B. T. ELWELL.

Perfectly Well at 79 Years of Age!

"Time Rolls Back in Its Flight!"

ENLARGEMENT OF PROSTATE GLAND AND EXTREME CONSTIPATION AND CHRONIC INDIGESTION CURED BY THREE BOTTLES!

Mr. B. T. ELWELL, FORMERLY OF PATER, ARBOUTHNOTH COURT, ME., BUT FOR THE LAST THREE YEARS LIVING AT ROCKLAND, ME., No. 2 SPRING ST., WITNESSES—

"I am now 79 years of age. I have been troubled for twenty years with enlargement of prostate gland, and with irregular action of the bowels, alternating between diarrhoea and extreme constipation. For two years the constipation was so great that I could not have a motion of the bowels at all. I have a great sufferer from indigestion with no appetite. Within fifteen minutes after taking food into the stomach, it would become extremely acid with extreme burning sensations, and no action of the stomach. I had taken many of the best cathartics, including castor oil, but they did me no good. I had been taking your Discovery but a few days before I felt a decided change. I have now taken one-half course (three bottles), and have a fine appetite; I eat the best of food, and my bowels are regular in action every day, and I feel much better than I have done for many years. I am now as well as when a boy; my bladder trouble has entirely disappeared, and I have experienced no return. I have no more to say than that I am very truly yours, B. T. ELWELL, 36 KODIA DISCOVERY CO., Wolfville, N.S."

POETRY.

The Locked Door.

Two friends once closed between them, mutually,
A door with double locks, one on each side;
With separate keys, fashioned with cunning art,
Sure of himself, strong in fresh-wounded pride,
Each, for his own side only, held the key.
And thus for weary weeks they dwelt apart,
The one at ease, whose drooping tears had drowned
The fire of wrath that in his bosom burned, Full of forgiveness, softly stole and turned the key; to seek to open the door, but found
The other lock still fast, still locked the door!
Then the old anger leaped to sudden flame,
And lying on his friend's hard heart the blame,
He shut again the bolt and turned once more
To miss, in bitterness, the reopened wound.

That night the other thought of olden days,
And melted in the memory; they seemed
No nearer than estrangement's later hours, That of the quarrel he thought he must have dreamed.

And so unlocked the door; yet all his powers
Failed still to shake it. Then he muttered,
"Fool,
To think that stubborn char would e'er repent!"
And socketward again the bolt he sent.
And thus, before the first friend's wrath could cool,
The other's heart grew hard again and kept The bar between them while they walk ed or slept.

But one calm eve both wakened from a dream
Of what has been, so clear, forshadowing, too
The golden prophecy of what may be;
Each rises, and on the moonlight's softened gleam,
Resolves to try again all he can do.
Once more before the barrier he stands;
And, as again, slowly each iron key Hinges in the rusted wards, an answering sound Comes from the other side. The great door flies
Open and leaves the old friends, newly found,
Lovingly looking in each other's eyes.
With reunited hearts and firm-clasped hands,

"Then I am to be sold—three for six thousand pounds?" she cried bitterly.
"Yes, sold as surely as the wicked slave-dealers sell the mulatto girls with a hammer and block! And you are my father!"

"Your imaginary parallel is not a happy one," he answered sternly. "I secure for you rank, position, wealth, not infamy."

"She was too excited to take in his meaning.
"Father, is that all I am to you?"
she went on pleadingly.

He stooped his head against her tenderness as he had done again; but his pride only asking a question in his turn.
"Annie, do you love another?"

A burning tide of passion rushed over cheek and brow; an expression of unduly modesty almost painful to witness.
Yet she hurriedly rejoined:
"No! no! Whom could I love, as if relieved. "You have only just come out, and have seen so few men beside your cousin George, and he has ever been to you as a brother."

"Not even that," said the stricken rebellious heart to itself. "A brother would have stood by me now in my trouble, and tried to get me free. O, if he is not my brother!"

