OUT ALL NIGHT

Eleven Hundred Excursionists Got Home For Breakfast.

The aquatic carnival given by the Thirteenth Band last night was held under very unfavorable weather conditions. Rain and a dense fog came on shortly after midnight. A thicker fog has not been seen around the Beach for years.

Considering the weather the attendance was splendid, fully 2,000 people going on board the Turbinia and Modjeska, and filling both boats comfortably. The Macnea did not go out.

The Ivan R. carried the fireworks. Music by the two bands was greatly enjoyed, but it was not a good night for fireworks. About 10:30 the Modjeska and Ivan R. returned, and the former's load of passengers disembarked.

The Turbinia, however, could not make the canal, and, rather than run any risk with 1,000 passengers on board Captain Bongard decided to wait until the fog lifted. It didn't lift, and he had to wait for daylight. The vessel steamed in at about 6:30 this morning.

Fortunately the street railway company had kept cars in waiting. Much credit cannot be given to the officers of the Turbinia for their kindness to the passengers. Every possible convenience was made for them.

The local steamboat companies are applying to the Government for a fog horn at the Beach. Had one been available last night the Turbinia would have made the canal all right.

PROMINENT PEOPLE OF THE ASSEMBLY

Rev. W. Forbes, Rev. R.S. Scott, Rev. W. Simons, Rev. D. Lang, Tatamagouche, N.S., Hillsburg, Ont., Vermilion, Ont., St. John, N.B.

Rev. Wm. Forbes is the successful assistant and successor of the venerable Dr. Sedgwick. Rev. R. S. Scott is a good type of our Knox College graduates and Ontario clergy. Rev. W. Simons is one of Principal King's "old boys," has an institutional church, and without salary, superintends 23 mission stations.

Rev. D. Lang is the eloquent pastor of St. Andrew's Church, St. John, where Judge Forbes is a member of session.

STEWART VS. TRUTH RE THE CATARACT.

Hansard Proves That Stewart Deliberately Misrepresented—The Report Quoted.

T. J. Stewart, the principal anti-Hamilton power advocate, has been endeavoring to create doubt as to the ability of the Cataract Company to supply current to the city under the contract upon which the electors will vote on Monday. Stewart's plan has been to allege that the Cataract Company was entitled to use 700 cubic feet a second from the old Welland Canal, and that, in 1906, it applied for and obtained 300 cubic feet more. Even with this increase Stewart has again and again stated that the Cataract Company is using within 6 per cent. of its limit of water supply.

TWO FALSEHOODS NAILED.

To the Editor of the Times: Sir,—It is time to pin two current falsehoods in regard to this company. The sources of the first will be readily placed. It is stated that we are using 94 per cent. of our water leased from the Government. The telegram from the Superintendent of Engineers of the Welland Canal, quoted below, disposes of that conclusively. The second statement, made by a Minister of the Crown, is to the effect that this company has refused to sell power to the Hydro-Electric Commission. We will not quote the letters but if any one is interesting in the truth we shall be pleased to show them to him, and dispose of this statement. Or any paper can publish them if it chooses, letting the public judge. And so on through the list of statements made in attack on a legitimate business honorably conducted. What will any thinking man say of a Government enterprise whose promoters take so little account in confining themselves to the truth? Further, our undertaking is entitled to the support of the plain truth which should not be too much to expect from a Minister of the Crown or a member of Parliament. Yours truly, Wm. C. Hawkins, General Manager. The Hamilton Cataract Power, Light & Traction Company, Limited, Hamilton, 5th June, 1909.

THE MAN IN OVERALLS

New story next Tuesday. Have you got your dog on a string? If those $5 fines for wheeling on the sidewalk are not more effective, they better be made $10. Perhaps, however, it is intended as a revenue tariff.

Presbyterian doctrine will predominate in Hamilton pulpits to-morrow. How many will preach predestination? I am told that the Hydro-Electric boomers are buying votes. Where did the money come from?

Now that the real estate men have joined the Greater Hamilton movement things should begin to happen. Another show place for the visitors in town is the revetment wall. Go down and have a look. When stretched along the bay front it will be a great sea wall promenade.

I have no doubt but Col. Hendrie feels quite annoyed about those attacks on the Mayor, so ungentlemanly and uncalled for. Geo. H. Summers has a clever publicity man. That poster of his is worthy of honorable mention in theatrical circles.

Col. Hendrie ought to be satisfied with that apology of the Spectator. It was abject enough. Up in Guelph they are using clothes lines for dog leashes, and the result that doggie can walk on one side of the street and its owner on the other.

The man who votes Hydro-Electric on Monday takes big risks. Will you take it? To tell the truth, I have an idea that Hon. Mr. Hendrie would be quite beaten if the Hydro-Electric by-law was beaten on Monday. It's pretty well known that he is more or less sick of the whole thing.

Of course, Mr. Stewart will also want to be on the Board of Control. Perhaps Chief Smith will keep an eye on the men with the long green on Monday.

If you go on the water to-morrow, don't be foolish or take unreasonable risks. I know there is no danger and no chance of your being drowned. But somebody will be the next victim, and you can't tell for sure who it will be.

There was peace and quietness in the city when Stewart was in Ottawa. Now all is turmoil and wrangling again. I never saw such a man. Anyway, see that your dog sleeps with his bedroom window open.

Pay no attention to the agitators. Vote for what you think best for Hamilton. "Love Finds the Way." The Times new story begins next Tuesday.

Give a dog an ill name and hang him. There are dogs and dogs, and the well-bred, well-behaved dog should not have to suffer because of the one afflicted with a lot of useless mongrel curs, that are a pest to everybody around, destroying property and destroying our night's rest with their hideous noise. I may be singular in my views, but I believe that dog owners should be made to show cause before they can purchase a tag. If their dog is useful, if it is pure bred, if it is well trained, I would grant a tag. If the dog is shown to be a mongrel, a useless, destructive cur, it would get no tag from me. If such a law were in force, the present drastic measures would not need to be enforced. I sympathize with the dog—the under dog—in this case, that can't now even have a dog's life. The dog is man's most faithful friend. What kind of a friend is man to it? What about that indignation meeting?

NO WRONG INTENDED

In Use of Bottles Without Registering the Mark.

Health Inspector L. McDonald charged Harold E. Warner, 315 King street east, proprietor of ... Cloverdale Milk Company, at police court this morning, with using milk bottles not registered at the Health Office.

W. A. Logie appeared for the defendant. He said that the company had decided to change its identification mark and had ordered a supply of new bottles. Some of the bottles had arrived and were being used and the company was waiting until the complete supply arrived before registering the mark.

Under these circumstances, although the magistrate found the defendant guilty, he did not think it was a case for a fine. Murray Glover, 152 King William street, was arraigned on a d. and d. charge laid by C. stable J. Duncan. The defendant pleaded guilty and was then charged with trespass by Aurele Brunet. As the complainant did not appear the second charge was dismissed and the defendant fined $5 on the first.

Charles Grant charged Charles Jenkins, 108 Wood street east, with refusing to pay him $20 wages. The complainant said he had been hired by Jenkins to work at $10 a week, and had left a steady job to accept this position. The man Jenkins previously had working for him, witness said, had been discharged, but after he had been working for four days the former employee sobered up and was re-engaged by Mrs. Jenkins. Grant was then discharged. The defendant did not appear and Grant was given judgment for $20.

ENJOYED IT.

Mrs. Hendrie's Entertainment of Assembly Was Delightful.

The garden party given by Mrs. Hendrie at the Holmstead to the visiting delegates to the Presbyterian Assembly was largely attended, over 900 being present. Mrs. Hendrie, Miss Phyllis Hendrie and Mrs. Lyle received. Supper was served in a marquee on the lawn, and Mrs. John Crear, Mrs. R. R. Waidell, Mrs. Calder, Mrs. J. S. Henderson, Mrs. John Harvey, Mrs. Evei and Mrs. Renwick poured tea. The Ladies' Aid of Central Presbyterian Church had charge of serving the refreshments, and Anderson's Orchestra supplied music. Mrs. John S. Hendrie, Mrs. Hay, Mrs. Braithwaite and Mrs. Will Hendrie helped in entertaining. Pipe-Major McGregor gave some selections on the pipes.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES

PROMINENT PEOPLE OF THE ASSEMBLY

Rev. J.A. Wilson, Rev. J.G. Potter, Rev. J.E. Munro, Rev. J.R. Van Wyck

Messrs. Wilson and VanWyck were "snapped" in the corner of the reception room, receiving two commissioners. One is Rev. J. G. Potter, the popular member of Assembly and minister of St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough. The other is Rev. J. E. Munro, whose "staying powers" may be judged from the fact that he has been 16 years in his present pulpit in the west.

FAMILY CASES NOT FOR PUBLIC COURT.

Judge Teetzel Gets Pratt vs. Pratt Settled and Probably Wright vs. Wright.

Mr. Justice Teetzel took a strong stand in two family suits at the non-jury sitting of the High Court yesterday. He advised the parties to the actions of Pratt vs. Pratt and Wright vs. Wright to make concessions and come to a settlement. He said probably all would be better off financially and certainly all of them would be in a better state of mind afterwards and would be able to sleep better. It was an unfortunate thing when members of the same family got into litigation.

The first case of the two called was Pratt vs. Pratt, the plaintiff, Mrs. D. B. Pratt, suing the T. H. Pratt Company for a declaration and an accounting on $5,400 stock in the company and for an order to compel the directors to declare a dividend. Messrs. Staunton and Cahill acted for the plaintiff and Messrs. Middleton (Toronto) and Bell acted for the defendants. After some preliminary explanations on the part of counsel, His Lordship suggested Mr. E. R. C. Clarkson, of Toronto, be agreed upon as arbitrator, to value the stock in trade of the company, examine the books and determine the value of the shares. T. H. Pratt expressed willingness to leave the matter entirely to Mr. Clarkson; otherwise he insisted on the case being tried at once.

The solicitors conferred with their clients and then a conference of the solicitors took place, after which Mr. Middleton announced the arrangement reached. It is that Mr. Clarkson is to value the stock and books of the company and determine the value of the shares as a going concern. The amount set by him is to be paid by Mr. T. H. Pratt and Mr. Peables, the majority stock holders. In the event of Mr. Clarkson declining to act the case is to be tried at the next court.

In the suit brought by Mrs. E. T. Wright against H. G. Wright for an accounting and a declaration in regard to the partnership which existed between her husband, who died some time ago, and his brother, H. G. Wright. His Lordship said that as one of the late Mr. Wright's heirs is a minor the responsibility of the parties to the action were all the greater. If the court decided that the business had to be sold all concerned might suffer loss. He strongly advised the parties to settle the matter and give more or take less than they felt that they had a legal right to do. He adjourned the case till the next court pending a settlement, but made an order that Mr. W. G. E. Boyd, accountant, is to have access to the books of the concern at all times, representing Mrs. Wright, but that he is in no wise to interfere with the management of the concern. H. G. Wright is to continue as manager and is not to be liable personally for any losses sustained by the firm unless through gross carelessness. Ross and Telford appeared for Mrs. Wright and Kerr & Thompson for H. G. Wright.

Proctor vs. Carscallen was settled on the terms stated in last evening's times. The action of Ross vs. Townsend for wages was referred to the local Master, Judge Snider. The suit of Godolph vs. Chertkoff for $1,750, commission on a sale, stands over until the next court. Small vs. Morley was referred to special referee Monk.

Justice Teetzel gave judgment in suit of Chadwick Bros., vs. the Parkin Elevator Company to recover $750 for goods supplied. He held that plaintiffs were entitled to $500, which defendants admitted was owing, and which they paid into court. The counter-claim set up by defendants for the difference between $750, the amount sued for and the $500, was awarded to the defendants, with costs. The costs of the main issue from the time the money was paid into court until the end of the trial, including the costs of the partial hearing before Justice Anglin, were ordered to be paid by the plaintiffs.

The last action to be heard at this sitting was Ross vs. L. J. Applegarth & Sons, specific performance of agreement. On or about October 1, 1908, plaintiff claims he obtained a lease from defendant of the first flat of No. 27 King street east. Dr. Ross agreed to allow defendant to arrange the ground floor for an amusement theatre as long as it didn't interfere with the light, air and view of his operating room and the erection of a rear building was not to be closer to it than 16 feet, with the understanding that he was to get a lease of the first flat. The defendants, Mr. Ross alleges, went on with the alterations and subsequently repudiated the lease.

The defendants say there was no agreement at all. The trial was being fought out when court closed at 6:30. After adjournment at 6:30 the parties got together on the suggestion of the Judge and arranged for a lease on terms satisfactory to both parties. The defendants are the proprietors of the Crystal Palace Amusement Theatre, and the plaintiff is Dr. Ross, the dentist, who practices dentistry above it.

LET PEOPLE DECIDE ISSUE

Mayor Has Nothing More to Say on Power By-law.

Another Farcical Hydro Meeting Last Night.

Stewart and Studholme Talk Glibly About Millions.

Although he has publicly declared that he has documents from the Hydro-Electric Commission which will disprove the statements made by ex-Mayor Stewart about the cost of Niagara power, Mayor McLaren said this morning that he had only two men approach him for the information. His Worship said he had nothing further to say to the people, nor any further reply to make to those who were attacking him before the by-law is voted on. He is satisfied to let the ratepayers be the judge, and has no fear about the verdict.

Another meeting in the interest of the Hydro-Electric scheme was held at Britannia Park last night, and, like those held earlier in the week, was a farce. Jim Miller, president, and the same speakers addressed the "crowd." Ex-Mayor Stewart declared the Dominion Power & Transmission Company had given away "millions of dollars" of watered stock practically free. Allan Studholme was so wrapt up in his subject that he failed to notice the laughter when he seriously announced that people "travelled millions of miles to see Niagara."

Chairman Crooks, of the Board of Health, ex-Chairman Quinn, Dr. Roberts, Medical Health Officer, and Dr. Parry leave to-morrow for Rochester, and will spend Monday getting pointers in connection with the pure milk campaign for babies to be carried on here during the summer months.

Six more cases of scarlet fever were reported to the health department last week. Other infectious and contagious diseases reported include four cases of German measles, and one each of typhoid and measles.

The Cemetery Board's financial statement for the month of May shows receipts of $1,395, as compared with $1,379 for the corresponding month a year ago. The expenditure amounted to $1,767, and $365 was set aside for the perpetual care fund.

COLLEGES REPORTED.

This Was Their Day at the General Assembly.

"We thank thee this morning with all the blessings and privileges it brings. We bless thee that the Master hath been with us leading us into a greater sense of duty and brotherly love." Thus Rev. F. M. Dewey's prayer was a test of the spirit of the Assembly this morning. The refreshing rain of the night had filled the well-ventilated church with bracing air.

President Forrest, of Halifax, reported for the Presbyterian College of the Maritime Provinces. It referred to the loss of Principal Magill to the college, but the gain of Dalhousie University in securing him for the chair of Philosophy. The Assembly was asked to approve the appointment of Rev. Dr. Clarence MacKeown, of Winnipeg, to fill the position of principal.

Principal Scrimger then made his first appearance before the House, to speak for Montreal Presbyterian College. He said: "Our first thought is one of sorrow at the death of Professor MacKenzie, of the chair of Biblical Theology. We have more consolation in the success of another department of our work, namely in securing a gentleman from France to take charge of the French work. We therefore ask that Rev. Charles Biesler be inducted. We have not been able to secure a successor to Dr. MacKeown, but ask for power to do so should a suitable man be found."

The report was seconded by Rev. A. A. Graham, of St. John's and was adopted.

BROKEN NOSE,

But Was It Smith's or Holloway's That Got Blow?

Two colored men, John Smith and William Holloway, got into a mix-up on Barton street, near Victoria avenue, last night, and one of them received a blow over the face with a bottle and had his nose split open. The injured man was taken to the City Hospital, where he had his wound dressed, and then left. The hospital authorities say this man was Smith, but P. C. Lentz, who happened on the scene in time to assist the injured man, says that it was Holloway. No application has yet been made to the Police Magistrate for a warrant.

—Responding to many inquiries as to what was being done in connection with the Kinrade case, the Attorney-General stated yesterday that the department was still actively engaged on the matter.

"God made the country, and man made the town," quoted the Wise Guy. "Then the devil must have made the suburbs," added the Simple Mug, who had recently invested at Swamphurst.

Woodson—You're not as strict with that youngster of yours as you used to be. Bronson—No, for economy's sake. Every month I used to have to buy myself a new pair of slippers and him a new pair of pants.—Boston Record.

E. B. O'REILLY, M.D., Who was elected W. M. of the Barton Lodge last night.

A Love Affair

"No!" she said, and her voice, though low, seemed to ring through the room like a bell. "No, I will not. You have done your worst and I stay with him."

