You Must Have

A LEADER

In these days of sharp competition in the Soap business it is more important than ever that you should make a leader of "Perfection."

Those merchants who are now doing so are establish-

WEDDED AT LAST.

CHAPTER L. "And they will not accept ball!" "No. We offered any sureties they liked to ask; but they were refused."

It was Daunt, who going to the cottage that night, and finding what had happened, had brought the tidings to the Hall, where they were received with a burst of horrified pain and almost incredulity.

Major Stuart had told Sir Frederic and his wife the story of the woman who had lived among them for the last six months as Mrs. Grant, and all their sympathies had been aroused for poor Shirley in her anguish.

"But how did they discover him?" Sir Oswald said presently—he had come from Fairholme, traveling night and day to be with his cousin in her distress.

Radway's Ready Relief. Mrs. J. Westwood of Boston, N. J., writes: "I have a large family of small children, and it has saved me many a doctor's bill."

CURES SORE THROAT. Apply the Relief to the throat and chest until the surface smart and reddens. Give Radway's Pills in each dose as will relieve more the bowels.

Indigestion Ended, Stomach Feels Fine

Time "Pape's Diapepsin!" In five minutes all Soreness, Gas, Heartburn and Dyspepsia is gone.

Sour, gassy, upset stomach, indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia; when the food you eat ferments into gases and stubborn lumps; your head aches and you feel sick and miserable, that's when you realize the magic in Pape's Diapepsin.

If your stomach is in a continuous revolt—if you can't get it regulated, please, for your sake, try Pape's Diapepsin. It's so needless to have a bad stomach—make your next meal a favorite food meal, then take a little Diapepsin.

Get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. It is the quickest, surest stomach relief and cure known.

"Your sister's lawyer," Guy answered, with some reluctance.

"Ah, I thought so!" exclaimed the baronet, a flush of pain rising in his dark cheek.

"Indirectly; and, of course, she thought she was hunting that poor wretch who—"

"Even then," said the other quickly, "such persistent vengeance is unwomanly to a degree!"

"No one will regret Glynn's arrest more than Lady Eastwell," said Guy gently.

"You must not feel anger against her, Fairholme; she has been terribly deceived."

"It has been a horrible business from beginning to end—and we are not at the end yet," Oswald rejoined wearily, as he threw himself into a chair.

"I think it has almost killed her," as the steady answer.

"And no wonder! The thought of it is terrible! What must the reality have been? Guy, I cannot tell you how deeply I feel all this; and the orst is that one feels so powerless to do anything to help any of you."

"Everyone is powerless," Stuart said sadly. "And there are nine long weeks before March, Oswald."

"Nine weeks—yes; but—"

The baronet broke off suddenly, and their eyes met—the same thought was in the mind of each, but neither gave it utterance.

"Heaven may be merciful," Oswald said unsteadily then—"merciful to them both. She can hardly bear much more."

"I think Heaven will be merciful," Guy answered, in a low tone of pain; and there was a short silence.

"You found him worse, Stuart?" "Not suffering more, but weaker, and so anxious about Shirley that his anxiety was doing him serious injury."

"Will she be equal to it?" "Yes. She is anxious to see him. Oswald, I think, had it not been for his, they might have been happy together at last. I think she might in the time to come have grown to love him."

"Through her great pity?" "Oswald shook his head; and Guy went on eagerly.

"You know that pity is akin to love," he said earnestly; "and she pities him so truly, poor child! Heaven help her and give her strength for what she has to bear yet!"

And indeed, if ever a poor weak woman needed strength, Shirley did then. She had struggled bravely against her terror and misery at Sir Hugh's arrest, she had let him go with dry tearless eyes that had a look in them which hurt him more than any tears could have done; but, as soon as all necessity for bearing up was over and her eyes could no longer rest on the haggard face, she had broken down completely, and for three days she had lain in a semi-stupor of weakness and exhaustion.

At the Hall, Lady Oliphant and Madge had been her constant attendants, although at first poor Madge had been so broken-hearted at the sad story she had heard and the misery in Jack's blue eyes that she had been fit for little; but, when she saw how much her sorrow added to Jack's distress, she made a brave stand against it; and Madge's face, tender and anxious, but smiling, was almost the first thing Shirley's weary eyes rested upon when she awoke from the exhausted slumber into which she had fallen, and Madge's presence was a great comfort to her in the dark days which lasted.

Shirley's meeting with her brother was a terribly trying one. By Mr. Litton's advice, he had not been allowed to see her until the first shock of Sir Hugh's arrest had passed; but when the young surgeon—who was indeed a friend in this season of distress—had given permission for them to meet, Jack's anguish at the change in her was so intense that he broke down and cried like a child upon her breast, so that it was Shirley who was the comforter then.

But even his love for Madge Oliphant, and his engagement to her, to which Sir Frederic and Lady Oliphant had given a cordial assent, could give poor Jack little consolation in those days. In after years, looking back at them, he felt that but for Madge's love, and her tender sympathy, his reason would have failed him at the thought that this greatest misery was also to be laid at his door, while the girl herself felt, that what every true woman feels, that, if love brings joy in his train, he also brings much anxiety and sorrow, and that the deeper the love, the greater the anxiety.

While Guy Stuart and Sir Oswald were at Adinbrooke, Lady Oliphant and Shirley and Madge were together in one of the pretty luxurious sitting-rooms at the Hall, waiting with what patience they might for the return of the two men, who had gone over in the morning to Adinbrooke for the magisterial enquiry.

It had been a long day to all three, longer, far longer, to them, waiting in the quiet house, with every luxury around them, than to those who were going through the pain and excitement of the proceedings at Adinbrooke and listening to the inquiry taking place there. It was not a long one; there were no witnesses against Hugh; the deed he had committed among the rocks at Easton had had no human witness. But there were certain formalities, questions of identity, et cetera, to be gone through, and the magistrate was inclined to be dilatory. Even when it was over, and Hugh had been taken back to prison Sir Frederic had waited, in the hope that ball would have been accepted; and Guy had received permission to exchange a few words with the prisoner, whom he found perfectly calm about himself, but dreadfully anxious about Shirley.

Thus it happened that the shades of evening were drawing over the little county town as Guy and Oswald started homeward; and Madge, who had been sitting waiting for them on the terrace, turned away with a little sigh, and went back into the fruit room, where Shirley and her mother were seated.

"Tired, Madge?" said Shirley's low sweet voice, as she looked up from her sofa and held out her hand to the young girl as she entered.

"No—oh, no!" Madge answered, forcing a smile and kneeling down on the rug before the fire, to which the sofa was drawn up. "But—it has been a long day, Shirley."

"Yes, dear," Shirley replied, gently, with a little tremor in the voice she tried to render firm. "And I am sure it has been a very long day to Jack, too."

She smiled a little as she saw how the pretty color rose in the girl's fair face; and Madge lowered her hot cheek and rested it against the gentle hand which held hers, and they were silent for a space, while Lady Oliphant went on busily with her creel-work by the little table, on which a reading lamp was burning, and tried to seem quite calm and at her ease, and to ignore the quick throbbings of her heart at the thought of the sorrowful tidings Sir Frederic might have in store for Shirley, who had not doubted for a moment but that ball would be accepted.

The pretty room was very still, and the freight fell upon the two girls—Shirley was little more—as they sat there, with their hands clasped, and Madge's golden head resting against the cushions on which Shirley leaned.

They made a pretty picture in their attitudes of unconscious grace, and with the great sadness on each face—a sadness so much the greater on Shirley's. Madge wore a soft clinging dress of some rich dark blue material, and the fire gleamed ruddily on the silver necklace and waistband that she wore, while Shirley's dress of black velvet was merely relieved at the throat by a profusion of black Spanish lace fastened by a gold brooch—for Mrs. Grant, the village school-mistress, with her simple homely attire, had disappeared, and Lady Glynn had come back in her stead.

What We Don't Know.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"It seems so hypocritical to me. She can't really grieve for him, so why should she pretend to. She surely knows that we know what a relief it must be to her."
"She is a widow who has recently lost her husband. We know that in his lifetime he drank and gambled to excess; that the marriage into which 'she' had entered so happily and hopefully had proved her martyrdom. And now that he is gone, has not her martyrdom ended? Why should she 'grieve'? We did not consider that she should. As the person already quoted said, we felt it ought to be a 'relief.'"
"In one way it probably was. And yet, what could we really know about the matter. We had seen the man from one angle. We knew his vices; they had been so well advertised by his own indiscretions, that when we thought of him we thought, simultaneously of 'confirmed drunkard and gambler.'"
I wonder now if there was not something more to him than his vices.

