Making Ready For Fishing

(Daily Mail, May 14)

Now that the elections are over, preparations for the fishery have started in the outposts and schools are being made ready to come to St. John's to take their fishing supplies, according to the Trade Review, which discusses the situation editorially.

In Trinity Bay and Bonavista Bay, most of the schooners this week are taking on board cargoes of lumber for St. John's market, including coopers stock, house framing and fire wood. The first of the fleet from Trinity Bay will be along next week and the Bonavista Bay schooners a few days later.

The number of Notre Dame Bay schooners that come for fishery outfit is very few, as the owners deal with the local merchants of that Bay and get their salt and their fishery requirements on the spot at Twillingate, Fogo, Change Islands, Herring Neck and Little Bay Islands. This saves them ten days to two weeks in time and enables them to get away to the Straits and the French Shore for an early trip. They were thirty-seven schooners that were laid up in St. John's all the winter and most of these were taken in charge by the sealers after their return from the fishery and taken home with fishery supplies.

The only thing that will interfere with an early start at the fishery is the coming of ice on the coast. There was some in Notre Dame Bay this week but it is slack and in strings and unless a succession of N.E. and E. winds prevail it will not stop navigation.

OPENING PRICE GOOD

The lobster fishery this year, Mr. Templeton says, opens with good prospects. The price in the local market is not yet fixed, but he believed it would be around $25.00 per case.

The fishery was to have begun in Placentia Bay, April 26th, but ice prevented early operations. No report has yet been received from any of the packers, but he believes they have been doing good work since the 4th of May as the weather was suitable and the ice has moved off.

A Canadian Company is starting to pack salmon on the Labrador the coming summer and instead of sending out the summer's catch pickled in tins as heretofore, they will now pack nearly all their catch in tins and by this change they estimate to make an additional $50,000 on their summer's catch of salmon. The small experiment the company made in this direction last year justified them in arriving at this conclusion.

Dr. Edgar Jones, of Newark, N. J., paid a visit to Halifax recently and preached in Trinity church.

Fresh salmon and herring were plentiful in this section this week. The price of salmon started at 20c a lb.; herring 12c a dozen. Salmon was sold later in the week at 12c lb.

Borrower

If you are a borrower of this Paper, don't you think it is an injustice to the man who is paying for it? He may be looking for it at this very moment. Make it a regular visitor to your home. The subscription price is an investment that will repay you well.

MORE SUBSCRIBERS WANTED

We were hoping to issue The Guardian on time (Saturday morning) this week, but an accident occurred to our typesetting machine, which caused considerable delay. We hope our readers will be indulgent until we get our machine in proper working order. Meanwhile we are looking for more subscribers so that we may be in a position to carry out our original intention to make the Guardian a worth while weekly newspaper. We need a great deal more support than we are now getting in order that we may be able to accomplish our purpose. The value of a local newspaper cannot be estimated, and it is to the people, every family, we are looking for support. Two cents a week or $1.00 per year will bring the weekly visitor to your home. It may contain an item of news about employment or some other matter which may be worth hundreds and probably thousands of dollars to you.

A number of men and women left by Tuesday's and Thursday's express en route to Canada and the United States.

News in Brief

Thirty stone masons are wanted immediately to proceed to Bermuda. Three to four months employment is guaranteed.

The Bay Roberts Road Board should get busy and rebuild the public wharf opposite Cable Hall. The money has been in the Board's hands we learn, since last fall, and the timber for the wharf has arrived. Now is the time to make a start. Attention should also be paid to the public wharf in the West end, near A. E. Mercer's.

Capt Anonsen, late of the Hr. Grace Shipbuilding Co., intends operating two whaling plants the coming season. One of the stations will be at Hawke's Hr. and the other at Beaverton. Mr. Geo. Webber, of Hr. Grace, prominent in football circles, has accepted a position as book-keeper with him.

It is time the various road boards of this section got down to business and repaired the roads and bridges now requiring attention. Every year it so happens that several months of the driving season elapses before any thing is done to the roads. The result is that wheels, springs and other parts of carriages, carts and automobiles are damaged or broken causing annoyance and expense to the owners. Come, gentlemen, make the roads in and about Bay Roberts as good as the best.

