The Old Marquis
OR
The Girl of the Cloisters

CHAPTER XVIII
FLIGHT AND PURSUIT.

As to remembering "the old gentleman and lady," the man would not pretend to have done so.

"You see, sir," he said, "they'd be sure to take a four-wheeled vehicle—an old gentleman and a young lady, with luggage!—and I shouldn't be able to see 'em. If it had been a hansom now—"

Lord Edgar slipped the five-pound note he would have liked to have given the station master at Faneworth in the man's hand, and begged him to inquire of every cabman attached to the station, and to send word, if he hailed or succeeded in tracing the couple, to the Albany.

The man promised readily and gratefully, but not hopefully, and Lord Edgar, dispirited and anxious, got into a hansom and told the man to drive him to his rooms.

But suddenly an idea occurred to him—Clifford Revel! There was the man to help him if any man could! He would go to Clifford, who was always acute and ready for any emergency! The cabman put the horse around cityward and soon reached the Temple.

Lord Edgar hurried up the dark staircase, and knocked at Clifford Revel's door, and in answer to the "come in," burst into the room. Clifford Revel was in his dressing-room in the act of stropping his razor, and if he had been a nervous man he might have sliced his thumb off in the alarm of Lord Edgar's sudden entrance; but he merely put the razor down and quietly held out his hand.

"What cyclone has blown you here, my dear fellow?" he said, pleasantly, looking with quiet surprise at the seated face—now growing rather haggard. "Anything the matter? The horse—"

I am sorry to say Lord Edgar cursed the horse.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

"Clifford," he said, putting his hand on the linen-covered shoulder, "I am in the greatest distress, and I want your help! Can you give me five minutes?"

"Five hours, if you like, my dear fellow!" But he took up the razor and went on stropping it.

Lord Edgar began pacing up and down to tell his story. He omitted nothing, down to his inquiries at the station, and was all in a quiver of distress, and anxiety, and indignation; but Clifford Revel lathered his face and went on shaving with an unflinching hand. Then he wiped his razor and turned around, calmly and quietly, with no sign of the exultation that beat in his heart, in his face or manner.

"I can't understand it!" he said.

"I can! I can!" said Lord Edgar. "Of course my father must have seen her and induced her to fly from me! Oh, my sweet, innocent darling! Clifford, it makes my blood run cold when I imagine the scene, and the words he must have said to her! She was the purest, most innocent of creatures! I could go mad, by heavens, if I don't find her before many hours have passed, I shall go mad!"

Clifford Revel went into the next room and returned presently with a glass of brandy-and-soda.

"Drink that, Edgar," he said. "You have not had anything to eat for some time?"

"Eat!"

"I thought so. Now listen to me. What makes you think the marquis saw her?"

"I feel it! I feel it!"

"You have no evidence?"

"No."

Clifford Revel drew a little breath of relief. The marquis had kept the anonymous letter a secret, at any rate!

"You may be wrong. Nevertheless, we won't waste time over surmises; what we want is—to find her."

"I must, I must find her, and at once!"

Clifford Revel nodded, and carefully selected a white tie.

"Just so; that must be the first thing. You have set to work well, and yet I almost wish you had come to me at first. I suppose you gave your name and address to the people—the cab inspector and so on?"

"Of course I did!" assented Lord Edgar.

"Hem! I think that was wrong."

"Wrong! Why? How?" demanded Lord Edgar, bewildered.

"See here!" answered Clifford Revel, calmly. "Let Miss Temple's cause for flight be what it may, it is evident that she is flying from you!"

Lord Edgar groaned.

"Great Heaven! the thought is maddening!"

"From you. Now, from what you have told me of her character, I should say she is just the sort of girl to possess a great deal of moral courage."

Lord Edgar nodded.

"Yes, she is all that is wise and good!"

"Just so; and that she wouldn't have taken so desperate a step without having fully made up her mind. She did not leave any message or any scrap of paper for you—not a line. She meant to go and leave no trace behind her, intended fully to balk your pursuit."

"Clifford, you drive me to despair. But you are right."

"Yes, I think I am. And having thus made up her mind, she would be stanch, so stanch that if she knew you were following her, that you had obtained any clew, she would put a still greater distance between you than there is at present. Don't you see that?"

"Yes, yes!"

"Let it come to her knowledge that you are making inquiries that are likely to be successful, and she would leave the place where she now is and be more careful than ever to leave no clew by which you might trace her!"

Lord Edgar started up, and then sunk down helplessly.

"I see your meaning. But what am I to do? Great Heavens! I can not sit down and accept the separation!"

"No, no! Now, see here, you have paid me the compliment of requesting my assistance. Thanks. I will do my best; but if I undertake to make the search, you must promise me that you will not interfere."

Lord Edgar wiped his brow.

"What will you do?" he demanded. How could he sit supine and in suspense?

"I'll tell you. I shall employ the police."

Lord Edgar started from his chair and confronted Clifford.

"The police! As if she were a criminal!"

Clifford Revel smiled.

"My dear Edgar, do you imagine that I shall set half a dozen policemen in blue to work? Yours is an Arcadian simplicity, which I envy you! When I say police, I mean a private detective. It is of no use being squeamish and sentimental. If you want to find any one, criminal or innocent, you must employ the most powerful and effective agency. I know a man, a private detective, a very clever fellow, who will discover their whereabouts, and do it without permitting them to suspect for a moment that he is on their track."

Lord Edgar groaned. The idea was repugnant to him; it was horrible, but he recognized the wisdom of the advice.

"I feel that you are right, and yet—"

"It is painful, I can understand," said Clifford Revel; "but it would be more painful to go bungling about the business yourself—fall—lost time, and then, after all, to be obliged to employ the proper person."

"Yes, yes!"

"Then I am to undertake the matter?"

"I can not tell you how grateful I am to you, Clifford!" said Lord Edgar, grasping his hand.

"Nonsense, you know I would do anything I could most gladly; but see here, I will only interfere—it is interference, you know—on this condition, and that is that you leave the whole matter to me; that you will not make inquiries yourself, and so undo and render useless my work. Is that agreeable to you?"

Lord Edgar sighed.

"Very well," he said; "though how I am to sit with my hands before me—"

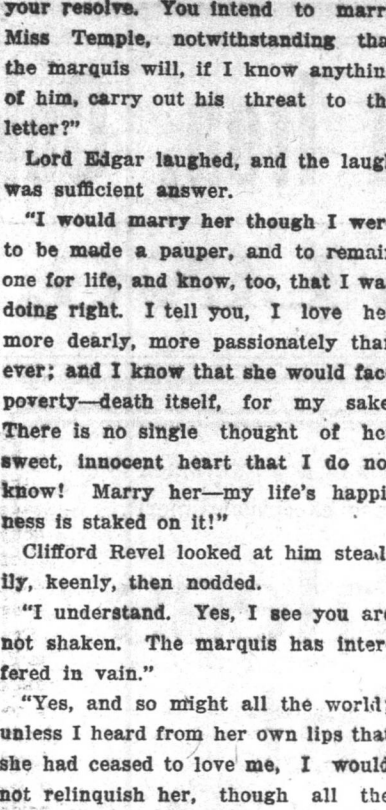

"You won't have to sit long," said Clifford Revel, emphatically. "I shall have to hand you their address in a few days, or weeks at most."

Lord Edgar groaned.

Days were weeks, weeks years, of such suspense as he was suffering from.

THE MAKING OF
A FAMOUS
MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attend the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized, and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

This style is good for gingham, seersucker, percale, drill, sateen and brilliantine. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 32-34; Medium, 36-38; Large, 40-42; Extra Large, 44-46 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A COMFORTABLE UNDER-GARMENT.

2817—This style may be developed in lawn, batiste, nainsook, washable satin, silk, or crepe. Lace, feather or cross stitching, embroidery or edging will form a suitable trimming and decoration.

The Pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

THE MAKING OF
A FAMOUS
MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attend the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized, and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

THE GRAND REVIEW.
LONDON, May 4.
(Via Reuter's).—Yesterday's march through London of the Overseas troops provided a unique Empire pageant for the dense crowds of cheering people with which the route was lined. The gaily decorated streets ablaze with Allied flags, presented a brilliant picture in the bright sunshine, while squadrons of airplanes, piloted by Dominion aces, circled and swept above the ranks of marching troops. H.R.H. Prince Arthur of Connaught accompanied Lieutenant General Sir Arthur Currie at the head of the Canadians, who led the procession. In succession followed General Chauvel with the Australians, General Young with the New Zealanders, Col. Thackeray with the South Africans, and Col. Bernard with the Newfoundlanders. The King, who in the morning had an investiture of Overseas troops, took the salute at the Palace. The smiling faces of fourteen thousand children from Country Council Schools greeted the troops along Constitution Hill. The following message from the King was handed each man on the dispersal of the parade:
Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and men of the Overseas Forces: "It is with a heart full of pride and gratitude I take your salute to-day as you march in triumph through London. The peoples of the British Dominions beyond the seas by their instant readiness to share in the trials