Something sweeter, kinder, wholesomer, that his widow alone ever saw, rare flashes that revealed not perhaps, the man he was, but the man he might have been. Some of these winning qualities that even the worst of us have; such virtues as those that endear the scapegrace son to the mother who alone refuses to wholly condemn.
Is it not true that we are apt to pick out a vice here and a virtue there, string them together and say, "there stands the man!"? Are we not inclined to judge a man as a part—the part we know, rather than as a whole, formed of many virtues, many graces and even many vices, most of them beyond our ken?
I for one am not willing to believe that "she" is insincere. I know there must have been moments when he wrung her soul; I know that he gradually estranged her from her family and her friends, but what I do not know is what she knows—the kind of man he was.
You may condemn or praise what you know about a man, but you cannot justly condemn or praise the man himself definitely and finally until the evidence is all in—until you know him as, for instance, as you know yourself. Or should I say, better?

Robber Apologizes

Turns Tables on His Captors, and Leaves Auto Driver Fast Bound With a Policeman—Cool Englishman Escapes From New Jersey Officer.

New York, Feb. 22.—After leaving his employers, Mr. and Mrs. G. Edward Escher, of Summit, N. J., at a friend's home in Short Hills, N. J., Russell Bland, a colored chauffeur, started to make the return trip to Summit at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night. On the outskirts of Summit he was stopped by policemen William H. George and John G. Gannon, both in plain clothes.
"This man," they said, pointing to a tall, smooth-shaven and jaunty chap in a gray cap, a dark English slip-on coat puttees and patent leather shoes who stood near a suit case smoking a cigarette, "says he's a butler for a family in Short Hills. We think he may be the crook who pulled off the $20,000 robbery in Newark to-day. We want you to drive us to Short Hills and give him a chance to prove his story."
The tall chap yawned, tossed away his cigarette and said with a pronounced English accent:
"My word, but you're persistent beggars; wait a bit, can't you? I'll open the 'bally suit case and show you just what I am."
With the words he snapped the case open and fumbled around in it a moment. When he straightened up he held a big automatic pistol in his right hand. This he pointed at policeman and chauffeur.
"Now," he said, "you forced this little inconvenience on yourselves, but no matter how much you have annoyed me, I would hate to have to blow your heads off. Stick your hands up!"
Three pairs of hands shot into the air.
"You," the tall man continued, indicating Gannon with the muzzle of his weapon, "can go, but your friend here must take a little ride with me. Climb in!" he ordered, turning to George.
George scrambled into the tonneau, where his captor ordered him to sit in one of the bucket seats. The Englishman hopped into the rear seat and sat down on the back of it, his feet on the seat cushions. After lighting another cigarette he waved his pistol carelessly at Bland.
"I am sorry, old chaps, but I feel I must wait here about half an hour. By then you should be frozen sufficiently solid so that you can't get loose in time to annoy me. Meantime I hope my conversation doesn't bore you."
At the end of the half hour, during which time he smoked and talked incessantly, the Englishman picked up his suit case and said, "So long." That's the last that's been seen of him.
"I took policeman George and Bland almost an hour to release themselves, and it was 12:30 o'clock this morning when they staggered, numb with the cold, into a neighboring farmhouse. There they were picked up by one of two shift automobiles that had been chartered by the police and which had been cruising about Summit in a vain hunt from the moment that policeman Gannon gave the alarm.
The two automobiles, loaded with armed reserves, did not relinquish the Plugged M.P.'s.

Whips' New Device in the Commons—Spies at Every Door.

Turning up his coat collar to hide his face and glancing furtively to right and left, a Liberal M.P. left the District Railway Station recently and walked by the underground passage into Palace yard. There he paused in the shadows to reconnoitre. Two policemen paced slowly to and fro; an innocent-looking stranger stood by one of the arches absorbed apparently in watching the pigeons flying round; two taxicab drivers lounged by their cabs.
Hurrying on and keeping close to the wall, he turned in by a little used door, walked with silent footsteps through several underground passages, and so at last emerged in the central lobby with a sly air of triumph. There he met a Liberal Whip and the following conversation took place:
Liberal M.P.—Ha, ha. I beat you that time. You didn't know I was in did you?
Liberal Whip.—Oh, yes, we did. Your plug is out.
Collapse of the M.P.
The conversation requires explanation.
In the passage leading to the Liberal Whips' room there has appeared this session a new and fearful instrument. Written on a long board is the name of every member of the House, and by each name is a small plug. When the owner of the name is away from Westminster his plug is pushed right into its hole. When he is on the premises it is pulled out to a length of about an inch.
Coalition plugs are one color; Unionist plugs are another. A glance at the board, therefore, shows the Whips the state of parties in the House. If the number of Coalition plugs out exceeds the total of Coalition plugs out and a division is feared some loquacious henchman like Mr. Handel Booth will be given the order to make a speech until the danger is over.
This is part of the Liberal system to overcome their terror of snap divisions. Another feature of the system, as the freedom-loving M.P. has discovered to his cost, consists in the placing of spies at all the entrances to the House. Every door is now watched by the emissaries of the Liberal Whips, who send frequent reports to the man in charge of the plug machine. The Liberal M.P. is now wondering whether it was the innocent stranger or the taxicab driver who reported his arrival.
Only two routes are now open and unobserved. One is by the River Thames to the terrace; the other is by scullery. Soon perhaps the Government will have a spy in a cap, the balloon above the House, and then at last they will begin to feel secure.—Daily Mail.

THE EASTERN TRUST COMPANY.

The business of the The Eastern Trust Company is to administer Trusts. In this work it specializes, and it does no other. But no kind of trust is foreign to its scope or beyond its power to administer efficiently.

The Eastern Trust Company never speculates. It invests. It depends for its prosperity upon the efficiency of its management of its clients' business and upon the security of its investments.

The Eastern Trust Company executes the office of executor or administrator with unexampled efficiency, and its usefulness in this field is becoming rapidly more availed of.

For instance:—In St. John, New Brunswick, where it has quite lately established a branch, the estate of James Ready, of Fairville, which has been sworn to under $651,300.00, is being administered by The Eastern Trust Company as one of the joint executors of Mr. Ready's will.

In Halifax, Nova Scotia, again, The Eastern Trust Company has just been chosen to administer the estate of Captain William Fleming, which is valued at more than half a million dollars.

The Company now administers many estates, which in value amount to several millions of dollars. Particulars will appear in later advertisements.

The Eastern Trust Company can execute this function of executor or administrator as efficiently in Newfoundland as it can in Nova Scotia, Quebec, or New Brunswick.

The Eastern Trust Company requires commodious offices on Water Street. Apply to

A Word for Mr. Jones.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Would you permit me a short space in the columns of your widely circulated paper to say a word in praise of Mr. Jones, the genial Superintendent of the King George Institute. He is a thorough gentleman, and since he came to this country and assumed charge of the Institute, he has left no stone unturned to try and make the lot of the fishermen who visit St. John's each spring and fall happy, in every manner possible. He has been engaged nightly for the past week exhibiting moving pictures, and getting up side shows, and on Sunday nights he holds religious services. Last night I attended one of these services, in which pictures illustrating the Life of Christ were exhibited. A large gathering of sealers were at the meeting and as each picture was shown, it was described by Mr. Jones in his own inimitable style. The happy looking faces of the sealers, and the general order which prevailed reminded me of the following lines in Burns' "Cotter's Saturday Night":
"Compared with this how poor religion's pride,
In all the pompous of method and of art;
When men display to congregations wide
Devotion's every grace, except the heart."
The Institute, I take it, Sir, is supplying a long felt want in this community, and I hope that it may prosper even far greater in the future, and that Mr. Jones may live long to preside over it. I remain,
Yours faithfully,
JAMES MURPHY.

PARTISAN REPORTS.

MR. DUNFIELD'S REPUDIATION.

We are glad to learn that the Supervisor of Debates, Mr. Dunfield, did not furnish to the outport press those portions of the Synopsis of Proceedings of the House of Assembly to which exception was taken on Friday night by Mr. Kent. There is no question of the fact that partisan reports have been published in place of the synopsis supplied by Mr. Dunfield, and it is the duty of the latter, and of the Internal Economy Committee to investigate and find out why partisan reports have been published at times instead of the reports supplied by Mr. Dunfield. The Daily News expresses the opinion that an apology is due to Mr. Dunfield. We agree that an apology is due from the editor of those papers who have made the substitution and thereby represented as Mr. Dunfield's report, what is not his report. Apologies are also due to the members of the House who have had their speeches reported in an objectionable and partisan way.

