barley 5 lbs. sufficient in each case to sow one twentieth of an acre. The samples of Indian corn, peas and potatoes weigh 3 lbs. each. A quantity of each of the following varieties has been secured for this distribution:

Oats—Banner, Abundance, Danish Island, Wide Awake, Thousand Dollar, Improved Ligowo—all white varieties.
Wheat—Red varieties:—Marquis and Early Red Fife (early beardless sorts of high baking strength), Red Fife (beardless), Preston and Huron (early bearded). White varieties:—White Fife (beardless), Bobs, (early beardless).
Barley—Six-rowed: Mensury and Manchurian (a selection from Mensury). Two-rowed: Standwell and Invincible.
Field Peas.—Arthur and Golden Vine.
Indian Corn (for ensilage)—Early sorts Angel of Midnight, Compton's Early and Longellow. Later varieties: Selected Learning, Early Mastodon, and White Cap Yellow Dent.

Potatoes—Early varieties: Rochester Rose, and Irish Cobbler, Medium to late varieties. Gold Coin, Carman No. 1, and Money Maker. The later varieties are, as a rule, more productive than the earlier kind.
Applications should be addressed to the Dominion Cerealist, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, and may be sent in any time to the 15th of February. Wm. SAUNDERS, Ottawa.

Right at Last

Holding her firmly in his strong arms, he made his way across the stage and succeeded in finding a small opening which had represented a door in the scenery.

He rushed through this only just in time for all that remained of the scene was a moment afterwards, and exactly on the spot where he had been standing.

Through the darkness caused by the smoke, and relieved only by the fitful glare of flames, he made his way, stumbling sometimes over pieces of wood and ropes and at others almost falling down the yawning pits of traps.

What direction he was taking he did not know.

The yells of the mob in the front of the house were now deadened by the cracking and roaring of the flames and the sound of the water thrown by the steam engines, and which fell in glittering cascades on the stage.

Presently he found himself in a small space divided from the stage by a partition which the flames had not yet reached.

There was light enough from the livid reflection of the fire to see the first steps of a staircase, and Bertie, though half in doubt and despair, was about to carry Joan down there when it suddenly occurred to him that some portion of the falling timber might drop over the opening and confine them in a cellar which the suffocating smoke might transform into a veritable tomb for them.

At this moment, as he stood undecided, Joan stirred, and, struggling faintly, uttered a moan.

Still keeping his arm around her, he let her slip to the ground.

"Where am I?" she said, faintly, then uttered an exclamation of dismay as the recollection of the fire returned to her mind.

Bertie's heart leaped at the sound of her voice. Even in that supreme moment of peril, a wild, mad feeling of joy and satisfaction had taken possession of him.

Fate had done what he should do for the Coronet. That night, that he should meet her once more, that he should save her.

This thought had run swiftly through his brain, and echoed in his heart while he had led her in his arms.

Even as he made his way across the stage, with the fierce flames stretching out on all sides of him, he had said to himself, "I shall save her once more, this time from death!" and the thought would have served him even if he had lacked the courage, which he did not.

And now she spoke, her voice thrilled him as it had thrilled him the first time he heard it. It was like the picture opening its sweet lips at last.

A strange shyness fell upon him as he looked at her. Her hair had slipped from its coils, and hung in silken profusion over one shoulder. Her face was pale, her eyes soft and dreamy.

"For heaven's sake, don't be frightened," he said, at last.

"I am not frightened. Where are we?" she asked.

"Yes, we are in the theatre, I think," he said.

Then she remembered the panic-stricken people fighting and struggling towards the doors, as she had seen them in the last moment of consciousness, and she shuddered.

"The poor people! the poor people!" she moaned. "Are they safe? Oh, it is terrible!"

Even at that moment he noticed, with a thrill of admiration and devotion, that her thoughts, her fears, were not for herself.

"I trust they are all safe by this time or most of them," he replied.

"There were several exits—"

"And generally locked!" she cried, wringing her hands—"generally locked! Oh, it is terrible!"

"Yes, yes!" he assented, hurriedly: "but I must think of you now!"

She glanced round through the thick smoke.

"Are we not safe?" she said, weakly: "where are we?"

"I do not know," answered Bertie: "I scarcely know how we came here. It is the back of the stage."

She looked about her again, and her eyes grew grave.

"We are in the back of all. That is the way to the cellars, where the machinery is kept."

"Is there a way out?" he demanded, quickly.

She shook her head.

"No. This is the only door leading to it."

He glanced towards the front, now a sheet of flame that lit up the narrow recess in which they stood. How long would it be how many minutes before the flames would reach them? Five—ten—or less?

