CHAPTER XIV.

Madam Conway's Disasters.

At first Madam Conway objected saying she preferred sitting on the bank to intruding herself upon strangers; but as it was now noon-day, and the warm September sun poured fiercely down upon her, she finally concluded to follow Maggie's advice, and gathering up her box and parasol, started for the room, which, with its tansy patch on the right, and its single poplar tree in front, presented rather an uninviting appearance.

"Some vulgar creatures live there, I know. Just hear that old tin horn," she exclaimed, as a blast of wind and shrill, blown by practiced lips, told to the men in a distant field that dinner was ready.

A nearer approach disclosed to view a slanting-roofed farmhouse, such as is often found in New England, with high, narrow windows, small panes of glass, and the most indispensable paper curtains of blue indispensible shading the windows of what was probably "the best room." In the apartment opposite, however, they were rolled up, so as to show the old-fashioned drapery of dimity, bordered with a netted fringe. Half a dozen broken pitchers and pot-held geraniums, verbenas and other plants, while the well-kept beds of hollyhocks, sunflowers and poppies indicated a taste for flowers in some one. Everything about the house was faultlessly neat. The door-sill was scrubbed to a chalky white, while the uncovered floor wore the same polished hue.

All this Madam Conway saw at a glance, but it did not prevent her from holding high her aristocratic skirts, lest they should be contaminated, and when, in answer to her knock, an odd looking, peculiarly dressed woman appeared, she uttered an exclamation of disgust, and turning to Maggie, said: "You talk—I can't!"

But the woman did not stand in ceremony. For the last ten minutes she had been watching the strangers as they toiled over the sandy road, and when sure they were coming there, had retreated into her bedroom, donning a flaming red calico, which, guiltless of hoops, clung to her tenaciously, showing her form to good advantage, and rousing at once the risibilities of Maggie. A black lace cap, ornamented with ribbons of the same fanciful color as the dress, adorned her head, and with a dozen or more pins in her mouth, she now appeared holding her sleeve and smoothing down the black collar upon her neck.

In a few words Maggie explained to her their misfortune, and asked permission to tarry there until the carriage was repaired.

"Cutting, cutting," answered the woman, courtesying almost to the floor. "Walk tight in, if you can't get it." "It's my cheese day, or I should have been cleared away sooner. Here, Betsy Jane! you have pinkled long enough; come and hist the winders in 't'other room, and wing 'em off, so the ladies can set in there out of this dirty place"; then, turning to Madam Conway, who was industriously freeing her French kids from the sand they had accumulated during her walk, she continued: "Have some of my shoes to rest your feet a spell," and, diving into a recess or closet, she brought forth a pair of slippers large enough to hold both of Madam Conway's feet at once.

With a haughty frown the lady declined the offer, while Maggie looked on in delight, pleased with an adventure which promised so much fun. After a moment Betsy Jane appeared, attired in a dress similar to that of her mother, for whose lanky appearance she made ample amends in the wonderful expansion of her robes, which, minus gather or fold at the bottom, set out like a miniature tent, upsetting at once the band box which Madam Conway had placed upon a chair, and which, with its contents, rolled promiscuously over the floor!

"Betsy Jane! How can you wear them abominable things!" exclaimed the distressed woman, stooping to pick up the purple satin which had tumbled out.

A look from the more fashionable daughter, as with a swinging sweep she passed out into the parlor, silenced the mother on the subject of hoops, and thinking her guests must necessarily be thirsty after their walk, she brought them a pitcher of water, asking if they'd "chuse it clear, or with a little ginger and molasses," at the same time calling to Betsy Jane to know if them windows was "wung off!"

The answer was in the affirmative, whereupon the ladies were invited to enter, which they did the more willingly, as through the open door they had caught glimpses of what proved to be a very handsome Brussels carpet, which in that room seemed a little out of place, as did the sofa and handsome hair-cloth rocking-chair in this last Madam Conway seated herself, while Maggie reclined upon a lounge, wondering at the difference in the various articles of furniture, some of which were quite expensive, while others were of the most common kind.

"Wh can they be? She looks like some one I have seen," said Maggie as Betsy Jane left the room. "I mean to ask their names." But this her grandmother would not suffer. "It was too much like familiarity," she said, "and she did not believe in putting one's self on a level with such people."

Another loud blast from the horn was blown, for the busting woman of the house was evidently getting uneasy, and ere long three or four men appeared, washing themselves from the spout of the pump, and wiping upon a coarse towel which hung upon a roller near the back door.

"I shan't eat at the same table with those creatures," said Madam Conway, feeling intuitively that she would be invited to dinner.

"Why, grandma! yes you will, if she asks you," answered Maggie. "Only think how kind they are to us perfect strangers!"

What else she might have said was prevented by the entrance of Betsy Jane, who informed them that "dinner was ready"; and, with a mental groan, as she thought how she was to be martyred, Madam Conway followed her to the dining-room, where a plain, substantial farmer's meal was spread. Standing at the head of the table, with her good-humored face all in a glow, was the hostess, who, pointing

Madam to a chair, said: "Now, set right by, and make yourselves to hum. Mebbe I orto have set the table over, and I guess I should if I had anything fit to eat. Be you fond of boiled victuals?" and taking it for granted they were, she loaded both Madam Conway's and Maggie's plate with every variety of vegetables used in the preparation of the dish known everywhere as "boiled victuals."

