SIR OLIVER'S REPLY.

A Strong Defense of the Plebiscite.Which Mr. Meredith, Along with His Followers, Condemns.

In reply to Mr. Meredith's condemnation of the popular vote on the question of prohibitory legislation, Sir Oliver Mowat
said:

"I have heard a good many weak speeches from the honorable gentleman, but never a weaker one than that which he has just made. The tendency which this bill proposes to have is one that has been called for by a very large proportion of the temperance people. But my honorable friend does not belong to the temperance people. He has no sympathy with them, and they know better than my honorable friend would be for the interest of temperance. On the very great advantage of having this plebiscite at the earliest possible moment is this: If it should be decided in the meantime, as I hope it will be decided, where the jurisdiction is, it is important that at the earliest moment the information that the vote will afford us should be had. I believe a prohibitory measure will never be passed until the Government is prepared to take it up, but this plebiscite will enable a government to be formed for the purpose of taking it up. If the result be what the temperance people expect it will be, a large majority in favor of prohibition, showing that such a law can be reasonably enforced, the difficulties in the way of a government taking up the measure are to a large extent removed. My honorable friend objects to the bill because it submits the question to the direct vote of the people, because it is not in accordance with the English practice, and a course not hitherto adopted in this country, but my honorable friend forgets that the practice has been adopted. We adopt it every day.
The Dominion Government passed the Scott Act, and that act only goes into operation by the direct vote of the people.
In our municipal measures there have been many cases where we have passed laws by which various matters go into effect upon the direct vote of the people approving of them. It is plain that the whole principle of referring a matter to the direct vote of the people before the law goes into effect is one that has been recognized over and over again, and it has been recognized over the whole Dominion. The fact that we are taking a plebiscite over the whole Province makes no difference at all. The effect of the local option law applied to the Domi-on or to the Province is of precisely the same nature. My honorable friend speaks of the undesirability of this question being mixed up with the municipal elections. I don't agree with the honorable member in that respect at all. It is of the greatest importance when we have a prohibitory law that we should have the sympathy and support of the municipal councils. Without that sympathy and support no such law can be enforced, and we propose that this should be ascertained.
Whatever influence this vote may have at the municipal elections, it cannot but have a beneficial influence so far as prohibition is concerned. He does not like the mixing of the question with other subjects, yet he would mix it up with questions of municipal politics.
My honorable friend refers to the expense which is to be borne by the various municipalities. If temperance sentiment is so weak in this country that the consideration of the expense necessary to ascertain the will of the people will turn the vote against prohibition, then it is quite plain that the temperance sentiment of this country is not sufficiently advanced for prohibition. I think he is entirely wrong in regard to that. I think the temperance sentiment is so strong that this matter of expense will not weaken it, and it is because my honorable friend knows very little about temperance people and temperance sentiment that he complains. He complains of the conditions under which the votes of women are to be taken. He says that it is impossible to do that.
There is no provision under which that could be accomplished, and he does not want it to be done. He does not believe in women having the right to vote either at municipal elections or at provincial elections. It is plain that he has urged objections to the measure because he has no sympathy with it whatever. His speech makes it plain that this is a measure we can safely pass, that is in the interest of prohibition, that should be passed in order to make clear what the prohibition sentiment of the country is. I am glad a plebiscite is to be taken. I have no doubt its results will be beneficial notwithstanding the objections of my honorable friend."
(Applause.)

Eighteen Years in the Service—Interesting Experiences—The First Trip—A Frolicsome Hare—Held Up by Tramps—
A Lurking Tailor's Narrow Escape—
Then and Now.

This, the 24th day of May, 1893, means something more than the natal day of Queen Victoria to the London Street Railway Company. It is the eighteenth anniversary of the formal opening of the road, and should old "Probs" be favorably inclined
the occasion, "Eighteen Years in the Service"
makes many changes in the personnel of
the employees of any company, and of all
the hands connected with the road at the commencement Mr. H. T. Smith, superintendent, is the only one now remaining
with the company.

Mr. Smith would naturally, then, be one well qualified to talk about the early life of the road. To an ADVERTISER reporter he
said:

"The first time we ran a car over the road was on Friday night, the 21st of May, 1875. It was raining in torrents, but that did not dampen the enthusiasm of a large crowd who enjoyed the free ride down.
Mr. Charles Lilley had a broom brigade ahead of us all the way sweeping the tracks. That car (No. 1) was the only one
we had at the time, and we brought it down to the station being in the course of building. On the first trip we got the car pretty well loaded with passengers before we reached Adelaide street. After we had crossed that street we met with a mishap.
The draw bolt dropped out, and the horse deliberately, and with malice aforethought, took to the sidewalk with the whiffletree attached, and enjoyed a gallop
as far as Maitland street, causing great mirth
among the forsaken passengers. On Monday, May 24, we got two more cars from
the shops and ran three cars all day long.
"After a while we got the line extended
from the stables to Salter's Grove, and a dearly stretch it was in those days. I don't think there were over ten or fifteen houses along the way, and there were no lights. Often when a man would turn his horse at the park he could not see the animal's head. Tramps used to infect that part of the town, and on several occasions they made attempts to hold up
the driver at the end of the trip, and rob
the cash box. Sgt. Jenkins, of the police force, was in our employ then and he tramped all night to bring him up but did not succeed. They made off across the park
on the arrival of help.

"I remember one time the narrow escape of an old man named Bell,
a tailor, living near the asylum.
It was in the month of November, in our first year, and I was driving my car in the dark, away east of the stables. Charley Lilley was with me. I was not aware of anything wrong until Lilley cried: 'Put on your brake for God's sake, there's a man lying across the rails.' The horse had stepped entirely over the track and was about to stop within eight inches of him.
The car would have gone over him as it
was, but the brake had been set so hard
as to throw all the wheels off the track.
We carried the man to the sidewalk and the way he cursed was awful. I did not get over the fright for many a day.