RULES FOR Making Cod Liver Oil For the Guidance of Manufacturers

- 1st. The manager in charge of factory must see that the livers are fresh; that all brown or poor livers are thrown out; that there is no gall bladder attached to any livers.
 - 2nd. The good livers must then be washed in a tub of clean fresh water.
 - 3rd. The pan in which the livers are boiled must be perfectly clean inside, before any livers are placed in it.
 - 4th. Before you start to boil any livers, you must have sufficient steam.
 - 5th. Turn on the steam, and use as much as you need to have for the quantity of livers you have in your pan. Boil until the white scum floats off (which will take about thirty minutes.) Don't forget to stir the livers, and see that those in the bottom and those around the sides are brought into direct contact with the steam all the time.
 - 6th. Turn the steam off, and allow all to settle, not exceeding five minutes, according to capacity of liver boiler.
 - 7th. Then you dip all the oil you can get, which is the finest white oil. Put this oil in a cooling tank made of galvanized iron, and let the oil remain there till next morning. Don't forget to put a straining cloth over the cooling tank before you put any oil in, so that it will catch any bits of blubber; allow to remain 12 or 14 hours, or longer if possible, then dip from cooling tank and strain through double calico bag, inside bag to be one inch smaller all around; then strain into a tin shute under the bags, the cask to be at the end of the shute with a funnel, to lead oil into casks, which funnel to be covered with cheese cloth.
 - 8th. When you have dipped the finest oil from the top of the liver oiler pan, take all the blubber from the pan while it is warm. The oil from this blubber is not fit for medicinal purposes.
 - 9th. Then clean your liver pan with warm water and washing powder. Have it bright and clean for the next boiling.
 - 10th. Every bag, cloth, tank, funnel and pan, must be washed only with warm water, soap and water. Soda must not be used.
- The best results for medical oil can only be obtained by the use of tin barrels. Wooden packages generally make the oil dark, and destroy its fine flavor. Keep all oil in barrels in a cool place, and covered from the sun.

REGULATIONS For Salting Scotch Pack Herring

- One barrel salt to five and a half barrels herring—Large Fulls
One barrel salt to six barrels herring—Medium Fulls
One barrel salt to six and a half barrels herring—Matt Fulls.
This amount of salt is for dredging and laying on rows only. It does not take into account that put on the herring before gibbing.
- All salt falling off herring in rousing tubs is put on rows as you pack unless very dirty or scaly; in that case, you have to make good the same amount, or otherwise you could not have any fixed rule on salt.

- | | | |
|----------------|--------------------------------------|-------------------|
| Matt Fulls | 10 1/2 inches long | Milt or roe |
| Medium Fulls | 11 1/2 inches long | Milt or roe |
| Large Fulls | 12 1/2 inches long and upwards | Milt or roe |
| Medium Filling | 11 1/2 inches long and upward | Milt or roe |
| Large Filling | 12 1/2 inches long and upwards | Milt or roe |
- Filling Fish may be branded as Scotch Cure without the Crown Brand.

No drowned, stale, or scaleless herring can be used as Scotch Pack, nor herring in half frozen state.

The root cause of light salting is to come as near as possible to the pleasing of the palate of the consumer; and if we bear in mind that over three-fourths of all Scotch-Pack Herring are consumed as a tonic before the mid-day meal, just as they come out of the barrel, without any fire cooking, we can see the reason at a glance for the right salting. The herring is dressed by the head and the tail being cut off, the main bone taken out. It is then cut into squares of about one inch, and is served with vinegar and other condiments. This gives power to the stomach to digest the following meal and keeps the consumer in the best of health.

People with bad stomachs please note that the art of cooking and eating right is just as essential as the art of curing; and based on the best medical directions, and with the chemical analysis of the constituent parts of herring as a food ever kept before the consumer, we need not be surprised that the people who eat most herring are the most healthy and efficient.

LUCY GRAHAM'S SECRET

CHAPTER III.

The same August sun which had gone down behind the waste of waters glistened redly upon the broad face of the old clock over that ivy-covered archway which leads into the gardens of Audley Court.

A fierce and crimson sunset. The millioned windows and twinkling lattices are all ablaze with the red glory; the fading light flickers upon the leaves of the limes in the long avenue, and changes the still fish-pool into a sheet of burnished copper; even into those dim recesses of brier and brushwood, amidst which the old well is hidden, the crimson brightness penetrates in fitful flashes till the dank weeds and the rusty iron wheel and broken woodwork seem as if they were flecked with blood.

