THE Phantom Lover.

By the Author of "A Bachelor Husband."

CHAPTER XXXV.

It was late that night when Micky turned up at the Delands. He had taken extravagant pains with his toilet, lingering over it as long as possible. Ever since the arrival of that parcel from Esther, he had been trying to make up his mind to take the train—the step, and ask Marie Deland to be his wife. He was miserably sure that she would accept him, miserably sure that he was already forgiven for the past.

He kept on persuading himself that it was the one and only thing left to him to do. He tried to believe that once the affair was settled, he would find some sort of happiness. After all, what did it matter whom he married if it could not be Esther?

He looked pale but determined when he walked into the Delands' drawing-room and found Marie there alone. She turned to greet him with a little start, movement that was somehow comforting.

"Here, at any rate, was some one who really cared for him and was glad to see him. He took the hand she held out, bending, kissed it.

"She caught her breath on a little sound that was almost a sob, but she checked it instantly and tried to laugh.

"This is almost like old times," she said. "Quite like old times," Micky answered recklessly. "We've just turned the pages back again and gone on where we left off, that's all."

He looked at her and tried to forget everything else. She was pretty and dainty enough to satisfy the most exacting man, and she loved him! To a man who is disappointed and unhappy there is great consolation in the knowledge that to one person at least he counts before anything else in the world.

She looked up at him, and impulsively he took a step towards her; another moment and Micky would have sealed his fate, had not Mrs. Deland pushed open the door and walked into the room.

"It had not been an effort for her to forgive Micky for his cavalier treatment of her daughter. For the last week she had been busy telling everyone that Marie and Micky had made up their quarrel—entirely, Marie's fault it was, you know," and so on.

"You are going to give me half your dances at least," Micky said, when they reached the Hoopers. He took the card from Marie's hand and filled in his own initials recklessly against the numbers.

She laughed tremulously; she was too happy to think of anything but the present, she had got Micky again, and that was all she cared about.

"Good-evening!" said a voice at her side, and, turning, she found Raymond Ashton at her elbow.

Marie did not care particularly for Ashton. She greeted him rather coldly.

"So you're back in town," she said. "And your wife?"

"Not here to-night," he answered. "She has a bad cold, so I persuaded her to stay at home. May I have a dance?"

She gave him her card reluctantly. She would have liked to have refused, but she thought Micky would be annoyed; she did not know that he and this man were friends no longer.

She saw him glance at Micky's many initials on her card, saw the half-ironical smile he gave as he looked at her.

"Mallowes is back, then?" he said. "Yes—he came with us to-night."

"Really? I thought—" he paused eloquently.

Marie flushed, she knew quite well what he meant; that he must have known how Micky had once deserted her.

"I understood that Mallowes was in Paris."

"At least I was told so by an acquaintance of mine—who was staying here with him."

Marie's eyes dilated.

"Father and I crossed by the same boat as he did," she said with an effort. "He was alone then."

Ashton laughed delectably. "Ah, but not afterwards," he said—then checked himself. "But I forget, I must not tell tales out of school, only as every one seems to have heard of his penchant for the little lady from Eldred's"—he laughed lightly.

Marie stood staring down the long ballroom. The colour slowly faded from her cheeks, leaving her as white as her frock. She looked at Ashton, intent on a crease in his glove, and she broke out stammering:

"How dare you say such a thing! I don't believe you—in Paris—Micky—"

He raised his brows with assumed surprise.

"I'm sorry—perhaps I should not have spoken—but I thought every one knew—"

She shrugged her shoulders. "Of course it may be a mistake, but I happen to know the lady in question slightly—through Mallowes—and it was she who told me. . . . I am sorry if my carelessness has pained you—excuse me, I am engaged for this dance."

He bowed and left her standing there, white and dazed.

"I don't believe it! I don't," she told herself despairingly, and yet in her heart something told her that, for once at least, Ashton had spoken the truth.

"Our dance, I think," said Micky beside her.

She laid her hand on his arm mechanically; they went the round of the room once, then Micky, glancing down, saw how white she was and how her head drooped towards his shoulder.

He lightened his arm a little—he swept her sedately out of the crowd and into a small ante-room; he put her into a chair and bent over her in concern.

"You are not well—what can I do? Can I get you anything?"

For a moment she did not speak.

"What did he say? Who are you talking about? What do you mean?"

She began to sob; quiet, tearless sobs that seemed to bring no relief with them.

"Raymond Ashton—he told me—here! just now—that you . . ." She stopped, catching her breath at the change in Micky's face; it no longer looked tender—his eyes were fierce.

"Ashton! What has he said?" His voice was roughly insistent.

"He told me that you were in Paris—a week or two ago—with a girl from Eldred's."

"It's a lie!" The words escaped Micky before he could check them; his then all at once she rose to her feet; she clutched Micky by both arms; he could feel how hands shook; there was heartbroken tragedy in her brown eyes as she looked into his face. For once she had forgotten her pride and the indifference into which she had been drilled for twenty years; she was no longer Marie Deland, a sought-after and courted beauty; she was just an unhappy, jealous woman.

"It isn't true, Micky, is it?" she entreated him; her voice was only a broken whisper. "Tell me—oh, please, please, tell me. You don't care for her, do you?—it isn't true, is it?"

She forgot that he did not know of what she was speaking; it seemed as if everybody in the world must know of this tragedy that had desolated her life.

"I can't hear it any longer—it's no use. . . . I've borne all I can. . . . O Micky, . . . Micky."

He forced her hands from his arms; he put her back into the chair and set beside her; he hated to see the white despair of her face.

"You're ill—upset. . . . It's all right—everything is all right. You're not to worry any more. . . . Everything is all right."

At that moment he would have given his soul could he have truthfully said that he wanted her for his wife. He cursed himself for a cur and a coward, but somehow he could not force the words to his lips.

She lay back against the cushions, hiding her face.

There was a tragic moment of silence. Out in the ballroom a noisy on-step was in bolterous progress; there was a great deal of laughter and chattering; the little ante-room seemed as if it must be in another world.

Micky got up. He walked across the room and shut the door. There was a hard look about his mouth. For an instant he stood staring down at the floor irresolutely, then he came back to Marie. He bent over her, but he did not touch her.

He spoke her name gently.

"Marie."

She did not raise her head.

"I want to speak to you," he said huskily.

She looked up then. Her face was flushed and quivering, and the brown eyes that for a moment met his own were full of an unutterable grief and shame.

"Oh," she said in a broken whisper. "If you'd just go away—and leave me to myself."

Micky did not answer. The impossibility of ever going back now struck him to the soul. This was the end, the very end—he had burned his boats and bidden good-bye to the woman he loved for ever.

"Then all his natural civility rose in his heart. Hitherto it had been only of himself that he had thought, but now . . . his eyes softened as they rested on the girl's bowed head; he stooped and took her hand, held it fast in his steady grip.

"Will you marry me?" he said very gently.

And, oh, the long time before she answered! It seemed to Micky that he lived through years as he stood there with the rattling tune of the on-step in his ears and Marie's tragic figure before his eyes. Was she never going to speak?

Then she sat up very stiff and straight—there were tears scorching her flushed cheeks, and her eyes seemed to burn.

"Will I—will I—marry you?" she echoed, as if not understanding.

Her voice rose a little.

"Then it isn't true. . . . It can't be true—what he said?"

"What did he say? Who are you talking about? What do you mean?"

She began to sob; quiet, tearless sobs that seemed to bring no relief with them.

"Raymond Ashton—he told me—here! just now—that you . . ." She stopped, catching her breath at the change in Micky's face; it no longer looked tender—his eyes were fierce.

"Ashton! What has he said?" His voice was roughly insistent.

"He told me that you were in Paris—a week or two ago—with a girl from Eldred's."

"It's a lie!" The words escaped Micky before he could check them; his first thought was to defend Esther. "It's an infernal lie!" he said again violently.

It turned him cold to think of all that the brute must have implied.

The tears were frozen on Marie's cheeks—her hands were clasped together in her lap.

When at last she found her voice it was strained and cracked.

" . . . that she told him you were there with her. . . . Her brown eyes searched his face as if they were trying to read his very soul. "It's a lie," she said shrilly. "It's she who is lying—she told Raymond Ashton that she was there with you."

"She told him. . . ."

For a moment Micky stood like a man turned to stone. Was this the truth?—that Esther had told Ashton.

He looked again at Marie.

"When did Ashton tell you this?"

"To-night—not a moment ago—he told me."

"Here!" Then to how many more people had he told the same distorted story?

The blood beat into Micky's face; it seemed to hammer maddeningly against his temples. Nothing counted but the fact that Esther's name was being bandied about on the lips of the creature. To stop him—to stop his living tongue was the one thought in Micky's mind; he saw the whole world red as he tore open the door of the silent room and strode out into the corridor.

The noisy rattles had ceased, but a storm of deafening applause and cries of "Encore!" filled the ballroom.

An elderly man cannoned into Micky, and stopped short with a laughing apology.