THE GRAND REVIEW.
LONDON, May 4. (Via Reuter's).—Yesterday's march through London of the Overseas troops provided a unique Empire pageant for the dense crowds of cheering people with which the route was lined. The gallantly decorated crests ablaze with Allied flags, presented a brilliant picture in the bright sunshine, while squadrons of air-planes, piloted by Dominion aces, circled and swept above the ranks of marching troops. H.R.H. Prince Arthur of Connaught accompanied Lieut. General Sir Arthur Currie at the head of the Canadians, who led the procession. In succession followed General Chauvel with the Australians, General Young with the New Zealanders, Col. Thackeray with the South Africans, and Col. Bernard with the Newfoundlanders. The King, who in the morning had an investiture of Overseas troops, took the salute at the Palace. The smiling faces of fourteen thousand children from Country Council Schools greeted the troops along Constitution Hill. The following message from the King was handed each man on the dispersal of the parade:
"Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and men of the Overseas Forces: It is with a heart full of pride and gratitude I take your salute to-day as you march in triumph through London. The peoples of the British Dominions beyond the seas by their instant readiness to share in the trials and responsibilities of the Great War have shown to the world the unity of the British Empire. You, with your comrades from the Mother Country, have with one another in noble deeds, which will ever be held in proud remembrance. Readily you adapted yourselves to changing conditions of a new and formidable kind of warfare and endured physical hardships and exacting mental strain whether on the plains of Flanders, the heights of Gallipoli, in France, in Palestine, or other theatres of war, you displayed gallant endurance in defence and vigorous initiative in attack. We and future generations will never forget the part played by the Canadians in the second battle of Ypres and on Vimy Ridge, by the Australians and New Zealanders at Gallipoli, and in the advances in the spring of 1917, the troops of all three Dominions in breaking the Hindenburg line last year, by the South African Brigade in Delville Wood and by the Royal Newfoundland Regiment at Monchy le Preux. Now in the day of victory I wish to express to you who represent the Overseas forces my unbounded admiration for your splendid feats of arms and sacrifices you have made. I wish you all God-speed on your homeward journey, with the hope that the outcome of this world struggle will assure peace to your children and your children's children."

The march of the Dominion troops is made the theme of editorials and special articles in the leading newspapers dealing with their glorious record, retelling stories of battle in which they were most prominent. As one writer says, "each Dominion contingent in its first battle set itself to reach and reached the highest standard of desperate and disciplined courage, and though the ranks were refilled time after time by newcomers, the same superb measure of achievement was maintained." It is pointed out that the Victoria Cross was never so hard to win as in the recent war, yet the number conferred on overseas soldiers is greater than the crosses gained by all arms in any previous campaign, with the exception of the Indian Mutiny.

The Times prints a detailed account of the deeds of Canadians and Newfoundlanders, and says the final effort of Canada during the last hundred days is worthy of her sons, who under General Currie proved second to none in battle.
The Daily Telegraph emphasizes that the single regiment representing Newfoundland has a record unsurpassed by none. It retells the story of Beaumont Hamel, which did not prevent Newfoundland sending a never-failing supplement, who in the desperate struggles of Ypres and Cambrai and elsewhere, were always found where the fighting was hottest. The Telegraph concludes an eloquent narrative of the wonderful work of the Canadians with a tribute to General Currie, "a fine civilian soldier who is one of the outstanding personalities of the war among the high officers of the Imperial Forces."

INVITES ITALY TO RECONSIDER.

PARIS, May 4. Premiers Clemenceau, Lloyd George and President Wilson, composing the Council of Three, to-day sent a communication to the Italian Government inviting it to resume its place at the Peace Conference. The Council's invitation is of such a nature that it is believed Italy will accept it and that the relations temporarily broken by the recent departure from Paris of Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino will be restored by the presence of Italian delegates at the Conference before the treaty is delivered to the Germans.

BOLSHEVIK ATTACKS REPULSED.

LONDON, May 4. A War Office report says that Archangel advances have been received to the effect that serious enemy attacks long anticipated, have begun on the Dvina and Vaga fronts. A message from the Dvina front on Thursday says that Bolshevik gunboats shelled the Allied positions spasmodically, but were forced to withdraw owing to the gunfire. A Vaga despatch Friday, says that after long bombardment the enemy delivered an attack in great strength, but was being repulsed everywhere with great losses. In the forest the enemy suffered heavy casualties, leaving 40 dead lying on the wire. General Ironside says that the Allied troops fought splendidly.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT ON CLEMENCEAU'S LIFE.

PARIS, May 3. Another attempt against Premier Clemenceau, apparently has been frustrated by the arrest of a 19-year old youth, who was seized near the entrance of M. Clemenceau's home. The youth, whose name is Cornillon, was carrying a siletto and had in his possession anarchist literature. He declared that he did not want to kill the Premier but desired only to make a "gesture." Cornillon was acquainted with Emile Cottin, who recently shot M. Clemenceau. He met Cottin in 1918 in some of the studios in Paris. He halls from Venay.

CABLES SPOILS OF WAR.

LONDON, May 3. The Council of Three of the Peace Conference has settled the question of the disposition of the German cables, according to a Reuter despatch from Paris filed last night. It adopted the view that the cables are spoils of war and belong to the captors by right.

DESPERATE FIGHTING NEAR MUNICH.

BERNE, May 3. Desperate fighting between Government forces and Communists is proceeding north and east of Munich, according to advices received here. Already more than 15 persons are reported to have been killed. The Red Guards before evacuating Munich, destroyed all documents at Police Headquarters, wiping out the records of 50 years.

SHOULD SINK HUN FLEET.

LONDON, May 3. The greatest moral lesson of the war would be to sink the entire German fleet with proper ceremony, Josephus Daniels, American Secretary of the Navy, who recently visited the captured German vessels at Scapa Flow, declared in a statement to-day to the Associated Press.

STILL ANOTHER DELAY.

LONDON, May 3. It is not improbable that the Peace Treaty will not be ready for presentation before the end of next week, says Reuter's Paris Correspondent, owing to the fact that several questions remain unsettled and also because the actual working document is taking more time than had been anticipated.

"CLEO" ISN'T ALWAYS TO BLAME.

By Cowan

The Congregational Pulpit.

"We live in an age of quacks and cure-alls" said the Rev. Dudley E. Ashford on Sunday night, when speaking on the subject of 'Inadequate Remedies.' There never were so many remedies for the cure of all the ills that flesh is heir to. Some of these remedies are inadequate on the face of it. I was in a chemist's shop not long since when a little girl came in and asked for 'a penn'oth of bruise oil, please.' 'What is it for,' asked the chemist. 'Please sir, sister's bin run over by a motor car' was the answer. There are other remedies which at first appear to be infallible but which prove to be disappointing. Some years ago, Seguard the Indian medicine man was supposed to be making some wonderful cures. People came to him on crutches and went away apparently cured; but the cure was not permanent. But bodily diseases are not our only ills. There are other evils also for which very inadequate remedies are offered. Take for instance the evil of Homelessness. It is a very real evil. The home is the basis of everything, the proper school for manners, the training centre for social service and the soul of religion. Yet there were never so many homeless people as there are to-day. Miners are striving for better homes. Soldiers are crying out for demobilization to return home. The cry on all hands is 'give us homes'. And what is the cure offered for this state of homelessness. More houses. Certainly we need more houses. The need is urgent and vital. Manifestly you cannot have homes without houses. Here in St. John's, people are being turned out of their houses, and rents are being raised in a scandalous manner. The proper housing of the people is essential to the welfare of the state and it is the duty of the state to control rents and even build houses if necessary. But even houses are an inadequate remedy for homelessness. Plenty of people live in fine houses but they are homeless. You may pull down slums and build model dwellings, but they are likely to become slums again. The great need is not only new houses for the people but also new people for the houses. The only basis for homelife is love, and the only foundation for love is religion. Another evil is the curse of alcohol and drugs. As one who has travelled extensively throughout the British Empire I do not hesitate to say that it is the curse of our race. The war cost Great Britain seven thousand million pounds, and during the period of the war she spent one thousand million pounds on drink. What is the remedy for this terrible evil. Prohibition, say some. Thank God for prohibition. It is the greatest blessing that ever came to Newfoundland. If the Christian people of this land ever go back on Prohibition the curse of Almighty God will be upon them and they will live to see many of their children turn out drunkards. But if you are going in for Prohibition do it thoroughly. Enforce the law. Deal with the doctors who issue unnecessary scrips. Prevent ships from selling drink when they come into port. Cut out all drug medicines. The man who evades the law is a traitor to his country and deserves no mercy. The men who deliberately traffic in drink and drugs are fiends of hell, who ought to be shot and made pay for the bullet. The people of this land have declared for Prohibition; then let us have it, but let us not forget that it is an inadequate remedy. You have got to change the man before you can change his habits. The preacher also dealt with two other evils, the unequal distribution of wealth for which Socialism is offered as a remedy, and the scourge of war for which the League of Nations is offered as a cure. But said he, it all boils down to this: The root of all evil is selfishness and sin. God alone can cure us of this heart-disease.—Com.

Legislative Drones.

The House of Assembly has now been in session over a month and though no constructive legislation has yet been passed or proposed, there does not appear to be an ardent desire on the part of our Parliamentarians to introduce anything calculated to benefit the country at large, nor do they exhibit any undue anxiety over the lengthening out of the session, which promised to be a record one for brevity of time and despatch of business. On Friday, April 25th, there appears on the Order paper "Second reading of a Bill respecting Bay Fishery Boards," and on Friday, May 2nd, after a lapse of one week, the same Bill is still down for second reading. Truly this is expedition.