For instance we find in the Twillingate Sun of the 25th ult., which came to our hands to-day such sentences as these:—

"Mr. Coaker After tea he evidently became carried away with the exuberance of his own verbosity."

"The Prime Minister,—He referred to the abuse that had been heaped on the defeated Ministers, and held that this was one of Sir Robert Bond's reasons for severing his connection with the Opposition. This statement was repudiated by members of the Opposition, whereupon the Premier replied by quoting Sir Robert Bond's letter to Mr. Clift to prove his point. This the Opposition refused to accept."

and called for the whole letter, which was their undoing, for they had to put up with the mortifying experience of listening to Sir Robert's scathing words, as the Clerk read the letter to the House."

"Mr. Kent made the usual observations, dealing with the increases. . . . He also made his usual plea for the firemen and policemen."

As these reports have been repudiated by the Supervisor, and as they are not the reports he furnished, we would like to know if the Internal Economy Committee of the House propose to pay for the unofficial partisan reports which have been substituted for the official report supplied by Mr. Dunfield.

Star Society Activities.

By reference to our advertisement, it will be seen that the Star of the Sea Association has arranged for a lecture to its members on Thursday night, by Mons. Roche. The subject announced is: "A great Statesman of the last century." We understand that the Rev. gentleman will touch on the principal events in the life of one of England's most successful statesmen of a few decades ago, and will show the direct relationship existing between that and a very important measure now before the public mind of both the Old and the New World. The Association is fortunate in securing such a talented lecturer as Mons. Roche, and Chairman Lacey and his energetic committee are to be congratulated on their very successful efforts in promoting these lecture series for the benefit of the members. A card tournament will be run off to-night under the management of the same committee and no doubt will be just as successful as the seven others that have preceded it.

"Every Cent Well Spent."

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Every dollar and every cent, spent by the Government has been well spent.—Sir Edward Morris.

Let us see in how far that statement can bear the light of investigation. We will leave out of sight all the lesser expenditures, and those no doubt can bear the light of scrutiny in the same degree as the Agricultural expenditure which we are about to consider. The Railway policy and the Agricultural policy are the two leading features of the Morris plan. Both have been the cause of the most unwise and unwarranted expenditure of public money, so unwise and unwarranted, as to amount to nothing less than a scandal; $300,000 have been expended by the Morris Government on their Agricultural policy. Much of that money went in salaries, exhibitions and other fruitless ways. It is conceded that the carrying out of a policy, such as this Agricultural policy, demands the services of some officials, we have no fault to find with that. But what galls is the fact that those expenses were incurred in the furtherance of a scheme that is worthless. However well intentioned and industrious the workers may be, if they be engaged in the carrying out of a worthless and wasteful undertaking, the salaries given them represents so much money wasted. Let us consider the work in which commissioners, secretaries and others were engaged. Before proceeding to that, let us fix in our minds the fact that very few men living on the land in this country are acquainted with even the rudiments of Agricultural science. Bearing that in mind it is quite an easy matter to see what lasting good can come of giving such men either improved seeds or improved stock. I say, last year, for instance you give a man a pure bred sheep, his flock has been improved so much. So much is granted, but you are aiming at permanent good. How long do you suppose, that man will keep up the strain in his flock, when he knows nothing of sheep raising, when he pays no attention to pasture, forage, feeding and care. I may be a little tedious, Mr. Editor, but as this point must be made clear, I crave your indulgence. Now I lived many years among the farmers of the Codroy Valley, and I say this without fear of contradiction that not one farmer there ever thinks of forage or any food for his sheep beyond that obtainable by grazing in a worn-out pasture, in the woodland or on the public highway. Of course in winter his sheep get hay, generally of poor quality, and nothing else. What applies to sheep applies also to cows, hogs and horses, but some horses get some oats, some times. Now I want to ask, has the money expended in buying sheep for such men been well spent? I doubt if Mr. Downey can tell us, if even the sheep were well bought or selected, but that is another question. What has been pointed out in relation to sheep applies also, and with the same force to all other branches of husbandry.

You give a farmer good seed, it does not follow therefore that he will have good crops, for if he is ignorant of or indifferent to proper modes of cultivation the seed is almost worthless. On the other hand it is wrong to infer that costly seed is always the best, for what is good seed in one country may be very poor seed in another. Now last year the Government had imported seed potatoes which the majority of farmers, I believe, pronounced as very inferior to the kind they had already possessed. Whether it was or whether it was not, the fact remains, that at Little River and Doyle's Station many barrels were left to rot. In September last year, I helped remove some of them, that were given to a friend to be used as pig feed. Was the money spent in the purchase of those potatoes well spent?

The Government boasts of the establishment of so many Agricultural Societies, of what good are they when they act mainly as so much machinery for the carrying out of a worthless and utterly senseless policy. For multiply ignorance as much and as often as you may, the answer will always be—more ignorance. If the individuals who make up a society know nothing individually, can the society know more. Plainly, what is needed is education, and as a means to that we want an Experimental Farm. The farmer wants help, he cannot undertake systematic experimenting for himself, therefore the Government should do it for him. He needs to be taught the proper system in the feeding, housing and general care of cattle. And to do that we should teach him how to raise the proper food for them. He should be taught to provide forage, fodder and other forms of feed for his stock. He should be taught the proper methods of cultivation and what crops are best for him to raise. Canada is spending $1,000,000 a year for ten years to educate her farmers, for she knows right well the value of knowledge. She knows that when a man is educated in the science of his calling, he is going to make the best possible use of other aids that may be given him. As an illustration of what education can do let me point out, that in the older provinces of Canada, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, from 1901 to 1911 the number of milk cows has decreased by 63,026, whilst the product had not diminished. That shows that a proper care is had as to culling out and feeding. The average yield of milk per cow in 1901 was 2,850, and in 1911 it was 3,805 lbs.

I have been unable to obtain any report from our Agricultural Societies this year, but I venture to say it is a blank as far as showing any advancement in Agriculture goes. As soon as I can get that report, that is providing it ever sees the light, I intend to take this subject up again, just to see if the money has been well spent.

Yours,

Yesterday's Ordination Service At St. Mary's Church.

Mr. W. E. Cracknell, of Queen's College, and formerly of Birmingham, England, was ordained Deacon by His Lordship Bishop Jones, at St. Mary's Church at 11 a.m. yesterday.

The candidate was presented by Rev. Canon Bolt, and interrogated by His Lordship the Bishop, following which were the usual ceremonies which were very impressive.

Rev. C. Jeffrey of Pouch Cove, was the preacher and delivered an eloquent discourse from the text, "Not to destroy, but to fulfill."

There was a large congregation present at the service.

REPORTED BY WIRELESS.—The Furness liner Kanawha, bound here from London reported by wireless to the Agents on Saturday. At 10 a.m. she was two hundred miles east of St. John's. She had not put in an appearance this morning and is evidently detained by ice.

Newest Models.

For Spring 1914

Advance Showing of the NEW SPRING HATS Ready-to-Wear.

We have just opened a shipment of beautiful Ready-to-Wear Hats. These are Travellers Samples secured by our European buyers at great price advantages.

The collection as a whole shows a distinctive beauty and originality that will not fail to delight the most discriminating taste.

The styles that are to be worn during the coming Spring and Summer are nearly all represented here—all are picturesque but sensible.

Here To-day and Gone To-morrow.

That will probably be the story of these stylish Hats as they are marked extremely low—many of them actually at less than half their real value.

Special to the Evening Telegram.
LONDON, March 8.
Inquiries made by the Standard's correspondent in commercial circles, indicates some intention on the part of British merchants and shippers to use the Panama Canal route only when absolutely necessary, in case President Wilson's appeal is not acted upon.

WASHINGTON, March 8.
After conferring with his colleagues in the House of Representatives, Michael Donohue, of Philadelphia, who was born in Ireland, today called the following message to John Redmond, the Nationalist leader: "I find an overwhelming sentiment among Congressmen for the Home Rule Bill, believing it will settle old differences, and work to the advantage of Ireland and the Empire."

MEXICO CITY, March 8.
President Huerta received a message to-day from the United States government in which he was asked whether or not he would accept the combined mediation of Brazil, Argentina and Chile to settle the Mexican problems. He replied by declaring that this mediation would under no condition be emphatic, in view of the fact that relations with the countries named are not of a cordial character.

LONDON, March 8.
Much appreciation is expressed in sporting circles over the interest evinced by King George in boxing. As Colonel of the Second Life Guards, His Majesty will dine with the officers at Regent's Park barracks on March 10th. Later he will witness a great contest between champions of the various sports. It is expected that Bombardier Wells will be engaged in a three-round match with Chandler, England's amateur champion of 1912. Pat O'Keefe, present middleweight champion, will also engage Bradley, the amateur middleweight. The King's attendance at the recent football and baseball games cannot fail to bring him into close touch with his people.