She stretched out her hand to the marquis with a quiet dignity that thrilled at least a few of the spectators, and made even Rawson Fenton quail. "Very good," he said, with a sneer. He turned to Lord Elliot. "My lord, you are a magistrate. I demand a warrant for the arrest of an Australian outlaw, and I charge this man, the Marquis of Brakespear, with being that man."

"I am rich enough to enjoy my revenge and decline your bribe. My warrant, please!" Lord Elliot's face grew black. "You get none from me, sir," he said, sternly. "Get out of the room, and I will draw a long breath—and quickly."

"I am rich enough to enjoy my revenge and decline your bribe. My warrant, please!" Lord Elliot's face grew black. "You get none from me, sir," he said, sternly. "Get out of the room, and I will draw a long breath—and quickly."

"What! It's a pardon?" "Yes," said the marquis in a low voice. "It is a pardon. Read it, and you will understand the nature of the service I was able to render the Government. Honorable service, thank God, Elliot! I might have claimed any reward; I asked that for my men and myself, and they gave me it, and he drew a square of parchment from his pocket. Lord Elliot, still holding Fenton, took the parchment and opened it, then flung him aside and uttered a cry of relief and joy.

"What! It's a pardon?" "Yes," said the marquis in a low voice. "It is a pardon. Read it, and you will understand the nature of the service I was able to render the Government. Honorable service, thank God, Elliot! I might have claimed any reward; I asked that for my men and myself, and they gave me it, and he drew a square of parchment from his pocket. Lord Elliot, still holding Fenton, took the parchment and opened it, then flung him aside and uttered a cry of relief and joy.

"I do," said Lord Elliot, knitting his brows. "You will not have forgotten the story he told of his pursuit of the bushrangers?" "Great Heaven!" he muttered, under his breath. "Yes, there was not a word of exaggeration in his recital. I can answer for it, because I was present with the men he was pursuing, and I was their leader, the man they called Gentleman Jack."

Rawson Fenton laughed sarcastically by way of triumphant comment, but no one took any notice of him. Amazed and bewildered, Lord Elliot rested his hand on the table and kept his eyes fixed on his friend's face. "The marquis held out his hand, and Constance slipped her over it, and took the paper from him. 'I know you,' murmured the marquis, soothingly. 'Look this paper!' she cried breathlessly. 'It—it is my father's.'"

"What is it, Constance?" asked the marquis. "I don't know," said Rawson Fenton, in a hoarse voice. "You have not seen the last of me, Lord Brakespear?" "Not yet," said Lord Elliot. "You are in a great hurry to go all at once; you will wait and hear what Miss Graham has to say, and he motioned to him to stand still. 'Now, Miss Graham, if you can throw any light upon any villainy this fellow has been guilty of, pray do so.'"

"You shall answer for this conduct, my lord," said Rawson Fenton, threateningly. "I shall answer for this conduct, my lord," said Rawson Fenton, threateningly. "I shall answer for this conduct, my lord," said Rawson Fenton, threateningly. "I shall answer for this conduct, my lord," said Rawson Fenton, threateningly.

CONTRIVELY NEARLY BREAKS FORTH AT LONDON.

Rev. Richard Hobb's Faith—President Birks Steers Meeting Off the Reef—Skirting the Danger Line.

London, Ont., June 4.—The nearest approach to the reef of controversy which the London Methodist Conference has yet experienced occurred this morning, when the session was about half over. Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C., President of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, had completed his opening address, and the visiting ministers from other Conferences were being introduced. Rev. R. Hobb, who is shortly to leave Toronto for Exeter, but who was a former pastor of Askin Street Church, was introduced with fervor and applause. Mr. Hobb expressed himself as glad to be back safe and sound in every way, not changed in politics, policy or polity. "I believe," he said, "in the discipline and rules of the Methodist Church. Who can be a Christian in any Church and violate the rules of that Church? Often have I asked this question, but it has never been answered. I have come out strong and sound after the mighty stirring up in Toronto. To quote the words of that mighty man, Dr. Orr, 'You can't ride two horses, Reform and Conservative.' We have been told to be liberal in our interpretation of the Old Testament and conservative in our interpretation of the New. These are the two horses. I am glad to see that the first eleven chapters have become the text-book of Christ. If they are proven false I intend to get a new job, to say word."

President A. K. Birks declared that no college had been directly mentioned, no college teachings were therefore disparaged. In this way the President saved the day for peace and amity and avoided a repetition of the theological controversy. When Rev. Wm. Thornley, of the Toronto Conference, rose to speak, he did not intend to raise points of order or tread on anyone's tender theological toes, but that fatal subject seemed to cast its lure, like Circe on the rock. Mr. Thornley learned his theology among the rocks, and rivers of Lake Rosseau, and recommended that every young probationer should give a similar circuit, close to nature's heart, and thus lose in pride while he gained in sinew. Then came the reference to debateable matter. "I don't believe that the first seven chapters of the Bible should be read in the beginning myth," and continued Mr. Thornley, "if you will give the Toronto Conference President Birks and Rev. Wm. Dewey, who introduced me, we will trade with you some of the men who have been creating a disturbance in Toronto. Will you swap?"

A chorus of noes told that the audience was again growing restive. Evangelist Russell—If you have been having trouble in Toronto I do hope you won't attempt to bring it in here. Mr. Thornley protested that his reference had been merely a little jovial banter. The remainder of his discourse he carefully censured. Rev. Dr. F. W. Hollinrake, M. A., who is leaving the Hamilton Conference for Windsor, spoke of his hopes for the "city of unsolved mystery."

Rev. Wm. Patterson, of Bervie, held the teachings of one of the theological colleges had been impugned. He appealed to the chair for a ruling. President A. K. Birks declared that no college had been directly mentioned, no college teachings were therefore disparaged. In this way the President saved the day for peace and amity and avoided a repetition of the theological controversy.

CAR MEN FINED.

Ran Into Military Parade at Winnipeg—Railway Will Appeal.

Winnipeg, June 4.—The "battle of Broadway," as the clash between the officers of the 90th Regiment and the street car crew on Tuesday evening, as a result of which the crew were placed under military arrest, is judicially known hence, by the fine of $5 and costs was imposed on the motorman and conductor, who ran the car into the parade of the militia and disorganized the files. The Street Railway Company has decided to appeal the case to settle a precedent.

Human Life Increased BY FOURTEEN YEARS

Longer Life Due to Better Understanding of Nature's Laws and Use of Such Medicines as DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

During the last century the average life of man has increased by about four years. Insurance statistics prove this. What is the reason? People are learning to take better care of their health and to follow the laws of sanitation and hygiene.

The first law of health and the most important calls for "Daily movement of the bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have helped to prolong the life of many because they have enabled them to follow this first law of health.

A torpid, sluggish condition of the liver and kidneys is certain to bring about constipation of the bowels, clogging of the digestive and excretory systems, poisoning of the blood and give rise to the most dreadfully painful and fatal of diseases. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills purify the blood and cleanse the system as no other treatment can, because of their unique and combined action on the filtering excretory organs—the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Mrs. R. Morrow, Brazebridge, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled almost constantly with constipation of the bowels and never got anything to do the lasting good that has been obtained from Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They not only relieved that trouble, but have entirely cured the headaches from which I used to suffer, and have improved my health in a general way."

The Burning Question. A Baltimore teacher was trying to explain the meaning of the word "recuperate." "Charley," she said, "when night comes your father returns home tired and worn out, doesn't he?" "Yes, ma'am," assented Charley. "Then," continued the teacher, "if he being night, and he being tired, what does he do?" "That's what ma wants to know," said Charley. Mr. C. E. NO LIBERTY. Thaw Must First Be Able to Prove His Sanity. New York, June 4.—Harry K. Thaw must remain in the State Asylum for the Criminal Insane at Matteawan, under a decision rendered to-day by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn. Thaw's application for a writ of habeas corpus releasing him from the asylum was dismissed by a justice of the Supreme Court several months ago. He then appealed to the appellate division, which he to-day sustained the lower court and dismissed the writ. The court ruled that Justice Dowling acted according to the law in committing Thaw to the asylum, and that when Thaw was able to prove his sanity he could obtain his release by writ of habeas corpus.

GOOD TEMPLARS. At the meeting of International Lodge held in the C. O. O. F. Hall last evening two candidates were initiated and one proposition for membership was received. On Monday evening, June 7, International will pay Britannia Lodge a fraternal visit. Mrs. D. B. A WASHOUT On Railway Caused by Cloudburst Near Ingersoll.

East Bound Flyer Strikes Bad Piece of Track. Ingersoll, June 5.—That scores of passengers were not killed when Grand Trunk eastbound flyer struck a piece of bad track about four miles from here last night, and incidentally one of the most serious washouts that has occurred on the system in Canada, is little less than wonderful. The washout was caused by a cloudburst.

ATTACKED BY DOGS. Little Montreal Boy Bitten in Face and Neck.

Montreal, June 4.—An eight-month-old child of M. Grant, of 88, Lambert, was badly bitten to-day by two English bulldogs in a neighbor's yard. The child wandered into the yard and the dogs flew at his throat and face. The child's screams brought his mother and a couple of men to his assistance, and the dogs were beaten off, but only with the greatest difficulty. One of the men had to use a hammer before they could be made to loosen their hold.

THE HAMILTON TIMES

SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1909.

MONDAY'S VOTE.

The ratepayer who has at heart the city's benefit and his own interest as a taxpayer will go out and vote on Monday.

For the Power By-law, and against the Hydro-Electric scheme.

The reasons for voting on the Hydro-Electric scheme, that the latter is defeated, it is possible that if care is not taken in this matter both may be carried, or both defeated, and nothing decisive may result.

The reasons for voting may on the Hydro-Electric scheme be cogent and numerous. A few may be mentioned:

For Hamilton to enter the Hydro-Electric scheme would involve her in a very large debt, which would be a heavy liability on the taxpayers. Hon. Mr. Hendrie stated at the Twentieth Century Club meeting that the municipalities entering had already incurred a liability of $3,000,000, and if Hamilton joined she would be a charge against the taxes, and drive a figure is small; the liability incurred would be very much greater. Besides that, to go into any general competitive supply system we should have to spend probably $400,000 to $500,000 on our own account, and undertake a costly and risky management. All this would be a charge against the taxes, and we should have to make it out of the sale of electricity in competition with a keen, capable and well-equipped rival—if we could.

We should have to bind the city's hands in an ironclad monopoly for 30 years, during which we would not be allowed to take power from any other source, no matter how much cheaper the progress of science would enable it to be supplied.

We should have no voice in the management of this power supply—not even in the settlement of the accounts. We should have to pay all bills, with interest. We could not even go to court to ask for justice, as the Hydro-Electric Commission cannot be sued!

We should have to bear our share of the cost of power, all losses of every sort, and all expenses which the Commission chose to incur. The holiday trips, the automobiles, and the huge bills already run up are all chargeable against the municipalities entering the scheme.

And for assuming these burdens we should have the privilege of paying a higher price for our electricity to an outside concern than we get it from a Hamilton concern, founded by Hamilton men, supported by Hamilton people's money, paying out its money to Hamilton workmen, and attracting to the city valuable industries to make it greater and more prosperous!

Is it a sane proposition? Would any honest, disinterested man—any man without an ulterior purpose to serve—commit himself to it as a matter of good business?

The Power By-law covering the agreement made with the Cataract Company is a remarkably advantageous one to the city.

It involves the ratepayer no financial liability. We assume no debt; we do not tie ourselves up in any monopoly contract, or forbid anybody to enter the field and compete, with current from any other source.

The contract ends in five years; but the city may renew it, by giving notice, every five years for 20 years.

We have three options as to method of paying for current. We may pay $10 a horse-power, or we may, as we choose, change to a price 10 per cent. lower than the Hydro-Electric prices, or we may take power by meter at 1 1/2 cent per horse-power per hour, guaranteeing the company 89 per horse-power of the current ordered and reserved for it. And we may change from one option to the other as we find most advantageous.

Power users in Hamilton are guaranteed current 10 per cent. cheaper than Hydro-Electric taking municipalities get it.

Current for domestic use for power, heat or light is guaranteed at prices 10 per cent. lower than the Hydro-Electric can offer.

We have no doubt that the price will be much more than 10 per cent. lower than the Hydro power can reach, but the 10 per cent. cheaper is a guarantee, which makes absurd the pleas of the Hydro touters that theirs is the great "cheap" power scheme for Hamilton.

No ratepayer should hesitate to go out and vote for the By-law and against the perilous Hydro-Electric scheme, with its higher cost and its debt and liability to be shouldered by Hamilton. The advocates of the outside scheme are no friends of this city. We have burdens enough, without assuming hundreds of thousands of dollars more to help to cheapen power for Toronto and other rivals at the expense of making dearer our own power and destroying the great advantage which Hamilton now enjoys, to their great envy.

Go out and vote for the Power By-law.

MR. TAXPAYER.

Hon. Mr. Hendrie places the obligation already incurred by the plunging municipalities for the Hydro-Electric transmission line at $3,000,000. No wonder they would like to rope Hamilton into the scheme, so that our ratepayers should have to pay a part of that big debt! But that sum does not begin to be all the burden we should have to shoulder. That is only for the line contract. There would be a vast deal more. Each would have its local plant to pay for. Sothman charged us $2,000 to give us a plan for the city lighting distribution system which alone was to cost us $225,000! As a matter of fact $225,000 was known to be probably $30,000 too low a figure. Then there would be no preparation made for private lighting or power! Yet we get under the contract with the Cataract Power Company power at lower prices—guaranteed at least 10 per cent. lower—without investing a dollar, without assuming any debt or obligation, and without any risk. Who should hesitate to vote for the local power by-law—unless it be the Hydro touters, who, as one of them confessed, "did not own as much as a toothpick upon which to be taxed"?

PROVINCIAL RIGHTS BLATHER.

"Patriotism," we have been told by one who had studied the breed, "is the last refuge of scoundrels." The world concedes a good deal of truth to the saying. Certainly it applies with full force to the peanut politicians who seek to strut before the gallery by playing the role of the Provincial patriot "defending" their Province against imaginary assaults by mythical enemies of Provincial rights. The performance has been carried so far that it hardly ranks as farce-comedy now. And still some Opposition organs, lacking subjects for complaint against the Dominion Government, prattle on about it in a manner which exposes their utter ignorance of our constitution and its history, or their shameless lack of principle and their desire to deceive their readers. A short time ago a British Columbia Provincial Tory Government undertook to invade the federal sphere by legislating as to immigration, and great was the howl it raised when it was not allowed to have its fling. The British Columbia courts unanimously held its legislation to be ultra vires. A difference also arose as to fisheries regulation. The courts have so far held that the federal Government was within its powers and that the Provincial Government was wrong. In every case that has been the subject of dispute the federal Government has been sustained by the courts, when the question has come before them, and when it has not, its action has been on lines of judgments already rendered by the highest court in the realm.

Provincial rights are properly defended; Provincial wrongs are quite another matter. The Liberals fly the flag of Provincial rights and are the real champions of the principle. But when a Provincial Government attempts to usurp the powers reserved to the federal authority, to defy federal policy, or to use the term "Provincial rights" as a partisan catch cry, it is guilty of the worst kind of disloyalty to our country's constitution. A local Tory contemporary last night suggested a combination of Tory Provincial Premiers to fight against the federal authority and policy, making their watchword "Provincial Rights." An amusing part of its proposition is its advancing as a reason for this fool suggestion the fact that the federal Government has been sustained by the courts in these very British Columbia cases! The disingenuous organ alleges that Manitoba "is being made to suffer because she will not submit to Ottawa dictation in the matter of the boundary award!" "Boundary award" is rich! A partition of some unwarranted territory has been proposed. Laurier called into consultation the Premiers of the three Provinces among which the territory was to be divided, and the division proposed was satisfactory to all but one. That one would not be satisfied—for party reasons. Ontario does not think she got too much, yet Roblin would still grab more of it. And the local Tory organ pretends to think the question of Provincial rights enters into it, and that Manitoba has not got enough—in other words, that Sir Wilfrid has given this Province too much!

As a matter of fact the principle of Provincial rights has been passed upon by the Privy Council and pretty clearly set forth. It is not a new thing, as kindergartners have yet to learn. In matters of policy the Dominion must be supreme. In local matters the Provinces must be left to deal with subjects within their power with as little interference as the reasonable working of federal policy will permit. In matters reserved to the federal authority the Provinces must not meddle. The less must be within the greater; the part cannot be permitted to rule the whole.

Perhaps nothing has caused so much discussion on this question as the matter of railway control. Sir John A. Macdonald found that as railways amalgamated and became lines connecting Provinces, and extending into a foreign country it became necessary that they be controlled by the federal power. He passed an act providing that as soon as a Provincial road joined, or even crossed, one under federal control, the entire road should be declared "for the benefit of Canada," and pass out of Provincial jurisdiction. The Tories raised no howl about that being an invasion of Provincial rights. It remained for a Liberal Government upon coming into power to modify that sweeping legislation so as not to strip the Province of all control of railways. And yet the same Tories now affect to regard as an invasion of Provincial rights legislation by the Dominion in regard to a railway connecting Provinces and touching a foreign country; and treat as an outrage federal regulation of international and navigable streams—which none but the federal power can deal with!

