A SUDDEN DEATH

Old Resident Passed Away While Grandson is Conducting A Church Service

From Our Own Correspondent.
Thamesville, Sept. 15.—A sad death occurred in Bothwell on Sunday in the person of Mr. Carter, Rev. Mr. Little's grandfather, which occurred while Rev. Mr. Little was in Thamesville conducting services in St. James church.

Charles Mayhew and Master Nelson are attending the fair in London.

Dr. and Mrs. Fraser left yesterday for Fort Lambton, where they will spend a short holiday.

Mrs. Millard, of Chatham, is the guest of Mrs. Walter Kryderman.

W. B. Albertson is expected home from St. Louis, and Kansas City. He will be accompanied by his daughter, Miss Violet Albertson.

The Women's Literary and Art Club will meet early in October for re-organization. The time this season will be devoted to the new western provinces of Canada and the people inhabiting these districts.

Rev. Mr. Colles, I. P. S., accompanied by Mr. Cowley, Inspector of Schools, Ottawa, visited Thamesville school on Friday. Mr. Cowley is compiling statistics in connection with Continuation work. These efforts will prove of valuable assistance to the schools in question.

W. B. Albertson returned from his holiday trip to-day. Wm. Hubbell, who has had charge here, will return to Chatham to-day.

Charles Mayhew and Master Nelson returned from London yesterday.

Walter Ferguson was to have taken one of the C. P. R. western trains, and we are glad to know escaped to a horror.

Mrs. Kryderman and Miss Millard spent yesterday in London.

Rev. Mr. McInnis will conduct service as usual in St. James church on Sunday.

Louie McInnis, Chatham Model, is spending the week end at the manse.

HIS EXPLANATION

Mr. McArthur Now Says he is Willing To Pay Good Salaries To Kindergarten Assistants

Editor Planet:
In your editorial in Friday's Planet re kindergartens, you state "that while at the last meeting of the School Board I protested against any increase in the expense of the kindergartens, presumably because the municipal elections are close at hand, that last spring, with the elections nearly a year away, I moved to increase the expenditure, even where it was not asked." I have no doubt you refer to my action in asking for, and voting for an increase in salary for the five assistants in the kindergartens. At that time the salaries of Teachers were being fixed and I asked for an increase of five dollars per month for the kindergarten assistants, thus increasing their salaries from $240 to $300 per annum. Had the time been December, and the elections only a few days away, instead of the spring, with the elections in the dim future, I would have worked and voted in exactly the same way and I do not think there are many ratepayers in this fair city who think that $300 per annum is too much for any lady holding a position in our schools.

Yours respectfully,
WM. D. McARTHUR.

WANT WATERWORKS

Ridgetown, Sept. 15.—At a meeting of the executive of the Business Men's Association last evening, the question of a general system of waterworks for the town was discussed with much favor.

It was pointed out that a supply could be obtained almost anywhere on the ridge, and while the water is soft, it would be a great boon for owners of steam engines, as no scale would form on the inside of the boilers, as in the case of hard water. The extreme dry spell this summer has dried up several wells about town, and many citizens are thereby put to great inconvenience. It is thought that if a by-law were submitted at the coming municipal elections, the ratepayers would grasp the opportunity and carry it by a handsome majority.

It might be possible for the municipality to secure control of the electric plant at the same time, and thus run the two together. If this could be done the corporation would have one deep well to start with that would do much towards supplying the town.

THE TWO JOHNS

The attraction at the Brisco Theatre to-morrow night is the musical farce comedy, "The Two Johns." The prices are only 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents, which assures a packed house, as the company is a high class organization, and the play is similar to I. O. U., with even a better reputation for fun.

LOCAL MAN'S THRILLING ESCAPE IN OTTAWA FIRE

Will Shillington, Of Chatham, Jumped From Window Of Third Storey—Scenes Of Confusion Described

Will Shillington, of this city, was a guest at the Gilmour Hotel, Ottawa, Saturday night, when that building was destroyed by fire. Many of the morning papers in their despatches from Ottawa mentioned Mr. Shillington as among the missing, but he has since arrived home safe and sound, none the worse of his experience, except for the loss of a vest and a valuable watch and chain which were destroyed in the conflagration.

Mr. Shillington was sleeping in the third storey when the fire broke out. "I got off very fortunately," said Mr. Shillington to a Planet reporter, who hunted him up this morning. "I had to jump about twenty feet to a building adjoining the rear of the hotel. I landed safely, and beyond the jolt I was unhurt. One man who jumped to the same roof after me had the misfortune to break one of his legs. He must have jumped a greater distance than I."

"As soon as the alarm was sounded, I grabbed all my belongings I could think of at the time, and threw them out the window, but I forgot my vest, which contained my watch and chain. I did not remember them till after I was out of the building. There was a great scramble when it became known that the house was on fire, and many of the guests had thrilling escapes. It was a thrilling experience for me, and I was glad to get off as safely as I did. As is usual at such times, everyone got very much excited, and they might be seen jumping from windows all over the building."

The later despatches relative to the fire describe it as almost amounting to a horror.

The fire started in the elevator shaft. It is claimed that guests of others had carelessly thrown papers down the elevator shaft, on top of which some one dropped a lighted match.

Stephen Perreault, the hotel electric engineer, at the first alarm went down in the elevator with the laughing remark that "a pile of water would do the trick. He jumped to the cellar, the elevator not going all the way down, and pushed open the cellar door, to be met with a mass of smoke and flame."

The elevator made three trips, and then the stairs were in flames, preventing any further work.

Mr. B. A. Conroy took a flying leap from a fourth storey window to the cross bars of a telephone pole, and descended to the ground through a mass of wires.

The hotel building is valued at $75,000, well covered by insurance. Other losses will make the total fully $150,000.

There are all sorts of rumors abroad as to men having been sent to rooms from the bar on the night of the fire, but the management deny this.

Mr. Windsor, of New York, who got out, says that in rushing down the hall he stumbled over several prostrate forms and thinks it highly improbable that they could have escaped.

FURTHER DETAILS.
Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Seven persons who were supposed to be in the Gilmour Hotel, destroyed by fire on Friday night, are unaccounted for, and it is feared that all of them fell victims. They are: William Wilson, Montreal.

Miss Loveday, Toronto.
Shillington, address unknown.
Quinn, address unknown.
Mrs. A. Beckett, Ottawa.

Miss E. O'Neill, Ottawa.
Miss Renaud, address unknown.
Miss Loveday, factory inspector of Toronto, arrived at the hotel on Friday night about 8 o'clock and registered. It appeared that she had come direct from Toronto. She was given a room and proceeded to it. Shortly afterwards she came down stairs and asked one of the clerks the way to McLaren street. From McLaren street she went to Hintonburg, a suburb of Ottawa. It is supposed that she returned to the hotel shortly before 11 o'clock and retired. The fire broke out at 11.15 o'clock.

It is known definitely that Miss O'Neill, the head waitress of the hotel, is lost. Prayers for the repose of her soul were offered in St. Patrick's Church yesterday morning.

Mrs. A. Beckett was a well-known milliner on Sparks street, Ottawa. She had been in business for a number of years and roomed at the Gilmour Hotel. Her bedroom was quite near that of the late Miss O'Neill. She was not at her place of business on Saturday and it is believed that she is dead.

Three of the guests of the hotel who were unaccounted for are Messrs. Shillington and Quinn, and Miss Renaud. The clerk of the hotel cannot remember their addresses.

Fire Chief Provost said last night that so far no human remains had been found. He does not anticipate, however, that any will be discovered, from the fact that the fire worked its way downwards from the top. As each storey fell the contents of the bedrooms would be more and more consumed. Some rings have been found. A careful search cannot be undertaken until the walls are taken down, which work will be begun to-morrow.

The injured survivors are all reported doing well.

Rev. Mr. Edmonds, of Leamington, conducted very successful harvest home services in the English church here yesterday.

Forty hours devotion services commenced in St. Francis church yesterday morning.

Mrs. J. I. Hill has returned from an extended visit with her parents at Kincardine.

Mrs. Lang is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Comecky, in Detroit.

Mrs. Macdonald is in Saturday to visit friends in Detroit.