By this time the men had ranged themselves in respectful silence upon the opposite side of the table, each stealing an admiring though modest glance at Maggie; for the masculine heart, whether it beat beneath a homespun frock or coat of finest cloth is alike susceptible to glowing, youthful beauty like that of Maggie Miller. The head of the house was absent—"had gone to town with a load of wood," so his spouse informed the ladies, at the same time pouring out a cup of tea, which she said she had tried to make strong enough to bear up an egg. "Betsy Jane," she continued, casting a deprecating glance first at the blue sugar bowl and then at her daughter, "what possessed you to put on this brown sugar, when I told you to get crush. Have some of the apple sass? It's new—made this morning. Dew have some," she continued, as Madam Conway shook her head. "Mebby it's better than it looks. Seem's of you wasn't goin' to eat 'nothin'." Betsy Jane, now you're up after the crush, fetch them china sassers for the cov-cumbers. Like enough she'll eat some of them."

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It Makes the Hair Beautiful.

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the Dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

McMurdo & Co. guarantees it. I will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre. SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favorite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c. Leading druggists everywhere, and St. John's by McMurdo & Co. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle, and sold at all first-class Drug Stores.

But, affecting a headache, Madam Conway declined everything, save the green tea and a Boston cracker, which at the first mention of headache, the distressed woman had brought her.

Suddenly remembering Mike, who having fixed the carriage, was fast asleep on a wheelbarrow under the woodshed, she exclaimed: "For the land of mussy, if I hain't forgot that your gentlemen! Go, William, and call him this minute. Are you sick at your stomach?" she asked, turning to Madam Conway, who, at the thought of eating with her drunken coachman, had uttered an exclamation of disgust. "Go, Betsy Jane, and fetch the camphire, quick!"

But Madam Conway did not need the camphor, and so she said, adding that Mike was better where he was Mike thought so, too, and refused to come, whereupon the woman insisted that he must. "There was room enough," she said, "and no kind of sense in Betsy Jane's taking up the hull side of the table with them rats. She could set nearer the young lady."

"Certainly," answered Maggie, anxious to see how the rats would manage to squeeze in between herself and the table leg, as they would have to do if they came an inch nearer. This feat could not be done, and in attempting it Betsy Jane upset Maggie's tea upon her handsome traveling dress, eliciting from her mother the exclamation, "Betsy Jane Douglas, you allus was the blunderin'est girl!" This little accident diverted the woman's mind from Mike, while Madam Conway, starting at the name of Douglas, thought to herself "Douglas! Douglas! I did not suppose 'twas so common a name. But, then, it don't hurt George any, having these creatures bear his name."

The Evening Chit-Chat
By RUTH CAMERON

"It is only now and then that a man learns something, but he forgets the whole day long. Our memory is like a sieve that with time and use holds less and less."
—S. C. H. O. P. E. N. A. U. R.

How long is it since you have "visited school?"
I have always believed that it is every mother's bounden duty to visit, at least once a term, the school where her children are spending almost half their waking hours. Lately I have been convinced that it would be a mighty good thing if others besides mothers "visited school" once in a while.

For what purpose, you ask? Well, partly for the pleasure of the memories and associations which such an experiment would arouse. But more for the interesting and instructive purpose of discovering how little we really know, after all, how much than we, even the little pig-tailed and freckled-faced boys and girls know.
Perhaps you think I am overstating that. If you do, it is all the more reason you should accept my invitation some day. Believe me, no group of college professors will make you more aware of your colossal ignorance than a class of grammar school youngsters reciting their freshly learned lessons.

Say the class is in geography and they are going over the capitals and principal cities of the various countries. How often do you know the answer before it is given? Unless you are over fifty, and thus of the old school which really learned things like geography, you will probably be amazed to find how little you know.

Not long ago I went to an evening party where the hostess surprised us by substituting a geographical game for the conventional entertainment. There were half a dozen questions to answer, such as the capitals of all the countries, questions which should have been comparatively simple to all of us, but I assure you there was no trouble in selecting the prize winner. He was a man considerably over sixty who had learned those things in the good old fashioned way. The only difficulty was to decide among the candidates for the consolation prize.

Suppose the lesson is in history, and the dates of some of the big events in our history are called for: will you be any better off than you were in the geography class?

Or suppose the class in spelling holds the floor, do you think you would stand at the head of the class if you entered into competition with the youngsters?

"It is only now and then that a man learns something, but he forgets the whole day long." How much we have forgotten and how very little we really know, after all. Truly it is a most humbling and instructive lesson which the little scholars will turn teacher to teach us!

Don't think this is all just talk, but some day when you have a chance, try "visiting school." I am sure you'll learn quite as much as the scholars, and your lesson will be about the most important of all subjects—yourself.

Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly baies;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting,
and there rained a ghastly dew.
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper of the south winds rushing warm
With the standards of the peoples, plunging through the thunder
storm;

Till the war-drum throbbed no longer,
and the battle flags were furled
In the Parliament of man, the "Federation of the world."