What a pitiful lot of partisan fakirs trying to trade upon ignorance and gullibility!

Well, well! This Aid. Wobbly Ellis, who polled the lowest vote in his ward, "doesn't relish having a lot of dirty little reporters" telling the people about his doings. Yet; men who talk like Ellis are expected to have an antipathy to reporters. Oh, yes!

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Spot the fellows with the boodle, and see that they are clapped in jail.

Are you for Hamilton's interest and Hamilton industries, or are you an anti-Hamilton Hydro advocate?

Be sure that you mark a ballot AGAINST the Hydro scheme, as well as one FOR the power by-law.

The ratepayer who wants guaranteed cheapest power, and no increase of city debt and taxes in getting it, will vote for the Cataract Power agreement.

There is this to be said of Queen's University men: They're an enthusiastically loyal lot to their Alma Mater. Queen's, whatever else it does, develops a healthy esprit de corps among its students that remains through life.

But are there only five men to be found in this town who are willing to speak out in public in favor of the Hydro-Electric contract.—Herald.

Just five of them—and such a five! Scratch them and note how many of them have interests adverse to those of the city to account for their willingness!

You are pretty safe in assuming that the gang promoting the Hydro scheme on Monday is chiefly composed of hired mercenaries. Mark them and watch them. Who, think you, pays for such men's services? Can you bring yourself to think that they are working for you?

Mayor McLaren says he has "documents from the Hydro-Electric officials" which prove the falsity of Stewart's statements as to the cost of power under that scheme, and will show them to any one who cares to see them. That is a solar plexus reply to the ex-Mayor's reckless allegations.

Once upon a time T. J. Stewart professed to think that there was a fortune in selling Hydro power in competition with Cataract power. The field is wide open for him. But Stewart doesn't move in that direction. He has no faith in the prospects. He wants to let the burden-bearing ratepayer in for all the cost and risk! Something more "creamy" for Stewart, if his money is to be ventured!

Hendrie, a Hydro-Electric Commissioner; Milne, a former Hydro-Electric Commissioner; Stewart, a touter for the Hydro scheme, whose brother is in the commission's employ, and a few more of the men in its pay may find it congenial work to try to lure the city into the Hydro net; but what about the men whose property will be charged with the enormous debt and liability which the scheme would place upon the city?

This man Stewart indulges in rant about some holders of Cataract Company shares having bought them below par value. What of that? They bought them in the open market; they took all risks, at a time when men like Stewart would not give much for the company's future, and would not buy. Now that their pluck and enterprise have won success, why should those men get abuse from faint-hearted knockers like Stewart?

The Toronto Telegram says that Toronto property owners may stay away from a money-by-law vote, but they can't keep the tax collectors away from them. That applies to this Hydro vote. A vote for the Hydro scheme is a vote to put large debt and heavy liability on the ratepayers to have the privilege of contracting for HIGHER-PRICED POWER. The ratepayer as well as the power-user suffers.

There is a very strong sentiment in Manitoba in favor of an amendment of the Education Act so as to provide for compulsory education, and the Roblin Government may be forced to grant it. Even the Winnipeg Tribune admits that Roblin's neglect or refusal to proceed in this matter has been owing to his dread of losing a number of votes. He has preferred to sacrifice the interests of the youth of Manitoba. But delay cannot much longer be tolerated.

The Cataract Power Agreement guarantees us service, public and private, at least 10 per cent. below any possible competitive prices given by the Hydro scheme, and without investing a dollar of the ratepayers' money. Wouldn't the ratepayer who voted to assume a large burden of liability and to bind himself to take deeper power for thirty years, just to help Toronto and other rivals to reduce the prices of their power supply, be the better of a guardian?

William Thornburn, of Lanark, has been one of the most strenuous shouters for higher duties on woollens, on the ground that the poor woollen men were being ruined by the present low protection of 25 to 50 per cent. The other day Dr. McIntyre, M. P., of Strathcona, received from an Almonte workman the following enlightening letter:

Forty years ago Mr. William Thornburn was working in the factory at one dollar a day. Thirty years ago he started making flannels. He is now worth a quarter of a million dollars. He needs more protection, don't he—poor Bill?

It is to be borne in mind that even if by any chance there should be a majority vote in favor of shouldering a big debt and entering into a contract to take the dearer Hydro power, we should still be bound by the contract made last year and upheld by the courts. We should simply, by so voting, sacrifice any advantages secured by the additional guarantees of the amended contract, and render the city liable to a suit for heavy

CANADA UNDER LIBERAL RULE.

THOSE CROCODILE TEARS!

A cardinal error has been committed by the Government at Ottawa in selecting Mackenzie King, a former official, for the position of Minister of Labor, instead of choosing for the place a man who understands the labor question as a result of both study and experience.

MOTORED FOR THE GLORY OF GOD.

(London Truth.)

The other day, at the meeting of the Presbytery of Hamilton, attention was called to the fact that a "church member and deacon" had desecrated the Sabbath by motoring several miles to church, although he had several of worship close at hand. The offender made his peace by explaining that he had motored on the Sunday "for the good of the church and to the glory of God."

Twenty years ago such an irregularity would have been censured and the culprit would very likely have been excommunicated for a season of repentance and reformation.

MR. GOFORTH.

Returned Missionary Spoke in St. Paul's Church Yesterday.

In St. Paul's Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon Rev. Jonathan Goforth, a missionary from China, addressed a large gathering of the home mission. He spoke of the great work the missionaries are doing in the Chinese Empire, and said that prayer was one of the most important essentials for the advancement of the Christian cause. If the prayer was an earnest one the person must necessarily send a contribution. The movement in China, he said, was doing wonderful work, and was the fulfillment of Pentecost. The earnestness with which the work was pursued was at all times manifest. The spread of the movement in China was wonderful, and Mr. Goforth said he would be pleased if the movement were advancing as quickly in Canada. By self-denial and cross-bearing the Christian shows the stand he has taken.

Mr. Goforth spoke of the readiness with which Christianity was received. He said it was the mighty work of God that the Chinese should so readily accept Him as Master. Temper and pride greatly hinder the work.

DEATH DUE TO DROWNING.

Tragedy of Last Saturday Was an Accident Purely.

Coroner's Jury So Found After Careful Deliberation.

Little Light Thrown on How the Affair Happened.

"Accidental death by drowning," was the verdict brought in by the jury at the inquest into the death of Albert Millburn, which was presided over by Coroner James Anderson in No. 3 Police station last evening. The investigation failed to throw any further light on the accident by which Millburn and Harry McEwen lost their lives one week ago to-day.

The first witness, Harry Knapman, said that from his boathouse, at the beach, south of the canal, he saw three men in the launch. They started out once, but returned for a few minutes, and then made another start for Hamilton. He heard one of the men say that it took five minutes to start the engine, and one of the young men laughed at him. The boat was headed southwest, and Knapman, after watching it for a while, went into his boathouse. They had trouble with the engine before starting out, he said, and one used a paddle for a while. In Knapman's estimation all were perfectly sober.

The other two told him to sail to the pier and they would show him where it was. After some trouble, and when he turned to the pier, he saw the boat and started out with an oar, while Harry McEwen tried to start the engine. The witness was in the front steering, and had his back turned towards the other two.

The Greedy Chickens

COCK-A-DOODLE-DOO! crowed Peter Bantam, standing on his tiptoes and springing his wings against his sides. He could not crow like a grown-up cock yet, but he thought he did very well indeed, so he crowed again at the top of his funny, squeaky voice, "Cock-a-doodle-doo!"

When the other chickens came home they were very much disappointed to find their breakfast all gone, and they talked about it together so loudly that the gardener came to see. He looked from the empty pan to the two unhappy birds, who were trying to get out of sight in a corner.

"You're a pretty pair!" and he wagged his tail and smiled a smile that showed all his white teeth as the going in, he did not call the others, either, but he began to help himself as fast as he could, like Peter.

When Peter looked up to take a breath, he saw Speckleback. "I found this first!" Go away, you horrid, greedy bird!" he cried, crossly. "Go away yourself; it's as much mine as yours!" returned Speckleback, angrily.

Speckleback flew at him, and they fought, and scratched, and pecked and tore each other's feathers out, until Snapper, the dog, came racing around to see what was the matter. At last Speckleback tumbled Peter ker-plash into the middle of the pan.

two birds went limping away, very much ashamed and covered all over with sticky meal.

When the other chickens came home they were very much disappointed to find their breakfast all gone, and they talked about it together so loudly that the gardener came to see.

"I won't!" snapped Peter, ruffing out his feathers. Speckleback flew at him, and they fought, and scratched, and pecked and tore each other's feathers out, until Snapper, the dog, came racing around to see what was the matter.

Tommy's Experiments

I HAVE a coin trick for you to experiment with today, boys and girls. Take a small, conical-shaped glass like the one in this picture and place a small coin in it; then take a larger glass, the one I just showed you, the top of the glass, or, at any rate, not so down far into the glass.

Another trick which seems mysterious indeed, is the following: Bring in from the kitchen two glasses filled, one with pure water, the other with well-salted water. Hand a couple of lumps of sugar to a friend and tell him to drop one into each glass.

I suppose you have often noticed that when you thrust a long stick into a pool of water it gives the appearance of being bent at the point where it enters the water.

Grandpa's Birthday Treat

WHEN Grandpa's birthday comes it is July and perfectly lovely out on his farm.

Grandpa put on his wide-brimmed hat and went out with us, and each of us carried a net to catch butterflies with.

Grandpa said that caterpillars are very useful. "They eat the leaves off the plants and so they do the work of a grasshopper or a locust."

"That's so? What have you learned about them, Jim?" asked Grandpa.

"That they couldn't fly at first. So they cling with their feet to the cracked skin and trembled and fluttered and trembled and fluttered until all the wrinkles and folds were gradually out and the wings spread out and caught the sunlight."

Puzzle---Find the Giraffe

Who owns eight fingers and two thumbs? Who does not fall, whatever comes. To try to keep the nails so neat. That they are like pink rose leaves sweet?

Who keeps ten nails as shining as stars, and half a score of half-moons glow? Who keeps all nails so fair and trim That no dark clouds disturb a rim? Who keeps ten nails as shining as stars, and half a score of half-moons glow?

Who travels over hills and dunes. Yet never, never, never falls. Whene'er the foot Toward ground is put To let the ball Upon it fall. Before the heel shall touch at all? Who thus walks on with grace and ease?

Sing a Little. Sing a little on your way-- What's the use of whining? Make your life a holiday, Keep the sun a-shining! Smiles and songs are useless things, Smiles and songs are better; When a lass or laddie stings, Care will break his fetters!

I wonder why some Pias have none, And others have so many. It seems the poor Pias have the most And rich ones haven't any.

When families all'd have bills like Pa, For us five kids and a mother and a father. He says, would buy a cattle man, We wear out so much leather.

My Pa says some day that he'll be Too old to go on workin', And then he hopes that some of us Our duty will be shirkin'!

Directions for Making a Fine Box Kite

SOME of the boys have been asking for directions for making a box kite. Do this way, boys: Select eight pieces of bamboo--stiff, slender ones--of as near the same weight and length as possible.

Now cut ten eleven-inch sticks, of the same weight, if possible, for the uprights and stretchers of your kite. Next, measure the exact middle of your eight bamboo sticks and bind them securely together in pairs at the middle of each, using waxed thread for the purpose.

It is now time to cut a couple of three-inch strips of tissue paper, each thirty inches long and as near the same width as possible.

Here is a design for a parachute. Make it of a square of tissue paper, with four pieces of cotton fastened to the corners of it. Take the other four ends of cotton and gather them together; then tie them to a bit of cardboard cut to represent a man.

There is a little maiden-- Who is she? Do you know? Who always has a welcome Wherever she may go.

Funny Funnel

THIS magic toy consists of a small funnel placed inside a larger one and joined to it only at the top, thus forming an open space between the two funnels, as you see in the picture.

The handle being held in one hand, and the opening at the tube being stepped by a finger of the other hand, the inside funnel may be completely filled with water, which will flow from the interior into the open space between the two funnels.

How to Make a Parachute. WINDMILLS and parachutes are among the nicest of playthings for those summer days when there is a little wind blowing.

Who is She? There is a little maiden-- Who is she? Do you know? Who always has a welcome Wherever she may go.

There was an old man who said: "Why did Mary put mice in the pie? For I know 'at with me they will do a job as good as mine!"

Question of Scoring in Bridge Whist.
It is the duty of every player to keep the score for both sides, and to keep it correctly. If he knows that his opponents have three aces in a "no trump" game, he is bound to score them thirty points above the line, whether they claim it or not, or whether they score it or not. At the end of the rubber the scores are added up, and the winners generally announce how much they make it. If one of the opponents makes it more or less, he should say at once, "I do not agree," and the scores will then be compared and put right. For a player to accept his opponents' score without saying anything, when he himself makes it more, is perilously skin to cheating.

The question has once more arisen as to whether a player at bridge is bound to correct his opponents' score, if they do not claim as much as they are entitled to, either for honors or for tricks. It is generally in the "no trump" game that the point occurs. Perhaps the dealer and his partner have three aces be-

THE KICKERS' COLUMN

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:
Sir—Mr. Stewart, at the Twentieth Century Club last Wednesday evening, gave competition as a plea for the Hydro power. The people will not stand what competition there is about that ugly thirty year agreement the Hydro Power Commission are asking for. If the city enters into that agreement it will be the worst tie down the city has ever in. Tied down to the level with every other place. While we have a chance to make a contract, that only lasts for five years, a contract with the Hydro people would mean slavery of the worst kind, because the Hydro concern cannot sell their power so cheap as the Cataract people can. What would we do about it? The commissioners nor our City Council dare not sell power below cost. Where would the deficiency come from? The people would not stand for it. Hamilton is not like any other place. We have a first class power concern of our own. Mr. Stewart and Mr. Studholme both like Hamilton votes. It would not be any use for them to go to any place else for that kind of power. Oh, what a tragedy. They would tie down the town that makes them.
John Mitchell.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:
Sir—As a Hamilton man, it is very galling to acknowledge that one of our city newspapers has been so persistently "anti-Hamilton" regarding our electric power question. In the last night's edition it went beyond bounds in all decent means of discussion, and applauded T. J. Stewart's very "classical" description of Mr. John Patterson's statements as "terminological inexactitudes," which we all know Mr. T. J. understands the meaning of, and of course the Herald will tell you all the time. Mr. John Patterson, will the Herald or Hendrie or Stewart give us the price of power which they want Hamilton to be tied up to for thirty years without any chance to buy from any one that may make new discoveries?
Hamilton, June 4, 1909.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:
Sir—Reading the "guff" in the Herald to-night that was handed out at the Hamilton meeting last night I could not help remarking how the sheep followed the leader. First, his "Hon." Mr. Hendrie asked for the "honor" of Hamilton to support the "Government" (Hamilton be damned), and then our friend of labor, John Milne, to "vote for the Government," and then Alf. Wright, the heavyweight, to clinch all, except Mr. Pratt, who got in his classical remark about squeezing stock (no dry goods) into a sponge remaining. Where were all the manufacturers who use electric power? What is the "Hydro" price for power? Name a prominent user of Cataract power who would sign a contract for Hydro power to-day. Why help pay a large part of power for Toronto to compete with Hamilton?
Hamilton, June 4, 1909.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:
I love beauty as well as anyone. I like, too, the effort that is being made to push the city to the front, and the Greater Hamilton plan. We have a beautiful city and we are proud of it. The lawns, the flowers and the beautiful fronts that our citizens are working for, all these improvements to our dogs, though, inasmuch as he is a success; but the poor dog must suffer, and so will his owner, inasmuch as he has love for his dog. There is an old saying which says, "Kick my dog, you kick me." Many people have beautiful dogs and intelligent ones, too; in fact, the dog in most instances is a member of the family, so if you are cruel to our dog you are cruel to us.
Now, I am not going to say that the dog does no harm to the lawns and other things, or that some people are not scared of the dog; but they are scared of other things, too, over which they can have no control, so that they will have to go on getting scared, but the poor dog must suffer because a few foolish people, mostly those who do not love or love them as pets. They are the ones who are blind to the fact that the dog is here and if he is here he has some rights, though they are only dog's rights. And the harm done by the dogs of our city is infinitely small compared with the harm and cruelty done to our dogs through this new edict which has recently been passed. Many people have dogs who do many little chores out of doors which is a great help; they guard the goods in the delivery wagon for their master, go errands, etc. But now he must be shut up so many months of the year, unless led with a leash by some responsible person. Now, what does that mean to the poor dog. On the surface it does not look very hard, but it means a great deal more when you look into it; many people do not have a house, but they keep their dogs away from their enemies (the dog catchers), and others who

BOY'S DREAM.