"Hullo, Mallowes—not dancing—what the deuce is the matter?" he asked with sudden change of voice.

Micky passed a shaking hand across his mouth—

"Nothing. . . . where's Ashton—have you seen Ashton?"

"I've just left him; he isn't dancing either. Can't think what's happened to you youngsters to-day. When I was your age. . . . I've borne all I can. . . . O Micky, . . . Micky."

He forced her hands from his arms; he put her back into the chair and set beside her; he hated to see the white despair of her face.

"You're ill—upset. . . . It's all right—everything is all right. You're not to worry any more. . . . Everything is all right."

At that moment he would have given his soul could he have truthfully said that he wanted her for his wife. He cursed himself for a cur and a coward, but somehow he could not force the words to his lips.

She lay back against the cushions, hiding her face.

There was a tragic moment of silence. Out in the ballroom a noisy on-step was in bolterous progress; there was a great deal of laughter and chattering; the little ante-room seemed as if it must be in another world.

Micky got up. He walked across the room and shut the door. There was a hard look about his mouth. For an instant he stood staring down at the floor irresolutely, then he came back to Marie. He bent over her, but he did not touch her.

He spoke her name gently.

"Marie."

She did not raise her head.

"I want to speak to you," he said huskily.

She looked up then. Her face was flushed and quivering, and the brown eyes that for a moment met his own were full of an unutterable grief and shame.

"Oh," she said in a broken whisper. "If you'd just go away—and leave me to myself."

Micky did not answer. The impossibility of ever going back now struck him to the soul. This was the end, the very end—he had burned his boats and bidden good-bye to the woman he loved for ever.

"Then all his natural civility rose in his heart. Hitherto it had been only of himself that he had thought, but now . . . his eyes softened as they rested on the girl's bowed head; he stooped and took her hand, held it fast in his steady grip.

"Will you marry me?" he said very gently.

And, oh, the long time before she answered! It seemed to Micky that he lived through years as he stood there with the rattling tune of the on-step in his ears and Marie's tragic figure before his eyes. Was she never going to speak?

Then she sat up very stiff and straight—there were tears scorching her flushed cheeks, and her eyes seemed to burn.

"Will I—will I—marry you?" she echoed, as if not understanding.

Her voice rose a little.

"Then it isn't true. . . . It can't be true—what he said?"

"What did he say? Who are you talking about? What do you mean?"

She began to sob; quiet, tearless sobs that seemed to bring no relief with them.

"Raymond Ashton—he told me—here! just now—that you . . ." She stopped, catching her breath at the change in Micky's face; it no longer looked tender—his eyes were fierce.

"Ashton! What has he said?" His voice was roughly insistent.

"He told me that you were in Paris—a week or two ago—with a girl from Eldred's."

"It's a lie!" The words escaped Micky before he could check them; his Allied Government Will Make Declaration.

British and French Have Reached Agreement--May Day Almost Quiet in Paris--Reds Demonstrate in Toronto the Loyal.

AN AGREEMENT REACHED.

LONDON, May 1.—The British and French Governments have reached an agreement on how to deal with Germany to compel payment of reparations and exact immediate guarantees. In broad outline it is agreed that the Allies will make a declaration to-morrow, but not to Germany. They will announce that the Reparations Commission will notify Germany as to the amount she is required to pay and how it is to be met, together with the proposed financial controls. The Allies will then announce that within ten days, this period being subject to possible modification by the Supreme Council to-morrow, they will proceed to carry out the penalties if the terms are not accepted. The plan provides for a competitive scheme of supervision and control of Germany's sources of revenue. It is not yet completed, but while the experts are still working on it, France will proceed with all her military preparations for the occupation of the Ruhr Basin. The French Government will, to-morrow, order the mobilization of one additional class. This is the general result of an agitated day of conversations and conferences that seemed likely to end in sharp disagreement among the Allies. The agreement was brought about by the intervention of the Belgian Foreign Minister, M. Jaspar, at the meeting of the Supreme Council this afternoon. The whole subject will come up for discussion again at another meeting of the Council to-morrow morning. Both sides feel that they measurably succeeded in having their policies accepted. The French Parliament is not in session, as M. Briand was able to accept a short time extension without having to explain to the Chamber forthwith, while Lloyd George has satisfied to the same degree, opposing liberal opinion. The French Premier asked the British naval co-operation, suggesting the blockade of Hamburg. The British Prime Minister replied that public opinion in the United States would not approve of such course, and he could not agree to a blockade which would bring the Allies into controversy with the United States. M. Briand agreed to this point of view. He added that the course of the United States had been absolutely correct. Uncertainty still exists among French delegates over the possibility that Washington may endeavor to mediate, they declare this is not their desire, but some of the delegates have made it understood that it does not originate with French Ambassador M. Jusserand.

FRANCE IS WORKING.

PARIS, May 1.—The first of May with its traditional revolutionary demonstrations, passed to-day with probably less excitement than an ordinary Sunday. There were fewer than the usual number of arrests for minor infringements of the law in the city and not a single case of disorder was reported throughout any other portion of France. In Paris Labor Headquarters closed shop at noon, when it was found that few workers were coming there to have their cards punched, in proof of the fact that they were not working to-day. Generally the only idlers were those persons in trades that never carry on work on Sundays. There were Red flag parades in a number of cities, but these had few spectators. Most of the populace throughout the country enjoyed to-day in watching.

MAY DAY IN BRUSSELS.

BRUSSELS, May 1.—May Day demonstrations throughout Belgium were carried out without any disorders.

KNOX PEACE RESOLUTION.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The first step of the Harding Administration toward placing the United States on a technical legal basis of peace was taken last night by the Senate in adopting the Knox Peace resolution. The resolution now goes to the House with prospects of prompt action there. It would repeal war resolutions affecting Germany and Austro-Hungary, release enemy property, reserve to United States all rights and privileges under the Treaty of Versailles, and other peace treaties.

NO NEW DEMAND.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Denial was made at the State Department yesterday that any new demand had been sent to Russian Soviet authorities re prisoners in Soviet Russia. The Department has insisted, however, the release of prisoners, but it has refused to deal directly with the Soviet authorities. A despatch from Riga on Saturday said United States Government had demanded the release of U. S. Citizens held prisoners in Soviet Russia.

LOCKED OUT WORKERS.

CHICAGO, May 1.—The lock out, declared by employing associations in the building trade, summarily stopped work on approximately thirty-five million dollars worth of construction work yesterday. More than ten thousand workers were affected.

REDS IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, May 1.—Two hundred men gathered in Queen's Park Saturday afternoon at a "Red" meeting which was orderly, but strongly critical of the local authorities for having used police to scatter a crowd of local unemployed from in front of the City Hall, one day last week. Followers were present in large numbers at the Queen's Park meeting. Mrs. Joseph Knight, one of the local leaders of the "Reds," offered for sale some book, including, "Lenine, his life and works," "Left wing of Communism," by Lenine, and "Red Menace" by Isaac Macbride.

STAMBEES FREED.

BLOCK ISLAND, R.I., May 1.—The Portuguese steamer Mormugud started for New London late to-day under her own power, after having been floated by tugs from the West side of Block Island, where she grounded in heavy fog on Friday last. She was accompanied by several tugs. Her forehold was flooded from a hole torn in her side when she struck rocks, but it was thought she would have no difficulty in reaching New London.

TWELVE MILLIONS NOW DUE.

PARIS, May 1.—The Reparations Commission to-day made public its note to the German War Burden Commission on reparations. The communication, which is dated May 1, informs the German Commission of the intention of the Reparations Commission to establish within the shortest time possible, the amount of damages for which Germany owes reparations under the Treaty of Versailles. Meanwhile without prejudice to the foregoing accounting, the Reparations Commission notifies the War Burden Commission that twelve million marks in gold are due to-day. The note is signed by Louis Dubois, President of the Reparations Commission, and M. De Lacroix, former Premier of Belgium.

WITHDRAWN FROM PERSIA.

RIGA, May 1.—A wireless message from Moscow announces the withdrawal of the British from Persia. A Russian diplomatic mission has arrived in Teheran, the Persian capital, the message adds.

IMPEDENCE ADDED TO INJURY.

BERLIN, May 1.—The German Government does not propose to get into touch with the London Conference while awaiting President Harding's answer to the German proposal. This declaration was made today by a member of the Government, who in discussing the rumor that a suggestion was coming from the Entente that Germany present fresh counter proposals direct to the Supreme Council at London, said, "So long as the door to Washington is open to us we do not propose to knock at our doors."

BELGIUM'S REPARATIONS PLANS.

LONDON, May 1.—A plan for the reconciliation of British and French views with regard to steps to be taken to enforce payment of reparations by Germany, was submitted by M. Jaspar, Belgian Foreign Minister, at a meeting of the Supreme Council this afternoon. This plan now is under consideration by the British Cabinet. British experts and other delegations, and will be further discussed at 11 o'clock on Monday morning. The plan would allow France to continue her preparations for penalties to be applied in view of the failure of Germany to comply with the terms of treaty with respect to reparations and war criminals, and at same time would meet the British view that Germany should be given a short extension of time to meet the Allied terms and give guarantees.