The lowing of a cow in the quiet meadows, the splash of a trout in the fish-pond, the last notes of a tired bird, the creaking of wagon-wheels upon the distant road, every now and then breaking the evening silence, only mad the stillness of the place seem more intense. It was almost oppressive, this twilight stillness. The very repose of the place grew painful from its intensity, and you felt as if a corpse must be lying somewhere within that gray and ivy-colored pile of building—so deathlike was the tranquility of all around.

As the clock over the archway struck eight, a door at the back of the house was softly opened, and a girl came out into the gardens.

But even the presence of a human being scarcely broke the silence; for the girl crept slowly over the thick grass, and gliding into the avenue by the side of the fish-pond, disappeared in the rich shelter of the limes.

She was not, perhaps, positively a pretty girl; but her appearance was of that order which is commonly called interesting. Interesting, it may be, because in the pale face and light gray eyes, the small features and compressed lips, there was something which hinted at a power of repression and self-control not common in a woman of nineteen or twenty. She might have been pretty, I think, but for the one fault in her small oval face. This fault was an absence of color. Not one tinge of crimson flushed in the waxen whiteness of her cheeks; not one shadow of brown redeemed the pale insipidity of her eyebrows and eyelashes; not on glimmer of gold or laburn relieved the dull flaxen of her hair. Even her dress was spoiled by this same deficiency. The pale lavender muslin faded into a sickly gray, and the ribbon knotted round her throat melted into the same neutral hue.

Her figure was slim and fragile, and in spite of her humble dress, she had something of the grace and carriage of a gentle-woman, but she was only a simple country girl, called Phoebe Marks, who had been nursemaid in Mr. Dawson's family, and whom Lady Audley had chosen for her maid after her marriage with Sir Michael.

Of course, this was a wonderful piece of good fortune for Phoebe, who found her wages trebled and her work lightened in the well-ordered household at the Court; and who was therefore quite as much the object of envy among her particular friends as my lady herself to higher circles.

A man, who was sitting on the broken wood-work of the well, started as the lady's maid came out of the dim shade of the limes and loomed before him among the weeds and brushwood.

I have said before that this was a neglected spot; it lay in the midst of a low shrubbery, hidden away from the rest of the gardens, and only visible from the garret windows at the back of the west wing.

"Why, Phoebe," said the man, shutting a clasp-knife with which he had been stripping the bark from a blackthorn stake, "you came upon me so till and sudden, that I thought you was an evil spirit. I've come across through the fields, and come in here at the gate agen the moat, and I was taking a rest before I came up to the house to ask if you was come back."

"I can see well from my bedroom window, Luke," Phoebe answered pointing to an open lattice in one of the gables. "I saw you sitting here, and came down to have a chat; it's better talking out here than in the house, where there's always somebody listening."

The man was a big, broad-shouldered stupid-looking clod-hopper of about twenty-three years of age. His dark red hair grew low upon his forehead, and his bushy brows met over a pair of greenish gray eyes; his nose was large and well-shaped, but the mouth was coarse in form and animal in expression. Rosy-checked, red-haired, and bull-necked, he was not unlike one of the stout oxen grazing in the meadows round about the Court.

The girl seated herself lightly upon the wood-work at his side, and put one of her hands which, had grown white in her new and easy service, about his thick neck.

"Are you glad to see me, Luke?" she asked.

"Of course I'm glad, lass," he answered, broadly, opening his knife again, and scraping away at the hedge-stake.

They were first cousins, and had been play-fellows in child-hood, and sweethearts in early youth.

"You don't seem much as if you were glad," said the girl; "you might look at me, Luke, and tell me if you think my journey has improved me."

"It ain't put any color in your cheeks girl," he said, glancing up at her from under his lowering eyebrows; "you're every bit as white as you was when you went away."

"But they say traveling makes people genteel, Luke. I've been on the Continent with my lady, through all manner of curious places; and you know, when I was a child, Squire Horton's daughters taught me to speak a little French, and I found it so nice to be able to talk to the people abroad."

"Genteel!" cried Luke Marks, with a hoarse laugh; "who wants you to be genteel, I wonder? Not me, for one; when you're my wife you won't have overmuch time for gentility, my girl. French, too! Dang me, Phoebe, I suppose when we've saved money enough between us to buy a bit of a farm, you'll be parleyvooving to the cows?"

She bit her lip as her lover spoke, and looked away. He went on cutting and chopping at a rude handle he was fashioning to the stake, whistling softly to himself all the while, and not once looking at his cousin.

For some time they were silent, but by-and-by she said, with her face still turned away from her companion.