"We are in danger!" said Joan, in a quiet voice and quite calmly.

He did not speak; he was wondering at her calmness—this girl who a few moments ago had seemed all nerves and emotion.

"We are in a trap," he said, hoarsely: "a trap to which this is the only door!" and he pointed to the square opening now laid with fire.

Joan saw upon a piece of timber, and quietly pushed her hair back into a knot. Her lips trembled slightly, but her hand was steady and firm.

"How did we come here?" she said.

He groined with remorse.

"I carried you here? I am ungrateful! I did not mean that! I am ungrateful! It was good and noble of you; it was the only way!—you did not know. But which way did you come?"

"Across the stage," she replied. "I can scarcely tell. A piece of the scenery had fallen across the right wing."

"Then that is the only way out," she said, pointing to the opening.

"And that will not be left to us long," said Bertie, grimly.

He paced up and down for a moment, then came to her side again.

"Do you think you could venture to try the passage with me?" he faltered.

She rose and held out her hand with a faint smile on her white face, and he took her hand; but as they neared the opening she shrunk back slightly.

Bertie set his teeth hard, and catching her up in his arms, dashed forward. The heat was terrible. He felt it scorching his face and thought of her, of the beautiful lily-white face whose likeness he had gazed at for so many hours.

"Turn your face to me," he whispered. "Hide it against my breast."

Half-mechanically, Joan obeyed, and closed her eyes. She felt herself borne along as through a stream of liquid fire, then there came a momentary pause, and when she opened her eyes she found herself still in his arms and back in the recess.

"I have failed!" he said, hoarsely. "It would have been death for you if I had gone on!"

"And for you?" she said, gently.

"For me?" he said, with self-scorn. "What does it matter whether I live or die? I am of no use to myself or anyone! But you—you!" his voice broke and he turned his head away. "You shall not die!" he cried suddenly.

"There must be some way—some way!" and he ran to the walls and groped about in frantic despair.

"Oh, be calm!" murmured Joan; but as she spoke she burst into tears and covered her face with her hands.

"For Heaven's sake don't cry!" he said, almost fiercely.

"No, no!" she murmured. "I could not help it! I was thinking of her—of a very dear friend—one who was more than a sister to me. Oh, Emily, Emily!"

"If she is an actress she is most likely safe!" he said, eagerly.

"There was time for them to get away before the lights were caught. You would have been safe if you had not remained to look to the people in front, and if I—"

"I had not brought you here!"

"Hush!" she said, holding out her hand to him. "You did it for the best. If my life is saved you will have saved it. Do not accuse yourself of anything—but rashness in coming to my aid."

He knelt at her side, and, seizing her hand, raised it humbly to his lips.

As he did so the flames he had been dreading broke through the opening, and a flood of light poured upon his white face.

Joan started and drew back, then bent forward and looked at him in amazement.

"You?" she cried.

"Yes," he responded, reading her thoughts: "it is Bertie Dewsbury. You remember me?"

"I remember," said Joan, faintly, "and you came here to-night, you knew me?"

"Not till I saw you on the stage," he said, rapidly: "I came to the theatre by accident; by chance; I know you the moment I saw you."

"It is strange," she faltered: "once before you saved me—"

"Her voice broke.

"And I will save you now!" he almost shouted, and scarcely knowing what he was doing he caught up a heavy piece of timber and commenced pounding at the wall.

Bertie was strong and desperate; the wall, which was of single brick, shook, and shivered beneath the blows of the heavy piece of timber which he used as a battering ram; and presently the brickwork gave way.

He had only just time to drop the timber and drag Joan out of the way when a portion of the wall fell in, a cloud of dust mingling with the smoke which was now rendering their place of refuge thick and murky.

"Where does this lead? It is a kind of passage," he shouted in Joan's ear, for the noise of falling beams and the rearing of the flames rendered speech almost impossible.

Joan looked round her. She knew of no passage except that of the painting-room above and behind the stage.

"It leads to the painting-room," she said.

"Come with me!" he shouted, and taking her hand he hurried her up the stairs.

Even as they reached the first landing he, looking back, saw their late refuge one mass of flames.

"On the landing where they now paused to take breath there was a window, and instinctively they both went to it and looked down.

The lurid light of the burning building fell upon an immense crowd, a sea of upturned faces which shown fitfully in the red and yellow glare.

As they came to the window the crowd caught sight of them, and a roar, which seemed to shake the tottering theatre, rose from thousands of throats as hands were raised and pointed to the two figures at the window.

"They see us!" said Bertie.

"Thank God!" murmured Joan. "They will put the escape up! Ah, it is none too soon," and she laughed hysterically and put her hand to her throat, as she felt choking with the intense heat and the smoke.