Lake Wonderful.

Lake Eyre is one of the wonders of the Australian continent, according to a Sydney paper. The district is actually below the level of the sea, yet in the near neighborhood of the lake are some fine springs of water that may be considered fresh in that cattle will drink from them. So, too, can drovers, though the water has a medicinal effect which prejudices them in their appraisal of its value. In the centre of the lake is an island of rare beauty. A legend is that, many years ago, perhaps when the first droving party (Dr. Black's) took cattle through to his northern territory one of the more daring of the party of white men, unheeding the warning of the blacks that an old man debilitated lived in the lake, and fed on men who ventured into the water, undertook to get to the island. He started away on horseback, but did not return. The blacks, who had mysterious means of communication, gave it out that his horse had made the island, where the animal was seen by some of them long after the cattle party had gone. That proved the legend as far as they were concerned. One of the peculiarities of the water of the lake is that it will preserve anything thrown into it. It is exceedingly buoyant. Stones thrown into it do not sink. It may be as stated that some of the stones—the kind that does not sink—would probably float in any kind of water, being purer of the lightest variety, almost sponge in texture. Jones says "I'd give three dollars to know what they call it." But you can see the whole of "What Happened to Jones?" for much less than that, it's for the Orphans—app30.47

Running a Railway.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—In my last letter I said that the importation of engines and cars was unnecessary, and in this letter I will try to show why I said it. If the owners of your paper should find that their press is not looking after all the business offerings, they, like good business men, will first ascertain whether the press is being worked to its full capacity. If not, they will see that it is made to do so, and if they find, after speeding up the press, that it can handle all the business offerings there will be no need of buying a new one. The foregoing illustrates in a crude way that which the Government should have done before spending such a huge sum on the purchase of new equipment for which there is no necessity. The trouble with the railroad is not lack of engines and cars, but lack of management. Let me give a sample of it. When an order is given to start a train, the first thing you have to do is to shift about 30 cars a half dozen times in order to get the cars that you are going to take with you. This uses up 4 or 5 hours. Now having got the train made up, you back or pull up to the station for your running orders, but instead of getting your running orders, you are told to put the train in the siding, because a work train had been dispatched with orders giving it the right of track over a stretch of road that you required to pass over. You are now forced to wait another 3 or 10 hours until the work train gets in. When it arrives you will get your running orders, and perhaps a crossing order, which will in all probability delay you another two or three hours on a crossing point, so that from the time you were first called to take out the train until you arrive at your destination, 30 or 35 hours might have elapsed. Now, had both trains been managed in the proper way, the engine that required, say, 30 hours to make the run, could, under proper management, have traversed this section of the road 3 times, which would mean the same thing as if you had three times the number of engines, or in other words, one engine would do as much work as three engines. As I have already said, it is not lack of engines that is the trouble, but the improper way in which engines are handled. We have more engines for the traffic handled than any other railroad in the world, but the reason we do not do as good as other roads is because those roads keep their engines rolling while we keep ours waiting. What has been said about engines applies also to cars, for it is clear that if the capacity of our engines is reduced by two-thirds, the usefulness of the cars is reduced in like ratio, as we cannot run with our cars unless we have the engines to pull them. The foregoing is about the usual course of events on the railroad. Of course, it is not always work trains that cause the delay, sometimes the delay is due to crossing two 10-car trains on a siding that can only hold one car and engine, etc.

It must not be inferred from this that the transportation department is solely to blame for all delays. Some of the blame can be traced to the door of the motive power department, and the degree to which this department is responsible will be discovered in another letter. Even if the engines and cars had been worked to the very limit of their capacity last year, there would have been no need of providing any more rollingstock for this year, nor for some years to come, if ever. At the time the Government made this outlay the financial mechanism of the world was just beginning to totter and the tremor could be felt by all who were economically sensitive. But it appears that the Government was irresponsible to the economic stimuli, and instead of curtailment, expenses, it launched out on a policy of railroad expenditure for which there was no justification. The Government ought to have known that there wasn't freight enough offering last year to keep all the engines going. If the Government had known this, perhaps we would not be taxed to pay for engines and cars, etc., which we do not need. But perhaps the Government did know it, in fact, some say that the heavy outlay of money was a move to get the country into such a hopeless financial mixup that there would be nothing for us to do only go over to Canada, lock, stock and barrel, while others claim that the railroad people saw a good chance, now that they had the Government bound hand and foot, to stock up for future years, while others surmise that the change in the personnel of one of the departments had most to do with the weight of the order. Whether such is the case or not, I cannot say, but this I do know, all manufacturing concerns, make it a point to get one of their men placed in a high position on railroads for obvious reasons. Many are asking why we are importing so much iron goods when there is no need for it. Would it not be better and cheaper for us to repair those parts that are worn than to replace them with new gear. Many of the parts that are being repaired with the scrap pile could be consigned with very little expense and made as good as new and give years of service. We do not blame any man for trying to make a showing, but when this is done at public expense the public has a right to cry halt. There are other ways to make a showing—and it would show up on the credit side of the balance sheet, too,—than painting gilt letters across the tenders. Such a showing as this will never increase the tractive power of the engine or reduce the coal bill by one cent. It is no profit to a railroad to see an engine going along all "dolled up" with paint and gilt, if that engine is burning 1 to two tons of coal more than it should burn. What we need is the greatest tonnage hauled at the least expense, and we will never get this while attention is given to such things as gilt and paint. We would ask the Government to look into matters, but to do so is the same as asking the officials of the road to do so. The Government is powerless to do anything. It is bound hand and foot by the new deal. Not only this, but there is a rolling hitch around the necks of some of the Government officials, and they must move in what ever direction the string is pulled. In view of this is it any wonder we are paying for railroad material which we do not need?

Yours truly,
W. L. BUTLER.

Beaumont Hamel Fund.

The Committee in charge of the Beaumont Hamel Fund, think it right that all those who are interesting themselves in providing money for the purchase of this battlefield should be told that the Government had paid the price to the French thus preventing the land from being retaken and farmed by the owners, pending the times when the collection would be complete. Col. Nangle, to whose able care the Colony entrusted the memorials to our fallen, wished that this field should be secured as the site of the finest memorial to Newfoundland's sons. Naturally and fortunately there are always differences of opinion as regards every matter. That the purchase should be by the people rather than by the Government was put before the country by the appeal for subscriptions and we may truthfully say that the great majority have shown their wish to share in the purchase by their help in so many ways. That there should be a variety of opinions as regards the ways and means stands to reason, but it is well that all should do their best in their own way. For the kind hearts and kind thoughts that prompt these helpers we thank all.

Discussing the matter with the Premier this afternoon the question was brought forward of a fund being provided by the people for the perpetual upkeep of this memorial. Those who have been over the ground realize that that week of shelling meant, and why Col. Nangle was so anxious to secure this special scene of Newfoundland's sacrifice in France. As in the past we ask all who will to continue their efforts on behalf of this fund.

Haunted Royalties.

Perhaps the most widely-known case of Royal hauntings is that of the Hohenzollern family, which possesses a ghost, commonly known as the "White Lady of the Hohenzollerns." This apparition is said to appear before some dire catastrophe to the ex-Royal House of Prussia. In December, 1823, prior to the death of the representative of the House, several of the officials in the Palace at Berlin were immesurably startled by seeing the ill-omened figure in the white robes suddenly appear before them. Uttering the words "Venit, iudicis vivos et mortuos," (Judgment, I come, judge the quick and the dead; I come for judgment), is glided away from them, disappearing quite inexplicably in one of the ancient archways. The Ghost of Himself. On another occasion, far more recently, it revealed itself to one of the princesses of the late Royal House during her sojourn in the Castle of Neuhans, Bohemia. She was standing before her mirror one evening, trying on a new robe, when, wanting something, she called to her attendant. In response there was a shuffling movement in the rear of the room, and, turning round to ascertain the cause of it, the princess perceived the figure in white, with the face of someone long dead. It slow and measured tones the figure pronounced the words: "Zehn Uhr ist es ihr Lieben!"—"It is ten o'clock, my love!"—which is the o'clock royalties in that part of the world adapt in addressing one another, and then, stepping backward, vanished behind a screen. The princess was taken ill soon afterwards, and died. The last time the White Lady is said to have been seen was in July, 1914, prior to the declaration of war against Russia.

