Women's Missionary Convention

The 8th annual convention of the Women's Missionary Society of the Strathroy District was held in the Methodist church on Tuesday last. Mrs. (Rev.) Snell, of Watford, opened the afternoon session with an inspiring address on "Consecration to God's Service." Mrs. John White gave the address of welcome to the delegates, which was replied to by Mrs. (Rev.) Knowles, of Petrolea. Miss Mrs. (Rev.) Knowles, of Petrolea. Miss Agnes Williams then gave a solo entitled "Galilee" in fine voice. Mrs. O. E. Brandreth, of Strathroy, gave an address on "Salient Points in a Successful Auxiliary," and Mrs. (Dr.) Knowles spoke on "Christian Stewardship." After these addresses Miss M. Richardson and Miss Ressis Harper, song a duet in and Miss Bessie Harper sang a duet in beautiful style. The closing address of the afternoon session was given by Miss E. Sparling, returned missionary from China, showing how the missionaries work their way into the homes of the Chinese and how they teach the women and children the Gospel. At the afternoon session Mrs. Gillies, of Watford, vas elected Sec.-Treas, for the district for ensuing year.

The evening session commenced at 8 o'clock when Rev. F. G. Robinson, pastor of church, presided, and led a devotional and consecration service. Rev. W. G. Connolly, returned mission ary from Japan, gave a description of the work in that country, and Miss Sparling described the work of the W. M. S. in China. The choir rendered two anthems

China. The choir rendered two anthems with telling effect.

There were delegates present from almost all the churches in the district and they were all delighted with the entertainment provided by the Watford ladies, and especially the sumptuous repast provided in the basement after the atternoon session. The unaminous opinion was that this convention was both helpful and inspiring.

It is our sad duty this week to record the death of Isaiah Ellis, who passed peacefully away at the home of his son-in-law, B. F. Gregory, 2nd line, Warwick, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3rd, after an illness extending over a period of nearly four months, which was borne with Christian patience. He was given with Christian patience. He was given with Christian patience. He was given every possible care and attention that loving minds could think of, but all without avail. He was born in St. Thomas in year 1845, living there until he was four years old, when, with his parents, moved to Caradoc, remaining there until he was married in the year 1868 to Mary Jane Elliott, daughter of there until he was married in the year 1868 to Mary Jane Elliott, daughter of James Elliot, Adelaide, who still survives him. From this union there was a family of three daughters, namely, Mary and Georgina, who died some years ago, and Gertrude, now being Mrs. B. F. Gregory, of Warwick. After their marmariage they resided in Strathroy for some thirteen years, then moving to marriage they resided in Strathroy for some thirteen years, then moving to Windsor, living there for twenty-six years, eighteen of which he was mechanical superintendent of all the school buildings there. Returning to Strathroy some seven years ago he followed his trade of carpentering until last July, when he came to visit his daughter, taking suddenly ill with paralysis, from which he never recovered. Deceased which he never recovered. Deceased was of a quiet disposition, always ready to lend a helping hand and was highly respected by a wide circle of friends and neighbors. In politics he was a staunch Conservative. In religion he was a Baptist. His remains were laid to rest on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 6th, in Strathroy cemetery beside his daughters. Rev. F. G. How Lance-Corp. Harris, of Petrolea, met his death is explained in a letter received recently. His battalion was severely cut up in front of wire entanglements. The body was found lying well over an old German trench. He was evidently struck by shrapnel as his pack was full of holes. The private, who gives the information, says that Harris had been buried in a hurry but heavy rains had washed away the earth and as a party were working they noticed his head and dug him out. He was in a crouching position and still held his rifle with one cartridge in the breech and four in the magazine. He was then decently buried in the same spot as he fell, about 1000 yards to the left of Neuve Chapelle village, and a little cross placed about his grave with name, battalion and date of death thereon. THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks dis-tinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or un-derstands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, leed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

New Grades of Seed Grain

Special grades for seed wheat, ats and barley are now authorized Order-in Council as follows:

No. 1-Manitoba Northern seed wheat shall be composed of 85 per cent Red Fife or of Marquis wheat. sound, clean, free from other grain, and free from noxious weed seeds within the meaning of the Seed Control Act, weighing not less than 60 pounds to the bushel.

No. 2-Canada Western seed oats shall be compsed of 95 per cent white oats, sound, free from other grain, and free from noxious weed seeds within the meaning of the Seed Control Act, weighing not less than 36 pounds to the bushel.

No. 3—Extra Canada Western seed barley shall be composed of the six-rowed barley, sound, plump, of fair color, free from other grain, and free from noxious weed seeds within the meaning of the Seed Control Act, weighing not less than 48 pounds to the bushel.

These special grades will be given for the crop of 1915 only on car lots of grain that are inspected into the Government interior terminal elevators at Calgary, Moose Jaw and Saskatoon, and the seed will be made available to farmers and seed merchants at the close of navigation or about December 1st. The advance in prices over commercial grades will be just sufficient to meet the extra dockage required and the cost of cleaning, storing and sacking when the latter is desired by purchasers.

It is not anticipated that the operation of these seed grades will perceptibly alter the quality or value for milling purposes of the commerfor seed will be selected primarily on the basis of freedom from noxious weed seeds.

Small but Potent.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are small, but they are effective in action. Their fine qualities as a corrector of stomach troubles are known to thousands and they are in constant demand everywhere by those who know what a safe and simple remedy they are. They need no introduction to those acquainted with them, but to those who may not know them they are presented as the best preparation on the market for disorders of the stomach.

On Letting go of Loved Hands

We are mostly familiar with the state of mind of the man who, in making his will, puts what money difficulty he can in the path of his widow's marriage with another man. The woman, when she has the money, is generally more considerate.