The Opposition members busily engage the attention of the Government, plying them with questions, which are answered or not, according to the time taken in preparing the replies. It may be noted that the member for Placentia on Tuesday, April 29th, asked a question covering ten items of expenditure embracing contracts for extension, alteration, improvement and repair relating to (1) Lunatic Asylum, (2) Court House, (3) General Hospital, (4) Public Works Building, (5) Empire Building, (6) Stott Building, (7) Poor Asylum, (8) Legislative Building, (9) Fever Hospital, (10) Sanatorium. Up to the last sitting of the House, on Friday, this list had not been taken out of Notices of Question, from which it is to be assumed that the information requested has not been yet supplied. Of course it is well understood that some little time is required in collating the various data from the public accounts, but it is quite possible that delays may occur which will effectively prevent the information from getting before the public, because the supplementary queries in connection with this expenditure may prove embarrassing. Let us forget, it will not be amiss to quote these: (1) Were tenders invited for the work? (2) If not, why not? (3) To whom was the work or various sections of the work awarded? (4) What work was to be done by each contractor, and what was the contract price? (5) What amounts have been paid for, or on account of all work done? (6) To whom were payments made and when?

Touching the cost of this work, it is quite in order that some tidy sums were turned over to the persons to whom it was entrusted, and as it is undeniable that said persons were friends high in favor with the Administration, the cost was not likely to be kept down on that account. However we shall see when the returns are tabled, which if not done at this session, will surely be at the next unless the evidence is all wrong. The huge sums paid for other work and supplies in connection with public institutions, can be taken as a criterion of those to come, and the taxpayers may be quite certain that the cost of the repairs, extensions and alterations to the buildings named in the question of the member for Placentia, will bear equally in proportion to those which have come under scrutiny. Truly, as one of the prominent men in the Government is alleged to have said, "It is good to be here," by "here" meaning in Government clover.

Journalists Dined.

Mr. H. D. Reid, at his residence, Forest Road, on Saturday evening last, entertained at dinner the English and American newspapermen at present in the city to report the Transatlantic flight start. Several local journalists were among the company. Following dinner the toast to "the King" was honored in the customary way. The toast of the evening "Our Visitors," was proposed by Mr. W. J. Herder, the senior of the Newfoundland press, and replied to in eloquent phraseology by Mr. Memory (London Daily Mail) and Mr. Beazell (New York World). The company spent a most delightful evening.

Express Passengers.

The following passengers were landed from S. S. Kyle at Port aux Basques, yesterday, and are on the incoming express: E. Kingsley, Miss C. Kingsley, Miss J. E. Thistle, Miss D. Murphy, J. Cullen, Jas. Hayward, Mrs. J. Cullen, A. Chaffer, W. H. and Mrs. Frost, J. B. and Mrs. Orr, Mrs. M. Pender, F. A. Brazil, E. L. Ashbourne, F. G. Ashbourne, R. J. Coleman, R. J. Collins, Miss M. The schr. Norman B. Strong, Capt. W. Kennedy, arrived Saturday after a run of 29 days from Cadiz, with a cargo of salt for Monroe & Co.

The Spanish schooner Terra Nova has cleared from Seville with 3,000 qts. of codfish for F. Garcias.

The S. S. Meigle arrived yesterday at 4.30 p.m., from North Sydney with general cargo to the Reid Nfd. Co.

The schooner Winifred, thirty days from France via St. Laurence, arrived here yesterday in ballast.

Schooner Marjorie McLaughlin arrived this morning from St. Pierre with general cargo for Campbell & McKay.

Schooner Arginia arrived from Halifax, this morning with general cargo to Campbell & McKay.

Contemptible Conduct.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir:—I read with disgust the reprint in Saturday night's "Star" with reference to Hawker and Raynham, written by an R.A.F. officer in Toronto. Having known Messrs. Hawker and Raynham personally for a considerable time, and also know the service they have rendered to their country, (although in plain clothes) I think this article most unbecoming and also quite unnecessary for the Star to have published. Any R. A. F. officer of any seniority or War Service, will, I am sure, bear me out on this. The only conclusion I can reach is that the R. A. F. officer referred to, can't have been very much further than Toronto, also that a course in gentlemanly training, would do him a great deal of good.

Flying the Atlantic
The American Attempt.

(From the Telegram Reporter.)
TREPASSEY, Monday.

Never before in its uneventful history has the small settlement of Trepassey been filled with such excitement as to-day permeates that place. For from a vague idea of what the much talked of Transatlantic flight is, the little village has in a flash become a very centre of operations, and already the people there have become used to the sight of nearly a dozen American cruisers anchored in the harbor. The furor caused by the entirely unexpected arrival of the U. S. N. "Kistook" late Friday afternoon, and that caused on Saturday by the arrival of two others, the flagship "Prairie" and the Seaplane mother-ship, "Aroostook," had best be left to the imagination. Steaming up to the bottom or inner end of the two-and-a-quarter-mile-long harbor, it was not long before, on Saturday morning, a seaplane was lowered to the water and, running along the surface for a short distance, ascended into the air and went circling over the harbor and village. As in the case of the Martinsyde biplane's test flight, the gulls and other sea birds that were peacefully floating on the waters were startled out of their calm and flew away to safety out of reach of this new manner of bird that had invaded the quietness of the placid air of the port. The gentle sheep, the more spirited goats and the virile ponies that browsed along the grassy slopes of the immediately surrounding country were panic-stricken at the sight of the Seaplane and more so, perhaps, at the unearthly sound of its powerful motor, and for a long time after the flier had dropped back to the harbor they capered madly about the fields and the winding lanes that constitute the roads of the village. Not less than the animals, it must be admitted, the people themselves were shaken out of their customary staidness, and for hours after they met in little groups and discussed this new wonder that had come amongst them, and a most amusing feature of these conferences were the wild hazards of the natives as to what "drove" the plane and what kept it in the air. This problem has not been solved at Trepassey yet. Newfoundlanders have always been noted for their hospitality and kindness to strangers, and when, Saturday night, the likeable Yank sailors came ashore in quest of adventure and other things, they were treated with the customary kindness and consideration for which outpost people are so famed. The sailor boys were a "little" disappointed over Trepassey, for even to the most optimistically minded, Trepassey is not a very modern city—and although careful not to say this or anything else that would give offence, their long faces told their own story. To make matters worse, the weather, altho delightfully clear and fine, was exhilaratingly keen and having recently returned from Cuba the Americans felt the cold pretty badly. The one and only shop was besieged and raided and every stick of gum, every cigar in demand but here again the postcard fiends were doomed to disappointment. The fact is, Trepassey is not a second New York, and nothing but the very necessities of life are sold there. A number of sailors who had missed the last boat going to the ships, moored about a quarter mile off the shore, were taken in by people of the village and spent their first night in Newfoundland domiciles.

Sunday morning came in bright and fair and although a rather high N.W. wind blew during the day the sun shone out warmly and the weather was not altogether bad. Again a large number of sailors were given shore leave, and the R. C. Church, the only one in the place, was filled to capacity at both early and late services. During the day the village was gaily bedecked with flags of all descriptions, flown in honor of the visitors, while the hurrying sailors and sight-seeking natives, swiftly moving motor boats from the ships, and devout church-goers made a most interesting sight, one whose equal in interest Trepassey has never before witnessed. About 1.30 the seaplane made another flight, circling over the harbor for about half an hour. The inhabitants now lined up along the beach, and although not so excited as on the day preceding they were just as interested as ever. The Telegram reporter was invited aboard the ships, visiting first the seaplane mother-ship "Aroostook," and the Flagship "Prairie." Capt. Glen, of the latter ship was most courteous, inviting us to stay aboard to lunch. Just about noon Capt. Glen informed us that seven more American cruisers were expected about 1.30 p.m., these being the Hopewell, Stockton, Craven, Dent,

Philip, Waters and Roper. The arrival of these ships was most impressive, each steaming past the stern of the Flagship, passing near enough to make verbal communication possible with each other. Each cruiser steamed into position, all anchoring about a few hundred yards apart and heading in the same direction. There is still a fleet of seventeen navy vessels to arrive in Trepassey harbour, so that when they have all turned up it will be quite a port, at least until the conclusion of the Transatlantic flight. The Prairie is an old ship, having a greater mileage to her credit than any other ship in the U. S. Navy. An interesting fact is that she was the ship to fire the first shot at Vera Cruz at the time of the trouble between America and Mexico. She is a repair ship, containing a complete machine shop, forge and other facilities required for repairing ships of the navy. The crew is composed of Americans, Philipinos and Hawaiians. Commander Glenshaw, the Commodore of all the 57 ships connected with the American attempt to cross the Atlantic, has his headquarters aboard the Prairie, while on her are four movie camera men and two press correspondents who have come down for the purpose of obtaining pictures and copy of the flight. Mr. V. G. Byers represents the Associated Press and Mr. A. E. Johnson the United Press agencies. The camera men are: Mr. Arthur Alan Sorenson, representing "Kinograms;" Mr. Alfred E. Gold, the Gaumont Co., of Flushing, N.Y., Mr. Nelson Edwards, the International Film Service Co., and Mr. Robert E. Donahue, the Pathe News. All of these gentlemen were very obliging to the Telegram reporter, extending every facility and assistance.