Bertie had to stifle a groan. He knew that from where they stood no escape could reach them; his quick eye had caught the sight of flames breaking out from beneath, and with a swift pang through his heart he felt that if she was to be saved it was by him, and him alone.

"Wait here!" he said, putting his hand on her arm to reassure and encourage her. "Keep close to the window and get as much air as possible! I will not be a moment!"

Then as she smiled up in his face in token of obedience, he sprang up the few steps and entered the painting room. As he did so he heard a sharp, hissing sound against the walls; it was the hydrants playing round the window where Joan stood. With the rapidity of a man fighting for life against time, Bertie got together all the rope that he could find, and fortunately there was a quantity lying about, and joining it into one long piece, he coiled it up and returned to Joan.

"Help me!" he said, feverishly; and he showed her how to make a slip-knot, while he passed one end of the rope round the rough but strong balustrade of the stairway.

While he was doing it the shouts of the crowd grew louder, and took to themselves a note of warning.

He knew what it meant and that there was not a moment to lose.

"Now!" he said, and he slipped the noose under her arms. "You will be brave, will you not? It is my only chance of saving you! Put out your hands and keep yourself from striking against the wall!"

Joan looked at him.

"You were going to let me down?" she said, standing close to him.

"Were? I am?" he said, eagerly. "Step on to the window ledge and let yourself down; close your eyes and do not fear. You shall not come to any harm."

But still she stood looking at him, in intense voice.

"And you?" he said, impatiently. "Oh, I am not a hero! They will reach me somehow. I can go down the rope after you. For heaven's sake be quick! Hark! They are shouting to us that there is no time to lose!"

Still Joan hesitated.

"You cannot go down that rope after me by yourself," she said, catching his arm. "You are tired, worn out. Look how your hand trembles! Ah! I see what you mean; you would save me, but you love me and die! I will not go! No! We will stay together!"

The sweat broke out on his face and his heart seemed to stand still.

"For the sake of heaven," he cried, "do not hesitate!"

She smiled at him, and the smile lingered in his memory for years afterwards.

"I am not so fond of life, my friend," she said. "No; we will stay together!"

There was no time for further parley. Desperate, reckless, Bertie made the rope fast, and securing her in his arms, murmured: "Oh, forgive me!" and put her outside the window.

She clung to him for a moment with her hands from him tenderly, reverently, and then, springing back to his rope, let her hand go.

A roar of surprise and delight rose from the crowd, a roar which grew in volume and frenzy as the slim figure of the girl who had become a popular idol swung and scented in the air, the red light falling on her beautiful face.

"It is Ida Trevelyan!" the mob shouted. "Hurrah! Keep up your hearts, miss. You're all safe! All safe! Bravo!"

Slowly, steadily she came down; the crowd gazed to and fro with an excitement. Men shouted themselves hoarse, women shrieked and screamed in hysteria, and all made one frantic effort to get near her, as if every hand wanted to touch her and seize her first.

Then suddenly, from the centre of the crowd, a man broke, and dashed himself towards the spot to which she was descending. White, speechless, his eyes fixed on her in a wild, despairing glance, he fought his way, until he was close beneath her. The light falling on his face, the crowd saw and recognized him.

It was Mordaunt Royce.

His were the hands which first seized her, and as she fell fainting into his arms, a yell of triumph went up from the mob.

Then rose a cry.

"The man! the man!" and a thousand eyes were fixed on the window at which Bertie had again appeared.

They saw him lean over, as if to see whether she was safe, then he sprang on the ledge, and, grasping the rope firmly, began to climb down. As he did so there was an awful crash, and the roof fell in. A shower of slates and charred woodwork fell round him, some of them striking him, but still Bertie clung on.

The crowd was now as silent as the grave; in the awful suspense it seemed as if scarcely a man breathed.

Eager eyes were fixed on the figure clinging to the frail rope and coming down so slowly, slowly, that it seemed as if days elapsed between every yard he made.

The firemen, alone calm and collected, dashed up to the spot carrying an immense square of canvas, and the crowd, seeing their intention, yelled their approval.

Foot by foot Bertie made his way. It seemed to him that his lower limbs were made of lead, and that his hands were sawn apart, so heavy was the strain. He dared not look down, he could not look upward for fear of the falling sparks and hot ashes which fell in a shower about him.

With closed eyes and clenched teeth, he clung on until he could climb no longer.

Then, with a short, quick sigh, he felt his hands slip from the rope.

A sob, a yell, arose from the crowd as he fell backwards, which suddenly changed to a roar of satisfaction and delight as the firemen caught him in the canvas and waved their hands as a sign that he was safe.