A PRETTY CITY

Charles Reed, of Toronto, an old Chatham resident, is spending a few days with his old friends here. He at one time lived on the Raleigh Plains, and was a great friend of Chief Holmes. He left here twenty years ago, and this is his first visit to his old home. He is now 83 years of age but looks more like 65. He walked into the police station Tuesday morning. The Chief was there but Mr. Reed did not recognize him. He asked if Mr. Holmes was in, and the Chief laughingly remarked, "No, but Charles Reed is." It was a surprise for Mr. Reed that Mr. Holmes could remember him so well. Mr. Reed thinks that Chatham is the prettiest city he ever visited outside of Toronto. He had no idea that Chatham would ever become such an important and busy city. He finds a great difference in twenty years.

IT WAS PLEASING

Dolly Varden Drew A Big House And Everyone Was Perfectly Satisfied

The comic opera, "Dolly Varden," was greeted at the Brisco, Saturday evening by a large and fashionable audience. The good attendance augurs well for the success of the season 1906-07, which has just opened.

The attraction proved a worthy one, and judging from the amount of applause it received, made a decided hit with Chatham people. Dolly Varden, unlike many other comic operas, does not depend so much on the songs and jests throughout for its success, but on the vim and action of the piece; one weak role in the whole company would make it a flat failure. Saturday night's audience witnessed the play as put on by a well-balanced company, each and everyone of whom puts his or her life right into the lines, so to speak. It's the ginger to the play that attracts and holds the audience.

Lillian Spencer, who takes the role of Dolly Varden, is a sprightly little girl full of life and high spirits. She has a certain charm that seems to bring the audience right her way from the first. The role of Dolly Varden is a difficult one to take. It is one continual mixture of mischief, scheming and sentiment, with a little caprice and pathos thrown in, giving originality to the character and spice of the lines.

A. Waltersed makes an ideal Captain Belleville, and to his jovial love songs he adds a tone of confidence and buoyancy that is in strict harmony with Dolly's piquant and impulsive nature. The impersonation of Jack Fairfax, Dolly's guardian, is taken by Mr. W. H. May, whose rich, clear voice captivated his hearers on his every appearance. Clara Farm as Letitia Fairfax is another member of the company whose singing brought forth much applause.

All in all the attraction Saturday night was a very satisfactory one, and everyone went away well pleased with it.

The next attraction at the Brisco Opera House will be The Two Johns, which is the bill for Tuesday, September 18.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1906.

"SMALL POTATOES."

In Saturday's Banner appeared a column of stuff headed in bold, black letters "Editorial." If the Banner's childlike editor had only ordered a little larger and blacker faced type for his heading, and changed the wording from "Editorial" to "Rubbish," it would have been a more appropriate introduction to his foolish prattle. The article appeared on the first page. Evidently our reclusive friend was possessed with the conceited idea that he had done something wonderful, and ordered it put in a conspicuous place, where someone would read it.

The subject of this outburst of simple language was the report of the Western Conservative Association's meeting in London, which appeared in The Planet. As was stated in this journal on Saturday, a typographical error occurred making Mr. Clements "condemn" in stead of "commend" Premier Roblin, of Manitoba. The correction was made before the Banner was printed on Saturday. A copy of The Planet containing the correction was in the hands of the Banner before their paper was run off, and yet they did not have the common courtesy to refrain from printing their silly and untruthful yarn. This is indicative of the amount of manhood contained in the make-up of the Banner minions. They still have the opportunity of at least retracting their steps, and of correctly placing Mr. Clements' position in this matter before their readers. They quoted the first report and insinuated all kinds of motives for Mr. Clements' supposed motion to "condemn" Mr. Roblin. It is now up to them to quote the correction, and be fair and honest with Mr. Clements, by explaining that his motion was to COMMEND the Manitoba Premier.

A NEWSPAPER'S MISSION.

The Banner is at present puzzling over how The Planet, a Conservative newspaper, can possibly have sufficient independence to quote from the Ridgetown Dominion, an editorial, in which some sound advice is offered to the Conservative party. The Banner is shocked. As a Liberal newspaper, they have always understood it to be their duty to uphold everything which is done by the Liberal party, both good and bad. If it is bad, twist it around and make it look good. As a result the Banner has got into a rut. People know what they will read before the paper comes out, and thus the Banner's influence is nil as far as political questions are concerned. It is thus of no use to either party and bears little influence towards bettering the conditions of political and social life. If the outlook for Liberal supremacy is dark, everything is always bright and rosy in the Banner, and as a result it deceives its own friends, and is a common joke among the people who know. A Conservative, no matter how good he is, has to be roasted, but such roasting is harmless when the prejudices of the paper are made known. It is a repetition of the old fable of the shepherd and the wolf. The Banner might learn from a few of the Liberal organs who are of some use to their party. For example this is the candid advice offered to the Reform party by the Dundas Banner (Liberal):

"The gathering together of a few leaders at Toronto, or the trading on the record or policy of the past will not cement the Reform party into a united force ready to again assume the reins of government two years hence. There must be a removal of some of the old fossils who have outlived their usefulness and young men with brighter and more up-to-date ideas brought to the front."

The Toronto Globe has set the pace for other Ontario journals by establishing a western office at Winnipeg. F. A. Acland, a capable journalist who has already contributed letters from the Northwest, will be in charge. The Globe should find this a profitable move.

Gives so much importance to the member's opinions, shows that they are forced to admit that Mr. Clements is in pretty close touch with affairs, and the doings of the people at Ottawa.

JUST A LITTLE BIT
OFF THE TOP

All this dry weather may be only a snare to make the fall fair director believe that the weather man is going to be good for once during exhibition time.

The heavy taxes are the result of the Liberal government's generosity to the C. T. R. railway capitalists, who are building a railway for the people to pay to ride on.

The Two Johns is the next attraction at the Opera House. It isn't the first or only play in Chatham, however, that has been made on a pair of Jacks.

If the Banner would take a shovel and clean before their own door before they start to dust ours with feather-weight editorials, they might get credit for having some little slice of that virtue known as consistency.

A recently arrived Englishman writing to the Toronto Globe, says that as far as he can make out Canadians "wear clothes ten times too large for them, eat like pigs, and have manners like savages." This speech is characteristic of these emigrant gentry, who still wonder why there is a prejudice against them in this country.

DEFIANT.
The Straw Hat never turns a hair: It calmly says: Oh, Fudge! Long as the weather keeps so fair, I simply will not budge.

First Steamer on the Pacific.

The Beaver, the first steam-propelled vessel to ply on the Pacific Ocean, bade farewell to England on Aug. 29, 1835, and started on her long and memorable cruise to Fort Vancouver. It was built on the Thames to the order of the Hudson's Bay Co., and after much deliberation it was decided that she should be equipped with steam. This was a great feat, as it was only six years before this that Stephenson had run his famous locomotive "The Rocket." The Beaver was a side-wheeler, and on its trial trip made over nine miles an hour. Her crew consisted of 26 men, and she was equipped with five nine-pounder guns. King William, the sailor king, was present at the launching. The Beaver has also the distinction of being the first steamer to cross the Atlantic from east to west. The Royal William, built at Quebec, crossed in 1833 from Pictou to London, making the passage in 25 days, but it was 1835 before vessels succeeded in making the entire westward journey under steam. The Atlantic safely crossed, the Beaver rounded Cape Horn, and then entered the Pacific. It was April 4, 1836, before the Beaver reached her destination on the Pacific coast, exploring the harbor of Esquimaux, and carried the builders of the present city of Victoria. It was in her furnace, too, that were tested the first specimens of British Columbia coal. After 53 years of service the Beaver's career was brought to a close, the vessel being wrecked on the rocks in attempting to make Burrard Inlet one night in July, 1888.

Interlinear Bibles.
The Cambridge University Press will issue shortly a Bible so printed that both the authorized and revised versions may be read from the same text, without difficulty, and without need of reference from text to margin or from one text to a second. The method adopted is to print in large type such words as are common to both versions, and the variations in small type. On account of the way in which the type is set the Bible is to be known as the Interlinear Bible.

Not Too Old At 65.
A White-paper issued by the Treasury gives the names of twelve civil servants whose retirement under the "too-old-at-65" rule has been suspended for periods of one or two years. They include a traveling inspector in bankruptcy, secretary to prison commissioners, surveyor of prisons, and examiner of compasses at the Admiralty.

