The Glossograph

The London journal, Iron, gives an ac-count of another addition to the many scientific wonders of recent years. Her to the many t years. Herr A. Gentilli of Vienna has inv nted an instrument-named by him the glossograph -consisting of an ingenious combination of delicate levers and blades which, placed upon the tongues and lips and under the nostrils of the speaker, are vibrated by the movements of the former and the breath thowing from the latter. The vibration is transmitted to panelle, which transcribe ilowing from the latter. The violation is transmitted to pencils, which transcribe the several signs produced by the action of tongue and lips and the breath from the nostrils upon a strip of paper moved by a machanical arrangement. Similar to shortmechanical arrangement. Similar to short-hand, a special system of writing, which may fitly be termed glossography, is pro-duced, based upon the principle of syllable construction and combination of

The Men Who Steal Plays. The men who stent rings. The prosecution of two Chicago men for selling stolen plays, brings out the fact that in their nefarious trade, a great deal of work was done for very little money. place for theatre folks out of employment. As arule, successful dramas are not pub-lished, the owners preferring, even when a a copyright might be obtained, to depend on their property right in the manuscript. Byers and Learoque hired impecunious per-former promptres, and others to write out ormers, prompters, and others to write out om memory and notes about a dozen of from memory and notes about a dozen of the best current plays of the season. Then they let the managers of all the barn-storm-ing companies throughout the west know that copies could be bought for $10 to $15 each. The copying was done in a back room, and was paid for with meals and dripks. Irinks.

The Japanese Silk Market

The contest of the native with the foreign merchants for the control of the Japanese silk market continues. The native direct exports to agents in England, France, and America have largely increased, and matters begin to look very serious for the foreigners, who are so boycotted by the ring that their business is completely paralyzed. They will have to look forward to a time, not far distant if capital lests, when the

Finally she cut the cords and Mary fell upon the bed, where she lay several hours, suffering intensely. Afterwards she dragged herself to where her mother was working, when the mother caused Lee's arrest. Lee alleges he pun-ished his daughter for stealing.