But he was not; and now—O, the shame of it!—he never could be anything more. Yet her memory could recall many little acts of kindness, and much generous consideration. How was it that he had so suddenly grown unmindful of her? Ah,
"Men are men;—the best sometimes fitted."

Mr. Crichton put his arm round his daughter, patted her on the cheek, and finally kissed her. He bade her be brave and obedient, for her own sake and his. She was a very lucky girl, if she only had the sense to discern it.
She would be the envy of all her acquaintance; he would be the envy of the town. Annie found it impossible to resist this sudden display of affection.
There was a mingling of command and tenderness which is sure to impress a nature like hers. She gave no promise, but entered no further protest. Outwardly composed and serene, she kissed her father and withdrew.

"Have you brought her to reason?" asked Mrs. Crichton, as her husband entered his own room. "I thought you were never coming upstairs."

"I think she will regard my wishes," was the grave answer.

This satisfied the lady, but did not at all satisfy the head of the family.
He was well as supreme, his word a law.
But what if that law consigned his child to a lifelong misery?

CHAPTER III.

"Annie, are you doing this thing of your own free will?"

What evil spirit tempted her then,
in that trial moment of her life, to answer
"Yes?"

George Knight flung her hand away.
"You are not the girl I thought you were," he said. "You are a toy, to be bought and sold—dazzled by rank and fashion."

"Yes, I only want the truth."
"Then call it debt."

Annie started as if smitten. Then putting both hands together she exclaimed:

"O, father, if this be true why not sell off everything, and pay what you owe, and have an easy mind? Sacrifice everything but me!"

"My child, do you not see what humiliation the selling off would involve?
I should confess myself a bankrupt."
She was totally ignorant of business details, and had very little idea of what a bankrupt meant. So she continued, breathless with her own little plans:

"There is my father, and mother's rubbies. Take them—take all—only let us keep our self-respect."

"Sixty pounds would purchase those old sets," he rejoined impatiently. "For the present exigency I should require six thousand."

She gasped. The sum named was beyond her comprehension at the moment.

"I can work," she said timidly.
"You cannot. It is known in town that the Earl of Northmore is a suitor for your hand." (He did not add that he had let it be known.) "This has tided back impertunate profligate for a time."

"Then I am to be sold—three for six thousand pounds?" she cried bitterly.
"Yes, sold as surely as the wicked slave-
dealers sell the mulatto girls with a

CHAPTER III.

"Annie, are you doing this thing of your own free will?"

What evil spirit tempted her then,
in that trial moment of her life, to answer
"Yes?"

George Knight flung her hand away.
"You are not the girl I thought you were," he said. "You are a toy, to be bought and sold—dazzled by rank and fashion."

"Yes, I only want the truth."
"Then call it debt."

Annie started as if smitten. Then putting both hands together she exclaimed:

doubted; he suspected. He had known her from childhood—known how little she cared for rank or state—yet wilfully misunderstood her now. In his eyes she was a mere puppet. Had he not called her a "toy of fashion"? She was low, mean, sordid; selling herself for position.

"Our doubts are traitors, and make us lose the good we oft might win." Yes. "The good we oft might win."
Ah, it was gone from her for ever-gone beyond recall.

In her mind there was not a doubt about her cousin. She set him down as harsh and unfeeling, rash and ungenerous. Only this was not his habitual character. The false, unnatural life in town was changing even him. As to her future husband, she questioned very much whether he ever had known a generous impulse in his life.

Meanwhile for poor George Knight
"the minutes he told 'er and 'er" were but a repetition of the usual Moor's.
From their early days his cousin Annie had been his ideal of everything that was pretty and winning. Her girlish arts, even her little coquetries, her wilful imperiousness, were so many rivets to fasten her image in his memory.