Talking of Russia, the late Tsar is said to have seen his double shortly before the great revolution. According to a rumour prevalent in Moscow at the time, the Tsar was passing through that city on his way to the front, when descending the staircase of his headquarters one morning, he met a figure slowly ascending with its head very much bowed. On approaching the Tsar, the figure suddenly looked up, and Nicholas then perceived, to his consternation, the exact counterpart of himself, but with this difference—the countenance revealed to him was that of the dead and not of the living. The Royal Family of Italy are reported to possess several ghosts, one of which takes the form of a man's head, which is seen looking through a doorway whenever the death of a prince or princess is going to occur. Another of the ghosts is the shadow of a gigantic plume that is seen waving to and fro on the wall or floor prior to a Royal death, or some very grave catastrophe. It was alleged to have appeared during a banquet at which the late king, Victor Emmanuel, was present, and to have been seen by everyone there, saving the monarch himself, who died within a week of the event. Denmark has a very unpleasant royal ghost, that of a prince who murdered his brother in circumstances of almost unparalleled savagery even in those times. For that and other offences he was buried in unconsecrated ground near the Wood of Poole, which his spirit even now haunts in a guise so terrible that those who see it sometimes go mad with terror. It was reported to have appeared to a number of soldiers prior to the Schleswig-Holstein War of 1866, and again to servants of the Royal Family before the death of the late king. Another Danish Royal phantom is that of Valdemar IV, that haunts the Forest of Gurro, near Helsingfors. This ghost is alleged not to have any particular significance, excepting if it shows itself to anyone connected with the Royal Household, when its appearance must be taken as a portent of ill to the nation, and to the Royal Family in particular.

"Salting" the Country.

Early in the present session of the House of Assembly it developed in reply to a question put by the Leader of the Opposition, that a cargo of salt on Government account had been imported in a foreign steamship, and paid for out of the Public Treasury, being subsequently delivered or transferred to a business concern for either consignment or storage. It further developed, according to the Report of the Auditor-General that the value of the greater portion of this salt had not been paid for by the concern which took it over, the indebtedness to the Surplus Trust Fund being in the vicinity of Sixty-one Thousand Dollars. The discussion following upon this little bit of scandal is too fresh in the public mind to need repetition or comment, but the point to be observed is that there is an outstanding sum due the Government on account of this salt of Sixty-one Thousand Dollars, and so far as official information given in the House goes, there has been no payment made to date. It was had enough to purchase this cargo of salt out of public moneys without authority, but it is infinitely worse to have it become a charge on the public accounts, with the possibility of a dead loss having to be written off. There is no precedent for any transaction of this nature. Never before was it heard of, and the men who are responsible should be driven from public life and politically pilloried for all time.

The half million dollars taken from the public funds to purchase fish last fall, this salt business, appears to have been wholly to serve the interests of the North. The South and West did not participate in any of the benefits to Northern fishermen, accruing from the purchase of fish and salt with Government capital. On the contrary these sections were penalized in every possible way, their trade held up and ultimately strangled, commercial prospects ruined and the business fabric, erected after a struggle of years, entirely destroyed, and Western representatives stood by and saw this being accomplished without a murmur of protest. Neither did they raise their voices loud enough to be heard in condemnation of the salt deal, which appears now to have entered upon an entirely new phase. It is claimed that the salt cargo of s.s. Tuckahoe has not been sold outright. Only a portion of it, payment for which was made some considerable time after the transaction had been made the subject of a question in Parliament. The payment to the shippers of this salt—German it is alleged, as the salt came from Hamburg—is the Treasury was entirely irregular and illegal, and was evidently made on the instructions of some Minister of the Crown only, instructions that were most reprehensible and mischievous, opening as they did avenues for further improper expenditure. The balance of the salt—unsold, obviously, as it is not paid for—is at Port Union, and the deeper the probe is put into this matter, the more involved it seems to become. The Prime Minister owes a duty to the country at large in this connection, and if he be sincere, should have a Select Committee of the Whole House appointed to thoroughly investigate this transaction and make a report thereon. "Salting" the country is a dangerous practice.

Returned After Winter Work.

DID WELL IN LUMBER WOODS.
By the Kyle on Thursday last some 30 or 40 men who were employed in the lumber camps at Cedar Bay on the north side of the St. Lawrence River returned to Port aux Basques on the way to their homes in different parts of the country. The men had been at work all winter being engaged last fall by an agent of the Franklin Pulpwood and Lumber Co. at $30.00 a month, but with overtime the average wage was about $120.00. On Saturday the following men arrived here by express:—H. Cunningham, T. Thomas, A. Keon, T. Collins, W. Murray, J. Butler of St. John's and M. Mosey, M. Kinsella, E. Caswell, T. Goss of Torbay. The men speak highly of the treatment accorded them by the Franklin Co. and intend going with them again next season.

At George St. Church.

Two laymen captured the attention of the congregation at George Street Church last evening. The subject was "Christian Missions." Mr. H. N. Burr, as Chairman, dealt with the past, present and future of the subject, considering the debt of the past, the promise of the present and the hope of the future. His treatment of the subject was dignified and forceful and in his office of Chairman he gave a fine setting to an interesting and profitable service.
The Speaker of the evening was Mr. Watson, of the Grenfell Association. He is a College man with a Y.M.C.A. training. A man of good physique and pleasant manner, he has a fine capacity to enforce and inspire. It is from his class that the best leaders of thought and action are secured in Canadian and American life. Our own hope of the future must depend largely on the development of such a type among our young men. This is the first time Mr. Watson has met a large public audience in this country and he will be welcome again. His treatment of his subject showed a wide range of knowledge of people and their habits, especially of those far removed from us and of the effect wrought upon them by the introduction of the Christian religion. He had the different types of people about whom he spoke illustrated by the appearance in native garb of representatives of the various people of foreign lands.
The Missionary Anniversary was thus fittingly and effectively recognized by this church. The thought of the day was introduced and impressed in a very able sermon in the morning by Rev. D. B. Hammon, B.A., whose discourse included a recognition of the world-wide questions involved by present-day conditions of the nation. In both these addresses the outlook and the whole consideration was greatly enhanced and clarified by the broad and inclusive display of thought that was brought to bear upon the subject.

Motor Car Stolen.

Last night a motor car owned by Sir Michael Cashin, was stolen from the yard of the R. C. Cathedral and up to press hour has not been recovered. Sir Michael left it outside the Cathedral when he went to Vespers last night, and did not remove the switch-key, so that it was an easy matter for anyone who understood how to drive a car to take it away. The number of the car, which is a six cylinder, seven passenger Paige and cost $4900.00, is 1244. It has probably been left by the thief or thieves on some country road and will be found during the day, as it is impossible to take a car any distance from town owing to the impassable condition of the roads.

Brought to Book.

As a result of police investigations larcenies at Woody Island, F.B., a man named Parly is now on remand at Placentia awaiting trial. Some time ago, the store of a Maronite named Kelly, was entered and a quantity of goods stolen. The matter was at once placed in the hands of the police and their investigations resulted in the arrest mentioned above.

SCOTCH CONCERT.—The St. Andrew's Society intend holding a Scotch Concert in the Methodist College Hall on May 18th. Everything possible is being done to make their fair a most successful one.

The Printers' Strike.

ADVOCATE PRESENTS ITS POSITION.
The Telegram finds that the position taken by the Advocate is similar to that taken by the Daily News. The Advocate informs us that in that office the wages paid to operators averages about two dollars more than the Union scale, which is $22.00 per week of 48 hours, and the demand of the Union for a 44 hour week is impossible under present circumstances.
The Advocate points out that the demand is conceded by the Local Typographical Union to be unreasonable under our local conditions, the position thus narrowing itself down to the point where newspapers here find themselves at the mercy of a foreign organization, which is a peculiar situation, to say the least. The Advocate has done all in its power to meet reasonable demands of the Typographical Union, but finds itself unable to comply with this latest demand, which comes at a time when every industry in existence finds itself compelled to curtail expenditures. The Pressmen this morning went out on strike for a 44-hour week. These men were receiving $25, $28 and $33 per week.
The Advocate will not be published to-day, but will appear as usual in a few days.

Invaded Municipal Office

What looked like a small riot took place at the City Hall this morning, when a number of men seeking employment, crowded past the door-keeper and went to the top flat of the building, where the Deputy Mayor and Messrs. Ryan and Bennett were in consultation. The crowd, which numbered about 150, demanded that they be put to work. Deputy Mayor Mulrany asked the men to be patient and by Wednesday morning he would be able to work for them. On Tuesday night the first gang of about 200 will have completed a week's work, when they will be paid off and replaced. It is said that the men at work refuse to quit until the money held by the Council is expended.

The Strike Situation.

ALL PREMISES DESERTED.
None of the L.S.P.F. men turned up to their work on any of the mercantile premises to-day, and even the constable hands such as checkers, etc. left their employment. There is very little freight at present to be moved and all the employers say that what is to be done can easily be handled. At Job's premises there is a schooner, "the Spencer Lake, loading bulk fish" for market, and her cargo is completed to all but 400 qts. This, the owners say, will be put on board the first fine day. The S.S. Fortia is at Boyving Bros. premises and is ready to take freight. The Minister of Shipping under whose department the ship is run said he expected to get the steamer loaded and away by Wednesday next. Asked what his position regarding the strike was, he replied, "I know nothing about it, the Union did not notify this department that they intended to strike." At Crobble's premises freight is being received for s.s. Susu and she will be loaded by the permanent employees of the premises, so that it is expected that her sailing will not be delayed. This is the first general strike of the Longshoremen for some time and the attitude of both employers and the workmen seems firm. Many of the family men who have been at work for a number of years with the one employer feel the hardship of having to leave the positions which they had held so long.