Men and women rushed forward to seize him by the hand; voices were heard inquiring who he was; and when his name went round, shouts rose of: "Bravo, my lord! Bravo, Lord Dewsbury!"

Bertie, half stunned by the noise, stood amidst the crowd in his shirt sleeves, his waistcoat torn and spotted with the blood that had dropped from his cut and chafed hands, his face blackened and grazed.

"Where is Miss Trevelyan?" he inquired at last, when he had pulled himself together.

She was not far off. They had tried to persuade her to go home, but she would not move until she saw with her own eyes how her preserver had fared; and now she came up to thank him, her eyes moist, her hands held out.

"Oh, thank Heaven!—thank Heaven!" she said, reverently. "You are not hurt?"

"Not in the least," he said, his eyes fixed on her. "And you?"

She shook her head.

"No! It is wonderful how we escaped. And—and I owe my life to you!"

Bertie still held her hands, utterly indifferent to the crowd that surrounded them, some of whom were not unused to the scene.

"He saved her life!" said a rough man, with tears in his eyes; "it was the pluckiest thing as ever I've seen! Three cheers for Lord Dewsbury! Heaven bless you, my lord! He held her hands when Mordaunt Royce came up."

"Come Ida," he said, "the cable is here."

Then he stared as his eyes fell on Bertie.

"This—is the gentleman who saved me!" said Joan, with a sudden flush on her pale face.

Bertie started.

"What, Royce?" he said.

Royce laughed nervously and held out his hands.

"I—I didn't know it was you, Bertie!" he said, hurriedly; "they—they didn't tell me. How can we—thank you?"

Bertie, mystified and bewildered, waved his hand.

"It was nothing," he said; "any fellow would have done the same."

"I—I will see you to-night," said Royce, hurriedly; and taking Joan's hand he drew it through his arm and led her away.

As she went, Joan looked back over her shoulder, and Bertie bowed, she was taken off in a moment and hurried out of his sight, and there was nothing left for him but to go home.

One of the men stripped off his jacket and held it out to him.

"Put it on, my lord," he said; "it ain't worth while catching cold, after what you've done. Talk of the aristocrats; I don't want to hear no more rubbish about 'em after this, if you're an aristocrat," he added, with an oath. "If you been a common workman you couldn't a done more."

STILL ANOTHER POSTMASTER TELLS

Why He Pins His Faith to Dodd's Kidney Pills

Doctors Failed to Cure His Bright's Disease, But He Found Relief in the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Clam Point, Shelburne Co., N.S., Jan. 30.—(Special).—Joshua Nickerson, postmaster here, is among the many in this neighborhood who tell of relief from disease banished by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I am sixty-two years old," says the postmaster. "And I'll tell you why I believe so highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Owing to a bad cold my kidneys commenced to bother me, and the trouble developed into Backache, stiffness of the joints, and finally Bright's Disease. I was treated by a doctor, but that did not help me much, and it was six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills that brought me relief."

Everywhere you go in Canada people tell you of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing, and everyone who tells you so highly of the reason why. That reason simply is that there is no case of Kidney Disease, Dodd's Kidney Pills cannot cure. These people have tried them and proved this true. Backache, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Diabetes, Lumbago, Headache, Stiffness of the joints, ease are some of the more serious troubles that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure, simply because these are all either Kidney diseases or are caused by diseased kidneys.

Have You Told Your Child?

(By Cynthia Grey.)

Girls and boys of fourteen to sixteen are unusually sensitive and sentimental; they are easily embarrassed, are restless and unsatisfied without knowing why.

And it is also true that parents are prone to be less patient with their children than they are with themselves. They forget that the child is in need of patient and thoughtful kindness at this critical period of childhood.

Some of us, whose youth is only a memory now, were fortunate enough to possess mothers whose ideas were right, but the mothers of many others inherited opinions handed down from the good old grandmother days, chief among them being the one that children must be kept in dense ignorance of the secrets of birth, and, too few, while mothers of the latter class are countless.

Boys and girls of this age find themselves possessed of new and strange powers, which they cannot understand. They are disposed to erratic behavior, are inclined to fall desperately in love, are liable to go astray in conduct, and commit fatal mistakes through the ignorance for which parents are alone responsible.

Mothers, why don't you realize that this ignorance is the greatest source of danger for your boys and girls, and that it is in your power to enlighten them in the right way in the study of self? The modesty which bids you to silence on this subject is only false modesty, which leads your children to think that the story of life must be something of which we should all be ashamed, since mother refuses to speak of it.