"What a fine thing it is for Miss Garham that was, to travel with her maid and her courier, and her chariot and four, and a husband that thinks there isn't one spot upon all the earth that's good enough for her to set her foot upon!"

"Ay, it is a fine thing, Phoebe, to have lots of money," answered Luke, "and I hope you'll be warned by that, my lass, to save up your wages agin we get married."

"Why, what was she in Mr. Dawson's house only three months ago?" continued the girl, as if she had not heard her lover's speech. "What was she but a servant like me? Taking wages and working for them as hard, or harder than I did. You should have seen her shabby clothes, Luke—worn and patched, and darned and turned and twisted, yet always looking nice upon her somehow. She gives me more as ladies maid here than ever she got from Mr. Dawson then. Why, I've seen her come out of the parlor with a few sovereigns and a little silver in her hand, that master had just given her for her quarter's salary; and now look at her!"

"Never you mind her," said Luke; "take care of yourself, Phoebe; that's all you've got to do. What should you say to a public-house for you and me, by-and-by, my girl? There's a deal of money to be made out of a public-house."

The girl still sat with her face averted from her lover, her hands hanging listlessly in her lap, and her pale gray eyes fixed upon the last low streak of crimson dying out behind the trunks of the trees.

"You should have seen her while we were abroad, with a crowd of gentlemen hanging about her; Sir Michael not jealous of them, only proud to see her so much admired. You should have heard her laugh and talk with them; throwing all their compliments and fine speeches back at them, as it were, as if they had been pelting her with roses. She set everybody mad about her, wherever she went. Her singing, her playing, her painting, her dancing, her beautiful smile, and sunshiny ringlets! She was always the talk of the place, as long as we stayed in it."

"Is she at home to-night?"

"No; she has gone out with Sir Michael to a dinner party at the Beeches. They've seven or eight miles to drive, and they won't be back till after eleven."

"Then I'll tell you what, Phoebe if the inside of the house is so mighty fine, I should like to have a look at it."

"You shall, then. Mrs. Barton, the housekeeper, knows you by sight, and she can't object to my showing you some of the best rooms."

It was almost dark when the cousins left the shrubbery and walked slowly to the house. The door by which they entered led into the servants' hall, on one side of which was the house-keeper's room. Phoebe Marks stopped for a moment to ask the housekeeper if she might take her cousin through some of the rooms, and having received permission to do so, lighted a candle at the lamp in the hall, and beckoned to Luke to follow her into the other part of the house.

The long, black oak corridors were dim in the ghostly twilight—the light carried by Phoebe looking only a poor speck in the broad passages through which the girl led her cousin. Luke looked suspiciously over his shoulder now and then, half-frightened by the creaking of his own hobnailed boots.

"It's a mortal dull place, Phoebe," he said as they emerged from a passage into the principle hall, which was not yet lighted; "I've heard tell of a murder that was done here in old times."

"There are murders enough in these times, as to that, Luke," answered the girl, ascending the staircase, followed by the young man.

She led the way through a great drawing-room rich in satin and ornaments, built and inlaid cabinets, bronzes, canoes, statuettes, and trinkets, that glistened in the dusky light; then through a morning room, hung with proof engravings of valuable pictures; through this into an ante-chamber, where she stopped, holding the light above her head.

The young man steered about him, open-mouthed and open-eyed.

"It's a rare fine place," he said, "and must have cost a heap of money."

"Look at the pictures on the walls," said Phoebe, glancing at the panels of the octagonal chamber, which were hung with Claudes and Poussins, Wouverman and Cuyps. "I've heard that those alone are worth a fortune. This is the entrance to my lady's apartments, Miss Graham that was."

She lifted a heavy green cloth curtain which hung across a doorway, and led the astonished countryman into a fairy like boudoir, and thence to a dressing room, in which the open doors of a wardrobe and a heap of dresses flung about a sofa showed that it still remained exactly as its occupants had left it.

"I've got all these things to put away before my lady comes home, Luke; you might sit down here while I do it, I shan't be long."

Her cousin looked around in gawky embarrassment, bewildered by the splendor of the room; and after some deliberation selected the most substantial of the chairs, on the extreme edge of which he carefully seated himself.

"I wish I could show you the Jewels, Luke," said the girl; "but I can't for she always keeps the keys herself; that's the case on the dressing table there."

"What, that?" cried Luke, staring at the massive walnut-wood and brass inlaid casket. "Why, that's big enough to hold every bit of clothes I've got!"