Eddie McKay Does "Little Nemo" Stunt, But Is Not Badly Hurt.
Guelph, June 4.—Dreaming that a gang of desperate burglars were invading the house, little Eddie McKay, of Waterloo street, last night jumped out of his window on the second story and gaining his feet again began to run, screaming down the street in mortal terror, a pathetic little figure in his white nightgown.
When the anxious mother overtook him and carried him back to his home she had no end of trouble trying to convince him that his awful experience was nothing at all but a silly dream.
It was certainly a very good imitation of the real thing, as far as the bright and imaginative little fellow himself was concerned. It doubtless outlived all the varied experiences of "Little Nemo" or "The Rarebit Fiend."
The mystery about the affair was that the boy was not badly hurt. He will be confined to his bed for a few days until he recovers from the bad shaking up he got, but fortunately he has no broken bones as a result of the jump he took in his sleep.
The boy, it is understood, has been reading more than is good for a child of his years. His father, Mr. Geo. McKay, is a himeam on the Bell Telephone system. The family are quite well and favorably known here.

DISILLUSIONED AGAIN.

(Toronto Star).
"Come out into the garden, Maud, where all the seeds were sown, And use your eyes and you may see how everything has grown." Then Maudie went and time she spent, and soon was disenchanted, For naught but weeds showed up where seeds of flowers had been planted.
When a fellow calls on a girl and is slow in going it means that he is "gone." Any man can have children named after him, but only a hero has dogs named for him.

FEW OF THEM NOW.

(Guelph Mercury).
A good story, an epigram or two, some straight truths, perhaps, and an eloquent peroration to finish off, are the ingredients for an after-dinner speech. We hear few of them nowadays.
America was discovered in 1492, prior to which time there were no Lost and Found columns in the newspapers.

SCOTTISH CHURCHES ON LABOR DAY

Three Presbyterian Bodies Met at Edinburgh at One Time.

The General Assemblies of the three principal Presbyterian Churches in Scotland were opened in Edinburgh on the same day.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

The High Commissioner (Lord Kinross), held the usual levee at Holyrood Palace, and drove in semi-state procession to St. Giles' Cathedral. After service the procession went to the General Assembly Hall.

Dr. Roberton presided at the meeting, referred to the death in five months of five of those whom the Church had raised to the Moderatorship. He nominated the Rev. Dr. James Robertson (Whittinghame) as Moderator of the Assembly.

Dr. Robertson having been introduced and having taken the chair, the King's letter was communicated to the House. In it reference was again made to the loss the Church had sustained by the death during his year of office of the late Moderator.

The High Commissioner said he was commanded by the King to assure the fathers and brethren of His Majesty's great sense of their steady and firm zeal in his service, and to assure them of his resolution to maintain the Presbyterian Government of Scotland.

(The Rev. Dr. Mather further assured them of his deep interest in all that concerned the spiritual welfare of the people of Scotland. He was also commanded to acquaint them that His Majesty had been graciously pleased to grant, on the customary grant of £200,000 to the Highlands and Islands by the grant which he had graciously appropriated to aiding and encouraging young men in the study of the Gaelic language.

Dr. Norman Macleod gave the Committee of the Foreign Missions of the Church of Scotland, the results of a special appeal the whole debt, amounting to several thousand pounds, had been "obliterated." (Cheers.) The expenditure for 1903 had been fully met, and they ended the year with a balance of over £700 to their credit.

Sir Andrew Fraser, ex-Lieutenant-General of Bengal, as representing the Presbyterian Church of India, and a number of foreign missionaries spoke.

UNITED FREE CHURCH.

At the United Free Church Assembly, the Rev. Dr. Henderson, of Gifford, was elected moderator. In his opening address he said that the unhappy divisions of Scottish Presbyterianism must be allowed to have done a real service in making clear the distinction between the rights of citizenship and the duties of citizenship, and in limiting ecclesiastical authority as over those only of their own free will submitted to it. Was there no cause to fear lest the Church, in a mistaken desire to win the world, should go over to the world?

He said that the Rev. Dr. Henderson was to submit a motion on the communication from the Established Church on the subject of union, attracted an enormous gathering.

The motion submitted by Dr. Henderson indicated that the assembly, while fully recognizing the duty of the United Free Church to promote fellowship and co-operation with all kindred churches in the service of their common Lord, and in particular with the Church of Scotland, with whose operations those of the United Free Church of Scotland were in such close connection that they must be carried on in the most intimate and friendly manner, yet was unable to entertain the suggestion that conference on co-operation offers the path best fitted to lead to union. At the same time, the motion added, the assembly, believing that the outstanding causes of separation between churches might properly be removed by the action of a conference between brethren who desire the removal of everything that mars the prosperity and peace of the Church of Christ in the land, declare, in accordance with the report of the committee, their readiness, should this assembly of the Church of Scotland, in its next unrestricted conference with their brethren of that church on the existing ecclesiastical situation and on the main causes which keep the churches apart, with the earnest hope that by God's blessing misunderstandings and hindrances may be removed, and a great object of Presbyterian reunion in Scotland thereby advanced.

Dr. George Robson seconded the motion, which was supported by Sir Samuel Chisholm and others, and unanimously approved.

THE FREE CHURCH.

The General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland met in its newly-constructed hall, when the retiring moderator, the Rev. W. Macdonald, of Glasgow, preached. Unless, he said, Church and State should combine to teach the nature of the nation more effectually the young and danger of sin, and insist upon more obedience to the moral law of God, their people would perish in their own iniquity. Even ministers with their heads bowed in prayer, and freely associated with the most careless and indifferent of men.

The Rev. James Henry, Burghhead, was elected moderator of this assembly.

NEED OF COLLEGE.

Disciples of Christ Want One in the West.

Toronto, June 5.—The Disciples of Christ will campaign along educational as well as religious lines, according to the views expressed at yesterday's session of their annual convention in the Cecil Street Church. In the discussion which followed the address of President Falconer of the University of Toronto, several speakers advocated the wisdom of enlarging the scope of effort of the brotherhood, aiming toward the establishment of colleges for the training of the young men. This, it was held, was particularly needed in the west. President Falconer spoke of ministerial education, advocating the development of the whole man. Real learning, he pointed out, never harmed religion, and no church had ever been injured by learning.

"What hinders success in the home field," was the subject of an address by Rev. A. Tovey, Guelph. The chief hindrance, he said, were with ourselves.

Rev. A. N. Simpson, Toronto, dealt with "What helps success in the home field."

In the evening the Ontario Christian Women's Board of Missions conducted a devotional session.

TWO FIRES.

Villages of St. Francois and Glenvilla, Que., Destroyed Yesterday.

Riviere Du Loup, Que., June 5.—The little town of St. Francois was almost completely wiped out by fire last night. Out of twenty-four dwellings only one remains. Much suffering is likely to result. The loss cannot yet be estimated. One mile of railway track was also destroyed. The origin of the fire has not yet been ascertained.

North Hatley, Que., June 5.—A serious fire broke out early this morning. Glenvilla, a summer resort, was destroyed. Loss $60,000; insurance $20,000. The cause is unknown.

WILD WEST DANCE.

In celebration of the completion of their two weeks' stay in the Ambitious City, the members of Kemp's Wild West, who are encamped upon the grounds of Maple Leaf Park, were tendered a dance last evening. The elite of the western plains were there, resplendent in all their western pride and glory. It was within one hour of the dead of night when the wild and woolly revelers gathered for their jubilee. New York had just fallen—in fact, it was owing to that calamity that this historic building was available for the dances, including round, square, western, Indian, cow-punchers, etc.

About 1 1/2 o'clock this morning special street cars conveyed the merry-makers to their homes.

FLOWERS OF WONDERFUL HUE.

Among the flowers which are certain to enjoy a considerable amount of popularity for the sweet peas in purple, pink, red, and coral pinks, pansies in red, brown, and lavender colorings, roses made of chiffon and net as well as of metallic tissues, laburnums in the whole gamut of shades seen on a pheasant's breast, and cowslips in wonderful green and yellow, rich watercolor is a delicate thistle now.

WAGELY UNDERSTOOD IT.

Sunday School Teacher—Clarence, do you know the meaning of the word "lament?"

Little Clarence—Yes'm. It means "ring off."

All is soon ready in an orderly house.—German.

He said that the Rev. Dr. Henderson was to submit a motion on the communication from the Established Church on the subject of union, attracted an enormous gathering.

The motion submitted by Dr. Henderson indicated that the assembly, while fully recognizing the duty of the United Free Church to promote fellowship and co-operation with all kindred churches in the service of their common Lord, and in particular with the Church of Scotland, with whose operations those of the United Free Church of Scotland were in such close connection that they must be carried on in the most intimate and friendly manner, yet was unable to entertain the suggestion that conference on co-operation offers the path best fitted to lead to union. At the same time, the motion added, the assembly, believing that the outstanding causes of separation between churches might properly be removed by the action of a conference between brethren who desire the removal of everything that mars the prosperity and peace of the Church of Christ in the land, declare, in accordance with the report of the committee, their readiness, should this assembly of the Church of Scotland, in its next unrestricted conference with their brethren of that church on the existing ecclesiastical situation and on the main causes which keep the churches apart, with the earnest hope that by God's blessing misunderstandings and hindrances may be removed, and a great object of Presbyterian reunion in Scotland thereby advanced.

Dr. George Robson seconded the motion, which was supported by Sir Samuel Chisholm and others, and unanimously approved.

THE FREE CHURCH.

The General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland met in its newly-constructed hall, when the retiring moderator, the Rev. W. Macdonald, of Glasgow, preached. Unless, he said, Church and State should combine to teach the nature of the nation more effectually the young and danger of sin, and insist upon more obedience to the moral law of God, their people would perish in their own iniquity. Even ministers with their heads bowed in prayer, and freely associated with the most careless and indifferent of men.

The Rev. James Henry, Burghhead, was elected moderator of this assembly.

NEED OF COLLEGE.

Disciples of Christ Want One in the West.

Toronto, June 5.—The Disciples of Christ will campaign along educational as well as religious lines, according to the views expressed at yesterday's session of their annual convention in the Cecil Street Church. In the discussion which followed the address of President Falconer of the University of Toronto, several speakers advocated the wisdom of enlarging the scope of effort of the brotherhood, aiming toward the establishment of colleges for the training of the young men. This, it was held, was particularly needed in the west. President Falconer spoke of ministerial education, advocating the development of the whole man. Real learning, he pointed out, never harmed religion, and no church had ever been injured by learning.

"What hinders success in the home field," was the subject of an address by Rev. A. Tovey, Guelph. The chief hindrance, he said, were with ourselves.

Rev. A. N. Simpson, Toronto, dealt with "What helps success in the home field."

In the evening the Ontario Christian Women's Board of Missions conducted a devotional session.

TWO FIRES.

Villages of St. Francois and Glenvilla, Que., Destroyed Yesterday.

Riviere Du Loup, Que., June 5.—The little town of St. Francois was almost completely wiped out by fire last night. Out of twenty-four dwellings only one remains. Much suffering is likely to result. The loss cannot yet be estimated. One mile of railway track was also destroyed. The origin of the fire has not yet been ascertained.

North Hatley, Que., June 5.—A serious fire broke out early this morning. Glenvilla, a summer resort, was destroyed. Loss $60,000; insurance $20,000. The cause is unknown.

WILD WEST DANCE.

In celebration of the completion of their two weeks' stay in the Ambitious City, the members of Kemp's Wild West, who are encamped upon the grounds of Maple Leaf Park, were tendered a dance last evening. The elite of the western plains were there, resplendent in all their western pride and glory. It was within one hour of the dead of night when the wild and woolly revelers gathered for their jubilee. New York had just fallen—in fact, it was owing to that calamity that this historic building was available for the dances, including round, square, western, Indian, cow-punchers, etc.

About 1 1/2 o'clock this morning special street cars conveyed the merry-makers to their homes.

FLOWERS OF WONDERFUL HUE.

Among the flowers which are certain to enjoy a considerable amount of popularity for the sweet peas in purple, pink, red, and coral pinks, pansies in red, brown, and lavender colorings, roses made of chiffon and net as well as of metallic tissues, laburnums in the whole gamut of shades seen on a pheasant's breast, and cowslips in wonderful green and yellow, rich watercolor is a delicate thistle now.

WAGELY UNDERSTOOD IT.

Sunday School Teacher—Clarence, do you know the meaning of the word "lament?"

Little Clarence—Yes'm. It means "ring off."

All is soon ready in an orderly house.—German.

LINER HELD UP

Supposed Case of Smallpox on the Virginia.

Montreal, June 4.—The Allan Line steamship Virginia, from Liverpool, with 800 passengers aboard, is held up at Grosse Ile on account of a supposed case of smallpox amongst the steerage passengers. When the vessel reached Grosse Ile the ship's doctor notified the chief medical officer at the quarantine station that there was a supposed case of smallpox on board, and the vessel was accordingly detained at quarantine. The steerage passengers will be examined to-morrow, and it is not expected that the vessel will be in quarantine long.

Mr. Hannah, of the Allan Line, stated to-night that he did not think there would be any serious delay to the other passengers, and that the vessel would probably arrive in Montreal on Sunday.

SHAKEN UP.

Terrific Earthquake Makes Record on Isle of Wight.

London, June 4.—The seismographs of Dr. Milne on the Isle of Wight and Prof. Belair, of the Leibniz Observatory, recorded last evening a distinct earthquake. The amplitude of the motion exceeded that at Messina and San Francisco.

Dr. Milne suggests that the earthquake was east of Java.

A telegram from Singapore records a shock there.

SAVED HOLBEIN.

It Is Said Duchess of Marlborough Gave $200,000 Necessary.

London, June 4.—It is reported in the London colony of artists this afternoon that the woman who gave $200,000 to save Holbein's 'Duchess of Milan' for the nation was the Duchess of Marlborough, formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt.

The name of the donor of the $200,000 has not yet been publicly announced, but it is expected that in the course of time the fact will become generally known that the Duchess of Marlborough was the one who intervened at a critical moment and saved Holbein's masterpiece for the National Gallery.

NOT CONDOR WRECK.

Examination Proves Flotsam to be Another Vessel.

Victoria, B. C., June 4.—A search of the locality in which the wreck of H.M.S. Condor, lost with all hands eight years ago, was reported located, has been made by H. J. Hillier, Government telegraph linesman at Uclulet. A spar, supposed to be from a British warship, came ashore at Mr. Hillier's beach. Mr. Hillier wires from Uclulet this afternoon: "I have examined the Long Beach carefully, and find nothing of the Condor wreck. Have examined the spar and decided it to be from the wreck of the Pass of Melfort. The supposed hull on the beach Mr. Harvey noticed a sea breaking over four years ago."

Gossip and Comment

Rain checks to-day.

That sporty colored man, Jack Johnson, breezed into Gotham the other day, bought himself a $3,000 gas wagon, and then went to Tiffany's, where he spent $1,800 of the money he made boxing O'Brien in a great big spook. It was not long ago that Jack was sparring for coffee and sinkers, but now he displaces a large atmospheric space wherever he makes his appearance, and spring chicken, with gravy, from the country, is his regular menu.

The members of the junior class of the Grand Blanc High School have adopted as a class motto, "Dan Patch, 1:55." They wanted something different from the ordinary games motto, and they certainly got what they were looking for. Then, to add a little racing color to their class, they decided on red and green as their class colors.

When King James was first home in the Brooklyn it was his seventh consecutive win for Hilldrick. On January 25, at Los Angeles, he won a $400 overnight handicap. He won the Burns, a mile and a quarter, worth $10,500, at Oakland; the California Handicap of the same distance and worth $5,850, at Los Angeles; the Speed Handicap, of six furlongs, and worth $4,850; Metropolitan Handicap, at Belmont Park, and worth $4,000; Toronto Cup of a mile and a quarter and worth $4,550, and the Brooklyn Handicap, with a value of $4,000.

It is the horse that Madden sold, while he kept Fayette.

If Jeffries wants to really show that he is gradually recovering his old form preparatory to meeting Johnson in the ring, he can have a chance at Colma during the summer. Coffroth says that he will hang up a $10,000 purse for Jeffries to meet some good heavyweight in a 10 or 15-round bout, providing the Colma Club can have the moving picture privileges. Coffroth says Fireman Jim Flynn might be a good trial horse for the boilermaker, and that such a bout would draw a big gate.