Let the children feel from infancy that they can come to you in all their problems without fear lest their queries meet with ridicule or evasive answers. Meet them face to face and answer their questions in the proper spirit. There will then be little danger that the easily impressed minds of the children will be poisoned by the vulgarities of their school-mates.

You may be sure that there are plenty of enlightened children abroad who WILL tell your children their opinions, and the harm will be ineradicable unless you forestall them by telling them in your own words the things they ought to know.

MME. ALI KULI KAHN.

Whether she is really an American or a Persian woman now is quite a question. Anyhow, Mme. Ali Kuli Kahn was formerly Miss Breeze of a well known Boston family. Her husband is charge de affairs at the Persian legation in Washington, and Mme. Kuli Kahn is a popular hostess of the diplomatic set.

Be Wise in Time!

If your back ever aches, if you have tired days, sleepless nights, aching about the loins, distressing urinary disorders—go at once to the nearest drug store and get DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS. You need them for your kidneys, and you can be sure they will cure any complication of the bladder, liver or kidneys in short order. Watch for the symptoms—if you suspect your kidneys act promptly. HOOKWORM, SCOURGE OF SOUTHLAND, IS DOOMED

(By Robt. F. Wilson.)

Washington, D.C.—Hookworm, the parasite scourge of the south, blamed for much of its poverty to-day, is to be wiped out within a few years, in the opinion of Dr. Bailey K. Ashford, U.S.A. surgeon in Porto Rico.

Dr. Ashford is one of the two American pioneers in the treatment of hookworm disease, the other being Dr. Walter W. King, of Savannah, Ga., member of the U. S. public health and marine hospital service.

Working separately by experiments, Dr. Ashford and Dr. King each arrived at the conclusion that hookworm disease was contracted by the parasite larvae entering the victim through the skin. They found this out by experimenting upon themselves. Dr. Ashford put the deadly hookworm eggs on his hand and, through a microscope, saw newly hatched larvae wriggle through his pores into his blood.

Up to ten years ago hookworm disease was not recognized. Among the clay eaters of the south doctors diagnosed the affliction as profound anemia. The victim grew paler and paler, and if they did not remain helpless invalids, held by a malady so elusive that they were put down by the energetic as lazy good-for-nothings.

Once the disease was recognized, a cure was speedily worked out. Five doses of thymol, a dangerous drug unadmitted by a physician, is usually enough to restore the most chronic cases of health, strength and energy.

At the time of the American occupation it was estimated that the work capacity of Porto Rico was reduced 50 per cent by hookworm. In 1900 there were 12,000 deaths from hookworm disease.

After six years of vigorous work, the death rate has fallen from 42 to 21 per 1,000, and less than 1,000 Porto Ricans die each year from hookworm. And the campaign has only begun.

"We found that these sick men could only average 50 per cent. of the amount of work healthy men could accomplish," says Dr. Ashford. "Thus we found the worm responsible for much of the island's poverty."

"The density of population, 261 per square mile, and the muddy soil, shaded by the coffee bushes, were the two principal reasons why hookworm was so fatal. The eggs of the parasite hatched in the warm, moist loams and the larvae penetrated the bare feet of the laborers, largely Spanish whites.

"The cure of 300,000 out of a total million population convinced the Porto Ricans that hookworm was one of their principal obstacles to industrial success and social betterment. The people, at first afraid of the treatment, now aid dispensary work in every possible way.

"We now have 60 hookworm dispensaries, combining treatment and education. Wages are rising generally as workmen are becoming more efficient with better health, and the output of coffee has been increased."

The government will publish Dr. Ashford's extensive work on hookworm disease.

The fight against the hookworm disease is but one phrase of the campaign for better health in Porto Rico.

In the five years preceding 1900, 3,000 Porto Ricans died of smallpox and five of yellow fever. Fatal epidemics of both were frequent.

To-day there is not a case of smallpox or yellow fever on the island, nor has there been a death from either in several years. The vaccination of 800,000 Porto Ricans in 1900 wiped out smallpox. Rigid quarantine extinguished yellow fever.

ON THE VERGE OF A BREAKDOWN

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the Only Hope for Weakened, Nervous People.