"Laugh and grow fat" is a saying of old. Well, we guarantee abjectively and positively, to supply the laughter for two and a half hours at the Casino on May 10th and 11th. This a screen and a sure cure for the blues. "What Happened to Jones?" And don't forget this—it's for the Orphan. apr21st.

On motion of Mr. Curtis and by consent of Mr. L. E. Emerson, the motion to re-cess Rev. Canon Noel vs. Sir Wm. F. Lloyd is enlarged till in the matter of Michael A. Parrell for a mandamus. Motion of Mr. Emerson for respondents and by consent of Mr. Fenelon for applicants, the hearing is set down for Friday, May 6th. June 1st.

Caught in the Act.

Mr. T. J. Allan, who, for some time, has been missing cigarettes from his shop on Water Street West, decided to lie in ambush last night and try to catch the thief in the act. After waiting some time his patience was rewarded for he saw a young boy enter the shop and remove a tin of cigarettes from the window. Mr. Allan immediately seized the young thief and had him taken to the police station. Mr. Allan thinks this boy was stealing for other and bigger boys, who incited him to go in and commit these depredations.

Negotiating for Gravel Pit.

Negotiations are under way for the purchase of a gravel pit at Bennett's Dam, and this morning the Deputy Mayor interviewed the owner of the property with a view to its purchase. The gravel will be used for general street repairs and if the terms which will be submitted to the Council this evening are satisfactory, it is thought that there will be work for some 80 men at the site.

Personal.

Head Constable O'Neil, who was on duty along the railway line in connection with his department, returned to town recently.

PUBLIC HEALTH REPORT.—Two cases of smallpox were recently reported in the city. As there is, at present, no smallpox hospital, the sufferers are being attended at home, strict watch being kept on the affected houses. Two cases of diphtheria were reported in the city yesterday.

Police Court.

Like Old Times.—The Police Court was filled to capacity this morning by people eager to hear the proceedings, and the main entrance was simply blocked. The docket was reminiscent of the Monday morning's previous to prohibition, for it was filled with drunk cases.
Broke Pane of Glass.—A man was charged with being drunk and disorderly and breaking a pane of glass in the shop of Jas. O'Neil. From the evidence of the constable who arrested the accused it appears that the latter fell through the window whilst in a scuffle with a friend. He was fined $5 or 10 days.
Trjed to Enter Shop.—A man was charged with being drunk and trying to force an entrance to the shop of Mr. Mesley on Hayward Avenue. When approached by a police sergeant, accused said he was breaking in to see if Mr. Mesley were there. This was at midnight Saturday. He was discharged.
Break up Furniture.—Still another drunk appeared before the Magistrate. The accused in this case was further charged with assaulting his wife. She said, in evidence, that he came home at 1.30 a.m. Sunday and "broke up everything in the house." The defendant said he was not in the habit of doing things of this sort. His Honour said the accused was the only sufferer as he had smashed up his own furniture and gave him a chance to better himself.
Drunks Fined.—Three drunks were fined $1 each.
Disorderly Conduct.—A youth was charged with disorderly conduct on the public streets. A constable stated the prisoner was wrestling with another lad on the sidewalk and was an obstruction to the public. He refused to give his first name and when taken to the Police Station, he struggled so much that he had to be handcuffed. Superintendent Grimes informed His Honour that there were many complaints of hooliganism from New Gower Street. The prisoner was fined $5 or 10 days.

Stole Cigarettes.—A boy was charged with stealing a tin of cigarettes from a shop in the West End. He was fined $10 or 20 days.
A cabman was charged with driving a horse and carriage without lights. He said his carriage must have gone down in a rut, thus causing the lights to go out. The accused was discharged.
Proceedings Adjourned.—A youth who was remanded from April 30th on the charge of the larceny of $76.50 from the Maritime Moving Picture Co. His Honour said that if restitution could be made by the accused the case would be dropped. He postponed the further hearing of the case.

Taken to Asylum.

Passengers by the express which arrived here Saturday morning state that the young man Martin who attempted suicide with a razor at Port aux Basques a fortnight ago, came to Waterford Bridge on that train and from there was removed to the Insane Asylum. The unfortunate man is horribly disfigured as he eluded himself indiscriminately.

Before the Days of Paper.

Papyrus is what the Egyptians wrote on over four thousand years ago, and our word paper is derived from it.
Bladders of sheep were used by the Arabs when paper was unknown, and many famous sayings have been found on these remarkable "paper substitutes."
"Album" used by the Romans, was a preparation of white chalk, with which they covered the wood upon which they wrote. It is from this chalk, viz. white "album" that the modern word album is taken. The Romans carried tablets of wood or metal and a little bit of pointed iron to write with. The iron point was called a "stylus"—which suggests the present-day "stylus." Two of the tablets (sometimes covered with wax, sometimes with album) were often joined together by wire hinges, and the backs ornamented with ivory, gold, or precious stones. An expensive substitute for a double sheet of writing-paper!
Leather was used by the Jews for writing purposes, and they were renowned for their skill in this respect. Lichen and silk took the place of paper as "writing materials" in many countries.
Thin plates of gold were used in Java in the production of a book before paper was made. It was written on both sides of these gold plates, and great writers, especially Euclid, traced their designs with a stick on a tablet covered with common dust.

Council and Unemployed

It has been rumoured that the 200 men employed by the Council last week will be paid off after to-day and an equal number of men will be employed to replace them, as there is not sufficient work for more than that number of men. Upon enquiry at the Council office nothing definite could be gleaned. So far there are 760 men on the register at the Unemployment Bureau but unless the money is to be squandered without any hope of getting returns for it, only 200 men can be employed at a time. It is currently reported that the men already working will not consent to being laid off, and the matter is therefore a very delicate one and will require most careful handling.

Arrested for Larceny.

Detective Fear Lee, who has been out of town on business during the past few days, returned by train last night. At Mussel's Harbor Arm he captured a young man who committed the larceny of a quantity of goods from the store of D. Kelly, Woody Island. Detective Lee brought his prisoner to Placentia for trial before Magistrate O'Reilly.

DIKD.

Passed peacefully away yesterday, after a tedious illness, James Benedict, only son of the late James J. Kenny, aged 17 years. Funeral on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m. from his late Residence, 54 Colonial Street.—R.I.P.
"Sacred Heart of Jesus have mercy on him."

IN LOVING MEMORY

of my dear boy, sergt. Philip H. Pettit, who died somewhere in France, April 14th, 1917, who bravely laid down his life for his King and country.
Four years have passed and still I miss him.
Friends may think the wound is healed.
But they little know the sorrow.
Thus within my heart concealed.
This day brings back sad memories
Of one who has gone to rest.
And those who miss him most to-day
Are those who loved him best.
In my heart I mourn the loss of him
What would I give to clasp his gentle hand,
And his dear smiling face to see,
That was so dear to me.
But I sit and think of you dear Philip
While tears drop dim my eyes.
You could not say good bye to me
Before you closed your eyes.
May Heavenly winds blow softly
On that wide and lonely spot
Though so far away from me
You will never be forgot.
I am comforted by his mother.

Veteran Dies at Sanatorium.

Yet another of our Veterans answered the final bugle call. In the person of ex-Serjt. Uriah Bursay, who passed away at the Sanatorium on Saturday afternoon. It can certainly be said of him that he died in the same spirit as many more of his comrades who laid down their lives in France and elsewhere. He went Overseas with the First Battalion and served continuously until he was severely wounded in October, 1914. His injuries, which were caused by a bullet wound in the head, caused him much suffering, eventually undermined his constitution and he developed tuberculosis from which he succumbed. On his return home he was employed at the Pay and Record Office where his genial and estimable qualities found him a place of high regard amongst his fellow employees and returned men. Later he accepted a position in the office of Baine Johnston & Co., where he worked assiduously until March last year when he was forced to relinquish his appointment and take treatment. His body was forwarded to his home town, Caplin Cove, Bay de Verde, by this morning's train where interment will take place. The sympathy of all returned comrades and the general public will go out to his aged father, Mr. George Bursay. The close association existing between all Comrades of the Great War created bonds of friendship which will never be wiped out by the passing of our friends. They shall always be remembered.—Com.

Resolutions.

Adopted at the Session of the Grand Lodge of Newfoundland, L.O.A., Held at Old Perlican on April 19th to 23rd.

RESOLVED, that this Grand Lodge places itself on record as being unanimously opposed to the campaign of personal abuse of public men that has gone on in our daily newspapers during the last few years, and calls upon each daily paper in the interest of our country and people to make an effort to discuss public questions without making personal attacks on men associated therewith.