One wealthy woman who has just died showed by her will, however, that the sentiment is not always one-sided. She began by leaving something to her first husband, who disappeared through the door of divorce. Then she provided that if her second husband married again he would have to lose a certain property with which her happiest memories were associated. Finally, relenting, she ordained that if he sold the property before marrying he could keep the money.

The other woman could have him, but couldn't have both him and the scene of her happiness with him. He will be a mighty mean man if. having sold the property before marrying, he buys it back after the wedding to satisfy any uxorious

There used to be a story in Montreal of a man who bullt a new mansion when he married again, and who for years wouldn't allow any use to be made of his first home. The fact is that men are more intensely sentimental than women, and that they show it in ways that are mild as well as in ways that are rough But they are hardly as considerate as are the women.

Dogs are the best friends; they are always ready with their sympathy, and they ask no questions.

Some people would rather blame a man for what he dosen't do than give him credit for what he does.

We encounter scores of able conversationalists who stammer and stutter at their tasks. What the wisest of us say often is of far less importance than what we have left unsaid. The man who always wears a smile is as much to be avoided as the one who always wears a frown.

The Mother Having No Servant Must Choose.

EASY THING TO DO.

If the Baby Is Healthy Much Can Be Accomplished While He Naps if His Mother Systemizes Her Work and

The woman with young children must put the children and herself before the house, for this is a case where housekeeping becomes secondary to the health of the baby and the strength of the mother. Even if she does not like it standards must be lowered by the young mother who must take care of both children and a house unaided. A tidy, well kept house is a joy and an ideal, but it is an impossible realization by the mother of the baby who has no other help unless she is willing to sacrifice herself unwisely.

If the baby is healthy much can be accomplished in its two hour naps. During its morning sleep the bedrooms may be quickly straightened, living rooms made presentable and some little work done in the kitchen. Indeed, one of the wisest things to do while the baby sleeps is any special cooking which requires close attention. It is almost impossible to prepare food well while baby is crying and fretful, as cooking needs concentration and quiet. It is therefore better to prepare a dessert while baby is asleep and to do his washing, as necessary, the sweeping or other tasks which can be interrupted while he is awake. The broom will not scorch as you lay it down to pick up the baby for a moment, but the rice pudding will.

If the baby takes another afternoon nap it is the better part of sense to sleep or at least lie down during the baby's nap. Certainly there should be some half hour in the day at least when the mother can have quiet and relaxation, and it is not at all indolent to neglect some scouring and polishing in order to get rest and much needed relaxation.

In the house where there is a baby furnishings should be the simplest and housework thus reduced to a minimum, that the extra amount of time may be given to the baby. One reason, perhaps, why many modern young married women of humble circumstances are averse to motherhood is that they cannot reconcile a baby and the disorder which a baby brings in its trail. They like their well kept little home with its fern dish exactly in the center of the embroidered dolly on the dining room table, and they cannot see how they are able to do justice, as they would like, to both home and the baby. True, a woman cannot serve two masters—be a household paragon and at the same time a devoted mother. She will have to choose which she prefers. or, if she is wise, she can banish fripperies, simplify her home and have First see that the baby is well and get it into a schedule of sleeping. eating and waking; then do all the important housework during its naps.

clean? Why should it be so when there is an easy way? Place oxalic acid crystals in a dish and moisten with water enough to make a paste. Rub this paste on the articles to be cleaned, using a soft cloth. Let them dry. Now rub briskly with a dry flannel cloth and as a result you will have a remarkable brightness.

Having the article to be cleaned very hot will make the operation even easier. Let the utensil stand with boiling water in it for awhile before cleaning it.

Try this method and see how easily the percolater, chafing dish, teapot, serving tray and many other things are made bright and new.

CHOOSING MUTTON.

Rules to Guide Those Who Want to Be Careful Buyers.

Mutton is generally considered the most healthful meat and is eaten by many to the exclusion of any variety, consequently great care should be exercised in the selection, and a little time should be given to the study of

In buying mutton or lamb care should be taken to see that the fat is clear, hard and white, as mutton with soft or yellow fat indicates too long a stay in cold storage. It might appear that a great quantity of fat on mutton signifies waste, but the lean part is much juicier and more tender when this is the case, so the wise housewife makes purchases with this in view.

The leg has the least fat in propor tion to weight. Next comes the shoulder. The color of lean mutton is a deep red.

Lamb is good to eat when a year old and is much more digestible than other immature meat, such as veal or young pork. The wise housewife the value of nutrition, so she will hesitate about buying lamb merely because it is in the market, as it is generally expensive.

The meat of spring lamb should be a clear pink, with plenty of pure white fat.-New York Sun.

FIRST ARMY MEDAL.

It Was Issued After Cromwell Defeated the Scots In 1650.

The first medal issued as a reward for military service was struck by or-der of parliament to celebrate a victory of English troops over the Scotch. When the news reached London that Cromwell had defeated the Scots at Dunbar on Sept. 3, 1650, the house of commons instructed Thomas Simon, chief engraver to the mint, to proceed to Edinburgh and design a medal in honor of the event, of which a leading feature should be a portrait of the vic torious general.

The result was a lifelike portrait of Cromwell in profile, and over his head is engraved the battle cry of his ironsides. "The lord of hosts." On the reverse there is a wonderful representation in miniature of the house of commons in session. This medal was given to all officers and privates alike who fought in Scotland, but this democratic practice was discontinued till revived in 1815 at the suggestion of the Duke of Wellington for the troops under his command at Waterloo.-London Telegraph.

Antiquity of Fishing.