"Everything went along very smoothly
after that until November came around again
and we were burned out. At that time James Legg kept a liquor store at the corner of Dundas and Lytle streets. A tramp got in one night and set fire to the place. The fire communicated with our premises, but we managed to get out all
our cars, sleighs and horses, but lost all our harness and stable utensils. We would never have saved the Town Hall if it had not been for the fact that the
back tank, containing 1,000 gallons of water. The horses would have perished also, but for a smart young fellow
we had in our employ, who got into the
stable and cut the halter of every one of
the horses.

"Oh yes; eighteen years make quite a difference. Eighteen of 3 we now have 30 cars, 100 horses and 17 sleighs. The cars
are also heated in the winter time."
"And you are still waiting for a chance
to put in electricity?"

"Yes, and that time won't be long now;
my words. I don't think it any little task and you will find it away ahead of London in the matter of rapid transit.
Take Brantford for instance. Another thing I notice is the general 'get a move on'
that an association with an electric road
seems to inculcate. Everybody with a car is in a hurry. I don't know whether it is the effect of the electric fluid or not, but that's a fact. If you stand on the corner of King and Yonge streets, Toronto, and
notice a tramp coming along, even he will be in a hurry. But when a man comes to London everything seems to stand still.
Mr. Smith referred with pride to the fact that the company had voluntarily
given its men a ten-hour working system.

Eighteen Years Old.

The Street Railway Company's Anniversary.Superintendent Smith's Extended Connection With the Concern.

Eighteen Years in the Service—Interesting Experiences—The First Trip—A Frolicsome Hare—Held Up by Tramps—
A Lurking Tailor's Narrow Escape—
Then and Now.

This, the 24th day of May, 1893, means
something more than the natal day of Queen
Victoria to the London Street Railway Company. It is the eighteenth anniversary
of the formal opening of the road, and
should old "Probs" be favorably inclined
the occasion, "Eighteen Years in the Service"
makes many changes in the personnel of
the employees of any company, and of all
the hands connected with the road at the
commencement Mr. H. T. Smith, superintendent, is the only one now remaining
with the company.

Mr. Smith would naturally, then, be one
well qualified to talk about the early life of the road. To an ADVERTISER reporter he
said:

"The first time we ran a car over the
road was on Friday night, the 21st of May, 1875. It was raining in torrents, but that did not dampen the enthusiasm of a large crowd who enjoyed the free ride down.
Mr. Charles Lilley had a broom brigade
ahead of us all the way sweeping the tracks. That car (No. 1) was the only one
we had at the time, and we brought it
down to the station being in the course of
building. On the first trip we got the car
pretty well loaded with passengers before
we reached Adelaide street. After we had crossed that street we met with a mishap.
The draw bolt dropped out, and the horse
deliberately, and with malice afore-
thought, took to the sidewalk with the
whiffletree attached, and enjoyed a gallop
as far as Maitland street, causing great mirth
among the forsaken passengers. On Monday, May 24, we got two more cars from
the shops and ran three cars all day long.
"After a while we got the line extended
from the stables to Salter's Grove, and a dearly stretch it was in those days. I don't think there were over ten or
fifteen houses along the way, and there were no lights. Often when a man would turn his horse at the park he could not see the animal's head. Tramps used to infect that part of the town, and on several occasions they made attempts to hold up
the driver at the end of the trip, and rob
the cash box. Sgt. Jenkins, of the police force, was in our employ then and he
tramped all night to bring him up but did
not succeed. They made off across the park
on the arrival of help.

"I remember one time the narrow
escape of an old man named Bell,
a tailor, living near the asylum.
It was in the month of November, in our
first year, and I was driving my car in the dark, away east of the stables. Charley Lilley was with me. I was not aware of anything wrong until Lilley cried: 'Put on
your brake for God's sake, there's a man lying across the rails.' The horse had stepped entirely over the track and was
about to stop within eight inches of him.
The car would have gone over him as it
was, but the brake had been set so hard
as to throw all the wheels off the track.
We carried the man to the sidewalk and
the way he cursed was awful. I did not get over the fright for many a day.

"Everything went along very smoothly
after that until November came around again
and we were burned out. At that time James Legg kept a liquor store at the corner of Dundas and Lytle streets. A tramp got in one night and set fire to the place. The fire communicated with our premises, but we managed to get out all
our cars, sleighs and horses, but lost all our harness and stable utensils. We would never have saved the Town Hall if it
had not been for the fact that the
back tank, containing 1,000
gallons of water. The horses would have perished also, but for a smart young fellow
we had in our employ, who got into the
stable and cut the halter of every one of
the horses.

"Oh yes; eighteen years make quite a difference. Eighteen of 3 we now have 30
cars, 100 horses and 17 sleighs. The cars
are also heated in the winter time."
"And you are still waiting for a chance
to put in electricity?"

"Yes, and that time won't be long now;
my words. I don't think it any little task and you will find it away ahead of London in the matter of rapid transit.
Take Brantford for instance. Another thing I notice is the general 'get a move on'
that an association with an electric road
seems to inculcate. Everybody with a car
is in a hurry. I don't know whether it is the effect of the electric fluid or not, but
that's a fact. If you stand on the corner of King and Yonge streets, Toronto, and
notice a tramp coming along, even he will
be in a hurry. But when a man comes to London everything seems to stand still.
Mr. Smith referred with pride to the fact that the company had voluntarily
given its men a ten-hour working system.
Mr. Break was the right man in the right place, and seemed to feel with the men and their labors.

Colorless, Emaciated, Helpless

A Complete Cure by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is from Mr. D. M. Jordan, a retired farmer, and one of the most respected citizens of Otesago Co., N. Y.

"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of the gravel, and have since been troubled with my

Liver and Kidneys

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk.

I looked more like a corpse than a living being.

I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. I was badly emaciated and had no more color than a corpse's face.

Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and thought I would try it. Before I had finished the first bottle I had gained weight and my face and I began to feel hungry. After had taken two bottles I could eat anything without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat three days. I have now fully recovered, thanks to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I feel well and am well. All who know me will be glad to see me so well." D. M. JORDAN.