Yet he could scarcely tell when she came to be enshrined in his inmost heart and bear the name of "woman." He used to kiss his cousin when they were innocent children together, but he knew there came a day when he could not so touch her for the very life of him; when the flutter of her little fingers within his own sent the life-blood surging to his heart. Then he had dreamed of a closer and dearer relationship. Yes, the shrine might hold its idol still under the sacred name of "wife." Annie and he would be content with simple pleasures and inexpensive comforts. The cage in which his song-bird should be placed must be flower-wreathed, but need not be gilded. If only he might win her, life would be most blessed all; surely well.

So George Knight had dreamed a year or two before, but in the past twelve months many startling events had taken place. The Honourable Augustus Crichton moved from his country residence, and the constant recollection of an im-perished rent-roll, to a house in town.
Here he ran beyond the limits of his income, and burdened himself anew with debt. Yet with an appearance of supreme indifference, and assumption of position, Annie's only child, was brought out, and became the belle of the season.

To Annie the change had been at first delightful. Her country home was dull in the extreme, and she had lived there in a solitary grandeur which was very trying to a young and lively spirit. Her cousin George, who was obliged to refuse a commission in the Guards for want of means to support it, had been forced to go in for a Government clerkship, and was working himself in a London office. Annie remembered the tall handsome boy, her son's son by a former marriage, who was idolized by a host of step-brothers and sisters, and took courage. At least she would have one friend in town.

To his uncle's home George Knight at once gained the entree. Mrs. Crichton, with admirable discrimination, seeing that the intimacy of such close relations might not be evaded, tried to put him on a safe footing; that is, one from which there is seldom an advance.
Once let there be intercourse without a participle of self-consciousness, and the step into the extreme passion is rare. So, at least, judged the woman of the world, and, judging thus, saw no dark shadow to mar the brilliancy of her daughter's future path.

But the delightful vista of probability that suddenly opened was beyond the reach of fond expectation. Neither the Honourable Augustus nor his honourable wife ever in their wildest fancy dreamed of seeing Annie a Countess.

"The shadow of nobility," indeed, rested on the father, the younger son of a noble house; but here was the very substance ready to descend in a more tangible form, in the shape of a coronet, on the brow of his child. No marvel that her parents were dazzled by the prospect.

But Annie herself was colour-blind, and could discern no roseate tints in the vista before her. "The traitor doubt," suggested that she could be unhappy though richly wed, fell over her spirit like a pall, and changed her mood to gall and bitterness.

"You know, my dear George, we can have but one aim—the happiness of our beloved Annie," Mrs. Crichton had found an opportunity of saying to her nephew, "But children are incapable of judging, and she is such a child still. We rely upon you to help her to see the advantages of the position now offered to her."

"I fail to see them, myself," was the blunt confession.

Mrs. Crichton opened her eyes very wide in an incredulous stare. Her nephew was decidedly gauche. Her husband must speak to him and not permit him to become troublesome.

So Mr. Crichton did speak, and George was forced to listen. He asked but one question:

"Does Annie herself see what you deem the advantages of this offer?"

"Annie is a sensible girl," was the cautious reply, "and entirely submits herself to my disposal."

The hearer was as dissatisfied as the speaker. At the heart of each of these men was a dull aching, and at the same moment a wild longing, which, if it dared speak out, would say, "This must not be!"

Of course George Knight held no clue to the state of his cousin's mind at the time. She was wholly and wretchedly misjudged. He was madly and furiously jealous, and hurt at being set aside. How often had she consulted him on smaller matters, and his advice been followed! Now she did not even accord him the privileges of a friend and brother. Not only was she changed to him, but false and heartless to him. This was what fashion and falsehood wrought! Ah, how true it is—"Not even the tenderest heart, and next our own,
Knows half the reasons why we must or sigh."

Only the eye of God can read aright the subtleties of the human soul.

The marriage of convenience was carried on, but George Knight escaped the pain of being present at the nuptials.
A vacancy occurring at the time in a foreign branch of the office by which he was employed, he applied for the post, and, to his great relief, obtained it.
He had not realized what it would cost him thus to go, leaving home and hope behind, until he had turned his back upon Old England for years, perhaps for ever. Henceforth nothing was left him but a memory. He must "forget himself to marble."