Hounds Hunt Terrier.
A most extraordinary incident occurred while the Culmstock Otter hounds were hunting the Yeo. After showing good sport an otter had a tussle with a terrier in some mud. When the hounds came on the scene later they mistook the muddy terrier for the otter and dispatched him.

TREPOFF DIES
IN HIS BEDLADIES' WAIST.
No. 4163.

A pleasing feature of the waist illustrated here is the bolero, which is of the same material as the waist, or it may be made separately of another material to be worn over any waist. A lining is given, over which the waist is draped. Narrow lace insertion is employed for the yoke, and the closing is down the centre front invisibly. A two-seam sleeve, with a deep cuff or in elbow length, finished with insertion and lace edging is provided for in the pattern. The bolero is perforated for a shaped back, and the cap sleeves are trimmed with lace insertion applied in fancy design with the trimming on the body of the jacket. Knife-pleating of the ribbon might edge the bolero and cap sleeves. Batiste, handkerchief linen, lawn and organdie make up daintily when used with insertion and lace edging, and for heavier materials radium silk, crepe de chene and taffeta are suggested. The pattern is cut in five sizes, from 32 to 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 6 yards of 21-inch material. Mailed postpaid on receipt of 10 cents, name, size and address to the Fashion Department of the C. Austin & Co., Chatham, Ont.

LADIES' TUCKED SHIRT-WAIST.
No. 4171.

Pongee in a natural shade was used for making the shirt-waist illustrated, which is a good model for serviceable wear. In the back, tucks are stitched to the waistline, while in the front all but two groups are finished at yoke depth, and the waist allowed to fall freely to the waistline. The closing is down the centre from underneath a box-pleat, and small buttons are added for trimming. In the three-quarter length sleeve a hand cuff edged with narrow lace gives a dainty finish, and when the full-length sleeve is chosen a deep cuff is provided. Any of the following materials are recommended for making: madras, linen, pique, batiste, vesting, flannel, Scotch silk, and linen. The pattern is cut in six sizes, from 32 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3-1-4 yards of 32-inch material. Mailed postpaid, on receipt of 10 cents, name, size and address, to the Fashion Department of the C. Austin & Co.

DUDES OF OTHER TIMES.

Dress of a Dandy of the Early Nineteenth Century.

A cure for the confirmed raucous against modern dress might be a course of inspection through a file of old fashion magazines or the perusal of such accounts as are given by the author of "Sketches of Lynn." The description is that of a suit worn in the first part of the nineteenth century. The boots were an important article of dress. The toes were made as broad as the ball of the foot, with the corner well rounded, giving the shoe the resemblance to the snout of a shovel nosed shark. They were very snug and required strong straps. In order to get into a fashionable pair the heel of the stocking was well soaped and some tincture of soap sprinkled into the boot. The length of time it took to get one on depended on the strength of the owner and the strap.

The stylish overcoat displayed five capes, one above the other. The trousers were expected to fit as tight as the skin. Just how they were put on is a mystery. The coat was especially snug under the sleeves, and the velvet collar scraped up the back of the head. The camel overcoats after a little wear, became as stiff as birch bark.

The thing worth about the neck was called a stock. This name was appropriate in its suggestion of an instrument of punishment. The stock was from three to six inches high, and was made stiff. A man was forced to look straight ahead. Only by careful management could he see a little on either side. About halfway between his eyes and ears two little points of collar stuck up like toothpicks.

Ruffled bosoms and wristbands finished the costume, with the addition of a tall silk hat. When inclosed in this manner, with a dash of attar of roses on his handkerchief, the man of the period was considered irresistible.

It is sometimes easier to remember than to forget.

Borrowing troubles and lending money are often synonymous.

THE LONG SEAM.

A Pleasant Thought For To-day By
Cora Roche Howland—Thoughts
Worked Into One's Work.

Grandmother sits by the window sewing long white seams. She puts together all the household linen for the family, that is for her son's house and her daughter's. And now she is filling with her handiwork a wedding chest for Elsie, her namesake of the second generation.

Grandmother has sewed on long white seams ever since she can remember. When she was a little girl no woman child escaped an hour's daily stint of sewing. There was a systematic course of training with the needle, including samplers, patchwork, quilting, and every conceivable kind of preparation in the womanly art. But whatever other kind of work might be pushed in as a task for her, there was always on hand, waiting for attention, a plentiful supply of long white seams.

Usually in those days of big four poster beds the long sheets had such interminable seams that little Elsie thinking of the other children of the neighborhood, who were playing house among the honeysuckles, or gathering fragrant sprays of traveler's joy, was almost certain she would never finish her allotted work and gain her right to play. It was tiresome, too, to be taking the same kind of stitches over and over, knowing all the time that when this special task was done she would begin to-morrow another one just like it. It was not even fun to count the stitches, and find out how many she could accomplish in an hour, for the other little girls she knew had less ambition than herself, so that it sounded like the boldest boasting when she gave them a correct account of her own speed and deftness; some of them were naughty little girls who hid part of the carpet rags given them to sew, in order to get out to play the sooner.

By and by the child learned, however, to make a new game out of her sewing. She invented stories to pass the time while her needles sped along the cloth. She thought of many pleasant things. There is so much that one can think of if one takes an hour to it every day. Trivial facts which she had learned impressed themselves upon her mind romantically.

Then came an interval when Elsie did not have the time to sew. She was busy with school and music and pursuit of social pleasures. But in the natural course of her girlish history she took her sewing up again with a new eagerness and ambition. Into the dainty tucks and plaits of her trousseau and into the long seams of her household linen she sewed her woman's dreams of love and home. A little later, grown to mature estate, she sewed into the pretty bits of needlework which mothers fashion with unnecessary care, putting in full measure of love stitches, such tender thoughts as were too sweet to speak.

All this of course was long ago. But Grandma Elsie, dressed in white, still sews on long white seams. She smiles when people tell her that she does not need to do so, that times have changed, that she can buy things ready to her hand and save herself this trouble. Unheeding, she sits tranquilly beside her window, sewing steadily. On the sill beside her blooms, in its earthen

What the Baby Needs.
The less noise a baby hears, the less he is carried about and played with for the first six months of his life, the better it will be.

It is seldom necessary to take him from his crib except for his bath and meals. The habit of tossing him about and trotting him on the knee makes him nervous and wakeful and cannot possibly do any good.

His undeveloped system calls for rest, yet he is often denied that privilege.

Children as well as older people are to a great extent creatures of habit, and they cannot acquire habits that are conducive to proper development and health of the body at too early an age.

It is during sleep that the building up forces work without interruption and the child gains in flesh and strength.

Have regular hours for his naps and see that everything is favorable for sleep at that time. There should be no tight bands to hinder respiration.

Place his crib in such a position that the light will not shine directly upon his face, preferably in a cool, quiet corner. Do not cover him too warmly. Change his position occasionally, and he will sleep longer.

Slips For "Best" Blouses.
Some girl with a love of pretty things hit upon the clever idea of making great bags and slips, with which she covered her best blouses and tuckers, and flowered stuff instead of the usual plain white muslin affairs. The open door of that closet reveals a pretty sight instead of a rather funeral effect the muslin abridgments are bound to give. Choosing a closely woven material, so that the dust is as safely defied as when a stout muslin is the shield, is the only point that need be looked to. Have some of the covers big, sheet-like affairs. There are certain gowns which keep in better condition if something is folded carefully about them than if they are slipped into the roomiest of bags. And put loops upon bags or wrapping sheet, so that their weight, little as it may seem, will bear directly upon the closet hooks instead of adding its mite to dragging the delicate skirt or blouse out of shape.

Sommer Labor Camp.
A summer labor camp has been established by Fletcher Dodd, on a farm at Ormesby, near Yarmouth, 150 army bell tents dot the meadows, and fifty men used them as residences. The camp will be kept open during the rest of the summer, and used solely as a holiday resort for working men.

Rheumatism is not incurable. Stubborn! Yes! But Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy will, if faithfully used, drive it out of the system. It's the blood that's at fault. Poisonous crystals like sand get into the joints and muscles. Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy prevents this. It drives Rheumatism from the blood and then Rheumatism dies. We recommend and sell it.

A LOBSTER'S LEGS.

The Two Front Ones Are Different From the Other Eight.