A Tribute to Mr. Wiman.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

I gave me great pleasure to read your remarks in your issue of the 17th inst., relating to Mr. Erasmus Wiman. He has been for many years the foremost Canadian in this country. No one has done so much to make known the good resources of Canada. He has given his wealth as freely as a spring gives forth water to provoke the best interests of his native land, as he saw them. We have differed radically in our views as to the future of Canada, and I have felt compelled to oppose his policy, but that has never disturbed our friendship for each other. I have seen my privilege to count him a friend for more than 30 years, and to know how intensely anxious he always has been to promote Canadian interests or aid any Canadian of good moral character who applied to him for aid. He came to New York for assistance. I hope and believe his financial embarrassment will be temporary. He deserves the sympathy and good will of his countrymen. I am sure he has the best wishes of this great community where he has labored so hard and uselessly for many years. Yours faithfully,

FRANK MASTLAND GREW.

The Keary Inquiry.

Investigation of the Charges Continued.

Evidence of the Witnesses for the Prosecution.

Mr. Keary Denies Sergeant Crawford's Allegations—Chief Williams Subjected to a Lengthy Cross Examination—The Defense Requests an Adjournment.

The finance committee met last evening to continue the investigation into the charges against Police Court Clerk John H. Keary. There were present Ald. Co. Welford, Taylor, Shaw, Thos. Jones and James Fitzgerald, Mayor Essery, City Solicitor Meredith, Police Court Clerk Keary and Messrs. E. Meredith, Q.C., and Love, his solicitor, City Solicitor Meredith and City Clerk Kingston. The defense agreed to representatives of the press being present.

THE DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT.

The statement of the defendant, Mr. Keary, was read and was to the effect that it was impossible that he had told Sergeant Crawford's informant what was alleged in the charge. He did not say that the evidence he could have given would have hanged the men. His evidence, he said, would have been that he was talking with Phair when Mr. Biggs told Phair that a man further south was drunk, disorderly and exposing his person. They then proceeded south, and he noticed a man apparently intoxicated with his arms around a post and his trousers apparently unadorned, but no exposure of his person. The chief of police drove by the scene of the tragedy after the time when Biggs met Phair and before Phair attempted to make the arrest. Mr. Keary told the police magistrate that Burke was acting in a manner to justify his arrest. He also admitted that he was in the court room until after 4:40, and that when he arrived Mr. McPhillips was addressing the jury. After hearing the judge express his opinion of the illegality of the arrest he felt that his evidence might have been of importance. Mr. Keary denied having concealed any information, and all the facts regarding his association with Mr. Phair immediately preceding the murder were known to the police officers, and that he was perfectly willing to give his evidence at the trial.

CHIEF WILLIAMS' STATEMENT.

Chief Williams' statement was to the effect that the day prior to the inquiry Mr. Keary told him that his evidence would have been of no use. He said that Mr. Keary was in the court room from the time that he (Chief Williams) gave his evidence.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

Chief Williams was then examined by Mr. Meredith and stated that Mr. Phair and Mr. Keary were apparently on about the same terms of friendship as other members of the police department. He said that Burke was under the influence of liquor, but could not say that he was exposing his person. He supposed him to be a man employed on the C. P. R. here who some times got drunk, but was always a quiet man. He did not hear of the shooting until he reached his house, when he received a telephone message. Detective Rider worked up the evidence, as he understood that that was his duty. Chief Williams did not detail any particular person to get up the evidence. There was no deposition taken from Mr. Phair, although on the day of the tragedy there was an attempt made to take it, but deceased was under the influence of morphia and unfit to give a statement. Phair was not fit to make any statement at any time after he was first put under the influence of morphia. Before Judge McMahon's charge to the grand jury last January he had told more than one person that the evidence was sufficient to hang both prisoners. Detective Rider was not told to get any particular evidence. Witness knew that no further evidence was procured after the case came before the grand jury last January. During the conversation with Mr. Keary before the inquiry Chief Williams thought Mr. Keary did not wish to give his evidence. Mr. McKillop knew that evidence Mr. Keary could give and it would be of no use and declined to call him. Mr. Keary never told him that he was willing to give his evidence and he (the chief) thought he did not wish to be inconvenienced by being put in a witness box. It never occurred to him (Chief Williams) was negligent in not interviewing witnesses.

Mayor Essery here interrupted, and objected on the ground that Mr. Meredith was trying Chief Williams and not Mr. Keary.

Chief Williams said he would not be bullied by Mr. Meredith and did not intend to be.

Continuing, Chief Williams said that Mr. Keary was in the court room when he gave his evidence. He was close to the north door, standing at first and afterwards sitting. This concluded the cross-examination.

Chief Williams then repudiated the allegation of Mr. Meredith that he had kept back any evidence. The best feelings had always existed between himself and Mr. Keary. Mr. Meredith always charged him with obtaining too much evidence. Now he was charging him with obtaining too little evidence.

DETECTIVE RIDER.

Detective Rider's statement showed that he had twice endeavored to find some evidence that would show what Burke was doing at the time Phair arrested him, but that he failed both times.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

Detective Rider said he knew of no reason why a dying deposition had not been taken. He did not question Mr. Keary, because Chief Williams had told him that his evidence was of no use.

SEARGANT CRAWFORD.

Sergeant Crawford stated that on the day after the trial a gentleman told him that Mr. Keary had said that his evidence would have hanged both prisoners. He had also told Mr. Rutherford. Sergeant Crawford said he had nothing to do with getting up the evidence for the trial. He said Mr. Keary was in the court house at the time when he (Keary) said he was there, namely when Chief Williams and the doctors were being examined.

David Rutherford stated that on the day after Phair was shot, Mr. Keary told him that he and Phair had seen Burke committing a misdemeanor, and that he had advised Phair to make the arrest.