Journal of Rev. Henry Gordon

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 30th

During night we got aground, but fortunately the weather was calm. Early this morning we got clear and set off for Cartwright. Roly was feeling much better. Ran into the wharf a Cartwright about 100. Not a soul to be seen anywhere, and a strange unusual silence. Going along the path to the Parsonage, we met one of the Company's men staggering about like a drunkard, and from him learnt that the whole village was prostrated with sickness. It had struck the place like a cyclone, two days after the Mail-boat had left. After dinner I went on a tour of inspection among the houses, and was simply appalled at what I found. Whole households lay inanimate all over their kitchen floors, unable to even feed themselves or look after the fire. No one complained of any particular pain, a bad headache and an utter exhaustion seemed to be the prevalent symptoms. No one, so far, seemed in a dangerous state. The remarkable thing about the whole business was the fact that the entire settlement was down. I suggested most forcibly a tropical typhoon. I think there were just four persons in the place who were sound. The "St. Bernard" lay at anchor in the harbour making a slow business of unloading her cargo, for lack of local help. One seemed utterly incapable of dealing with the situation. The only thing one could do was see that no one perished for want of food and firing. This I started in on straight away. A feeling of intense resentment at the callousness of the authorities, who sent us the disease by the Mail-boat and then left us to sink or swim, filled one's heart almost to the exclusion of all else. The helplessness of the poor people was what struck to the heart. The one and only doctor on the coast (Dr. Paddon of the International Grenfell Association) was one hundred and eighty miles away, and might have been ten thousand for what chance he could have of getting his assistance to us. We could only come to the conclusion that the Spanish influenza had come amongst us, and the newspapers were brim full of its deadliness.

THURSDAY, OCT. 31st.

Early this morning, Mr. Payne came up to tell me that his wife was very sick, and they did not know what to do for her. I offered to run up to Dove Brook again, to fetch Rebecca Bird (her sister). After a hurried round of visits, Roly and I got under weigh about 11.0, and made a fine run up the bay. The Dove Brook people were all well, so I refused to go into any of the houses, and warned them to keep themselves isolated as much as possible. The Birds took my news very bravely, and Rebecca never hesitated a moment in her decision to come back to Cartwright, although both she and I had a sort of feeling that something was going to happen. By 6.30 we were in Cartwright again, after a day's run of 36 miles. I was distressed to find Miss Udle, our teacher, and her little maid had been in bed for a day and a half, without food or fire, or any attendance. Everybody seemed much about the same.

Stall's Books

Rev. T. Albert Moore, D. D., General Secretary of the Dept. of Social Service and Evangelism of the Meth. Church of Canada, who visited Newfoundland in Sept., 1917, in connection with the Social Congress, says:

"Stall's Books on Avoided Subjects have been standard works for such a long time that it seems almost unnecessary to say a word in their behalf. I believe they have accomplished great good, and are written with care and delicacy, at the same time with sufficient frankness or the modest discussion of these delicate subjects. They are safe books for general reading, especially if from the various books there is proper selection for the youth or adult, man or woman, as the case may be."

THE GUARDIAN OFFICE Bay Roberts.

FRIDAY, NOV. 1st.

Health and strength are the only things of any value now, and they must be used to the utmost. Shortage of wood is the most serious menace that we have to face. The weather is getting bitterly cold. Very few of our people have any stock of fire-wood home, and scarcely a house with any sawed up Roly and I set to work and saved and split as hard as we could go. Roly is simply splendid, and I don't know what I would do without him. In the evening I paid another round of visits. Some of the sick are getting distinctly worse. One house is in an appalling state. We have only one log-hut, in the place, where an old couple have lived for some years. They left it last summer and we hoped it would then disappear. Late this fall, a family of seven arrived from outside, too late to get up to their winter quarters. There were five little children, and another was soon expected. A sort of old nurse was with them, and her old man remained to take her up the bay when she would be free. A young man and a little girl of six were also of the party. All this crowd was jammed into this little tin barely ten foot square. They were all struck helpless before anything could be done to sort them out, and now they lay in heaps on the dirty floor in a terrible mess. Mrs. Parsons, the wife of the new Agent of the H.P.C., who has been a trained nurse, is of tremendous assistance. She gets about my head is beginning to get heavy I among the sick and, with the few drugs at her disposal, does wonders. hope against hope that I may be able to keep fit.