A lobster's legs, all told, are ten in number, but only eight of these are largely used for walking. The front pair, or big claws, have been specialized, as in the crab and most others of the higher crustaceans, into prehensile organs for catching and crushing the prey. Their use is obvious. Lobsters feed largely off mollusks of various sorts and other hard-shelled marine animals. In order to be able to break or crush the shells of these and so to get at the softer flesh within they have acquired such large and very muscular pincers or pinchers. That is not all, however. Not only have the two front legs been differentiated and specialized from the eight others in this manner, but also, by a rare exception to the symmetry of the body, the right claw has been specialized from the left, each being intended to perform a distinct function. One is a scissors, the other is a mill; one is a cutter, the other is a cracker.

As a rule, the right claw is the slenderer and longer. It has toothlike projections or serrated edges on its nipping faces, and it is rather adapted for biting and severing than for crushing or grinding. The left claw, on the other hand, is usually thicker, heavier and rounder. Its muscles are more powerful, and in place of sharp teeth it has blunt tubercles, or hammers, of different sizes. It acts, in fact, more like a nutcracker than like teeth or a saw. It is a smashing organ. Nevertheless you will find it interesting to observe, by noting the lobsters served to you at table, that this differentiation has hardly as yet become quite constant, for sometimes it is the right claw that displays the hammerlike nutcracker type and the left that acts as nipper and biter, while sometimes no difference occurs at all, both claws alike being sharp toothed or blunt hammered in the same specimen.

THE PRIBILOF ISLANDS.

Where No White Man May Land Unless He Has a Permit.
Unalaska resembles other northern stations, having warehouses, docks, the inevitable Greek church and a score of wooden cabins. Whalers leave here for the arctic regions.

Dutch Harbor is a station for our revenue fleet. There is much coming and going of ships of all nations. There is quite a formidable fleet, and only two ships out of twelve carry colors of the same country.

Just before entering the harbor one notices a detached rock high against the side of the cliff. It bears a striking resemblance to a Russian priest in full robes. Touched by the sunset light, he seems to stand blessing the harbor.

Sailing north out into Bering sea, one looks back at the desolate, silent, treeless islands, which seem to wall the edge of the world. Hundreds of miles west they run toward Vladivostok.

Two hundred and forty miles north of Unalaska are the Pribilof Islands, not large, but the greatest seal islands in the world. There are many fur seals around the shores of Bering sea and the Aleutian islands, but the great mass of them are bred on the Pribilof group. No white man is permitted to land on these breeding grounds without a permit signed by the secretary of the treasury of the United States.—Outdoor Life.

Suicide in Hamilton.

Hamilton, Sept. 14.—Wednesday night Mrs. Lindberg strung herself up to a rafter in an out-building at the cemetery. She used a very slender cord. Yesterday morning her dead body was discovered. Her husband, an expert coatmaker, disappeared about a week ago. About eighteen months ago she fell from the third-storey window in the building, and her mind has been slightly deranged ever since.

Honeymooning Under Difficulties.

We are shown a delightful picture of the king and queen of Spain passing their honeymoon alone on the bank of a romantic stream. While no soldiers are in sight it is safe to bet that a few private detectives are beating up the bushes for bomb throwers.

It must be fine to have a real queen for a bride, but when the anxious lover has to be looking out of the window at regular intervals to see that no officious person has placed a bomb under the corner of the house it may detract some from the pleasure of the honeymoon, although Alf must be somewhat used to it by this time.

To be a king looks grand enough on paper, but there is much more subdued and uninterrupted joy in being the husband to a sweet girl graduate and starting housekeeping with her in a modest cottage with a full outfit of installment payment furniture.

Don't Trust Them.

Turning the Tables.

Everything appeared to have been satisfactorily arranged. The dignified young lady who had just consented to accept a situation as a hired girl thought she was going to be satisfied with the place. The question of wages and days off had been agreed on, and there was nothing for her to do but pick up her baggage and move in when all of a sudden something seemed to strike her—evidently something of importance that she had overlooked.

"Oh, by the way," she said thoughtfully, "I forgot to ask you if you could give me references from the last girl you employed."

Her Way.

"I can always bet my husband in an argument." "Indeed! You must be a great logician." "No logic about it. I just cry."

Sees a Chance.

"That rich girl makes a hit with me, all right." "Why?" "Because she's a miss."

Sticks in the Stomach

Feeling That Often Comes to People With Weak Digestion.

A poor sufferer from indigestion once said that his stomach felt as though it was filled with sticks and as though some of them were on fire and burning him up inside. When the stomach and the organs of digestion and nutrition are weakened and do not act properly, the symptoms of ill-health that follow are many and varied. There is often a feeling of heaviness in the stomach, there is distress and nervousness, dizziness, nausea, nervous and sick headaches, inability to sleep well, pains in the side and limbs, specks before the eyes and a general peevish, irritable condition.

All these troubles are the direct result of indigestion. Cure this by strengthening the stomach and digestive system with M-i-o-na stomach tablets and your symptoms of ill-health will vanish like dew before the morning sun; life will be joyous, and digestion will be so natural that you will forget you have a stomach. M-i-o-na stomach tablets cost but 50¢ a box and are sold under an absolute guarantee that they will be successful in every case where used according to directions, or money will be refunded.

CORRECT FOOTWEAR.

Black Suede Pumps Are Extremely Fashionable at the Moment.

If a limited income must be consulted the best plan is to decide upon one style of shoe and keep consistently to that. There are many shoes and slippers which one might like to possess, but are unnecessarily extravagant. Black suede pumps, for example, are extremely fashionable at the moment, but they do not wear well, are difficult to keep in order and are as yet very expensive. Then there are the colored canvas and kid slippers, which are nice to have for a change, but would not be well to wear constantly. For town or traveling the smartest shoe is a high cut pump or the tie of dull finished kid with a small kid bow instead of the flat ribbon pump bow of last year.

This shoe is equally smart in black and russet leather. For the country a white buckskin pump is most popular, but canvas is cooler and less expensive, and both styles are correct. The buckskin pump is finished with a little bow of the same leather. For evening wear the black slipper most in demand is of patent leather, with a tiny steel buckle and no bow. The heels are of medium height, the exaggerated French heel being out of favor at present. If patent leather is not comfortable a beaded or plain French polished kid slipper may be worn instead.

Shoe Trees For Every Pair.

Far more important than to have an extra pair of shoes is to have trees for each pair, which are kept always in the shoe except when it is on the foot. This is absolutely necessary with all shoes, but with patent leather particularly the slippers will keep in shape just twice as long if proper care is taken of them.

They Stand Alone.

Standing out in bold relief, all alone, and as a conspicuous example of open, frank and honest dealing with the sick and afflicted, are Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, over-worked, debilitated, nervous, "run-down," pain-racked women. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous remedy for weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness, all catarrhal affections, whether of the stomach, bowels, kidneys, bladder, nasal passages, throat, bronchia, or other mucous passages, also as an effective remedy for all diseases arising from thin, watery or impure blood, as scrofulous and skin affections.

Each bottle of the above medicines bears upon its wrapper a badge of honesty in the full list of ingredients composing it—printed in plain English. This frank and open publicity places these medicines on a close side by themselves, and is the best guaranty of their merits. They cannot be classed as patent secret medicines for they are neither—being of honest composition.

Dr. Pierce feels that he can afford to take the afflicted into his full confidence and lay all the ingredients of his medicines truly before them because these ingredients are such as are endorsed and most strongly praised by scores of the most eminent medical writers as cures for the diseases for which these medicines are recommended. Therefore, the afflicted do not have to rely alone upon Dr. Pierce's recommendation as to the curative value of his medicines for certain easily recognized diseases.

A glance at the printed formula on each bottle will show how much alcohol and how much of the most potent and powerful of all habit-forming drugs enter into Dr. Pierce's medicines, they being wholly compounded of glyceric extracts of the roots of nature. A certain forest plant, These are best and safest for the cure of most lingering chronic diseases. Dr. R. V. Pierce can be consulted gratis by addressing him at Buffalo, N. Y., and all communications are regarded as strictly confidential.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, one little Pellet is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

The Planet—the People's Paper!

EL TERREMOTO
By HONORE WILLISIE
Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastman

For three months now Eleanor had been on the desert edge fighting for her brother's health. At first the desperation of the struggle had kept her thoughts from straying eastward; had crammed with anxiety each moment that otherwise would have been wretched with homesickness.