Sealing Notes.

The S. S. Newfoundland sailed last night for Westville. Capt. W. Keen went in charge, though it was expected he would have to take command of the Bellaventure owing to the illness of Capt. Randell, but the latter is now sufficiently recovered to go to the icefields.

The Eagle and Fogota sailed this morning for Westville, the latter to sign on the balance of her crew. They will clear from that port for the front.

Dr. Bunting is coming on the Morwenna due to-day from New York. He will go to the ice as physician in the Nascopee.

Messrs. Serrick and Barrett, of Bay Roberts, will go as Marconi operators on the Bellaventure and Bonaventure.

The Adventure is signing her crew to-day.

The Diana sails this afternoon for Westville.

A large contingent of sealers came to the city by train yesterday.

Curlers Hold Smoking Concert.

An impromptu, yet most enjoyable smoking concert was held at the Curling Rink on Saturday night, a large gathering of curlers attending. Mr. H. D. Carter, President, occupied the chair and the following programme was carried out:—

F. V. Chesman, Selection; John Cornick, song; R. Henderson, song, "Rule Britannia"; T. O'Neil, recitation; W. Cornick, song; J. A. Young, song; W. J. Higgins, recitation; Alex. Bryden, "Casey at the Bat"; W. Cornick and J. C. Hepburn, duet; Mr. Halley, song; Mr. Haley, recitation; Mr. A. Joy, song, "The Sands of the Desert."

At the close a vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. J. R. Bennett. The concert was the first of its kind held by the curlers but before the season closes another such affair will be held.

The rendition of Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem brought to most enjoyable time to a close.

Battered Steamer

Visited by Hundreds.
The S. S. Riverdale which put here short of coal and in such a battered condition as the result of the violent storms that swept the Atlantic recently, berthed at the dry dock Saturday and yesterday, was the centre of attraction being visited by hundreds of citizens. The ship extensively damaged but her injuries are above the water line consequently she will not have to be dry docked but repairs will be effected while the ship is lying at the R. N. Co's pier.

Fads and Fashions.

Coat suits have wide ruffles of tulle. Jet earrings continue in great favour. Metal laces are a feature of the new gowns.

Dull black pearl seal is in demand for handbags.

The tunic idea is carried out in separate skirts.

Elbow sleeves are frequently frilled with lace.

The new blouses are made of woven and plaited skirts.

Narrow gold belts appear on the new pinner gowns.

Even fichus are edged with tiny box-pleated frillings.

Long gold tassels finish the pointed backs of ruffled wraps.

The most charming foot ruffles are seen on taffeta gowns.

Some of the new flowered crepe dresses have coatee fronts.

Some of the newest handbags are made of brown antelope skin.

Pleated skirts are seen below the low set belts of the new coats.

Collars on some of the new suits are made of wide fancy braid.

Striped and plaid linings are as much seen as flowered linings.

An elaborate new nightgown is of striped nainsook and has lapels.

White chiffon collars beaded in vivid colors are a delightful touch.

A curious new sleeve is like a wrap of net bordered with taffeta.

Gumpies can now be bought ready made with vests of crepe de chine.

The new blouses are made of woven wire, with a lingerie cover.

Had a Stroke of Paralysis

And Found a Cure in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is always better to prevent serious diseases of the nerves. There are many warnings, such as sleeplessness, irritability, headaches and nervous indigestion.

Frostration, paralysis and locomotor ataxia only come when the nervous system is greatly exhausted. Even though your ailment may not yet be very serious, there is a great satisfaction in knowing that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will cure paralysis in its earlier stages.

Mrs. R. Bright, 215 Booth avenue, Toronto, writes: "Two years ago my husband had a stroke which left him in a weak, nervous condition. He started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills, and we saw the good results almost immediately. They have made a new man of my husband and we cannot speak too highly of them."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Eclair Co

AT THE CRESCENT.

The Eclair Comedy Company, the best known fun makers in the motion picture world, will be seen at the Crescent Picture Palace on today and to-morrow in a very comical comedy in one act entitled: "Wifey Must Follow Husband." The big feature of to-day's bill is "The Man from the East" in which Kathryn Wilbain, the noted actress, is in the leading role of the best drama; with this excellent special there is a stirring crystal drama entitled: "A Call from Home." In addition to the Eclair comedy there is a gem hypnotizing act: "A New Way to Win a Girl."

The service at the Crescent is always the same up-to-date in every respect. On Wednesday and Thursday a feature for the holiday programme is "Thirst for Gold," a two reel drama.

Personal Notes.

Mr. H. C. Crowe went out to Norris Arm by Saturday evening's express.

Mr. A. Wallace formerly of the Calypso will again go to the icefields in the Stephano as "doctor" this spring.

YOUNG SEALS PLENTIFUL.
Messages were received in the city on Saturday that young seals were numerous around Cape Bauld. At Twillingate and Fogo, as already mentioned in the Telegram, bedlamers were plentiful last week and some were killed by the residents.

She Giggled.

I went out to walk with Miss Nettie one day
And as we two strolled though the park
I noticed she seemed quite contented and gay,
And whenever I made a remark even plain
She would always a giggle outpour.
And then when I asked her to kindly explain,
She giggled — then giggled some more.

Then in the evening we went to the play,
And although 'twas a tragedy deep,
She did not the slightest emotion display,
But giggled while others would weep.

She giggled abit when the hero was killed,
And as the bride came through the door
To marry the villain whose conduct had thrilled
She giggled — then giggled some more.

So I asked the young lady to tell me just why
Her system contained so much mirth,
And how could she giggle when others would cry,
And when happiness seemed at a death.

So she said her new hat had the latest shaped frame,
And only one like it in store,
And that no other lady could get one the same
Then she giggled and giggled some more.

Trials on the Troopship.

Incidents and Occurrences in the Daily Day on Board a Transport.

Mr. Atkins is as brave a soldier as ever carried a rifle, but he is no "fall-or-bold"; and even the lure of foreign service cannot rob the high seas of all their terrors and discomforts. But at any rate, he has this consolation—his voyaging is much more comfortable than it was for his predecessors who crossed the seas in his Majesty's troopships a generation ago. As they will tell you, they were treated like dogs by autocratic naval officers.

Today Thomas Atkins journeys in a hired transport with civilian officers. He is assured of civil treatment, and he has less unpleasant work such as swabbing decks to do. Generally he is made as comfortable as possible.

A troopship has been described as "a prison with a chance of being drowned"; and certainly the discipline enforced on board is rigid enough for any gaol-bird.

But Tommy is the last to grumble at discipline so long as he is treated as a man; and at any rate, the modern troopships, rough places as they are, are luxurious compared with the accommodation provided in Grineah and Mutiny days.

Naturally when a vessel has to carry two thousand or more passengers, men, women and children, with the entire equipment of a small town, there is no room to spare.

Like a City Afloat.

No ship that sails the seas is so wonderfully equipped for all emergencies and requirements. She carries everything from a "needle to an anchor." There are shops for carpentering and blacksmithing; work; carpenters, bakers, and butchers' shops; stables for horses, pens for sheep, rabbits, and poultry. There are saloons and cabins for the officers and their ladies, with nurseries for their children. In fact, a troopship is, in more senses than one, a town afloat.

As for Tommy, his quarters are very restricted. To each mess is allotted a small space where he eats his meals during the day and slings his hammock at night, unless, as he usually does, he prefers to stretch himself on deck, one in a close-packed row of sleepers.

His food, which is good and plentiful, although he often has little appetite for it, ranges from salt pork and duff to boiled beef and soup, with a pint of porter to wash it down, or an equivalent in tea, sugar, and tobacco.

At 5 a.m. he slings his hammock to the call of the bugle, has a wash, and helps to clear up his section of deck. Breakfast is followed at 10 o'clock by "muster parade" for medical inspection; and then the day's work programme of watches, guards, and petty duties begins. At 12.30 and 4 p.m. two interludes for dinner and tea; an "at-eat" at eight; and at an hour later "lights out" and rest for another night.

There are, too, special drills to prepare for possible disaster—fire drill, "prepare to abandon ship," and "man overboard"—a round of duties which gives Tommy little time to think of his disordered interior.

When the Voyage Ends.

But is it by no means all work and no play. There are times when Tommy lights his pipe to the bugle call, "Commence firing," and reluctantly draws his last fragrant whiff to "cease firing."