This warning will be read by thousands of people who only just succeed in getting through the day's work without a breakdown. If you feel always tired out, have but little appetite, and a poor digestion, cannot sleep well, suffer from headaches, backaches and nervousness, it may mean that you are on the verge of a serious breakdown.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure weak and nervous, troubled men and women because of their direct action on the blood. Every dose of these pills helps to make new, rich blood, which tones the vital organs, strengthens the nerves and brings renewed health and strength. Mr. George Johnson, of Lequire, N.S.S., suffered for some years as a result of overwork and strain, but found no help for his condition until he began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Johnson says: "While working on a railway handling heavy ties I hurt my back and had to give up work. Later I was able to do light work, but after about six years I suffered from dreadful pain in the back and down my legs. This condition became aggravated by indigestion and chronic constipation, and my life was one of constant misery. During those years I was treated by different doctors, but did not get any help. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and proved his faith in them by presenting me with a box. It was more to please him than from any belief that they would be of service to me that I began taking the Pills. Before the box was finished, however, they seemed to be helping me; the pains in my back and legs grew less intense and the bloating in my stomach, caused by the indigestion, disappeared. I continued taking the Pills until I had used over a dozen boxes, when I found myself fully restored to my former health. I am now able to do heavy farm work, and for the past year have not lost a day, or had the least symptom of my former troubles, and I attribute it entirely to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PROGRESS.

(Puck.)

Friend—I tell you, old man, inventions make wonderfully rapid progress nowadays, don't they?

Aviator—You bet! If they grant us the patent on our new engine by 1914, and we get rid of the infringements by 1925, and finish our suit with the High-Flier Company, which is returnable in 1934, we'll show the world what an aeroplane really is.

A TERRIFIED HERO.

(Washington Star.)

"Did you have any narrow escapes in the surf last summer?"

"Yes," replied the life-saver. "One lady whom I rescued was so grateful that she nearly married me."

The Farmers' Institute meeting held in Toledo town hall Monday night was a success. The speakers were Mr Kerr and Mr Calanan, and both these gentlemen certainly gave some good practical advice. Great stress was laid on the fact that farmers neglect their farms to much, letting weeds flourish, that more machinery is worn out by rust than by work, and that farmers are, as a rule not neat enough regarding their dairying operations. Sixteen members were added to the roll and the crowd seemed to be very much interested in all that was said.

VILLAGES AND GOOD ROADS

The following resolution was carried by A. Langstaff, seconded by M. B. Holmes, that whereas the counties of Leeds and Grenville have adopted the County road system as provided by the Act of the Ontario Legislature and are now proceeding with construction of the same, and whereas under said Act provision is made whereby county councils may make grants to incorporated towns and villages shall be paid back their proportion of all monies paid in by them, and where such grants are not deemed sufficient, such towns and villages may ask for arbitration in order to fix such amounts, and it is now deemed expedient that a committee of this council be appointed to take up the matter and fix the amount to be paid and to report at this session and have a by-law passed covering the same, such committee to be composed of H. S. Hunter, Dr. Preston, T. A. Kidd, B. Henderson, Wm. Scott, J. A. Webster and A. Langstaff.

The counties council is ordinarily a pretty harmonious legislature, but when anything affecting the good roads system comes up the cry is raised "To your tents, O Israel!" and the members retire into their respective camps. This is what happened last week and the division is reported by the Recorder as follows:—

Friday afternoon Nelson Webster, chairman of the roads and bridges committee, was appointed in committee of the whole a member of the good roads commission in place of Mr. J. H. Mulvena, formerly reeve of the township of Rear of Yonge and Escott. While Mr. Mulvena is not this year a member of the council, he did not resign from the commission.

When the by-law to amend the good roads commission by-law thus ratifying Mr. Webster's appointment came up Saturday morning it was immediately attacked, and on the 28th and 29th being called, it was found to have been voted down, the by-law remaining as it was with Mr. Mulvena still a commissioner.

R. N. Henderson, reeve of South Crosby, who voted for the change in having Mr. Webster appointed a member of the commission, tendered his resignation and it was accepted, Reeve W. G. Scott of North Crosby, being named in his stead. The commission is now composed of Warden Sanderson, chairman; Messrs Mulvena and Scott.

THE H. S. CASE PRESENTED

The board of Athens High School appointed the following a deputation to wait upon the counties council last week: A. W. Johnston, (chairman), Isaac C. Alguire, W. G. Parish, M. Brown, W. J. Taber, and H. H. Arnold (secretary). Mr. M. B. Holmes introduced the deputation and the Times reports the proceedings as follows:—

Messrs. Alguire, Johnston, Parish and Arnold acted as spokesmen, briefly outlining the claim of the board for a sum covering the cost of maintenance of county pupils at that institution for the past ten years. By an error, the deputation frankly stated, the board had neglected from time to time to demand their just dues and the council was respectfully requested to make matters right. Attention was drawn to the fact of the increased cost of school maintenance, particularly teachers' salaries, and the struggling effort of a rural municipality to equip and operate a school of the standard of the A. H. S. was held up as deserving of most generous consideration. The chairman of the board intimated that in time it was hoped to place the school in the approved class. It has done and is doing splendid work, the quality of which would compare favorably with similar institutions throughout the province. Mr. Alguire informed the council that a carefully prepared statement had been made and placed in the hands of the chairman of the education committee.