Weather, which has been generally unfavorable to baseball since the start of the series, was at its worst yesterday throughout almost the entire eastern half of the States. Boston was the only point in the major league circuit where rain or wet grounds did not prevent play in the afternoon, and even there storm threatening clouds gathered. Detroit won the game at Boston, thereby gaining a slightly more substantial leadership in the league. The other seven major league games scheduled for yesterday were shelved, adding to an already large number of postponed games, which must be worked into double headers as the season wears on. The Eastern League, with its unusually heavy schedule this year, has also suffered from the weather, and two more postponements at Baltimore and Jersey City were necessary.

HARRIERS WON.

East Enders Had Races and Central Meeting.

The feature of the meeting of the harriers last night was a two mile race in which Allen defeated Small and White by ten yards. Small and White sprinted the last hundred yards, and same were tied at the finish. The results were:
 10 yard dash—Small, White and Cox.
 Standing high jump—White, Summerfield, Seneca, Pindleyson.
 Putting 16-lb. shot—Small, Summerfield, White, Seneca.
 2 mile run—Allen, White and Small tie, Pindleyson.

George Clark acted as starter and W. Snider and J. Bleeker were the judges. The leaders in the contest now are small White, Summerfield and Seneca. THE CENTRAL HARRIERS.
 A meeting of the Hamilton Central Y. M. C. A. Harriers was held in the boys' parlor of the Y. M. C. A. last night with President Fred Dean in the chair. After the business of the club was concluded, Mr. J. B. Green gave the boys a talk on his trip to Bermuda, telling about the rough voyages going and coming, the coral reefs, the inhabitants and the wonderful caves.
 The club's official paper was read by the editor, Mr. John B. Brainbridge.
 At the close of the meeting one new member was initiated.

ST. YVES WON AT WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg, June 5.—Henri St. Yves easily defeated J. D. Marsh, a local runner, who recently won the Toronto Marathon, in a fifteen-mile race here last night. In the ninth mile St. Yves gained a lap on his opponent, and finished fully three-quarters of a mile ahead, in 1:23:32, on a track which was anything but conducive to good time. The Frenchman ran away at the start and was never pressed, finishing as fresh as when he began.

Good Racing at Woodbine Yesterday.

High Jumping at Galt Horse Show.

Rain Prevented Many Ball Games.

Woodbine Race Track, Ont., June 5.—A cool breeze from off the lake made things quite comfortable at the track yesterday afternoon. Six well filled events were on hand and the scratches were few.

The bookies did not do so much moving around to-day, but managed to do business standing in two fairly straight lines. They were moved back from the fence near the general enclosure about 100 feet, so that the line extended almost to the head of the stretch. Two officers were stationed, one at the end of each line, to prevent them from coming too far westward.

The two-year-old Set Back was disqualified on a previous start here, and gave another chance for similar action yesterday, as he bore over on Hickory Stick when making his run in the stretch, and Jockey Rettig made no effort to take him off, for which he was fined $50. Set Back went right on and passed Dalhousie, too, which put him in front, and landed his owner the purse. When Lady Etna broke at the start there was some jostling, and Jockey Foley lost his stirrups. The filly was pulled up, and cut no figure in the race.

The last race of the day was a brilliant and exciting struggle. Carthage and Hiacko raced out in front till they beat each other, and then St. Edmond took the lead. Hiacko held on well, though, and it was all Edwin Gum could do to beat him a head for second place.

In fact, there was only one shot on the Berlin goal, but the visitors put up an excellent defence game.

Who is Mox Schmidt? That was a question that was on the lips of nearly every wrestling fan who saw him work at Britannia Rink last night. Schmidt was booked to meet Bert Brown, of Brantford, the man who stood Sam

Schmidt looked to be at least 155. The men were to meet at catch weights. Schmidt then announced he was prepared to meet all comers, giving $1 a minute for every minute over ten that any of them could stick.

Lockie McMaster, the heavyweight skating artist, was the first to try conclusions with the German wonder. Schmidt put him away in nine minutes.

A man named Burns followed and he lasted seven minutes.

Sam Zeller, the strong barber II., announced he was not in condition, but would do his best. Schmidt toyed with him for ten minutes and then put him down and out. Schmidt used a full Nelson in the most approved manner.

The curtain raiser was provided by Jack Walsh and Joe McMahon. The affair was to have gone six rounds, but Walsh got the decision in the third.

From the Scrap Heap

New York, June 5.—Jack Johnson, smarting under criticism, has hired a new press agent, whose duty involves the composition of speeches to be delivered over the footlights by the negro champion. Johnson is doing stunts at a Harlem theatre this week, and though hissed and hooted when introduced, he is receiving much applause in the next ten minutes because of this statement: "I am willing to defend my title against any man in the world. I don't hurry Mistah Jeffries, and I don't want to fight him unless he's in condition. But whenever he's ready I'll be there to make a match and will bet $10,000 on the side. Meanwhile, to show that I am not a bluffer and a four-flusher, I have made a match with Mistah Stanley Ketchell for twenty rounds or more, in San Francisco, next October, and a $5,000 side bet goes with it. I have also made a match with Al Kaufman for twenty rounds or more, in California or Nevada, in the fall, for $10,000 a side. I will be in proper condition for these battles, and all I ask is fair play; also, may the best man win."

Johnson is bluffing when he says he is to fight Ketchell "twenty rounds or more." He positively declined to fight a minute more than twenty rounds when the match was made, although Ketchell hung out for forty-five rounds or to a finish.

Johnson declared ten days ago that he did not intend to fight Jeffries, as the latter was "too old and fat," but the negro has received such a panning ever since that he has been forced to change his tune.

Promoter McIntosh, who jumped into the limelight by pulling off the Johnson-Burns fight at Sydney, Australia, thinks he has made a ten-strike by matching antiquated Bob Fitzsimmons to cross arms with Burns in a twenty-round affair, to be decided on the other side of the world. McIntosh may delude Australians with this absurd match, but

New York, June 4.—Joe Jeannette, the negro heavyweight, and Willie Lewis, the New York middleweight, fresh from their many battles in Paris, reached here yesterday from Europe on board the steamship Lusitania. Jeannette was made an idol by the Parisians, who regarded him as a wonderful boxer.

Jeannette says that his treatment in the Paris capital was in every way fair. Jeannette's last battle abroad was with Sandy Ferguson, of Massachusetts, whom he defeated. Ferguson returned to five days ago to Boston.

Willie Lewis scored repeated successes in the prize ring, defeating a half-dozen of the best English middleweights, and winning an interesting bout from "Honey" Melody, of Boston.

GREAT MISSIONARIES FROM THE FAR FOREIGN FIELDS

Yesterday was a day of varied experiences for the General Assembly. Queen's University in the morning, the laymen's missionary movement in the afternoon and the great foreign missionaries in the evening, with a very delightful social function at the beautiful home of Mrs. Hendrie, Dr. Holmstead, kept the commissioners busy and afforded them work and pleasure nicely intermingled. It was a highly satisfactory day.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The afternoon sederunt was practically a little excursion into the laymen's missionary movement. As this has been before the people, it is only necessary to name the speakers to indicate how important it was to brethren who come from the far extremities of the church. Principal Gandier and Mr. John Lowden, both of Toronto, introduced the subject. Mr. N. V. Rowell, N. C. and Hon. Mr. Charlton spoke on behalf of the movement. A few words were also given by Mr. Anderson, the Canadian secretary.

FOREIGN MISSION NIGHT.

"The morning light is breaking. The darkness disappears; The sons of earth are waking To penitential tears."

"Regarding finances in the east, our report shows rigorous cutting down."—Mr. T. C. James.

"The western report has not simply the virtue of brevity; it has that of encouragement."—Rev. A. E. Armstrong.

"We are going back to the field; our lives are a trust for the Master, a trust for the church."—Dr. John Morton.

"Our future native ministry will come from the school teachers we have educated."—Rev. S. A. Fraser.

"I am to plead for the Jew. One of the nations is to lead for the wandering sheep."—Rev. S. B. Rohold.

"After the Welsh revival, God went to India, then to Corea, and now to China. In Canada only to be revived through the reflex of missions."—Rev. Jonathan Goforth.

"The wives of missionaries are ahead of their husbands. That is, our work is voluntary and therefore so sweet."—Mrs. Morton.

"The movements which are convulsing the east are the counterpart of that in the west, known as the Laymen's Missionary Movement."—Mr. J. M. Waters, M. D.

"The power above all others in our work has been the power of prayer."—Mrs. Goforth.

The above sentences will give an idea of the meeting last night. Although the evening was lowering there was no lessening in the great crowd. Many ladies were present, firstly, because two of themselves had to speak, and secondly, the Women's Missionary Society has been for years a sort of stepmother to "Foreign Mission Night."

After Mr. T. C. James, of Charlotte-town, P. E. I., had given a straight business report of the funds in the east, and Rev. A. E. Armstrong, Assistant Secretary, introduced the subject in the west, the active missionaries were called.

Dr. Lyle here interjected one of the fine things noticeable in his conduct of the Assembly. As the light-footed, though venerable servant of the church for forty-eight years, forty-two among the heathen, stepped upon the platform, the Moderator greeted him with a stretched hand, saying—"it is a privilege to be permitted to introduce such a veteran. You come with a great past, with the golden deeds of a noble and devoted life."

Dr. Morton said: "We went out young and were given much advice. One told us to drive with the aged because they would soon be eternally at rest. Another, who was somewhat of a philosopher, said that only the young could be touched at all. But we went along, and to-day rejoice over our privilege. There is no romance in it, but something better. There are miracles, miracles of grace. For the past five years we were never so confident before that God was using us to His glory."

Dr. Morton is himself a great personality. It was practically his meeting and that of his equally remarkable wife. This is no reflection upon others, for, taking everything into consideration, they are peerless among their brethren. And everything was done well. How fatherly his introduction of a fellow-worker. There is no friction in that field. There was also his graceful and touching presentation of his wife. In every act there was the presence of a great mind and heart. Of his co-worker, Rev. S. A. Fraser, he said: "He is a fine fellow. When a student he had the lure of Labrador, but for fifteen years he has been with us."

Mr. Fraser must, to the eye and ear, be a great object lesson to the Coolies of a fine fellow. He is the picture of strength and purity, a fine, big, "spic and span" fellow. He looks the equal to the well-known Dr. Grant, late of Dawson City, and both have grown white before their time, in service.

When the bell rang, he was in the middle of a sentence, describing the downright, hard and thorough work, reaching from elementary education to a well-organized church, in colleges and pastorates. "I must just obey," he said, with a little thicker Gaelic flavor, on his words. Then Dr. Morton stepped to his side, and they stood together, and if all the laymen of Canada had seen them, the missionary movement would think itself honored in supporting such a staff of servants.

Mr. J. M. Waters, M. D., C. M., is home on his first furlough from Ujjain, India. He is supported by a Central Church, Toronto, and Belmont, of the London Presbytery. He has been nine years in the work, and is the beau-idole of a sharp, young Canadian student. Yes, he would attract attention were he to "hang out his shingle" on any of our avenues. He said: "I present to you to-night the claims of three-quarters of the inhabitants of the British Empire. There is considerable talk of unrest against the rule of Britain. The fact is that so long as it is confined to the class of agitators who are now in it, they will be little to fear. They are at once the most warlike in peace, and peaceful in war." He went over familiar ground regarding orphanages, colleges and evangelism, and closed by saying—"I never knew what homesickness was until I came home on furlough."

Mr. S. B. Rohold, missionary to the

Held the Attention of the Assembly at a Most Interesting Meeting.

The Laymen's Movement Dealt With at the Afternoon Session—Side Lights.

Dr. J. Fraser Smith, Rev. T.T. Reikie, Dr. W.S. McTavish, Rev. R.J. McKay, M.A., Kingston, Ont.

Dr. J. Fraser Smith went to China along with Mr. Goforth. It was through his skill in giving sight to an old Chinese that the first convert was won in Honan.

Rev. T. T. Reikie finds the Assembly no picnic, owing to the business connection with the west, for he is now the minister with the west, where Principal Caven once ministered.

Jews in Canada, was the next speaker. He was introduced by Rev. J. McP. Scott, of Toronto, who said that he was the son of a rabbi, and born in Jerusalem, but in early manhood converted. He has done fine work among the Jews in Edinburgh. He is very dark, and since he learned the language in Scotland, his Hebrew tongue has an Edinburgh shibboleth, as well as its contribution from Israel. He said: "What shall I say to you, young men, for I feel my position keenly. Our policy is not to make them Gentiles, but to lead them to the true Messiah. We open night schools to teach English. The Russian Jew comes in and asks, 'How much do you charge for teaching us to read and write?' We answer, 'It is free; we will do it for Christ's sake.' They answer: 'In Russia, Christians kill the Jews for Christ's sake, and in Canada they teach them.'" Our work is promising. We read the Book of Isaiah for morning, noon and night. We feed upon it at every meal in the day. We have only reached the 10th chapter.

The Moderator here introduced Rev. Jonathan Goforth, with the remark, "His name marks him out as a missionary, for to such a work he was born, not made." Then a light, nervous, magnetic figure stepped to the front. It was the "same old Goforth," only more so! He is the hero of Honan, a miracle from out the Boxer's rebellion. He said: "I was born in the 'revival year,' 1859. I am to speak of this special phase of our missionary work. Wherever our revival has spread, it is due to an advance on higher ground, and this is the work of the Spirit. His story would repeat itself along certain lines. There have been Pentecosts, and whoever does not believe in their visitation to-day is not historic. I never felt in China satisfied with our attainments in Christian life. Surely this is not the work of the Spirit, but the work of the man, and when I found the place where I was willing to cut off my right hand for Christ, the blessing began to come. Now, becoming thus willing, I received the promise of the fullness of the Holy Spirit, not in feeling but in fact, and thus the work began in other lives. Then the confessions of the cross, natives seemed to see the bleeding wounds of the Saviour, and they cried out because of their sin. Thus we have enjoyed the days of Pentecost. When it is coming to our beloved Christian Church.

Mrs. Morton is a tall lady, the equal in a most excellent spirit and efficiency with her husband. Dr. Morton during his speech said, "I have a wife, and in all that long service they have shared the hours of success. She said: 'Trinidad is only ten degrees from the equator. There beautiful things are to be seen on every side. But the good and true have to struggle for life. My morning Bible class has brought unspeakable joy. Then she told of one young Mohammedan lad, who recited one day how he had seen a vision in the sky, of a triangle with the letters "A" inside. She interpreted the vision: The triangle is three in one, that is the Trinity, and the letter stands for your name, Abbe. Now, you wait and see if something will not come out of this. And the interpretation was true. The lad is a young man, and is serving the Trinity as a teacher and religious worker."

Mrs. Goforth is well known to the people of Ontario, and the women of the Church. She has been for some time in Canada, owing to the education of the children. She was only called upon at a late hour to say a few words, and they were both touching and the keystone to the whole utterance of the night. Prayer, she said, is our great power. In hunger, want, danger, sorrow, it was prayer that sustained. The prayer of others, also, for as I go speaking in the congregations, I have felt the grasp of warm hands, and heard these words, "Dear Mrs. Goforth, we have prayed for you every day since you went out first to China."

DR. LYLE THE MODERATOR.

This city knows the minister of Central Church as a citizen, scholar and distinguished clergyman. But it has never before considered him as Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

He may be seen therefore from day to day presiding, in his usual clerical robes, in the presence of much eloquence and argumentation. His right place, indeed, is presiding over some court. His dignified bearing and intellectual face would at once harmonize with the emblems of a supreme court in law or a chair which signifies the presidency of a college. Because his learning is broad, and his sympathies far embracing, he is not a crystallized cleric. He would pass for a chief justice; one would feel confidence behind his advice and power as a great barrister, and if his talents had been directed to surgery, life itself would have been safeguarded under his hand. Truth to tell, the artist whose great painting, "The Doctor," must surely have visited this city and Central Church for "the model" to occupy the centre of that heart-throbbing picture.

As Moderator one thing in life has so governed Dr. Lyle that, though he rules the Assembly, it will direct him. Of course the Good Spirit will be his guide. His sense of civility and fair play also will be fully alive while in the chair. The flight of time, the value of all the moments, have governed him in the prosecution of a successful life, the acquisition of vast stores of knowledge, and saving time for service on behalf of every good cause. It will now dominate, to economize the use of the Assembly and teach spendthrifts of time to remedy their life-locks. The Church will wish him a very happy year. This honor will not relegate him to the old men, for of Dr. Lyle it may be said: "A man he seems of cheerful yesterdays and confident to-morrows."

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE ASSEMBLY.

The Hamilton choristers have set a beautiful example to their fellow artists and worshippers in other Assembly cities. It is appreciated by the commissioners to have such excellent leading in the service of praise on the great popular evening concerts.

The City Council also has recognized the presence of the supreme court of Canadian Presbyterianism by blaring the words "Welcome to our city" over the portal of the civic buildings.