But now, with the leisure that came with Jack's returning health, homesickness was beginning its inroads upon her. This made doubly hard to bear the fact that Jack was developing the fractiousness of the convalescent and that an ordinary pacific disposition was becoming so irritable that it taxed even the devotion of this most devoted sister. On this particular afternoon he had expressed an inordinate desire for a certain brand of cigars.

"But, Jack dear," objected Eleanor, "the doctor says that you must not smoke."

"Who says I want to smoke?" growled Jack. "I just want to look at them and sniff them and feel them. And I want them today."

Eleanor sighed patiently. "It's five miles to town, Jack. And though it's 4 o'clock, it's frightfully hot. Don't you want to wait until tomorrow?"

"Oh, of course, if you don't want to do the favor for me," replied the invalid, walking feebly across the tent to pick up a fan.

"Why, certainly I'm going, Jacky," she cried. "The heat won't last much longer," and she disappeared toward her own tent, leaving her brother looking a bit sheepish.

So now Eleanor was riding slowly along the blistering trail toward the sleepy little adobe village which boasted a single Yankee store, at which she thought she could get the cigars. She was a beautiful girl, slender of body and lovely of face, with the refinement of good blood through many generations showing in every lineament. Her dark blue eyes, shadowed by the heavy lashes, looked tired, and her figure drooped a little as if in utter weariness.

"It's getting pretty hard," she thought. "It's spring up there, with the snow melting into little rivulets, and the pussy willows out, and the wind flocks coming. Only the thought of Jack's getting well keeps me from going mad."

She started a little as a cheery halloo greeted her, and she saw riding down the trail toward her a broad shouldered, jolly chap in cowboy attire. He wheeled his mustang and rode beside her.

"I was taking a jaunt out to tell you that I have almost finished my work and must fly eastward again."

"Oh, that is too bad!" cried Eleanor. "The man's fine brown eyes beamed. 'I've only known you a week,' he answered, 'but it's been a mighty pleasant week.'"

"Jack will miss you," said the girl. The man eyed her silently. "She's wearing herself out," he thought. "I wish I could take her away from here. Burwell's nearly strong enough to go it alone now. Gads! She's a beauty!"

Eleanor wiped the alkali dust from her face and told him the reason for her trip to town.

"Rather hard on you," commented Hartley.

Eleanor smiled, but said nothing, and they rode for some distance in silence. Hartley's gaze scarcely leaving for an instant the drooping profile beside him.

"I wonder," he thought, "if she realizes that she's never told me a word of herself, who she is or by the Lord Harry, if she'd have me I'd marry her tomorrow even if they both came from a founding asylum."

By this time they were riding up the street of the dirty little Mexican village, whose inhabitants were too absorbed in the sight of the Americans to move from beneath the horses' feet until urged to do so by Hartley in a patois that made up in vigor what it lacked in lucidity.

The Yankee store was the only frame building for miles around. It was owned by an enterprising Vermonteer, who was making a small fortune in the little town, where money went faster than it came.

Hartley tied the horses and they entered the store. Just as they stepped within the door it slammed shut violently behind them and the tremor of its impact shook the entire building. The storekeeper, the only other person in the dusky room, looked up in surprise that quickly changed to alarm. The tremor instead of ceasing increased.

"What's the matter?" he cried, running to the front of the store.

"I don't know," replied Hartley. "If I were up north I'd think it was a dynamite blast, but—"

Here the crockery in the window clattered and a roll of turkey fell to the floor.

"It's an earthquake!" cried the Vermonteer. "Come on, get out of here quick," and he made a dash for the knob. But the door was fast and immediately the floor was rocking so violently that the whole room seemed filled with flying articles from the store shelves. Hartley suddenly pulled Eleanor toward him, as if trying to shield her with his body. Then a great rumble, with continuous shocks like explosions, a fearful crash and darkness!

It had all happened in so short a space of time that Eleanor had scarcely realized that she was actually encountering an earthquake. She had been thrown violently to the ground, as the final shock came, and now she felt out in the darkness and encountered Hartley's quiet form. Almost hysterical with fright, she called to him and chafed his hands feverishly. Then came the voice of the storekeeper:

"Hello, you two in there?"

"Yes," called Eleanor weakly. "I'm all right, but Mr. Hartley seems badly hurt."

"The whole dinged front of the store has fallen in," called the Vermonteer, "but I got out through a hole. Can you stay still till I get help?"

"Yes," answered Eleanor, and again she fell to chafing Hartley's hands.

It was a long and arduous task to remove the debris without injury to the prisoners beneath. The work was doubly long, owing to the fact that what few natives had not fled to the desert were hovering over their ruined adobe walls with wails of "El terremoto! El terremoto!" so that the storekeeper did most of the work himself.

Long before their rescue Hartley had recovered his senses and by combining their two handkerchiefs Eleanor had bound the wound in his head that seemed to be his only injury. It was twilight when they reached the street, a quiet, southern twilight, with just the edge of a great full moon coming up over the edge of the desert.

As soon as it was possible Eleanor with Hartley on guard set out for camp. She was greatly disturbed over her brother, though the natives assured her that the shock was not serious where there were no buildings.

Hartley, looking like a picturesque bandit with his bandaged forehead, was in great spirits despite his aching head. He said little until they were well out on the trail. Then he rode close up to Eleanor's pony.

"Miss Burwell," he said, "an accident like this makes us friends of about ten years' standing, doesn't it?"

"It surely does," cried Eleanor.

"Then," he went on eagerly, "don't you think that two such old friends could safely care for each other—and perhaps marry each other?"

Eleanor did not seem so much astonished as the short acquaintance might warrant. But she blushed deeply in the moonlight.

"But you don't know me and I don't know you," she said.

"Well, I'm an architect," he answered, "and I live in Chicago and—"

"Not the John Hartley, architect, that all the world knows!" cried Eleanor.

"I'm afraid so," he replied, a little sheepishly.

Eleanor gasped. "My little name sinks into insignificance," she said. Hartley looked at her suspiciously.

"You aren't E. Burwell, the illustrator?" he exclaimed.

"I'm afraid so," she mocked. Hartley stopped the ponies and drew her close in his arms. "Whatever the names," he whispered, "we belong to one another, anyhow."

A Bible Courtship.

A young gentleman at church conceived a most sudden and violent passion for a young lady in the next pew and felt desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot, but the place not suiting a formal declaration, the exigency suggested the following plan: He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible, open, with a pin stuck in the following text, second epistle of John, verse 5: "And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it with the following, second chapter of Ruth, verse 10: "Then she fell on her face and bowed herself to the ground and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldst take notice of me, seeing I am a stranger?" He returned the book, pointing to verse 12 of the third epistle of John, "Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink, but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face." From the above interview the marriage took place the following week.—Scottish American.

The Geese Won.

An English gentleman once laid a wager with George IV. that geese would beat turkeys in a race. The king, thinking that such a wager was already as good as won, willingly made the bet and the gentleman was left to choose time and place and distance. Being well acquainted with the habits of the birds he accordingly chose for the time the evening, just before sunset, and for the place the road outside the city walls and a mile for the distance. The time came and each appeared with his flock of birds and the race began. Long ere the end came the sunset and immediately, true to their instincts, as soon as the sun had quite disappeared all the turkeys flew up into the nearest tree to roost, and no persuasion could induce them to budge an inch farther, and the geese, which had been slowly toddling on behind, quietly cackled in—the winners.

Moving the Well.

A New England woman once had in her employ a rosy cheeked Irish maid of all work, whose blunders afforded them amusement to compensate for any trouble she might entail. One day the owner of the place stated in the girl's hearing that he intended to have a wood house built on a piece of ground which at that time inclosed a well.

"Shure, sor," said the inquiring Margaret, "will you be movin' the well to a more convenient spot whin the wood house is builded?"

As a smile crossed the face of her employer Margaret at once perceived she had made a mistake of some sort. "It's a fool I am, shure," she added hastily, bound to retrieve herself. "Of course whin the well was moved it very drop of water would run out of it!"

WATER FAMINE IN TILBURY

Some Of Oil Wells Closed Down For Lack Of It

50 NEW RIGS GOING UP

Dr. Neil Smith spent Sunday at his father's home in Tilbury, and while out there paid a visit to the oil wells.