In the daytime he can amuse himself with deck-quoits, cricket, and other games, and he has his "lull" on the day's run of the ship, with its attendant excitement. He can take his jocular part in a sing-song, or a head in a game of cards.

Twice daily the cheerful strains of the regimental band set his feet itching for the dance. Then there are entertainments—concerts, private theatricals, and so on, which he enjoys and may take part in, in company with his officers and their wives.

Thus the time passes not unpleasantly, with enough work to keep him fit and sufficient intervals for play.

When the days of internal qualms are over Tommy can, and does, enjoy his voyage; but always he looks eagerly forward to the day when he can leave the sea and revel in the wonders of the land that is to be his home for the next few years.

Here and There.

LOSES A FINE HORSE.—A valuable horse owned by Mr. James Newell of the central cab stand perished on Saturday night last. The animal was purchased only three weeks ago and cost $300. This is the fifth horse Mr. Newell has lost in two years.

A Grand Sacred Concert (under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Davidson) will be given in the Casino Theatre on Sunday evening next, March 15th, 1914, commencing at 8.30 o'clock. Selections from Handel's "Messiah" and other works. Full Chorus and Orchestra. Prices—Reserved Seats, 50c. and 40c.; Balcony, 20c.; Parquette, 10c. Plan of Hall at Atlantic Bookstore.—mar9,21,m,th

A special train from Gambo with 300 sealers arrived in the city at 11.35 a.m. to-day. Many of them had to walk 50 miles to connect with the train and experienced great hardships coming over the ponds and marshes. Owing to the mild weather the water is knee deep on some of the ponds and the marshes are all overflowed, making the journey a fatiguing one. A special from the shore line will arrive in the city to-morrow with the crew of the Benaventure.

The S. S. Prospero left Burin at 2 p.m. yesterday. The Postal Telegraph lines are interrupted west of Lunenburg, and as a consequence no further report has been received.

The Good Time Club.

The Good Time Club held its annual meeting on Saturday night, and after the usual reports had been read and adopted, the officers were re-elected for the coming year. They are J. J. Lacey, Chairman; J. J. Sullivan, Vice-Chairman; and J. L. Noonan, Secy.-Treas. The Club's annual dinner will be held after Easter, and if last year's dinner is any augury of success, then a good time should certainly be looked forward to for this year's function.

This Evening's Lecture.

The lecture to be given by Captain Saunders, this evening, in the Aula Maxima of St. Bon's College, will be "The One of the most interesting lectures ever delivered in the city." The slides obtained during the course of his trip are many and varied, and those who attend are bound apart from the attraction of the musical side offered by the Cadet Band, to enjoy an hour and a half of a real good time. It begins at 8.15 p.m.

Kanawha From Liverpool.

The S.S. Kanawha, Capt. Kellmar, reached port at eleven o'clock to-day, after a passage of ten and a half days from London, bringing 1200 tons of cargo, a large mail and one passenger: Mr. K. Noah. The ship made good headway despite the unfavorable weather encountered. Off this port a deal of fog was met but Capt. Kellmar avoided it by altering his course mid-keeping as far South as possible.

A swindler now under indictment in the United States advertised, "Throw away your glasses." Those who sent him five or ten dollars received in exchange a small box of tablets which the United States mail officials found could be manufactured for twenty-five cents per thousand. There is no medical, chemical or mechanical means of restoring to normal an eyeball which is irregular in shape for such is the condition in most cases when glasses are worn for constant use. Hypermetropia, myopia, and the various forms of astigmatism are simply cases where the cornea, or clear front portion of the eyeball, is not absolutely spherical, and there is no other known means of overcoming such defect excepting by adjusting glasses. It is to be hoped that none of our Newfoundland friends have been duped by the swindler referred to above. You are always safe in consulting R. H. Trappnell, Eyesight Specialist, St. John's, when your vision requires attention.—feb27,ed,tt

"Mary" Again.

On the People's Party Committee Meeting.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—There was a meeting of the People's Party Executive Committee held in the Guild Room of St. Paul's Hall, on Tuesday night. Quite a lot of preparation was made to keep the news of the meeting from myself and Tom. But from a little mouse who was secreted behind the stove in the chimney corner, I gather a little information. The caretaker was stationed outside to see that no inquisitive person would prow around, but mouse was waiting on the doorstep for some time before the janitor opened the door. One man who came to the door was told he could not be admitted as it was only an executive committee meeting, but it was hinted shortly after that the main reason was because he refused to "sign the petition."

The chairman seemed to take very little interest in the meeting, and seemed to be there simply because he was there. The Secretary was enthusiastic as usual, but could not understand why promises were not more promptly fulfilled.

The Government came in for a little share of blame for putting the extra duty on tobacco and rum. "Mousie" says it will have to be well watered now to make any profit. The meeting adjourned early, business done, none.

The three men who hawked about the petition for the removal of officials, have incurred the displeasure of many of our citizens. Few, if any business men signed it, and it would be well for the authorities in St. John's to study well who the signatures are. Why not publish the names on that sheet so as the names of those people could be handed down to posterity? Shame on men who would stoop so low as to openly try to injure fellow citizens, for apparently no earthly reason.

Yours truly,
MARY.

Hr. Grange, March 6, 1914.

Celebrated Norwegian Jigger.

Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivels same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a minnow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jigging they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used, but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

In Memoriam.

On Ash Wednesday morning, Philip Healy, an old and esteemed resident of the North Arm of Holyrood Sound, to the Great Beyond. Deceased, who was 82 years old, had been ailing but a short time when the death summons came. For the past sixty years he served under the Department of Works as a Ferryman between Healey's Cove and Holyrood Sound, and from the early fifties down to the opening of the railway around the bay, "Uncle Phil" as he was familiarly called was kept busy in that capacity, crossing and recrossing the bay with travellers to and from the city. His wife, Mrs. Healy, died on Ash Wednesday morning eight years ago, and after her death he visited his son Patrick, for a few months, in the U. S. A., but was compelled through failing health to return to his native land. Honest and honorable, pious and charitable, hospitable and well-informed on all matters of interest to the locality for nearly seventy years, the aged and lamented deceased gentleman was of the type of man that endeared him to all. Rev. Fr. Finn sympathetically administered to all his spiritual wants and he died well fortified with the bliss of Holy Religion. The deceased Mr. and Mrs. Healy were blessed with the large family of six sons and one daughter: John, the well-known Railroad and A. & N. D. Co. Foreman; Patrick, U.S.A. Government Contractor, and Patentee S.W.ey (Tramway Machine); Stephen, deceased; Martin, stevedore Reid Nid. Co. Sydney; James, foreman A.N.D. Company, Grand Falls; Philip, U.S.A. and Mrs. Irving, Chicago. The funeral service was read at the home by Rev. W. P. Finn, P.P., after which the large funeral procession took place to Avondale Cemetery where the remains were placed beside those of his wife in the family plot. To his sorrowing sons and daughter we tender our heartfelt sympathy and to our dear departed friend we pray his soul rest in peace. Amen.—Deson papers please copy.

On Ash Wednesday morning, Philip Healy, an old and esteemed resident of the North Arm of Holyrood Sound, to the Great Beyond. Deceased, who was 82 years old, had been ailing but a short time when the death summons came. For the past sixty years he served under the Department of Works as a Ferryman between Healey's Cove and Holyrood Sound, and from the early fifties down to the opening of the railway around the bay, "Uncle Phil" as he was familiarly called was kept busy in that capacity, crossing and recrossing the bay with travellers to and from the city. His wife, Mrs. Healy, died on Ash Wednesday morning eight years ago, and after her death he visited his son Patrick, for a few months, in the U. S. A., but was compelled through failing health to return to his native land. Notice the Unusual Security of this Six Per cent Bond!

It is our good fortune now to be able to recommend a 6 per cent. Industrial Bond, safeguarded by exceptionally large surplus assets and earnings. We refer to the First Mortgage Bonds of Brandram-Henderson, Limited.

This company's net profits for 1913 were $163,261.24—while the total interest only called for $27,216.76 of these record earnings. The Balance Sheet shows quite large reserves. For instance, bond redemption reserve amounting to $58,000.00; reserve for Preferred Dividend this year of $6,125.00; reserve for depreciation of $7,500.00;—all of which with $88,889.14 at credit of profit and loss account makes a very substantial total reserve for a company with such comparatively small capitalization.

In $100 and $1000 denominations we quote these Bonds on a 6 1/2 per cent. yield basis—either outright or on the partial payment plan.

750,000 Pounds An Ounce.

When some time ago it was discovered that large quantities of pitch-blende from which radium, which sells at £750,000 an ounce, is extracted, were to be found near St. Ives, Cornwall, a company was promptly formed which took over the process of extraction. This company has a little factory at Lincobury where the final stages of the extraction takes place, although the business has grown to such an extent that new works are to be erected in the North of London.