There is a formidable array of scribes sending copy to both the religious and daily press of the Dominion. Dr. Robert Murray, though not at present editor of the "Advertiser," is the leading writer of East, the Presbyterian Witness, may be called the "dean" of all the newspaper men in attendance. We notice that his gentle and glowing pen is still moving.

Rev. Dr. E. Scott, of the Record, Montreal, is preparing the descriptive letters which will be placed in due time by the Presbyterian people of Canada.

Near him is Rev. R. Haddock, of the Presbyterian, Toronto. He must make haste for early news, every part of the business will come to light upon its pages in impartial sunshine.

C. Blacket Robinson, of Ottawa, and editor of the Dominion Presbyterian, is a capable hand. No letter paper ever appeared that the old Canada Presbyterian, which was his creation.

The Globe is not far away. Mr. Blue is now an old hand "among the ministrars," and has for the telegraph "boys" cope to make the smile.

Mr. Smythe, of the World, is also familiar from long experience with the assembly. His brief summaries, which introduce the well written reports, are a feature.

The Telegram, of Toronto, and the News have both men "on the spot," who are finding their way with determination to get every name and fact correct. Outside papers in the west are represented by Mr. Hope Ross, whose "write up" of Dr. Duval is a fine sample of his work.

There are a few clerical men who "incog." are informing the people in other Provinces through the great eastern dailies. Therefore this parliament of religion is national in its interest and influence.

The assembly church will be well served on Sunday. Let no one imagine that an old veteran, forty-two years a missionary, and a short time a Canadian pastor, is an old man sans tooth, sans eloquence, sans everything. Dr. Morton will hold his audience just as long as he wishes to speak. Who is more fitting to preach the love of God to his brethren than the man who has seen its power manifested among the lowest orders of humanity for forty-two years, and is now going back?

In the evening Rev. R. Wm. Ross, M. A., of Port Massey, Halifax, will occupy the pulpit. What a summons for a young man to stand before the assembly and preach. It is enough to make Jeremiah say: "O Lord, I am a child," yet he is enjoyed by the school of the prophets, who are directing the business from day to day—"be not afraid of their faces."

The communion service in the afternoon is a most solemn service. It is the great hour of this assembly feast. The members of every assembly in the city should endeavor to be present.

A Delicious, Nourishing Meal for 5 Cents

YOU don't believe it, do you? Here it is: Take two SHREDDED WHEAT BISCUITS; heat them in the oven to restore crispness, pour hot milk over them; add a little cream and salt to suit the taste. Or, if you don't like milk, try it this way: Heat two Biscuits in oven to restore crispness; then dip them quickly in salt water, place a piece of butter on the Biscuit, allowing it to melt into the shreds. Or, heat the Biscuits in oven, dip them in milk, drain, and fry in butter, after which they may be served with a little cream, if desired.

A little fruit makes the meal even more wholesome and adds little to the cost. Try one of these tomorrow.

Shredded Wheat is made of the choicest selected white wheat, cleaned, steam-cooked and baked. Try it for breakfast to-morrow with milk or cream. The Biscuit is also delicious for any meal in combination with fresh or preserved fruits.

THREE YOUNG CLERGYMEN.

Reception Service at the Hamilton Conference.

Rev. Mr. Irwin Speaks of the Future Minister.

Memorial Church at Port Rowan--Women's Missionary Society.

Brantford, June 4.—Wellington Street Methodist Church was packed to its capacity to-night by a great gathering eager to witness the ceremony accompanying the entry of three young probationers of the Hamilton Conference into their full connection with the Conference.

The three young men on the threshold of their religious activity, Messrs. Nelson A. Hurlbut, transferred from the Montreal Conference; C. H. Woltz, and C. S. Applegath, were introduced by President Smith, and each gave a short address.

Before the Conference, by a standing vote, unanimously admitted the three men into the ministry, addresses were delivered by Rev. J. C. Antliff, of Galt, and Rev. A. J. Irwin of Tara. Dr. Antliff drew largely from his great experience in telling the young preachers how they were to best carry on the work they had undertaken. His adjuration to them to stand by the old religion and the old beliefs called forth many fervent amens from the assembled clergymen.

Rev. Mr. Irwin's address was almost entirely extemporaneous, but from the time he commenced to his concluding sentence the attention of the great congregation was wholly his theme was briefly "What the old religion was to be like." When he launched forth, many of the older pastors held their breath and wondered. But the speaker did not go along the lines of higher criticism. He declared that the preacher was changing with the times. The coming type, and the day of the orator of the type of Spurgeon had gone for ever. Ministers were developing the scientific spirit, and never tired of searching. The age was one of chaos. But this state of affairs was not brought about by this new change in the minister, but by the great change that had come over the times. Men could hold out their hands and grab riches. They had come to see that the earth was not a fixed, but a growing thing. It was not an immoral, age, simply a confused one. Responsible government had come with a rush, and even yet the people do not understand the use of the ballot. They think it is a possession, and not a trust.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

During the morning session a motion was brought forward by Rev. W. H. Garnham, of Port Rowan Church, asking for $3,000 as aid to assist in the building of a memorial church in honor of Rev. George Neill, the first Methodist Minister in Upper Canada. The church was to cost $10,000 at least, and the people in Port Rowan and vicinity had pledged $5,000. The edifice was now half a century old. The Port Rowan pastor made an eloquent plea to the Conference that it do something in honor of the memory of a great man who had served his King as a major during the Revolutionary War, and then, being converted, came over to aid to assist in the building of Upper Canada. He had died in Port Rowan or Long Point at the ripe old age of 90 years. His old home had passed into strange hands, and the grave was being allowed to fall into a sad state of neglect.

His request received every consideration at the hands of the gathering, and the Conference practically pledged itself to raise the necessary money, although the original motion was referred back to have the wording changed.

Philadelphia Trolley Lines Running—Men Get Increase.

Philadelphia, June 4.—The big trolley strike was squelched to-night. It is said that the Republican bosses brought about its ending. By the terms of agreement drawn up to-night between the Rapid Transit Company and the strikers the men will receive 22 cents an hour, the new scale to take effect at once. It is stipulated that June 30, 1910, when the books of the company shall be audited, the men shall receive a further advance in pay if the financial condition of the company shows to be satisfactory. The further advance will be a cent an hour. Virtually the company recognizes the union, although it calls it treating with accredited representatives of its employees.

The agreement also shortens the hours of labor. Hitherto the men have been compelled to remain on duty 15 or 16 hours a day to obtain nine or ten hours' work. Hereafter the company promises they shall not be on duty more than ten hours in a working day. All of the men are to be reinstated unless it can be shown that they were guilty of destroying the company's property or of serious offences against the law.

TO BE HANGED.

Ottawa, June 4.—The last chance to escape death is gone for Walter Blythe, the Acapulco railwayman under sentence to be hanged for the murder of his wife last winter. Blythe was originally sentenced to be hanged on May 12th, but two days before he paid the penalty a reprieve was granted by order in Council until June 17th. Yesterday his case was finally considered, and his Excellency Earl Grey has concurred in the recommendation of the Cabinet that the law shall take its course.

Allegation That Many Italians Have Been Killed in Gowanda.

Toronto, June 5.—The report is absolutely new to me, and I can scarcely credit it. It is, however, a very serious one and must be fully and immediately investigated," said Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, in an interview with the Globe last night. The Minister had been asked concerning the report from Montreal that two Italian, Alfonso Severino and Antonio Meloni, had come to that city from Gowanda with the statement that some fifty of their countrymen had met death in mine explosions in the district during the past winter, and no official report of any kind had been made of the fatalities. They were said to be laying the matter before the Italian Consul-General.

How to Cure Fretting of Infants

Mrs. Emma E. Percival Gives Advice That is Very Valuable.

When young children and babies continually fret and cry you can be sure in nine cases out of ten there is pain caused either by wind or acidity of the stomach.

Writing on this subject from her home in Bedford, Mrs. Percival says: "As a nurse of many years' experience I can say that nothing I know of will give such splendid results as Nerviline in four drop doses in hot sweetened water. I once had a case with a baby that cried continually, suffered as if in con- tinual pain—Nerviline relieved at once. I have also used Nerviline with grand effect for cramps, stomach gas, indigestion and stomach disorders. For general household use, to cure the many internal ills that constantly arise, I can recommend no preparation so honest, reliable and economical as Nerviline."

Physicians, laymen, thousands use Nerviline every day, all say its pain-subduing, health-giving powers warrant it being kept in every home. Refuse any substitute for NERVILINE, which is sold in large 25c bottles by all dealers.

By the receipt of $3,769.09 from the $101,322 estate of the late John Mulligan, of Port Hope, the total receipts of succession duties for the five months past are brought to virtually within $10,000 of the estimated figure for the entire financial year. Up to May 30th the sum of $379,927 had been received.

Johnston, G. Rogers and J. McArthur. The members all appeared hale and hearty, and had their medals pinned on their breasts. Major A. H. Askin, of Walkerville, and Lieut.-Col. H. E. Irving, formerly of the 13th, and who is the only surviving officer who was at the front at Windsor in 1865, are now honorary members of the association. The Honorary President is Col. J. M. Gibson, Lieut.-Col. of Ontario.

A number of letters were received from members and friends, among them being one from Lieut.-Col. Irving, Newmarket; Major B. Barnard, Toronto; Major H. Askin, Walkerville, and Comrade C. D. Brown, of Detroit.

The secretary was instructed to give Lieut.-Col. Logie and Col. Moore a vote of thanks for their kindness in permitting the veterans to turn out to the Sunday parade.

A vote of thanks was given the City Council for allowing the association to use the committee room for meetings, and it was agreed to ask that a small grant of $50 or $100 be given the veterans' Association as a recognition of their services in the years gone by.

A number of accounts were read and passed.

A committee of two was appointed to visit Thomas Wilson, who is sick and has resigned from his position on the executive committee. Omand was elected to fill the position.

A discussion took place as to whether the association should work in conjunction with the Toronto association in making application to the Government for a grant.

The annual dinner, which was served at the Waldorf after the meeting, was in commemoration of the battle of Ridgeway on June 2, 1866. The toast list was as follows:

"The King," responded to by the singing of the National Anthem.

"Canada, Our Home," proposed by Geo. Vallance, responded to by J. Griffin.

"Army, Navy and Militia," proposed by Capt. Reid, responded to by Veteran Hutchinson.

"The Ladies," proposed by the chairman, and responded to by Wm. McDonald and Wm. Parks.

"The Press."

"The Host," responded to by singing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Cigars were passed around, and the veterans had an opportunity to forget their troubles as they told of their experiences in 1866.

Bay Hill gave a patriotic address. A short programme was given by Messrs. Harry Eckstein, Pringle, Martin Cleworth and Weaver. A number of the veterans also recited and sang patriotic songs.

The association will attend the decoration services on Sunday in a body, starting at the Terminal station at 2 o'clock. The gathering dispersed about 12 o'clock after having had one of the most successful annual meetings and banquets in the history of the association.

The officers of the association, to whom much credit is due for their earnest efforts in making the event a success, are: Col. Stoneham, President, 205; Sergt. Leitch, Vice-President.

The threshing of this year's wheat crop began in Texas to-day.

STARTLING STORY.

Allegation That Many Italians Have Been Killed in Gowanda.

Toronto, June 5.—The report is absolutely new to me, and I can scarcely credit it. It is, however, a very serious one and must be fully and immediately investigated," said Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, in an interview with the Globe last night. The Minister had been asked concerning the report from Montreal that two Italian, Alfonso Severino and Antonio Meloni, had come to that city from Gowanda with the statement that some fifty of their countrymen had met death in mine explosions in the district during the past winter, and no official report of any kind had been made of the fatalities. They were said to be laying the matter before the Italian Consul-General.

Big Strike Ends.

Philadelphia Trolley Lines Running—Men Get Increase.

Philadelphia, June 4.—The big trolley strike was squelched to-night. It is said that the Republican bosses brought about its ending. By the terms of agreement drawn up to-night between the Rapid Transit Company and the strikers the men will receive 22 cents an hour, the new scale to take effect at once. It is stipulated that June 30, 1910, when the books of the company shall be audited, the men shall receive a further advance in pay if the financial condition of the company shows to be satisfactory. The further advance will be a cent an hour. Virtually the company recognizes the union, although it calls it treating with accredited representatives of its employees.

TO BE HANGED.

Ottawa, June 4.—The last chance to escape death is gone for Walter Blythe, the Acapulco railwayman under sentence to be hanged for the murder of his wife last winter. Blythe was originally sentenced to be hanged on May 12th, but two days before he paid the penalty a reprieve was granted by order in Council until June 17th. Yesterday his case was finally considered, and his Excellency Earl Grey has concurred in the recommendation of the Cabinet that the law shall take its course.

THE unvoiced alarm that sets a panic afoot at certain times in some mysterious way no man may understand had drawn an anxious little circle of maids and servants, who fluttered about Le Brun, the butler, within the porte cochère.

"Ten o'clock and no ring for chocolate yet," exclaimed the cook. "Such a thing has not come upon us in all the years I have served my lady. 'Tis surely strange."

Le Brun, ordinarily a man of judgment, severity and reserve, not quick to play a part in any absurdity or domestic comedy, bore some reflection of the prevailing uneasiness in his face and manner, a fact that did nothing to calm the vague fears of the others.

"You may well say a strange thing for one so fixed in her habits as the mistress. Let no one think I seek to spread baseless dread, but I misdoubt me much we shall find something amiss when those doors are opened. My lady never locked any but the inner one before."

It was not w^ol considered, such a word at such a moment. Exclamations of dismay followed his pronouncements. A heavy rain was falling and the rumble of thunder knocked ominously upon these superstitious hearts. It needed but the sob of the under-housemaid to push the situation to the verge of hysteria. Le Brun, recovering himself suddenly, brought them up with a sharp turn.

"Come, no scenes. We know nothing yet except that my lady has not called at her accustomed hour. If M. de Savoniere fails to come within the hour I shall send word to the commissary and the doors shall be forced. In the meantime we will have no disturbance, if you please."

He had scarcely delivered himself of this speech with rather hollow pomposity when there was a summons at the gate and the group melted away. Le Brun admitted M. de Savoniere, the son-in-law of Lady Mazel.

While he shook the clinging moisture from his coat the young man inquired briskly if his mother-in-law could be seen yet, adding that he had affairs on hand that necessitated an instant interview. M. de Savoniere acted as man of business for the well known leader in Parisian society and fashion whose daughter he had married, and it was his custom to consult with her every morning. Le Brun imparted his news maladroily.

"Monsieur, I fear something has happened to my mistress," he blurted.

"Something! What kind of a something?" asked the visitor quickly. Le Brun spoke with visible effort.

"Nay, how should I know? But here it is two full hours past the time she is used to ring her bell, and we have heard nothing from her. The door to the outer antechamber is locked, a most remarkable thing, since there has never been a key to it, nor can we gain any response from knocking upon it. In truth, if the second antechamber door as well as her own is locked she could not hear us, just as we could not hear her if she should be calling for aid."

"Well, I see nothing there for such a state of mind," said M. de Savoniere, looking keenly at the butler. "Perhaps she finds it convenient to sleep a little longer. What else disturbs you?"

Cause for Alarm.

"If you knew my lady's punctuality as I do you would see cause for some alarm, monsieur. But there is another matter. Before I retired last night I tried the doors and windows on the ground floor as usual. I found the street door, through which you have just come, swinging wide to the wind, although I distinctly recall having closed it securely after my lady went up stairs."

"You say there is no key to the outer antechamber door?"

"I have never seen one. Nor is there a key to the second. Both close on the latch. The door to the bed chamber has a spring lock and Lady Mazel keeps the key inside."

M. de Savoniere looked upon the matter in a darker light on hearing of these circumstances and hurried up the great staircase to the mezzanine floor, with Le Brun at his heels. He tried the outer door leading to the first antechamber and found it fast, as the butler had said. He pounded upon the panels without result.

"Le Brun, I don't like the look of this. We must get these doors open. I will take full responsibility. It may be that she has suffered a sudden attack of apoplexy or other trouble."

"But would the doors be locked if it were nothing more?" inquired Le Brun, with white face.

"Bring the men servants with a crowbar!" was the incisive reply.

The butler brought the coachman and the footman from the servants' quarters. Unbidden, drawn by curiosity and the sense of impending calamity, the women flocked behind. The first door was forced. The small, dark ante chamber was empty and the door beyond was also closed and locked. This was also forced. The little party paused outside the bedroom and listened. There was no sound from within. Finally M. de Savoniere summoned the courage, real enough in face of the strange situation of affairs, to rap, gently at first and then more vigorously.

No response was audible. With a gesture he ordered the men forward with the crowbar. A blow, a wrench opposite the lock, and the heavy barrier swung inward. At first glance there appeared no indication of disorder to the group that peeped timidly from the doorway. The interior of the bed was hidden by the heavy curtains. Le Brun, beads of perspiration standing upon his forehead in his excitement, brushed past the others, who hung back, and flung the draperies aside. He started back violently with a gasping cry of terror.