The leave-taking in the country home was almost uproarious in its grief. In town it was formal and constrained.
To Annie her cousin offered neither congratulations nor a wedding present.

The wish for her happiness seemed to stick in his throat. "He showed very bad taste," his aunt severely said, privately intimating to the Earl that "the poor fellow was terribly disappointed at Annie's choice, and for his own sake the sooner he got out of the way the better." The Earl smiled in pity and triumph; then the audacious youth and his woe were dismissed from remembrance.

"Annie's choice." Miserable fallacy!
Wretched delusion! It sent forth a fugitive from another earthly Eden, a wreck in hopes, an aimless wanderer, an old man in heart at five and twenty.

The bride's presents were numerous and costly, but the wedding, by her desire was quiet. The parure alone might have reconciled her to anything, even to a husband as old as her father, and not nearly as attractive.

Not Like His Mother's

There's a young man recently married, that is to say, a year or so ago, living on St. Antoine street, who ought to be in the diplomatic service, says the Detroit Free Press.

His wife had pie for dinner the other day.

His wife watched him with peculiar pleasure.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 6, 1892.

Denary of Avon.

On Tuesday and Monday of this week the Clergy belonging to the Denary of Avon met in Wolfville. The first public service was held in St. John's Church on Tuesday evening, May 3, at eight o'clock. Mr Shaw kindly presided at the organ; the singing was very good and hearty. Miss May Brown sang a beautiful hymn: "O Rest in the Lord." A most able address was given by the Venerable Archdeacon Jones, Rector of Windsor, on "The necessity of knowing why we are members of the Church of England." A good congregation assembled. The offerings were for the Foreign Missions of the Church of England; the missions carried on in India, China, Japan, and elsewhere under the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

Our Village.

As several new houses are in process of construction, it is very important that the general appearance of the premises connected with such buildings should receive some attention. The difference between a picturesque and pleasing arrangement of grounds and outbuildings and an ill-considered and vulgar condition of the premises is readily perceived. The impression which our Village will make on visitors will depend very largely on these differences. As the Village lies at the base and the side of a hill, it is the more to be regretted that want of consideration in regard to these matters is sometimes exhibited. The financial value of a property is very much increased by such an arrangement of the premises as indicates refinement rather than coarseness. To a much larger extent than is often supposed, we are judged by little things.

Kentville News.

Mr A. Blanchard, of the law firm of Blanchard & Morse, Windsor, was in town last Friday. Miss Annie Lovett has lately returned after a long visit in New York. Messrs Stackhouse and Shaw, of the senior class at Acadia, conducted the services in the Baptist church last Sunday morning. The evening, next Sabbath morning, Rev. W. C. Vincent, of Canby, will preach in the same church both morning and evening. Mr A. C. Morse moved this week to the corner store lately occupied by L. C. Swain. He has his confectionary arranged very temptingly in his new quarters. Mr Fred Hardy has put in several large lights of glass in the roof of Mr More's old stand and is otherwise fixing it for a photographic gallery. Mr George Gilson has returned from the medical department at Dalhousie and is now at his home. The concert given by the Kentville Philharmonic and Dramatic Society on Thursday evening, April 28th, was largely attended and was considered a success throughout. The violin solo by Mr Barnett was one of his best efforts, and Mrs Richardson's song "Lullaby," received an encore. The other pieces were all well rendered. The second half of the entertainment consisted of a farce entitled "Our Friend the Mayor." This furnished lots of amusement for the audience for about an hour and a half. All the characters were well acted, and the farce from first to last was without hesitation or blunder. Mr and Mrs B. Webster returned from Halifax last Saturday evening. Mr Webster looks quite well after the fatiguing work of the session and the exciting meetings of the Committee of Investigation. The electors of Kings must certainly feel that they have been represented by one of the ablest men in the House of Assembly. Miss Whitman, teacher in education, gave a literary and dramatic entertainment in Margeson's Hall last Monday evening. The audience was small. The entertainment consisted of Jean Ingulw's "Songs of Seven," several readings by Miss Whitman, and 15 pictured emotions in Greek costume by the same. Miss Whitman is a good elocutionist and deserves a better audience when she again appears upon the stage with her pupils. The Arlington Minstrels paraded the street on Tuesday with their band, and in the evening they gave a minstrel show in Margeson's Hall. The music was considered very good and a few local hits were given during the performance.