Probably no branch of industry can lay claim to greater antiquity than that of fishing. Its origin would seem to be coeval with the earliest efforts of human ingenuity, for the oldest monu-ments of antiquity show the fisherman in full possession of the implements of his calling, and even those tribes of savages which have learned neither to keep flocks nor to till the fields are skilled in the fabrication of the hook, the fish spear and the net. The earliest civilization of the eastern Mediterra-nean was begun with fishing. Sidon, which means "fishery," was originally a fishing village, and its enterprising inhabitants devoted their attention mainly to the collection of a certain kind of mollusks, from which they prepared the famous tyrian purple, prized more highly for the richness and variety of its hues than any other dye known to the ancients.

A MINISTER'S INTERESTING DISCOVERY

Rev. A. D. MacLeod, of Harcourt, N. B., in a letter written recently, referred to the remarkable popularity which Zam-Buk enjoys in the homes of the people. "Really," he writes, "I know of nothing like it! Having charge of an extensive mission over which I travel constantly, I meet with many sick and afflicted people, and I have been amazed at the good Zam-Buk is doing daily. I have learned as an absolute fact that for bad ulcers, old wounds, eczema and skin diseases of all kinds, the healing powers of Zam-Buk are simply marvellous! For the paintul ailment, piles, also, it is excellent. If a box of Zam-Buk could be put into every home it would save many a doctor's bill"

NOTE AND COMMENT

Henri Raeme, French millionaire, has been sentenced to five years im prisonment and lose property worth $54,000, for selling goods to German perfume manufacturers. Discouraging to enterprise but a fine lesson in patriotism.

Two hundred and fifty German officers have been found in the Russian armies and executed. owing to their presence, no doubt, that the Russian retreats of some weeks ago may be largely attributed, and which have since ended.

The Society of the Native Born has been formed in the United States, with the avowed object of opposing the election of any German-American or Austrian-American to public office in the future. The hyphenated have brought it on themselves. ,

An exchange very truly remarks: "Canada responded nobly to the British Red Cross appeal. Ontario's expected contribution was trebled. From city, town, village, hamlet and township, from "Old Ontario" and from "New Ontario", from all classes creeds and colors, from men, women and children, came answer to the call of the Motherland. Never in our history was there such a spirit of unity and desire. Never did .our love for the Old Land and our determination to do our duty find such a magnificient expression. Canada is ready to respond to any call it is necessary to make.

The London Morning Post :- The war is a fight for civilization, and America, neutral as she is, must either be for civilization and all that civilization means or against that ideal. It is in the power of the United States as the greatest. neutral nation seriously to obstruct and hamper the British war operations by raising exactly the sort of objections urged with so much acumen by the United States Ambassador. It is also within the competence of America to leave Great Britain to conduct her naval warfare in her own way without Essex Free Press-Newspapermen throughout Canada have given freely and liberally, not only of their hardearned dollars, but also of their most valuable asset, publicity space, for the honor and upholding of the Empire. And right here we would like to point out how little, outside of their money contributions, men in other lines of business have given from nar stock in trade towards the upholding of the honor of Old England. Yet we find those who will stand on the street corners and endeavor to belittle the publishers of this country for not doing more. We could not be considered boastful but at same time we say without fear of contradictions, that if those who underrate the effects of the Canadian press, had given as freely and as liberally of their resources as has been done by the Canadian publishers, the enemies of the British Empire would, at the present time, be in a much tighter corner than they now find themselves.

"Mr. Man-at-home, don't think because you gave a little girl 25c for a rose you have saved the British Empire, Mr. Comfortably-off Citizen, you with an income of $10,000 to $20,000 a year, don't think because you put your name down to the Patriotic Fund for $100 a month for twelve months you can inflate your bosom and look for a Knighthood. Yes, the Balkan situation is ominously acute—that's the reason we all ought to be doing more than ever before. Let's have more consecration, more enthusiasm, more The British Empire is optimism. slow to start, but sure to succeed How soon depends on you."—Hon-I. W. McGarry.

Peace Sooner Than Thought

Despite all protestations of undeviating purpose to press on to victory, peace rumors persist. It becomes more and more obvious that it is going to be tremendously difficult to stop this war, although for days together the fifteen hundred miles on west and east produce no more than a report of nothing doing.

The terms of peace will have to be made, if there is a peace short of a decisive defeat of Germany, while the armies are still in the humor for years of war, and while the peoples behind the armies are in the same

And yet, while all the peoples are resolute and steadfast, all the peoples are concealing, even from themselves, the facts about the increasing pressure of distress of all kinds produced by the war. The water runs low in the deepest wells. A year ago Mr. Lloyd George was speaking of silver bullets. Now Mr. Asquith says openly that even Britain's financial position is serious. In France, with a new Cabinet of victory, they are putting up placards Be silent; the enemy is listening."

In Germany, while there is thought to be food enough, the poor are finding it hard to get the means of buying it. In Russia there are tens of millions who have lost their all sharing the rations of other millions who already had not enough. None of all this, nor all of it together, might determine a cessation of war. But the rumors do persist that peace negotiations are going on, despite all the denials and the necessity for such denials.

Britain Will be Mistress of The Air as Well as The Seas

London, Nov. 9.-For the first time since the beginning of the war news-paper correspondents have been allowed to inspect the great new aviation centres of the British army. To-day represent-atives of two leading Paris, one Nor-wegian, one Australian and two New York papers were escorted by War Office officials and visited several of the principal bases in England where every fac-ility possible for obtaining information was placed at their disposal. The only le conclusion after the trip is that Britain has determined upon the mast-ery of the air the same as the sea. Fur-ther, she is in a fair way to accomplish her end, if, indeed, that is not already the situation

Officials wisely waited until they had omething real to exhibit before inviting journalists to see it. The strides made in the last year is nothing short of marvellous, and there is little doubt that Britain to-day has near completion the most wonderful fleet of heavier than air machines in existence, not excepting France.