SATURDAY NOV. 2nd

Feeling rotten, head like a bladder full of wind. Felt able to get up, however. Word came up that the little "Titi" baby had been born, and was not likely to live, so I went down and baptised it. If things in this house had been bad before, they were worse now. The old man and the old woman were practically dying on the floor. About noon, I received word that young Howard Fequet had died. Epileptic in normal times, he had not been able to stand against this disease. Scarcely knowing what I was doing I rowed out to the "St. Bernard," now lying all to herself in the harbour, and begged the crew to come ashore, to die Howard's grave. This they very willingly did. Digging graves in the Cartwright cemetery is labour out of the ordinary. Good folk many years ago chose the spot, evidently for its prominence, quite forgetful of the fact that a prominent spot in this country means a nut that the glacier or the sea was not able to crack. About one foot of soil lies over the ground, then comes a layer of thickly compressed blackish gravel, which reminds me of nothing so much as the carbon that accumulates on the cylinder of a motor engine. Beneath this are huge boulders almost cemented in with the pressure. When, in addition to all these other difficulties, the ground is frozen, it may be imagined what the work entails.

THE LAUGH LINE

Good, absent-minded, old Dr. Jones was greatly dependent upon his practical wife. One morning Mrs. Jones sent up an announcement after he had entered the pulpit with a foot-note intended to be private.

"The Women's Missionary Society," he read aloud; "will meet Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock sharp. Your necktie is crooked; please straighten toward the right."

"Now look here, Johnson, this man is doing double the work you do."

"That's what I've been telling him, sir; but he won't stop."—"The Christian Register," Boston.

Brunette Beauty—"Liza, what for you buy dat odder box ob shoe black in?"

"Go on nigga, 'dat ain't shoe black in,' dat's mah massage cream."—Border Cities "Star."

"Dear John," the wife wrote from a fashionable resort, "I enclose the hotel bill."

"Dear Mary," he replied, "I enclose check to cover the bill, but please do not buy any more hotels at this figure—they are cheating you."

Life.

Speed "records" are broken every now and then, but, if the correspondent of a Lynn daily newspaper sent in a veracious account, the best record of the sort was made in Saugus, Massachusetts. Here's the item as he sent it in:

During the thunderstorm of Friday afternoon, lightning struck in several parts of the town, but the narrowest escape from death was that of William Milott, driver of an express wagon.

He saw a flash of lightning coming toward his wagon, but he backed his team into the gutter and thus escaped being killed or badly injured.—Youth's Companion.

First Lady—(in village shop, speaking to another patron)—"Would you mind if I made my small purchase first? We have a horse outside and he won't keep quiet."

Second Lady—"Certainly; but you won't be very long, will you? I have a husband outside and he's rather restive, too."—Punch.

A Sensitive Sole—Colored Rookie—"I'd hahk to have a new pair of shoes, suh."

Sargant—"Are your shoes worn out? Man, the bottoms of mah shoes are so thin that an can step on a dime and tell whether it's heads or tails."

Some business men do not believe in advertising. Take a tip from Samson. He had the right idea about advertising. He took two columns and brought down the house.

NOTICE

To Owners and Masters of British Ships

The attention of Owners and Masters of British Ships is called to the 74th Section of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894."

75.—(1) A Ship belonging to a British Subject shall hoist the proper national colors—

- (a) on a signal made to her by one of His Majesty's ships, including any vessel under the command of an officer of His Majesty's navy or full pay, and
- (b) on entering or leaving any foreign port and
- (c) if of fifty tons gross tonnage or upwards, on entering or leaving any British Port.

(2) If default is made on board any ship in complying with this section the master of the ship shall for each offence be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds.

At time of war it is necessary for every British Ship to hoist the colours and heave to if signalled by a British Warship; if a vessel hoists no colours and runs away, it is liable to be fired upon.

The Liberal Party Fought A Clean Fight

The Telegram of May 12, in an editorial article headed "A Rotten Foundation," makes certain references to the Squires Government and political happenings in this district that calls for some comment from us.

The Telegram, if it knew the least thing about actual Opposition propaganda and tactics in this District, would, if it were honestly endeavoring to do its "duty," be the first to condemn in the strongest possible manner some of the miserable and dirty tactics pursued by the Opposition both in reference to rowdiness and sectarianism, which helped to bring about the defeat of its party.

But instead of doing this the Telegram would like to convey the impression to the general public that the Liberal Party won the election in the District of Harbor Grace by "trickery" and a "sectarian appeal."