Wm. Moore stated that Mr. Keary told him on the afternoon of the tragedy that he did not know what the excitement was. This was a few minutes after he had parted with Phair and before he had reached the police station.

Charles N. Perrin stated that he was positive that Mr. Keary was in the court room while several witnesses were examined and while the judge and lawyers addressed the jury and argued as to whether Detective Phair was justified in making the arrest. Mr. Perrin said he entered the court room at 3:45 and left at 5:50, and that during all that time Mr. Keary was in the same seat with him. The evidence of John Biggs was to the effect that two days after the trial of Burke and Wilson he met Mr. Keary in the waterworks office, and the latter told him that both he and Phair saw Burke with his person exposed.

Wm. Smith stated that a day or two after the trial Mr. Keary told him that he had his (Keary's) evidence been taken Burke and Wilson would not have got off so easily.

John Young stated that he saw Mr. Keary in the court room while the lawyers were addressing the jury.

Detective Nickle saw Mr. Keary in the court room, but could not say just when it was.

THE DEFENSE.

H. R. Schram, high constable, stated that Mr. Keary was not in the court room until the closing part of the trial when the prisoner's counsel was addressing the jury, and that he would take oath to that effect.

John A. Graham said that he had charge under the direction of the deputy sheriff in the matter of admitting persons into the court room during the trial of Burke and Wilson. While the prisoner's counsel was addressing the jury he found Mr. Keary requesting to be admitted to the court room and being refused by a constable. Mr. Graham took him upstairs and admitted him to the room. This was his first appearance in the room.

The defense then requested an adjournment in order that those who made the statements to the witnesses for the prosecution might be asked to be present. Their request was granted and the committee adjourned.

Ontario Legislature.

Passage of the Algonquin National Park Bill.

And the Bill to Amend the Voters' List Act—The Work of the Session Nearly Completed.

[From Our Own Representative.]

PARLIAMENT HOUSE, TORONTO, May 23.

The proceedings in the Legislature today were of an uninteresting character.

A large number of bills received their second and third readings. Among others which received a third reading was the bill to establish the Algonquin National Park and Balfour's bill to amend the Voters' List Act.

The House went into committee of supply and passed a number of items.

After recess the House went into committee on a number of bills, amongst which was Mechan's, to amend the Pharmacy Act. The act was amended by providing that until after July 1, 1894, nothing in the act shall affect the making of or dealing in patent or proprietary medicines.

It is expected the House will conclude its business on Thursday night and that prorogation will take place on Saturday.

THE DANGERS OF TRUSTS.

They Fleeced Investors as Well as Rob the Consumers of Products.

(New York Evening Post.)

Certainly recent events have shown that the dangers of trusts have been greater and more real to investors in their stocks than to consumers or the general public. A combination of certain factories is made under which an extravagant valuation is put upon each. To earn dividends upon the watered capital thus created a larger selling price must be had. The moment that advance in price is made some one starts to build an opposition factory, to be in turn bought out at a high price. This again forces the combination to attempt an advance, when the succession of events is repeated. The distillers' or whisky corporation is a good example of this sort of financing.

But even when honestly formed, with fair amounts of bonds or stock, the huge corporation has a new difficulty to face—namely, a lack of working capital. It takes money to run different mills in different States, to purchase the raw material in advance of its manufacturer and to carry the finished product until it can be sold. Distributing to former mill-owners but a reasonable amount of stock in the new combination will not remove this difficulty. Generally the managers try to find relief by putting in a commercial paper to an extent which even a light catalog of credits would render dangerous.

FINANCIAL BUBBLES.

It is a strange and striking commentary upon the credulity of human nature that so many foolish people always stand ready to snap at any investment of a speculative nature. Take for example the stocks that were so mercilessly hammered in Wall street recently. What do they represent? In some instances absolutely nothing but "water" and "hot air."

A few designing men get together and buy up all the whisky distilleries or all the cordage works in the country. They proceed to issue bonds on the properties acquired for more than their actual cost and clean up at once all the money that they put into the enterprise and a handsome profit in addition. And then they are ready "to work the public." They issue millions of dollars of preferred stock and of common stock. They issue glowing prospectuses setting forth the fabulous profits that the enterprises are sure to yield. They list the stock on Wall street and send it up or down five or ten points just to get people interested. Then they begin to sacrifice their holdings to eager buyers and the price of stocks that represent nothing but the cost of printing the stock certificates go rising skywards until the "insiders" are ready to unload.

When that time comes "the bottom" drops out of the market; there is a small panic on Wall street, and call loans go to 30 per cent. The lambs are shorn of their wool. The stock is then taken away from speculation for awhile until the time for shearing gets around again and then they reappear.

The professional gamblers of Wall street always have something new to offer. It used to be railroad stocks. The public, however, got taken in so often in this direction that they fought shy of them. Then the industrials were taken up, and so far they have worked like a charm. When they have done their work some new scheme will be hatched. And so it will continue until people who are not "on the inside" of Wall street "deals" learn that they are playing with loaded dice when they try their hand at speculation.

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy and general corrective, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of any other than salutary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, earache, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.

CENTRAL PRISON BINDER TWINE.

A general discussion in the Legislature last week, on the method of putting on the market the products of the binder twine factory at the Central Prison brought out a variety of suggestions from both sides of the house.

Mr. Waters thought that the best way of avoiding the difficulties in the case would be to use the township councils as distributing agencies, allowing a small percentage to cover the expense of the work. He could see a danger that middlemen might be able to deprive the farmers of the Province of any advantage that might arise from the establishment of the factory. Mr. Magwood advised the issuing of bulletins from time to time announcing prices and other matters in relation to the different lines manufactured. Mr. Clancy pointed out many difficulties in guarding against the exactions of middlemen. In summing up, Mr. Gibson explained that care would be taken to fix the price at a rate that would afford a reasonable return upon outlay; estimating the labor of prisoners at 50 cents a day. Sales would be made with a view to the interests of the Province and the consumers, and nothing of the nature of a monopoly would be permitted.