The first base visited was Northolt, where a few months ago there was nothing but rolling vacant land.

To-day long lines of modern hangars border the great field, and up-to-date machine shops for experiments and re-pairs. The personnel is more than three hundred men, only the neucleus of what is to follow in a short time. Not less than forty of the latest type of planes are in commission, all of which are used for training raw recruits drawn from the regular army under the supervision of some of the world's most famous fliers. The training is extremely rigid.

The correspondents were allowed to inspect huge factories formerly employed in turning out motor cars and trucks, now utilized for the building of aircraft. One of the new machines has a twelyecylinder V-type motor of 200 horsepower. Power.
Another aeroplane of high speed and remarkable climbing records was also inspected. This latter machine carries a gun of the Lewis type, which has evoked the unstinted admiration of military experts. Girls and women are largely employed in various processes of aircraft building.

Dried leaves catching fire destroyed the verandah on Mrs. P. Barclay's resi-dence, Petrolea, on Tuesday.

Alex. Scharf has purchased the Commercial Hotel at Wyoming from R. Riddle for $1,600, thus securing a monopoly of the hotel business in that village. Miss Blanche Weeks, a nurse in train ing at the Sarnia hospital, died of typhoid fever contracted while nursing a patient suffering from the same ailment. As a vermifuge there is nothing so potent as Mother Graves' Worm exterminator, and it can be given to the most delicate child without fear of injury to the constitution.

The great thing in the world is not so much to seek happiness as to earn paces and self-respect.

Heiter Discovered Inside Large Log

Stratford, Nov. 9.—A remarkable story comes from Ellice township, a few miles north of Stratford. Messrs. Fawm and Cooper, while rabbit hunting on John Schneider's farm, were attracted to a large hollow basswood log by the barking of their hound, The result was the discovery of a nearly full-grown heifer wedged tightly in the interior of the log, and not visible until the nimrods had cut a hole. The animal was missed six weeks ago, and had been given up for lost. Though terribly emaciated, the heifer will live. Stratford, Nov. 9 .- A remarkable story heifer will live

Saw a Zeppetin Raid

Sarnia Officer in Old London Writes his Experiences

The following is an extract from a letter dated Oct. 14th, received from Lieut. Neil Hanna, son of Hon. W. J. Hanna, who is in England.

"Last night there was another air

"Last night there was another air raid. I was in the Strand Palace Hotel at the time with a bunch of Canadians. Two bombs lit nearby, smashing all the plate glass windows in the Strand Palace (just the force of the explosion.) We ran outside to take a look and met everyone running for our place. One bomb had lit in the street just beside the Lyceum Theatre, knocking chunks out of the buildings around. There were many wounded and we saw some dead there. A little farther up the street, a bus driver was lying on the road in bad shape from the loss of blood.

They had the searchlights, which are the loss of blood.

They had the searchlights, which are wonderful, on one Zepp and the guns weren't coming near it at all. That was about 9.30 and they were around for a long time after that.

About an hour later, as I was on my way home along Hay Market, a big machine with a big platform, carrying a gun, shot up the street at about 45 miles. I didn't get much of a look at it but the guns they use seem about the size of an 18 pr. or a little bigger. I think they are naval guns.

Luckily all the bombs in this raid dropped in the streets, but, at that, a great many more people then reported were killed.

were killed.

My poor old landlay, her lady boarders and maid spent the night sitting up, but their still alive to tell it.

They're peculiar, but somehow or other the fact of being rather close, when one of those things explodes, does not lessen one's appreciation of their murderous and destructive power. Of the bunch that were killed last night, one, and one only, was a soldier.

They seem to be a combination of strappel and explosives, doing a combination job.

But There Was Compensation

By F. A. MITCHEL

A carriage was driven up to a handsome residence in rural England. An old man was assisted by a lackey to alight and was met by another old man on the terrace. There was a striking likeness between the two, who embraced with great emotion.

Edmond Stanhope, earl of Cumberwald, the host, and his brother, the Hon. Charles Stanhope, had not met for many years. The earl's wife from the date of her marriage set herself to break up his relations with the members of his family and with her own. One by one through her connivance they had become estranged from him. The last one the lady drove away was his brother. Charles, whom he loved and who loved him better than all the world.

And now, Lady Cumberwald having passed away, and the earl, having lost his children save a younger daughter, being alone, had sent for his brother. There were no differences to make up, Charles understanding that his brother's wife had come between them and that Edgar had simply been unable to withstand her. Charles asked no reason for his brother's having ignored him for so many years, and Edmond gave none. There was a tacit understanding between them.

When Charles had been with his brother several days Edmond sat down with him to consult as to what should become of the title after his death. Edmond's daughter, the only one of his children still living, had married a Canadian against her father's wishes, and he had never seen her since. She had one son, Richard Carrington, now a youngster of eighteen. Charles had a son, who had gravitated to the United States, and this son, Hugh Stanhope, had married and begotten a daughter, Gladys.

By a dispensation of Providence Dick and Gladys of the third generation of the family of Stanhope and Carrington met at an American university composed of a man's and a woman's college. There are many Carringtons and a goodly number of Stanhopes in America, and there was no reason for either to suppose that there was kin-ship between them. Besides, it is questionable if either knew anything about their progenitors beyond their parents and relatives of their own generation.