This matter will be investigated by a special committee and report made at the June session.

HOUSE OF INDUSTRY

The report of the House of Industry Committee presented to the Counties Council last week reported everything about the institution as being in good condition and highly commended the management of the institution under

Mr and Mrs Steacy. The report of the physician, Dr. Harte also praised the sanitary character of the building and suggested certain additions to equipment.

The annual report of Inspector Richardson, as given by the Recorder, stated that attendance for the past year had been slightly in excess of 1909, but at the close of the year there was a less number of inmates than at the beginning. The farm is now under a good state of cultivation, and all the buildings and other investments of the counties in connection therewith are properly and very satisfactorily taken care of under the watchful eye of the manager and warden.

The next expenditure for maintenance was summarized as follows:

Heat and light	$ 464.20
House work	170.00
Farm work	171.44
Clothing	104.53
Farm produce	1,159.14
Drugs, etc.	208.72
Food	1,987.59
Management	926.10
Other supplies	506.14
Total	$5,097.96
Less paid in	876.08
Balance	$4,221.88

The produce of the farm yielded $2,067.80.

The number of inmates at the beginning of the year was 65; number admitted 18; number who died and left 23; number at close 60. The total number of days attendance was 21,663, total number of weeks' attendance 3,094; cost per week per inmate $1.37.

The religious denominations of the various inmates were as follows: Anglican 15, Methodist 23, Presbyterian 10, Roman Catholic 5, Baptist 3, unknown 4. The nationalities: Canadian 47, Irish 6, English 4, Scotch 1, United States 1, unknown 1.

WOMAN'S SPHERE.

She Has a Duty Which Man Cannot Perform.

In the New York Sun Flora C. S. Hazard writes vigorously on the women who neglecting their womanly duties seek to invade the field of politics.

What are women in the world for anyway? Answer: For important work and necessary, that man cannot do, that is, child bearing and motherhood.

The child left to the care of a competent nurse (are there any such?) is not well brought up, is not being moulded into the making of a good father or mother to guard and train the following generation, and the race is going to deteriorate.

The boy whose mother is a hysterical club member or a lay figure on which to hang extravagant hopes is not going to have much of a desire for a home of his own or much respect for some one else's daughter.

It is generally conceded that the social evil and divorce are undesirable and deplorable, and investigations and statistics are published about them and earnest people lay plans to curtail them.

There may not seem at first glance to be any immediate connection between the woman's club and woman's suffrage, but the relation exists in the fact that membership of most of these clubs and the so-called patriotic societies are the ones who are shouting most loudly for the vote.

She knows that the franchise carries with it duties and responsibilities which would interfere with her life work.

In looking for the causes which have brought the woman's movement to its present status we find as the first and most potent factor a superabundance of females in the world, so many more than males that there are not husbands enough to go around, and many being thus dependent on the charity of men.

To begin to mend matters, an initial, prospective parents and physicians should endeavor to curtail the production of females. Indeed, it would solve many of the vexing social problems of the day if there were none at all born for a few years, and after that only enough to supply the world's need of mothers.

The first and most obvious phenomenon is one which has appeared again and again in past history—one, too, which is founded deep in every human nature.

A marvelous record was made known Sunday morning at the Baptist Sunday school, when the superintendent announced that Willie Barnes, a six-year-old scholar in the school, had not missed Sunday school for the last three years.

In London, the other day, a copy of the rare first edition of Shakespeare's plays, issued in 1623, was bought by Mr. Quaritch for $10,000. Three years ago the same copy sold for $12,000.

It is only nature, by those who have emerging from a stage of relative poverty to that of relative affluence. In primitive society, as well as in the Middle Ages, as soon as persons got power and wealth they wished distinction; they wished to mark themselves by their chateaux and palaces, their dress, tables, manners, and retinue of servants a position superior to that of others.

PERSONAL ABOUT THE SULTAN. Hoax—They say the Sultan of Turkey seduces his wives nearly to death. Hoax—Yes; I've always heard that he was a harem-scram sort of fellow.

AS GOOD AS HAVING A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE.

That is what thousands of mothers say of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets promptly and surely cure all the minor ills of babyhood and childhood, and what is more, they are absolutely safe—they have never been known to harm the youngest baby—they never will harm anyone—they are good for babies of all ages.

There is now in the French Chamber an attaché of one of the ministerial departments a young man of fine position to his native smartness.

After receiving the photograph the young man absented himself altogether from the bureau. Two months elapsed and then there was a chance meeting in the street.