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the Grand Lodge places itself on record as being unanimously opposed to sectarianism being introduced into the public life of Newfoundland by any individual or party, and that it asserts its principles to be "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

RESOLVED, that a copy of these Resolutions be sent to the Prime Minister, the Leader of the Opposition, and published in the daily papers.

Watches for Indian Princess.

The Begum (Princess) of Bhopal, India, who bought 4,000 silver watches to take back to her people in the central Indian State when she visited Switzerland in 1911, has just sent for another lot of 3,500 timepieces. She wants her subjects to be punctual and not only rely on the sun for the time of day. The Begum, or Mohabbe median Princess of Bhopal, probably is the only female ruler of a State in India, and is also called Sultan. The throne of Bhopal has descended in a female line for more than seventy years, and many of the Begums have displayed modern tendencies in looking after the welfare of their subjects, who number 665,000. The Sultan Jahan Begum succeeded to the throne in 1901. Bhopal is the principal province of central India, and its capital, the City of Bhopal, has about 76,000 population.

McMurdo's Store News

MONDAY, May 2, 1921.
Although May is here, the need of Lozenge that will give quick relief in cases of slight coughs, "hoarseness" and bronchial irritation is still apparent enough. There are many good lozenges for this purpose; but one of the best is certainly McMurdo's Pine Tree Lozenges, which heal, soothe, relieve congestion and act as an antiseptic of value. There are few things of the kind which act as pleasantly, or in so prompt a manner. Price 35 cents a box.
For relief of rheumatic, muscular or nerve pains, Musterole is highly recommended as a quick working relief. Price 50 cents.

Bible in a Nutshell.

A man in Philadelphia has carved a spider on one side of a mustard seed and an elephant on the other, and claims the champion of the world for minute inscriptions.

If the records of the past are any guide it is not unlikely in this age of powerful lenses, and fine tools that the record might be beaten. Long ago a man achieved fame by writing a verse of Homer on a grain of millet; another wrote a verse in letters of gold and enclosed it in the rind of a grain of corn.

But that is only the work of a short time thrown off in a fit of enthusiasm for the tiny. What of the man who does this thing with the foolish and of incurable devotion? Peter Dale, a scholar of Queen Elizabeth's time, lives in the Harleian Manuscripts at Oxford for having written the Bible in so small a hand that it was enclosed in a walnut. "The nut holdeth the book; there are as many leaves in this little book as in the great Bible, and he hath written as much on one of his little leaves as on a great leaf of the Bible."

The British Museum possesses a portrait of Queen Anne not much above the size of a hand, on which appear what seem to be a number of scratches. The scratches when magnified prove to be the entire contents of a book carried in the Queen's hand. One of the legends of antiquity credits a man known to Cicero with having put the Iliad of Homer into a nutshell. When the legend was 1,700 years old Huet, the great French scholar, tested it to amuse his pupil, the French heir.

He took a piece of film but plant paper, ten inches long and eight inches wide. By writing tiny characters with a fine pen he found that he could get thirty verses of the Iliad into a line and 250 lines to the page, 75,000 verses in all. Thus, by using both sides of the paper, he could write 150,000 verses on it, the number contained in the Iliad. The paper when folded up fitted into a walnut shell, and so the possibility of the feat of Cicero's friend was proved.

Eggs baked in the centers of scooped-out tomatoes and topped with a slice of bacon are delicious.

French Duke Must Pay German Company

Before the war the Duc de Vicence d'Espauilles bought a house in the Avenue de Wagram in Paris, on which a Berlin insurance company held a mortgage for 300,000 francs. Since then the interest has not been paid, and the Berlin company has been seeking payment through the French courts. The Duke's defense was that during the war his estate at Caulain Court, near St. Quentin, worth 3,000,000 francs, was destroyed by the Germans, and that if he owed anything on account of the mortgage it was owed under the treaty to the French Government, which in turn owed him 3,000,000 francs on reparations account. The court, however, held that the Duke must pay his debts pending the time of full settlement with Germany. So the Duke to whom Germany owes 3,000,000 francs, has to pay to the German company the accumulated interest on the mortgage since 1914.

Important Decision.

MIAMI, Fla., April 23.—A sheriff has no right to go aboard a foreign vessel and search for liquor under the Prohibition Law, and the liquor seized in such a manner cannot be admitted in evidence, according to a court decision rendered here this week.

The judge disclosed charges of violation of the Prohibition Law against two members of a British schooner, arrested after the sheriff had found ten quarts of rum aboard, according to his testimony at the preliminary hearing.

'Spurs Win English Cup.

Tottenham Hotspurs defeated Wolverhampton Wanderers in the final for the English Cup at Stamford Bridge on April 24th. Stamford scored for the 'Spurs eight minutes before the second half had been started. This is the first time the 'Spurs have won the Cup in 20 years. Aston Villa won from Huddersfield in 1920, but neither of these teams were anywhere near the top this year. The football season in England has now come to an end and cricket is already in full swing again. The M.C.C. will be twenty on the look out for additions to the English team as the Australians, under Armstrong's leadership, are going over to beat them on their home ground. It will be remembered that the English team lost all five of the Test Matches played in Australia recently.

WELL DRESSED AT SMALL COST.—If you do not intend to holiday season, you can at least be well dressed by having your clothes cleaned and pressed at SPURBELL, the Tailor's, 365 Water Street, and it will cost you about $1.50. Do you need a new Velvet Collar on your Overcoat?—m.w.t.t.

GRASS AND CHILDREN.
I used to want a lovely lawn, a level patch of green.
For I have marvelled many times at those that I have seen,
And in my early dreams of youth the home that I should keep Possessed a lawn of beauty rare, a velvet carpet deep.
But I have changed my mind since then—for then I didn't know
That where the feet of children run the grass can never grow.

Now I might own a lovely lawn, but I should have to say
To all the little ones about, "Go some-where else to play!"
And I should have to stretch a wire about my garden space
And make the home where gladness reigns a most forbidding place.
By stopping all the merriment which now is ours to know
In time, beyond the slightest doubt, the tender grass would grow.
But oh, I want the children near, and so I never say
When they are romping round the home, "Go somewhere else to play!"
And though my lawn seems poorly kept, and many a spot is bare,
I'd rather see than growing grass, the youngsters happy there.
I've put aside the dream I had in that for long-ago—
I'd rather have a playground than a place for grass to grow.

Coakerism-- Past and Present.

(By Historicus.)
ARTICLE II.

The first went forth that the "un-

W. F. Coaker—the self-styled Moses—was to bring about transformation. The organiza-

The aim of the organiza-
as outlined by its President, to combine commercial enter-with politics—an undertaking unachieved—the one to con-the buying and selling of the men's produce and supplies, the to determine and control the of the Government by electing Parliament a certain number of representatives who were bound to obey the laws of the rep-as interpreted from time to time by the President.

Previous to this the ground had been prepared by solving the needs of all governments in the past had been corrupt, partitionary, that of Edward Morris. The Morris poli-of building branch railways and the Newfoundland Regiment take part in the great war were heavily assailed by President Coaker and his followers in the Legisla-
The Reid M.B. Coaker's Alliance described as a combative and destitute of high ability and of good in-in so far as the interests of the of fishermen and the country in general were concerned.

It has only to recall the party which characterized the general election to be convinced that the seed sown and nurtured in the dark behind closed doors had brought forth. Such party catch-
"the gratters must go," and "sink Coaker with Coaker," illustrate the determination of the organization to their trust in the President as at its height. To show the financial plight of the fishermen was so deplorable as an outsider might imagine from the utterances of President Coaker as published in his paper—the Advocate—money poured into the fishermen's pockets, like water whenever the call for help came forth. First we see them contributing their hard-earned money to support the President for days—in the case of Sir Edward Morris and members of his Cabinet. Then we see them contributing large sums to enable the President with a luxu-rion motor car and the celebrated yacht that ticked out the warning,
"Morris must go for Coaker says so."

In 1912 finding himself unable to control the policies of the fish exporters of Water
the President conceived the of moving the headquarters of the Union from St. John's to an important settlement located on the northern coast of the Bay. The plan as outlined by Coaker was submitted to the General Council and as a result of the deliberations of the delegates. A new business premises in St. John's were erected in North
Arm and named Port Union.
The companies in connection with the Port Union were floated and the fishermen contributed liberally towards their capital thus proving that their financial standing in the country was anything but that of "underdogs."

We have the F.P.U., Trading Co.,
the Electric Light Co., the Ship
Building Co. and the Union Export Co. in all of which companies many of the fishermen have invested their savings. In addition to the large mercantile premises at Port Union there are upwards of fifty branch or subsidiary premises scattered along the North East coast line. Mr. Coaker is the head of them all and how he has time to control the management of all these concerns together with the discharge of his public duty as a Minister of the Crown is indeed a "mystery."