After the company was formed it took over the process of extraction which Sir Wm. Ramsay and his assistant, Mr. Whitehouse, had invented after long and costly operations. The first British radium was produced at the factory, but the fact that it was British created suspicions that it was not as good as German or French, for in the early days of radium manufacture it was only possible to obtain it from the Continent.

The British radium was offered to British hospitals and institutions, but they were not eager to buy. Meanwhile Berlin and Frankfurt bought as much as they could get, and at the present time the company referred to have contracts with these cities for advance deliveries which are capable of absorbing their output during 1914 and possibly 1915.

English radium is booming, and according to the 'British Medical Journal' it may yet be established that England is the home of the largest radium supply existing. Scientists are of opinion that rich sources of pitch-blende are to be discovered in Derbyshire and Gloucestershire. Meantime the Cornish mine is one of the largest sources of pitch-blende in the world.

In the last report it was stated that there were in stock on the surface 44,540lb. of uranium oxide, which, with the price of radium at £16 a milligramme, represents a value of £169,480. But in addition to this there is another mine close by, worked by a French company, which is estimated to have in its dumps 10,000 milligrammes of radium.

Sir William Ramsay's process, by ceaseless research and experiment, has been improved so that it is now believed by experts to be the finest in existence, and with this the cost of production as well as the time required will be considerably reduced—Tit-

Bachereau organized an escape, and he and three others managed to get hold of a boat.

As they slipped away by night a warder came upon them. Before he could cry out they seized and gagged him and dragged him with them to the boat.

As they jumped in, there came shouts from the land. Their escape had been discovered.

"Pull!" cried Bachereau to his companions; and then as the guards came running down to the beach he held his captive up in the stern, and defied the men on shore to shoot.

Send Off the Soldiers Or—Very naturally they refrained, and the refugees made off and reached the mainland. Six weeks later three of them were recaptured, starving and half dead. One had died. As for the warder, they declared that they had released him, but he has never since been seen.

Brigands are rampant again in the country desolated by the recent Balkan wars. It was Niko, the Thessalian brigand, who became notorious through his capture of Colonel Synge.

Hot pursuit was at once organized, and five hundred Hurlish troops actually succeeded in surrounding Niko and his band.

Niko coolly brought out his prisoner, and swore that he would kill him then and there if the troops were not withdrawn.

There was no help for it. The troops drew off, and the £10,000 ransom demanded for the colonel's liberty was brought to Natherina by H.M.S. Condor and paid over.

YOUR WHOLE BUSINESS.

You simply cannot carry, even the most important details of your business in your mind. But, as you are a good business man, you will insist on these details being always immediately available so as to compare them with those of yesterday, last month, last year. The famous "Safe-guard" method, originated by the Globe-Wernicke Co., makes your files a live index of your business and keeps every record quickly and surely accessible. Are you not interested in this more efficient, more economical system? MR. PERCIE JOHNSON will be pleased to show you that this equipment will be of lifelong usefulness by arranging the record of your whole business right at your hand.

Morning Noises

At early morn one's sleep seems best, and man would get all kinds of rest, if silence would obtain; but at the first faint peep of day the world wakes up and gets too gay, and beds are all in vain. In town the milkman comes along and makes a racket with his gong, while drowsy people swear; and wagons rattle through the streets, and newsboys shriek the morning sheets, and noise is everywhere. And so the man who fain would sleep just hands out curses large and deep, and sighs: "I'll leave the town; I'll seek the quiet countryside, where man, when tired and heavy-eyed, can hold some slumber down." So to some bosky dell he speeds, convinced 'twill answer all his needs, and with a farmer boards; and in the morn, when dawn is gray, he hears the hoot and grunt and bray of all the barnyard hordes. The cows are bawling passing well, the frisky mules rear up and yell, the porkers voice their woe; the goats, the guinea hens, the geese get busy and disturb the peace, the bughouse roosters crow. And in the dawning, cold and bleak, the victim swears in French and Greek, in Gaelic and low Dutch; he swears in dead and living tongues, and though he wears out both his lungs, it doesn't help him much.

B. I. S. Meeting.

The adjourned annual meeting of the B. I. S. took place yesterday afternoon at Mass, and was largely attended. The chair was occupied by 1st Asst. Vice-President Pippy, and a general discussion of the St. Patrick's Day celebration was held.

It was decided to hold a parade this year, which promises to be an eventful one in Ireland's history, and on this account the parade will be the best since the society was founded 108 years ago.

High Mass will be celebrated at St. Patrick's where the pulpit will be occupied by Rev. Father Conway.

The dramatic troupe will produce "A Daughter of Erin" on St. Patrick's afternoon and night. The play is a strong one, and some special scenery is in preparation.

BILLIARD TOURNEY—The Plains are now leading by 43 points in the T. A. Club's billiard tourney. Two interesting games will come off to-night.

SOAP.

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Swash."

Soap is the personal representative of civilization.

Some one has said that civilization follows the flag. If it does, it loses the scent with remarkable ease. But civilization and soap work together with great harmony and produce joyful results.

Soap is a missionary, but it does not collect a keg of money and go over the ocean to some benighted strand, in order to get on the job. When a cake of soap wishes to extend the borders of civilization, it attaches itself to a settlement worker and goes down into the tenement ward, nine blocks from Louis Quatorze district, where the bath tubs are used for coal bins and the children wear last year's coats of dirt through the winter for underclothes.

After a cake of soap has worn itself away in this district, the results are so noticeable, that people pass their best friends on the street even to leeward without noticing them.

Soap is civilizing many parts of this country which the ballot, the missionary and the college diploma have overlooked. But sometimes it falls down on the job. Occasionally a thousand cakes of costly scented soap will work on a man for years and produce such a marvel of fresh, sweet-scented cleanliness that few people would believe him to be the employer of hundreds of women and children at starvation wages. In such cases soap should be assisted by a club.

This country uses billions of pounds of soap in its effort to be clean. After visiting in some of our most terrific cities we have sometimes wished that this country used less soap on its citizens and more on its streets. You can't conceal a dirty street by putting a shirt and a pair of pants on it.

STOP COUGHING

It's quite as foolish as it is annoying to keep on coughing since

PHORATONE COUGH MIXTURE is sold all over Newfoundland and is guaranteed to soothe and heal the irritated parts at once, and to rapidly destroy the very cause of this aggravating nuisance. Hundreds of persons are complaining every day about the cough or cold they have had for a long time, and are not able to get rid of it. Don't let a cough or cold hang on you day after day and run the risk of catching and developing the "cough" that is not easy to throw off. You will avoid all this worry (about the cough or cold you have) by obtaining

PHORATONE COUGH MIXTURE at once.

Living Shields.

How Convicts Have Used Human Beings to aid Their Escape.

Three convicts in endeavouring to escape from the prison at McAllister, in Oklahoma, the other day captured the telephone operator, a young girl, and used her as a shield to save them from the bullets of the warders.

The warders only fired one shot, and this, unfortunately, wounded the girl.

Once outside the prison the murderers released the girl, made for horse and trap, which accomplices had left a little way off, and sprang in.

But by that time the guards on the wall had got their rifles to bear. A heavy volley killed the horse, and all three convicts were also riddled with bullets and killed outright.

This is the second time within the last two years that escaping American convicts have adopted a similar scheme. In March, 1912, two desperate men escaped from the big prison at Lincoln, Nebraska, who always wait for a fog, these men chose a day on which a furious blizzard of snow was raging, and they managed to get clear away.

Ran off With a Woman and Child.

Two miles out the storm grew so fearful they were forced to take refuge in a house, where they found only a woman and a boy.

They forced the woman to give them food, but while they were eating, a band of five warders loomed up through the driving snow.

The two desperadoes seized the woman and boy, gagged them, and dragged them out to the stable, where they found a horse. They harnessed the horse to a light four-wheeled wagon, put the woman and boy in the back, and drove off.

The warders saw them, but dared not fire for fear of killing the woman and boy. And being on foot they were soon outdistanced. The convicts' stratagem was successful, and they made good their escape.

One of the worst prisons in the world is the Island Convict Settlement in French Guiana. Attempts at escape are frequent, but rarely successful.

Scotia's Earnings.

For the year ending December 31st, the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company earned in round figures $1,256,000. After providing for the interest on the first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds outstanding and the sinking fund in connection with the same issue there remained a balance of considerably over $900,000. As there is outstanding $3,000,000 of debenture stock bearing 6 per cent. interest, this is equal to more than 5 times the amount necessary to pay the interest on the debenture stock.