The U. S. Navy attempt, under Messrs. Towers, Bellinger, Stone and Reil at crossing the Atlantic by air will be made by four seaplanes of uniform type. They are the Navy-Curtiss machine, built by Curtiss with the cooperation of the Navy, and are each fitted with four Liberty motors, and four propellers. Of these latter, two are pushers and two tractors. The scheduled speed at which they will fly in the transatlantic flight, is sixty miles an hour. They can do ninety miles, however, and over a hundred with a strong wind behind. Each will carry a crew of six men, consisting of two pilots, two mechanics, a navigator and a wireless expert. The wings spread measurement is one hundred and sixty-five feet, while the fuselage or body measures about sixty-five feet. One of them carried 51 men in its original test flight, while they can all carry the same number. On the voyage across they will fly together keeping in sight of each other all the distance. If weather and other conditions were favorable it was possible that they left Far Rockaway, outside New York, early this morning. When they do fly, at any rate, they will leave early in the morning, flying direct to Halifax, a distance of five hundred miles. This will take about eight hours. They will stop at Halifax over night leaving early the following morning, and flying straight to Trepassey. Upon arrival there they will wait until the cruisers have been posted along the route to the Azores, and the weather conditions, with a western wind prevailing, favorable. Fifty-seven ships will be stretched along to the Azores, being situated fifty miles apart. Thus, when the seaplanes leave Trepassey an hour before sunset, and fly for the Azores they will at no time be more than twenty-five miles away from a cruiser. As, on a clear day, they could see always be within sight of one of the ships patrolling below. Upon arrival at the Azores they will refuel and begin the fourth leg of the flight, going to Lisbon, in Portugal. Refueling there will again be in order, when the fifth and last leg will end at Plymouth, England. It will be seen at this point that the Americans are not competing for the London Daily Mail's $50,000 prize, as one of the stipulations of the latter's competition is that a non-stop flight must be made. The American Navy's plan is merely to show that a flight across the Atlantic is both possible and quite practicable.

Although endeavoring to be first to accomplish this great feat they are not rushing prematurely to the attempt, and for months the preparations that have now reached the final lap, have been quietly but steadily going on. Each man aboard the ships at Trepassey feels a personal interest in the flight, for in a manner it is now a race for first honors between the Americans and the British. Upon the departure of the four Seaplanes from Trepassey the Seaplane mother ship Aroostook will sail for England to bring back the planes. A fact that was extremely interesting to the people of

of Republic Trucks

In Pittsburgh, with its hills and heavy hauling, where power and stamina are absolutely essential; half of all the motor trucks in use are Republics.

"We found Republic Trucks so satisfactory in spite of over-loading and strenuous overtime service that we have just purchased another Republic," say Best Company, manufacturers of pipes, valves, etc.

"Because of the demonstrated efficiency of the first Republic we purchased, we are now using a fleet, including 1 1/2, 2, 3 1/2 and 5 ton, all Republics," say W. E. Osborn Co., large wholesale produce dealers.

"In spite of the severity of service in the oil and gas fields and over difficult country roads, our Republic Trucks have been absolutely trouble-proof," say People's Natural Gas Company.

"Even the additional abuse of war-time driving has had no apparent effect on the Republic Trucks which we have had in operation for three years. They continue to give the most satisfactory service," say Ziegler Lumber Company.

Each of the owners listed in this advertisement and hundreds of others have learned the efficiency and economy of hauling with Republic Trucks. That is why there are as many Republic Trucks in operation in Pittsburgh as there are of all other makes combined.

The same sturdiness and dependability that has made Republic Trucks so popular in Pittsburgh is creating a constantly increasing demand for them in every part of the world.

Republic Trucks are a profitable investment for any business with a hauling problem.

Trepassey was that a native of that place was aboard the latter ship. Upon enquiry this gentleman was found to be Lieut. Richard James. Lieut. James was born in Trepassey, but left there some thirty years ago. His occupation before leaving left him with a minute knowledge of the harbor, and it was he who piloted in the other ships on upon arrival here. There are several people (with one of whom the Telegram reporter was in conversation) who remembered the old native, and the entire village, needless to state, is proud of him. The fact that, after thirty years absence, he could successfully pilot the cruisers in the harbor, is a high tribute to the knowledge and skill of Lieut. James.

Last evening a dance was held in one of the houses, several sailors being present, while numerous individual men were invited out to homes in the village.

To Report Seaplanes' Position.
All ships and stations have been advised by Cape Race wireless to send weather reports at one a.m. and one p.m. to them or to the wireless station at Mt. Pearl. "It is most important that these reports should be relayed back when out range of Cape Race," says the wireless message, "and messages during the whole voyage are to be relayed back. Any ship sighting the airplanes is requested to transmit their position 3 times at a speed of eight words per minute, without being asked by the machine; and also to give the true direction and force of the wind. All ships sighting the aeroplanes should report so immediately to Cape Race, giving position, Greenwich time, and particulars.

Walt Mason's Birthday Was Yesterday.

In October, 1907, there came to Emporia, riding in a buckboard behind a spry little pony a middle-aged, pudgy, clear-eyed man to take a job on the Gazette. I was not at home. He was a mail order. I had known of Walt Mason on the Atchison Globe, on the Lincoln Journal, on the Washington Times, on the St. Joe papers for twenty-five years. When I heard he was looking for work he didn't have to look further. I wrote to him to go to work and draw what he thought right. When I got home three weeks later I found he had been drawing less than $5 a week. It paid for his board.

He liked the town, and he wanted work in a country town and wouldn't discuss wages. I didn't, either, but when he quit regular work on the paper to fill his writing orders he was drawing $20 a week, which is fair for a country town. Last year he built a twelve-thousand-dollar house, and paid for it out of his monthly earnings. And he has the same attitude now toward money that he had when he didn't have any money. It means nothing to him—save for the good it will do. Since he quit writing regularly for the Gazette he has often come in to the office and had done a day's work or a week's work or even six months' work when he has been away, but my money never has been good to pay for it. If he had needed the money, doubtless he would have been glad to get it. But otherwise—no.

A simple, kindly, old-fashioned gentleman is Walt Mason. I have never heard him utter an oath, or speak an improper word. He has small talk for the cult of reform, and less so for reformers. He pays his debts scrupulously. He keeps his word sacredly. He stands by his friends right or wrong, through thick or thin. He is as mild spoken as a woman, and as fearless in taking a position as an army. He has cultivated the art of hating people. In Emporia, where he found his best fame, he is beloved by every one. If he has in the whole town one enemy I have never heard of him. We feel here in Emporia that the inspiration of a quiet, orderly, simple hearted community was what he needed to bring out the best that is in him. In being proud of what we Emporians are pleased with ourselves.

PROCLAMATION WITHDRAWN.
LIMERICK, May 4. General Griffin has withdrawn his proclamation, constituting Limerick a special military area.
PROTEST ENLARGED.
PARIS, May 4. The Chinese Press Bureau issued another statement to-day protesting further against the Kiu Chan Shantung settlement, claiming the clauses go further than was believed. "Japan is given everything Germany obtained from China by aggression, and it is entirely with Japan to say what she will return to China and what she will retain for her own enjoyment," the statement says.
FOURTEEN CHAPTERS.
PARIS, May 5. It is now certain, according to the French Press, that the Peace Treaty will be solemnly handed to the German Foreign Minister by Clemenceau at Versailles on Thursday afternoon. The contents of the first five chapters previously outlined deal with pre-war, German frontiers, territory, German colonies and military, naval and aerial features of the pact. The sixth chapter will define the status of prisoners of war; the seventh concerns the responsibility of the former Emperor and other Germans for the war; the eighth and ninth will be devoted to phases of reparation problem and financial clauses; the tenth will deal with economic clauses, the eleventh with ports, railways and water communication; the twelfth with international labor legislation, the thirteenth with guarantees and the fourteenth with general clauses dealing with ratification.
BELGIUM WILL SIGN.
BRUSSELS, May 5. The Belgian Government decided to sign the Peace Treaty at the Crown Council held last night.
FINNISH REDS IN CONTROL.
LONDON, May 5. Finnish Red Guards are now masters of the situation at Petrograd.
NAVAL ATTACK REPULSED.
ARCHANGEL, May 5. The Allied forces succeeded, yesterday, in repulsing the first attack by Bolshevik gunboats on Dvina.
A STATE OF CHAOS.
BERLIN, May 5. Budapest is the scene of greatest panic, with complete disappearance of order, according to despatches received here.

He gave his life for freedom's cause
And those he loved the best.
Still in my heart your grave is green,
Sweet flowers blooming there,
But with a broken heart I pray
That you were here.
Oh, memories that bless and burn,
Oh, barren gain and bitter loss;
A year has passed—I miss you more,
But in silence bear the cross.

The Great Subject of Saving.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

In response to my request for some contributions from my reader friends on the great subject of saving; a heads, how one can teach oneself to prefer the deferred enjoyments of saving to the present enjoyment of spending; what proportion of an income one ought to save, and where one should draw the line between luxuries and helpful advantages, I received so many interesting letters that I can only cull out a few helpful paragraphs. Here are some of them.

"Any Man is a Fool Who Doesn't Lay Aside One Dollar in Ten."
 "If I had my life to live over again, and I knew what I know now, I should do differently. When I was twenty years of age I should have taken out an endowment policy, then I would have something now. I will say this, that any man is a fool who does not lay aside a dollar out of every ten dollars he earns, and then some day he will have something to fall back upon."