For the Sins of Another.

"Johnnie, come right in here; I want to lick you."

"Now what 'av I dun?"

"Ye ain't done nothin' but the baby is awful bad and I want ter lick yer for an example ter him."

Good Scheme.

May Blume (scoffingly)—I hear that you have wagered money that you would marry me.

Van Ische—Yes; will you marry me?

May Blume—If you wagered enough I will.

His Repentance.

"His patient must have been very ill to keep him away Sunday to Wednesday," remarked Oswald.

"To tell the truth," said Caroline, dropping her voice in a manner that sounded rather mysteriously, "we don't think he was with a patient or where he went. He came here in the middle of the night, and ran up Mark. It was the night subsequent to his death—Oswald I was to Lady Oswald's death."

"Yes," was the answer, gravely spoken. "When Mark came home that Sunday evening and told me that Lady Oswald was dead, I could not believe it; and then I went into hysterics. It was very foolish, of course, for hysterics do no good, but I could not help it. You have come down to attend the funeral to-morrow, I suppose."

"Yes," was the answer, gravely spoken. "Well—I was telling you about my uncle. He came here in the middle of the night and ran up Mark, who went down to him. When Mark came upstairs again he said Dr. Davenal was going away on some private errand which he had made a sort of secret of."

"Mark I fancy was only half to bed, and did not hear him clearly; all he understood was, that the doctor was going somewhere by train unexpectedly; that Mark was visiting a patient at a distance. Mark declared that he believed the doctor was only absenting himself to avoid attending the coroner's inquest."

"Why should Mark think that? Why should Dr. Davenal wish to avoid attending it?" reiterated Oswald, strangely interested, he scarcely knew why.

"I cannot tell you. I fancy that the admission slipped from Mark inadvertently, for he would not say a syllable more. The next day, Monday, I saw Sara. I asked her point blank where my uncle went, remarking that there seemed some little mystery connected with it, and she turned as white as death, and whispered to me not to speak so loudly, for the love of heaven."

"You'll take some tea, won't you, Oswald?" I shall be glad of an excuse for making it. Oswald, almost mechanically, said he would take some, and she rang the bell for the urn. He began to think all this more and more strange—ask himself what it tended to. Dr. Davenal had gone away to attend the inquest—and his daughter, when spoken to upon the subject had turned as white as the grave. What did it mean?

"Do you know the particulars of Lady Oswald's death?" he inquired as he stirred his tea.

"Yes. Don't you? She died from chloroform. They deemed it necessary to give it to her, and she never rallied from it."

"Which of them repeated Caroline, lifting her eyes and sinking the question, no doubt, a superfluous one. "They were both there; they would act in concert, one with the other. If you mean to cast the blame on them, Oswald I should say you must cast it conjointly. But they acted for the best."

"I do not cast the blame on them," he answered. "I don't understand the affair sufficiently yet to cast blame anywhere. It is a riddle to me."

"What is a riddle?" "How Dr. Davenal came to use chloroform at all."

"Why it is in almost universal use now," exclaimed Mrs. Gray, surprised at the remark. "There's no riddle in that."

Oswald Cray did not press it. In his opinion there was a riddle; one he began to think that he would not be any of solution. He finished his tea in silence. By and bye Mrs. Gray resumed.

"Mark seems not to like to talk of it. I asked him a great many questions, as was natural, but he put me off, saying I should be falling into hysterics again. I told him that was nonsense, now the shock was over; but he would not talk of it, seemed quite to wince when I pressed him. It was not pleasant subject for him, he said. And of course it is not; and still less so for my uncle, whose authority was Mark. However good their intentions were, it did kill her."

"Will Mark be long to you suppose?" inquired Oswald, breaking another long pause. "As if I could tell," Oswald said. "I have been expecting him every minute this hour past. When I grumble at Mark for staying out so long, he tells me I must be a little impatient. Nay, but you are not going to tell me, as he says, 'Mark is not to be in soon.'"

"I cannot wait any longer now," he answered. "I shall go to the morning. I suppose he is attending the funeral."

"Of course he will attend the funeral. I wish you would hurry away."

He repeated his apology and Caroline rang the bell. In point of fact he wanted to call on Dr. Davenal.

CHAPTER XVII.

CURIOUS OVERTS.

Scarcely had the dooclose on Mr. Oswald Cray when he met his mother. Mark was coming along at a quick pace.

"Oswald, is it you? Have you been to the abbey?" "I have been taking care with your wife, and waiting for you. She is nearly out of patience. Mark?" he continued, passing his arm within his brother and leading him a few steps away while he talked, "what a shocking thing this is about Lady Oswald."

"Ay, that it is. So unexpected. Won't you come in?"

"Not again to-night. I want to know, Mark, how was that chloroform was given to her?"

"If we had not deemed it for the best, we should not have given it," was Mark's answer.

"But—surely Dr. Davenal did not deem it would be for the best?"

Mark turned and looked at him; a quick, sharp glance. What do you know about it?" he asked.

"I don't know anything about it. I want to know," replied Oswald, thinking the remark strange. "I wish you would give me the full particulars. Mark, I cannot understand. I have a reason for not being able to understand why chloroform should have been given to Lady Oswald."

"We use chloroform very much now," interrupted Mark.

"Why should it have been given to Lady Oswald?" went on Oswald, with pointed emphasis.

"It was given to her as it was given to others—to deaden pain."

"Who performed the operation?"

"The doctor."

There was a pause. When Oswald Cray broke it, his voice was low, his manner hesitating. "Mark, will you pardon me if I ask you a strange question?—Do you believe from your very heart that when Dr. Davenal administered that chloroform to Lady Oswald he did think it would be for the best?"

Hesitating as Oswald's manner had been, Mark's was worse. He grew on a sudden flushed and embarrassed.

"Won't you answer me, Mark?" "I—yes—of course we thought it would be for the best."

"I asked did he think it?"