All science and invention points to this desirable state of society; and the doctrine of the Golden Rule embodies the same principle.

There are many who think that war was a very necessary element in the past history of mankind, and that it had its benefits. With this belief it is not an easy matter to disagree, for under the stinging and crude, and even rude, conditions of our ancestors war was inevitable. But we have come to a better way, and war will only be known in the future, by the moments of the past. These mementos are many and varied, and some of them lie too deeply buried within the nation's heart to be disturbed.
"In storied urn or marbled bust" they also live, and will thus be remembered by the generations to come. The valorous deeds of the soldiers and sailors of every age and nation, cannot soon be forgotten. They have been sung in song and immortalized in verse, and will be repeated until the end of time, when the world's great jubilee will have begun and war shall be no more. But of all the reminders of war that remain, and of all the relics that mankind may foster, the most realistic of the lot will be found in the parades and exercises of our juvenile brigades. Their existence will represent the alertness of the men who "faced the music" on "field and foot." In the rattle of their drums and the clarion notes of their cornets, there will linger the stirring sounds that mustered many an army, and rallied many a battalion, or that beat the last retreat to a soldier's funeral, or that sounded the "Last Post" as they lowered some sailor "over the ship's dark side." In miniature these phases of military life are now practised, but they are a true representation of "the man behind the gun"; and will be a very worthy perpetuation of his valor and his work. The world may never know what it really owes to its soldiers and its sailors. The price these men have paid is too steep for computation; and now that their day is passing and their art is falling, it may be but in the "fitness of things" for some organization to perpetuate their work. In the youth and vigour, the hope and buoyancy, the intelligence and morality, of the juvenile brigades of the British Empire we have this organization.

Rambling Notes for 1911
BY I. C. MORRIS.

CHAPTER VII.
AT THE C. L. B. ARMOURY.

The four brigades of the city have done a very commendable work since their inception some twenty years ago, and they are now an established factor in the younger life of our citizenship. Their parades, drills, and campings occupy no mean place in the community, and in truth they are well patronized. It was while witnessing the annual inspection of the C. L. B. that I indulged in the following reverie, and saw as in a vision the day when warfare would be a thing of the past. Before us we beheld the lads in full uniform, each one equipped with armour and general military accoutrements. In regular order they marched and counter-marched, and wheeled a "right about," or stood "at ease." Their entire drill displayed good training, and I was evident that the officers had made their mark as drill masters.
The brigade as I saw it and in se-far as I could judge, was at its best,
and the manoeuvring was well executed. We saw a vivid representation of martial life, and learned something of what real warfare should be like. For a moment I fancied these lads engaged in actual combat; but it was only a fancy.
What then did all this military display signify? Was there any oner in it? Were we looking upon a scene that was but a simile of a coming age, when men should learn war more? and when the sword should be beaten into ploughshares, and the spear into pruning hooks? Was this the final use of guns and ammunition of sword and sabre? For long ages they had blazed out their deadly contents, and had pierced the hearts of myriads of men, and broken the hearts of as many women. Even now we see the mighty dreadnoughts competing for the mastery, and millions of money spent in the game of war.
With these conditions existing it may seem futile to look for an age of peace; but such an age is surely coming, and the whole tendency of the powers that be is daily becoming more tolerant and intelligent. Ten-son's forecast in "Lockley Hall" is clearly prophetic. Even though war has devastated the face of the earth many a time since he penned these sentiments, and will no doubt devaste it again, still his ideal is coming,
and his age of peace drawing near.
He says:—
"For I dip into the future, far as human eye could see, Saw the vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;
Saw the heavens fill with commerce,
argosies of magic sails,
Saw the great ports opened to traffic,
streets that widened with the trade, Saw the wheels of commerce, the wheels that have driven down the steep, saw the harbours packed with galleyed ships, and walls of stone
where the mighty were held,
Saw the harbours packed with
galleyed ships, and walls of stone
where the mighty were held,
Saw the harbours packed with
galleyed ships, and walls of stone
where the mighty were held."

Pneumonia
from a Cold

PNEUMONIA is second only to consumption in the number of deaths which it causes, and like consumption always has its beginning with a cold.
Cold in the head, fever and chills,
cough which gradually becomes dry and more painful in the chest, rapid, difficult breathing, feelings of exhaustion and depression—these are symptoms of pneumonia.
You can prevent and cure pneumonia by the use of Dr. Chase's the greatest of all treatments for the

The only safe way is to regard every cold as serious. By frequent dangerous developments. 25 cents

An "Official" Picnic.

The Prime Minister, Sir Edward Morris, left by the cross-country train yesterday to Port aux Basques for New York, from which port he will sail to the Old Country. It may be remembered that we referred a week ago to the probability that the time was ripe for the Picnic Chief to take another picnic. He is undoubtedly doing his best to keep up his reputation as a strenuous leader of the Picnic Party. The Daily News characterizes Sir Edward's visit to England as "official" whatever that may mean. We presume that it means that the "picnic" is official, and that the country will have the gratification of paying for it, as well as for the new railway loan which he will no doubt arrange to float whilst he is there.

Titanic Disaster.