"Saving is a habit like everything else and must be started in 'early childhood' is the contribution of another philosopher. Doesn't that recall to your mind another sparkle of the silver lining of war's dark cloud?
"Put the Luxuries in a Cage."
 "One feature that will enable a person to be wisely economical is to keep books. How can anyone know whether they are doing the right thing or not when they know nothing definite about their expenses? Don't misrepresent stand me. To keep an accurate record of every penny would be foolish but if you keep an approximate cash account the figures will disclose luxuries at a glance. What are luxuries? You say they are one thing today and another to-morrow according to one's changed income. That is true, but it is a bad statement for the ordinary person to have in his mind. Place the luxuries in a cage of their own and take out as many as you feel you can stand, but don't get them mixed with the real necessities if you want to keep your perspective on saving."

ed with the real necessities if you want to keep your perspective on saving."
 "Living within an allowance is the best of practises in saving money," writes a wife. "Personally, my experience has been to get along with a certain allowance and thereby gain the use of a small bank account of something like fifty dollars a year."
 Three Cheers for Him, I Say.
 And lastly: "When I was married we managed to save from twenty to twenty-five dollars a month on a salary of seventy. But since I have reached the age of forty with six children to support, it is a question whether one should try to save with so many things needed. My salary has only increased twenty-three dollars from what it was fifteen years ago. Yet we have always managed to contribute to the Government Loans."
 Considering that prices have advanced almost double in the last fifteen years and that six children must, at the very least, double his expenses, I should say that was a record to be proud of, shouldn't you? It certainly makes me wish I were a man so that I could take off my hat to him.

Guns for Memorials.
 Nelson's Bodyguard.
 The four splendid monarch lions that guard the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar Square, and are the admiration of all our colonial visitors, were cast originally out of the metal of old naval guns, as was also the ornate capital on which the great admiral stands.
 Wellington's Funeral Car.
 The funeral car, which may still be seen in the crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral and which carried Wellington to his tomb, is made entirely of the enemy's guns as is also the Achilles Statue raised to that national idol by the women of England. Yes, and the splendid monument, commonly called "The Guards' Monument" at the foot of Waterloo Place, in front of which Florence Nightingale, the patron saint of the sisterhood, holds her lamp, is also made from Crimean cannon.
 But most significant of all, the splendid cross "For Valor" which is the most coveted decoration of the world, and to which the Iron Cross, flung broadcast by the million, is a mere bauble, the Victoria Cross itself is made from guns captured at Sevastopol.

 Tower Cannon.
 Among munitions of war turned to the use of peace are the lamp-standards of Waterloo Bridge, so severe and suitable, fashioned from cannon used in "the battle of the same name." Some years ago some vandal had removed and standards of a more ornate pattern substituted, but the public outcry relegated the new standards to oblivion and the old "battle standards" were replaced.
 Even the "stumps" so characteristic of Tower Hill, which thousands see and hundreds lean upon every day, are old cannon set up on end and embedded in the pavement.
 A pudding sauce is made with 3 tablespoonfuls each of milk, orange marmalade and marshmallow cream. A waffle iron works best when it is well seasoned by boiling in soda water, than by scrubbing and greasing.
 Cut up old ralncoats to make gardening aprons—you will find them a great resource when the earth is damp.

WANT TO GO FISHING.
 Want to go fishing, away from the world.
 And the lips that in sneering and jeering are curled;
 Away from the madness and sadness of trade;
 Away from the haunts where the money is made;
 Away from the pitiless struggle for gain.
 The clamor of toll and the sighing of pain,
 And rest for a while on the banks of a stream,
 And look at the sky up above me and dream.

Want to go fishing, where speech isn't words
 But the thrill of and thrill of the music of birds.
 Away from the dirt and of hurt of the town
 And the struggle for place and the strife for renown;
 Away from the pavements and buildings of stone
 To the temples of peace that the ages have grown
 And rest for awhile in the shades of the trees
 And bring back my soul into tune with the breeze.

Want to go fishing, away from the strife
 An the mean and unclean things of commonplace life.
 Away from the bicker and dicker of men
 To the peace of a stream and the calm of a glen
 Where fame doesn't matter and gain doesn't count
 And the soul can break loose from its fetters and mount
 To the hill tops of glory on wings of delight—
 Want to go fishing, and wait for a bite.

A Daring Venture.

Columbus in his caravel never faced such dangers as lie in the path of the audacious aviators who have been preparing to launch their "ships" into space for the passage of the Atlantic from the rocky shore of Newfoundland in a latitude where fogs abound at this season of the year and high winds are common. When Wilbur Wright made a pioneer flight up the Hudson, a six-mile breeze was all the weather he cared to encounter. Half a gale doesn't bother an aviator today; the question he asks himself is whether he will have fuel enough and his engine will hold out for the distance he plans to travel. The development in the power of the airplane since the beginning of the great war has exceeded even the predictions of the visionaries. Yet in considering that the aviators at St. John's purpose to fly to Ireland across nearly 2,000 miles of sea, it must be borne in mind that no aviator up to this time has made a nonstop flight of 1,000 miles.

Nevertheless, Hawker and Lieut. Commander Grievie, with their Sopwith biplane and Capt. Rayburn and Major Morgan with the rival Martinsyde, neither of which is a machine of impressive size and both of which are experiments, engaged to make the attempt to drive them over the Atlantic, an undertaking that would keep them in the air not less than twenty hours. There must be an irresistible fascination about aviation to cause men to risk their lives in attempting what seems to be the impossible. Would any insurance company write a policy upon the performance of these daring spirits? Lloyd's, which tackles almost any enterprise, may have given figures, but must have regarded the sporting chance as desperate.
 It is not in the blood of the born aviator with the eyes of the world upon him to balk at any danger. What the four men at St. John's engaged themselves to attempt is not an undertaking of obligation, like going into battle against an alert and crafty enemy. The odds are heavily against the success of a trial of the Atlantic passage by airplanes at any season of the year, and at this season, when fogs quickly form and fitful northeast gales may blow with extraordinary violence, the odds pile up alarmingly. Old Father Time, if he could have had his say, would have got out an injunction against the adventurers at St. John's, but for men to interfere would be an infringement of personal liberty. Science argues that the thing might be done; success would be

Huge Cost.

The estimated cost of the armies of occupation in Germany is one billion, one hundred and seventy-five million dollars per annum, or very nearly five million dollars a day. And thus we have another reason for the speedy conclusion of peace drafting.

ENJOYING LIFE.

It is good to save like some miser I consider vain and when blowing in some coin is wise, for a man is dead so long. This old thing of beauty, but it goes pass away, so when we have our duty, we should go ahead and do it. When we've earned our daily wage we should be for pleasure strong, the prophets and the sages say dead are dead so long. Let's be happy while we're living, happy in our fish way, but a friendly handshake to the more unlucky jay; something for the heathen, make him live one grand sweet some happy while we're breathing, for all be dead so long. Let's support worthy causes, help when we can, and be smiling at the clauses, when we go among the let us merrily skedaddle with transient human throng; never in the saddle, and we're dead so long.

George Street S. S. Anniversary

The Superintendent and officers of the George Street Sunday School are to be congratulated upon the splendid success of the celebration of their thirty-sixth anniversary—for success was from first to last. Nor was it to be wondered at, for the committee in charge had made careful preparation for the programme; hence, with such a fine day as yesterday was, there could scarcely have been any disappointment.
 The services held were three in number, and they were well attended by the scholars and teachers of each department of the school and also by the members of the Adult Bible Class. These, with the congregation proper, presented an encouraging sight to all who took part in the programme; and it must certainly have assured the committee of the appreciation of their good work; and we think from what Mr. Horwood, the Chairman of the Committee said, that they were greatly encouraged by the sight.
 The morning service was in charge of the Rev. D. B. Ashford, the newly appointed pastor of the Congregational Church of this city. Mr. Ashford was quite at home in the performance of his duties, and delivered his message with becoming dignity, and yet with a simplicity which at once suited the occasion and instructed the scholars, and interested the congregation—a task, at all times, not easy to accomplish. We have not time to quote the address, but we feel safe in saying that Mr. Ashford will for the future be a welcome guest at the celebrations and anniversaries of George Street Sunday School.
 The afternoon service was conducted by our respected townsman and devoted Sunday School worker, Mr. W. H. Peters, and he was assisted by Mr. Charles Steer the Superintendent of the school, and by W. H. Jones, Esq., of the Grenfell Institute. Mr. Peters gave some very interesting facts about the opening of George Street Sunday School, and mentioned several names of those who had organized the work. Not many of those are left, but the good work which they began is still going on, and their best monument is to be seen in the lives of the men and women whom they taught, and whom they instructed in the good way. Mr. Peters did his work well, and did not fall into the mistake which chairman unfortunately sometimes make, by having too much to say, and thereby prolonging the meet-

Overheard.

She—It was offered them for a hospital—just a great, big empty house, absolutely no conveniences.

He—Well?

She—We got the Gas Company men to work at once. Had gas radiators fixed in the corridors, incandescent gas everywhere, gas fires in the ward-rooms, gas water heaters for bathrooms, and all in a few days. We did work, I can tell you.

He—Reg'lar old gas works I call it.

She—A lot you know about it; why, you couldn't have done it with anything else in the time, and it reduces your work to next to nothing. No coals to carry, no grates to clean, plenty of hot water all the time.

He—What did the Colonel say?

She—He said it was "top hole", offered us staff appointments so's we could teach "his young blighters" how to hustle. may5,edif

Presentation.