"There must be over fifty new rigs going up," said he this morning. "A great number of wells are closed down now on account of the water famine. The ponds and ditches are all dry now, and water for the operation of the engines is at a premium. Many of the wells have 'spudded' water wells close to the oil wells, and where water has been found this has much facilitated matters. Sometimes these water wells are piped to supply five, six and seven rigs.

"Four new wells were shot on Friday. These wells are on the Marshall, Smith, Stephenson and Finn farms, and they are all making a good showing.

"It is surprising to know the number of men who are now working in the oil fields, and it is a great sight to see these men when they all get together on Sunday evenings. Last night there must have been between four and five hundred of these men all gathered on one of the wells brought up to the spot for the occasion, and the vicinity was lighted up as bright as day by one big jet of flame about seven feet high. A great problem with the oil men just now is to get quarters for these men during the winter months. At present they are sleeping in old shacks that have long been abandoned. Others have quarters in huts, mounds and granaries.

"Next Wednesday night the Presbyterian churches of Valterra and Fletcher will give 'at homes' for the oil men, and the events are being looked forward to with a great deal of interest.

WEATHER TOO DRY

Just now the continued drought is being felt all through the County of Kent, and the farmers are suffering in many ways. The dry weather is well for the harvesting of the tobacco crop, but is hard on the pasture. In most sections the grass is all dried up and brown, and the milkmen's interests are suffering. The ground is becoming so hard as to resist the plow, and fall work is thus retarded.

Local people who drove out through the country yesterday say that the dust is something amazing. It blows everywhere in blinding clouds, and is almost six inches deep all along the roads.

The farmers are earnestly hoping for rain at an early date.

THE THREE LINKS

Ten Thousand Oddfellows Are Already In Toronto For Convention.

Toronto, Sept. 17.—All yesterday train loads of Oddfellows and their wives and families came from many points of the United States and Canada. It is estimated that ten thousand delegates and friends are here, besides two thousand uniformed men.

Fully a thousand men and between two and three hundred women were camped at the exhibition grounds last night. Several cantons will go out this morning, which will bring the number in camp for the week up to fifteen hundred.

The city is beginning to take on a gala appearance.

In room G, at the King Edward, the general military council held two meetings yesterday, one at 9 a. m., and another at 3 p. m. Gen. Raney presided. Fifty department commanders were present.

The grand lodge proper opens this morning, at 9.30, with the public welcome in the Legislative Assembly at the Palladium Buildings, which promises to be a brilliant function. The Premier of Ontario, the Mayor of Toronto, and W. S. Johnson, grand master of the I. O. O. F. for Ontario, will deliver addresses of welcome.

Three hundred and fifty delegates to the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Oddfellows, with friends, crossed from Toronto to St. Catharines by boat on Saturday, but so rough was the lake that the return trip was made by special train. The City of St. Catharines, through Mayor Roddell, tendered a reception.

Western Fair's Surplus.

Jackson, Neb., Sept. 17.—Water from a cloudburst yesterday rushed down the Valley of Elk Creek, sweeping away hundreds of tons of hay, drowning hogs, flooding cellars, washing away railroad tracks and doing other damage aggregating $100,000. The wave of water in the creek, when it struck Jackson, was seven feet high.

THE DOINGS OF THE POLICE

There Were A Number Of Cases Up In Court This Morning

PICTURE WITH A STORY

Geo. Larkin and Geo. Benson came up in the Police Court this morning, charged with stealing a ride on the Grand Trunk. Some insurance papers belonging to John Pennington were found on them and it is suspected they are wanted for stealing. Chief Holmes has written the Chief of Police of Detroit, but has not yet received an answer. The young men were remanded until Wednesday.

One of the men charged with playing poker came up this morning in the Police Court and paid $27.75 in all.

Fred Deerson, who came up a week ago charged with stealing a rubber toy robe from Jamie on, made his appearance this morning, and was allowed out on suspended sentence after he had paid all expenses, which amounted to $11 in all.

The picture gallery of the Police Station has been added to, and now there appears in it the picture of three of the Dolly Varden maidens. Street early on Sunday morning. The following is written on it in Mr. Groves' hand-writing:—"Some Dolly Vardens that some of our Chatham girls will remember, dropped from the third storey of the Garner House at three o'clock on Saturday, Sept. 16, 1906."

Judge Bell has complained to Chief Holmes of the conduct of a number of young boys who make a practice of throwing stones through the windows in the houses on the corner of Stanley avenue and William street. The boys who do this should be severely punished, and the chief says that if they are caught, they will get all that is coming to them.

A PIONEER OF KENT

Ridgetown, Sept. 15.—Death on Tuesday claimed one of Kent's oldest residents in the person of Mr. H. W. Westland, who lived here for over half a century. Deceased was born in Liverpool, Eng., in 1826. In 1835 he came with his parents to Toronto, where he obtained his education. In 1855 he moved to Ridgetown and began business as a general merchant and prospered well until he retired in 1880. He was prominent in municipal affairs, having served on the School Board, and he was also a member of the first council of the town after its incorporation. In 1870 he was appointed Justice of the Peace and later issuer of marriage licenses. He was one of the prominent Liberals of Kent and a member of the Presbyterian church. Besides his widow, he is survived by three sons and two daughters: George, Brantford; Alfred, Everett, Wash.; Harry, Cashmere, Wash.; Mrs. J. A. Elliott, Ridgetown, and Mrs. C. H. Gordon, Port Perry. The funeral took place on Thursday to Greenwood cemetery, services being conducted by Rev. G. M. Dunn of the Presbyterian church.

a solo on which was greatly enjoyed,
and in the evening the male quartet,
composed of Messrs. Smith,

EMOTION IN ANALYSIS

ACTRESS MARGARET ANGLIN SPEAKS FOR FEMALE CULTURE.

Says Higher Learning Does Not Harden Women—Gushing Display of Feeling Despised as Artificial by Cultured People—Sympathy, Love and Affection Sincere Without Primitive or Elemental Expressions.

Miss Margaret Anglin, the Canadian actress, writes: The claim has been made that higher education for women chills the heart in living the intellect, that the development of the intellect along the pathways of culture and higher thinking makes women cold and cynical in regard to human emotions.

We are told that the supereducated college woman is incapable of being swayed by the same deep feelings as the child of nature who knows not the meaning of psychology and to whom ethics and the subtleties of philosophy are reduced to the primitive conception of right and wrong.

I doubt this very much. The woman of high education or the professional woman feels the same forces swaying her, but she knows how to control them.

What higher education and the professional life do for woman, however, is to eradicate the ostentatious display of feeling so long regarded as necessary for the "womanly woman."

The power to repress the emotions has no effect upon the ability to experience them. Convention and good breeding necessitate self-restraint, but the woman who can control her feelings and whose breeding and education have taught her that unnecessary display of feeling is vulgar experiences them just the same.

It is this poise of the woman of culture and intellect, of business ability and professional standing, which gives rise to the complaint that she is not capable of human sympathy and emotion.

Higher education, culture and the broader life that has been opened to women in the last quarter century have done more toward the development of real human sympathy and affection of the years before.

When I speak of higher education I do not necessarily mean the accumulation of a lot of college degrees in dead languages or mathematics.

By the woman of higher education and culture I mean one whose intellect has been broadened by her life of training and whose mind has been able to comprehend and digest the facts which education has placed before her.

A woman with keen sensibilities and a well trained mind, a genuine feeling of intellectuality, despises the gushing display of feeling. If the charge of coldness is brought against her it should be with a word of thankfulness.

Lack of feeling is so often hidden by the disguise of hysterical protestation and gushing emotionalism that women of culture and refinement shudder at the thought of being placed in the same category.

There is no reason why the holiest of emotions should not be rational, nor is there any reason why woman's power of feeling be placed upon the basis of absence of higher education.

The drama which reflects the emotions of real life is not confined to the realms of the untutored to find its examples of great emotions.

Higher education cannot kill real feeling in woman. Sympathy, love and affection do not need primitive or elemental expressions to be sincere.

Mr. Victor Horsley. "Billy Glyn," writing in The Toronto World, says of the vice-president of the British Medical Association:

"Mr. Victor Horsley of London, England, too, who came up while I was still speaking with Sir James, is, as a personality, not striking. But he carries a hardened look, a genial patience about him that is a great deal better. He is the kind of man whom you could imagine marching all day beneath an Egyptian sun, in the face of an ambulance, and at night caring for the sick and dying, without a thought for himself, and with the same easy smile. He is the kind of man with whom you make friends and stay so forever, and there is not enough pretension about him to make him a soap bubble. He is straight, through and through, and you know it the moment you look at his lean length, rather carelessly dressed, and strong, unassuming features, with the drooping moustache and Roman nose."