We characterize such statements as false.

Look to your own Party and its leading supporters, including the candidates, and if you are honestly trying to do your "duty" you will find all the things you complain of right near your own doors. Those who live in glass houses should never throw stones.

Ask the Leader of the Opposition Party, and he will be very likely to tell the "truth" concerning his defeat in Harbor Grace District.

If Mr. Bennett is not inclined to oblige you, try Mr. Hickman, the gentleman who was trying to bluff supporters of his Party by suggesting that he knew nothing about the offer made to C. E. Russell to try to get him to step aside in favor of A. E. Hickman and be false to the people. In fact, we are told he even threatened to take action against Russell. But then that was just a little while before polling day.

If neither of these gentlemen cares to enlighten the Editorial genius of The Telegram, Mr. Archibald, we are certain, will be only too glad to do so. And if Frank will be frank enough he will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. And to quote The Telegram, "Truth is mighty and it will prevail." If all should fail, then we ourselves will do our "duty" and tell the Telegram that the Opposition failed in this District because the people decided that they would not accept the dictation of J. R. Bennett, A. E. Hickman, J. C. Crossie or any other man. Nor were they prepared to be bullied or bought.

The Opposition failed because a majority of the electors decided to support a policy of industrial development which Sir Richard Squires was successful in arranging.

Money to Burn

An Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotchman were sitting in a Pullman car. They were all boasting about who could be the most extravagant and thus trying to fill in time. The Englishman, to demonstrate his extravagance, took a dollar bill from his pocket, touched a match to it and carelessly lit his pipe with it. The Irishman, not to be beaten, hauled out a five dollar bill and did likewise. Then the Scotchman, not wishing to be let out of the contest, wrote his cheque for a thousand dollars and applied it to his pipe.

The count from St. Barbe District will not likely be in until the end of next week.

C. L. B. Notes.

All ranks were working at full capacity although the Lieut.-Colonel was, unfortunately, on the casualty list. He will be on duty in a day or two. Major Williams, Captains, Outerbridge, J. Snow, P. B. Rendell, Lieuts. R. G. Ash, W. B. Mott, Fred Reid and M. Job Taylor, were on duty with Sgt. Majors Rendell and Andrews and one hundred and forty three answered the roll. Surgeon Capt. Burden has been busy in his department examining the physical condition of all recruits, taking records of chest expansion etc. so as to minutely rate improvement for the future and see the definite results of the Brigades physical training.

Officers had a conference on last Thursday in the Mess and discussed routine matters and officially welcomed the new Lieut.-Colonel Walter Rendell, C. B. E. Mess Vice-President Captain George House was in the chair in the absence of Major Tait, M. C. President, who will be glad to say report for duty next week.

On Thursday May 17th at the Armoury the annual indoor sports will be held. All officers N. C. O. and W. O's. will wear kit. Lads not competing in the events will wear multi unless competing on the programme must be in kit.

On Sunday afternoon the Battalion will parade for Divine Service at 2.30 sharp and march to the Church of England Cathedral. This will be the first Church parade for this season. Old Comrades, Spencer College Guides, C. and K. Companies have been invited to parade with Headquarters companies. All service men old comrades inclusive are ordered to wear full size decorations.

On Tuesday May 22nd, the Battalion will be inspected at 8 p. m. by His Excellency the Governor. A programme of physical and manual drill with march and music will be a feature as well as the official presentation of the Outerbridge Shield, good conduct stripes, long service medals and chevrons. Old Comrades are also asked to parade and all ranks are ordered to wear full size service medals.

No parade will be held May 24th, general leave being given on account of this date being Empire Day. We congratulate A. Company on their improved attendance as well as their progress in regular army physical training given them by Lieut. M. Job Taylor as instructor.

The Bugle Band has been re-organized and Corporal Cook, has eight privates and two N. C. O's already trained and nine buglers in reserve training as well as five privates on the waiting list for bugles and six privates awaiting drums. In future the "Cook Bugle Band" is going to make some noise.

All ranks will please note black boots only are allowed to be worn—brasses and brass buttons must be kept polished. No leave will be granted for Sunday or Tuesday's parade.

Bell Island Company J—(Our Cracker-jack company) reports a busy month of April, Major Lindsay O. C. has 88 on the strength and held nine parades. The ladies' auxiliary held a most successful sale and dance on April 4th. On April 21st, the Company welcomed officially the new Chaplain Capt. J. Parsons the new Rector of Wabana. The company gave him a royal reception and he afterwards made his official inspection. Congratulations to our comrades of the Iron Isle. Carry on! Carry on!