Last Tuesday a great smashup occurred in front of H. Glasgow's shop. Dr Fitch's colt bolted and threw him out and just at the corner ran into a wagon driven by Mr Jordan from Berch Hill. Mr Jordan was violently thrown to the ground and did not become fully conscious for several hours. Dr Fitch received a cut on the face. Mr Jordan's wagon was entirely demolished. County Court opened Tuesday. Only two cases were for trial. Sivfield vs Green lasted all day. This was an action on a promissory note and for goods sold and delivered. Judgment was reserved. W. E. Roscoe was counsel for plaintiff and W. P. Shaffner for defendant. Wednesday morning the case of Margeson vs Beckwith was begun and lasted all day and was continued on Thursday. This action arose from a difficulty in settling a running account. E. B. Cogswell was counsel for plaintiff and T. R. Robertson for defendant.

The Skoda Discovery Co.

My article of last week was written when I was not in a fit state to write, but the matter seemed to be of such importance that it should not be deferred. Promptness in such cases is what is wanted if anything is to be accomplished. I was glad to find that the management of the ACADIAN was of the same mind, and that it was in accord with the remarks I had made. I do not consider that the offence complained of was a very grave one. It was probably the work of a small boy of the village, who infest the streets and who are turned out by their parents to act without restraint and to throw stones when they are not object to throw them at it. It is the parents who are to blame and they ought to know better than to treat their children as to put them on the high road of becoming a nuisance, and fit for no useful service. As this case has been dealt with so resolutely and satisfactorily by the ACADIAN it is to be hoped that the nuisance will be mitigated and brought to an end. The manufacturing company have sent a large sum in the village which can not be of great value. It inaugurates a new species of industry which will probably be the precursor of others in the same line if the inhabitants had sufficient wisdom to give due aid and encouragement. OMBRETT. Wolfville, April 30th, 1892. Cheap Trip to Europe. Editor James of the Statesman, Bowmansville, goes to Europe nearly every summer in charge of a tourist party and has got travel in the Old Land reduced to a system and the expenses down very low. He has issued a pamphlet containing cheap excursion rates and telling how and when to go, what to wear, what baggage to take and other useful information for ocean travellers. He has also a list with steamships and railway lines, hotels, etc., and all who buy tickets from him get the benefit. It shows at a glance what the rates are for each line and the business all the year round. He leaves with his tourist party for 1892 about July 1st for a trip through Scotland and England. Mr James will accompany him. We want any of our readers who join Mr James' party to send us for publication letters descriptive of their travels and we will gladly mail this paper to them during their absence if they will give us their address. In writing address, M. A. JAMES, publisher, Brownsville, Ont., and do us the favor of mentioning this paper to him.

On Sunday afternoon a porpoise, which had found its way up the basin, was discovered in the creek and shot by Mr. D. R. Munro. The creature was five feet long and weighed 150 pounds. It must have got very much astray in its reckoning as it is a very unfrequent thing for them to be seen in these waters. It was secured by Mr. Frank Curry, who, we believe, secured quite a large quantity of valuable oil from it.

It is here at last. Newy's Ediment. Great Healing remedy known. Demand greater than the supply. For Sale at G. V. Band's Drug-store.

The regular missionary meeting in the Baptist church on Sunday evening was devoted to special prayer for the Belgian mission. Prof. D. F. Wallace was appointed to look after the distribution of reports for Boston, and Mr. W. F. Newcomb and Mr. A. D. Nichols for like work in Cornwallis and Aylesford. The financial return as submitted totaled a balance of $18.00 to the convention's credit. Gasperoni News.