Troubles of an Amateur. "I thought you had gone to raising bees," said the man from the city. "I don't see any sign of them around here."

"I had half a dozen colonies of the finest bees I could get," answered the suburbanite, "and a whole library of literature on bee-keeping; but they swarmed one day, and while I was looking through my books to find out what was the proper thing to do when bees swarm, the damned things flew away, and I've never seen 'em since."

WESTERN ROMANCE.

Pioneers in the Building of Canada Are to Be Remembered in Celebrations in Many Places.

The very excellent proposition has been made that the work of the pioneers of the Great West be duly commemorated during the next few years, in order that the history of that country may be better understood, and that those who labored in the early days may not be forgotten. One of the first of the public observances is in contemplation, to be held in 1908, and is to keep alive the memory of Simon Fraser. Many among us—such as our unfamilarity with epoch-making events in Canadian history—may be inclined, at first blush, to enquire who Simon Fraser is.

Simon Fraser's Work.

Simon Fraser is the explorer after whom the great waterway, the Fraser River, is named. We have in the West a series of vast streams, each one bearing the name of its discoverer. The Mackenzie River receives its designation from Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the first white man to reach the Arctic Ocean from Canada, the first European to pass through the Rocky Mountains, and the first traveler to reach the Pacific overland. The Thompson River is called after the great astronomer, David Thompson, who went through the Rockies at the beginning of the century. The Fraser River derives its name from Simon of that ilk, who founded British Columbia, under the name of New Caledonia. Simon Fraser was one of the partners of the North West Co., the corporation that fought the Hudson's Bay Co. with vigor for so many years.

A Terrible Trip.

It was in 1805 that the traveler set out with his party. A roundabout journey he made, for it appears that he first went northwest to Lake Athabasca, and then came southwest along the mountain sides until he found a pass admitting him to the valleys which encircle the giant peaks. Here he wandered for months. In June, 1808, he came across the river, hitherto unknown, the white water of which empties into the Pacific. Down the stream he went with his rudely constructed boats and rafts, rushing through narrow gorges, and braving the dangerous rapids, until he found himself at the present site of New Westminster, and on the coast of the Pacific Ocean. Simon Fraser, forgotten by most of us, is the man who found the noble Province of British Columbia, and by right of discovery and occupation made the British claim to it certain.

The Earl of Selkirk.

Another celebration that is proposed is in connection with the work of Lord Selkirk, whose Red River Colony has a history all its own. This nobleman has in mind the transplanting of sturdy Scotchmen to British Canada, with a view to bettering their conditions, and in order to give strength to this country. He made three attempts to effect his purpose. First he planted a little colony in the County of Essex which was anything but a success. Then he tried his luck in Prince Edward Island, and in 1803 settled 800 colonists in that part of the coast. The newcomers did well, and the splendid men and women we get from Prince Edward are the descendants of Lord Selkirk's pioneers. But the chief d'oeuvre of the celebrated earl was the attempt to found a colony on the Red River.

Scotland to the Fore.

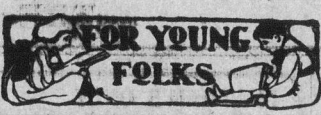

A great company of Scotch people—three shiploads, in fact—was induced to seek fortune in the West. All sailed in 1811 under the direction of Miles Macdonnell, of the well-known Macdonnell family of our own County of Glenagerry. It was by way of Hudson Bay that the immigrants arrived. They passed through the Straits, leaving icebergs in their wake, and landed at York Factory, where they spent the winter. It was truly a cool reception. But worse was to come. The overland journey had to be taken to the Red River, and this was a gigantic enterprise and extremely hazardous. Then came the settlement in the new colony. Here the difficulties were enormous. The work of cultivation was difficult; the people were poorly housed; the aboriginal inhabitants were not friendly, and the whites, those of them in the service of the rival Northwest Co., were hostile.

The Struggle for Life.

It was the policy of the Northwest Co. to make the life of the Selkirk settlers in the West impossible. In the first place, that corporation wished to frustrate the plans of an opposing company, and in the second place, the cultivation of the prairies was not wanted. The fur business could not prosper if the country were occupied by farmers. By various means the opposing corporation sought the destruction of the colony. At one time dispersion through friendly persuasion was attempted; at another time threats of attacks from the Indians or half-breeds were made. Again, the colony was from time to time harassed, until the people were glad to get away. The consequence was that after a struggle of a few years the main body of the settlers packed up and made for the east. We have their descendants in Ontario. Overland during the fall and winter the Selkirk party had to be taken to the Red River, and these people traveled, passing Fort William and traversing the north shore of Lake Superior. Finally they reached Upper Canada, and made their homes in the near vicinity of the Town of York.

Another Fight for Supremacy.

But there was a remnant of the old colony left, and this body, with newcomers introduced by way of Hudson Bay, formed another community. The struggle for supremacy which was continued resulted in bloodshed. By the Northwest corporation half-breed intervention against the colonists was sought, and there was an unfortunate "affair" in which the Hudson Bay Governor, Mr. Semple, and a number of other persons, met death. The situation was one of continued fighting, until the Hudson's Bay and Northwest companies, antagonized and gave peace to the disturbed region. The Selkirk colony then became the nucleus of the great Western population that was to be. It grew and gave to the Prairie Province its sturdy men. The fight of Lord Selkirk for the West and the labors of his colonists form an interesting story, and it is well that these stirring events should be fitly remembered.

FUN WITH A LAMP.

You Can Melt a Piece of Tin on an Ordinary Card.

Take an ordinary knitting needle and stick one end of it into a cork. Holding it by the cork so as not to burn your fingers, thrust the other end into the flame of an alcohol lamp and keep it there until it is heated to redness. Dip the red-hot needle into cold water and when it is cool thrust it again into the flame. If you watch it now you will see that it changes color curiously, turning first yellow, then orange, then crimson, violet, blue and finally gray.

The reason is that a film of rust forms on the needle, and this alters its color as it grows gradually thicker.

This is a matter of great importance in tempering steel, for the changes in color are watched carefully, as the kind of steel depends on the time when it is taken from the fire and cooled.

MELTING TIN ON A CARD.

For instance, if you take the needle from the flame and cool it when it is yellow it will be much harder than if left in the flame until blue and then cooled.

This is shown in the steel pins that are commonly used. The blue steel ones are likely to snap in two with the least pressure, whereas those that are tempered yellow are much stronger.

While you have your alcohol lamp burning take a piece of metallic tin, not tin plate, and place it on an ordinary playing card, first turning up the edges of the card, forming a sort of box lid. Hold the card containing the tin over the flame, and the card will not burn, but the tin may be melted thus.

The reason is that the tin is so good a conductor of heat that it carries it away before the card has time to burn.

Now take a copper wire, an iron wire and a glass tube and dip each of them into melted wax, so as to form a coating on them. After they are dry lay them on a table, with the ends projecting about two inches over the edge and crossing each other. Under the place where they cross hold the flame of the alcohol lamp, so as to heat them equally.

You can tell which is the best conductor of heat by the way the wax melts, that on the best conductor melting first. But there will be a point where the wax does not melt at all, because the heat will be conducted off into the air before reaching that point on the rod. On the good conductor, however, the wax will be melted much farther than on a poor conductor.

Chickens at Sunday School.

A bright and winsome little girl, daughter to one of the editor's friends, was sent out to the henhouse one day recently to gather and bring in the fresh eggs, but she came back almost immediately without any eggs, and when her mother asked about them the little one answered:

"Well, mother, the chickens were holding Sunday school, and I would not disturb them."

The mother afterward found out that the hens were all cackling at the top of their lungs, and this made the Sunday school.

The Lobster's Color.

Did you ever hear of the young housekeeper who refused to buy a fresh lobster at the market because it was not bright red in color? And of the poet's bad blunder, who called it "the cardinal of the sea?" The point of the joke is that the young housekeeper and the poet both thought that red was the lobster's natural color. As most of you know, perhaps, the natural color of the shell is a mixture of two pigments, red and blue. When it is boiled the blue washes out and the red remains.