His Lordship Bishop White is now visiting Conception Bay towns where he has been holding confirmation services. We understand the Bishop was at Tilton on Friday at 3 o'clock and at Spenard's Bay at 7. He intends holding similar services at Shearstown at 3 p. m. on Monday, Coley's Point 7.30 and Bay Roberts on Tuesday at 7.30 p. m.

The Greatest World Events

What are they?
 The occupation of the Rhur by the French?

The settlement of national disputes in Europe, Great Britain or any other country?

The Farmers' Bloc and the other bloc in Congress?

Bolshevism, Ku Klux Klanism, the I. W. W., or any other social upheaval?

Theological and doctrinal disturbances in the denominations?

Problems of transportation or tariff or political partisan rule?

World peace versus world militarism?

These sound like very good subjects. But are they really?

It is significant that although Jesus lived under a monstrous tyranny of government He never had much to say about it. His emphasis was constantly placed on the need of the new inner life of mankind. A new passion, a new definition of the thing called life, a new set of government ambitions.

It looks as if a good deal of man's energy was being wasted over secondary matters of importance. The greatest world events are not the outward but the inward. Suppose the purpose of the national politics was to create a spirit of good-will on earth instead of striving to get national advantage or diplomatic victories—that change of purpose would change history and advance human welfare quicker than all the discussion and talk and newspaper emphases on great events.

As a matter of fact what are called great events of the world are trivial compared with the tremendous things that are waiting for the new inner life of man.

We are not only putting the cart before the horse in making little things great, but we are making the horse walk backwards, and call it progress. It is not the progress of civilization to call incidents great. It is an ignominious and ignorant retreat.

Goats at Large

The time of year has come round again when the goat and sheep nuisance is in evidence. Although the law requires that goats at large must be yoked, numerous goats can be seen day after day forcing their way into the gardens and destroying trees and everything else in the way of springing shrubs. Our streets and lanes have become cattle ranches, where goats, sheep, cows and horses are allowed to roam at their own sweet will. We watched a cow a few days ago using her horns on a good substantial fence and ca e very near levelling it. It is time that people with cattle considered their neighbors a little bit more than they do.

Likely To Operate On Smaller Scale

St. John's—Mr. E. A. Grant was in town from Trinity this week to discuss with Job & Co. the annual project of again carrying on the fishery at Blanc Sablon.

Mr. Edward Grant intends to retire from the business himself this season and to give charge of the operations to his son Mr. Samuel Grant, who has had considerable experience in the fishery with his father in the Straits. In former years they used 50 traps and employed about 300 men at Blanc Sablon.

Asked to the extent of operations at Blanc Sablon the coming summer Mr. Grant informed The Trade Review that he could not give any definite information till next week after he had held a consultation with Mr. Job.

"The probabilities are," he said, "that under present conditions and the difficulty of making the fishery pay the programme this season would be on a smaller scale and there would not be so many men engaged nor so many traps used as heretofore."

In writing us on May 7th from Moncton, N. B., Commandant Harry Hurd, S. A., states he has just returned from a three months' trip to Bermuda, where he spent a very busy time. He was well received and treated most kindly by all. He is busy now with the big Self-Denial Campaign. He leaves for St. John's on June 9th/Mrs. Hurd is in hospital at present undergoing a serious operation. The Commandant sends his kind regards to all friends.

Hard Work Means Success

There never was a goal worth getting but you must work to attain. You must suffer and bleed for it, cling to your creed for it. Fail and go at it again.

Success is no whim of the moment, no crown for the indolent brow. You must battle and try for it, offer to die for it; Lose it yet win it somehow.

The Pathway to glory is rugged, and many the heart-aches you'll know. He who seeks to be master must rise from disaster. Must take as he giveth the blow.

There's no royal highway to splendor, no short cut to fortune or fame. You must fearlessly fight for it, dare to be right for it. Failing, yet playing the game.

The test of man's merit is trouble, the proof of his work is distress. Much as you long for it, man must be strong for it. Work is the door to success.

HEALTH Is the greatest blessing in the world
 If you are HEALTHY you can work hard but not otherwise. HARD WORK means SUCCESS but you will NEVER be able to work very hard without HEALTH and STRENGTH If you require HEALTH and STRENGTH use