But to return to the old gentleman in England. There was some question as to who would inherit the Cumberwald title and estates at the earl's death. Gladys Stanhope was the heir in the direct female line, while Dick Carrington was the heir in the indirect male line. There would arise at the earl's death other claimants whom he wished to ignore. After a conference the brothers decided that it was desirable to unite the title and estates by a marriage between Dick Carrington and Gladys Stanhope

Within a week after the conference between the brothers an agent was dispatched to America to find young Mr. Carrington and Miss Gladys Stanhope and convey to each the intentions of their grandfathers.

One morning there was a commotion at Meredith hall, the name by which the women's college was known where Gladys Stanhope was being educated. The night before half a dozen young ladies, contrary to the college rules, had left their dormitories, met as many students of the parent institution, Hart university, and gone for a straw ride without a chaperon even of the same material as the cushions of the wagon. One of these girls, Gladys Stanhope, had not escaped the vigilant. eye of a college duenna, who had followed her just in time to see the wag-on drive away. The duenna had remained on watch till 2 o'clock in the morning, when she had seen Miss Stanhope return under the escort of a young man who had climbed a waterspout, let down a rope and assisted her to mount. He had then descended and made tracks across the campus. Gladys Stanhope was called before the dean of the college, upon whose brow sat a thundercloud. Being interrogated as to where she had been the night before, she confessed that she had been on a straw ride composed of half a dozen students of the men's college and as many of the women's col-lege. They had not stopped anywhere for supper, but after enjoying them-selves innocently had returned to their

The next question propounded to Miss Stanhope was the names of the other five girls who had been engaged regulations. These Gladys refused to

After intimating that if she continued in her refusal she would surely be expelled from college and her good name tarnished for life the dean ordered her to her room to think the matter over.

The outcome of the straw ride was at once communicated to the mere men of the party, and a meeting was called in the room of one of their number to deliberate as to what should be done to help the girls out of the Dick Carrington, who was one of them. was selected to make it known to the dean of Meredith hall that every one of the men who had taken part in the ride would sign an affidavit that there had been not the slightest impropriety in the escapade; that the party had come together simply for the purpose of a moonlight ride and had separated after the ride, each to go to his or her own quarters.

It was expected that Mr. Carrington would take this preliminary step with out making himself known. Instead, he called upon the dean and gave her the message in person. He further admitted that he had helped Miss Stanhope to mount to her room after the He told his story in such a straightforward, manly fashion that the dean was convinced that the affair was an innocent frolic, and she would doubtless not have taken any further action in the matter had it not been a gross infraction of college discipline. The reputation of the college was at stake, and an example must be made. Mr. Carrington was informed that Meredith hall had no use for such an affidavit as had been proposed.

The next day Gladys Stanhope re-ceived a note from Dick Carrington suggesting that, inasmuch as she had been caught in the act and he had confessed, both would have to suffer and they need be the only victims. Gladys, who did not need this suggestion to keep her from giving away the other members of the straw ride party, replied through the medium who had handed her Dick's letter that she was ready to bear expulsion, but she would

The next move in this drama was the summoning of Miss Stanhope before the dean. There she found Mr. Carrington, who had been requested to call upon the dean at the time Gladys had been summoned to appear

"I have desired the presence," said the dean, "of you two students to say that if you will give the names of the other young men and young women who have been engaged in this outrageous infraction of college rules the whole twelve will be suspended for the rest of the academic term; if not, both you, Mr. Carrington, and you, Miss Stanhope, will be expelled."

The culprits received this announcement in silence, which was broken by

"It seems to me," he said, "that it is essential that Miss Stanhope and I have an opportunity to confer upon our answer without any one else being

"Certainly," replied the dean. "Go into the adjoining room. For propriety's sake the door must be left ajar, overheard if you consider such a course essential."

When the two found themselves together they found that both were in favor of suffering expulsion rather than turning college evidence. But expulsion would be very hard on Gladys. Something of the odor of a scandal would go with her. Her father was not living, and she had expected on graduation to support her mother by teaching. As for Dick, he had inherited some $20,000 from his father, the income of which he was given by his guardian to put him through college.

"I see but one course for us to pursue," said Dick. "We will suffer expulsion, and if you can be satisfied with me as a husband we may begin life on an income of $1,000 a year. When I come of age I will receive my fortune, but by that time I hope it will not be necessary to touch the principal.'

A color came into Gladys' cheek. She would have gladly accepted the terms, but she attributed Dick's proposition rather to a sense of honor than to love. So she told him that she thought she could weather the cloud that would hang over her from her ex-pulsion without his assistance. If he remained of the same mind he might come again,

When the conference was ended and the two rejoined the dean she was much disappointed, for she had hoped to avoid an open scandal. As it was, she felt compelled to make the punishment as conspicuous as possible. She dismissed the culprits and at once entered into a conference with the president of the university, at which it was determined that the students of both colleges were to be assembled in the university chapel to witness the expul-

Every student was present at the ceremony. A lecture to Carrington was delivered, in which he was told that the stigma of his dishonorable conduct would cling to him through his whole life. The dean then spoke gravely to Miss Stanhope, holding up before her (for the benefit of the other women

How They Help

ST. RAPHAEL, ONT. Four years ago I had such pains in my back that I could not work. The pains extended to my arms, sides and shoulders. I used many kinds of medicine for over a year, none of which did me very much good. I read about Gin Pills and sent for a sample and used them, and found the pains were leaving me and that I was feeling better. So I bought one box and before I used them all, the pains were almost gone and I could keep at work. After I had taken six other boxes of Gin Pills, I felt as well and strong as I did at the age of 30. I am a farmer, now 61 years old." 26 FRANK LEALAND.

students) her great loss in not being able to finish her education. A written communication was then handed to both parties terminating their connection with the university. The culprits passed down the aisle together. They were stopped at the door of the chapel by a man who said he wished for a brief conversation "No. thanks," said Carrington: "we don't care to go on the stage or into a dime museum either." The man then handed each a written ommunication. Dick opened his, read it, and his face lighted up as if by electricity. He looked at Gladys, and she opened and read her own letter. The communications were the declaration of the Earl of Cumberwald that if they would marry they should inherit together his title and estates after his death. The students were crowding around the couple and, seeing something momentous had occurred, began to clamor for an explanation. When it came Dick was picked up by men and Gladys by women students and were carried out on to the campus. Then, asked if they would comply with the terms of the offer, Dick shouted, "Yes." Gladys hung her head, whereupon a shout arose that made the old college buildings ring.