A very pleasing event took place at the recent meeting of the Ladies' Aid when Mrs. Bugden on behalf of the Aid presented Mrs. Andrew Goobie, the President, with a casserole dish. The presentation was made on the occasion of Mrs. Goobie's birthday in recognition of her services as President. Mrs. Garland also presented Mrs. Goobie with a beautifully worked centre piece. The recipient thanked the Aid for their gift and appreciative remarks. Refreshments were then served. We join with the Ladies' Aid in wishing Mrs. Goobie many happy returns of her birthday.

From St. Pierre.

Schr. Herbert Warren, Capt. T. James, arrived in port Saturday from St. Pierre. This vessel left Gibraltar some time ago and made a beautiful run across. When on the coast ice was encountered and the captain deciding to take no chances, eventually reached St. Pierre, where the salt with which vessel was laden was landed, and some little damages resulting from the voyage were repaired. It took a week from the French Islands to port because of contrary winds and fog and the presence of much ice. Numerous bergs were seen on the way down, and skillful seamanship and keen look out had to be kept to clear them.

Joins Staff.

Mr. Garland Rogers, a returned soldier, joins the staff of the Telegram to-day, succeeding Mr. S. J. Hefferton, now editor of the "Industrial Worker." Mr. Rogers comes in the first time, but is animated by the desire, uppermost in all members of the "fraternity of the press," to get all the news possible for his paper.

Castaways Rescued.

The s. s. War-Nepigon, bound across from Halifax with a cargo of deals, put in here yesterday in a leaky condition, and will undergo repairs. While on the way across she picked up four French fishermen who had gone astray from their schooner on the banks. The men had been four days adrift and were almost dead from exposure. On arrival here two of them were sent to hospital by Dr. Campbell, and the others were sent to the Seamen's Institute. One of them is severely frostbitten.

Fishery Report.

A late report to the Board of Trade gives the catch of codfish between Channel and Grand Bay to-date as 9,943 qts., with 100 qts. and 4,000 lbs. of halibut for last week. Prospects at present are not very good, bait being scarce and the weather on the whole cold and backward. Operations now are almost suspended as the winter fishing is about over.

Newfoundlander Wins Honor.

Rev. Solomon W. Hann, of Victoria College, Toronto, is among the list of Bachelor of Divinity graduates of that institution. Mr. Hann is a native of Musgrave Haror. He is also a M. A. of Mount Allison University, and holds the military rank of Captain as a member of the Canadian Army Chaplain Service. Congratulations to our talented fellow countryman.

Anniversary of Prelate's Death.

To-day is the 50th anniversary of the death of the Rt. Rev. Dr. John Dalton, first Catholic Bishop of Harbour Grace. Dr. Dalton was consecrated by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Mullock, Bishop of St. John's, on June 1st, 1856, but remained in Carbonear for about three years. After the death of his uncle Very Rev. Charles Dalton, parish priest of Harbour Grace, which occurred on 17th June 1859, the Bishop removed to the Old Palace in that town, where he resided until his death on May 5th, 1859. His reason for not going to Harbour Grace immediately after his consecration was that he would not disturb his venerable uncle, Father Charles, who was so long in charge of that parish. Father Charles Dalton succeeded the Very Rev. Father Ewer, who died in 1833. There were three priests at his funeral obsequies, and the remains were brought through the town, and interred near the old Chapel. They were afterwards taken up and placed in a vault in the Cathedral, where they rest at present.

Peppery Pars.

Women are pretty, generally speaking, and of course very often pretty. The secret of success is still a secret. Velocity is what a man gets out of the way of a motor omnibus with. Two's company, three very often a divorce suit. It has been said that clothes make the man, but many a man owes much to his tailor. A pessimist is a man who has lost heart and found a liver. There are three good methods of communicating news and gossip: Telephone, telegraph, and a tell a woman. A cat is said to have nine lives, but she really hasn't one to spare when being chased by a big dog. It is as difficult to understand some people as it is for a bald-headed man to know where to leave off washing his face and start on his head.

Household Notes.

The bristles of a hairbrush can be stiffened by rinsing in a strong salt solution. Parsnips and salsify dug from the garden help to fill the spring need of vegetables. Never pack leather articles in any trunk that is to be closed for a length of time. A delicious marmalade is made with 2 grapefruits, 4 oranges, lemon juice and sugar. Housewives should make a point of exercising the large muscles as much as possible. Cut the ends of potatoes intended for stuffing before putting in the oven instead of afterward. All useless articles of whatever kind should be discarded during the spring housecleaning. Minceed hotted ham may be moistened with meat jelly, chilled and coated with mustard. It will be much easier to manœuvre

$50,000 to Lend.

The above headline is appearing daily in the newspapers, and on enquiry we find that the mortgages net the lender 6 to 8 per cent. a year, but never more.

WE ASK THE OWNERS OF THAT MONEY to give consideration to our offering of shares of the company that's building Newfoundland's first oil engine. We are prepared to show any enquirer just how and why big profits can be paid year in and year out. The mortgage is of course the essence of safety, but it would take a tremendous investment to earn a monthly income at 6 per cent. Our proposition should earn three times that, at least, and we invite your consideration for any amount. Just ask us for particulars.

ENJOYING LIFE.

It is good to save some pleasure, save a part of all we have, so that when we're old we may have some to enjoy. Oh, it makes a man dispirited when his age is eighty-nine, and he finds himself so busted that he cannot buy any more. But to save like some miser I consider vain and wrong. Blowing in some coin is wise. For a man is dead so long. This old world is a thing of beauty, but it soon passes away, so when we have done our duty, we should go ahead and enjoy it. When we've earned our money, we should be for pleasure strong. The prophets and the sages say the dead are dead so long. Let's be happy while we're living, happy in no other way, but a friendly handout to the more unlucky jay. Let's do something for the heathen, make ourselves one grand sweet song, for we're happy while we're breathing, for all be dead so long. Let's support worthy causes, help when we can, and when we're smiling. Let's be happy when we go among the people, let us merrily skedaddle, for we're transient, human throng; Dead over in the saddle, and we're dead so long.

Bolshevist Portraits.

The Russian Foreign Office.

T.
(The Times.)
In the preceding articles no mention has been made of the singular combination which directs the fortunes and misfortunes of the Bolshevik commissariat for Foreign Affairs. In reality the Bolshevik Foreign Office is a triumvirate consisting of Georghi Vasilievitch Tchitcherin, a pure Russian of good family, Lev Michailovitch Karachan, an Armenian, and Karl Radek, an Austrian Jew of doubtful antecedents. It is a strangely ill-assorted trio, the members of which are continually playing out of tune, and who, indeed, are only kept together by the brilliant conducting of the great Bolshevik chief d'orchestre.

TCHITCHERIN.
Tchitcherin, the nominal Foreign Minister, is one of those mystically sentimental revolutionaries of whose sincerity there can be no doubt. Indeed, the high position which he holds in the Bolshevik party is due far more to his personal integrity and to the genuineness of his beliefs than to any administrative talents or political ability. Holding the "cheen," or rank, of a nobleman, Tchitcherin inherited from his relations a considerable estate, which, as a Socialist, he voluntarily resigned. In the earlier part of his life he was employed for a few months by the Foreign Office of the old regime. Very soon, however, he abandoned this ungenial occupation for the Socialist cause, to which he has since devoted his whole life.

Like most of his colleagues, Tchitcherin has been an exile in many lands, and is a linguist of very considerable ability, speaking and writing French, German, and English with great facility and correctness. In 1907 we hear of him as a member of the Central Committee of the Berlin Social Democratic Bureau, where he played an important role as a Socialist proselytizer amongst the numerous and needy Russian emigrants in Berlin. He did not succeed in escaping the watchful attentions of the Prussian police, and in 1908 he was arrested at Charlottenburg, fined for bearing a false name, and banished from Germany. During the first years of the war he lived in London, where he established close relations with the British Socialist Party, being finally interned by the authorities. The manner of his release and of his return to Russia in December, 1917, is well known. After the Brest-Litovsk treaty he succeeded Trotsky as Commissary for Foreign Affairs.

About 40 years of age, small of stature, with drooping shoulders, long nose, small red eyes, sandy-coloured beard and moustache, and sandy-coloured hair, Tchitcherin is a man of insignificant appearance and possesses none of that personal magnetism which distinguishes Lenin and Trotsky. Always polite and almost apologetic for his own existence, he cut a poor figure in face of the imperious demands of the German diplomats during their short tenure of the Maison Berg at Moscow in the summer of last year. As an orator he is as lame and as halting as the stolidest Anglo-Saxon. In his office, however, at the House of Soviets, in other words, the requisitioned Hotel Metropole, he is an indefatigable worker and is to be found at his desk early and late poring over documents or telegrams.

Inside the party Tchitcherin is almost a nonentity and has no outstanding claims to distinction beyond a fanatical belief in the doctrine of equality and an almost slavish admiration for Lenin, without whose advice and counsel he decides nothing. He was appointed Commissary for Foreign Affairs at a time when Lenin's policy of "beating to windward" demanded a certain submissiveness and avoidance of friction in the Bolshevik relations with the Central Powers. As the victim selected for this sacrifice the timorous Tchitcherin was obviously more suitable than any of his more impetuous and less cultured colleagues. There he has remained to this day, assured of a place in history as the man who has written more diplomatic Notes, in a shorter period of time than any other Foreign Minister in the world.