Mark plunged into an untruth. Some-what afraid of Oswald at the best of times, conscious that he was of a higher standard in moral and intellectual excellence than himself, he desired to stand well with him, to enjoy his good opinion; and perhaps there was not a single man in Hallingham to whom Mark would not have preferred his unhappy mistake, in all its wilfulness, to become known, rather than to his brother. They were also playing at cross purposes; Oswald was seeking to learn how far Dr. Davenal had been to blame. Mark believed that it was his own share of the blame that was sought to be arrived at.

"Yes, he thought it. Dr. Davenal would not use chloroform, or anything else, unless he believed it would be beneficial," rapidly went on Mark. "I never knew a man more successful in his treatment in a general way than he." But for all the apparent readiness of the words, they bore a certain evasiveness to Oswald's ears.

"Tell me the truth, Mark, tell me frankly," he rejoined. "Is there not some secret—I don't know what else to call it—connected with this business? Something wrong about it?"

For a moment Mark began to deliberate. He was held at bay by the straightforward questions of his brother. And his brother saw the hesitation.

"Oswald, it is of no use to press me upon this matter. You will readily conceive how sore it is to myself and to Dr. Davenal. Had it been some poor rabbley patient who had died through it, that poor stoker at the infirmary, for instance, it would not have been of so much account; but—"

"Be silent, Mark!" burst forth from Oswald with a dash of anger. "I will not listen to such doctrine. The lives of the poor are every bit as valuable as are the lives of the rich. You did not learn that from Dr. Davenal."

"What I meant was, that there'd not be half the public fuss," said Mark, looking tired, and doing his best to explain away the impression given by his words. "I am sure there has been enough fuss in the town since her death was known, but I have not heard of one single person casting blame on the doctor. Why should you seek to cast it? Errors in judgment are committed now and then in medical practice, just as they are in everything else, and there's no help for it; they happen to the very best of us. If we could see the end of a thing at the beginning, it would be different; but we can't. Could its effect on Lady Oswald have been anticipated, we should have seen the chloroform in the sea before it should have been given her. It was done for the best."

"You think then that Dr. Davenal believed the giving her would be for the best," persisted Oswald, after listening impatiently to the excited answer.

Again came the perceptible hesitation on the part of Mark; again the flush of embarrassment rose to his cheek. Oswald Cray noticed it.

"I am quite sure that all the doctor ever did for Lady Oswald he did for the best," said Mark Cray plucked up courage and spirit as he said this—"that night was the only night which had gone before it. I cannot think what you are driving at, Oswald."

A Wonderful Cure.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY. About a year ago I took a very severe cold, had a violent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, so I took a bottle and when I had used about one half the bottle showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had almost disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the VEGETABLE DISCOVERY the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

An organ has been purchased to assist the choir of the First Presbyterian Church, Westminster. The choir will also be increased by a number of singers.

The Patrons of Industry of Pond Mills have changed their meeting place from the schoolhouse to the new sawmill factory, where they are intending to partition an apartment of upstairs in the dry room, in which to meet. The members are increasing steadily.

OXFORD.

The bakery and restaurant establishment of Farrell & Co. has, owing to financial troubles, given up business.

In response to a request from the W. C. T. U., the question of temperance was discussed in all the pulpits of Woodstock Sunday. The ministers generally indorsed the agitation for prohibition, but Rev. Mr. Farthing, at New St. Paul's, did some plain speaking on the other side. The church of Christ, said he, was at war with evil of every form, and among these was the evil of drunkenness. No Christian church was doing its duty that did not endeavor to save mankind from evils of every description, but he thought the sympathy with the extreme utterances of the so-called temperance leaders of the present day. Adopt prohibition, he said, and you make a criminal of every man who gets a glass of wine and brings it into his own house. While he held that the time was not ripe for prohibition, he urged his hearers to carry on the work of educating the people in the cause of temperance reform.

The late Hugh Ross, of Oxford county, was 82 years of age, was born in Scotland and came to Canada in 1835. He was a prominent farmer.

Alice Rowe, an employee of the Woodstock woolen mills, had one of her hands severely crushed Monday, by having it caught in a picker. The hand had to be amputated at the wrist.

DONALD CAMPBELL DROWNED. A Former Resident of Lobo Meets a Sad Death in Portland, Mich.

A large number of residents in this district will regret to learn of the death of Mr. Donald Campbell (who formerly lived in Lobo township) at Portland, Mich., by drowning in the Grand River. The observer of that place has provided full particulars of the sad affair. It appears that a dam in the vicinity of a mill partially owned by Mr. Campbell had been greatly damaged by recent freshets. In company with Messrs. C. J. Warren and Harvey Soules he set out in a small skiff to ascertain the extent of the injuries occasioned. Becoming involved in a swiftly-flowing current, the boat was upset. Mr. Campbell's two companions were with great difficulty rescued. This unfortunate gentleman, however, receiving a blow on the left side of the head when the boat overturned, was, it is supposed, stunned. He immediately sank. The body floated considerable distance down the river before it was recovered. At the funeral service, held a few days after, which was largely attended, the A. O. U. W., of which deceased had been a prominent member, and which had for ten years, directed the proceedings, in fact were unceasing in their efforts to show their respect for their deceased brother and their sympathy with his sorrowing relatives. Many beautiful floral offerings adorned the casket. The funeral service in which Mr. Campbell was held was strikingly shown by the fact that every business place in town was closed during the service. The employees of Griffin & Campbell were given the day off. Mr. Campbell was 57 years of age. He was born in Glenagarry, but his parents came west to Lobo when he was two years of age. There he grew to sturdy manhood. He became prominent, and was one of those who aided materially in the construction of the G. W. R. In 1865 he returned to Michigan, and finally settled in Portland in the fall of 1869. There his eminent business qualities soon asserted themselves, and he established a planing mill, and was doing a large and increasing business, when he married Miss Libbie Weid, of Danby, and leaves a widow and one daughter to mourn his loss.