It Comes; It Comes.

This is a simple guessing game, familiar to children in New England. One child of the party says to another, "It comes; it comes." The player addressed asks, "What do you come by?" The first replies by naming the initial letter of some object in the room. If, for instance, it is the table he has in mind, he says, "I come by T." The rest must now guess what thing beginning with this letter is meant.

Isn't This So?

Every hour you are sulky and unforgiving and find it easier to be cross and more difficult to be agreeable.

Unwelcome Tasks.

"I hate to sew this ugly seam," said little Eva May. "It's bad as any dream!" "I'd rather go and play," said little Eva May. "And not a stitch is small and neat, as stitches ought to be; They seem to walk like great long feet And are a shame to me."

"When grandma was a child like me A quilt she often made, But no one ever such will see From me, I'm much afraid. When I grow up I'll sew my seams," said little Eva May. "Today I'll walk along the streams. I'd so much rather play."

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

When a physician tells a woman, suffering from female trouble, that an operation is necessary it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation she felt that her death knell had sounded.

Our hospitals are full of women who are there for just such operations!

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Mrs. Robert Glenn of 434 Marie St., Ottawa, Ont., writes:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so well and widely known that it does not need my recommendation, but I am pleased to add it to the many which you have in its favor. I have suffered untold agonies from a serious female trouble for nearly three years, and the doctors told me that I must undergo an operation, but as I was unwilling to do this, I tried your Vegetable Compound, and I am only too glad to say that it has done for me."

TREPOFF DIES IN HIS BED

DEAD MAN A DESPOT

St. Petersburg, Sept. 17.—Gen. Dmitri Fedorovich Trepoft, commandant of the Imperial palace, died Saturday evening.

For several months he had been suffering from a heart affection, and asthmatic troubles, and sometime ago was forced to abandon a large amount of the routine work, included in his duties as commandant of the palace, but remained in office and was still in touch with the Emperor.

In Perpetual Fear of Death.
Gen. Trepoft's death was due to natural causes; but the revolutionists claim at least claim partial responsibility for his end, as his illness was superinduced by the constant strain due to perpetual fear of death, which, with lack of exercise and recreation during the last two years, wore down his originally superb constitution. He had become so nervous of late that recently when a military attaché of a continental power was unexpectedly ushered into his room, Gen. Trepoft sprang to his feet and stood in an attitude of defence, but when he recognized the visitor he sank into his chair all unnerved.

His Death a Surprise.
The gravity of his malady was recognized, but his death came as a great surprise. He was able to be up and around to the very last.

Gen. Trepoft's death will not have any immediate influence on the policy of the Government, which, for the time being at least, is firmly in Premier Stolypin's hands.

Gen. Dedoulin, former prefect of St. Petersburg, will succeed the late Gen. Trepoft as commandant of the Imperial palace.

A Despot by Inclination.
Gen. Trepoft was in many respects a remarkable man. He was a natural despot, a tyrant by inclination, education and conviction. He was one of those men who have constantly opposed, like evil geniuses, in Russian history just at the time when conditions were most promising for putting an end to despotism, turning the Russian ruler from Liberalism back into paths of reaction.

Trepoft was a police master. Dmitri received his education in the swiss police corps, and followed his father's footsteps in the police department. He rose quickly, and, after acting as police master at various provincial towns, he attracted the attention of Sergius, then Governor-General of Moscow. Trepoft soon became Sergius' right arm in fighting the revolutionary student agitation. He broke up the meetings of the liberal-minded students in the university with police, and in the streets with Cossacks, and had hundreds flogged and many of them sent into exile.

Trepoft's life was many times attempted, but he always escaped.

Dictator of Russia.
When the Grand Duke Sergius was assassinated he was named Governor-General of Moscow. The situation at the capital, calling for the strongest man in Russia, Trepoft was summoned to St. Petersburg and given the command of the Imperial Guard and made up his residence in the winter palace, and became, in fact, if not in name, dictator of Russia. During the recent trying weeks his name was anathematized and plot after plot to kill him was discovered and frustrated.

Countess Tolstol. Ill.
St. Petersburg, Sept. 17.—Countess Tolstol continues seriously ill, and Prof. Inmanoff, surgical expert of the St. Petersburg University, has been summoned to Yasnyaya Polyana for a consultation.

Royalty In Finland.
Helsingfors, Sept. 17.—Emperor Nicholas and Empress Alexandra and the Emperor's suite hunted Saturday on Kallholm. Their Majesties hitherto had never landed on the island. It is expected that the Imperial party will sail for Peterhof Monday.

Accountant and Cashier Arrested For Embezzlement.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 17.—Stanley W. Fiddler, accountant, and Harry W. Roome, assistant cashier, employees of the I. C. R. freight department, were arrested Saturday night at the instance of District Superintendent Jarvis, on the charge of embezzling $1,200 from the I. C. R. freight department.

It is alleged that by collusion between the two men the thefts have extended over a period of 18 months without being discovered.

The preliminary examination will take place to-day.

Teamsters Get Increase.

London, Sept. 17.—The striking teamsters returned to work on Saturday on the promise of the same rate of wages as the Toronto teamsters receive, namely, $44 a month. The Pere Marquette teamsters were informed that they would receive $45 a month, ten hours a day, and extra pay for overtime, and they also returned to work.

On Charge of Murder.

St. Thomas, Sept. 17.—At the Police Court Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Louise Smith was arraigned on the charge of having murdered the new-born babe of her daughter, Lizzie Smith, in the Victoria Block. The aged prisoner, who was dressed in black, appeared very nervous in the box. The adjournment was made till Monday at 9.30 a.m.

THE STAGE

ANNOUNCEMENTS

(Supplied to The Planet by Press Agents.)

At the Brisco Opera House—

The Two Johns—Sept. 18.

John Griffith—Sept. 21.

The Red Feather—Sept. 24.

The book of the comic opera "Red Feather," which will have its first appearance in this city on Monday, Sept. 24th, was written by Charles Klein, the foremost American dramatist of the day. Mr. Klein is author of both "The Muse Master" and "The Lion and The Mouse." The former is now in the third year of its Broadway run and the latter has entered the second season of its New York engagement. Seats on sale Wednesday.

THE TWO JOHNS.

James E. Marron, the 300 pound comedian who plays Philip Johns in the merry musical mix-up, "The Two Johns," which is to appear at the Brisco Theatre to-morrow night, is a member of many social organizations, and among them all is known as the best story teller ever. He can entertain his fellow club members for hours and always has a "new one." At a gathering of brother and sister actors the other evening, Marron told of his early years upon the stage and the many incidents that in those days were serious, but, as he thinks and tells of them now, they are indeed very funny—one in particular.

He had joined a little stock company in Southern Indiana to play the comedy parts. The first night they put on a serious play of western life, and in the second act Marron was branded as a horse-thief and, custom like, sentenced to be hanged. The rope was placed about his neck and they were about to strangle him up when some one said, "Make him sing a song." The rope was removed from around his neck, he came to the footlights, sang a song, did a buck and wing dance, and then returned to the rope and three and they proceeded with the hanging. Several days later, to this show came two comedians from the east, advertised as the "King Pins of Comedy." They made their appearance that night in the worst act, Marron says, that he has ever seen. The manager told him they were closed and he couldn't use them at all, but they hung around just the same, and as the manager was leaving for the hotel, they approached him and said: "Well, when do we get it?" "Get what?" asked the manager. "The pay for our work to-night." "Pay?" exclaimed the manager. "Do you think I am going to pay you for that rotten act?" The "King Pins" replied in unison: "Well, they paid us every other place."

THE PUBLIC IS OFTEN FAKED.

Unscrupulous dealers, actuated by large profits, often recommend corn cures "as good as Putnam's." There is only one genuine corn extirpator, and that is Putnam's Pain-killer, which is a miracle of efficiency and promptness. Use no other.

Auto Driver Fined.

Preston, Sept. 17.—Lea Audrus of St. Catharines, whose automobile scared a horse and nearly caused the death of the one-armed driver here Saturday, was fined $10 and costs by Magistrate Webster for exceeding the speed limit.

Fourteen Inches of Snow.

Tulluride, Col., Sept. 17.—Snow to the depth of 14 inches fell on the mountains of west Colorado Saturday. Snow, low an elevation of 10,000 feet the snow melted as it fell.