THRILLING EXPERIENCES.
Charles Herbert Lightoller, second officer of the Titanic, followed Mr. Marcou on the stand. Senator Smith asked if the rule requiring life saving apparatus to be in each room for each passenger was complied with. "Everything was complete," said the witness. "Sixteen lifeboats, of which four were collapsible, were on the Titanic," he said.
"How thorough are the captains of the Board of Trade in inspecting ships?" asked Senator Smith. "Captain Clark is so thorough that we called him a nuisance," Lightoller said he was in the sea with a life belt on for one hour and a half.
"What time did you leave the ship?" "I did not leave it."
"Did it leave you?"
Lightoller declared he stood on the top of the officers' quarters and as the ship took a dive, he faced forward and took a dive also. "I was sucked against a blower and held there," testified the officer.
"Head above water?"
"No, sir, a terrific gust came up the blower; the boilers must have exploded, and I was blown clear."
"How far were you blown?"
"Barely clear; I was sucked down again, this time on the 'Fidley' grating."
"Did any one else have a similar experience?"
"Yes, Colonel Gracie."
"How did you get loose?"
"I don't know, maybe another explosion. All I know is we came up beside a boat."
Colonel Gracie told how he was driven to the topmast deck when the ship settled and was the sole survivor after the wave that swept her just before her final plunge had passed.
"I jumped with the wave," said he. "When the ship plunged I was swirled around and around for what seemed to be an interminable time. Eventually I came to the surface to find the sea a mass of tangled wreckage."
USE OF REVOLVERS.
"When I got there," said Miss Hilda Slayter, "I found an indiscriminate scene. Some of the steering men passengers had attempted to seize one of the lifeboats and there was a brisk revolver fight, many men falling under it. The prompt and dramatic command of the officers restored order.

Senator Smith wanted to know about the shooting on the Titanic while she was sinking. Lowe said he had fired three shots into the water to scare away some immigrants on one of the decks who he feared were about to swamp a loaded boat by jumping into it.

He was certain the shots struck no one. Lowe was then temporarily excused.

ROWED BACK TO WRECK.

"Lowe told of tying five of the lifeboats together, transferring the passengers from his boat, and then called for volunteers to row back to the wreck.

"We rowed back and around the wreck," said the witness, "and we picked up four men who were struggling in the water. Three of them survived, but the fourth, a Mr. Hoyt of New York, died shortly after we took him out of the water. I did not know the names of the others. There were a number of bodies floating around, but I did not see a single female corpse."

"You said a moment ago that you had waited before returning to the wreck until things had quieted down," said Senator Smith. "What did you mean by 'quieted down'?"

"Until the cries ceased."

"The cries of drowning?"

"Yes, sir. We did not dare go into the struggling mass. It would have sunk us. We remained on the edge of the scene and would have taken every one aboard that we could, but it would have been suicide to have gone in."

"Now, how long did it require to things to get quiet?" asked the Senator. "I mean for the cries and the screams of the drowning people to cease?"

"About an hour and a half."

Reassuring Their Friends.

To-day and yesterday the emigrants who are on the Mongolian took the occasion of their stop-off at St. John's to telegraph and write their friends of their safety. The Anglo office for a while this morning was crowded with people sending telegrams, and the Post Office also had a crowd sending letters and post cards to their friends. Several of those who sent messages had telegrams in answer and their people in England were delighted to find them all right. Of course the accident to the Titanic had a good deal to do with this exchange of news.

Daughter Dead.

Capt. J. Lannon, the well-known skipper of the schr. Northern Light, had a letter to-day from his daughter, Annie, who is in Boston, saying that her sister, his eldest daughter, died on April 28th. Her name was Mrs. Banks, and her father is inconsolable over his daughter's death. The deceased lady leaves one child, a boy aged 7 years.

We understand that a specialist in diseases similar to that from which Dr. Keegan is suffering left Montreal yesterday for St. John's to treat Dr. Keegan who is dangerously ill of blood poisoning. This gentleman coming is a noted specialist who cured Mr. W. D. Reid when he suffered from blood poisoning in his foot. Dr. Keegan's friends who are aware of his coming are very thankful to Mr. Reid for procuring the specialist for Dr. Keegan.

The Pope Sends His Apostolic Blessing.

His Grace Archbishop Howley received a very gracious letter from the Apostolic Delegate, Mgr. Stagni, in which His Excellency states that he had forwarded to the Pope the Album of Views, commemorative of his visit to Newfoundland last summer.

The Album was duly presented to His Holiness the Pope by Cardinal Merry del Val. The Pope was delighted with it.

The following letter from Cardinal Merry del Val has been received by the Delegate at Ottawa.

Most Reverend Monsignor,—
I duly received your Report of your visit to Newfoundland, also the Album commemorative of the same, and the account of the festivities which took place at St. John's to honour in the person of His Representative, the Roman Pontiff, I delayed not to place into the august hands of His Holiness, in the name of Archbishop Howley and of Your Excellency, and I am rejoiced to tell you that the Holy Father was much pleased with this testimony of filial homage. His Holiness has charged me to request you to thank His Grace the Archbishop of St. John's, and His Holiness as a pledge of his particular gratitude, sends his Apostolic blessing both to the Archbishop, to his Clergy, and people of all the Archdiocese.