Mr. Campbell has a number of brothers and sisters residing in this vicinity. They are: Peter Campbell, Lobo; Robert Campbell, resident on the old homestead, lot 18, con. 9, and Alex. Campbell, Carleton Place. The sisters are: Mrs. Sarah McIntyre, Lobo; Mrs. Anna Campbell, Metairie, and Mrs. C. McNugent, Michigan. These attended the funeral, along with Donald Campbell, brother-in-law; Duncan McIntyre, Robert and Duncan J. Campbell, Lobo, nephews; Alex. McNaughton, brother-in-law, Duncan and James McNaughton, nephews; Miss Margaret Campbell, niece; Duncan Campbell and wife; Grace Campbell, Duncan McNaughton, Alex. Campbell, and John Carr, Brice, Mich.

This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all the failures and successes, and can therefore judge: "I know of no medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boschee's German Syrup. Last winter a lady called at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as a few doses had given her relief."

FAIR AND COOL.

Toronto, May 23—11 p.m.—The storm center which was over Michigan and Lake Huron last night has since this morning moved very quickly eastward, causing numerous local showers and heavy thunder storms in Ontario and Quebec and a westerly gale on the lakes. In the Maritime Provinces the weather has been fair, and in Manitoba cloudy with cool northerly winds. Minimum and maximum temperatures: Esquimaux, 40°—60°; Calgary, 34°—52°; Edmonton, 38°—62°; Prince Albert, 32°—60°; Qu'Appelle, 28°—58°; Winnipeg, 28°—50°; Toronto, 47°—60°; Montreal, 50°—74°; Quebec, 44°—50°; Halifax, 48°—62°.

TO-DAY'S PROBABILITIES.
TORONTO, May 24—1 a.m.—Probabilities for the next 24 hours for the lower lakes region (covering the peninsula and as far east as Belleville) are: Moderate to fresh winds; some light local rains, but for the most part fair and cool.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

May 24.

63—Biblical scholars have decided that this was the Day of Pentecost—10 days after the ascension of Jesus Christ.

1612—Robert Cecil, earl of Salisbury and minister to James I. died.

1707—Karl von Linné (Linnaeus), famous naturalist, born at Rasmala, Sweden, died 1778.

1750—Stephen Girard, eccentric millionaire and philanthropist, born near Bordeaux, France; died in Philadelphia 1831.

1765—George Brydges, Lord Rodney, British naval hero, died.

1785—Silas Wright, first governor of New York, born at Amherst, Mass.; died 1847.

1819—Savannah, the first steamer to cross the Atlantic, left Savannah; reached Liverpool in 25 days. On the same day Queen Victoria was born.

1850—Miss Jane Porter, writer of her novels, "Thaddeus of Warsaw" and such, died; born 1776.

1871—Georges Darboy, archbishop of Paris, was murdered by the communists.

1876—William Lloyd Garrison, abolitionist and journalist, died in New York; born 1835.

1882—Queen Victoria's seventy-third birthday was celebrated with great ceremony throughout the British empire.

LONDON AND ENVIRONS.

Messrs. Wm. Wanless, jun., and W. Grant left last night for Chicago.

Chas. Gould has taken out a building permit for a residence on Stanley street to cost $700.

The McCall Oil Company, of Toronto, has been incorporated, and will do business in Petrolia. John Wolfe, of this city, is a member.

Local aldermen have received an invitation from the street railway company to go to Toronto at the company's expense, and examine the working of the system there.

Mr. John Askew, of the Imperial Bicycle Club, Petrolia, and Messrs. W. Symington, A. B. McMurtrie and Ray and others, will compete in the St. Thomas races to-day.

The kindergarten class in the new Wortley road school, South London, was opened yesterday morning by Miss Henderson, who has been teaching the afternoon session in the Freeman school. Twenty-five pupils were entered on the register.

Mr. Frederick Abbott, accompanied by Miss M. T. Stevenson, of Guelph, Miss Nello McFarley, of Teeswater, and Miss Fay, of this city, will leave in a few days for the Northwest and Pacific coast. A concert will be given by Craig Byron, I. O. E., in Foresters' Hall, Craig street, on Monday night. P. D. D. Bro. John Hicks occupied the chair, and the following programme was carried out: Highland Fling, Master Bertie Allister; comic duet, the Messrs. Taylor; sword dance, George May; song, Mrs. Long; comic song, Harry Hogg; instrumental selection, Chas. Williamson; hornpipe, Master May; comic song, J. O'Neil; bone and organ selections, Messrs. Shaver, Walker and Blakie; comic song, J. O'Neil; Irish jig, Haggle Gull; the whole concluding with a farce by Messrs. Williamson, O'Neil and Hogg.

A Toronto exchange says: "In January last Col. Rankin, father of the actor, McKee Rankin, died in Windsor. He left, among other estates, property in Algoma worth £1,000, or $80,000, which he conveyed to Henry Lye, the liquidator of the Central Bank, for an annuity of $1,200. Now a son, George Rankin, of London, and Mrs. S. V. Hutchinson, niece of the late colonel, of this city are seeking to set aside this conveyance, claiming that it was incomplete and imprudently made. To fortify themselves they have filed a lis pendens upon the property. Their claim was tested in Chambers yesterday morning by a motion to have the lis pendens removed, but the court adjourned the motion for a week to allow a settlement."

Gives Character and Standing.

Advertising gives character and standing to a firm. Go into any community as an entire stranger, pick up the daily papers published there. Look for their largest advertisers and you can invariably depend upon the fact that you have found the most reliable and desirable firms in that community.

Vaudeville Concert.

There was a fair attendance in the East End Hall last night when the recent vaudeville concert was repeated by special request. The performance of the juvenile dancers, Masters May Galbraith, Bertie Allister, and Miss Susie McGill, was the center of attraction. The following also took part in the programme: Miss Berghin, Thos. Hogg and Miss Laura Hammett. A well-patronized assembly was held after the concert.

At the Grand.