KARACHAN.
L. M. Karachan is perhaps a somewhat stronger personality than Tchitcherin, but in saying that one has said all. He, too, was presumably appointed as Tchitcherin's assistant more for the charm of his manners than on account of any outstanding ability.

Only 22 years old, Karachan, with his tall figure, his finely chiselled features, and his well-combed black beard and moustache, is a man of striking personal appearance and is easily the best looking of the Bolshevik Commissaries. Always well dressed, as an actor or artist of note he would not be out of place on the boulevards of Paris. An Armenian, he is an anti-Turk and has no love for the Central Powers. During the war he was one of those Bolsheviks who most favoured an economic alliance with the Allies.

In the Bolshevik Foreign Office he is popularly supposed to be at the head of the wide system of secret service which the Bolsheviks have always employed with considerable success. Under his tutelage a considerable army of foreign Bolsheviks is employed in translating Bolshevik pamphlets into every language in the world. Here, too, is edited the Call, a newspaper published in English and intended for distribution amongst the British troops in North Russia. Temperamentally Karachan belongs essentially to that class of Bolshevik which believes that the pen is mightier than the sword. It need scarcely be stated that in their methods the advocates of open diplomacy differ little from the Bernsteinists and the Mirbachs, whom they have so consistently pilloried.

Holding the Cables.

Among the minor questions, but nevertheless a very important one, which the Peace Conference at Paris has had to settle, is the disposition of the former German cables. The future ownership of the lines of ocean cables, belonging to Germany, which were either cut by or passed into the hands of the Allies during the war has been the subject of much discussion. It involved an interesting point of international law, as related to the sea. The point raised was of an unusual nature, namely, whether the cutting of an enemy cable and the displacement of it could be regarded as analogous to the capture of an enemy ship at sea.

A Paris cable despatch states that Britain has now carried her contention in the Peace Conference with regard to the ownership of the German cables, and a clause dealing with this point, which has been drafted for inclusion in the Treaty of Peace, places at the disposal of the Allied and Associated Powers the following fifteen German cables:

Emden to Vigo, Emden to Brest, Emden to Tenerife, Emden to the Azores (two cables)—the Azores to New York (two cables), Tenerife to Monrovia, Monrovia to Pernambuco, Dome to Dussel, Constantinople to Constanza, Tsingtan to Shanghai, Yep to Shanghai, Yep to Guam, Yep to Monado (Celebes).

It is stated that the draft of the article of the Peace Treaty gives to Germany only the right to repair at its own expense the German cables which had been cut but not used by the Allies during the war, and to replace all sections of the line which had been displaced or are now in use by any Allied Power. The interpretation placed upon this clause by the Paris correspondent is that it does not apply to the cables named above, which will not be restored to their former German owners.

Two of these cables cross the Atlantic from Emden to the Azores, and as we pointed out some time ago one of these cables which had been cut in the early stages of the war, was picked up and carried on into Halifax, where it has been operated in connection with the Pacific Cable Board. It is not indicated what arrangement is to be made as to the future operation of these cables, but as we contended in a previous article, it may properly be urged that this particular cable should be allocated to Canada and maintained as a portion of the All-Red Route, making a complete all-British line from the United Kingdom to Australia.—Morning Chronicle.

The Garden Campaign.

Dear Girls and Boys,—We promised to tell you this week about the garden competitions, and the prizes connected with them. In case anyone missed the earlier letter, we may say that the object of these competitions is to induce children to improve the appearance of any ground near their homes by planting flowers or vegetables. Girls and boys between the ages of eight and sixteen inclusive are asked to compete.

The following prizes are offered subject to the conditions given below:—

(a) 1st prize—Five Dollars.
2nd prize—Three Dollars.
3rd prize—Two Dollars,
and three prizes of One Dollar each.

Five varieties of seed to be chosen from the following:—
Alyssum, Cornflower, Gandydust, Nasturtium, Balsam, Marigold, Chrysanthemum, Sunflower, Eschscholtzia Poppy.

(b) An equal number of prizes of the same value is offered for the best plants grown from three varieties of seed selected from the following:—
Radish, Beet, Parsley, Lettuce, Dwarf Peas.

(c) One prize of Two Dollars is offered to competitors of any age for the most successful attempt to cover an unsightly fence or building with climbing plants, of which any variety may be chosen. The following are suggested:—
Morning Glory,
Climbing Nasturtium,
Scarlet Runner Beans, or Hops, if roots can be obtained.

(d) A prize of Five Dollars also open to competitors of any age, is offered for the best window-box. Plants may be either, flowers or ferns.

Conditions:—
(1) All intending competitors will kindly send in their names and addresses before June 10th to A. M. A., Box 476, saying in which group or groups they wish to enter. Children may compete for one or more of the four groups; adults for (c) and (d).

(2) The gardens to be inspected and prizes awarded early in September. Window-boxes will be inspected at intervals.

(3) Advice may be obtained from Adults, but all work in connection with gardens must be done by children. Gardens may be large or small. Address all enquires for advice to Box 476.

The wet weather may have delayed the cleaning-up of plots but there is still plenty of time. Do not attempt to dig the ground for some weeks yet, but make your plans and buy your seeds.

The Wrong Flock.

(From the Wichita Eagle.)

A merchant in a nearby town has about decided to go out of business since he wrote an "ad" for the local paper in which he expounded upon the vast crowds of customers that visited his store. The printer made the mistake, but as the merchant read his own proof he has no alibi. Anyhow, here is his statement as it appeared to the townspeople:
"If you could have seen the crowds that flocked at our store yesterday you would realize that the picking is good on our bargain counters." How on earth can he ever expect to square himself with the ladies who visited his counters upon that fatal day.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

On Oct. 22 our Mr. O. K. Nelson started on a round trip to New York via S. S. "Cascapadia". On the return trip the vessel was shipwrecked south of St. Pierre on Nov. 17. The passengers and crew were rescued by an English vessel and landed in England.

Being an American citizen, Mr. Nelson could only get permission to go to New York, where he arrived on January 19. A few days later he was taken ill with the "flu" and forced to remain for two months, finally reaching St. John's on the S. S. "Digby".

During Mr. Nelson's absence a number of shipments arrived which had to be held at the station till his return, as there was no one at our office here with authority to receive shipments.

The above will explain why our goods were held here so long, also why many letters addressed to this office have not been answered. We are pleased to announce that we have made arrangements with THE COLUMBIA TRADING CO. of New York to act as their agents in Newfoundland, and in future they will attend to the purchase and shipment of all goods ordered from New York through this office.

THE COLUMBIA TRADING CO. are general exporters and give careful attention to the purchase and shipment of all American goods. They also handle a large quantity of furs, and raw furs. We can arrange for any of our customers to deal directly with their New York office if desired.

THE UNILECTRIC MACHINE is becoming more generally recognized as the best electric lighting system on the market. These machines can now be equipped with a self-starter so that machine can be started or stopped at any time of the day or night by pressing a button in any room in the house. This equipment gives the UNILECTRIC every advantage claimed for the so-called "battery systems" without the annoyance and expense of caring for batteries. Many battery systems which have been in use for only a short time have been replaced by the UNILECTRIC.

THE HOWE SCALE CO. is one of the oldest and most reliable concerns in the business. They have recently perfected a "springless" computing scale which is the finest scale of its kind ever made. Let us show you this new Scale.

KNOCK DOWN ENGINES—the only engine of its kind in the world. Price of engine alone: 4 H.P., $110.00; 5 H.P., $175.00. Price complete with propeller, shafting and tank: 4 H.P., $140.00; 5 H.P., $210.00. We will set up this engine and ship it to you ready to run for $5.00 extra. Last year shipments were greatly delayed owing to war conditions. Now we have some of these engines here in St. John's and others coming. These engines are not an experiment. They are the idea of measuring every part by the finest gauge, then shipping the parts (unpainted) to be assembled and painted by the purchaser. In this way the engines can be sold much cheaper. If you need a reliable engine at the cheapest possible price, write or telegraph us at once.

GULOWSEN GREI ENGINES—These engines are built in Norway where the finest iron in the world is found. They are of the modified "hot head" type with electric equipment which starts engine and operates till engine is thoroughly heated. These engines have proved so reliable that the Norwegian fishermen do not put masts in their fishing boats, but make long trips at sea, depending on engine alone. They are built in sizes from 4 H.P. to 280 H.P. We will make special prices on the first 2 or 3 engines sold, as the first few engines will show our people what a "real oil engine" can do.

We would appreciate the favor if all customers owing us balances for goods purchased would kindly remit the amount promptly. We will also ask those to whom money is due to kindly send itemized statement.

Unmolested Scoundrels.

Despite the terrible lessons to be learned from Russia, there are still people misguided enough to declare that they believe in Bolshevism. Where the menace will end no one can tell.

Lenin is the man who is largely responsible for the spread of this dangerous teaching. Trotsky is the brain, the power behind the movement. I have met both men.

In looks both are unimpressive. They do not stamp themselves favourably upon one's memory. To my way of thinking both are unmitigated scoundrels. Of the two Trotsky is, perhaps, the greater. For, as I have said, he supplies the motive mental power behind the combine and Lenin carries out his ideas.

An Evil Influence.

Unkempt rascal though he is, Lenin—who, incidentally, can look quite smart on occasions—has a great following in Russia. He exercises an influence for evil over the ignorant peasantry second, perhaps, only to that wielded by the arch-scoundrel

Rasputin, who held the late Empress and most of the women of the late Czar's Court enthralled in his toils.