PLYMOUTH, To-day.
170 survivors of the S. S. Titanic disembarked from the S. S. Lapland yesterday. There were crowds on the decks. The plans of the Board of Trade to detain the crew in the barracks until the statements of all would be formally taken was frustrated through officials of the British Seafarers' Union, who advised the men that the Board of Trade had no power to confine them and that they should not submit to such treatment. The men were given their liberty although confined to port.

The Price of Coal

Dear Mr. Editor.—It is indeed time that some one should take the defence of these down-trodden coal merchants, and it is positively refreshing to read such a frank exposition of their wrongs from a "Lover of Fair Play." He will have no objection therefore in correcting the selling price of N. S. which is $7.20, not $7.00. This of course means another 20 cents' profit! And also he will inform the public with equal candour what rebate or discount the principal coal firms obtain when they pool their orders. Mr. L. O. F. P., the public await your answer!

Yours truly,
A CONSUMER.

Timely Sermon.

Rev. J. Pippy celebrated last Mass in St. Patrick's Church yesterday and preached a sermon in the course of which he deprecated the fact that young people of both sexes and hardly in their teens are to be seen until a late hour at night parading the streets and often indulging in talk and conduct which shocked those who heard it. He blamed the parents of children for this condition of affairs, showed what a great responsibility rested upon them in the training and care of their offspring, and denounced those who do not see to it that their children are off the streets at night, and who neglect to give them a good moral training. Father Pippy's discourse should have the effect of making parents and guardians more careful.

A FEW WORDS

ON

Stafford's Liniment.

This is one of the very best Liniments that can be bought in Newfoundland, and hundreds of bottles are being sold every week. It is one of the strongest and most penetrating Liniments that has been placed on the market and every person who has used it can testify to its good merits.

It has been proven a fine preparation for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Faeache, Toothache, and all kinds of aches and pains, and testimonials were published to this effect a few weeks ago.

Remember, when speaking of Liniments, the words "Stafford's Liniment" should come before any other, and always be sure you obtain the bottle with "Queen of Liniments" printed on the wrapper.

You can purchase this Liniment at any outport merchant's store, and in case they happen to be out of it when you require a bottle, you can send twenty cents in stamps to Dr. F. Stafford & Son, St. John's, Nfld., and they will very promptly mail you one in time.

Every person in the outports should have a bottle of "Stafford's Liniment" in their home, and the price is within reach of everyone.

KEEP MINARD'S LINIMENT IN THE HOUSE.

"The Bells."

Amongst the special theatrical offerings that gave the late Sir Henry Irving his pre-eminence in the world of stage folk has always been prominently counted his "presentation" of "The Bells!" In view of this fact, and realizing that our local theatre-goers would appreciate a production of this very enthralling drama, Mr. Selman decided to include it in his repertoire. It is a particularly good show, and the leading role—that of Mathias, the inn keeper, stricken with remorse at the knowledge of a heinous crime he has committed—will introduce Mr. Selman at his best. Mr. P. S. Barrett, who was prominently identified with the play throughout its successful run in the United States, has been directing the rehearsals and guarantees a most satisfactory performance. The scenery in the show will be absolutely new. The setting showing the interior of the "Merry Andrew" Inn is particularly good, and the two closing tableaux are excellently arranged. The company are all happily cast, and the entire production promises to be a very fine one.

Proceeding "The Bells" Miss Corwin and Mr. Geo. Montserrat will appear in a one act play entitled: "The Trust Magnate!" This little play has been featured as the headline attraction in nearly all the large American vaudeville houses, and the two performers mentioned have been playing in it continuously for the past four years. Miss Mackenzie will introduce new vocal numbers, and a mammoth bill is promised.

And we convey our humble thanks to President Coaker through your paper for publishing facts concerning lent grabs. We herewith shout with one accord, "Long live the F. P. U." Hoping this will find space in your paper, signed on behalf of Bonaventure Local Council,

R. Bell, E. Pike, Mrs. H. J. Earle, Miss A. Vardy, L. and Mrs. Green, J. O. Croke, H. Buffett, A. M. Himmerman, C. N. Hall, T. R. Jenkinson, and J. J. Wheatley.

Avon Battalion under command of Lieut.-Col. Rendell attended Divine Service at the C. of E. Cathedral yesterday morning and a large turnout of members was in evidence. The service was conducted by Rev. Canon White who delivered a very impressive sermon. After service ranks were reformed and the brigade, headed by the brass band, which rendered beautiful airs, returned to their armoury via Gower Street, Prescott Street, Monkstown Road, Allandale Road and Parade Street.

First Express.

The first express to arrive from Port aux Basques since February 7th, last, came in at 5 a.m. yesterday in charge of Conductor Gaul. Quite a number of passengers came and the train hands though expecting a clear rail say that there are yet mountains of snow up the country which, however, is now quickly melting. The express brought a large mail.

SPRING POETRY.

By WALT MASON.