"Mon Dieu, Monsieur le Ministre," was the reply, "I had your photograph and spoke to it, and that was enough for me."

The next day the youth of enterprise received his appointment, and he is said to be named for an under-prefecture—London Globe.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

During the last 18 months, says London Engineering, the price of glycerine has risen over 50 per cent., and a few days ago the highest price on record was touched, there being a further advance of 45 per cent.

It is impossible to say when dogs were first domesticated, but some of the earliest traces are found on Egyptian monuments, with figures of dogs, somewhat of the greyhound type, which date back to about 3500 B. C.

One day a friend advised me to try Gin Pills, so I did, and after taking only one box of them, I felt like a new man.

Delicious Loaf: Order a real shank; boil, with a handful of rice and an onion, until the meat falls from the bones and the broth is nearly all cooked away.

A Traveler's Experience.

"My one wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well known foot and shoe traveller of Hartford, "that every traveler with a bad stomach may learn as I did before it's too late, that Nervine is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was all wrong, and every night I would wake up with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine."

The friends of Mrs Welsey Towris, Glen Buell, will be pleased to learn that she is progressing favorably since an operation for appendicitis, at the Brockville General Hospital on Thursday of last week.

Athens Hockey Club protested the game played at Newboro on Jan. 21 and the executive of the L. C. H. L. was summoned to Westport on Friday last to sit in judgement on the case. The protest was not allowed to go to trial, and in explanation of this peculiar action on the part of the League President we have received an interesting communication that we shall have pleasure in publishing next week.

—Half their real value will buy your choice of twenty-five Ladies' and Girls' stylish new Cloth Jackets, at H. H. Arnold's.

On last Wednesday Delta and Plum Hollow hockey teams played a lively match on Plum Hollow ice. The visitors were out-classed, the score at the finish standing 5-0 in favor of Plum Hollow.

The many friends of Mrs James T. Brown of Addison who underwent an operation for appendicitis on Tuesday of last week at St. Vincent de Paul Hospital will be pleased to know she is gaining.

Mr Lewis Stevens, who made cheese at Winchester last season, has received from the Department of Dairying, Toronto, a certificate entitling him to act as chief cheesemaker in any factory in Ontario.

Hockey is a perilous pastime and its list of casualties entitle it to rank with American rugby. The latest to suffer in this section was Mr Fred Hollingsworth. In the Delta-Plum Hollow game on Wednesday last he was struck in the puck and such a serious wound inflicted that surgical skill was required to dress it.

The carnival on Athens rink tomorrow (Thursday) evening promises to be a brilliant success. Local patrons of the rink have been busy preparing costumes for the event and a large number from neighboring villages have signified their intention of being present. Toledo Brass Band will furnish music.

It appears that the original survey of the C.N.R. line to Ottawa is to be adhered to and that it will cross the R. W. & N. W. in the vicinity of Crosby. The Recorder's Ottawa correspondent says: I am informed that after serious consideration of all points involved the Minister of Railways has approved of the route of the Canadian Northern Railway via Chaffey's Locks.

—Died—At Bragmer, Mo., on Jan. 21st, 1911, Mrs Anna L. Hugheson, in her 75th year. Deceased, whose name was Anna Hunt, was a sister of Mrs Eli Mansell, and was born at Temperance Lake. After teaching school in this section for a number of years, Mrs. Hunt went to the West. Her husband pre-deceased her several years ago. The funeral services were conducted at Bragmer on January 23rd.

A great many friends and relatives of the late Dr. C. S. Dunham assembled at the Methodist church Frankville to pay their last tribute to his memory. Service was conducted by Rev. Mr Sykes, of Toronto, assisted by Revs G. W. Snell and W. E. Kidd. The pall-bearers were all old college mates, viz., Drs. Kelly, of Delta; Young, of Seely's Bay; Walker, of Toledo; Donevan, of Smith's Falls; Kidd, of Kingston, and Wickwire, of Brockville. Interment took place at Toledo. There were some beautiful floral offerings.

In The Far North

Miss Lillie Brown, Nurse Deaconess, daughter of G. W. Brown of Athens, is now employed and paid by the Dominion Government, and with a staff of workers composed of five women and two men, is located 300 miles north of Winnipeg and three miles from Hudson Bay Port, on an Indian Reserve. Among those under their care is a school of fifty-six Indian children from five to 18 years of age.

The only employment for settlers in fishing and hunting. The weather is very cold.

The place is reached by boat in summer, but in winter they have no way out. When the ice is good, they get the mail every two weeks by dog train. There are only 29 white people in the place and 15 of these are children.