Erna Kendall made his second appearance before a London audience last evening. "A Pair of Kids" is a play with just enough plot incidentally in the construction to occasion the presentation of some excellent speaking; Carlotta's serpentine dance is a dream of graceful, rhythmic motion, and the innumerable jokes are of a spontaneous, contagious nature. There will be a matinee on Sunday.

Lily White Water White Oil is a reliable oil for family use. Ask your dealer for it. They will keep it to hold their trade. Over 100 dealers sell it in the city. No extra price; same price as ordinary oil. Orders solicited. Telephone No. 307.

EMPIRE OIL COMPANY.

see this afternoon at 2 o'clock, with the usual evening performance.

The Water Commissioners.

At last evening's meeting of the water commissioners Mr. James Thomas appeared on behalf of Mr. Wm. Peacock, asking that a water main be laid on Beaconsfield street (a new thoroughfare), off Wortley road.

Referred to the engineer. A similar petition was received from four residents of Nelson street, between Clarence and Wellington streets. The engineer will consider this application also. A main was asked for by P. Shower to be laid on Florence street. Referred to the engineer. A similar decision was given in the case of Henry Peters, who wants the service extended on Victoria street, between Wellington and Waterloo streets.

A recommendation, made by Engineer Moore, that a four-inch main be laid on Hyman street, 150 feet east of Oak street, and that a diaphragm pump be procured was adopted. Disbursements to the amount of $1,179 87 were recognized by the board.

The W. C. T. U.

The usual semi-monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held yesterday afternoon.

The subject of the day was of a particularly interesting character. Rev. Canon Richardson was present, and discussed for a short time on "The Gift of the Holy Ghost," much to the profit of all present.

An excellent paper on sacramental wine, written by Mrs. Dr. Arnold, was read, after which Miss Lilywhite favored the audience with a beautifully rendered song, "Fermatation or the Formation of Alcohol," clearly explaining the cause and effect. The evils of putting liquor in cooking and the use of home-made wines called forth a warm discussion. At the next meeting, to be held June 13, reports from superintendents will be read, items of interest concerning the temperance work will be given, and it is expected that the Rev. W. Higby will conduct the Bible lesson.

Sixty-Four Men Discharged.

The expected has happened, and the freight department at the G. T. R. shops here have been closed down. This occurred last night, and with it 64 men got their "red ticket." The discharged men have no hope of re-employment. They are not simply laid off, but discharged unconditionally and without warning. I came like a thunderbolt on the men, who, for the most part, have families to support. The branch of the works situated at the old G. T. R. engine house has been shut down entirely, and about 50 men from there. The foreman (Wm. Reid) is supposed to take Mr. Sam Sercombe's place at the regular shops. Mr. Sercombe recently was transferred to Montreal. The balance of the men were laid off from the regular shops. This leaves probably 250 men all told in the employ of the G. T. R. shops here. "I don't think I'll buy any firecrackers for the boys to-morrow," said one of the discharged men to a reporter last night.

Concert at Ballymore.

The temperance hall near Ballymore was filled to its utmost capacity a few evenings ago on the occasion of an entertainment under the auspices of the B. O. E. of Industry. The chair was occupied by Mr. George Wrigley, of London, who spoke briefly on the progress of the order and introduced a lengthy and very superior programme of song, music and recitation.

Sam Fax, of London, appeared in his best in about a dozen numbers and was received with manifestations of the greatest pleasure. Miss Lilywhite, also of London, sang with much acceptance, and Mr. Bradford, London, gave two excellent musical selections. Miss Anderson rendered several musical selections admirably, with Messrs. Smith and Ball, and was encored. Miss Laekie gave two recitations in good style, and Mr. George Jackson sang a couple of humorous songs. Miss Be. Cornish, London, acted as accompanist for Mr. Fax. The receipts were nearly $35, and the committee, Messrs. Guest, Knapp and McLeod, are to be congratulated on the success of the entertainment.

LONDON, CANADA.

London and suburbs have a population of 35,000 persons.

London is situated in the garden of Canada, midway between the Niagara and the Detroit Rivers.

A Mysterious Principle.

We are blessed by a mysterious principle known as life. By its influence we are able to maintain our existence in the midst of agents which are constantly seeking our destruction. Our bodies are composed of elements which exist everywhere in the matter around us, but gathered into new combinations and moulded into peculiar forms.

Men and women—the old and young—are not all blessed with vigorous, strong, robust life. Unfortunately for Canada, we have our thousands who barely move and breathe; they do not possess that vigor, strength and health which means true life. Can any sane individual assert that the weary, tired, broken-down, nervous, sleepless and dyspeptic man or woman enjoys life as they should? We know that many of them are weary and tired of lives of suffering.

Hold! suffering mortals. Do not despair; maintain courage and hope; there is rescue for you if you wish to walk the pleasant highway of health and true life. Know you not that Williams' Royal Crown Remedy banishes the foes by which you are beset? Are you not aware that this remedy emancipates the slaves of disease and suffering?

You have been asking for freedom from pain for many years; physicians and advertised remedies have deceived you. Now you have the true agency of health offered; will you accept it? We guarantee cure, satisfaction and new life; can the power of mortal man promise greater blessings.

Williams' Royal Crown Remedy is King; Williams' Royal Crown Remedy is a conqueror; its triumphs are multitudinous and wonderful. Try it, and know what true life means.

HATS! Just arrived, 2 cases more Senator, Harvard, Dunlap, Savory, in latest colors.

Use the Best.

is a good motto. It is particularly good when applied to anything which we use daily at our own meals. Bread may truly be called the staff of life and we cannot be too careful as to what we put into it. Good health is of too great importance to be trifled with, and biscuits or pastry made with the alum powders which are so commonly sold in this country, are very injurious, leading to dyspepsia and numerous other troubles resulting therefrom. The pure cream of tartar and soda baking powders are healthful in every respect. In this class of powders the Pure Gold brand has obtained the highest position and is always reliable.