Mr. J. J. Martin has sold his dwelling house and barrel factory to Mr. Millar. He proposes to build this summer on his farm opposite Mr. Isaac Caldwell.

Mr. I. N. Caldwell and Mr. El. Kwanick are each improving the appearance of their houses the first by a free use of paint, the other by putting up an addition. This place is abuzz with abundance of water flowing down the sides of the mountain or gushing from the springs at its base.

These springs and streams are being utilized. Pipes were laid last summer from the house of Mr. Daniel Miles to his son George and water brought for the use of the family and stock. They seem well pleased with the investment. Mr. Baker is this spring, following their example. There is abundance left to meet the want of all others, and a fine stream of water, famous in history, befalls.

Mr. J. Andrew Caldwell has purchased the Forsyth property, and Mr. Forsyth has moved to the house of Mr. Lawrence on the ridge. The family will be missed from the community, where they are greatly esteemed.

Mr. Elijah Eagles has purchased Mrs. Layton's property, which he will make his home.

The Baptist "District committee" for Kings Co. held meetings here on the 3d, 5th and 7th of the past week. The seven of the pastors of the County and three of the Professors from the College were present. The morning was devoted to routine business. In the afternoon Dr. Higgins delivered a thoughtful address on "Baptist observances." A lively discussion followed, in which a number participated. Dr. Sawyer next gave an address on "Amusements and the church's relation thereto." The Dr. spoke in his usually brilliant style.

At the evening session Rev. S. B. Kempton gave a paper on Studies in the Acts. Rev. Mr. Daisey gave an address on the N. S. Missions and Rev. Mr. Jenner on Foreign missions.

Country Produce taken in Exchange for Goods!

DEAR EDITOR,—You said in your last paper that you have not received communications from a number of correspondents for some time past, so I thought I would send you a few items from Church Street.

Well, to begin with, there has been a great deal of sickness in this street since February, and a great many are still complaining with la grippe and bad colds.

The weather has been very favorable for the farmers to get their sowing done and a few potatoes have also been planted. The farmers are well up with their work.

The female part of the community commenced some time ago to rip, tear and cut into strips, and many pairs of pants with coats and vests are missing, which I suppose have shared the same fate of the old rags. Then the trying time for us men commenced. If the dinner was late of course the women had been very busy with their mat. We let them have the house to themselves as much as possible while the "hooking" process was going on; but if "hooking" compelled us to go through the house we were sure to be met with, "Now do be careful and do not touch that," or "If you do wish you would stay out until you were wanted"; and so we had to put up with all the abuse that those ladies saw fit to give. And just here I may say that they can think of a lot. Well, as every thing must of necessity come to an end, so I think the last must have been "hooked" for this season, and just as we men were flattered ourselves that quiet was about to be restored again in our homes and that we would be allowed to go in and out without being flung mats or anything of the kind, and we were beginning to take our usual comfort in our homes, when lo! and behold, one morning, soon after the last mat was finished, we were made to believe in the truth of the old story that one trouble never comes alone, for before long the chairs, sofas, tables, mats, carpets, curtains, blinds, stoves, pots, dishes, glassware and a thousand other articles such as beds, bedroom sets, &c. were all removed outside in order to give an opportunity of dusting, washing and scrubbing the house. Now, Mr. Editor, I suppose all this is a work of necessity, but it is a great affliction for us men folk. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space, I am Yours truly, GUYTON CURRIE.

The Skoda Discovery Co., are grateful to "our hero" for the interest he manifests in the safety of their property. His article in your last issue might possibly mislead. Since the Laboratory was taken over from the contractor, only one pane of glass has been broken and that the Company, individually and collectively, have always treated the boys of Wolfville with becoming deference and they do not believe the boys will so far forget themselves as to wantonly injure the Laboratory or destroy their property in any manner whatever. Free Farms in the Canadian Northwest.