The body of Lady Mazel lay across the top of the bed, a torn and stained pillow partly covering it. She had been cut and slashed almost beyond recognition. Subsequent examination showed that fifty-one wounds had been inflicted upon her with a knife and that she had been dead about twelve hours. The bed clothes and her own linen garment showed how desperate and determined had been her struggle for life.

The Banded Box.

While M. de Savoniere and the men servants pressed in silent horror about the bed and the women screamed, Le Brun ran to the other end of the room where stood a small, but stoutly banded strong box, which he seized and lifted.

"How is this?" he cried. "She has not been robbed." It was found that, in fact, the chest was heavily weighted and the lock still fast.

M. de Savoniere took charge of the investigation with a degree of self-command and decision that did him credit. He quieted the women and sent them to their quarters, ordered the door closed upon every one except Le Brun and sent the footman for the Commissary of Police. Then he charged the butler to describe to him in detail the happenings of the previous night. Le Brun apparently retained a hold upon himself with difficulty. His words came wheezingly in his throat and he leaned against a table for support as he attempted to reply. Several times during the broken recital M. de Savoniere caught him up sharply. The man seemed to be abnormally affected by the tragedy. In substance he told his story as follows:

"My two sisters, fashionable milliners, as you know, called upon my lady, the day being Sunday, to pay their respects. She received them kindly and was with them until late in the afternoon. She then dined with Father Poulard. At her accustomed time she retired to her chamber, where I attended her to receive her commands for to-day. After I left her she was waited upon by her two maids and the last one of them to leave her left the key to the bed chamber on a chair just inside the door and closed it. It catches on a spring lock and cannot be opened from the outside without violence."

"I went down into the hall and sat before the fire. I must have fallen asleep, for when I looked at the clock again it was well past my usual hour for retiring. As I recall it was eleven o'clock. I made the rounds of the floor, and then it was that I found the outer door ajar. The matter puzzled and troubled me, but I fastened it and went to bed."

"This morning I attended to the marketing as usual and on returning was surprised to hear that my lady had not sounded the bell. It was then that I discovered the circumstance of the locked antechamber door. The rest you know."

The methodical young man of business made no comment upon these statements, but took care to make note of them. The case began to take some form in his mind. He turned to an examination of the room.

In a corner he found a wide linen scarf, splashed with blood and tied and knotted into the form of a cap. It retained the shape of the head upon which it had been wound. Among the ashes on the hearth lay the blade of a short, common kitchen knife, with only a small, charred fragment of the wooden handle adhering to its base. Undoubtedly in this he held the weapon that had been used by the murderer. Turning again to the bed he noticed that the bell rope, which ordinarily dangled a tasseled handle just above the pillow, had been looped up high out of reach. This explained how his mother-in-law had been unable to summon aid and argued some opportunity for preparation on the part of the assailant. He was still at a loss for a motive. There appeared to have been no robbery.

Story of Le Brun.

While the young man had been absorbed in his investigation Le Brun had been walking back and forth in an agitated manner within the embrasure of the window, pausing at every turn to wring his hands. The butler's actions irritated M. de Savoniere.

"Look here, Le Brun," he broke out, roughly. "Do you know where my mother-in-law kept the key to the strong box?"

Le Brun, startled by the question, shook his head and declared that he had never known where the key was kept. M. de Savoniere thought this rather strange and was more than ever puzzled by the butler's behavior. He set to work, however, to discover the strong box key. He had been unsuccessful up to the moment when the footman ushered in the Commissary of Police and two of his men.

After the official had inspected the body and its condition he requested full particulars of the circumstances. M. de Savoniere elaborated carefully from the notes he had made and exhibited the nightcap and knife blade. Le Brun was asked to repeat his story and he did so with some effort, holding in every detail to his former statement. The commissary watched him with a cold, expressionless eye as he talked, but did not interrupt him. The inquiry came around once more to the point of the key to the strong box. Another search for it was instituted.

The commissary noticed a small mahogany cabinet on the dressing table. He opened it by snapping back a catch. Inside lay Lady Mazel's jewels, and M. de Savoniere was able to state positively that none was missing. The commissary took a small bronze key from an upper shelf of the cabinet.

"I think we shall have a sight of the inside of that cabinet now," he said with something of triumph. It proved to be the one of which they were in search and the strong box was thrown open. To M. de Savoniere, who saw the interior of the chest each morning while discussing and arranging affairs of business with Lady Mazel, it was immediately apparent that some hand other than that of his mother-in-law had last disturbed the contents. Packages of papers had been disarranged. A leather bag which had contained a large sum of gold when he had put it in its place the previous Saturday lay almost empty, with loosened strings.

"The motive is here, M. le Commissaire," he said. "I should say offhand that fifteen thousand francs is missing. And what a clever rogue is that who seeks to cover his tracks by locking up the chest again and by putting the key back in its place, doubly clever in withstanding the temptation to take just one little jewel with him. Observe the care with which he avoided that mistake. It could be too easily traced."

This phase of the crime having been cleared up the Commissary stationed himself in the outer antechamber and caused the servants to be brought before him one at a time. He questioned them soothingly, not holding an attitude of suspicion but seeking to bring each over to his own side by subtle flattery. He gained few additional facts bearing directly upon the case, however, until it came the turn of the first maid to Lady Mazel.

Opening the Chest.

After approaching his point cautiously the official asked casually:—

"Do you know where your mistress kept the key to her strong box?"

"Oh, yes, monsieur," answered the girl, readily. "It was always in her little jewel cabinet, on the table."

"Did any one in the household besides yourself know where it was kept?"

"Only Le Brun, monsieur, I think. I have seen him open the chest at my lady's command."

When he had excused the maid the commissary asked M. de Savoniere if the butler had not professed ignorance concerning the place where the key was kept. The young man replied that he had. Le Brun was then summoned. He appeared with a bundle in his hand and on entering the room loosened this and spread out in a rather dramatic manner a rope ladder about thirty feet in length.

"I found this but a moment ago in the lower hall, monsieur," he said. "Evidently the miscreant intended to escape by means of it after accomplishing his wicked deed."

The commissary examined the ladder.

"You say you discovered it in the lower hall?"

"Yes, monsieur, in a corner, where it had been overlooked."

"How do you suppose he really escaped?"

"I fear that I am culpable there, monsieur," said Le Brun, in distress. "It must have been while I was dozing before the fire that he found an opportunity to pass by me and out the street door."

The commissary tapped smartly on the table. His two assistants appeared instantly from the inner chamber.

"Arrest that man," he ordered, pointing to Le Brun. The butler, stricken into the picture of terror by the words, held out his hands in supplication.

"Surely, surely, monsieur," he gasped, "I am not that much to blame. You would not arrest me for having fallen asleep."

"I arrest you for murder," said the Commissary. "Search him."

The odds and ends of articles taken from the pockets of the trembling prisoner were carefully examined. M. de Savoniere was particularly interested in the small bunch of keys found upon him. He tried each of them in succession upon the lock of the antechamber door, but without result.

"Perhaps you will do better with this one," said the Commissary, and held out to him an unattached key which he had found in Le Brun's side pocket. M. de Savoniere tried it in its turn and was not altogether surprised to find that it fitted the lock exactly.

Le Brun was sent away under the guard of the two gendarmes while the Commissary and M. de Savoniere proceeded to knit together the promising points that had come to their hands.

The first question to settle was how the butler was able to penetrate to the bed chamber in order to accomplish his design. The unattached key, as they determined by examination, was a rough bit of hand manufacture, sawn out of a sheet of copper and filed into shape. It unlocked the doors to both antechambers but brought them no nearer to an explanation of the manner in which the murderer had passed the third door. This was fastened by a strong spring lock, which did not extend to the outer side, and apparently it had not been tampered with.

Untangling the Clues.

M. de Savoniere came to the conviction that the murderer's entrance had not been effected through the rather stupid attempt on the part of Le Brun to deflect suspicion from himself toward some unknown intruder. His glibbed actions and his premature fear of a tragedy, which had been carried to excess, joined also with this view.

The only matter which remained to any degree outside the theory of the butler's guilt was the disposition of the money stolen from the chest, although the case as it stood was completely satisfactory. Even here, however, the prosecution, through the clear headed assistance of M. de Savoniere, was partly successful.

The amateur investigator was able to discover that on the morning of the murder, while ostensibly engaged in marketing for the household, Le Brun had visited his wife, who lived in another quarter of the city. The apartments of the couple were searched and under the bed the young man found a small iron box containing about a thousand francs in gold. The woman was arrested and an attempt was made to implicate her. She was able to clear herself of complicity, however, and the case was centred upon her husband, the authorities being convinced that he had not taken her into his confidence. She admitted that on the morning in question Le Brun had brought her five hundred of the thousand francs. Neither the nor at the trial could the prosecution present a clear explanation of what the butler had done with the rest of the money. It was supposed that he had placed it in a bank under an assumed name.

Le Brun obtained a speedy trial, the peculiarly aggravating circumstances surrounding the crime causing the authorities to hasten the wheels of justice. His defence was unconvincing and he was quickly sentenced to death. His execution took place about two weeks later.

About a month after the disposal of the case the local police officers of the town of Sens, about sixty miles from Paris, had occasion to look into the affairs of John Garlet, who recently had set himself up as a business there as a dealer in horses. During convivial moments in a tavern he had allowed it to become known that his real name was not Garlet, but Berry. This fact coming to the ears of one who had confidential relations with the police, a quiet investigation was made. Nothing was known of the man's antecedents before coming to Sens, but the fact that he had changed his name was considered sufficient ground for keeping him under surveillance.

He was seen exhibiting a small gold watch to some acquaintances while partly intoxicated and was arrested. The watch proved to be very valuable and was sent for identification to the Paris police. Through the watchmaker whose name it bore it was established as having been the property of Lady Mazel. M. de Savoniere pronounced it to have been the property of his mother-in-law, but said that she had lost it about two months before the date of her murder. Berry was sent for and was asked by the Paris authorities to explain how he came to have the watch in his possession.

He told several contradictory stories, which were all disproved, and an inquiry was set on foot. It was learned that Berry had been employed by the Mazel household as coachman and that he had been turned away for theft. The circumstance of his sudden accession to wealth, which had enabled him to purchase the business of a horse dealer in Sens, seemed to indicate that he had been concerned in some considerable robbery, and still more stringent measures were adopted to discover his movements before leaving Paris. In the midst of these a shopkeeper living near the Mazel house, caused something of a sensation by informing the police that he knew Berry and had some part in him leaving the home of his former employer by the front door late on the night during which Lady Mazel was murdered.

At this point M. de Savoniere became interested and obtained all the available results of the official investigation up to date. In looking over the files against Le Brun he had been struck forcibly by the fact that no garment belonging to the butler had been found bearing blood stains, unless the bit of cravat were excepted. While not doubting that justice had been done, he had tried with no success to explain this lack to his own satisfaction. The struggle between the murderer and his victim must have been furious, yet Le Brun had shown no scratches on his face or hands and no marks upon his clothing. He set himself to discover whether Berry might not have had some connection with the crime.

His Two Confessions.

A barber living a few blocks from the Mazel home came forward with the following story on the morning following the murder he had shared Berry, whom he had not seen until then since his discharge. The man's face and hands were badly scratched, he said, and when he asked Berry the cause the former coachman's answer had been that he had received the scratches in killing a cat. It was learned from the police at Sens that Berry when he appeared there had brought with him a sum of money approximating fifteen thousand francs.

Armed with these bits of information M. de Savoniere visited Berry in jail, informed him that he had positive proof of his complicity in the murder of Lady Mazel and urged him to confess. Somewhat to his surprise the manoeuvre was successful, the prisoner weakened and officials were summoned to take down his statement. When they arrived, however, the man had recovered his assurance in some part and told a remarkable and fanciful story. He said that he had assisted in the murder at the instigation of Mme. de Savoniere, the daughter of Lady Mazel, and that he had guarded the door while Le Brun killed his mistress. He was tried and condemned to death.

On the way to the scaffold he recanted his first confession and substituted another which undoubtedly established the truth of the strange matter.

During his employment with Lady Mazel he had planned a robbery of her strong box and had made the copper key to fit the lock of the door to the disguised passage. He found, incidentally, that it would also lock the antechamber doors. He was dismissed before he was able to accomplish his design and did not find an opportunity to slip into the house unobserved until the Friday preceding the murder. He made his way up the rear staircase to the top of the house, where he concealed himself in a storeroom. Here he remained until Sunday, subsisting on apples and bread which he had brought in his pockets. The only weapon he had with him was the kitchen knife, which he had stolen the day of his discharge.

On Sunday afternoon, when he was sure that Lady Mazel was not in her chamber, he descended the stairs, entered the secret passage, made his way into the room and secreted himself under the bed. About midnight, when he was sure that Lady Mazel was asleep, he crawled out of his hiding place and quietly looped the cord of the bell rope out of reach of a grasping hand. He then tied the scarf which he found on a chair about his head to keep his hair back. His first blow had glanced at the door, took him minutes to subdue Lady Mazel, though he succeeded in preventing an outcry.

After she was dead he found the key to the strong box, having learned where it was kept from the first maid, opened the chest, transferred the contents of a bag of gold to a canvas sack, locked the chest, replaced the key, threw off the scarf cap, tossed the knife in the grate and left the room through the antechambers. He locked both doors after him with the copper key for the purpose of postponing discovery of the crime. The inner door locked itself with the spring catch.

Making his way carefully downstairs he saw Le Brun fast asleep in a chair before the fire. Stealing along to his side he dropped the copper key in his side pocket and reached the street by the front door, leaving it open behind him. Before starting out he dropped the rope ladder, tied into a bundle, which had made and carried for use if he should be forced to escape through a window.

The bit of silk cravat was part of an article which had belonged to Le Brun, but which Berry had stolen. He was wearing the cravat at the time of the murder and his victim wrenched off the strip in resisting him. Le Brun's acute sensitiveness and his fear lest the crime be imputed to him had brought about the unfortunate mistake of manner which had counted against him at the opening of the case.

Col. Cruickshank On The Battle of Stoney Creek

To-morrow afternoon the County of Wentworth Veterans' Association will hold a decoration service at the soldiers' plot at Stoney Creek. The Veterans have a monument movement on foot and are meeting with success. Col. Cruickshank, commander of Military District No. 13, Calgary, Alta., has written a history of the battle expressly for the Association, and the Times herewith publishes it in full:

The Battle of Stoney Creek has been justly described as the turning point of the campaign of 1813 by an eminent military critic. Hitherto the course of events since the recommencement of hostilities had been decidedly discouraging to the small body of troops allotted for the defence of Upper Canada. The opening of navigation found the American squadron in uncontest control of Lake Ontario. The British vessels were separated, part being at York and the remainder at Kingston, and most of them unable to take the lake for want of seamanship. Accordingly, on the 27th of April, the capital of the Province was easily taken by the enemy, and a fine ship of war, then on the stocks, was destroyed, to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy. This was felt to be a severe loss as had this vessel been completed and added to the British squadron, it would have obtained command of the lake as soon as the season arrived from England. All communication between Kingston and the western part of the Province was cut off for nearly two weeks and the movement of reinforcements in that direction was effectually checked. Exactly a month later, General Vincent was driven from his position at Niagara, with comparatively severe loss of men and military stores. Both these reverses were however, solely due to an overwhelming superiority in numbers on the part of the invaders, and not to any lack of courage or discipline on the part of the troops by which they had been opposed. Vincent lost no time in withdrawing his garrisons from the numerous posts and batteries along the river, and began his retreat by the road along the crest of the mountain. The anxiety lest his adversary might disembark his troops, and cut his line of communications by taking possession of Burlington Heights before he could possibly arrive there by marching. This movement was in fact contemplated by the American commander, and would probably have been undertaken had he not received the intelligence that the British squadron had appeared on the lake and was menacing his own base at Sackett's Harbor. This at once put an end to the proposed movement by water against Burlington Heights, and caused some delay in beginning any pursuit by land. On the night of May 28th, Vincent halted at Forty Mile Creek (Grimiby), where he remained two days to rest his men and give his detachments time to rejoin with the enemy and gave him timely information of all their movements. On the last day of May, Vincent continued his retreat, and at nightfall took up a very strong position on Richard Beasley's farm at Burlington Heights, where he determined to make a stand. He received reinforcements and instructions to retire further. Flanked on one side by the lake, and on the other by a broad and impassable marsh, his encampment could only be approached by a narrow neck of land blocked by a fieldwork, behind which he established his main line of defence. It is important to bear in mind that he declared that "without a doubt he could neither retain possession of the peninsula nor make a safe exit from it." His last outpost, a party of thirty men, that had remained at Fort Erie until daybreak on the morning of the 28th, to keep up a cannonade and destroy the works, joined him during the night, and he had then at his command a very strong and efficient body of 1,800 officers and men, with eleven guns. A braver and better disciplined force of equal numbers could not have been assembled on the continent. Five companies of the 8th or King's Regiment, in spite of severe losses both at York and Fort George, still numbered 382 of all ranks. The wing of the 41st numbered 400, but was notably weak in officers, having only ten among its five companies, of whom but two were captains. The battalion of the 49th had already been reduced by casualties to 631 of all ranks, while the detachment of the Royal Artillery, consisting of four guns and sixty men, was much too weak to work their guns without the assistance of men from the infantry. The small detachment of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment and the Glengarry Light Infantry had behaved nobly, but had lost heavily in the recent action. The militia, including Captain Muncey's company of colored men, and Captain Merritt's troop of Provincial Light Dragoons numbered only 131, but these were men of approved loyalty and courage, and thoroughly acquainted with the country and its inhabitants. Vincent himself can scarcely be described as a brilliant soldier, but his military talents were respectable, and he was certainly endowed with energy, resolution and dauntless courage. These qualities had already so strongly impressed the Governor-General that he remarked that General Vincent had "displayed superior talents and ability and a determination worthy of a British soldier." He was then 48 years of age, and had been thirty years in the army. In his case promotion had been slow, and long service in the West Indies, followed by a year in a French prison, had seriously undermined his health. He had served in San Domingo, at the Hellder, and in Nelson's great battle at Copenhagen. Lieut-Col. John Harvey, deputy adjutant general, and chief staff officer to the division, although thirteen years younger than Vincent, had gained a still more varied experience of actual warfare. As an ensign in the 80th he had carried the colors of his regiment through the severe campaign of 1794 in Holland. Next year he took part in the ill-fated expedition to Isle Dien and Quiberon, and in 1796 served at the conquest of the Cape of Good Hope. During the three following years he saw some hard fighting in the interior of the Island of Ceylon, and shared in the glory of Abercrombie's Egyptian campaign. Returning to India, he was employed on the staff during the Mahabrat war of 1803-5, under Lord Lake, whose daughter he married. During the past three years he had been assistant adjutant general in the southern district of England. Arriving at Kellif, N. S., during the winter of 1812-13, when the St. Lawrence was blocked by ice, he promptly determined to undertake the trying journey overland on snowshoes to Quebec, rather than remain idle, and being immediately detailed for duty in Upper Canada on his arrival there, he proceeded to Niagara. Great confidence was justly placed in his ability and judgment. Lieut-Col. Cecil Bishopp, inspecting field officer of militia, was another officer of more than ordinary talent and promise. The only surviving son of Sir Cecil Bishopp, Bart., of Parham, in Sussex, he had entered the Guards at an early age, and had accompanied John Warren on his embassy to Russia as military attaché. On his return he went with his regiment to Spain, and served there during the entire campaign under Sir John Moore, ending with the memorable battle of Corunna. Subsequently he acted as a staff officer during the siege of Flushing. He was soon after elected a member of Parliament for the borough of Newport, on the Isle of Wight. In 1809 he volunteered for service in Portugal, where he acted as an aide de camp to Sir Arthur Wellesley until he obtained his majority. Upon the declaration of war by the United States he received his appointment and while commanding the 8th Regiment was distinguished by his conduct in the repulse of the American invasion near Fort Erie. Though heir to an ancient title and a very considerable fortune," said a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine, in recording his early death, "nothing could dampen his military ardor or lessen the zeal which ever stimulated him to the discharge of the duties of his profession. He was humane, generous, noble, and amiable, and his conduct in the field was of the highest order. He was a man of high character, and his death was a great loss to the country."

It is evident that he had for some time past been considering the expediency of an offensive movement, for on the 4th he had informed the adjutant general that "By a report just received from my outposts, an attack cannot be far distant. As circumstances are at present, I am inclined, if possible, to be beforehand with them."

Brigadier-General John Chandler, who commanded the American division lying at Stoney Creek, had commenced life as a blacksmith, "the poorest man in the settlement." He became a tavern keeper and soon grew wealthy. In 1805 he was elected a member of Congress from Massachusetts, and served two terms. He was a man of high character, and his services were rewarded by the first place in the militia of his own State, and on the increase of the regular army a brigadier-general in the service of the United States. He was then 53 years of age, and being without the least pretensions of military experience or knowledge, he was almost entirely ignorant of the art of war. His brother, biterly remarked, that "the march from the anvil and drum shop, in the wake of life, to the dearest actions of the tented field, is not to be achieved in a single campaign."

Brigadier-General Winder, who was next in rank, had been a successful lawyer in Baltimore. Once an active Federalist in politics, he had later changed sides, and his defection was rewarded by a commission as Lieut-Colonel of the 14th United States Infantry, then being recruited in Maryland. In November, 1812, he had directed the unsuccessful operations for the passage of the Niagara River near Fort Erie, with considerable credit to himself. During the winter he had been recalled to Washington to advise the Cabinet, and was believed to be intimately acquainted with the plan of campaign. "Col. Winder is here," says a contemporary writer, "A kind of Secretary of War, like Bonaparte, has a room full of maps, plans, etc., enveloped in which you can just see his little head, and of that little head much is expected." Later on his military aptitude and ability made such a strong impression on Harvey that he emphatically declared that "he possessed more talent than all the other officers of the army put together."

Chandler afterwards stated that he remarked to Winder that evening that "if the enemy intended to fight them, he would commence the attack before morning," and with this expectation arrangements were made. It was growing dark when the light troops were recalled. As none of his men had eaten during the march, they were then ordered to build fires and cook at some distance from the ground it was intended they should occupy during the night, the light infantry and 25th Regt. on a low meadow in front of the main road, and the remainder of the 13th and 14th Regiments of Infantry, and Archer's Artillery Company, with its guns, were detached under the command of Col. Christie to occupy a position for the defence of the lofts at the mouth of the creek, more than two miles distant."

It was nearly midnight when the main body of the division were ordered to bivouac, the men in front being directed to leave their fires burning, while those on the high ground were to be extinguished. The place selected for them to lie on was a level space of upland prairie, the crest of which ran a stout fence of logs and rails. On either side of this fence, a number of trees had been felled years before, but not cleared away, about which thorns and briars had grown up in such a way as to form dense thickets in many places. The low flat meadow below was spongy with long continued rain. On the left the mountain shut down so close upon the meadow as to render that flank quite secure, and the right was equally protected by a swamp which approached it in that quarter. Six field guns belonging to the companies of Toole's step boys and a number of them on the brow of the upland, to command the road leading towards Burlington. The 25th Regiment was posted on the right. The infantry in rear was ordered to move obliquely forward towards the road and fence, and in the event of an attack, the 25th was directed to form up immediately in rear of the guns, with the 16th, 5th and light troops on its left. The squadron of Dragoons was posted on the road behind the infantry. The 9th Infantry being the weakest regiment, were detailed as rear guard at a distance of about a mile. A strong main gun was established at a small church or meeting-house half a mile in advance, with an outlying picket on the right of the meadow near the edge of the swamp, and another on the left near the foot of the mountain. A chain of sentries was then posted around the whole camp. The soldiers were ordered to ground arms, take off their knapsacks and lie down as they stood in their ranks. The artillery horses remained in harness, near the guns. As the orders for these arrangements were issued after dark, it is probable that the two American generals had remained for consultation for several hours in Chandler's tent, which had been pitched close to Gage's house, and it was after 12 o'clock when the 25th Regiment moved into the position it was to occupy for the night. The men were noisy and wakeful. Stragglers returned to the kitchens for warmth, and the fires on

BROTHER TOLD BROTHER

One Suffered for Fifteen Years, the Other for Thirteen.

The convincing powers of a testimonial were never more clearly shown than in the case of Mr. Hugh Brown. A brother, Lemuel Brown, of Avondale, N. B., read in the paper about Hon. John Costigan being cured by "Fruit-a-tives." Knowing the Senator would only endorse a medicine which had cured him, Mr. Lemuel Brown tried "Fruit-a-tives." They cured him of Chronic Indigestion and Constipation, so he urged his brother to try them.

Harland, N. B., Oct., 28th, 1907.

"Three doctors told me that I had Liver Disease and serious Stomach Trouble. My stomach was very weak. I took their medicines for thirteen years and grew worse. My brother (who was cured of terrible Indigestion by 'Fruit-a-tives') after suffering for 15 years, recommended me to try these wonderful tablets. I bought half a dozen boxes and have just finished the sixth. I eat all kinds of hearty foods without distress and am greatly improved in every way. 'Fruit-a-tives' also cured the Chronic Constipation which was so distressing in my case."

the ridge so frequently blazed up, or were deliberately rekindled. The orders for their extinction were repeated. Shortly before midnight, the column detailed for the attack marched out of the lines at Burlington, seven miles distant. It consisted of 280 officers and men of the 8th Regiment, under Major Ogilvie, and 424 of the 49th, commanded by Major Plenierleath. Harvey conducted the march, and appears to have personally directed the operations, although he was accompanied by General Vincent with a number of volunteer staff officers, eager to share in the perils of the enterprise, among whom were Brigadier-General Glegg, Capt. P. L. Chambers, of the 41st, who had lately arrived from Detroit with despatches. Capt. McDonald and Willes, aides de camp to the Governor-General, recently come from Kingston on the same service, and Captain John Norton, the Indian Chief, Lieut-Col. Bishopp was in command of the post. Capt. McDonald had brought with him secret instructions in the event of a further retreat, and a letter from the Governor-General which informed Vincent that reinforcements were pressing forward and urged him to leave nothing untried before he determined to abandon the part of the Province entrusted to his command. The weather was as propitious for the undertaking as could have been wished. A cloudy sky and a light mist rising from the wet ground made the darkness almost impalpable. Although the muffling of their movements, it also effectually muffled the drums and the footsteps. The light companies of the two regiments respectively commanded by Captain Munday, of the 8th, and Lieut. Danford, of the 49th, led the way, followed by the remainder of the 49th, in the centre, and the 8th in rear. It was nearly three o'clock when they reached the American outpost. The sentry on the road being drowsy and quite ignorant of his duty, was taken prisoner without noise, and readily made known the counter-guards, and gave his captors every information in his power. It was learned from him that the main guard was posted in the church, which was at once surrounded, and the officer in command, Capt. VanVechten, of the 25th U. S. I., surrendered without resistance. Six field guns and bayoneted rifles were approached and secured in the quietest manner, but at length one of them took the alarm, and fired a shot. The eager light companies at once rushed forward upon the smouldering camp fires in the meadow in the expectation of finding them surrounded by sleeping enemies, but to their great astonishment, found them nearly deserted. Officers and men gave up the tremendous shout, which was repeated and prolonged by the troops in rear, and halting within their glare, they hurriedly began to fix flints. The groans of wounded men and the tramp of the advancing column alarmed other sentry arms in the darkness and took to flight. In an instant the whole camp was in an uproar. General Chandler, who had not gone to sleep, instantly mounted his horse and ordered the troops near his tent to form for action, which was accomplished in a moment, as they had merely to rise to their feet and seize their rifles. He then despatched an officer to direct General Winder to advance to the fence near the crest of the ridge with the infantry on the left. From this position the British column could be distinctly seen by the light of the fires beneath, in the act of deployment to the left, while the American line was quite invisible to them. Both officers and men were still shouting wildly and there was great confusion. The American light infantry and the 5th and 25th regiments opened fire, followed by their artillery. The 49th suffered heavily and the disorder was much increased. Observing their exposed situation they hastily retired from the light of the fires, and for a few minutes this regular movement seemed on the point of suspension. At this critical moment Major Plenierleath, aided by Assistant Sargent-Major Alexander Fraser, hastily rallied twenty or thirty men, and led them straight at the guns, whose position had been disclosed by a vivid sheet of flame. Two nearest boxes of artillery, horses and men were still in possession. The ammunition wagons in their possession. In this hand-to-hand conflict in the dark it is officially recorded that Alexander Fraser killed or wounded seven of the enemy with his bayonet, while his younger brother, a lad only seventeen years of age, bayoneted four others. Plenierleath's timely charge was decisive. Capt. Fitzgibbon, of the 49th, had succeeded in keeping his company together; the others soon rallied and advanced to his support. The enemy's line was cut in two and four of their guns taken. Major Ogilvie led the 8th against the 5th and 16th United States infantry on the extreme left of their position. Lieut. Hooker, commanding one of the companies, was killed in this charge, and Capt. Munday received three wounds, but the ridge was carried; the 16th regiment was entirely dispersed, leaving its two senior captains as prisoners, and the 5th fell back upon the cavalry. Meanwhile General Chandler, while riding to the right, had his horse shot and was badly stunned and bruised by the fall. Returning on foot towards his artillery, he noticed had ceased firing, he walked into the midst of the 49th. Discovering his error, he attempted to combat himself with the cavalry carriage, but it was at once dragged out and disabled. A few minutes later General Winder was also dismounted, and, encountering Sergeant Fraser, was in the act of aiming his pistol, when the latter menaced him with instant death at the point of his bayonet. He threw down his pistol and surrendered. Major Vandewater, the assistant quartermaster-general, was likewise taken.

The American troops seem to have made several credible attempts to rally, but whenever a body of them could be seen, it was instantly charged, and again scattered. Some of their Dragoon-mounted their horses, and attempted a charge, which ended in riding down some of their own infantry. Desultory fighting continued in various quarters until break of day, when Harvey found himself in possession of the field of battle, and the enemy bivouac, it is true, but ascertaining that his own small force was much diminished and scattered. Officers had separated from their commands in the dark, and wandered about blindly in search of them. Companies had parted from their battalions and sections from their companies, General Vincent had disappeared, and was believed to have been killed or captured. Many men and a large proportion of the officers had been disabled or were suffering from wounds. Major Plenierleath's horse had been shot, and in attempting to extricate himself from the body of the struggling animal, he grabbed the arm of a man, who proved to be an American soldier, but surrendered at once. Major Dennis received two gunshot wounds, and was badly bruised by the fall of his horse, which was killed beneath him. Ensign Drury, who bore the King's colors of the 49th, was mortally wounded, but struggled forward until he was enabled to commit it to the keeping of another officer. The green field of the regimental color or had already been stained with the blood of its bearer during the campaign in Holland, and there was a tradition in the corps that the officer who carried it was destined to fall. Brevet Major Clerk, Captain Manners and Adjutant Stoughton, Capt. M. J. Ogilvie, Captains Munday and Goldrick, Lieut. Boyd and Veyland, of the 8th, and Fort-Major Taylor, of the 41st, were numbered among the wounded. Two hundred and thirteen killed, wounded or missing out of a total force of seven hundred and four of all ranks, was a heavy price to pay for success. A strong escort had been sent off with the prisoners, and less than five hundred men remained available. Many wounded required attendance, and the weakness of his force would soon be fully revealed to the enemy, who seemed to be collecting in force to renew the contest. They still possessed several field guns and their cavalry and three of their infantry regiments had taken little or no part in the action. Harvey prudently determined to retreat before they could recover from their confusion. Most of the wounded were collected and removed, but upwards of fifty wounded officers and men were so badly injured that they were left behind. Two of the captured guns, after being dragged some distance, with ropes, were abandoned, but a brass howitzer, with its tumbrel, and one iron six-pounder, were brought off, with nine captured horses. The prisoners numbered one hundred and twenty-five, including nine officers. Many others had been taken, but escaped in the confusion and darkness. The loss of the Americans in killed and wounded has never been exactly ascertained, as their own accounts differ widely, one stating it as low as thirty, and another as high as three hundred. The command developed upon Colonel Bull and U. S. Dragoons, who were apparently quite unprepared to assume the responsibility thus suddenly thrown upon him. Chrysties' detachment from the mouth of the creek arrived on the field soon after daybreak, and the camp was re-occupied. Barr sent a message to Niagara, with information of the capture of the two generals, and convened a council of war, which soon determined to retire to the Forty Mile Creek, without waiting for further instructions. A quantity of baggage and provisions was hastily destroyed, and the movement began before noon.

On the other hand, General Vincent's mysterious disappearance caused considerable dismay in the British camp. The command devolved upon Colonel Bishopp, to whom Captain McDonald communicated the Governor-General's private instructions, authorizing a further retreat. If the position was considered untenable. As the full effect of the blow was still unknown, Bishopp likewise resolved to call a council of war, to decide what ought to be done, and sent Captain Merritt in search for the missing general. Merritt rode close up to the enemy's lines and made two prisoners, single handed. On his return he reported that they were panic-stricken and preparing to retreat. Before the council of war assembled Vincent came in alone, bare-headed and on foot. Having been dismounted and separated from his staff, he was forced to seek shelter in the woods, where he had remained until daylight, without being able to rejoin his troops. The flood of the retreat lay at once put aside, and a strong detachment was pushed forward to Stoney Creek, to observe and harass the enemy.