We offer for sale in lots to suit purchasers a block of Nova Scotia Steel & Coal 6 per cent. debenture stock at 98 and interest.

Harbour Grace Notes.

Mr. G. R. Rowe, watchmaker, has just placed the town clock in its position in the tower of the new public building. It has a very nice sound when striking, and we heard of one young lady who stayed awake all night on Friday, listening to it striking the hours. No doubt the clock will be kept with the "gun" and all our citizens should regulate their time by it. Our citizens are thankful for this boon.

Mr. William Miller, cooper, of the Hill, died quite suddenly at his home yesterday. Mr. Miller had passed the three-score and ten years, and but for the biting pains of rheumatism, was quite smart up to the time of his death. The deceased was very highly respected by all his acquaintances. He leaves a widow to mourn his death.

A baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sterling on Tuesday last. Congratulations.

Skaters are lamenting that owing to the mild spurt, very little skating can be indulged in at present. We hope that next season an up-to-date rink will be in operation here, where ice will be kept for a long time after Jack Frost has got in his hardest spurt.

Much sympathy is felt here for Mr. and Mrs. O'Neil, of St. John's, in the sad drowning of their son. Many of our boys, and we are almost ashamed to say, some girls as well, indulge in this very dangerous practice of copying. We hope this will be a warning to them to keep off the ice, and to the parents to determinedly put a stop to it.

Mrs. Charles Webber, while going from her home to that of her brother, Mr. George H. Badoock, next door, fell on Tuesday evening and broke her arm. Dr. Cron was called and attended to her injuries. She is very much better now.

Sergeant Dwyer passed another mile stone along life's journey on Wednesday last. The genial Sergeant has one lap more for the half century mark. We wish him very many happy returns.

Mr. W. Coumors returned from the General Hospital on Saturday, where he had been to have an injured eye removed. He speaks highly of the kindness of doctors and nurses at the institution, as well as many others who visited him while there.

THE PEOPLE'S HOUSE AND THE PEOPLE'S PARTY

Editor The Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—That the people are unnecessarily kept from entering to hear the debates in the House of Assembly, as stated by Mr. Kent, is quite true. I was refused admittance last week on the plea that "the House was full and by the Speaker's orders no more could get in."

When several came out I, with a few others, was admitted and ascending to the gallery found that there was ample room there for ten or twenty more. Whatever reason there can be for such a procedure it is certainly curious that the so-called "People's Party" should keep the people from their own House. If Sir Edward's "gallery-talk" brings forth no response, surely it is very weak of him to admit it in this way?

THE LOGGERS BILL.

No one can blame Mr. Coaker for his plain words concerning the Legislative Council. Its refusal of the Loggers' Bill is certainly an instance of the thoughtlessness of those who sleep "on downy beds of ease." The excuses that McGrath gives in the Herald are absolutely absurd. There is no time, forsooth! It was the essence of hypocritical courtesy for Mr. Gibbs to move the second reading in the manner which McGrath tells us he did. The honourable members were indeed full of information when they debated the "Patents" bill and Cruelly to Animals' bill. But when this important bill concerning the lives of men comes up, they seemingly can hardly read it. And yet, as Mr. Jennings said in the House, young men have spent a winter in a logging camp and come out of it worn out from sleeplessness and weakened by illness brought about by chill and wet, and in a few months have become victims of the "White Plague." The Council's action is well nigh criminal.

Unless the Legislative Council recognizes the principles of square-dealing and justice to all men that permeate this democratic age it will find itself shorn of its power in very few years.

Let them consider the House of Lords in England.

Yours truly, FRED BALD.

SEALING NOTES.

The steamers Neptune, Vikings, Erik, Southern Cross and Terra Nova reached Channel in the order mentioned on Saturday. All made quick trips from here. The Seal arrived there on the same day from Halifax. The six ships will leave to-morrow in search of the whitecoats.

Various rumours which could not be verified, were afloat Saturday night about the Bloodhound which was jammed off Cape St. Francis Friday last.

SATURDAY NIGHT'S ARRESTS.—Three arrests for inebriation were made Saturday night. One was released yesterday and the others were up before court to-day.

The Temperance Petition.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—I hope for decency sake if for no other, that Sir Edward Morris will not allow the House to close without dealing with the prayer of the petitioners who are asking that liquor be kept out of Local Option Districts. We, the temperance workers want no shilly-shallying about this matter; we want trains and steamers that are subsidized by the Government, to be prohibited from carrying intoxicants into these districts that voted against liquor. People on the street are talking and saying that the Government will do nothing in this matter, because they want the big revenue that is collected from the duties on liquor. They say, Sir Edward Morris is only feeling the temperance section of this community and that he has not the least idea of doing anything this session in the way of temperance legislation. I hope these assertions will be found to be false, for if they are true, Sir Edward Morris and his party will hoax the temperance people for the last time. We hear a lot about the revenue that liquor brings in, but surely our people are not going to be humbugged by this worn-out argument. The Trade Review, on Saturday indeed gets in one of his sly darts at this petition now before the House, but his words lack weight, for he puts forward no argument to substantiate what he labors to say. Anybody that sneered never spoke out straight in his life, and we cannot expect it to do so now. The silliness, the absurdity of an Editor putting forth the argument that if the trains and coastal steamers were debarred from carrying liquor into Local Option districts, that the freighters would come forth to carry on the work, is so ridiculous that were he not dealing with a serious subject one may be tempted to smile, but it only goes to show how foolish a man can become when he starts out to injure a movement that stands for bettering the condition of our people. The great leader, Gladstone once said: "Give me a sober people and I will show you a prosperous country." He did not believe in the argument that the population of a country had to consume rum in wholesale quantities in order to raise a revenue. Let Morris imitate this great statesman, and he will not make any mistake, and let him remember that the eyes of the temperance people are levelled upon him at this moment watching his actions closely and will watch closely for the next few days. If we are turned down in this matter, if our petition is given the hoist, let him and his Government be prepared to take the consequences.

Yours truly, CITIZEN.

C. M. B. C. Service for Sealers.

The annual sealers' service was held by the Cathedral Men's Bible Class yesterday afternoon at the Cathedral. The attendance was large, and the choir rendered some very pleasing hymns that helped to make the service such a success.

The service was conducted by the Rev. J. Brinton and the lesson read by the Rev. Canon White, Rector of the Cathedral. The latter preached an instructive sermon taking as his text: "What doest thou here Elijah?" The rev. gentleman drew many lessons from the story of Elijah's life, which he said was one of the most attractive in the Bible study.

"An Irish Round Table."

These at the Table include the Premier, Sir Horace Plunkett, Mr. F. S. Oliver, Mr. Garvin—The "Times."

The critical moment for Irish Home Rule comes with the presentation to Parliament of the Home Rule Bill for the Third Time, and the fact that now under the Parliament Act it can be passed even if rejected by the Lords.

What men are saying and proposing under these circumstances is here shown:

The Prime Minister Speaks.
The Prime Minister, on the day Parliament opened, made an important statement with regard to the settlement of the Home Rule problem.

"I regret," he said, "and I am sure the Leader of the Opposition will share my regret, because I know he was anxious to have some definite result, that these conversations did not produce any definite agreement."

"While I deeply regret that agreement was not obtained, I do not despair at this moment, and never have despaired, of the possibility of a settlement. I think the language used in the King's Speech ought to find an echo in every quarter of the House, and so far as I am concerned, speaking for myself and my colleagues, I believe for those behind me, I will use no last word in regard to this matter of settlement."

There was nothing the Government would do consistently with their fundamental principles on this question, to avoid civil war. He agreed that there ought not to be undue delay, and added that, when the necessary financial business had been disposed of, it would be the Government's duty to submit to the House suggestions which would be honestly put forward, and which, they believed, would be regarded by all fair-minded men as a serious attempt to arrive at an agreement.

"It is for the sake of obtaining peace and as the price of peace—settlement by agreement—that any suggestions that we make will be put forward," added Mr. Asquith.

"I have acknowledged that a responsibility, and a serious responsibility—the responsibility of initiative lies in this matter upon the shoulders of the Government."

"I have never said anything with more serious or sincere conviction in this House, that so far as I and my colleagues are concerned, we will not close an avenue, however unpromising for the moment the entrance upon it may appear, which directly or indirectly holds out a hope of leading to concord and to settlement."

A Want of Understanding.