Manitoba. Assiniboia. Alberta. Saskatchewan.

The Government gives one quarter section (106 acres) free to every bonafide settler. A second quarter section can be pre-empted by deferred payments. The Canada Pacific Railway Company has a large quantity of the best farming lands for sale at $3.00 PER ACRE, with easy terms of payment. The Canada Northwest has the most productive soil in the world. Its wheat fetches the highest price; its live cattle are admitted to the English markets, while United States cattle are not. There is a market for the farmer at every station; and there are schools and churches wherever there are settlers. It is not subject to drought or floods, or to cyclones or tornadoes. Ask any Canadian Railway Agent for books and maps concerning it; ask for "Farming and ranching in Western Canada," or the "Free Farms" map, or "Actual Experience," and read the testimony of men who have gone there from Eastern Canada. Young women are in great demand; they find occupation as domestics directly they arrive, and readily get married to prosperous young farmers. Young men or young women can start life there almost without money. They make the money there; an independence is gained in a year or two years by the thrifty. The old settlers of Prince Edward Island should be their influence with the young men who intend emigrating to keep them within the Dominion, where they are offering better advantages than in the United States--do not lose their nationality. Lose no time in getting to the West and choose your location. First come, first served. Apply for particulars, price of tickets, &c., to your local ticket Agent or to J. HERBERT HARRIS.

Can Dyspepsia be Cured.

This is a question often asked by those that suffer from the effects of this disease. The question usually arises after the miserable sufferer has tried nearly all the remedies recommended and has failed to derive any permanent relief from them or from physicians. To such the testimony of a well-known and highly respectable young man of Pictou may be of interest.

Mr. Wm. Adamson, under date of March 15th, 1892, writes: "I am very glad to add my testimony to the marvelous efficiency of your St. Lawrence Dyspepsia Powders and Bitters. Mine was a very bad case of dyspepsia and though I had tried nearly all the popular remedies recommended or guaranteed as cures for that disease, I received little or no benefit and almost began to think there was no cure for me.

It was then that I was induced to give your remedies a trial though I must confess that I had but little faith that they would benefit me. But the results were wonderful. The wretched feeling that only those who have experienced the agonies of dyspepsia can know, completely left me after using but two packages of St. Lawrence Dyspepsia and now after finishing a package of St. Lawrence Bitters I consider myself completely cured. I can now eat almost anything in the hope of food and hardly know that I have a stomach."

A Wise Minister.

The minister of a western church not long ago preached a sermon on card playing and at its close remarked:

"Will the brethren now in the house who know how to play poker please hold up their hands?"

He waited a minute and not a hand went up.

"I am very much obliged," he said then, "but I did not think so many of you know how."

There was a sensation in the church but the preacher concluded the service quietly and afterwards a committee waited on him.

"We come to ask you what you meant by saying we all knew how to play poker, when in response to your inquiry not one of us responded," said the spokesman, hotly.

The preacher laughed soothingly. "Don't let your tempers get the better of you, brethren," he replied; "any man who knows how to play poker isn't going to show his hand until he is forced to, and you know it as well as I do."

The committee apologized and reported to the other members and the preacher's salary was raised.

Mrs. Millon's Ride.

When Mrs. Millon goes to ride she travels forth in state. Her horses, full of fire and pride, go prancing from the gate; but all the beauties of the day she views with languid eye.

Her flesh in wondrous wastes away, her voice is but a sigh. For Mrs. Millon is in an advanced stage of catarrh, and all the luxuries that wealth can buy fail to give her comfort. She envies her rosy waiting-maid, and would give all her riches for that young woman's pure breath and blooming health.

Now, if some true and disinterested friend would advise Mrs. Millon of the wonderful merits of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, she would learn that her case is not past help. $500 reward is offered by the manufacturers for a case of catarrh in the head which they cannot cure.