He revels in riot and bloodshed. He deals out death to those who dare to disobey his orders and he has no regard for the honour of womanhood.

I have had the dubious pleasure of being personally acquainted with some of the men who constitute the Bolshevik army.

Out and out blackguards, degenerates of the worst type, men used to unbridled licence, making no effort to put any rein on their worst passions, they do not stop at robbery, blackmail, outrage, or murder. No crime is too outrageous for them to commit. Low-foreheaded louts, they look exactly what they are—debased hooligans.

Encouraged by their officers and leaders, they have introduced into Russia a gospel of free love besides which the white slave traffic pales into insignificance.

Not long ago a fete was held to celebrate the anniversary of the creation of Lenin's army. On this occasion there was a general raid on the homes of the upper and middle classes for food, which was then used to give a free banquet to the scum of the population.

At intervals during the day numbers of citizens of the middle-class type, who are hated by the Bolsheviks, were led out to the prisons to be executed in public for the amusement of the mob.

Women and Girls Helpless.

In the evening middle-class women and girls were placed at the mercy of ruffians who had proved themselves faithful supporters of the Bolsheviks.

News was received recently from Southern Russia that the Red Guards, on the pretext of searching for arms, are entering houses and carrying off women and girls. The women are taken into the soldiers' rooms—and often dead bodies are seen in the street the morning after.

Women of gentle birth are being made to clean the dirtiest quarters of towns. They are shamefully treated in the barracks, and disappear for days.

Owing to the spread of Bolshevism, the life of no woman in Russia is safe. By a recent iniquitous decree which has spread indignation throughout the civilized world, women in a certain province have to give themselves to the State, in circumstances too revolting to describe in these columns.

Outrage and Murder.

Failure to comply with this new law is visited by the severest penalties. Sometimes death in its most hideous form is meted out to women to whom honour is more precious than life.

Wife and husband may be sitting comfortably by the fire-side one evening. Suddenly the locked door of the room is burst open. Two or three members of the Red Guard, as the Bolsheviks chose to call their soldiers, enter. Everything of value in the house is taken. Then these apologies for soldiers trump up a false charge, tear husband and wife apart, take the man before Lenin and the woman to a worse fate, and the chances are that they will never see each other again.

Such is the gospel of the Bolsheviks. It is the gospel in which they believe and they carry it out to the letter in all its hideous, repulsive teachings.

By force and robbery these people get plenty of money to pursue their hideous, repulsive teachings.

By force and robbery these people get plenty of money to pursue their hideous propaganda. They control a goodly section of the newspapers. They only allow news which suits their fell purpose to filter through to the Russians.

Only on rare occasions is the British public given a glimpse behind the scenes such as I have been able to afford in this article—a glimpse of a gospel which should turn the average decent-minded man sick and cause him for ever to treat the canker of Bolshevism as he would treat the plague—as a thing unclean, unwholesome and vile.

The Cactus.

We are accustomed to think of the giant cactus of southwestern deserts (which few of us have seen, though often we have read about it) as a mere freak of vegetation.

It is all of that. But it is also one of the most useful of plants to man. There is no telling how the Indians of Sonora, in Mexico, would get along without it.

To begin with, its fruit in the bearing season (June and July) is the principal food of the natives. What they cannot eat fresh they boil to a syrup for winter use. Some of the syrup is fermented, yielding an intoxicating drink for occasions of festival.

The fruit harvest yields incidentally great quantities of seeds, which are collected in sacks for storage, like grain. These seeds are pounded to meal in a stone mortar and utilized for making bread; also for feeding chickens, which fatten rapidly on the diet.

The giant cactus has a skeleton composed of riblike elements that furnish a light, strong and elastic material for building purposes. They are used for the construction of chicken-coops, chairs, traps and many other things. A single rib serves for a long stick by which to knock down the ripe fruits from their lofty elevation—the huge plant sometimes attaining a height of fifty feet.

Woodpeckers peck holes in the trunk and branches of the cactus, eating the pulp. As a means of self-protection, the plant lines these cavities with woody fibre, and owls and other birds find them most convenient for nests. When the cactus dies the linings drop out, furnishing ready-made wooden cups and water-bottles.

The thirsty traveller in the desert can obtain all the drink he needs by firing a rifle or pistol bullet into the trunk of a giant cactus. Thereupon a fluid exudes that is an acceptable equivalent for water, though it does not taste good.

"I Shall Have to Quit, Principal, I Cannot Manage This Class"

"HOW is that?"

"Well I have tried hard enough, but the worry is too much for me and has got on my nerves."

"You should not worry!"

"That is just what everybody tells me, but I cannot sleep nights, and can only think of the troubles I will have with the class next day. I have stood it as long as ever I can. The doctor says I must quit before it is too late."

"Did you ever try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?"

"No, I never have."

"I have never used it myself, but I have heard so many of the teachers telling about how it helped them when they were on the verge of a nervous breakdown that I have come to think there must be something in it."

"Yes, I have often heard about it, too, but did not just think that it would help me. Perhaps I had better try it."

"I would if I were you. We do not want to lose you, for you are just getting this class into good shape. Three teachers failed in this room, and the boys got rather unruly. That is why it has been so difficult for you, but if you can get your nerves built up you will get along all right."

"Well, I will make another try, and in the meantime I shall begin using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

In your nerves lie your greatest strength and greatest weakness. When the nerves are weakened and exhausted by worry, disease or overwork every muscle loses its strength and endurance. Every organ is partially paralyzed and the mind befogged.

By strengthening and building up the nervous system Dr. Chase's Nerve Food brings new energy and strength to mind and body. With new nerve force comes the power to achieve and the joy of health and vigor. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. On every box of the genuine you will find the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

Diving Dangers.

Owing to the extension of salvage operations, divers have been in great demand during the war. It is risky work, for the diver has to cope with pressure and its effects, with dangers to his strapping, which, though very stout and strong, can be seen through without his perceiving that it is rubbing against, say, a jagged plate or other rough surface.

There is also the danger of coming up too quickly in case of emergency. On any accident to the airpipe the diver has to get to the surface inside two minutes. This means that the change of pressure is very rapid and the effect on the blood very dangerous. In the ordinary way the diver comes up in stages, pausing at intervals to accustom himself to the new conditions.

There have been attempts to turn him into a sort of submarine by the use of rigid suits. The drawback is that he is thus unable to work, and so far the problem of combining movement with something which will resist pressure does not appear to have been solved.

Weather and Wealth.

No one watches weather conditions more closely and anxiously now than salvage experts. Numerous ships with valuable cargoes lie waiting recapture, subject to the whim of tide and wind, off our isles.

A French steamer—the Tours—equipped with the latest machinery and appointments, bearing a rich cargo, lies off the rocks near Mullins, Swanesa. The salvage firm who have the matter in hand are waiting their opportunity, favoured by the weather, to get her off and recover her cargo.

Quite one of the most extraordinary tales in this connection surrounds the ship Avenger, which over ten years ago encountered a tidal wave off an island in the Gulf of Mexico. Not all the concentrated efforts of a dozen salvage firms could move her.

So, with her cargo worth many thousands of pounds, she remained until 1915, when a summer tidal wave obligingly shifted her off the rocks, and she was enabled thereby to be towed into a safe harbour and her cargo removed.

If, therefore, the salvage season brings good weather and no squalls, salvage firms will reap a rich harvest.

Why Shoes Wear Out.

The average step is 26 inches. This means 2,437 steps to the mile, or 12,185 in a five-mile day. A person weighing 160 pounds, in a day has pounded into his shoes 974 tons and 1690 pounds of meat, bones and trouble.

les, and all this he carries above his shoes. Men buy three pairs of shoes a year. A steel hammer weighing 169 pounds coming down at that rate for four months would have to be renewed each day and would have to be fished out of the deepest hole in the earth at the end of four months.—Sunshine Magazine.

The Rhodes Scholarships.

The Rhodes Trustees announce that the election of scholars will be resumed this year, when there will be an election for two candidates to fill up the scholarships for 1918 and 1919.

Next year the Trust again proposes to choose two candidates for 1920 and 1921, after which the annual elections will resume their normal course.

Candidates must be British subjects and unmarried. They must have passed their nineteenth birthday but must not have passed their 25th birthday, on the first of October of the year for which they are elected.

Candidates must have had two years of training at some degree-granting University or College, or a course of study accepted by the Trustees as an equivalent.

The Trust is very anxious, other things being equal, to give first consideration to men who have showed their patriotism by going on active service.

Amongst those applying there may be some who have not been able, on account of service, to get the two years of university life required by the regulations. Oxford has arranged to excuse such men from Responsions, and the Trust thinks that they should be allowed to compete.

On the other hand the local committee has been strongly urged not to select anyone who by the want of preparatory training is not fairly prepared to get good results from a course at Oxford.

Men who have not been on service will be expected to meet the University requirements.

The Scholar elected for 1918 will be expected to go into residence not later than January 1920. The one elected for 1919 will take up work in Oxford in October 1920.

Applications for the 1918 scholarship to be accompanied by ten copies of certificates and testimonials should be made to the undersigned not later than July 1st of this year.

The candidate for 1918 will be eligible if he were not more than 25 years of age on October 1st, 1917.

The date for receiving applications for the 1919 scholarship will be announced later.