ORPHANS IN MOLLAND.

In Some Cities They Are Dressed In Most Grotesque Fashion.

The Dutch differ from the Chinese in announcing to the world the birth of children only in the article displayed. The Chinamen hang a piece of ginger over the main entrance to the house. the Hollanders indicate the event by a piece of lace, combining with the lace a pink background for a boy and tinsel for a girl. The orphans of some of the cities of Holland are quite conspicuous, and especially so when seen on the streets of Amsterdam, dressed in what might be termed half and half clothing. The east half of a boy's coat, including the sleeve, is red, while the west half is black. The dresses of girls are divided in a similar manner, but are topped off by becoming white caps, which make the young misses look very neat and attractive.

This singular style of dress is said to have been adopted to enable the railroad officials, as well as the authorities, to keep track of them, says the National Geographical Magazine. As the orphan asylums of Holland have the control of children committed to them until they are of age, the more mature of the unfortunates (wearing these odd garments in public) present a very striking appearance.

INFLATING A TIRE.

A Way to Test It When There Is No Pressure Gauge Handy.

Time was when every tire manufacturer warned all and sundry to inflate their tires to a high degree of pressure, and more probably than not this was due to the fact that in those days all pumping was done by hand and with very inefficient implements. The correct thing to do nowadays, of course, is to consult a standard table of requisite pressures, according to the size of tire and the load to be carried. and to use this in conjunction with a reliable gauge.

But there is also a rough and ready method which is by no means indeter minate if no pressure gauge is handy, and that is to take the car out on to a dry road which is in a bad state of repair and full of holes. Preferably there should be no passengers on the rear seats. If the driving wheels are pumped up too hard the driver will experience a constant sensation of incipient skid-ding, and though he may not actually side slip, he will not find the car by any means easy to steer.

This is evidence that the tires are so hard that they are bumping over obstacles instead of absorbing them without leaving the ground.-New York Game of Consequences

Any number of persons can play consequences." The players are seated around a table, and each is given a piece of paper and a pencil. Each one writes at the very top of the pa-per "His name was —," filling the blank with any boy's name he chooses.

The top of the paper is then folded over to hide the name, and the paper is handed to the player on the right, Then, under the other name, each player writes "Her name was --folds the top down and passes it on to the player on the right. Each then writes "He said —," folds the paper and passes it on. Then each writes "She said —" on the next paper,
"The people said," on the next paper "The consequence was ---," each time filling the blanks with his own words Each player must connect what he writes on one paper with what he writes on the next. After the conse quences are written the papers are passed on, and then each unfolds his paper. Then each takes it in turn to read his paper. The results are amus ing, as they are very disconnected.

Amber.

Amber is the name of a fossil gum We say "a fossil gum" because it seems to be the remains of a former age. From its peculiar qualities the Roman called it electrum.

This gum is found in the ground and, as it seemed to be a crystallized substance, it is called a mineral. Amber was originally generated from a species of pine and fire tree, just as turpentine is now produced from certain pine and fir trees in our country. As the gum oozed out of the trees in flowed down to the roots of the trees where it lay in large deposits. A for est undisturbed for centuries would produce extensive fields of this gum.

Proverb Puzzle.

In each of the following ten sayings a word of five letters is omitted. When these ten words are rightly guessed and placed one below another in the order here given the central letters reading downward will spell the name of a famous poet, who was born in February, 1807:

1. Idle -are always meddling. 2. A bird is - by its note and a man by his talk. 3. Make yourself all - and the flie will devour you.

4. A - is a fool's argument. 5. — a fool your finger and he will take your whole hand.

6. A small leak will sind a - ship. 7. A person's - ought be his great tells, grown, fewer. A New Way to Play With the Sea. The traditional way to play with the surf is to dive through the breakers. There is, however, another game that is still more riotous fun and gives the waves a fairer chance.

The bather wades out to the line where the breakers begin to curl and the water is about shoulder deep and stands facing out to sea with his eye on the coming wave. Just before the wave begins to lift to form the break-er the bather throws himself on his back and floats in that way-head toward the shore, feet toward the sea. If he has judged time and distance correctly the curling breaker will pick up the bather, feet first, turn him heels over head and leave him standing on his feet, ready for the next wave. If he misjudges the timing or the distance-well, that is the game-the wave scores It takes large breakers to turn a grown man, as large breakers as peo-ple often bathe in, but ordinary surf will do the trick for a boy.-Youth's Companion.

A Strange Word.
There is a word in the dictionary which you may read forward or backward without changing it one iota, either in meaning or letters. Write the word out in capitals and analyze it. The letters are now in procession Mother is in the lead, sister Ada is con spicuous in the center, while poor papa -the father of us all-is in the rear.

Again, if children reassemble the first part of this word they will be crazy, and if their boats go over the last part they will probably be drowned. What is this mysterious word?