The history of large commercial enterprises, such as the Union Trade
Co. in Newfoundland in the past, shows that they required careful and continuous oversight on the part of their management in order that they might earn dividends for their shareholders. Their overhead expenses if carefully watched, would in themselves become enormous. Very few of them have withstood the vicissitudes of time and the varying fortunes of the Newfoundland fisheries.
In one respect, the F.P.U. Trading Company is unlike its kindred companies of the past. It has to pay an actual dividend of ten per cent. to its fishermen-shareholders. It is therefore obvious that in order to do this it must be well managed and obtain reasonable profits on all its marketable produce. The time for testing this will be the years 1921 and 1922.
It has been estimated that there are about four thousand fishermen holding shares in the Trading Company, of from ten to seven thousand dollars each. These now practically constitute the Union of the North, once consisting of forty thousand members.
These now control not only the policy of the F.P.U. but the policy of the Government of Newfoundland as well as the large sums taken from the Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

PEOPLE WHO WARN YOU NOT TO BELIEVE THEM.

You cannot imagine anyone going around saying "Do not believe a word I say, it may be true but it's just as likely to be false." can you? And yet there are many people who do just that in effect. I met one of them this winter. He is a man who has travelled widely, been in different kinds of work, had many opportunities for observation and experience. He ought to be very worth knowing and at first I thought him so.

I Wanted to Believe Him But I Couldn't.

I remember just the other day he said that in the army the officers all have a schedule which tells them how thick the ice needs to be for men to cross it. So many inches of ice, he said, was sufficient to hold a single file of men, so many would hold artillery, etc. I started at once to show that away in my mind for future reference when the usability of ice was called into question, and then I remembered, "It may be true and it may be false. You can't depend upon a word of it."

When I got a chance to Check Him Up.

Then one day he got started talking on a subject which I happened to know more about than he did. And while he said several things that were true and would have interested me if I hadn't already known them, he also said several things which were absolutely untrue, and gave out some perfectly ridiculous misinformation. After this had happened once or twice more you can easily understand how I felt about all that man's statements.

I knew some of them were probably true but when they were on matters on which I was uninformed I had no way of telling which. Consequently I had to reject them all.

It's the same with overstatements. When you find that a man or woman habitually overstates, you compensate that habit by discounting everything they say. And when they do speak accurately the discount is applied just the same. Overstatements spoil any argument. I was much impressed by a magazine article in a health magazine arguing the futility of drugs as compared with exercise, mental hygiene and similar health measures until I came to a part in which the writer tried to drive home his claim by saying that if you put drugs in a dead body they would do no good and that proved their futility. That spoiled the effect of the whole article by its absurdity of overstatement. If one tried exercises on a dead body I doubt if they would do much good, don't you?

If you like to talk just for the sake of talking you may say anything you chose. If you want your talk to mean something, not only to those who don't know you, but to those who do, beware of careless and foolish statements. Maybe no one will ever tax you with them but they are sure to come home to roost in the form of people's disbelief in all that you say.

THE KILLER.

The lady, with her little gun, does murder with a smile, because her lover, tire-some one, has bored her quite, a while. He doesn't wear his whiskers right, he is a careless toff; and so, some soft and balmy night, she calmly bumps him off. And when they bring her into court, the law's ancestral coop, the Jurymen, each one a sport, acquit her with a whoop. And then she feels that duty calls in no uncertain tones, and in the movie picture halls she ought to draw some boxes. She wants to teach our boys and girls that vice their souls will harm, that homely virtues are the pearls, and sin's a false alarm. And while she's guarding thus the youth from all that evil means, and through the films expounding truth, she'll gather in the beans. But soon, her hopes grow rank and lean, for movie men don't fall; they say, "The modern movie queen needs something more than gall." Methinks it is a hopeful sign that her ambition's stung, that she is not allowed to shine and elevate the young. The young can find much better sides to higher life, I wist, and bloody little clearmaids should fade, and won't be missed.

Household Notes.
An old crocheted hook is excellent for cleaning under the handles on kettles and clanking seams in milk pails.
If you wish bread to have a crisp crust, when it is almost done brush it over with a little slightly beaten egg white.
Punch a few holes in the bottom of a leaky aluminum kettle, put in your rinsed silver and set in the oven to dry.
Buy double-bed sheets, cut into four pieces and make into two pairs of pillow cases. This is very economical.
Use cord rather than wire in making a support for sweet peas. The sun heats the wire, causing the vine to burn and die.
When making a flat roach, use small nail file for turning under the edges. The rough file keeps goods from slipping and turns edges nicely.
To make individual omelets, cook a small amount on a griddle at one time, like a pancake, but at a lower heat. Turn with a spatula. Roll and serve.

Women on Juries.

It has been said that when we women of Newfoundland are recognized as of the same worth as the women of the rest of the British Empire, and secure the vote, it will mean that we shall have to sit on juries. Now that seems a very weak argument against the Franchise. I think that women on juries will acquit themselves every bit as well as men and will earnestly and conscientiously try and do their duty. And for those who are timid and fearful we should like to ask: "How often does the average man sit on a jury? We know hundreds of men who have never been called to act on a jury in their lives, and very many more who have only served once.—A.M.A.

In Defence of Sir John Crosbie.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Please allow me space in your esteemed and widely read paper to condemn the abusive attacks in the Daily Star on Sir J. C. Crosbie, whose popularity in this district cannot be lessened by anything that the Star or Advocate can say. Sir John is so solidly entrenched in the fishermen's estimation that all the abuse of Government scribblers will never do him any harm. Last fall in our darkest hour he came to the assistance of our fishermen, helped them out financially and gave them provisions to tide them over the winter.

The iniquitous Fish Regulations ruined business men and fishermen here, and if it had not been for Sir J. C. Crosbie there would have been starvation in certain places in this district. Cave and LeGrow refused to help out their constituents, but allowed them to be ruined and their season's earnings sacrificed, but the noble hearted Crosbie, who is vilified by the Daily Star, came to their help and sympathized with them in their troubles and proved himself a benefactor. If Sir J. C. Crosbie ever contests this district, he will be elected by the largest majority ever polled here.

"Lives of great men all remind us. We can make our lives sublime; And departing leave behind us Foot-prints on the sands of time."

The promise of the repeal of the Fish Regulations is a relief to us, but, unfortunately, it comes too late. The industrious men who lost the savings of a lifetime because of those same fish regulations and can no longer supply for the fishery, will always regard them as a dark blot on our country's history. W. F. Coaker now sees his mistake in promulgating regulations which ruined our staple industry and crushed middlemen and fishermen down in the dust. Sir John Crosbie struck the right note when he said in the House a few days ago "poor old Bay de Verde," once she was independent, but where is she now?"

Yes, Sir John, the people of Bay de Verde appreciate your efforts in their behalf. No supplies and scores of cod-traps ashore this season. Picture this and then you will understand how we are situated. Our representatives, Cave and LeGrow, should resign at once. They allowed fishermen in their district to be ruined. Why were men like P. J. Shea prevented from buying fish at $10.00 per quintal for the American market last fall and this fish had subsequently to be stored by Sir J. C. Crosbie? Shame on you Cave and LeGrow. You are not fit to tie Sir John Crosbie's shoes.

Go ahead Sir John. Bay de Verde is solidly behind you and Sir M. P. Cashin, and are looking to you to save ruin and insolvency. Cashin is the fishermen's friend. The son of a fisherman, he understands their troubles and misfortunes. The people are behind them and are proud to have men like Cashin and Crosbie in the people's house to save us from thralldom and slavery. Senseless abuse will not injure Sir John Crosbie, and indignation is expressed here against those who would defame a man who is a credit to his native land and a man whose name will be eternally enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen.

"For a friend in need Is a friend in deed."

Mr. Editor, I have no political axe to grind in writing this tribute to a good man, whose generosity has cemented a friendship that cannot be broken, but I cannot see a man like Sir J. C. Crosbie traduced without protesting in the public press against insults to a better man than his defamers are or can ever hope to be.

Yours truly,
FISHERMAN.
Bay de Verde, April 26, 1921.

Bradbury vs. Caul.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Kindly permit me sufficient space in your esteemed journal to insert a brief reply to the letter which under the caption, "Defends Union," appeared in Saturday's issue of the News over the signature of Jas. Caul. Mr. Caul in his opening remarks proposes to reply to my letter, which was published in the Telegram on Friday, but whether he intended writing that reply and conveniently forgot it, or whether his memory failed him, I cannot say, but the fact remains that his reply has yet to be written.