I was sitting by my gate weeping o'er an unkind fate. Everything was wrong that day, for my chickens wouldn't lay, but just loafed around the coop; and old Dobbin had the croup, and the cow had gone insane—she had suffrage on the brain—and the cat was having fits, and the dog, a lovely Spitz, seemed to have the babies bad, and my heart was sick and sad. So I sat there shedding brine from these china eyes of mine, weeping like some stricken deer till the yard was full of tears. Then an optimist came by; he had sunshine in his eye, and he slapped me on the back till I heard my wishbone crack. And there came this cheerful spasm from the large and yawning chasm: "Do not worry! Sing and dance!" So I slew him where he stood, with a chunk of wet elm wood. For I've found that when I'm sore optimism is a bore, and I do not care to hear people utter words of cheer. If you murmur and condole I can stand your rigmorale; if you come and help me cuss I'll enjoy the little fuss. When all things are going right and I'm reeking with delight, then the optimist may come, making sunny language hum.

Advertising Our Advertisers.

THE TENDENCY OF EVERY MAN IS TO LIVE UP TO HIS NAME.

Wherever you find a good name you will find some man trying to live up to it. Character follows reputation or more quickly than reputation follows character. No one ever lost his good name except through folly. What the world thinks of a man is the very best moral tonic that is sold under the label of philosophy. And it is the same with merchandise as it is with men. The nameless thing is dreaded everywhere, while the thing with a good name is usually good because you expect it to be. Men grow proud of their products. You will find a manufacturer saying "This shoe has got to be good because it bears my name." You will find a canner saying, "I cannot use any more than I can tell a lie." You will find a clothing manufacturer saying "If I am 'all wool,' my clothing must also be all wool." And so it goes with every single product that carries a brand or a name. Whenever a man sets a standard, he strives to live up to it; and whenever the world sets that standard, he doubles the effort. Which simply means, if you want the best, you must ask for the best. And every time you ask, you make it better. There is hardly one of you readers who does not know the name of every good product on the market. From clothing to sugar and from hoisery to baking powder some good name is indelibly fixed in your mind, yet when you ask for an article, most of the time you do not use that name. And every time you fail to do so, you discourage the maker, you lower the standard for yourself and you allow some inferior thing to gain in strength and capacity. Let this go home in your mind: You set the standard of merchandise. The maker follows your ideals. Advertisements creep in through your laxity. Whenever you ask for any old thing, you get it. While you are reading the advertising news in this paper to-day, make up your mind to ask only for what you know to be good; to learn what is best and demand it and to have no parley with the nameless things of trade.

Ismay Was Much Cheered.

Poor Provision For Sailors Detailed as Witnesses.

Special to Evening Telegram. WASHINGTON, April 28.

Ismay was much cheered by today's testimony. Throughout the week he had a troubled look. During the long daily sessions he has sat silent, seldom speaking to his associates who accompanied him. On Saturday, however, he listened eagerly to the account of his conduct in connection with the lifeboats, told by stewards and seamen who came in contact with him on the night of the disaster. His eyes fairly beamed when Steward Crawford told him he had called for women to go in the boats and said to a woman who told him she was a stewardess "You are a woman, take your place in the boat." Ismay listened intently, too, as Steward Bright testified he had not left the ship until after all the large lifeboats had gone, only one or two collapsible boats being left on deck. Bright had seen Ismay working with others on the starboard collapsible boat and was the last to leave the ship from that side. Bright, who was on the very last boat on the port collapsible boat said he knew Ismay had not left the ship until just before the port collapsible boat was lowered in to the water and in time to get only a hundred yards from the Titanic before she went down. After the testimony was over the corridor of the Senate Office Building near the committee room was crowded with anxious sailors of the Titanic who have been called to the committee since their rescue ship Carpathia brought them to New York. They were a nervous lot, in fact they were broke. Not being permitted to leave they faced the prospects of Saturday night and Sunday without funds, most of them were men with families desirous of sending word home. Ismay knew their circumstances and asked Senator Smith if something could not be done for them. They are entitled to $1 a day witness fees and expenses, but no preparation had been made to pay them until released. "If it is too late to get money for the sailormen," Ismay declared, "I can see that it is advanced." Finally the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, Cornelius, found a way to cheer the hearts of the sailors. They were escorted to the Capitol in a body and advanced their money. This made them a happy lot.

PARIS, To-Day. Bonnot, leader of an organized gang of auto bandits, has been terrorizing Paris and the surrounding district for months past, and Dubois, the notorious anarchist, were shot to death yesterday in the most thrilling encounter in the annals of French crime. The garage at Choisy le Roi, six miles south of Paris, in which the bandits had taken refuge, was blown up by dynamite, after these two men had kept at bay for hours a large part of the police force of Paris and a contingent of Gendarmes, two companies of Republican Guards, and a company of engineers. Ten thousand spectators viewed the battle from points of vantage.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—The Chronicle of April 26th contains a report of a meeting held by the St. John's Agricultural Society. At the meeting, we are informed, various reports were read and some able speeches made. I have read the speeches, or the gist of them, as published, also the reports. One thought strikes me in connection with this Agricultural Society, and that is, that they have begun at the wrong end. To my mind the obtaining of first class seeds and blooded stock should not be made the basis on which to rear a sound and healthy advancement of farming; that should follow knowledge, and would surely follow it as spring follows winter. Of course it is wise to procure the best seeds, but it does not follow that because you have good seeds you are going to have a good crop. If I were to choose between seeds and knowledge, I should certainly take the latter. Take an example: two neighbors—one is given poor seed, or just ordinary seed, but he is a man who knows how to get the best results; he understands something of the chemistry of the farm. The other knows nothing of the intelligent side of farming, or puts too much confidence in seeds and the old haphazard style that is thought good enough. The one gets a good crop, the other with his costly seeds, gets a poor one. The same with live stock. How long do you suppose Farmer Slack will keep up the standard? In his care the best of stock soon becomes scrub. So I say the advancement of agriculture in this country has begun at the wrong end.