TO DYE IS NOT DIFFICULT

Patience, a Knowledge of Chemicals a Big Kettle and Native Barks May Achieve Rare and Beautiful Shades at Home.

With all this hue and cry about the scarcity of dyestuffs it is well to remember that the woods literally abound with them. So do the hedge rows and, to a lesser degree, the orchards. Alum and copperas-sulphat. of iron—are the mordants required, in very moderate quantity. Both are cheap and plentiful. The inner bark of oak trees, set with copperas, dyes almost any and every shade betwixt the deepest, most vivid tan and pale fawn. Use bark of one species only in any pot of dye if you want pure color, except in case of red oak and turkey oak, which give the same result. White oak and post oak barks supply the fawn shades; Span ish and black oak, tone deepening into tan, red oak, the clear tan-this in full strength. All can be made fainten by weakening the dye. It is best al ways to test it with a scrap of stuff. washing the sample and ironing dry before putting in the main fabric Things to be dyed must be washed clean, shaken out and dropped in the dye pot wet, but not dripping. Push them under as quickly as possible to save spotting. Use a stout stick and after a minute lift up the fabric and hold it half a minute in the air. Repeat the airing twice or even three times. Then boil from ten minutes to an hour, according to thickness and quantity. Do not boil hard, but sim-mer briskly. Take up, hang to drain and do not wash until almost dry. Wash in strong suds twice, then rings till the water runs clear. If the sample shows too pale, either add more third or even half. A pack of inside bark to two pails of water is a good initial proportion. Boil an hour or more, skim out the bark. add copperas-a level tablespoonfuldissolved in boiling water, let boil five minutes, then put in the wet goods, which may be either cotton or woolen. Hickory bark with alum in place of the copperas dyes wool only, but makes it a beautiful greeny golden yellow. Mullein stalks and leaves by the ket tleful, simmered four hours and set with alum after skimming out the leaves, dye still another yellow, one inclining to buff. They will color cotton no less than wool, but not fast. Washing fades it, whereas wool grows brighter. Peach leaves, full grown. also the sappy twigs, dye a bright yellow, which is not very permanent and is set by washing in hot soapsuds. Yellow puccoon dyes scarlet, but the process is intricate and the root so process is intricate and the root so scarce and costly it may be left out of the count. Swamp maple bark dyes cotton a deep blackish purple. It is set with copperas or alum and smuts badly unless very well washed. Su-mac berries and black walnut hulls. packed in layers, barely covered with water and simmered all day, furnish a lasting soft black dye for either silk or wool, one that does not injure the fabric and requires no other setting than washing in warm soapsuds after partial drying.

The roots and green fruit of the white walnut dye a peculiarly vivid bright brown, taking well upon cotton and wool mixed, pure wool or silk.
Wash roots and cut small, crack nuts, but do not pull apart, boil together six hours in a little more than water to cover, then strain and put in the fabric. Wool had better be basted double. face in, and left so until the final pressing.

Black walnut bark and hulls dye the well known butternut brown. Depth of color varies with the strength of the dye. No mordant is needed beyond steady boiling for half an hour, lifting to air several times. It is not satisfactory for cotton stuffs, but very good for all that show a woolen surface.

The Value of Order.

If we stop to consider how we take off our gloves, where we keep them when not in use and how we put them on we will not wonder why it is they quickly lose their neat and clean appearance. When fastening a glove always fasten the second button first, thus removing the strain from the wrist and the button. Never remove them by pulling at the fingers, but turn them wrong-side out from the wrist and allow them to remain so until thoroughly dry from perspiration of the hands; then turn them again. Do not roll them up into a ball, but carefully spread them out flat and draw the fingers into shape. By being careful in these little things one naturally expends the same degree of care in the more important articles.

Descending to a disorderly kitchen and dining room in the morning is very trying to the tranquillity of the woman who must do her own work. It is advisable to make a straightening tour before retiring at night. This is not at all unpleasant if the mind is made up to it, and order has a most soothing effect upon the nerves.

In case of sudden illness during the night the knowledge of at least this orderliness is of untold comfort. If everything is in readiness the getting of breakfast is a pleasure. When it is over step out of doors for five minutes, take in deep breaths of fresh morning air and quickly think over the rest of the day's work.

Dust and the Lungs. Where there is less dust there is less tuberculosis. This disease is responsible for almost exactly one-quarter of all the deaths among wage earners in this country between the ages of fifteen and thirty-five. It is also responsible for almost exactly one out of every three deaths that come between the ages of twenty and forty years to both male and female wage earners. The death rate from tuberculosis among agriculturists may be put at 106 per hundred thousand. In comparison with this the death rate from tuberculosis among those engaged in cotton manufacture is 202; brass work, 279; copper work, 294; glass making, 295; earthenware, 333; cutlery, 382; file making, 402. Other statistics might be given showing the same thing—namely, that tuberculosis is intimately associated with certain occupations, especially those giving rise to dust, metallic, Sunshine and Dust.