Mr. Caul endeavors to repudiate my argument by purloining certain parts of its contents and winds up by questioning my sincerity and loyalty as a member of that Union, but his meagre attempt has only served to disclose his inaptitude without resorting to the decayed formula of plagiarism. He would like to know what I meant by saying that the Union is a sane and intelligent body. Surely Mr. Caul is aware of the fact that for the past twelve months the chief industry of this country has been practically at a standstill, and during these months of industrial depression importations have been coming in in enormous quantities, while our export commodities were lying dormant. The result was a gradual draining of the country's finances with a consequent decline in labor; hence my contention that the time is inopportune to adopt such drastic measures as those advocated by Mr. Caul. As regards the other question of Mr. Caul, I would advise him if he wishes to find the solution to re-read the paragraph in which the sentence occurs where unless he is the superficial reader that I think he is, he will perceive after a careful perusal, that the paragraph in question is based on the contention that if the employers intended reducing the wages, they should offer to the Union a sufficient justification for doing so, and if from their claims the members considered they were justified they would take them into consideration and govern themselves accordingly. The paragraph in question reads as follows:—"In the first place we know that as a result of the experiments of the present Administration and the deplorable condition of the markets consequent upon their blundering, the business men of this country have suffered severe financial reverses. This is an important fact which I think the Secretary of the Employers' Association unfortunately omitted in his communication, merely stating that the figures in his possession warranted the reduction and intimated that in order to restore business to a proper basis it was necessary that something along these lines be done, but no reference whatever was made to the adverse financial circumstances of the various concerns which he represented. The Longshoremen's Protective Union is composed of a sane and intelligent body of men, and had the Secretary done so I have no doubt that it would have received their earnest consideration and the decision arrived at would have been different from that which now threatens to deliver a severe blow at the already tottering commercial structure of this country."

It is difficult to conceive how after carefully perusing the above Mr. Caul could have selected those words as a point of dispute and he has evidently misconstrued the whole sentiment, for he says, "I also would be pleased if he would tell what the Union has to do with today's present conditions." Mr. Caul, of course, is the victim of his own idiosyncrasies, and as such must place upon everything, interpretations peculiar to his fancy. He has obviously evinced from my letter an impression entirely contrary to that which it intended to convey. I did not mean, as Mr. Caul insinuates, to be understood as stating that the Union had anything to do with the bringing about of present-day conditions, but I contend that the Union as a commercial power in the community can do a great deal to remedy these conditions. May I ask Mr. Caul his reason for quoting so profusely from my letter. Was it because of his limited vocabulary and inadequate power of expression, or that he lacked the courage of his convictions? In either case he should have called upon his legal adviser, whom he is so fond of visiting when such occasions arise. It is a consolation to me to know that Mr. Caul himself is immune from criticism by the members of that body, which is no doubt wholly justified, seeing that his interpretative faculty which should be exercised in their interest, is so totally lacking comprehensiveness. May I suggest to him that before he attempts another exhibition of this kind to first consult his brothers in the Executive before stigmatizing them by his blundering.

Sincerely yours,
THOS. BRADBURY.
May 2, 1921.

P.S.—Last night I learned that Mr. Dempsey proposed at the meeting held on Saturday night that I be expelled from the Union. I am sorry Mr. Dempsey should have made such a spectacle of himself. If I had been there he would probably have found that he was biting off more than he could chew. I cannot conceive how Mr. Dempsey and his colleagues should have so misinterpreted my letter as to infer that I was endeavoring to justify the action of the Employers in reducing the wages when such an

Building Committee.

MEETING AT MOUNT CASHEL.

Yesterday afternoon Mount Caschel Building Committee met in the new building at Mount Caschel, when reports of the work accomplished during last year were submitted. Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., presided, with Mr. J. C. Pippy as Secretary. Previous to the meeting an inspection of the new building was made by the Committee who were well pleased with what they saw. Mr. Higgins in opening the meeting congratulated Rev. Superior Conway and Brother Ennis and staff on the work done and explained that through the efforts of Brother Ennis the new building, which under contract would cost $50,000, had been completed for $30,000. Unfortunately a debt of $12,000 had been brought about and it was to the Committee to see that it be paid off as quickly as possible. A scheme whereby the money would be subscribed was outlined and approved by the Committee who will begin work forthwith and continue it until the debt is paid off. Rev. Brother Conway in thanking the Committee for its valuable assistance and co-operation in the past felt that in their new undertaking they would not fail even though conditions were not as had existed during the last few years. He was followed by Rev. Brother Ennis who briefly told the story of how the new building had been erected so cheaply. A great deal of free labor had been furnished and valued help had been given by Messrs. Murphy, Coady and Pigeon while the work was in progress. He also gave a recital of the work at Mount Caschel since its establishment in 1897, when some 20 or 30 boys were taken in charge, while to-day about 160 were looked after. He paid a splendid tribute to Rev. Brother Brennan who has been connected with the institution for over 20 years, and also the other Brothers of the community who have labored so well in the interest of the boys. Rev. Brother Ryan, of Mount St. Francis also spoke and referred to the splendid work of Brother Ennis who had erected a lasting monument to himself in brick and mortar in the new building. He also congratulated the Committee and the people of St. John's for the great assistance given the Brothers at all times and said that in no part of the world where the Brothers gave instruction were they held in better esteem than in Newfoundland. Speeches were also made by Dr. V. F. Burke, C. Hutton and J. P. Crotty, the meeting closing at 6 o'clock with a firm resolution that the $12,000 debt would be lifted in a very short time.

Brought Insane Patient.

Sergeant J. Fitzgerald arrived by express on Saturday from Rose Blanche having in charge a young man of the place who had recently attempted suicide. Sergeant Fitzgerald had to bring his charge via Fort aux Basques, and during the journey he experienced a trying time, the unfortunate young man being at times very violent. On arrival of the express he was conveyed to the Lunatic Asylum.

HARDING-SINCLAIR.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Wesley Church on April 27th when Capt. A. J. Sinclair, of Monrovia, Trinity Bay, led to the altar Miss Beatrice Harding, of Greenspond, Bonaville Bay, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Harding. The bride looked charming in cream georgette over silk, and wore bridal veil with orange blossoms carrying a bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of Mr. Robert J. Matthews, ex-Petty Officer R.N.R., while Mr. Bertram Hoddinott, cousin of the bride, supported the groom. Miss Jessie Harding, Methodist teacher of Topsail, and cousin of the bride, acted as chief bridesmaid. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents including several pieces of silverware and several pieces of gold; one piece of gold especially from her mother, while her father presented her with an organ. Mr. P. Templeman a beautiful cabinet-foot machine, the Misses Goldstone and employees, a beautiful silver nut dish. The groom's present to the bride was a piece of gold and also a piece of gold to the chief bridesmaid. The reception was held at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. J. Brown, Batters Hill, where many guests attended and a very enjoyable time was spent until the wee small hours of the morning. The bride and groom left on Thursday for Monrovia, T.B., where their honeymoon will be spent and may they have many years of happiness over the seas of matrimony is the wish of all and best wishes.—Com.

Amazing Medicines.

"Will you please give mother a nut to put a spider in?" was the queer request of a Tiverton child to a tradesman.

"What do you want it for?" asked the astonished man.

"Please, sir, baby's got whooping-cough!"

In the West Country this is still believed to be a charm, or cure, for whooping-cough. You get a live spider and a nut into the nutshell you place the spider, tie the charm round the baby's neck, and when the spider dies the cough goes.

Gilneas are said to swear by roast dormouse as a cure for whooping-cough, and in Lancashire it used to be considered that no child could contract this disease who had ridden upon a bear. In Cornwall, a sick child is sure to be cured if passed three times under a hawk's tail.

A European resident in Bangkok who fell ill of a fever, had this prescription given to him by a native doctor. "Two small pieces of elephant's tusk and rhinoceros horn, the tooth of a tiger, a crocodile, and a bear, powdered bones of vulture, geese, and ravens, a fragment of a stag, a bison's horn, and a minute piece of sandalwood." The patient thought the cure worse than the disease, and, rather than take it, promptly got well.

Mayflower Performance Pleases Experts.

Mr. George S. Hudson, of the Boston Herald staff, who attended the race here last autumn and who is recognized as a yachting expert, in reviewing the trial trip of the Mayflower in Boston this week, gives some interesting points that characterize the new craft.

When the cup contender was doing her prettiest in a northerly breeze at the entrance to Broad Sound outward bound, she logged better than 10 nautical miles being on a close reach under four lowers and the mainmast stayed still, fluttopped but no sail heaved.

Leaves Little Wake. In absence of a displacement wave was observed, the only disturbance being the frictional wave that can be reduced at least ten per cent by smoothing the under body in anticipation of the international race.

One can't describe the Mayflower as the did lay her 14,000 horsepower into the back of a sea in several occasions she shipped seas over the bow, a great sailing craft, possesses some greater degree than others.

Fast Tacking. The writer says that the schooner's boom projects only a few feet over the hull, a feature much admired by the fishermen. Mr. Hudson also states that they tackled the Mayflower in 10 seconds from head-on to tacking away to the other hither and this performance, under the circumstances, would indicate the new vessel to be wonderfully spry in stays.

Presently, says Mr. Hudson, she'll go about in 40 seconds and the standard boat must be a veritable snapper if she can hitch in less than that.

Mr. Hudson states that many fishermen from Nova Scotia will be members of the Mayflower's crew when she sails for the banks, and it is expected that she will get away tomorrow or Friday—Morning Chronicle.