The house where Beethoven wrote his Ninth Symphony is still standing in Baden and is now occupied by an establishment of seamstresses. An old woman, who for several years waited on the great musician at this very house, is living, and recently told a company of German artists that none of Beethoven's portraits were like him, for he looked much fiercer and savage like, because he never troubled about brushing his hair. She called her old master an "uncouth, crazy musician."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a specific for troubles arising from overwork, mental worry, or excess of any nature. G. A. Does Prohibition Prohibit?

The following extracts are from an article in the Union Signal, the official organ of the W. C. T. U., on the above subject:

General Dow, Mrs. Stevens and others went with us to the city hall to see the "quilling," as it is called; a unique ceremony for which preparations had been made for several months, as it had been known that Laly Henry Somerset was coming to behold this remarkable operation that the night take the story home to England and do good thereby. The sheriff and his two faithful deputies were on hand to show how it is done. They had saved all the liquor seized since December last, which did not present a formidable array, but was most interesting as revealing the devices of the smugglers, who still try to turn a dishonest penny by the violation of law. Some of the liquor had been packed into small bottles, intermingled with sawdust, and encased in a barrel, marked "Sugar." Some had been marked "Flour," others "Butter," others "Eggs," but the sheriff told us that an expert could very soon tell by the sound when these barrels were rolled, and by other unmistakable symptoms, that the superstitious were fraudulent. He said that, aside from what they call "pocket peddling," the traffic was practically stamped out, that brewers found it did not pay, on account of the bulk of their material, to bring it in, and the traffic was so dangerous that all but the lowest now gave it "a wide berth."

It was most interesting to see Neal Dow with a jug of old rye in hand as he stood up beside the bickered aperture through which the liquor is sent gurgling into the sewers of the city where it can do no injury, and listen to his ringing "Here goes!" as he turned the jug right side up which, when it has such contents, must be always upside down. By special request Lady Henry Somerset and others of us passed bottles, decanters and jugs. Anna Gordon—who is a world's super-naturalist stands at the head of well-nigh 300,000 children—taking special pleasure in turning "the cradle," has into its natural home, seated by the sheriff's little grandson, two years old, who entered into the sport with zest. * * * Whoever is flagging in zeal or lacking in faith would do well to take a trip to Maine and get his spiritual strength renewed. Let him sit down with Neal Dow in his beautiful home where he has lived and toiled for sixty-two years, in the library in which he wrote the original Maine law, which, without a charge of phrase, was adopted in 1851 and with but two years interval has been the law-strengthened and improved by experience, up to this time. Let him hear say a lay to heart the cheery tones of prohibition's father, who, at nearly ninety years of age still says, "It is better—further on, and hates no jot of heat or hope. Let him listen while Gen. Neal Dow, who fought the battles of his country and carries wounds received in that great argument of bayonets, describes the infinitely superior value of ballots to bayonets and recites the faith that is within him that only through politics and law can the American Republic free itself from complexity with that dice and carder's sordid brain of the best and brightest sons. Let him sit down at the table in that consecrated home and looking around him see how a pure, great life reaps its reward even here.

The prohibition commission, as it is undoubtedly, can do little more than tabulate already well known facts. But perhaps the old facts in new form may help to arouse the temperance electors to a sense of the importance of beginning at the beginning, by sending only prohibitionists to Parliament.

Rev. W. A. McKay of Woodstock, relates that a friend of his once said to the late Sir John A. Macdonald:—"Sir John, when are you going to give us Prohibition?" Sir John—"When ever you want it." But we want it now," said my friend. Sir John—"Then say so." But how are we to say it?" was the query of my friend, Sir John—"By sending prohibitionists to Parliament." And that on another occasion, replying to a deputation of liquor-sellers, Sir John said, "Gentlemen, don't abuse the churches or stir up their hostility for as soon as the churches do their duty, your days are numbered." No comment is required.

An Irishman had a correct appreciation of the fitness of things, who, having applied for a license to sell liquor, and being required to prove a good moral character, said: "Yes Honor, I don't see the necessity of a good moral character to sell whiskey."