There is more dust in the places illuminated by the sun's rays than in those which we call shady. If you look along a beam of light as it streams through a window or a chink in the door you will see innumerable dust particles dancing about in the light. You will be told by most persons that there is just as much dust in the nonilluminated parts of the room as in the more favored spaces, but you cannot see the particles because the rays do not fall directly upon them. You will think that this is eminently plausible, but it is not the case. The sun falling upon the air creates irregular currents, and these currents stir up the dust and collect it in layers along the line of light; hence there is more dust where the sun shines than elsewhere .- Ex-

Save Your Best Corn for Seed

The officers of the Ontario Corn Growers' Association emphasize the necessity of special care being taken with the corn that is to be used for seed, as a great deal of the crop is somewhat disappointing and even the best should receive proper treatment. Hang up all the good corn you can accommodate. It is the surest way to eliminate the surplus moisture before heavy frosts come. The spring of 1915 should have taught a good lesson as the continued spell of wet weather tried even the very best of seed, and a great number of fields had to be replanted, even in the sunny counties of the seed corn belt. Growers are advised to get busy. The officers of the Ontario Corn

Death of Michael Ellerker

Michael Ellerker, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Warwick township, died on Friday, Oct. 29th, in his 91st year. Deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, in January, 1825, and received his early education at Bishop received his early education at Bishop Burton, and afterwards took up the trade of a shoemaker. In 1852 he came to Canada; leaving from Hull on April 10th by sailing vessel, he landed at Quebec on May 10th, from there to Little York (now Toronto) then to Barrie, making the trip by ox-cart and on foot. On leaving Barrie he had the luxury of a ride in a railway train, the first passenger train run in Ontario. He came to Warwick in 1853 and settled on a farm on the 4th con. when it was all woods, after spending one year at his trade. Tuberculosis Day

in Ontario Schools

The following is an extract from the circular issued by the Minister of Education to 11,823 school teachers throughout the province, with reference to the Third Tuberculosis Day in the schools, to be held on Monday, Nov. 15th:—

"A very special effort is now being made to save the lives of children. Education in the means of presention; and cation in the means of prevention and cure is one of the most powerful weapons that can be used. With this object in view there is a general movement to direct attention to the work of the direct attention to the work of the National Sanitarium Association, and therefore the Minister desires to notify school boards, and through them the parents of the pupils and ratepayers generally, that the Department approves of the object aimed at by the Association and recommends that on Monday, Nov. 15th, the principals and teachers of the schools call attention to the necessity of putting forth all possible efforts to prepedient."

In addition to the Department circular, an Outline of Lecture and a small pamphlet, "Tuberculosis—what it is," will be distributed for use in the schools, be distributed for use in the schools, asking and answering a number of popular questions regarding the nature of the disease and its prevention and cure, and giving in simple form a great deal of exceedingly useful information.

All the teachers, and particularly those who have been stimulated to action by sermons delivered from the pulpits on Tuberculosis Sunday, Nov. 14th, will be able to give their scholars the benefit of their inspiration on the Monday.

Mr. W. Philpott, of the ridge road, Bosanquet, was well acquainted with Miss Edith Cavell, who was executed by the Germans the other day in Belgium. Her home was in Norwich, Eng.

Editor Guide-Advocate, Watford:

I am instructed by his honor the lieutenant-governor, Sir John Hendrie, chairman of the central provincial committee, to gratefully acknowledge the splendid service which your paper rendered in the campaign undertaken in response to the appeal of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John.

His honor has already expressed his thanks through the Toronto papers, to the press of Ontario, in a general way, for their invaluable assistance in this campaign. His honor, however, descause the nerves are not getting a proper nourishment from the blood, for their invaluable assistance in this campaign. conception of its place in the community. It is surely the privilege as well as the duty of the press, in relation to the community at large, to enthusiastically support every patriotic and humanitarian appeal which comes to us.

In the present case, our newspapers have, if possible, outdone themselves, this happy result.

Will you therefore accept the thanks of his honor the lieutenant-governor, and of the central committee, for the assistance you have so generously given in the cam-paign which has just closed.

Yours faithfully,

Christmas at the Front The second Christmas at the front

The second Christmas at the front is rapidly approaching. If we would be in time for our gifts to the boys on the firing lines they must be sent now. On another page of this issue will be found a notice indicating how properly to address the soldiers so that parcels, etc., can by no possibility go astray or arrive late. The slogan for all should be: If you can't go yourself, you can do the next best thing and see that the boys who are writing Canadian history in Flanders shall not be deprived of comforts, material and morale, at this coming Christmastide.

the press of Ontario, in a general way, for their invaluable assistance in this campaign. His honor, however, desires to do more than this, and has therefore instructed me to convey to you, in as personal a way as possible, his thanks, and the thanks of the committee, for the part you took in furthering this appeal through the columns of your paper and in other ways.

Each recurring call upon the province, during the war has been met most sympathetically by the press of the province, without whose assistance the reall, no matter how worthy in itself, could scarcely have been brought to the attention of our people. It must be a source of gratification to yourself as a citizen, as it is to his honor and the people of the province as a whole, to realize that our press has such a splendid conception of its place in the community. It is evently the evillence way wall as the Iniments were used until they actually took the skin off, and still the pain grew worse and worse. Then all the other nerves in the limb seemed to be affected, and it kept jerking and twitching until it would have to be held to keep it still. Then the doctor put the limb in a panier mache case, but it was limb in a papier mache case, but it was In the present case, our hemselves, and have given their space lavishly to the central committee and to the local committees. You, with the other papers of the province, have now the satisfaction of knowing that the people have responded to the call so nobly, and you have a right to feel that without your services in your own community, the result accomplished could not have been attained.

When the final report of this wonderful campaign is made to Lord Lansdowne, president of the British Red Cross Society, it will be found, as we confidently expect, that the province of Ontario has given approximately three times what the central committee asked of it. In this report, his honor the lieutenant-governor will not fail to recognize the place which our press took in accomplishtic heavy results. not long until the trouble began in my other limb and it had to be treated in the same way. I lay in that condition this report, his honor the lieutenant-governor will not fail to recognize the place which our press took in accomplishty boxes of the Pills and they did what ty boxes of the Pills and they did what three years or doctoring had not been able to do. I am as well as I ever was in my life, and have had no return of the trouble. My family and friends think my cure was a miracle, and we give all the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."