The spending of money on choice seeds and fertilizers and animals is to a great extent a waste of money. Of course the idea of beginning quietly and advancing surely does not appeal to Sir Edward Morris; it would not attract so much attention. Just as Sir Robert Bond's sensible thoughtful way of getting at the external cause of consumption did not suit the noisy Picnic Party. A great hubbub has been created over the farming policy, but like "fire on light straw" it will soon die out, for a farming policy built on seeds and fancy live stock will soon tumble to the ground. One might naturally expect to find enlightenment among the leaders of this great agricultural movement, but if proof of what I say be required that they have taken hold of the wrong end, one has but to read the report of last week's meeting. Under the heading of fertilizers we find this statement: "Several members who bought some of Mr. Clouston's fertilizer last year found it of good value." The same was said of fertilizers supplied by Mr. Colin Campbell. There is an instance of rule of thumb method. Why are not the analysis of those fertilizers given so that there should be no guessing as to their value? Fertilizers should be of definite chemical composition, and to make intelligent use of them the farmer should know of what elements they are composed, and how those elements are made to furnish the desired plant food. We notice that the "Society is disposed to favor local made fertilizer and there is so much limestone, phosphate rock, silica, magnesia, potash, etc., the industry should prove a profitable one." Silica exists as quartz, quartz-sand, as silicates, etc., but what value silica has as a fertilizer I am at a loss to know. Fancy a farmer manuring his field with sand or broken quartz. Magnesia has no value as a fertilizer as far as I am aware. As for potash it is not readily available in this country, it does not exist in the free state, but combined with other bases, as in feldspars and could not be profitably extracted. Limestone and phosphate rock have some value, but limestone if applied injudiciously and without due knowledge as to its effects, is bound to work the ruination of the farm. There is too much talk of limestone by the Society. One gentleman, just returned from England, advocates the use of ground limestone, instead of lime, and says one half ton of the former is worth more than two tons of the latter. More rule of thumb, for why he considers a half ton of limestone as good as two tons of lime I cannot see. Limestone is essentially calcium carbonate, that is calcium, carbon and oxygen in combination. In burning it gives up its carbon and is reduced to calcium oxide or calcium and oxygen. It has lost nothing but its carbon and a part of its oxygen. It requires 1.785 as much limestone as lime to form lime. It loses .785 of its weight in burning. What it has lost is carbon dioxide, which has no value. Lime is used to effect decomposition of the soil and that is where it is dangerous to use indiscriminately. The proper use of lime is to correct acidity in the soil, which prevents the development of nitrogens. Another use to which lime may be put is to loosen up and make porous hard clayey soils. Lime adds nothing to the soil, it is simply a stimulant, just as whiskey is to the man, and great care should be taken in the use of it.

I write this in the interest of agriculture, for it would be a pity to see the farmers ruined by the idle talk of self-imposed teachers of agriculture, for ruined they will be if they listen to the agents of Morris and Co. It would be much better to go back and begin at the beginning. The establishment of an Experimental Farm under a staff of competent agriculturists is what is needed. Educate the farmers, make them what they should be—scientists, and you will find that they will know how to select seeds and fertilizers without the aid of any self-constituted teachers—who can't teach.

Tim Shannahan on the Spring Drummer.

Walt Mason sings of gentle spring, and H. L. Rann he does some chiming. They live 'neath skies of azure blue, where streets are dry and folks are liming. And as we hear their pleasing lay we see again the sporting drummer, the "breakfast food" and "chocolate man," that strikes this town each blooming summer. With smiling eyes we'll greet "his nibs" and load our shelves with his "slow sellers." We'll listen to his ancient jibs and turn down these local tellers.

The Police Court.

A steward, of Barbados, and three stamen of Norway, were charged with refusing duty on board the schooner "Labrador." Mr. Gibbs appeared for them and stated that the food supplied was bad in quality and insufficient in quantity. The captain of the ship was sworn and examined by Mr. Hunt and gave evidence as to the quality and quantity of the food, and the conduct of the men in refusing to work. Mr. Gibbs cross-examined. The case was then adjourned till to-morrow in order that the Norwegian Consul might be referred to.

A drunk and disorderly was discharged. A man charged with the larceny of two cow hides, the property of John Harris, was sentenced to three months.

A drunk was discharged. An assault case was withdrawn. A drunk and disorderly was fined $2.

Another Sealer Returns.

The S.S. Diana, Capt. J. Blandford, returned from the sealfishery, at 3.30 a.m. to-day, hauling for 6,100 seals. She was late in striking the seals but managed to secure 5,000 young. Since then she has been in quest of old seals of which she got 1,100. The Diana reports the same as already told, and the spring was a very trying one. It was intensely cold and storms were frequent. She reports that very little has been done with old seals on the front and that the other ships now out will be home shortly. The Diana is discharging her seals at Bowring's Southside premises.