"In the last three weeks," writes Sir Horace Plunkett, in the Times, "I have conversed in London with leading members of Parliament of both parties, and in Ulster with men who are at the head of the volunteer movement. On each side of the Channel I have found a want of understanding of the situation on the other side. The leaders in England and the leaders in Ulster look at the facts differently; they fail to appreciate each other's points of view, and consequently they misinterpret each other's motives. Hence I am filled with apprehension at the prospect that Parliament may undertake in the next few days to settle the 'Ulster Crisis' without any adequate understanding of the situation or the men it is going to deal with."

"Yet this crisis, if unwisely handled, will inevitably mean a crushing blow to the peace, progress, and prosperity of Ireland, and a long heritage of racial and religious bitterness. And beyond this calamity there lies the possibility of even worse consequences to the political and social life of the United Kingdom and the British Empire, to say nothing of actual dangers to European peace."

Sir Horace's Suggestion.

"The only way to induce the Ulster Unionists to enter the Irish Parliament freely is to give them the power of leaving it if, after a fair trial, they find it impracticable," adds Sir Horace.

"My proposal is that the Home Rule Bill should be accepted by the Ulster Unionists upon this condition. A clause should be inserted providing that at the end of a fixed number of years it shall be decided by a plebiscite taken in a defined area of Ulster whether that area shall continue subject to the Irish Parliament." The Prime Minister has heartily endorsed Sir Horace's suggestion.

"Election or Exclusion," Says the Observer.
The Observer sets out once more quite plainly the position of Unionists and Ulster with regard to the Home Rule Bill.

"A hundred thousand men in Ulster, who claim no privilege, who have committed no offence, who now demand nothing on earth but to maintain their own birthright under the Union Jack, will rise in arms to defend all that makes for them the worth of freedom."

"If there is neither Election nor Exclusion, then before the bitter end of the session the struggle will break out. Whatever its immediate political effect, it will split Ireland forever and shake every interest of British policy to the base.

"Without at least the temporary exclusion of Ulster the Irish question is now incapable of settlement."

Reconstruction Inevitable.
"Unionists know that the interests of the Empire at large and of the whole English-speaking world, as well as the working of our own Parliamentary institutions, demand a thorough attempt to settle the Irish question. They know a great reconstruction of Irish Government to be inevitable," says the Observer.

Departure from the Old Unionist Position.

"In return for the exclusion of that powerful community in the North of Ireland, which hates a Dublin Legislature as much as the Nationalists ever hated Dublin Castle, the Opposition is prepared to concede to three-fourths of the Irish population Home Rule upon a genuine federal basis compatible with the living supremacy of the Imperial Parliament," adds the Observer.

"Unionists have even been willing to co-operate in the further creation of a full federal system enabling Ulster of her own free will to throw in her lot ultimately with the rest of Ireland. The Unionist leaders have offered to abide by the verdict of the whole people at a fair General Election.

"Consider what this statement means. Realize the extent of the departure from the old Unionist position. Concession here is not only real, it is immense. It is as far as men could go short of capitulation," concludes the Observer.

Mr. F. S. Oliver's Proposals.

Mr. F. S. Oliver, in his new pamphlet, "What Federalism is Not," suggests that Ulster should be allowed to remain outside until a federal system under which Ireland will be treated in the same manner as England and Scotland has been created for the United Kingdom.

The key to any reasonable proposals and any statesmanlike settlement Mr. F. S. Oliver finds in Sir Edward Carson's words: "We must not get any treatment different and exceptional from the treatment offered to any other part of the United Kingdom. We must have preserved to us what every citizen has, neither more nor less. We must have the same protection of the Imperial Parliament and above all . . . we must have no deal and no Act which establishes the foundation for an ultimate separation of your country from ours."

"But only under a federal system can these securities be given, and without the most drastic alterations the present proposals can never be fitted into any plan of Home Rule All Round," concludes Mr. Oliver.

"The great fact of the situation is that we can avoid civil war by Exclusion and we can avoid it in no other way. That is the pass to which things have come," says the Spectator.

Exclusion of Ulster.

"What, then, is to avert the impending catastrophe?" asks the Times. "There is manifestly one expedient the efficacy of which in this connection no one disputes, however much, like ourselves, he may detest it. If Ulster is excluded from the operations of the Home Rule Bill, temporary peace is undoubtedly purchased. Many prominent Unionists Mr. Austen Chamberlain among them have lately recognized this device as the only alternative to civil war. But it is clearly a device, and not a solution."

Only a General Election.

"All that is needed, and the least that is needed, is a General Election," says the Times. "If the Liberals won a decisive victory they would be no worse off than they are to-day in any way, and infinitely better off in most ways. The British Unionists, as they have plainly stated, would at once accept the verdict of the polls, and the resistance of Ulster, whatever may be said to the contrary, would inevitably stand on an entirely different footing."

A MODERN INSTANCE.

It was something like a ringworm on his head, or rather at the back of the neck, just below the hair, and seemed inclined to spread. Washing with antiseptic solutions, and the use of common ointments scarcely availed to prevent its getting larger. He was puzzled. Then he saw an advertisement of Zylex and Zylex Soap, and decided to use them. Procuring a box of Zylex and a cake of Zylex Soap he washed the part carefully, and applied the ointment freely. The result was marked almost from the first. In a few days the spot had disappeared, and everything was as well as ever. Now he uses Zylex Soap regularly and keeps a box of Zylex always handy.

Have you such spots? Then use Zylex. You will soon forget that you have had any skin troubles. At all druggists. Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.—feb26, eod, tt

HEALTHY AND UNHEALTHY LIGHTING.

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitate, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:

Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this amongst other reasons that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jamieson B. Hurry.

He would merely add that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Dudfield, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.

I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which, with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity, the latter being applied with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—Vivian B. Lewes, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—nov8, tt

Thirty Days Alone

In the Antarctic Ice Fields, Nearly Starving and Blinded by Blizzard—Dr. Mawson Gives Some Particulars of His Perilous Journey.

New York, Feb. 27.—A cable to the Tribune from London says:

A despatch from Sydney to the Daily Telegraph says that the Aurora, with Dr. Douglas Mawson and party, arrived at Adelaide yesterday afternoon, thus terminating work done in December, 1911, when Dr. Mawson started on his first Australian-Antarctic Expedition. His perilous journey in the frozen south, including a heart-breaking interval of 30 days spent in absolute solitude, have not been undertaken without a death toll.

Fuller particulars of the events culminating in the death of Lieutenant Nimms and Dr. Metz indicate that the former's end and his disappearance in a crevasse must have been terrible in the extreme.

Dr. Mawson's dogged march of three hundred miles through nearly starving and blinded by a blizzard, was one of the finest acts of personal courage ever recorded in polar explorations.

Dr. Mawson in his narrative says: "Our operations extended as far down into the sea as two miles, and some very valuable information as well as animals of all kinds were discovered."

Nearly everything we got is now to science. We secured hundreds of bird skins, many of which have never been known before.

Asked for particulars of his achievements when after the death of Lieut. Nimms and Dr. Metz he travelled for many lonely and hungry weeks, Mawson replied, "I would rather not say too much about that. I was for thirty days absolutely alone and had a most marvellous escape. In the end I was reduced to the last stages of starvation, and was tramping along through deep snow when I noticed something black in front of me. It was a bit of food that had been dropped by the search party sent to ascertain my whereabouts."

By the luckiest accident I saw it, and at that time was within twenty miles of the hut in a place to which no previous expeditions had ever been. That was the big point about this undertaking of ours. We were for the most part travelling over new country.

On that occasion I had the closest shave I have ever experienced, and, coming after the death of Nimms and Metz, it was a most melancholy journey even apart from the sufferings I was called upon to endure.

We had a very trying time at Adelalund. There is no place in the world with a climate as bad. The winds had a velocity in one month of sixty-three miles an hour for every hour of the whole month. On one occasion we recorded 116 miles an hour. There were also puffs, the velocity of which was from 200 to 300 miles an hour.

Current Events Club.

Interesting papers were read at the meeting of the Current Events Club on Saturday last, by Mesdames P. Knolly and Fenwick taking as their subjects India and Friendship, respectively. A large gathering of members were present. At the close teas were served by Mrs. John Harvey.

FULL of THRILLS

Here is a Novel that is a best seller. It is perhaps the best Western Story yet written. Cloth 50c.; Postage 2c.

WHISPERING SMITH
 (By Frank H. Spearman).

An exciting, adventurous railroad story, located in the Red Desert. A feud between Sinclair, foreman of the bridges, and McCloud, division superintendent, has its beginning in a railroad wreck. Sinclair loses his position and joins a band of outlaws who rob the railroad.
 A posse of men under "Whispering Smith" pursues them and there is plenty of gun play.
 A breathless tale of intrigue and villainy, realistic of the new life of the west, but softened and brightened by a double love story.