Swimmers Drowned by Eels

A remarkable story of the seizure of swimmers by eels comes from New Zealand. A stream in New Zealand was a favorite bathing place because the current was swift and strong. Time after time the bather would begin to shriek and splash on the surface, would disappear before help could reach him, and when his body had been found it had invariably been eaten by eels. The cause of the fatality remained shrouded in mystery for a long time, but at length the true cause was discovered that whilst the swimmer was almost stationary in the rapid stream a huge eel would seize him by the foot or leg and drag him down below the surface.

The Theatre.

BY H. L. RANN.

The theater is a place inhabited by people who seek to drive dull care away and forget the size of their coat button. Theaters usually have a stage with a growth of natural timber and a draft which causes the leading man to make love in tones bearing a close resemblance to the notes of an expiring pump. There is always a good deal of loose scenery in a theater, and not all of it is confined to the stage. Some of this scenery chews gum and talks about the new styles in shirtwaists during the death scene, while another variety enters in the middle of the first act and makes everybody in the fourth row of the orchestra circle double up like a six-foot emigrant in a chair car. There is nothing that will bring back the mind of the absorbed spectator to this mundane sphere quicker than to have a stout woman enveloped in an opera cape and musk perfume balance herself on his right foot like a strap-hanger in the loop district, at the same time obscuring his view of the stage until he can't tell whether the villain stabbed the leading lady or was felled by a cane settee. Some theaters are quite dry and elevating and give all the Shakespearean dialect that has not been withdrawn from circulation by the board of health, while others make a speciality of moist and melancholy plays which cause large, damp tears to fall with a soft kerplunk on the bosom of a new shirt. People frequent the theater for different reasons. Old men always have to sit on the front row because of not being able to read the town clock at a distance of more than three miles. Young men go in order to relax, and sometimes succeed in relaxing a week's salary to the proportions of a Mexican dime. Women go to weep and wonder whether the heroine will marry the Russian duke in white spats or unite her fortunes with this son of poor but honest parents and live on oatmeal and undying love.

Capt. Smith Criticised.

Special to Evening Telegram.
WASHINGTON, April 28.
The failure to give the exact position of a great field of floating ice that offered a frigid barrier to a ship hurrying to the rescue, and the mistake of her own captain rushing at top speed through the ice-covered sea, all those combined sent the Titanic and her 1,600 victims to watery graves in the North Atlantic. This was strongly indicated on Saturday by testimony before the Senate Committee. Capt. Moore, of the Mount Temple, who was hurrying to the Titanic in response to wireless calls for help, told of a great stretch of field ice which held him off. Within his view from the bridge he said he discerned another steamer, probably a tramp, and another schooner, which was making her way out of the ice. The lights of this schooner, he thought, were probably those seen by the anxious survivors of the Titanic, which they tried to reach. Capt. Moore denounced as a most unwise action the Titanic's commander rushing at 21 knots through the night when he had been advised of the proximity of ice. He said he had spent 27 years on the North Atlantic, and whenever ice was around he doubled his watch and reduced speed. If it happened that he got caught in the ice-pack, he stopped the engines and drifted until clear. Witness also was emphatic in his declaration that the position sent out by the Titanic was wrong. He said the ship was eight miles further eastward than the operator reported. This, he declared, was proved by observations taken the first thing on the day following the disaster. With what was virtually a fleet of steamers within a radius of fifty miles, the mistake in fixing accurately the position of the steamer was a fatal one. With icebergs and floating ice covering the northern seas, a ship even of the size of the Titanic might well be overlooked with such a variance in location.

Senate With- in Its Rights.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, April 28.
The Times, commenting on the Titanic enquiry at Washington, says:—"We all feel the circumstances are unprecedented. Although the enquiry by the Senate and detention of our subjects seems strange, yet the American desire for prompt and searching investigation is perfectly natural, and the Senate is within its rights. Criticism here is directed rather at Senator Smith's manner and the amazing ignorance displayed. We would have wished for a more judicial mind at the head of the Committee, one more conversant with the matters to be investigated."

Six Bodies Unidentified.

HALIFAX, April 28.
The Mackay-Bennett, with 189 bodies of Titanic victims, will arrive here on Monday at noon. All bodies aboard the Mackay-Bennett, except six, have been identified.

Light, Warmth and Food.
These three words embrace the most urgent necessities of Life, and it is an extraordinary thing that in each case our thoughts turn to Gas; this, after all, is but natural. We want Light, Gas gives us the best, cheapest and healthiest artificial light known. Again, we want Warmth, and the gas fire is at hand to give it in its best form; and, lastly, we must have Food, and here the gas cooker never fails us. All this is absolutely true, as we have shown over and over again.
If, however, any of our customers are in the least doubtful on any of these points, we cordially invite them to consult us. In the meantime, our advice is to get good burners and buy mantles of well-known makes, to use modern gas fires and cookers, and, above all, to keep your gas appliances (whether old or new) in good order, for in this is the true secret of efficiency and complete satisfaction.
